THE DESIGN OF THE AUTHOR.

Where he gives a brief Relation of his first Travels through the best parts of Europe as far as Constantinople.

IF the effect of Education may be liken'd to a second Birth, I may truly say, that I came into the World with a desire to travel. The daily discourses which several Learned men had with my Father upon Geographical subjects, which my Father had the reputation of understanding very well, and to which, though very young, I was with much delight attentive, inspir'd me betimes with a design to see some part of those Countries, which were represented to me in the Maps, from which I never could keep off my Eyes. By two and twenty years of Age, therefore I had seen the faireſt Regions of Europe, France, England, the Low Countries, Germany, Switzerland, Poland, Hungary and Italy; and I speak indifferently well the Languages most necessary and most generally spoken.

The first. My first sally was into England, where at that time Reigned King James; from thence I pass'd into Flanders to see Antwerp, my Father's Native Country, and so into the Low Countries, where my inclination to travel became the stronger, by reason of the great Concourse of Strangers which I met at Amsterdam, that crouded thither from all parts o the World.

Having seen what was most considerable in the united Provinces, I pass'd into Germany, and when I came to Norimbergh, by the way of Frankfort and Auspurgh, the noise of the Armies that were marching into Bohemia to retake Prague, instill'd into me a desire to go to the Wars, where I might learn something that might be useful to me in the series of my travels. I was not above a days journey from Norimbergh, when I met a Colonel of Horse, whose name was Hans Brener, the Son of Philip Brener, Governour of Vienna, who engag'd me to follow him into Bohemia. Sometime after I bore the same Colonel company to Vienna, who presented me to the Governour of Raab, his Uncle, then Viceroy of Hungary also; who receiv'd me into his Family as one of his Pages. For it is a usual thing in Germany for Gentlemen's Sons to serve in that quality 'till five and twenty years of age, and seldom to quit that service, till they have a Commission for a Cornet, or Ensign's place. Four years and a half I serv'd the Viceroy, when the Prince of Mantua came to Vienna, to engage the [illegible]perour in certain deſigns of his own without ſucceſs. At that time the Count of Arc, whoſe Siſter the Viceroy had Marry'd, was chief Miniſter to the Prince of Mantua; and coming to viſit the Viceroy at Javarin, I was appointed to attend him during his ſtay there. Upon his departure, he told the Viceroy, that the Prince of Mantua had no perſon about him that underſtood the Language, and that therefore he might be ſure that the Prince would take it for a great kindneſs, to permit me to attend his perſon during his ſtay at the Emperours Court. This was a thing eaſily granted to the Count of Arc; who thereupon carri'd me along with him to Vienna, where having had the good fortune not to diſpleaſe the Prince, he teſtify'd to me at his departure, that he ſhould be glad to ſee me at Mantua, where he would not forget the ſervices I had done him. This preſently infus'd into me a deſire of ſeeing Italy, eſpecially upon the opportunity that offer'd it ſelf not long after.

For Monſieur de Sabran, the King of France's Envoy to his Imperial Majeſty, being to go for Venice, and deſirous of one that underſtood the German Language to bear him company, I laid hold of the occaſion; ſo that in eight days we got to Venice. While we ſtay'd at Venice, I took a view to my great ſatisfaction, of that moſt Celebrated City, and in regard it is in many things like to Amſterdam, as in Situation, Greatneſs, Magnificence, Commerce, and Concourſe of Strangers, my being there did but ſtill reinforce my inclination to travel.

From Venice I went to Mantua with Monſieur de Sabran, where the Prince being glad to ſee me again, gave me my choice of an Enſign, or of a place in the Company of the Ordonnance of the Duke his Father. I accepted the latter as being glad to be under the Command of the Conde de Guiche, who was then Captain. At the Siege of Mantua I had like to have been ſlain, but for the goodneſs of a Cuiraſs which I had choſen out of the Princes Magazin, being hit with two Bullets above and upon the left pap, which had enter'd, had not my Arms been excellent proof: So that after I was recover'd of my Bruiſes, a longer ſtay at Mantua did not agree with my deſire to travel.

Therefore ſome time after the Siege was rais'd, I took leave of the Prince, who gave me an honourable Paſs, by vertue whereof five or ſix Horſe-men bore me company back to Venice. From Venice I went to Lauretta, from Lauretta to Rome, from Rome to Naples, from whence returning to Rome again, I ſtaid there ten or twelve dayes. After that I went to ſee Florence, Piſa, Ligorn, and Genoa, from whence I Embark'd for Marſeilles.

From Marſeilles I haſted to Paris, where I could not ſtay long; for being deſirous to ſee Poland, I paſs'd once more into Germany through Switzerland, after I had tak'n a ſurvey of the principal Towns of the Cantons. I went by the Rhine by Water, to viſit Strasburgh and Briſack; thence by Land croſſing Suabia, I paſſ'd through Ulme and Auſpurgh to go to Munich. There I ſaw the Magnificent Palace of the Dukes of Bavaria, which William the fifth began, and which Maximilian his Son finiſh'd in the heat of the Wars that troubl'd the Empire. From thence I went the ſecond time to Norimbergh, and Prague, and leaving Bohemia I enter'd into Sileſia, and paſs'd the Oder at Breſlaw. From Breſlaw I went to Olmutz, one of the greateſt Cities of Europe, or rather a Town conſiſting of three Cities, the ancient Seat of the King of Poland. From thence, keeping the Viſtula upon the left hand, I went to Warſaw and ſaw there the Court of King Sigiſmund, which is a noble and ſplendid Habitation.

From Warſaw I return'd to Breſlaw, taking the Road toward the Lower Sileſia, deſigning to viſit one of the principal Officers of the Emperours Houſhold, who was my particular acquaintance. But about two Leagues from Glogaw, meeting with Colonel Butler, a Scotch Gentleman, Colonel of one of the Emperours Regiment of Horſe, who afterwards kill'd Waleſteyne in purſuance of the Orders he receiv'd, I gave over my firſt intended journey. His Wife was a great lover of the French, ſo that benig earneſtly oblig'd by both together, I could not withſtand the teſtimonies of their kindneſs. There I underſtood that the Emperour was going to Ratisbone with his Son Ferdinand the Third, to Crown him King of the Romans; ſo that I, who had ſeen the Coronations of the Kings of Hungary and Bohemia, being ſo deſirous to ſee the third Solemnity alſo, took leave of my Colonel, and haſted to Ratisbone.

At that time arriv'd to Ratisbone ſeveral Jewellers, one of which came to his end by an accident ſo tragical, that all the whole Court pity'd his untimely fate. He was the only Son of one of the richeſt Merchants of Europe, that liv'd in Frankfort, whoſe Father had ſent him with Jewels to ſell at the Coronation. For fear of being Robb'd he had convey'd them before into the hands of a Jew, in Ratisbone, his Correſpondent, to be deliver'd to his Son at his coming. This young man arriving at Ratisbone, went to the Jew, who told him that he had receiv'd a ſmall Casket of Jewels from his Father, which he might take away, when he pleas'd. At the ſame time the Jew invited the young man to drink, and carry'd him to a publick Houſe upon the Key of the City, where they continu'd 'till about an hour after day was ſhut in. At this time, both going out together, the Jew led the young man through a private Street where poor people paſs'd by, and there having ſtab'd him five or ſix times in the Belly with a Dagger, left him wallowing in his Blood. A while after, one of the Emperour's Trumpets going that way in the dark, ſtumbl'd at the Legs of the unfortunate youth, who ſtill breath'd, and fell upon his Body. At firſt feeling his hands wet: he thought it had been ſome drunken fellow that had eas'd his ſtomach; but upon ſecond thoughts imagining it might be ſome wounded perſon, he ran and call'd the Officers, who coming with Lanthorns, beheld the tragick ſpectacle of a young man weltring in his own gore. Thereupon the Officers carrying the Body to the ſame publick-houſe, as being next at hand, his face was no ſooner waſh'd, but the Woman and Maid of the Houſe knew him to be the ſame young man that had been there drinking with the Jew not long before. But as for the young man he preſently expir'd, without being able to make the leaſt diſcovery. However the Jew was ſeized that evening, and being ſeiz'd, confeſs'd the Crime. The Imperial Laws ordain, that a Jew for killing a Chriſtian ſhould be hung upon a Gibbet by the Heels, and that two fierce Dogs ſhould be hung by him in the ſame manner to the end, that the Dogs in their madneſs ſhould tear out his Bowels. But the Jew made ſuch preſents to the Empreſs that the Sentence was chang'd, though the puniſhment was not much leſs rigorous. For his fleſh was torn with red hot Pincers from ſeveral parts of his body, in ſeveral Streets of the City, and boyling Lead pour'd into the raw wounds; after which he was broken alive upon the wheel, at the publick place of Execution.

Being upon my departure from Ratisbone, I met with Father Joſeph, Reſident there for the King of France, who knowing me in Paris, propos'd to me to go along with the Monſieur, the Abbot of Chapes, Brother of the Marſhal de Aumont, and Monſieur St. Liebau, who were then intending for Conſtantinople, and ſo for Paleſtine. I lik'd the propoſition well, and immediately put my ſelf into the Society of thoſe two Gentlemen, from whom I never ſeparated 'till they departed for Syria from Conſtantinople.

But before we left Germany, we reſolv'd to ſee the Court of Saveny, whither we got in a few days. By the way we paſs'd through Freybergh, a ſmall City, but well worth ſeeing, for the beauty of the Electors Tombs, and moſt ſplendid and magnificent both for Materials and Workmanſhip in all Europe. From thence we went and view'd the ſtately Caſtle of Auguſtburgh, ſeated upon a high Mountain, wherein among other things there is a great Hall, adorn'd from top to bottom with nothing but Horns faſten'd to the Wall; among the reſt is the Head of a Hare with two Horns, ſent the Elector by the King of Denmark for a great Rarity. In one of the Courts of the Palace ſtands a Tree ſo large in Body, and ſpreading out the Branches at ſo wide a diſtance, that they will cover three hundred ſixty five Tables with their ſhade. And that which makes this Tree more wonderfull is, that it is only Birch, that rarely grows to that Immenſity.

Dreſde is the Reſidence of the Elector, a little City, but a very neat one, and well fortify'd; with a Stone a Bridge over the Elbe, that parts the Old and New Town. The Palace is one of the largeſt and faireſt in Germany. But it wants a Piazza before it, the Principal Gate ſtanding juſt at the bottom of a narrow Lane.

From Dreſde we went to Prague, which was a third time that I ſaw that great and fair City, or rather three Cities together, only ſaparated by the Molda, that throws it ſelf into the Elbe, ſome five or ſix Leagues below.

Having travers'd Bohemia, and touch'd upon the corner of Moravia, we enter'd Auſtria, and came to Vienna, reſolving there to Embark with all ſpeed, becauſe the Winter came on.

We ſtay'd one day at Presburgh to ſee the great Church, and ſome Relicks which they ſhew'd us, and from thence fell down to Altenburgh.

Altenburgh is a City and Province belonging to the Count of Arach. It was the Childs part of one of the Queens of Hungary, who upon her death-bed bequeathed it to one of the Lords of her Court, upon condition that he and his Succeſſors ſhould always keep ſuch a number of Peacocks; for defect whereof, the Territory ſhould revert to the Crown.

Thence we came to Signet, from whence I took a little Boat and haſted to Raab, where I did my Devoirs to the Viceroy, who was glad to ſee me, and gave noble entertainment to the Meſſieurs de Chapes, and de St. Liebau. Here we ſtaid eight or ten days for the Baſha of Buda's Anſwer, whether he would give liberty to two French Gentlemen, to paſs with their Train through his Garriſon or no; which being return'd ſuch as we could deſire, we Embark'd at Comorra in a ſort of Bigrantines well fitted for defence and convenience.

From Vienna to Javarin we lay three dayes upon the water, by reaſon of the great turnings and winding of the Danaw. Leaving Javarin we lay at Comorra; and from Commorra we row'd to Buda in two days. For the Road by Land is ſeldom travell'd in regard that the Frontiers of both Empires are full of Thieves and Boothaylers. In fair weather you may go from Buda to Belgrade in leſs than eight dayes, but we were fore'd to ſtay longer upon the Water, in regard of the Cold weather.

It is the cuſtom in Hungary, that in all Roads little frequented by Strangers, not to take any Money of the Travellers; For the Burghers lodge and entertain them civilly, for which the Burgo Maſter at the years end repays them out of the publick ſtock. But beſides, that they are not troubl'd with many Paſſengers; Hungary, which is one of the beſt Countries in Europe, affords proviſion at ſo cheap a rate, that to Belgrade it coſts us not above two Crowns a day for fourteen people.

Buda ſtands upon the right hand of the Danaw, about half an hours travelling from the River. The Baſha being adviſ'd of our arrival, ſent his Squire with led Horſes, and ſeveral ſlaves in very good Liveries to conduct us to the Town. And though we ſtay'd twelve days before we could ſpeak with him, by reaſon of his being ſick at that time, yet he allow'd us a fair proviſion of Mutton, Pullets, Rice, Butter, and Bread, and two Sequins a day for ſmall expences. He was a comly perſon, and of a handſom carriage and at our departure, he ſent ſix Caleſhes with two Spahi's to conduct us to Balgrade, with order to defray our expences, which would by no means be accepted, Coming to Belgrade we found the Sangiai as rude, as we had found the Baſha civil before. For he made a ridiculous demand of two hundred Ducats a Head, and for fifteen days prolong'd the conteſt. But at length I ſo terrify'd him, by threatning to ſend our Complaints to the Ottaman Port, of his ill uſage of two Gentlemen, Kinſmen to the Ambaſſador of France, that he was contented with fifty Ducats for all. Belgrade is ſituated upon a point of Land, where two great Rivers, the Danaw and the Sava meet; and is furniſhed with Wine, Bread, and all ſorts of Proviſions at a cheap rate.

From Belgrade we took ſome ſaddle Horſes, ſome Coaches for Adrianople, as every one lik'd beſt. We paſs'd through Sophia, a large and well peopl'd City, the Metropolis of the Ancient Bulgarians, and the reſidence of the Baſha of Romeli. In it ſtands a fair Moſquee, which hath been a Chriſtian Church, built with ſo much Art, that three men may go up to the top of the Steeple, and not ſee one another.

From Sophia we came to Philippoli, between which Town and Adrianople we met with two Troops of Tartars well mounted. When they ſaw us, they made a Lane for us to paſs through them, with a deſign moſt certainly to have fall'n upon us; ſince they could not hope to do any good upon us, but by ſurprize and number; for they were ill provided of Weapons, and we rarely well Arm'd. Thereupon we alighted and Barricado'd up our ſelves with our Chariots.

In the mean time we ſent our Saphi's to the Commander of thoſe Tartars, to tell them, we would not ſtir 'till they were gone, and that being Souldiers as they were, they could not hope for any booty from us. The Commander anſwer'd, that he had divided his men in that manner only to do us Honour; but ſince we deſir'd they ſhould be gone, they requeſted us but to ſend them a little Tobacco. A boon which we readily granted them, and ſo we paſs'd on.

We came to Adrianople the three and twentieth day after we parted from Belgrade. Adrianople takes its name from the Emperour Adrian, being formerly call'd Oreſtes. It is pleaſantly ſituated at the mouth of three Rivers that throw themſelves into the Archipelago. The old Town is not very big, but the Turks dayly enlarge the Suburbs, being a place which the Grand Signors very much delight in for the pleaſures of Hunting and Hawking, eſpecially, at the wild Duck and Heron.

The fifth day after we departed from Adrianople, and the forty ſecond after we departed from Vienna, we happily arriv'd at Conſtantinople, and croſſing through the City over to Galata, went to the Ambaſſador's Houſe. While we ſtay'd there to winter, he made a ſmall Voyage to the Dardanells, to the Ruins of Troy, where we beheld nothing but Stones, not worth the while of going ſo far to ſee. Another day we took three Barks and Sail'd to Calcedon, that lies upon the Sea. There is in it a very ancient Church; and they ſhew'd us the Room where the Council was held, with the ſame Chairs which were then made uſe of. Now it is only a Moneſtary, where two Biſhops after they had ſhew'd us what they could, handſomly entertain'd us.

Then we went to view Pompey's Pillar at the mouth of the Black Sea. Concerning the Channel of which Sea, I muſt make one Obſervation; that though there be no part of the Sea but has one Current, yet this has two quite contrary one to another. That part next to Europe carries the Veſſel to the Black Sea; and that next Aſia brings it back again to the Mediterranean. So that you have no more to do but to croſs over from one Shore to the other.

The Winter being over, the two French Gentlemen purſu'd their Voyage for Alexandretta. But for my part, I having another deſign in my head, ſtay'd at Conſtantinople, in expectation of a Caravan, which the people told me from Month to Month was coming. I was then ignorant, and did not underſtand that every year there were five or ſix Caravans that went from Burſa. Beſides, that ſometime eight or ten Merchants travelling together, might go ſafe to Iſpahan. Which ignorence of mine made me ſtay longer than I intended. At length, after I had continu'd eleven Months in Conſtantinople, I departed with a fair and numerous Caravan for Iſpahan, which was the firſt time I travell'd into Aſia. After that I made five others, wherein, I had time better to underſtand the Qualities of the Countries, and the Genius of the People. The three laſt times I went beyond Gauges, to the Iſland of Java; ſo that for the ſpace of forty years, I have travell'd above ſixty thouſand Leagues by Land; never returning but once into Europe by Sea. And thus in my ſix Voyages, and by travelling different Roads, I had the leiſure and opportunity to ſee all Turky, all Perſia, and all India, particularly the famous Diamond Mines, where no European had been before me. Of theſe three great Empires therefore have I reſolv'd to make an ample and exact Deſcription: and I will begin with the ſeveral Roads which may be taken from Paris into Perſia.

OF

MONSIEUR TAVERNIER's

Perſian Travels,

Containing the ſeveral

ROADS

From PARIS to ISPAHAN the Chief City of PERSIA.

Through the Northern Provinces of TURKY.

CHAP. I.

Of the Roads from France to the hither parts of Aſia, and the Places from whence they uſually ſet out for Iſpahan.

A Man cannot travel in Aſia, as they do in Europe; nor at the ſame Hours, nor with the ſame eaſe. There are no weekly Coaches or Wagons from Town to Town; beſides, that the Soil of the Countries is of ſeveral natures. In Aſia you ſhall meet with ſeveral Regions untill'd and unpeopl'd, either through the badneſs of the Climate and Soil, or the ſloth of the Inhabitants, who rather chooſe to live miſerably, than to work. There are vaſt Deſerts to croſs, and very dangerous, both for want of Water, and the Robberies that the Arabs daily commit therein. There are no certain Stages, or Inns to entertain Travellers. The beſt Inns, eſpecially in Turkie, are the Tents which you carry along with you, and your Hoſts are your Servants, that get ready thoſe Victuals which you have bought in good Towns. You ſet up your Tent in the open Field, or in any Town where there is no Inn: and a good ſhift too in temperate weather, when the Sun is not too hot, or that it does not rain. In the Carvanſera's or Inns which are more frequent in Perſia than in Turkie, there are perſons that furniſh you with Proviſions, and the firſt come are beſt ſerved. As for Turkie it is full of Thieves, that keep in Troops together, and way-lay the Merchants upon the Roads, and if they be not very well guarded will certainly rob them: nay many times murder them. A miſchief prevented in Perſia by the well order'd convenience which is provided for Travellers. To avoid theſe dangers and inconveniences, you are oblig'd to ſtay for the Caravans, that go for Perſia or the Indies, which never ſet out but at certain times, and from certain places.

Theſe Caravans ſet out from Conſtantinople, Smyrna, and Aleppo. And it is from one of theſe Cities that a Traveller muſt ſet out, that intends for Perſia, whether he keeps company with the Caravan, or will hazard himſelf alone with a Guide, as once I did.

I will begin with Conſtantinople, from whence you may go either by Land or Sea: and either by Land or Sea there are two ways to go. The firſt of theſe by Land is that which I took with Monſieur Chapes and Monſieur St. Liebau. By the way take notice, that Vienna is the half-way near-upon between Paris and Conſtantinople. The ſecond Road is leſs frequented, but is leſs inconvenient and leſs dangerous: for there are need of the Emperour's Paſports, which he does not grant very freely: beſides that here is no fear of the Pirates of Tunis or Argier, as when you embarque from Marſeilles or Ligorn. If you intend this way, you muſt go to Venice; from Venice to Ancona, from whence ſeveral Barques are bound every Week for Raguſa. From Raguſa you ſail along by the Shore to Durazzo a Sea-Port of Albania; from whence you travel the reſt of the way by Land. From Durazzo to Albanopolis, diſtant three days journey, from thence to Moneſtier, juſt as far; from Moneſtier you may either take the left hand through Sophia, and Philippopolis, or the right through Inguiſcher, three days journey from Moneſtier, and ten from Adrianople, from whence in five days you reach Conſtantinople through Selivrea.

This laſt way is part by Sea and part by Land: but there are two other ways altogether by Land, above and below Italy, according to the diſtinction which Antiquity made of the two Seas that almoſt encompaſs it. You may embark at Venice, and ſayling along the Gulf which is free from Pirates, you muſt double the Cape of Matapan, the moſt Southern Point of all Europe, to enter into the Archipelago. The other way is from Marſeilles or Ligorn, from whence ſeveral Veſſels are bound for the Eaſt. The ſafeſt way is to go along with the Engliſh or Holland Fleets, that uſually arrive at Ligorn either in the Spring or in Autumn, and part juſt againſt the Morea, to the ſeveral parts whither they are bound. As the Wind ſerves, thoſe Fleets ſometimes make Sail between the Iſland of Elba and Italy, and by the Tower of Meſſina: ſometimes below Sicily and Sardigna, within ſight of Malta. Thus you muſt come within ſight of Candy, whether you are bound for Conſtantinople, Smyrna, or Alexandretta, from whence it is but three days journey to Aleppo: from one of which three Cities, you muſt neceſſarily begin your journey, if you intend for Perſia.

Some take Egypt in their way, uſing through Alexandria, Cairo, and Damiata, whence ſeveral Veſſels are bound for Joppa; or St. John's of Aera, which is not far off: from thence to Jeruſalem or Damaſcus, and from thence to Bagdat or Babylon.

If you will venture in a ſingle Veſſel not ſtaying for the Fleets, you may hire a Veſſel from Ligorn to Naples, from Naples to Meſſina, keeping along by the Shore, and lying aſhore every night. I took this way, and went from Meſſina to Syracuſe, where are to be ſeen the moſt remarkable footſteps of Antiquity. 'Tis like a City under ground, and near to it is a great Rock which has been made hollow, at the bottom whereof if a man whiſper, they that are at the top may hear him. They call this Rock Dionyſius the Tyrant's Ear: for being at the top, he eaſily underſtood what the People ſaid of him below; and diſcovered the Counſels of the chief Men of Syracuſe, whom he kept priſoners there. Syracuſe has nothing of that ſplendour which renown'd it when it was the Miſtreſs of all Sicily, and when Greece, jealous of her power, made War upon her. But the Soil is very plentiful, and the Gallies of Malta very often take in their Proviſions there. Near the City is a fair Convent of Capuchin Friers, going out of which, you may walk for half an hour between two very high Rocks, where there are ſeveral little Cells with every one a Garden, where the Friers ſometimes retire, and it is certainly one of the moſt pleaſing Solitudes in the World.

From Syracuſe I went to Malta, where you muſt wait for ſome Ship that is bound for the Eaſt.

CHAP.

CHAP. II.

Of the Road from Conſtantinople to Iſpahan, which the Author kept in his firſt Travels into Perſia.

IT is ſeldom that any Caravans go from Conſtantinople into Perſia; but from Burſa they go every two Months: Burſa is the Capital City of Bithynia, not above three days journey from Conſtantinople, or a little more. Theſe two Roads meet at Chabangi, where you may be from Burſa in two Days: and ſo I will only ſpeak of the Roads from Conſtantinople to Iſpahan. This Journey is to be undertaken either with the Caravan of Camels, or elſe ten or twelve Men in a Company, well mounted and well arm'd.

From Conſtantinople you croſs over to Scutari, upon the Coaſt of Aſia.

Setting out from Scutari, the firſt days journey is very pleaſant, over Fields gayly painted with Flowers in their ſeaſon. At firſt for ſome time together, on both ſides the way, you ſee nothing but fair Sepulchers with their Pyramids, and you may eaſily diſcern the Womens Monuments from the Mens. For there is a Turbant upon the Pyramid of the Mens Sepulcher, but the Pyramids of the Womens Monuments are trimm'd with the Head-Attire which is worn by the Women of the Country. That Evening you muſt lye at Cartali, a Village of Bithynia, the next Day at Gebiſa, antiently Lybiſſa, famous for the Tomb of Hannibal. In that place there are two good Inns, and two fair Fountains.

The third day you come to Iſnich, which is thought to be the ancient Nicea; one part of the City is built upon the deſcent of a Hill, the other part upon a Plain that reaches to the Sea, and makes the Golf of Iſnich. The Haven conſiſts of two Moles made of Free-ſtone, and three great Encloſures encompaſs'd with Walls, which ſerve inſtead of ſo many Arſenals, wherein there are Store houſes full of large Timber, for building Houſes and Galleys. The Country round about being an excellent place for Hunting, and the Soil bearing rare Fruits, and rich in Wine, caus'd Sultan Amurat to build a Seraglio in the higheſt part of the Town, from whence there is a proſpect at the ſame time both over the Sea and the Country. The Jews inhabit the greateſt part of the Town, dealing chiefly in Timber and Corn. When the Wind ſerves, you may go from Conſtantinople to Iſnich in ſeven or eight Hours, there being no danger in the paſſage.

The fourth Day you ſtay at Chabangi, a ſmall Town built upon the ſide of a Lake call'd Chaban Gigul, where there are two Inns. From the beginning of the Lake for two Leagues together you travel partly over Mountains, partly by the Lake-ſide, where in ſome places the Horſe will be up to the Belly. This Lake is not above ten Leagues in compaſs; but it yields great ſtore of large Fiſh, inſomuch that I have bought a Pike two Foot and a half long for three Sous. Many Emperours have had a deſign to make a Cutt out of this Lake into the Sea, for the more eaſie tranſporting to Conſtantinople the Timber which grows upon the Mountains near the Lake. And if the Grand Viſier, who by a Miracle dy'd in his Bed, and left his Son ſucceſſor to his Employment, had liv'd ſome Years longer, he had no queſtion added this to the reſt of thoſe famous Wotks that eterniz'd his Memory.

Departing from Chabangi, you come to lye at Night upon the Bank of a River call'd Zavarat, which runs Northward and falls into the Black Sea. It is a River plentiful in Fiſh, and you croſs over it with a wooden Bridge. There is neither Town, nor Inn in that place; but a League from the River is a great Town call'd Ada, the chiefeſt part of the Inhabitants whereof are Armenians. Thither we ſent for excellent good Wine, and other neceſſary refreſhments.

From that River to Cancoli, where you lye the next Night, and have your choice of four Inns; you travel all the day in the Merſhes, over wooden Bridges and Cauſeys.

Tuskebaſar is the next place, a ſmall Village with two Inns. From thence to Carqueſtar, a great Town, with one Inn, built upon a River, where there is great ſtore of Fiſh taken, which the Inhabitants call Bourma-balouky, that is to ſay, the Fiſh with the long Noſe: It is ſpeckl'd like a Trout; but of a better taſt, and more eſteem'd. Polia or Polis, is a City ſeated at the foot of ſeveral Mountains, the Inhabitants whereof are for the moſt part Greeks. Theſe Mountains are very high, and extend themſelves along the Road for Two days journey. They are full of ſeveral ſorts of Trees, which are ſtreight and tall like Firr-Trees: and divided by ſo many Torrents, which it would be hard to paſs over, where it not for the Bridges that the Grand Viſier Kuprigli caus'd to be built. In regard the ſoil of theſe Mountains is very fat, there would be no drawing for the Horſes after great Rains or the melting of the Snow, had not the ſame Viſier caus'd all the Ways to be Pav'd and Pitch'd, even as far as Conſtantinople. A Work of great charge, in regard there is not a Flint in any part of the Mountain, and for that the Stone is to be fetch'd a great way off. There are abundance of Pigeons as big as Hens, and of an excellent taſt, which not only pleas'd our Appetites, but afforded us very good Paſtime to ſhoot them. Between the City and the Mountain, there is a Plain about two Leagues in length; near to which, there glides a River that waters it, and very much contributes to its fertility. It is an excellent Soil, and produces all things neceſſary for humane Life. Upon each ſide of the way I counded above Twenty Churchyards. For it is the cuſtom of the Turks to bury near the Highway, believing that the Travellers pray for the Souls of the deceas'd. Upon every Tomb, there is to be ſeen a Marble Pillar, half fix'd in the Earth: of which Pillars there are ſo great a number, of various Colours, that it is from thence conjectur'd, that there were a very great number of Chriſtian Churches in Polia, and the parts thereabouts. They aſſur'd me likewiſe, that there was a vaſt quantity of theſe Pillars in the Villages up and down in the Mountains which the Turks every day pull down and ſet up their Tombs.

Bendourlour is a Village in the Mountains where there is one Inn.

Gerradar is beyond the Mountains, where there are two Inns.

Cargeſlar has two Inns, and lyes in a good Country.

Caragaler is a Town where there are two Inns.

Coſizar is a Village with one Inn.

Tocia is a great City ſituated upon riſing Hills, that joyn to very high Mountains. Upon the Winter Weſt, there appears a fair Champain Country, water'd by a Stream that falls into a River of a greater bigneſs, call'd Guſelarmac. Upon the higheſt of the ſmaller Hills toward the Eaſt, there is a Forteſs, where a Baſha reſides; and in the Town is one of the faireſt Inns upon the Road. The greateſt part of the Inhabitants are Chriſtian Greeks, who have the advantage to drink excellent Wine, with which the Country furniſhes them in abundanee.

Agiſenſalou ſtands upon a River, and there is an Inn and a fair Moſquee in it.

Ozeman is a little City ſeated at the foot of a Hill, upon which there ſtands a ſtrong Caſtle, and below two very commodious Inns. The River Guſelarmac, broad and deep, waſhes the South-ſide of the City, which you croſs over one of the faireſt Bridges that ever was ſeen. It conſiſts of Fifteen Arches, all of Free-ſtone, and is a work that ſhews the Grandeur of the Undertaker. Somewhat at a diſtance from the Bridge ſtands Six Corn-Mills all together, with little wooden Bridges to go from one to another. This River falls into the Euxin Sea, about eight days journey from Ozeman.

Azilar is a great Town, where there are two Inns.

Delekiras is a great Village, with one Inn.

Theſe Four days Journeys are very dangerous, by reaſon that the Ways are narrow, and commodious for Robbers. They are very numerous in this Country; and therefore underſtanding that we were way-laid, we ſent and deſir'd a Convoy of the Baſha, who lent us fifty Horſemen.

Amaſia is a great City, built upon an aſcent in the hollow of a Mountain. It has no proſpect, but only from the South over a fair Plain. The River that runs by it comes from Tocat, and throws it ſelf into the Black-Sea, four days journey from Amaſia. You croſs it over a wooden Bridge, ſo narrow that not above three perſons can go a-breſt. To bring freſh Water to the City, they have cut a League into Rocks as hard as Marble, which was a prodigious Labour. On the Weſt-ſide, upon a high Mountain, ſtands a Fortreſs, where they can come by no other Water than what what they preſerve in Ciſterns when it rains. In the middle of the Mountain is a fair Spring, and round about it are ſeveral Chambers cut out of the Rock, where the Dervichs made their abode. There are but two Inns, and thoſe very bad ones, in Amaſia. But the ſoil is good, and bears the beſt Wine and Fruits in all Natolia.

Ainabachar, is the name of an Inn, diſtant a quarter of a League from a great Town where they fetch their Proviſions.

Turcall is a great Town near to a Mountain, upon which there ſtands a Caſtle. The River that comes from Tocat waſhes the Houſes, and we caught excellent Fiſh in it. In that place is another of the faireſt Inns upon the Road.

From Turcall you may travel in one day to Tocat, where the Road from Smyrna to Iſpahan meets.

Tocat is a good fair City built at the foot of a very high Mountain, ſpreading it ſelf round about a great Rock that ſtands almoſt in the midſt of the Town, upon the top whereof a high Caſtle commands the neighbouring parts, with a good Garriſon in it. It is very ancient, and the remainder of three others that ſtood there in former times. The City is very well inhabited with Turks, who are the Lord Controllers, Armenians, Greeks, and Jews. The Streets are very narrow, but the Houſes are indifferent well built; and and among ſeveral Moſquees, there is one very magnificent, which ſeems to be newly rear'd. There was alſo a very fair Inn going up, which when I laſt travell'd that way, was not quite finiſh'd. There is one thing more particular and more commodious at Tocat, which is not to be found in any Inns upon the Road, That round about all the Caravanſera's in the Town, there are Lodgings which they let out to Merchants, that deſire to be by themſelves out of the noiſe and hurry of the Caravans, whiles they ſtay at Tocat. Beſides that, in thoſe private Lodgings you have your liberty to drink Wine, and provide for the reſt of your Journey; which is not ſo eaſily done in the publick Inns, where the Turks will have an eye upon the Merchants, to draw Money out of their pockets. The Chriſtians have twelve Churches at Tocat, and there reſides an Archbiſhop, that has under him ſeven Suffragans. There are alſo two Monaſteries for Men, and two for Women; and for fourteen or fifteen Leagues round Tocat, the Country is all inhabited by Armenian Chriſtians, but very few Greeks being intermix'd among them. The greateſt part of theſe Chriſtians are Tradeſmen, and for the moſt part Smiths. A fair River runs about half a quarter of a League from the City, which riſes near to Erzerom, and is croſs'd at Tocat over a very beautiful ſtone Bridge. Upon the North ſide of the City, it waters a Plain three or four days Journey in extent, and two or three Leagues broad. It is very fertil, and repleniſh'd with fair Villages very well peopl'd. A man may live very cheap at Tocat: the Wine is moſt excellent, and all ſort of rare Fruit very plentiful. It is the only place in all Aſia where plenty of Saffron grows, which is the beſt Commodity you can carry to the Indies, where a Pound, as the Years fall out, is worth thirteen or fourteen * Franks, though the Wax that preſerves it, be as much in weight as the Saffron. This City, with the Lands belonging to it, uſually is the Dowager Sultaneſſes Joynture. There is only an Aga and a Cady, that command there in the behalf of the Grand Signor: for the Baſha, from whom they receive their Orders, lives at Sivas, which is the ancient Sebaſtia, and a very great City, ſome three days journey from Tocat. In ſhort, Tocat is one of the moſt remarkable Thoroughfares in the Eaſt, where are continually lodg'd the Caravans from Perſia, Diarbequer, Bagdat, Conſtantinople, Smyrna, Synopus, and other places; and here the Caravans turn off, as they are variouſly bound. They that are for Conſtantinople, take to the Winter Weſt upon the right hand; they that are for Smyrna, incline to the Summer Weſt, upon the left hand. When you ſet out either way out of Tocat, there is a Toll-gatherer that counts all the Camels and Horſes that paſs by, and exacts for every Camel a quarter of a Rixdollar, and for every Horſe half as much. As for the Horſes or Camels that carry the Paſſengers or their Proviſions, they pay nothing. This continual concourſe of the Caravans trolls the Money about at Tocat, and makes it one of the moſt conſiderable Cities of Turkie.

* Every Frank being 2 s. ſterling.

Setting out of Tocat to go to Erzerom, you diſcover a little Village ſo ſituated under a Hill, as if the Mountain lay atop of it; and between that Mountain and the River, the Road is very narrow where the Caravan is to paſs. In this Road it was, that we met the Grand Viſier returning from Hunting, with a Train of four hundred hundred men: ſo ſoon as he perceiv'd us, he fil'd off all his men to give us liberty to paſs by. But among all the Company, there was not above four Franks upon which he particularly caſt his Eye; which made him ſend for the Caravan Bacchi to know who we were. The Caravan Bacchi, to avoid the ill Conſequences of jealouſie which the Viſier might have of the Franks, at a time when the Grand Viſier made War in Perſia, told him we were Jews; at which the Viſier, ſhaking his Head, reply'd only that we did not look like ſuch, and happy it was for us that he took no farther notice. For it was twenty to one, but that upon better conſideration he might have ſent after us to have ſtopt us. But when he came home to his Lodging he found a Capigi ſtaying for him, with Orders from the Grand Signor to take off his Head, which were preſently executed. For Amurath being troubl'd for the loſs of his Army, had no way but to revenge himſelf upon the perſon that had the command of it.

Notwithſtanding that the Caravans reſt at Tocat, yet they ſtay likewiſe two or three days at Charkliqueu, which is not above two Leagues diſtant from it; for Charkliqueu is a great Town in a lovely Country, between two fertil Hills, where there grows excellent Wine. It is for the moſt part inhabited by Chriſtians, who are generally Tanners. The fine blew Goat leather Skins being dreſt in Tocat, and the Parts thereabout. It is thought the Water contributes very much to their Art. For Tocat is as famous for the blew Goats-leather Skins, as Diarbequir and Bagdat are for the red, Mouſſul or the ancient Niniveh for the yellow, and Ourfa for the black. About two thouſand Paces from this Town, in the midſt of a Plain riſes a vaſt Rock, upon the North-ſide whereof you aſcend about nine or ten ſteps into a Chamber with a Bed, a Table, and a Cupboard in it, all hewn out of the Rock. Upon the Weſt ſide you aſcend other five or ſix ſteps that lead to a little Gallery, about five or ſix Foot long, and three broad, all hewn out of the Rock, though it be of an extraordinary hardneſs. The Chriſtians affirm that St. Chryſoſtom made this Rock his retiring-place during his Exilement, and that he had no other Bed or Bolſter than the Rock it ſelf, in a place where they ſhew you the print of a Man's Body. Hence it is, that the Caravans, conſiſting for the moſt part of Chriſtian Merchants, ſtay at Charkiqueu, to pay their Devotions to this Rock, where the Biſhop of the place, attended by ſome Prieſts, with every one a Taper in their Hands, goes and ſays Maſs. But the main Reaſon is, becauſe there grows excellent Wine in this place, which being cheaper by half here, than it is at Tocat, obliges the Armenians to ſtop here, to provide themſelves for the reſt of their Journey.

Two Leagues from Charliqueu, you croſs over very high Mountains, with Precipices on both ſides. It is the cuſtom of the Armenians, when they hear of the approach of a Caravan, to ride out two or three days journey to meet their Country-men and carry them freſh Proviſions. Theſe of Charliqueu coming to meet our Caravan, three of the Armenians took a large Morning-draughts, which made them ſo Pot-valiant, that they would needs ride before to the Town alone by themſelves; but by the way they were ſet upon by ſix Horſe men that came from the North, where there are higher Mountains than thoſe which we were to croſs. Immediately the Thieves darted their Half-Pikes at the Armenians, in ſo much that two of them fell down mortally wounded, and the other ſav'd himſelf among the Rocks, but the Thieves got their Horſes and Goods, which were valu'd at ten thouſand Crowns. The Caravan at the top of the Hill beheld the misfortune of thoſe poor men which their own folly had brought upon them, but could not help them, by reaſon of the narrowneſs of the ways; beſides, that the Thieves knowing all the by-turnings, were preſently out of ſight. And therefore it is a dangerous thing to leave the Body of the Caravans, either by ſtaying too far behind, or running too faſt before: and ſome have ſuffer'd for diſtancing themſelves not above five hundred Paces from it.

The Caravans do not make their Journeys all alike; but come to their Stages ſometimes ſooner, ſometimes later, according as they meet with Waters and Inns, or places fit to pitch their Tents in, to which places the Natives bring Proviſion and Provender from the Mountains. There are ſome places where there is a neceſſity to provide Straw and Barley for two or three days. If you travel in May, when the Graſs is high, it coſts nothing to feed the Horſes and Camels For as ſoon as the Caravan is lodg'd, the Servants go and cut the Graſs from off the Hillocks, where it is much better then upon the Plains. But while the Beaſts feed only upon Graſs they are much weaker, and cannot travel ſo far as at other times.

From the Mountain where the Armenians were ſet upon, you come to Almous, a little Village upon a River, which you croſs, over a Bridge of Wood.

Going out of Almous, you croſs a large Plain, at the end whereof you lodge upon the Bank of a fair River, call'd Toufanlou-ſou, which falls into the River of Tocat.

Having paſs'd this River, you aſcend a high Mountain, which the People of the Country call Kara-behir-beguiendren, or, the Mountain that ſtops the Grand Signors; for it is very rugged, and you muſt of neceſſity alight to aſcend it. In that bad Way two Horſes that carry'd each of them two Bales of Engliſh Cloth burſt under their Burthen, which prov'd excellent Food for ſeveral Tartars that were before us, and were pitch'd in the place where we intended to have lodg'd our ſelves; ſo that we were forc'd to go a quarter of a League farther. Theſe Tartars when they heard of our two dead Horſes, made immediately to the Mountain fifteen or ſixteen of them with all joy imaginable to devour it. They flea'd the Horſes, and when they came back (for I ſtay'd to ſee them) they brought every one a great piece of Fleſh between the Saddle and their Horſes backs. For by that means the Fleſh mortifies, and bakes as it were, through the motion and heat of the Horſe, and ſo they eat it without any more a-do. I ſaw one of them that took a piece of thoſe Horſes Fleſh, and after he had beaten it ſoundly between two naſty Linnen Clothes, with a piece of Stick, ſet his Teeth in it, and devour'd it with a very greedy appetite.

Upon the top of the Mountain which I have mention'd, there is a Plain, and in the midſt of the Plain a Fountain call'd Cheſmé-beler, or, A Fountain of Chriſtal; near to which, on the South-ſide, there ſtands a Village.

From the place where we lodg'd, we came to a little Town called Adras, the Inhabitants whereof are all Armenians.

Aſpidar is but two Leagues from Adras, and is but a Village.

Isbeder is another Village in the Mountains, where the Caravan generally ſtays one or two days; as well to pay the Cuſtom, which is the fourth part of a Rixdollar upon every Camel, and half as much for every Horſe; as for the excellency and cheapneſs of the Wine, where every Man provides for himſelf.

Twice we paſs'd by and paid nothing, in regard that the Caravan was too ſtrong for the Toll-gatherers; and were it not that they ſtay for the Wine, they might go directly forward without paying any thing.

Leaving Isbeder, we came to another great Town in the Mountains; all the Houſes are hewn out of the Rock upon which it is ſeated, as are alſo all the Stair-Caſes. From this Village, having paſs'd a River, over a wooden Bridge, at the end whereof there ſtands an Inn, you come to Zacapa, another Village, from whence through very narrow paſſages, where you are forc'd to unload the Camels, and carry your Goods upon Mens ſhoulders for thirty Paces together, you come to encamp in a little Plain. It lyes at the foot of a high Mountain, which they call Dikmebell, beyond which lies the Town Kourd Aga, after which you croſs three Rivers; one fordable, the other over two Bridges, and then you come to a Village call'd Garmeru.

From Garmeru you go to Senkmen, another Village; from Senkmen to Louri; from Louri to Chaouqueu, which are two very handſom Towns.

I ſaw an Old man at Chaouqueu who was above a Hundred and Thirty Years old, who when Sultan Amurath beſieged Bagdat, gave his whole Army as much Oats as ſerv'd them one whole day. In recompence whereof, the Sultan exempted him and his Children from all Taxes and Tolls for their Lives.

Leaving Chaouqueu, you come to a high craggy Mountain which is call'd Aaggidogii, or, The Bitter Mountain. The Ways being narrow, the Caravan is forc'd to travel ſingle; and then it is that they count all the Horſes, and all the Camels; every Horſe and every Camel paying to the Caravan-Maſter a certain Duty, which amounts to a good Sum if the Caravan be numerous. One part of that Money is to pay ſeven or eight Armenians, that guard the Caravan all the way; another part defrays the Expences upon the Road; and the remainder is the Captain of the Caravan's Profit.

Having pass'd this Mountain, you come to lodge in a Plain which they call Giogandereſi, and from thence to Erzerom you meet only with three Villages by the way, Achikala, Ginnis, and Higia, which are the Caravan's Stages. During theſe three laſt days journeys, you keep all along the Banks of Euphrates for the moſt part, which is yet but narrow, taking its ſource Northward of Erzerom. 'Tis a wonderful thing to ſee the vaſt quantities of large Aſparagus that grow all along the River, with which you may load ſeveral Camels.

A League on this ſide Erzerom the Caravan is conſtrain'd to ſtop; for the Officer of the Cuſtom-Houſe accompani'd with the Baſha's Lieutenant, comes here and tyes all the Bales and Cheſts with a croſs Cord, upon which he puts a Seal, to the end that when the Merchants come to the Town, they may not be able to take out any Bags of Money, or any pieces of Stuff on purpoſe to hide them till they go away. The particular Buſineſs of the Baſha's Lieutenant in meeting the Caravan, is to ſee whether the Merchants be well provided with Wines. And if he deſire any Bottles, whether it be then, or in the City, where they are not aſham'd to viſit every Merchant, there is no refuſing them. For there grows no Wine at Erzerom, all that is drank there being a ſmall Wine of Mingrelia, which is always green: which forces the Merchants to furniſh themſelves with Wine at Tocat, which they may do ſufficiently to laſt them into Perſia. The Officer of the Cuſtom-Houſe generally allows the Caravan three days to reſt; during which time, he ſends to the principal Merchants ſome Fruit and other ſmall Refreſhments, by which he is no loſer. After the three days are over, he comes and opens all the Bales and Cheſts, and takes a particular account of all the Merchandizes. This Search and the changing of Beaſts, cauſes the Caravan to ſtay generally twenty or five and twenty days at Erzerom.

Erzerom is a frontier Town of Turkie toward Perſia. It is ſituated at the end of a large Plain environ'd with Mountains, the Plain being beautified with many fair Villages. If you take in the Caſtle and the Suburbs, it may paſs for a City, but the Houſes are ill built of Wood, without any neatneſs or proportion. There are ſome Remains of Churches and of the ancient Buildings of the Armenians, by which you may conjecture that it never was very beautiful. The Fortreſs ſtands upon a high ground, with a double Wall, ſquare Towers cloſe one to another, and a pitiful Moat. The Baſha reſides there but in a very ill Houſe, all the Buildings about the Fortreſs being in a bad condition. In the ſame Encloſure there is a little riſing Ground upon which they have rais'd a ſmall Fort, wherein the Janiſary-Aga lives, and where the Baſha has no Power. When the Grand Signor has a mind to the Head of this Baſha, or any other conſiderable Perſon in the Province, he ſends a Capigi, with order to the Janiſary to ſend for the Perſon to the little Fort, where the Execution is preſently done. One Example hereof I ſaw in my laſt Travels into Perſia: For the Baſha of Erzerom not having ſent Twelve thouſand men ſo ſoon as the Grand Signor requir'd them for his Wars in Candy, the ſame Capigi that brought the Sentence of his Death, had the ſame Order for the Execution of the Baſha of Kars; and meeting this Capigi upon the Road in a Village, upon his return for Conſtantinople, he would needs ſhew me whether I would or no, the Heads of the two Baſha's, which he was carrying to the Grand Signor in a Bag.

Between the firſt and ſecond Gate of the Fortreſs are to be ſeen four and twenty Pieces of Cannon, moſt excellent Guns, but lying one upon another without Carriages. They lye at Erzerom to be ready upon all occaſions when the Grand Signor makes war againſt the Perſians.

There are in Erzerom ſeveral great Inns; this City, like Tocat, being one of the greateſt Thoroughfares in Turkie. The Country about it bears Wine, but not very good, and in regard the People are ſtrictly forbid to drink Wine, the Merchants are forc'd to buy it very privately, for fear it ſhould come to the knowledge of the Cadi. Though it be very cold at Erzerom, Barly grows there in fourty days, and Wheat in ſixty, which is very remarkable. The Cuſtoms paid there for the carrying out of the Gold and Silver, and upon all other Commodities, is very ſevere. Silk, that comes out of Perſia, pays four and twenty Crowns for a Camel's Camel's Load, which is eight hundred Pounds. For in the mountainous Countries a Camel's Load is no more; but in the plain and even Countries they make 'em carry above ten hundred weight. A Load of Indian Calicuts pays a hundred Crowns; but the Loads of Linnen are much heavier than thoſe of Silk. As for other Commodities, they pay Six per cent according to their value.

From this Stage the Caravan ſets forward to a Fortreſs call'd Haſſan Kala, where you muſt pay half a Piaſter for every Camel's or Horſes Load going from Erzerom to Erivan, but returning you, pay but half as much.

Leaving this Fortreſs, you muſt go and lodge at a Bridge near to a Village which is call'd Coban Cupri. Over this Bridge, which is the faireſt in the whole Journey, you croſs two Rivers which there meet, one is the Kars, and the other is a Stream that falls from a Mountain call'd Binguiel, both which disburthen themſelves into the Aras. The Caravan uſually ſtays a day or two at this Bridge; becauſe the Caravan divides it ſelf at this place, ſome continuing on the High-road, others taking the Road of Kars, as well to avoid fording the Aras ſeveral times, as the paying a great Duty upon the great Road, where they exact four Piaſters upon every Camel's Load, and two upon every Horſe-Load, whereas at Kars you are diſmiſs'd for half ſo much.

I went Kars Road twice; but it is longer, and more troubleſome than the other. As ſoon as you leave the Bridge, for the firſt four days you travel over woody Mountains, and very deſert Countries, where you meet but with one Village; but coming near Kars the Country is more pleaſant, and well manur'd; bearing all ſorts of Grain.

Kars is in 78 Deg. 40 Min. of Longitude, and 42 Deg. 40 Min. of Latitude; in a very good Soil. The City is very large, but thinly peopl'd, though Proviſion be very plentiful and very cheap. But the Grand Signor always chooſing that place to rendezvouz his Army, whenever he intended to recruit it, and to lodge his People there which he ſent to build Villages; the King of Perſia has ruin'd all the Country, as he did at Sulfa, and in many other Frontier places, for nine or ten days journey together.

From Kars to Erivan the Caravan makes it nine days journey, and lyes where it can find moſt convenience, there being no certain Stages. The firſt days journey ends at a Monaſtery and a Village, the one no leſs deſerted than the other. The next day you come to the Ruines of a great City, call'd Anikagne, in the Armenian Language the City of Ani, which was the name of an Armenian King that was the Founder of it. By the Wall, on the Eaſt-ſide, runs a rapid ſtream that falls from the Mountains of Mingrelia, and empties it ſelf into the River of Kars. This City was very ſtrongly ſituated; being placed in a Merſh, where are to be ſeen the Remains of two Cauſeys that only lead to the Town. There are the Ruines of ſeveral Monaſteries; among the reſt two that are entire, ſuppos'd to be Royal Foundations. From thence to Erivan for two days journey, you meet with only two Villages; near the laſt of which you ride by the ſide of a Hill, whether when the Caravan paſſes by, the people bring Horſes from ſeveral parts to be ſold. The Great Road from the Bridge, where the Caravan parts, lyes thus:

Two Leagues from the Bridge, on the right hand toward the South, lyes a great Mountain which the People of the Country call Mingol. In this Mountain there are abundance of Springs, and from one ſide of it falls Euphrates, from the other ſide the River of Kars, which empties it ſelf into the Aras fourteen or fifteen Leagues on this ſide Erivan. The Aras, which the Ancients call'd Araxes, falls from other Mountains Eaſtward of Mingol, which after many windings through the Upper Armenia, where it receives many other Rivers that ſwell its Streams, it diſcharges it ſelf into the Caſpian Sea, two days journey from Shamaki, upon the Frontiers of the ancient Medes.

The whole Country is inter-cut by the Rivers Aras and Kars, and ſeveral other Streams that fall into them, inhabited by very few, but what are Chriſtians; thoſe few Mahumetans that live among them being ſo ſuperſtitious, that they will not drink the Water of any of thoſe Rivers, nor waſh in them; believing them impure and defil'd by the uſe which the Chriſtians make of them. They have their particular Wells and Ciſterns by themſelves, which they will not ſuffer a Chriſtian to come near.

Comasour is the first Village where you lodge after you leave the Bridge of Choban-Kupri, going to Erivan.

Halicarcara is the next Stage to Comasour: this is a great Town also inhabited by Christians, but the Houses are built all under-ground like Caves. Coming thither the 7th of March 1655, the Snow was so deep that there was no travelling, so that we were forc'd to stay there eight days. But the Customer of Erzerom understanding in what a bad condition we were, came in person with five hundred Horse to make way for us, and sent for the Country people round about to clear away the Snow. But it was not so much out of kindness to us, as for his own Interest. For a new Officer being to succeed him upon the 22d of March, and our Caravan being very numerous, he would have lost above an Hundred Thousand Crowns, had we not come to Erzerom before that day. Many of the Passengers were almost blinded by continually looking upon the Snow, the colour whereof very much dims the Sight: for preservation whereof the Travellers are wont to wear black Cypress Hoods, made on purpose, over their faces. Others wear furr'd Bonnets fring'd about with Goats hair, which being long, falls over their Eyes, and does altogether as well as the Hood.

The Caravan is usually twelve days upon the Road, from Erzerom to Erivan. Leaving Halicarcara, you ford the Aras three times, and cross it the next day again: for it winds exceedingly. A League and a half from the place where you ford it the fourth time, upon the top of a high Mountain stands a Fortress call'd Kaguisgan, which is the last place which the Turks possess on that side. The Customers that live there come to the Caravan to take their Toll, which is four Piasters for every Camel loaden, and two for every Horse loaden. In the year 1655 the Caravan lodging about a League from the Fortress of Kaguisgan, the Mountains adjoyning being inhabited by Christian Armenians, there came to us a poor Bishop attended by fifteen or sixteen persons, among which there were certain Priests who brought us Bread, Fowl, and Fruit, desiring the Charity of the Merchants, who recompenc'd them to their satisfaction. About four or five Months after, this Bishop had one of his Eyes struck out by a Janisary. That wicked Fellow came to the Town where the Bishop liv'd, and lighting upon the Bishop, ask'd him for Money, which because the Bishop had none to give him, in a rage he stabb'd him in the Eye with his Dagger. Complaint was made to the Aga, who 'tis thought would have punish'd the Offender, but he fled, and left the Bishop without remedy of satisfaction.

From the last place where we encamp'd near the Aras, we went and lodg'd the next day upon the same River, in the sight of a Village not above a quarter of a League. The Next day we cross'd the River that runs from Kars, and parts Turkie from Persia. The next day we stop'd upon the Banks of Aras, half a League from a little Town; and this is the last time you see this River which you are constrain'd to pass so often.

Leaving Aras, we came to lodge in a plain, in sight of a Town which is not far distant. The next day the Caravan lyes in the Field, and the next day it comes to a place where there are three Churches, whence it is but half a days journey from Erivan.

CHAP. III.

A Continuation of the Road from Constantinople to Ispahan, from the Borders of Persia to Erivan.

THE first Place worthy observation, entring into Persia through Armenia, is that which they call the Three Churches, three Leagues from Erivan; which Three Churches, are three Monasteries distant one from the other. The biggest and the faires is the Residence of the Patriarch of the Armenians. There is another to the South of that, about a Musket-shot distant, and another a quarter of a League from it toward the East, which is a Nunnery Nunnery for Virgins. The Armenians call this place Egmiaſin, or the Only Daughter, which is the Name of the chief Church. You may find in their Chronicles, That it began to be Built about three hundred Years after Chriſt, and that the Walls being rais'd to a good height, the Devil came in the Night and pull'd down what they built up in the Day; which he did for ſeveral Years: but that one Night Chriſt himſelf appear'd, and that from that time the Devil ſurceas'd to moleſt them any more; ſo that they finiſh'd the Church. It is dedicated to St. Gregory, whom the Armenians have in very great veneration. And there is a Table of Stone, whereupon, according to their Chronicles, Chriſt reſted when he appear'd to St. Gregory. They that go into the Church, kiſs this Stone with a very ſolemn Devotion.

The ſecond is built in honour of a Princeſs that came with forty Virgins of Quality to viſit St. Gregory. This Lady an Armenian King caus'd to be thrown into a Well full of Serpents? but ſhe receiv'd no harm. For ſhe liv'd therein 14 Years by a great Miracle, and from that time to this, the Serpents that breed thereabouts never did any harm. That Idolatrous King had a deſign to have enjoy'd that Princeſs, who was very handſome, and all her Companions; but they overcame him by their Virtue: who thereupon, ſeeing he could not have his Will, put them all to Death.

The Cuſtom of all the Armenians, as well thoſe that come out of Perſia, as thoſe that travel into Perſia, is to perform their Devotions at theſe Three Churches; and the Caravan ſtops uſually five or ſix days, during which time they Confeſs, and receive Abſolution from the Patriarch.

The Patriarch has under him forty ſeven Archbiſhops, and every Archbiſhop has under him four or five Suffragans, with whom he lives in a Convent, where there are ſeveral Monks under their Juriſdiction. So ſoon as they have ſaid their Maſs, which is generally done an Hour after Day, they all go to work, and to dig and delve for their living. The Revenue of the Patriarch is 600000 Crowns or thereabouts: for all the Armenian Chriſtians that are above fifteen Years of age, ought to pay him yearly five Sous. However there are many that do not pay him, by reaſon of their poverty. Yet their defect is ſuppli'd by the rich, who ſometimes pay him two or three Crowns a Head. But this Money does not ſtay in the Patriarch's Pocket: nay he is ſometimes behind-hand; for he is engag'd to relieve the poor Armenians, who have not wherewithal to pay the Carage, which is an Annual Tribute that they owe to the Mahometan Princes, to whom they are ſubject: Otherwiſe neceſſity would force them to become Mahometans; and they, their Wives and Children would be liable to be ſold, which the Grand Patriarch labours all he can to prevent. Every Archbiſhop ſends him out of his Dioceſs what is neceſſary to be rais'd for that intent. So that the Patriarch does but only receive it with one Hand, and pay it with the other; making no profit to himſelf of a Revenue which he has out of 400000 Villages, which the Archbiſhop of St. Stephen's affirm'd to me to be under his Juriſdiction.

As I return'd from Perſia in the Year 1655, I came to the Three Churches about the end of February; the Caravan ſtay'd there eleven Days, as well by reaſon of the great Snows that ſtop'd up the Ways, as for that the Armenians reſolv'd to keep their Carnival there, and after that to perform their Devotions. The next day I went to viſit the Patriarch, who was ſitting croſs-leg'd upon a Mat. There were four Archbiſhops, and nine Biſhops ſitting about him in the ſame poſture, among whom there was one that ſpake very good Italian. I ſtayed with him three Hours; and while we were diſcourſing together, in came one of the Monks of the Covent, who had not ſpoken to any perſon whatſoever in Two and twenty Years, by reaſon of a Penance that was impos'd upon him. Never did Man appear ſo meager and deformed; but the Patriarch ſent for him, and by his Authority commanded him to break ſilence, which he did, by ſpeaking at the ſame Inſtant.

The Saturday before Shrove-Sunday the Patriarch invited all the Caravan, as well Maſters as Servants, to hear Maſs the next day, and then to dine at the Covent. Maſs being concluded, the People were brought into a long Gallery, about 15 or 20 Foot broad, there being a Table on both ſides, made of ſeveral Stones, and Benches next the Walls. At the upper end of the Gallery ſtands a Table four Foot ſquare, over which is a vaulted Roof ſuſtain'd with four Pillars, which ſerves for a Canopy: in the midſt whereof is a Chair ſet for the Patriarch, who from thence has a full view of both ſides the Gallery; with two other Chairs of each hand, for two Archbiſhops: the other Archbiſhops, Monks, and Gueſts ſate at the long Tables. The Meat which they brought us was ſeveral ſorts of Pilaw, and ſeveral Diſhes of Fiſh, among the reſt excellent Trouts. The Pilaw was brought in forty wide Plates, ſo well fill'd and ſo large, that they were every one as much as a Man could carry. They were all ſet down upon the Ground before the Patriarch; who then Pray'd and gave Thanks. Then ſix Biſhops with Ladles took out the Meat out of the great Platters, and putting it into leſſer, ſerv'd both the Tables. Every one had alſo his earthen Pot of Wine, which was very good, and was fill'd again when it was empty. The Patriarch and the two Archbiſhops eat nothing but two Eggs, and a few raw Herbs; no more did the other Archbiſhops that ſate at the Table.

At the end of the Feaſt, a Biſhop comes with a Paper and Pen and Ink in his Hand, and asks of every one what he pleaſes to Subſcribe for the Benefit of the Church; then every one propoſing, according to his Devotion, the Biſhop writes down the Names of the Perſons, and the Sum which they mention; which he comes and gathers the next day. There are ſome rich Merchants that will give two Tomans, but the meaneſt Servant will give an Or. The Biſhop having done writing, the Table was clear'd, and then they brought us Melons and other Fruits. In a ſhort while after the Bells rung to Evening Service, and the People went to Church.

After Evening Service the Patriarch ſent for me to behold a Combat of Bufalo's, of which there are great ſtore in that Country, ſome ſerving to Till their Ground, while the Female ones yield ſtore of Milk, of which they make Butter and Cheeſe, and which they mingle with all ſorts of other Milk: There are ſome of theſe female Beaſts that will give two and twenty Pints of Milk a day.

They brought us into a wide Encloſure, to behold the Sport, wherein there were eight Bufalo's. To provoke them one againſt another, they ſhew them a Red Cloth, which puts them into ſuch a Rage, that there were two that dy'd with the ſtroke of their Horns upon the place, and there were none of the reſt which were not very much lam'd. The Sport being at an end, they bring a great quantity of Wood, which they pile together on purpoſe to ſet it on Fire. When the Wood was heap'd in as big a Pile as they intended, one of the Archbiſhops preſented a Taper of white Wax to all the Company, both Maſters and Servants, who every one agreed with him what they ſhould give the next day for their Tapers. The Tapers being lighted, the Patriarch with a Stick like a Biſhop's Croſier, march'd before, ſinging an Hymn, attended by all the Perſons both Eccleſiaſtical and Secular, till they had in that manner walk'd three times about the Pile. When the Pile came to be lighted, there was great ſtriving who ſhould have the Honour. One of the Merchants offer'd a quantity of Oyl, for Lamps for the Church; another out-did him, and a third proffer'd more than he; and the Honour of Lighting the Pile was given to him that offer'd moſt. Immediately upon that every one put out his Taper: For they eſteem it a moſt precious buſineſs; believing that the lighting of one of thoſe Tapers in a Storm, and throwing it into the Sea, is a preſent Charm againſt Shipwrack. For ſay they, The Virgin Mary, forty days after ſhe was brought to Bed, went to Jeruſalem with Joſeph and her Son; and going into the Temple met old Simeon, who taking the Child in his Arms, began to ſing the Song, Lord now let thy Servant, &c. the Song being ended, all the People began to cry that Chriſt was born, and to publiſh it about the City. Now in regard it was Night, every one ran out with Torches in their Hands, and ſome made Fires before their Doors, where Chriſt was to paſs along. This Feſtival among the Armenians is like that of Candlemas-day; and they call it in their Language, Ter en Areche? Where is the Lord? The Armenians, Maſters and Servants, drank all Night to make an end of their Carnival: while the Patriarch was buſie in dreſſing up the Church with its gayeſt Ornaments.

I could not believe there had been ſo much Riches in the Chriſtian Churches under the Power of the Mahumetans. It is not a hundred Years ſince this Patriarchal Church was in a much meaner Condition: But ſince the great Sha-Abas put the Armenians upon Traffick, they have very much enrich'd themſelves: For as they got great Gains; ſo they made great Vows, and gave largely to the Church: wherein wherein there are now as rich Ornaments as in any Church of Chriſtendom. The Choir of the Church was hung round with a Venetian Tiſſue of Gold. The Pavement alſo of the Choir and the Body of the Church, together with the Steps to the Altar, were ſpread with rich Tapeſtry. For they all put off their Shooes before they go into the Church; nor do the Armenians kneel as in Europe, but ſtand all the while upright. When they hear Maſs, they ſit after the Mode of the Country, but when the Leſſons are reading they ſtand up. All the Service-time their Heads are cover'd, unleſs at the Elevation of the Hoſt, for then they take off their Bonnets, and kiſs the Earth three times. There was upon the Altar a Croſs, with ſix Candleſticks of Gold; and upon the Steps to the Altar four Candleſticks of Silver five foot high. After they had ſung ſeveral Hymns, the Patriarch ſeated himſelf in a Chair cover'd with Silk Tapeſtry, four Archbiſhops ſitting with their Backs to a Pillar at his right hand. The Service was ſolemnly perform'd by an Archbiſhop, with two Biſhops on each ſide of him. After the Archbiſhop had made certain Prayers, he took the Book wherein he had read the Goſpel and gave it the Patriarch, the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and all the People to Kiſs. On the one ſide of the Cover of that Book there are two Relicks enchas'd, which are cover'd with Cryſtal, which was the ſide of the Book that was given to be Kiſs'd. The Ceremony being ended, many went to Kiſs the Patriarch's Hand, and ſo retir'd.

Ten Leagues from Erivan, toward the North, appears a great Lake, wherein there is an Iſland, upon which is built a very fair Covent. The Monks that live there, live ſo auſtere a Life, that they never eat Fiſh or Fleſh above four times a Year: neither do they ſpeak one to another, but upon thoſe four Days. The reſt of the Year they feed only upon Herbs, which they gather out of the Garden: for ſay they, it is not Faſting, to eat either Butter or Oyl. The Bread which they eat is brought from the neighbouring Villages: and the Iſland is repleniſh'd with all ſorts of excellent Fruits.

On the one ſide of the Lake nearer to Erivan is a large Plain, wherein there are ſix Monaſteries. One of which is entirely hewn out of the Rock, with the Pillars that ſuſtain it, being ſeated in a very hard Rock. The Armenians call that Church Kickart in their Language, and the Turks in theirs Guicurghieche, that is, See and away. In this Church, according to the Traditions of the Armenians, is kept the Lance wherewith the Side of Chriſt was pierc'd; the Figure whereof I caus'd to be drawn upon the Place. The Armenians have this Lance in great Veneration, ſaying, that it was brought thither by St. Matthew.

Five Leagues from Erivan, towards the South-Eaſt, begins the Mountain Ararat; which will be always famous for being the reſting-place of Noah's Ark. Half a Leaugue from that Mountain, where the Plain begins to grow level, ſtands a Church upon a little Hillock, cloſe by which are ſeveral Pits like Wells. They report that it was into one of theſe Wells that Cerda, an Armenian King, caus'd St. Gregory to be thrown, becauſe he would not Worſhip his falſe Gods. Between this Church and Erivan are to be ſeen the Ruines of the Ancient Artaxate, the Seat of the Kings of Armenia, which demonſtrate that it has been a great City: beſides, there appear the Ruines of a fair Palace.

Erivan lies in 64 Degrees, 20 Minutes of Longitude; 41 Degrees, 15 Minutes of Latitude; in a moſt plentiful Country of all things neceſſary for Humane Life, but eſpecially abounding in good Wine. It is one of the beſt Provinces of all Perſia, and yields the King a very large Revenue, as well by reaſon of the goodneſs of the Soil, as for being the great Thoroughfare of the Caravans. The yearly Revenue of the Governour only, otherwiſe call'd the Kan of Erivan, amounts to above 20000 Tomans, which make 840000 Livres. This City lying upon the Frontiers of both Empires, has been taken and retaken by the Turks and Perſians, ſeveral times. By which means the old City being ruin'd, they have built a new one, 800 Paces on this ſide, upon a Rock, at the foot whereof, upon the Weſt-ſide runs a rapid Stream: it is call'd by the Name of Sangui-Cïja, and in many places it is deep and full of Rocks. You croſs it, over a fair Bridge of three Arches, in which are built little Chambers, where the Kan retires in the heat of the day. It is full of Fiſh, eſpecially Trouts, which nevertheleſs are dear enough. This River comes from a Lake called Gigaguni; about 25 Leagues from Erivan, toward the North,

North, and falls into the Aras, that runs not above three Leagues off to the South. Though this City be fortified to the West by the River, yet it is never the stronger, by reason of the Hills on the other side which command it: and in regard it is built upon a rock, the Moats of the Fort are not above three or four Foot deep. In some places the City is secur'd with a double Wall with several Towers; but the Walls being only of Earth, as are most of the Houses, the Rain does more mischief, than the Cannon would do. That part of Erivan to the North-West, is a kind of Suburb, but far better inhabited then the City: for there live all the Merchants and Artificers, together with the Christian Armenians, who have four Churches there, with a Monastery. And of late years they have built also a very fair Inn in the same Quarter. In the City there only lives the Kan, with the Military Officers and Souldiers; the Kan's Lodgings lying upon the River. The Governour is a Person of great Power, and has always sufficient Forces about him to guard the Frontiers. The Summer being very hot at Erivan, he lyes in Tents upon the Mountains during the Heat. When a Caravan arrives, he is forc'd to give the King advice thereof: and if any Ambassador come thither, he is bound to maintain him at his own expence, and to cause him to be conducted to the Territories of the next Governour, who is oblig'd to do the same. So that Ambassadors are not bound to be at any Expenees in the Territories of the King of Persia. Four Leagues from the City are high Mountains, where the Natives that inhabit the hot and Sun-burnt Countries toward Chaldea, come Twenty Thousand together, to seek out good Pasturage for their Cattel, and about the end of Autumn return again into their own Country. I cannot compare this Mountanious Tract, whether for its Valleys and Rivers, or for the nature of the Soil, to any Part that I have seen, better than to that proportion of Switzerland, which is call'd the Country of Vaux: and there is a Tradition among the Natives, That certain people that inhabited between the Alpes and Mount Jura, and which compos'd a Squadron of Alexander's Army, having serv'd him in his Conquests, seated themselves in this part of Armenia, which they found so like their own Country. From Tocat to Tauris the Inhabitants are for the most part Christians. Which large Tract of Grouud being that which the Ancients call'd the Province of Armenia, 'tis no wonder to meet with fifty Armenians for one Mahometan. There are many ancient Armenian Families in Erivan, which is their native Country; but they are well us'd by the Governours, who being far distant from the Court, do what they please. This City not being far remote from the Province from whence the Silks come, is the place where all the Buyers and Sellers resort. But neither in Erivan, nor in any other part of Persia are the Merchants put to open their Bales at the Custom-Houses, as in Turkie. They only pay certain Duties toward securing the Highways; which Duties they call Raderies, and those that gather them Raders.

The Kans or Governours of Provinces in Persia are civil to Strangers, especially to those that they like, or that shew them any thing of Curiosity. The first time that I went into Persia I took a young Watchmaker with me, and coming to Erivan, I carried him to the Kan who was then Governour. It was at a time when Watches were very rare in Persia; and the Kan, understanding what Trade the Young Man was of, told us he was the first Watch-maker that ever had been in Persia: Thereupon he brought the young man a Watch to mend, and that he might have the pleasure of seeing him work, he lodg'd us in a Chamber next his own, and made us drink with him every day; for he was a true Toper, and compell'd us to drink with him from four in the Afternoon 'till near Midnight, in a place which he had made on purpose, in his Garden, to take off his Glasses.

This was he, that having deliver'd Erivan to Sultan Amurat, went along with him to Constantinople, and became his Favourite for teaching him to Drink. Amurat left a Garrison of 22000 Men in the City; but Sha-Sheſi the Persian King begirt it presently with a strong Army; and planting him securely under one of the Hills that command the City, he batter'd it incessantly with eight Pieces of Cannon: the fourth day he made a Breach, and though he had the repute of a Coward, he was the first at the Assault, and took the City: and because they would not yield at his Summons, he put all the Garrison to the Sword. For which Amurat, was quit with Sha-Sheſi afterwards, though not in so noble a way; for enteringa Victor into Bagdat, he put all the Persians to the Sword, after he had given them his word to the contrary, and promis'd to spare their lives.

CHAP. IV.

A Continuation of the ſame Road from Erivan to Tauris.

IT uſually takes up ten days journey for the Caravan to go between Erivan and Tauris; and Nakſivan is almoſt in the mid-way between both. The firſt days journey you travel through large Plains ſow'd with Rice, and water'd with ſeveral Rivulets. The next day you contiue to Travel through Plains of the ſame nature, in ſight of the Mountain Ararat, which is full of Monaſteries, leaving it upon the South. The Armenians call this Mountain Meſeſoufar, The Mountain of the Ark; becauſe the Ark of Noah reſted upon it. It is as it were unfaſten'd from the other Mountains of Armenia, and from the half-way to the top, it is continually cover'd with Snow. It is higher than any of the neighbouring Mountains; and in my firſt Travells I ſaw it for five days Journey together. So ſoon as the Armenians diſcover it, they kiſs the Earth, and lifting up their eyes to Heaven, ſay their Prayers. Yet you are to take notice, that the Mountain is hid in Clouds for two or three Months together: In the plains that you croſs in this ſecond days journey, to the Southward a League and a half from the Highway, is to be ſeen a work of great Art; being the Ruines of a Magnificent Caſtle, where the Kings of Armenia were wont to reſide in the time of their Hunting Divertiſements; more eſpecially when they continu'd their ſports at the Mallard and Heron. The next day we lodg'd near to a Village where there was good Water, which conſtrain'd the Caravan to ſtay there; there being none to be met with for ten Leagues farther. The next day you muſt Travel one by one through the Paſs of a Mountain, and croſs a large River nam'd Arpaſon, which falls into Aras. It is fordable when it is low, but when the Snow melts and ſwells the ſtream, you muſt go a League out of your way to the Southward to croſs it, over a Bridge of Stone. From thence you go to lodge near a Village call'd Kalifakiend, where you are forc'd to fetch your Water a good way off. The firſt days journey is through a Plain, at the end whereof you meet with an Inn, call'd Kara-bagler, ſtanding upon a Rivulet; which was finiſh'd in 1664. The Head of this Rivulet ſprings three or four Leagues higher toward the North; and half a League below Kara-Bagler, the Water congeals and petrifies; and of thoſe Stones is the Inn built. The Stone is very ſlight; and when they have need of it, they make Trenches all along the Stream, and fill them with the ſame Water, which in eight or ten Months turns into Stone. The Water is very ſweet, and has no bad taſt; yet the Country-men thereabouts will neither drink it, nor water their Grounds with it. The Armenians ſay, that Sem the Son of Noah caus'd the Rock to be hollow'd, out of which this River iſſues; which four or five Leagues from its Head, and two from the Inn, falls into Aras. From this Inn to Nakſivan is but a ſmall Journey: Nakſivan, according according to the Opinion of the Armenians, is the most ancient City of the World; built about three Leagues from the Mountain upon which the Ark of Noah rested: from whence it also takes its Name; for Nak in the Armenian Tongue signifies a Ship, and Sivan, resting or reposing. 'Twas a great City, now wholly ruin'd by the Army of Sultan Amurath. There are the Remains of several rare Mosquees, which the Turks have destroy'd; for the Turks and Persians destroy one anothers Mosquees as fast as they fall into one anothers possession. This City is very ancient, and the Armenians report, that it was in this place where Noah went to live, when he went out of the Ark. They say further, that he was Buried here; and that his Wife has a Tomb at Marante upon the Road to Tauris. There runs a little River by Naksivan, the Water whereof is very good; the Spring whereof is not far distant from the Head of the River of Karabagler. The Armenians drove a great Trade in Silk formerly in this Town, which is now very much abated: however, there is a Kan which has the Command there. All the Country between Erivan and Tauris was wholly destroy'd by Sha-Abas King of Persia, and the first of that Name; to the end that the Armies of the Turks, not meeting with any subsistance, might perish of themselves. To this purpose, he sent all the Inhabitants of Zulfa and the Parts adjoyning into Persia, Old and Young, Fathers, Mothers, and Children, with which he planted new Colonies in several parts of his Kingdome. He sent above 27000 Families of Armenians into Guilan, whence the Silks come; and where the harshness of the Climate kill'd abundance of those poor people, that were accustom'd to a milder Air. The most considerable were sent to Ispahan, where the King put them upon the Trade of Silk, and lent them Commodities, for which they paid upon the return of their Markets, which suddenly set the Armenians upon their Feet again. These are they that Built the City of Zulfa, which is only separated from Ispahan by the River of Senderou, calling it New Zulfa, to distinguish it from the old City, which was the Habitation of their Ancestors. A third part of the people were dispers'd into other Villages between Ispahan and Sciras. But the old People dying, the young ones generally turn Mahumetans: so that now you can hardly meet with two Christian Armenians in all those fair Plains, which their Fathers were sent to manure.

Among the Ruines of Naksivan appear the Ruines of a great Mosquee, which was one of the most stately Buildings in the World: which some say was built in memory of Noah's Burying-place. As you depart out of the City, near to the River that runs by it, appears a Tower, which is an excellent piece of Architecture: It is compos'd of four Duomo's joyn'd together, which support a kind of a Pyramid, that seems to be fram'd of twelve little Towers; but toward the middle it changes its figure, and lessening like a Spire, ends in a Point. The Building is all of Brick, but as well the out-side as the in-side is over-spread with a kind of Varnish of Parget, wrought into Flowers, like Embos'd work. 'Tis thought to have been an Edifice, set up by Temur-leng when he had Conquer'd Persia.

Between Naksivan and Zulfa, on each side, as well to the North as to the South, there are ten Covents of Christian Armenians, distant about two or three Leagues one from the other. They acknowledge the Pope, and are govern'd by certain Religious Dominicans of their own Nation. And to keep up their Religion, they send from time to time to Rome certain Children born in the Country, to learn the Latin and Italian Tongues, and other necessary Sciences. It is thought there are in this Quarter above six thousand Souls that absolutely follow the Doctrine of the Church of Rome; only that they sing the Office and the Mass in the Armenian Tongue, that all the People may hear and understand them. The Archbishop, being chosen, is sent to Rome to be confirm'd. He resides at a great Town, which is one of the most lovely places in all Asia; the Wine and Fruits that grow there are very delicate, besides the abundance of all other things necessary for Humane Life. Every Covent stands near a great Village: the chiefest where I have been twice, is Abavener, the second Abraghonnex, the third Kerna, the fourth Soletak, the fifth Kouchkachen, the sixth Giavuk, the seventh Chiabonnez, the eighth Araghouche, the ninth Kanzuk, the tenth Kisouk, which lyes upon the Frontiers of Curdistan or Assyria: Here it is, that the Armenians believe St. Bartholomew and St. Matthew to have been Martyr'd, of which they pretend to shew some Relicks at this day. Many Mahometans came thither out of Devotion, especially such as are troubl'd with with Feavers. There are two or three of thoſe Convents, where they civilly entertain ſuch Chriſtians as come out of Europe; though the Monks there are very poor. They alſo live very auſtere lives, feeding upon nothing but Herbs. That which makes them ſo poor, is the often change of Tyrannical Governours, whom they are oblig'd to preſent with large Gifts But in regard they cannot give much, thoſe Governours have no kindneſs for them; for which reaſon, being inſtigated by thoſe other Armenians who are able to oblige them, they uſe them ſo ſeverely, that they are often forc'd to complain to the King; which I have many times ſeen done at Iſpahan.

A League and a half from the chief of theſe Covents there is a high Mountain, ſeparated from all the reſt, which riſes like a Sugar loaf, as doth the Pike of a Tenariff. At the foot of this Mountain are certain Springs, that have the virtue to heal thoſe that are bit by Serpents; in ſo much that Serpents carry'd to that place will dye immediately.

When the Caravan is ready to ſet out from Naksivan for Zulpha, which is not above a days journey from thence, the principal Armenians uſually go out of the way to the Covent of St. Stephen, which lyes to the South.

Now the Road from Naksivan to St. Stephen's lyes firſt to a great Village call'd Eccliſia, where live the richeſt Armenians, that drive a great Trade in Silk, and have built them a very fair Church.

Two Leagues from Eccleſia you muſt croſs the River Aras in a Ferry-Boat, being as it were ſqueez'd between two Mountains in that place: Once I went over upon the Ice. About two Musket ſhot from thence, you muſt croſs over a Bridge, another River that falls into the Aras. From the foot of the Bridge you begin to aſcend a little Hill, at the top whereof you meet with a great Village, call'd Shamb', all the Inhabitants whereof, as well Men as Women, grow Mad at 18 years of age; but it is ſuch a madneſs that it is not miſchievous. Some believe it to be the Puniſhment of Heaven, for that their Forefathers in theſe Mountains perſecuted St. Bartholomew and St. Matthew.

From hence to Stephen's it is not above a League, but the Way is very troubleſom. St. Stephen's is a Convent built not above 30 years ago. It ſtands upon the Mountains, in a barren place, and of difficult acceſs. But the reaſon why the Armenians choſe that place before any other, is becauſe that St. Bartholomew and St. Matthew retir'd thither in the time of their Perſecution. They add, that St. Matthew did a Miracle in that place; for that there being no Water there before, he only ſtruck his ſtick upon the Ground, and preſently there aroſe a Spring. This Spring is about half a quarter of a League from the Convent, under a Vault with a good Door to it, to keep the Water from being waſted. The Armenians go to viſit this Spring in great Devotion, having laid the Water into the Covent with Pipes. They alſo ſay, that in this place they found ſeveral Relicks which St. Bartholomew and St. Matthew left there, to which they add a great many others; among the reſt a Croſs, made of the Baſin wherein Chriſt waſh'd his Diſciples Feet: In the middle of the Croſs is a white Stone, which as they report, if you lay upon a Sick perſon, will turn black if the perſon be likely to dye; and recover its former whiteneſs after the death of the party.

A Jaw-Bone of St. Stephen the Martyr.

The Scull of St. Matthew.

A Bone of the Neck, and a Bone of the Finger of St John Baptiſt.

A Hand of St. Gregory, who was the Diſciple of Dionyſius the Areopagite.

A little Box, wherein they keep a great number of pieces of Bones, which they believe to be the Relicks of the Seventy Two Diſciples.

The Church is built in the form of a Croſs, as are all the Churches of the Armenians; in the middle whereof riſes a fair Duomo, round about which ſtand the twelve Apoſtles. Both the Church and Covent are of Free-ſtone, and though the whole Edifice be not very big, there has been abundance of Gold and Silver waſted upon the Walls: Many Armenian Families have been very much endamag'd thereby; for the Women were ſo devout, that unknown to their Husbands they ſold their Jewels, and their very Cloaths to defray the Expences of Building.

The firſt time that I was at St. Stephen's, in the company of ſome Armenians, two Biſhops, attended by ſeveral other Monks, came out to meet us, and led us into a great Hall, where we were very well treated. For it is the cuſtom of the Armenians, a little before Meals to preſent their Gueſts a large Cup of Aqua-Vitæ, with Sweet-meats of all ſorts, beſides Citron and Orange-peels candy'd, in ſeven or eight Porcelan-diſhes, laid in a great China baſin. This is a little Prelude to excite the Appetite; for the Armenians, both men and Women, will empty great Cups of Aqua-Vitæ. After Dinner they go to Church, where they ſing certain Hymns: when you return, there are a ſufficient number of Mattreſſes or Quilts to lye upon; for they uſe no other ſort of Beds over all Aſia: only at Night you ſpread a Carpet upon a Quilt, and ſhut the Door. We ſaw not the Archbiſhop all that Evening, only at Church.

About Midnight all the Bells rang, and every body roſe to go to Church. I believe it was more than uſual, becauſe it was Shrovetide; for both the Office and the Maſs were both concluded by break of day. Between eight and nine in the Morning the Cloth was laid; before which time we ſaw abundance of the Neighbouring Country people, who brought Wine, Fruits, and other Proviſions, and preſented all to the Archbiſhop.

While we were at Breakfaſt news came that a certain Biſhop was dead, in his return to the Three Churches; whither he was ſent by the Patriarch to gather certain Duties due from the Villages. Immediately the Archbiſhop riſing from the Table with all his Aſſiſtants, and having made a Prayer for the Dead, ſent a Biſhop and ſix Monks to fetch the Corps; who returning a little after Midnight, the Body was preſently laid in the Church upon a Carpet ſpread upon the Ground, with the Face turn'd toward the Altar. In the mean time, a great number of Wax-candles were lighted, and all the reſt of the Night two monks watch'd by turns to Pray for the Dead. Early in the Morning the Archbiſhops, the Biſhops, and all in Religious Orders, ſaid the Office for the Dead, which laſted half an Hour; and at the end of the Maſs they brought the Corps to the Altar, ſo that they made the Feet of the Corps to touch it. Having ſo done, they took off the Linnen Cloth that cover'd his Head, at which time the Archbiſhop anointed him in ſix places with the Holy Oyl, ſaying certain Prayers every time. Then they cover'd him again, and ſaid other Prayers which laſted half an Hour. Theſe Ceremonies perform'd, they carry'd the Corps out of the Church with Croſſes and Banners, and every one a Taper in his Hand. As the Corps paſs'd by, one of the Biſhops put a Paper in his right hand, containing theſe words, I came from the Father, and I return to the Father. Being brought to the Grave, upon a little Mountain near the Covent, and ſet down, they ſaid other Prayers which laſted a quarter of an hour. In the mean time a Biſhop going down into the Grave, took away all the Stones and made the place ſmooth, after which the Corps was let down wrapt in a large Linnen Sheet. Then the Biſhop, according to ther cuſtom, rais'd his Head a little higher than his Body, turning his face to the Eaſt. Which being done, the Archbiſhop and Aſſiſtants took every one a handful of Earth, which the Archbiſhop bleſt, and giving it to the Biſhop, he ſtrew'd it over the Body. Then the Biſhop coming out again, the Grave was fill'd up.

From St. Stephen's there is a deſcent for a League together to Aras, by the ſide whereof you are to keep along till you come to Zulpha, where you come into the high Road again. There is another way quite over the Mountain, which is the nearer way by a League, but 'tis very troubleſom and toyliſom, and therefore the leſs frequented.

But to return to the High Road from Naksivan; half a League from Naksivan you meet with a River which falls into Aras, which is to be croſs'd over a Stone-Bridge of 12 Arches, though there be but little Water, unleſs it be when the Snow melts, or the Rains fall. In a Meadow, next the Bridge, where we lodg'd one time that I travell'd that way, there is a Spring of lukewarm Waters, which will looſen the Bellies of them that drink it. At this Bridge it is that the Toll-gatherer comes and takes his Duties, when the Caravan ſtays not at Naksivan. You muſt pay ten Abaſſi's for every Camel's Loading, or nine Livers, which is for the ſecuring the Highways. Theſe Duties are demanded in many places of Perſia without ſearching the Packs. The Governours alſo in their Provinces are made to anſwer for every Robbery committed: which makes it ſo ſafe travelling in Perſia, that you need not keep with the Caravan, unleſs you will your ſelf.

From

From this Bridge to Zulfa is but one days journey; which Town being altogether ruin'd, ſhews the reaſon wherefore the Caravan lodges upon the Bank of the River five hundred Paces on this ſide.

Zulfa, the ancient Habitation of the Armenians which Sha-Abas carried into Perſia, is a Town ſqueez'd between two Mountains, through which the Aras runs, leaving but little Land on either ſide. It carries no Boats till about two Leagues below, (for upward it will hardly bear a piece of Timber) and in regard the Country grows low and extends it ſelf into Plains, there is no fear of Rocks, the courſe of the Stream being very quiet. There was a fair Stone-Bridge, which Sha-Abas caus'd to be broken down, when he wholly deſtroy'd the Town, that it might be no harbour for the Turks. Neither by the Ruines, nor by its Situation, doth it appear to have been a City of any ancient Beauty; the Stones were clapt unskilfully together without Morter, ſo that the Houſes were more like Caves than Houſes. The North-Weſt ſide was moſt inhabited, there being nothing on the other ſide worth taking notice of. The Lands about Zulfa being very fertil, there are certain Armenian Families return'd, who live very quietly. Cogia Nazar, one of the chief Armenians that went out of Zulfa, growing rich by Trade, and being in great reputation with Sha-Abbas, and Sha-Sefi his Succeſſor, who made him Kelonter, or Chief Judge of the Armenian Nation, built two great Inns, for the Honour of his Country, in Zulfa, upon each ſide of the River one. He ſpent above an hundred thouſand Crowns, but dying left two remarkable Pieces of Work unfiniſh'd.

Half a League on this ſide Zulfa, before you croſs a Torrent that falls into Aras, you may take your choice of two ways to go to Tauris. The one upon the right hand, leading to the South Eaſt, which is the ordinary Road; the other upon the left hand, toward the North Eaſt, which we took eight or ten in company together on horſeback, the laſt time I went to Iſpahan. We left the Caravan, that takes the great Road, and never goes the other way, becauſe it is full of Rocks and Stones that ſpoil the hoofs of the Camels. However I was willing to ſee a new Country, which I ſhall deſcribe before I come to the great Road.

From the Torrent where we left the Caravan, we went forward, and lay at a Village not above a League and a half off.

The next day, after we had kept along by the Banks of the Aras for five or ſix Hours, we came to Aſtabat, which lyes a League from the River, where we ſtaid above two Days to divert our ſelves. This is but a little City, but a very neat one; where there are four Inns, and every Houſe has its Fountain. The great plenty of Water makes the City very fruitful in all things; more eſpecially in good Wine. This is the only Country in the World that produces the Ronas, for which there is a vaſt utterance all over Perſia and India. The Ronas is a Root that grows in the Earth like Liquorice, and is not much bigger. The uſe of it is to dye Red, and this is that Red which gives that beautiful tincture to all the Calicuts that come out of the Mogul's Country. Though the Roots which are pull'd out of the Earth are very long, yet they cut them into pieces not above as long as a Man's Hand, for the better accommodation of Carriage. It is a wonderful thing to behold at Ormus whole Caravans laden with this Ronas, which they Ship off from thence to the Indies.

The Root is full of Juyce, and yields a very high Tincture; for I remember that an Indian Veſſel that was laden with it, being caſt away in the Road of Ormus, where the Bags of Ronas floated, the Sea look'd of a red colour for ſeveral days.

Departing from Aſtabat, it behov'd us to provide our ſelves with Straw and Barley for our Horſes, underſtanding that we ſhould meet with none all that days journey. From thence we travell'd upon a deſcent for an hour together to the River Aras, which we croſs'd in a Boat; and all the reſt of the day we travel'd through Mountains, over Torrents and Stones. That Evening we lay upon the Bank of a ſmall Stream.

The day following, after we had travel'd through a ſpacious Valley for two or three hours, we aſcended a high Mountain, at the top whereof we met with two or three pitiful Houſes, where we ſtopt that day.

The next, which was the fifth after, we left the Caravan, we travel'd upon a descent for two or three hours, till we came to a great Village neatly situated, where there grows excellent Fruit. There we repos'd for an hour or two; and from thence we came to a great Stone-Bridg on a River where there is no Water but when the Rains fall. It falls into the Lake Roumi, but the Water of the River is so sowr and ill tasted, especially when it is low, that it is not to be drunk. About a quarter of a League from the Bridge are three long Stones set in the Ground like Pillars: the Natives say that they were placed there for a Monument, in the same place where Darius the Son of Hystaspes was elected King by the cunning of the Gentleman of his Horse: from whence to Tauris is but half a League. The Mountains of the Medes which we cross'd in this Road, and those which run along toward the ancient Parthians, are the most fertil in all Persia. They bear Corn and Fruit in abundance; for upon the high Mountains there are fair Plains sow'd with Wheat, which are extraordinary fertil. The Springs which rise there, and Rains which fall give a fresher beauty and a higher tast to what grows there, more than in any other part of Persia that wants Water; and the products of those Fields are of a higher price.

Now for the great Road. The Caravan having cross'd the Stream where we left it, lodges the next Night upon the Banks of Aras, over which it ferries the next Morning. It does not go thorough Zulfa, though it be so near it; because that on the other side of the City, there are three Leagues of Way very bad and unfrequented. For which reason you must leave Zulfa on the right hand, which is not much out of the way. After two hours travel you go by a Bridge which is call'd Sugiac; after which you come upon Heaths encompass'd with high Rocks. All this days journey you meet with no Water, but only one little Fountain, and the Water is so bad that the Beasts will hardly drink it.

The day following you travel through an even Country, but very barren: where you meet with nothing but a forlorn Inn; though it be a place where Cost has been bestow'd, and built all of Free-stone, that was fetch'd a great way off. The next Stage is Marante, famous for the Burying-place of Noah's Wife. The Town is not very big; resembling rather a Thicket than a City: but the situation is very pleasant, in the middle of a fertil Plain adorn'd with several well peopl'd Villages. This Plain does not extend above a League round about Marante, the Country beyond it being all barren. However it is not altogether unprofitable: for being a continual Heath, it affords feeding for the Camels, which are there bred for the Caravans. Which is the reason that there are so many Camel-Masters at Sugiac and Marante, who furnish great part of the Road. At Marante you must pay thirteen Abassi's, or four Crowns for every Camel's Load, for the security of the Road.

Leaving Marante, you lodge the next night a League from Sophiana in a bushy Plain, where the Water is worth nothing; after you have travell'd a mix'd Country, barren enough, where you meet with but one Inn in a Valley: but it is a very fair one. Sophiana is an indifferent large City, which you cannot see till you come within it, by reason of the great number of Trees planted in the Streets and round about it, which makes it look rather like a Forest than a City.

The next day, which is usually the tenth days journey from Erivan, the Caravan, having cross'd fair, large and fertil Plains, arrives at Tauris. Those Plains are water'd with several Streams that fall from the Median Mountains; but the Water is not all of the same goodness, for there is some which cannot be drunk.

In the mid-way between Sophiana and Tauris, lyes a Hill, from whence you have a prospect over those Plains, upon which the Army of Sultan Amurath Encamp'd, when he besieg'd Tauris. The news coming to Sha-Sefi King of Persia, that he had burnt it, and was marching further into the Country with a hundred thousand Men, Let him come, said he, without any disturbance, I know how to make the Turks pay for their Invasion without any great trouble. They were then not above fifteen days march from Ispahan, when Sha-Sefi, turn'd the course of all the Streams both before and behind, which only run from certain Springs, and are brought in Cutts or Chanels into the Inland-parts of Persia, where there are no Rivers: By which means the whole Army of the Turks perish'd for want of Water in those vast unwater'd Countries where they had engag'd themselves too far.

Tauris lyes in 83 Degrees, 30 Minutes of Longitude; and 40 Degrees, 15 Minutes of Latitude, in an open place where there is not a Tree to be seen; and environ'd environ'd with Mountains on every ſide, but only upon the Weſt. The furtheſt Mountain is not above a League from the City; but there is one which almoſt touches it, being only ſeparated from it by the River. 'Tis a good Country, and fruitful in Corn; there is good Paſturage, and great ſtore of Pulſe. Some think that Tauris was the ancient Ecbatane, the Metropolis of the Empire of the Medes. It is at this day a great City and well peopl'd, as being the Mart for Turkie, Muſcovy, the Indies, and Perſia. There are an infinite number of Merchants, and vaſt quantities of all ſorts of Merchandize: particularly of Silk, which is brought out of the Province of Guilan, and other places. There is alſo a great Trade for Horſes, which are handſom and cheap. Wine, Aqua-vitæ, and indeed all ſorts of Proviſions are cheap enough; and Money trolls about in that place more than in any other part of Aſia. Many Armenian Families have got great Eſtates there by Trade, and underſtand it better than the Perſians. A little River, the Water whereof is very good, runs through the middle of Tauris; it's call'd Scheinkaïe, over which there are three Bridges to croſs from one part of the City to the other.

The moſt part of the Buildings in Tauris are of Bricks bak'd in the Sun; the Houſes not being above one or two Stories high at moſt. The tops of the Houſes are terraſs'd; the Roofs within are vaulted, and plaiſter'd with Earth mix'd with chopt Straw, which they whiten afterwards with Lime. In the year 1638 the City was almoſt ruin'd by Sultan Amurath; but it is almoſt all rebuilt again. There are in it Bazars, or Market-houſes, which are well built, and many Inns very commodious, two Srories high. The faireſt is that of Mirza-Sadé Governour of the Province, who caus'd it to be built with a Market-houſe adjoyning, to which he has added a Moſquee and a Colledge, with good Revenues.

The great Trade of Tauris renders it renown'd over all Aſia: for it has a continual Traffick with Turks, Arabians, Georgians, Mengrelians, Perſians, Indians, Muſcovites, and Tartars. The Bazars or Market-houſes, which are cover'd, are always full of Goods: for there are ſome which are peculiar to the Handicraft-Trades; the moſt part whereof are Smiths, ſuch as make Saws, Axes, Files, and Steels to ſtrike Fire, with Tobacco-ſtoppers belonging to them. Some there are that make Pad-locks: for the Eaſtern People faſten their Doors only with wooden Bolts. There are alſo Turners, that furniſh the neighbouring Parts with Spinning-Wheels and Cradles: and ſome Goldſmiths, that make trifles of Silver. But there is abundance of Silk-weavers that are Artiſts, and work very neatly; and indeed there are more of thoſe than of any other Trade. Here it is that they dreſs the greateſt part of the Shagrin-Skins that are vended ſo plentifully all over Perſia; for there are none unleſs it be the Country-people, but wear Boots or Shooes of Shagrin-Leather. This Leather is made either of the Hides of Horſes, Aſſes, or Mules, and only of the hinder part of the Hide: but the Aſſes Hide has the beſt grain.

There are to be ſeen at Tauris, Ruines of the ſtately Edifices round about the great Piazza, and the neighbouring parts: they have alſo let run to ruine four or five Moſquees of a prodigious height and bigneſs. The moſt magnificent and the biggeſt ſtands as you go out of the Town, in the Road to Iſpahan. The Perſians will not come near it, but look upon it as defil'd, and a Moſquee of Hereticks, in regard it was built by the Sounnis, or the followers of Omar. 'Tis a vaſt Structure fairly built, the Front whereof is fifty Paces broad, with an aſcent of eight Steps. It is lin'd without with Brick-work varniſh'd with different Colours; and adorn'd within with very fair Painting A l'antique, and abundance of Cifers and Arabian Letters in Gold and Azure. Upon two ſides of the Fore-front are rear'd two Minarets or Towers very high, but not very wide, yet with Stairs to go up to the top. They are lin'd with varniſh'd Brick-work, which is the uſual Ornament of the Perſian Buildings: and at the top ſtand two Cupola's, form'd like the Turbants which the Perſians wear. The Gate of the Moſquee is not above four Foot wide, cut out of a great tranſparent white Stone, four and twenty Foot high, and twelve broad. Entring at the Door of the Moſquee, you come into a ſpacious Duomo, thirty ſix Paces in Diameter, rais'd upon twelve Pillars within, and ſupported by ſixteen without, which Pillars are very high, and ſix Foot ſquare. Below there is a Baluſtrade or Rails that run round about the Building, with Doors to go from one ſide to the other: and the Foot of every Pillar, which is of white Marble, is hollow'd into little Niches equal with the Floor, where the People put their Shooes, when they go farther to their Devotions. The inſide of the Walls is varniſh'd in Squares of ſeveral Colours, with Flowers, Cifers, and Arabian Letters intermix'd, and wrought in Emboſs'd work, ſo well painted, ſo well gilded that it ſeems to be but one piece of Work, cut out with a pair of Sciſſars. From this Duomo you paſs to another leſſer, but more beautiful in its kind. The lower part is of tranſparent white Stone, of the ſame nature with that in the Front, cut in great Panes like a Door that never opens. This Duomo has no Pillars, but eight Foot high, it is all of white Marble, where are to be ſeen Stones of a prodigious length and bredth: The inſide of the Vault is a violet Enamel, painted with all ſorts of Flowers in Flat-work, but the outſide of both the Duomo's is cover'd with varniſh'd Brick-work, and Flowers emboſs'd A la Moreſque. Upon the firſt the Flowers are black upon green; upon the ſecond, white Stars upon black: which diverſity of Colours is very pleaſing to the Eye.

Near the Door out of which you enter into the leſſer Duomo, on the left hand, ſtands a Chair of Walnut-tree curiouſly carv'd, and faſten'd to the Wall; it ſtands upon a Platform rais'd ſix ſteps high, without any Canopy. On the right hand ſtands another Chair of the ſame Wood, and an exquiſite piece of Workmanſhip; with a kind of State over it of the ſame Wood, faſten'd to the Wall. There is a little Rail about it; and the Platform is four ſteps high. On the South ſide of the Moſquee there are two white tranſparent Stones, which when the Sun ſhines upon them look red: And ſometimes after the Sun is ſet, you may read at thoſe Stones by the reflection of the Sun beams.

Juſt againſt the Moſquee on the other ſide is another Front, which is the only Remain of a ruin'd Building. It was the abode of the Sheck-Iman, or the Chief Prieſt. There had been large Baths which belonged to it, but they are all deſtroy'd; ſome others there were of leſs note, which are not lookt after.

In the great Piazza of Tauris and in the parts adjoyning, ſtands a fair Moſquee, a Colledge, and a Caſtle, which fall to decay; theſe Buildings being forſaken; by reaſon they were made uſe of by the Sounni's, which were followers of Omar. Near the ſame Church is a ruin'd Church of the Armenians, whither they ſay St. Helena ſent the true Croſs. There is another Moſquee, which was formerly a Church dedicated to St. John Baptiſt, where they ſay one of his Hands was preſerv'd a long time.

The Capuchins have a very convenient Houſe at Tauris; for Mirza-Ibrahim Governour of the Province, whoſe credit is equal to the Kan of Tauris, which is the chiefeſt Command in Perſia, favours him very much with his protection. This Governour has made himſelf very conſiderable at Court. and very much reſpected by the King for his indefatigable pains, and his extraordinary agility in augmenting the King's Revenue: having found out ſuch ways for that purpoſe, as never entred into the thoughts of any that preceded him in the the ſame Employment. He is very curious to learn all the Noble Sciences, which is a quality very rare among the Perſians: He alſo takes great delight in the Mathematicks and Philoſophy, diſcourſing often with Gabriel de Chinon, Governour of the Capuchins Covent in Tauris. But the great deſire which Mirza-Ibrahim had, to have his two Sons taught by the ſaid Gabriel, was the chief motive that made him ſo favourable to that Covent. He bought the Friers a place to build their Houſe, and liberally furniſh'd them for the Expence of the Work.

When the Sun ſets and riſes, there are a certain Company of People, who are oblig'd to make a hideous noiſe with Drums and Trumpets in the Meidan, or great Piazza of the City. They ſtand upon one ſide of the Piazza in a Gallery ſomewhat rais'd, which is a Cuſtom obſerv'd in all the Cities under the Perſian Government.

As you go out of Tauris upon the North-ſide, there is a Mountain cloſe by, there being only the River between it. The name of it is Einali-Zeinali, and formerly there ſtood upon the top of it a fair Hermitage of the Armenians, which the Mahometans have converted into a Moſquee. At the bottom of the Mountain ſtands a Fortreſs and a Moſquee, which they let go to ruine, becauſe they were built by the Ottomans. A little farther upon the brink of the Precipice ſtands a Monaſtery, near to which are two Caves, where are certain Sepulchers and Marble Pillars lying along upon the Ground. There are also in the Mosquee certain Tombs of the ancient Kings of the Medes, the Remains whereof shew that the Work was very Excellent.

Upon the Road from Tauris to Ispahan, about half a League from the utmost Gardens, between several knaps of the Mountain which you leave upon the right hand, upon the top of the highest of all, where there never was any Water, and where it is impossible to bring any, appears a Bridge Fifty paces long, the Arches whereof are very fair ones, but it falls to decay. It was a Mollah that built it, out of what design no person new: nor can you come to Tauris upon that side, but you must see that Bridge, because there is no other way, there being nothing but Water and Precipices on either hand. Afterwards he confess'd that he built it out of meer Vanity, knowing that Sha-Abbas, the first of that name, was to come to Tauris. The King indeed came some time after, and seeing an unprofitable Bridge upon the top of a Mountain, he demanded who built it, and what was his design. To whom the Mollah return'd this answer, Sir, said he, I built that Bridge, that when your Majesty came to Tauris, you might inform your self from the mouth of him that built it. By which it appear'd that the Mollah had no other ambition than to oblige the King to speak to him.

A League from Tauris to the West, in the middle of a field, stands a great Brick Tower, call'd Kanhazun. It is about fifty Paces in Diameter, and though it be half ruin'd, yet it is very high. It seems to have been the Dungeon of some Castle, there being very high Walls round about it; which though they be but of Earth, nevertheless appear to be very ancient. It is not certainly known who built this Tower, but the Arabian Letters upon the Gate afford us some reason to conclude that it was a Mahometan structure. In the year 1651 there happen'd a terrible Earthquake in Tauris and the parts thereabouts, by which many houses were overturn'd, and this Tower then cleaving from the top to the bottom, a good part of it fell down, and fill'd up the hollow within-side.

Besides the little River that runs by Tauris, there is another bigger to be cross'd about half a League from the City, over which there is a very fair Stone-Bridge: Near to it stands a Sepulcher, cover'd with a little Duomo, where the Persians say that the Sister of Iman Riza lyes interr'd; and they have it in great veneration. The River that runs under the Bridge comes from the Mountains of the North, and falls into the Lake Roumi, thirteen or fourteen Leagues from Tauris. They call it Aggi-sou, or Bitter-water; for the Water is very bad, and without any Fish. The Lake which is fifteen Leagues in compass, has the same quality, the Water being blackish: the Fish that happen into it out of other Rivers that fall into it, presently become blind, and in a short while are found dead by the Shoar. This Lake takes its name from a Province and a little City, which are both call'd Roumi, being not above Eleven Leagues from Tauris.

In the middle of the Lake, upon the way that leads to a little City call'd Tokoriam, there is a little Hill that rises insensibly, the ascent whereof is very smooth, and out of it there rise many little Springs. The farther they run from the Head, the wider grow the Streams. And the Earth which they water is of two distinct qualities; the first Earth that is digg'd serves to make Lime: the next to that is a hollow spungy Stone, that is good for nothing: but under that again is a white transparent Stone, which you may see through as through Glass, which being smooth and polish'd serves to adorn the Houses. This stone is only a congelation of the Waters of these Streams; for sometimes you shall meet with creeping Animals congeal'd within. The Governour of the Province sent one piece to Sha-Abbas, as a great present, wherein there was a Lizard congeal'd of a Foot long. He that presented it to the Governour had Twenty Tomans, or three hundred Crowns; afterwards I offer'd a thousand for the same Piece. In some parts of the Province of Mazandran, where the Euxin Sea stretches farthest into the Persian Territories, these congeal'd Stones are to be found, but not so frequently as near the lake Roumi; and you shall many times find pieces of Wood and Worms congeal'd in the Stones. I brought away a Camel-loading of these Stones, and left them at Marseilles; till I could find what use to put them to.

CHAP. V.

A Continuation of the Conſtantinopolitan Road from Tauris to Iſpahan, through Ardevil and Casbin.

FRom Tauris to Iſpahan the Caravan makes it generally twenty-four days journey.

The firſt day you croſs over dry Mountains, and four Leagues from Tauris you meet with one of the faireſt Inns in Perſia. This Inn Sha-Seſi caus'd to be built; it is very convenient, and large enough to lodge a hundred perſons with their Horſes. Over all Perſia, eſpecially from Tauris to Iſpahan, and from thence to Ormus, you meet every day with Inns at an equal diſtance.

The next day you deſcend a Mountain, in very rugged and narrow way. At the foot of this Mountain there are two ways for the Merchants to chooſe that will go to Iſpahan. They that will go the ordinary road and the direct way through Kom and Kachan, leave a Lake upon the left hand that parts the two Roads; and they that will go through Ardevil and Casbin, two other good Cities, leave the Lake upon the right hand, and coaſt along by the ſide of the Mountain. From Tauris to Ardevil it is not above a dozen Leagues; and having paſs'd the Lake, the Country is very good: Which is the Road I intend to deſcribe firſt.

Ardevil being at ſo ſmall a diſtance from Tauris, lyes almoſt in the ſame Degrees and Minutes of Longitude and Latitude. This City is famous, as well for being the firſt Market of Silks that come from Guilan, from which it is not far off; as alſo for the Sepulcher of Sha-Seſi, the firſt of that name, King of Perſia. The avenues to it are very pleaſant, being as it were Alleys of great Trees, which are call'd Tchinar, planted in a ſtreight line, at a due diſtance. It is of a moderate bigneſs, and ſeated in a lovely opening of the Mountains. The next to the Cities, which is call'd Sevalan, is the higheſt in all Media. The Houſes of Ardevil are built of Earth, as are moſt of the Houſes in the City of Perſia: but the Streets are very uneven, dirty, and narrow. There is but one which is handſom, at the end whereof is built the Armenian Church. A little River runs through the middle of the City, which deſcending from the neighbouring Mountains runs from Eaſt to Weſt. It is by Induſtry brought into many Cuts to water the Gardens, and in many places there are very fair Trees planted, which are very delightful to the Sight. The Meydan or Market-place is a very great one; more long than round; where ſtands a very fine Inn, upon one ſide, which the Kan caus'd to be built. There are ſeveral others in ſeveral parts of the City, which have the Proſpect over ſeveral lovely Gardens, eſpecially that which belongs to the King; to which you go through a long and ſtately Walk of four rows of Trees, at the end whereof ſtands a large Gate that gives you entrance. Though the Country about Ardevil be proper to bear Vines, yet there are none thereabouts; nor is there any Wine made till about four or five Leagues from the City. The Armenians that dwell in the City are very well ſtor'd with it; though there be no place in all Perſia, where there is ſo much Caution to be us'd, either as to the Importing it, or the Drinking it; both which muſt be done very privately: Which proceeds from the Mahometan Superſtition; the Perſians having ſo peculiar a veneration for that place, that they believe it a ſin to ſuffer Wine to be publickly drank therein.

The people come in Pilgrimage from all parts of Perſia to the Sepulcher of Sha-Seſi; which together with the vaſt Trade of Silk, makes Ardevil one of the moſt conſiderable Cities of all Perſia. There are ſeveral other Buildings added to the Moſquee wherein he lyes interr'd; the Entry whereof faces the Meydan, to which it is joyn'd upon the South-ſide with a large Portal. The Gate is chain'd with Chains faſten'd a croſs with great Rings; which if any Criminal Offender can but touch, and enter into the firſt Court, he is ſafe; for no perſon can apprehend him. This is a large Court, yet more in length than breadth, without the Wall whereof that looks upon the Market-place, ſeveral Shops are built for Merchants and Tradeſmen.

Out

Out of this Court you paſs into another which is leſs, and pav'd with broad Stones, with a Rivulet running through the middle. The Entry into it is through a Door, fortifi'd with Iron Chains like the former, and is made at a corner of the great Court upon the left hand. It brings you preſently under a Portico, where there are fair Balconies rais'd after the faſhion of the Country. Thoſe Balconies are full of ſeveral People; either Pilgrims, or perſons whoſe Crimes conſtrain them thither for Sanctuary. In that place you muſt leave your Stick and your Sword, before you go any farther; and give ſomething beſides to a Moullah, who is always attending there with Books.

In that ſecond Court through which the Rivulet glides, on the one ſide are Baths, on the other Granaries for Rice and Corn; and upon the left hand, at the end of the ſame Court, there is a little Door which brings you to a place where the Royal Alms are diſtributed to the Poor, Morning and Evening; being juſt againſt the King's Kitchin. This Gate is cover'd with Plates of Silver; and in the Kitchin there are about thirty Ovens contriv'd in the Wall, with as many great Caldrons to dreſs Pilaw and other Food, as well for the Poor as for the Officers of the Moſquee. While theſe Alms are diſtributing, the Maſter-Cook, who commands all the reſt, ſets upon a Chair cover'd with Plates of Silver, and ſees that every thing be done in order. He ſees to the meaſuring out the Rice every day for the Kettles, and cauſes the Victuals to be divided in his own ſight: For there is an excellent Oeconomy in the King's Houſe.

At the end of the Portico beyond the firſt Court there are two Gates, one beyond another, both cover'd with Plates of Silver, between thoſe two Gates on the right hand appears a little Moſquee, where are the Tombs of ſeveral Perſian Princes of the Blood Royal. You muſt have a great care not to tread upon the Threſholds of the Gates; for it is a Crime not to be expiated without a ſevere Puniſhment. From hence through a little Ile, you come into the Body of the Church, richly hung with Tapeſtry, and ſet about with high Desks, where lye a great many Books, wherein the Moullahs, or Doctors of the Law read continually, having Stipends to Officiate in the Moſquee. At the end of the Body of the Moſquee, is a little Octagonal Monument, like the Choir of a Church, in the midſt whereof ſtands the Monument of Sha-Seſi. It is only of Wood, but curiouſly carv'd and inlaid. It exceeds not the height of a Man of an ordinary ſtature, and ſeems like a great Cheſt, having four Apples of Gold ſet up at each corner. It is cover'd with a Crimſon Satin purfl'd with Gold; and all the other Tombs that are by it, are cover'd with Silks as rich. As well in the Choir as in the Body of the Church, there are abundance of Lamps, ſome of Gold, ſome of Silver; but the biggeſt of all is of Silver, gilded and vermilion'd, and neatly engrav'd. There are alſo ſix great Branches of a curious ſort of Wood, cover'd with Silver, with great Wax Candles in them, which are never lighted but at their great Feſtivals.

From the Duomo where ſtands the Tomb of Sha-Seſi, you go under a little Vault, which encloſes another Monument of another King of Perſia, whoſe Name I could not learn. It looks like another great Cheſt, curiouſly wrought, and cover'd with Satin. The Roof of the Moſquée is adorn'd within with a Painting of Gold and Azure, a la Moreſque; on the out-ſide, with a fair Varniſh of ſeveral Colours, like the ſtately Moſquee at Tauris.

In the adjacent Parts round about Ardebil are ſeveral Monuments worth a Man's ſight, being very ancient; and ſome which are ruin'd, ſhew by what remains the care wich they took to enrich them with curious Workmanſhip. A quarter of a League from the City ſtands a Moſquee, in which are the Tombs of the Father and Mother of Sha-Seſi. It is a fair Structure, with Gardens and Courts, in one of which there is a very clear Fountain where they keep Fiſh.

Ardebil is not only famous, as I have ſaid already, for the Royal Sepulchers which are in it, and for the Pilgrimages which have been made to it from all parts of Perſia; but the numerous Caravans of Silk, which ſometimes conſiſt of eight or nine hundred Camels, add very much to its Grandeur. For being near to Guilan and Shamaqui, from whence thoſe vaſt quantities of Silk come; and for that the Road from both thoſe places, to Conſtantinople and Smyrna, lyes through this City, there is a continual confluence of Merchants, and all ſorts of Merchandizes are here to be had as well as at Tauris.

From Ardebil to Casbin you travel through a good Country; for every three or four Leagues you meet with little Rivers that fall from the Northern Mountains, and water the Earth. The Caravan is usually five days between Ardebil and Arion, between Arion and Taron two, between Taron and Casbin two more. Half a League on this side Taron you must cross a great River over a stone Bridge, and half a League beyond you come to Kalkal.

Arion is a little City, Taron and Kalkal are two great Towns; and there are but these three places in all Persia where there grow any Olives, or that they make any Oyl. Leaving Kalkal, you travel over a Plain for three hours, at the end whereof is a Way which you you cannot get over in less than four hours. The way is so bad that the Horses and Mules can hardly get up; but for the Camels, they must take the lower Road, which is also very tedious, and full of Stones, which the Torrents tumble down, and it is three or four Leagues about. When you are up, the Country is level, and you have not above three Leagues to Casbin.

Casbin lyes in 87 Degrees and 30 Minutes of Longitude, and 36 Degrees and 15 Minutes of Latitude. It is a great City, the Houses whereof are low and ill built; except seven or eight, which are next to the King's Gardens. It has no Walls; and indeed the best half of the City is in Gardens. There are three Inns, with Market-places round about; one of the three being large and commodious. It is inhabited altogether by Mahometans; or if there be any Christians, they are very few.

The Soil about Casbin produces Pistaches. The Tree that bears that is never bigger than a Walnut-tree of ten or twelve years old. The great quantity of Pistaches that are exported out of Persia come from Malavert, a little City twelve Leagues from Ispahan, toward the East. These are the best Pistaches in the World, and the Country being of a large extent, produces them in such abundance, that it furnishes all Persia and the Indies.

Leaving Casbin, you come to a little Village where there is but one Inn; and you travel that day six Leagues through Countries fertil enough, and well water'd.

The next day you travel through a good Country, and in nine or ten hours you come to Denghé. This is a great Village at the foot of a Hill, through which there runs a fair River. It abounds with excellent both White and Claret Wine, where the Travellers take care to repleniſh their Bottles. But generally they never lye here; being desirous to go a League farther, for a good Inn's sake, which makes it a handsom Stage.

At this Town of Denghé it is where the two Roads from Tauris to Ispahan meet: the first, through Ardebil and Casbin, I have already describ'd. Hither also come the Caravans that go for the Indies through Meshéhead and Candahar, and where they leave Ispahan Road to take the left-hand Way, which carries them Eastward.

CHAP. VI.

The ordinary Road from Tauris to Ispahan. through Zangan, Sultanie, and other places.

WE must now return again to the Lake six Leagues beyond Tauris, where they that will take the ordinary short way through Zangan and Sultanie, leave the left hand way of Ardebil and Casbin. This Lake is usually full of large red Ducks, which are very good Meat.

From thence, after twelve or thirteen hours travel, in which time you meet with three Inns, you come to Karashima, a large Town in a deep Valley, that seems to be well manur'd. There is in it only a small Inn built of Earth, the Doors whereof are so low, that the People are forc'd to creep upon their knees to get in.

The next day you come to another large Village call'd Turcoma, where the Soil is fertil, though it be very cold. There are several Caravanseræ's built like a long

Alley

Alley cover'd, which are only of Earth, the Men lying at one end, and the Horſes at another.

The next day you travel over an uneven and deſert Country, and in eight hours time you come to Miana, a little City ſituated in a Marſh, where you pay a Toll for Guarding the Highways. In this City is one of the faireſt Inns in all Perſia.

Two hours after you leave Miana, you muſt croſs a River, over a fair Bridge which runs to decay; the Arches whereof are hollow within; it is built of Brick and Free-ſtone, being near as long as Pont neuf in Paris. This Bridge ſtands almoſt at the foot of a Mountain call'd Kaplenton. Sha-Abas caus'd all the way to be Pav'd, becauſe the Land is ſo fat and ſloughy, that when it thaws, or that the leaſt Rain falls, it is impoſſible for the Caravan to paſs. Beſides, there are a ſort of Camels in Perſia, that when it comes to rain in a deep Soil, are not able to keep their Legs: nay through the weight of the Burthens which they carry, their very Quarters will rive from their Shoulders, and their Bellies will burſt. So that before the way was pav'd, they were forc'd to ſpread Carpets in the moſt ſlippery ways where thoſe Camels were to paſs: which muſt be ſtill done in ſome places, where the Pavement is worn away.

At the lower part of the deſcent toward Iſpahan, upon the knap of a Hill which ſtands by it ſelf, appears an old forſak'n Fortreſs: it is near the Highway, and a River, which falls into the Caſpian Sea, after it has croſs'd the Province of Guilan, where it is cut into ſeveral Chanels. But generally the Corn and Fruits which grow in Perſia by the help of Water forc'd into Chanels, are of little eſteem, and much cheaper than thoſe that grow in the Provinces whoſe Fertility is not Artificial. Moreover, that ſort of forc'd Grain will not keep above a Year; and if you keep it longer, it breeds a Vermin that eats it. 'Tis the ſame thing if the Corn be ground; and more than that, there breeds a Worm in the Flower, that makes it ſo bitter that 'tis impoſſible to eat it.

On this ſide the Mountain Kaplenton appear at a diſtance two others very high, one toward the North call'd Saveland, another toward the South call'd Sehand: there is a third, which cannot be ſeen in Iſpahan-Road, being two far out of the way, near the City of Hamadan. Theſe three Mountains are full of Springs, from whence moſt of the Streams do fall that water Perſia: And the Perſians do ſay, that formerly there were many more of theſe Springs, but that about a hundred Years ago ſeveral of them have been dry'd up, or otherwiſe no body can tell what is become of them.

There are ſeveral Villages near the Mountain that pay nothing to the King, but are oblig'd to ſend him a certain quantity of Rice and Butter, for the uſe of the Moſquee at Ardebil. They have alſo one great Priviledge, That if a Man commits a Murther, and flyes to any of theſe Villages, he cannot be apprehended, nor can the King himſelf puniſh him.

Leaving the River that runs at the foot of the Mountain Kaplenton, you come to a fair Inn call'd Tſhamalava, built ſome years ago: and for thirteen hours after, travelling over a very barren Country, you meet with another Inn, which is call'd Sartcham, ſtanding in a very deſert place: which makes the Raders, that lye there to ſecure the Highways, very inſolent, finding themſelves ſo far from any Towns or Villages.

From Sartcham you come to a River, by the Banks whereof you travel a good while, till you come to an Inn which is call'd Digbé, near a large Village. The Structure is very handſom, the lower part being of Free-ſtone undulated with red and white, and very hard.

The next day you travel a very uneven Country, till you fall into a deep Valley, at the end whereof you meet with Zangan, a great Town and ill built. However, it has a very fair Inn, which when I went laſt to Iſpahan was ſo full, that I had like to have lain abroad in the Rain, but for the Courteſie of two Armenians. From Zangan you go to an Inn, where you muſt pay the Duties due to the Kan of Sultanie.

Sultanie is a very large City, which you leave half a Mile from the Road, near to a Mountain. Formerly it had in it very beautiful Moſquees, as may be eaſily conjectur'd by the Ruines that remain. Many Chriſtian Churches alſo were converted into Moſquees; and if you will believe the Armenians, they will tell you, that there were in Sultanie near eight hundred Churches and Chapels.

Three Leagues from Sultanie ſtands an Inn, and a League farther a great Town call'd Ija, where there is another very commodious Inn, and moſt excellent Wine.

From thence you go to Habar, an ancient City and of a large extent, but very much ruin'd, inhabited by Armenians for the moſt part: Here, for the good Wines ſake the Travellers ſtay to recruit their Bottles.

From Habar, after ſeven hours travel you come to a Village call'd Partin. From Zangan to Partin you reach in two days. It ſtands in a fertil Plain, where there are ſeveral other Villages. It is not above three Leagues broad, being enclos'd on each ſide, to the Eaſt and Weſt, with a row of high Mountains.

Having paſs'd this Plain, you come to a barren Country and ill inhabited, which laſts all the day, till you come to Saxava. You paſs by the Ruines of a Village, where there are but two Houſes ſtanding, with the Tower of a Moſquee, which is very high and ſlender. Then you come to a Mud-wall'd-Inn, built ſome few years ſince; and near to that a Caſtle call'd Khiara, upon the peek of a Hill, but very ill built.

Sexava is a little City in a Soil that bears excellent Nuts. The Inns that are there being built of Earth, and being but little, are very handſom and covenient, their number ſupplying the defect of their ſmalneſs.

From Sexava, after ſeven hours travel, you come to a great Inn, call'd Idgioup, which was formerly a nobler place than now it is, ſtanding alone in a Field. Three Leagues from thence you meet with another ſpacious Inn, call'd Cochkeria; and four hours farther you come to the Inn Denghé, where the two Roads meet which I ſpake of in the foregoing Chapter.

From Denghé to Kom are three days journey, over a barren, dry, and deſert Country, where there is no Water but Ciſtern-water, except in ſome very few places, where it is very good. Four Leagues from Denghé is a fair Inn; and three Leagues farther ſtands another, about a Mile from a Village to the South, where there grows excellent good Wine, white and red. From this laſt Inn to Sava is not above three hours travel with the Caravan.

Sava is a good City in a fertil Plain, where there are ſeveral Villages. The greateſt Trade of the Town is in little grey Lamb-skins, the curl whereof is very neat, of which they make Furrs. Two or three Leagues beyond Sava the Country is very well manur'd, and after you have forded a River half a League from the City, after two hours travel you come to one of the faireſt Inns in all Perſia, which was finiſh'd when I went laſt to Iſpahan. From thence to Kom it is about ſeven or eight hours journey, through a dry and ſandy Road: but half a League on this ſide Kom the Land is very good and fruitful.

Kom is one of the great Cities of Perſia, in a fat Country abounding in Rice. There grow alſo excellent Fruits, particularly large and excellent Granates. The Walls are only of earth, with little Towers cloſe one to another; and the Houſes being only of Earth, are never the handſomer within-ſide. At the entry into the Town, you muſt croſs a River, over a ſtone Bridge, and then turning to the right hand over a fair Key, you come to an Inn very well built and very convenient.

That which is moſt remarkable in Kom is a large Moſquee, no leſs in veneration among the Perſians, than the Moſquee of Ardebil. There it is that you may ſee the Sepulchers of Sha-Sefi and Sha-Abas the Second; as alſo the Tomb of Sidi-Fatima, the Daughter of Iman-Hocen, who was the Son of Haly and Fatima-Zuhra the Daughter of Mahomet. The great Gate of the Moſquee anſwers to a Piazza more long than broad, where ſtands an Inn and certain Shops, which without-ſide are ſomewhat beautiful. One of the ſides of the Piazza is clos'd up with a low Wall, over which appears the Shore, and a River which you croſs at the end of the Piazza. Over the great Portal of the Moſquee ſtands an Inſcription, in Letters of Gold, in the praiſe of Sha-Abas the Second. The firſt place that you enter into is a Court of more length than breadth, which may be term'd a Garden, in regard that on each ſide of the Alley in the middle, which is pav'd, there are ſeveral ſquare Beds of Flowers, yellow Jaſmin, and other Plants; which are rail'd in by a Rail that runs all the length of the Alley on each ſide. It is not an eaſie thing for the Chriſtians to get in to this Court, eſpecially ſuch whoſe Habits and Aſpect they do not like: But as I cloth'd and carry'd my ſelf, I never was deny'd entrance into any place either in Perſia or India.

In this firſt Court on the left hand as you enter, are little Chambers, where they that receive the Alms, which by the Foundation of the Moſquee are to be diſtributed every day, come and eat their proportion, and then go their ways. Thoſe Chambers ſerve as an Aſylum to thoſe that cannot pay their Debts, as at the Moſquee of Ardebil. Neither are theſe Priviledg'd places like ours, where they that retire muſt live at their own Charge: For in Perſia they are fed at the expence of the Moſquee; and being in that manner freed from Care, their Friends more eaſily bring their Creditors to Compoſition.

Out of the firſt Court you paſs into a ſecond, which is larger, and all pav'd; and from that into a third, which is ſquare, and rais'd like a Terraſs. You enter into it through a large Gate, at the end of an open Paſſage, where ſtand the Lodgings of the Moullah's.

Out of that Court by an aſcent of Brickwork of ten or twelve Steps, you enter into a fair Court, which is alſo rais'd like a Terraſs; in the midſt whereof is a fair Fountain. It is continually fill'd by little Pipes of Water which run into it, and is empty'd by others that carry the Water into ſeveral parts of the whole Encloſure. There are ſome Buildings in this Court, but one of the ſides of it is taken up with the Front of the Moſquee, which is no diſpleaſing Structure. There are three large Gates belong to it, very well expanded, according to the mode of the Country; with a Brick-wall before, about the height of a Man, with Holes in it for Light, made like a Lozange. The Threſhold of the middle Gate is cover'd with a plate of Silver; and between theſe three Gates and that of the Duomo, are ſeveral Doctors that hold Books in their hands, and read perpetually.

This Moſquee is Octagonal, and at every angle is a ſmall wooden Door of Walnut-tree, varniſh'd with grey and yellow. The Tomb of Sidi-Fatima is at the farther part of the Moſquee, there being only room for one Man to paſs between the Wall and the Tomb. It is encompaſs'd with a large Silver Grate, ſixteen Foot ſquare; the Bars whereof are round, and knob'd in thoſe places where they croſs each other; it is lighted by ſeveral Lamps of Gold and Silver: which altogether is very pleaſing to the Eye. The inſide of the Moſquee, to the elevation of the Angles that ſupport the Duomo, is compos'd of ſquare Tiles varniſh'd over with divers Colours; and the Cupola of the Duomo, as alſo the Vault of the Portico of the Moſquee, is a Moreſco piece of Painting in Or and Azure. Upon each ſide of the Moſquee, and near the ſide where the Tomb of Sidi-Fatima ſtands, appears a great Hall, where the Royal Alms are diſtributed to the Poor, which conſiſt of Pilaw and other diet, very well dreſt. From this Tomb you turn to the left hand toward an Aſcent, diſtant five and twenty or thirty Paces; and at the top of this Aſcent is a Door, over which there is an Inſcription in Honour of Sha-Abas the Second. The Door being open'd, ſhews you the place where the Body of that King repoſes: and through another Door with a Grate in it, you may diſcover, under a ſmall Duomo, the Tomb of Sha-Sefi his Father; which is cover'd with a Carpet of Cloth of Gold. They were continually at work upon the Tomb of Sha-Abas, which they ſaid, they would make very famous.

I had not been two hours in Kom, but a multitude of People ran by the Inn Gate, all in extraordinary haſt. Asking what the matter was, they anſwer'd me, that it had been a day long deſign'd for the two Prophets to fight. Thereupon I went to the Piazza, which was ſo crowded, that I had much ado to get to ſee. In the firſt place a ſufficient number of Tumblers and Puppet players, divided into two Bands, kept the middle of the Piazza, and made a ſufficient Ring for the Combat. Each Band held a Bull by the Horns, one of which they call'd Mahomet, and the other Haly: and whether it were by accident, or by the cunning of the Bull-Maſters, after an obſtinate Combat, wherein the Beaſts foam'd again with heat and rage; Mahomet at length quit the Field, and yielded Haly the Victory. Then all the People ſhouted for joy, and all the Piazza was fill'd with the noiſe of Flutes and Hautboys; and every one coming as if it were to adore Haly, cry'd out, Behold the Works of God, that Haly has made! At length they bring the Bull Haly under a Gate, with his Head turn'd toward the People; where after they have have rub'd him to refreſh him, after a Combat ſo courageouſly maintain'd, every one ſends him Preſents, which are all the Tumblers profit. The Kan or Governour of Kom, who was preſent with a hundred Horſes richly trap'd to behold the Sight, ſent the Bull a Preſent of 50 Tomans, or 750 Crowns. They who accompany'd him, and the chief Inhabitants of Kom, gave him ſome a Garment, others a Girdle. Neither did the meaneſt of the People ſpare to ſend or carry him Fruits, or other things, according to their abilities.

The Kan was a Lord who was very civil, and there was no Stranger that did not commend his behaviour, in regard he was ſo obliging.

So ſoon as I came to the place, whether it was that he perceiv'd me with a Dutchman that I had brought along from Conſtantinople, or whether any one had inform'd him that there were Strangers near him, he ſent for us, and after he had ask'd us ſome Queſtions concerning the occaſion of our Travelling, he ſent for a Seat and caus'd us to ſit down. Then he ask'd us whence we came, and what we did at Iſpahan; to which when we had anſwer'd him, that we went to wait upon the King, he approved our Intention, complaining that we had not given him advice of our Arrival. In the Evening he ſent us ſeveral Delicacies, among the reſt, ſix fair Melons, and four Bottles of excellent Wine.

He appear'd to me ſo brave and generous a Perſon, that I was very much troubled afterwards for his being in diſ-favour with the King, and his death, which enſu'd. For this Kan finding the Walls of the City, which were only of Earth, and the Bridge over the River to be out of repair, without writing to the King, of his own head, laid a ſlight Impoſition upon every Basket of Fruit that was brought into the City. Now there are in all the Cities of Perſia, perſons who are hir'd to take an account every Week what the Commodities may be worth, and to take care that no more than ſuch a Toll be laid upon any thing; which they tax among themſelves, and when they had ſet the Rate, they cauſe it to be cry'd at the beginning of every Week. Sha-Sefi then reign'd, it being the year 1632. The King being inform'd by theſe people of the Impoſt which the Kan had ſet upon Fruit without his knowledge, was ſo enrag'd againſt him, that he caus'd him to be brought in Chains to Iſpahan, where he us'd him with a ſtrange ſeverity. For at that time the Son of the Kan ſtood at the King's Elbow, it being his Office to give him his Pipe and his Tobacco, which is a very honourable Employment in Perſia. When the Kan came, the King caus'd him to be carry'd to the Gate of the Palace, in the preſence of all the People, and then commanded his Son to pull the Hair of his Father's Muſtaches by the roots from his Skin. After that he commanded him to cut off his Noſe and his Ears; after that to put out his Eyes, and laſtly to cut off his Head. When he had done the Execution according to the King's pleaſure, he commanded him to go and take poſſeſſion of his Fathers Government, and allowing him an experienc'd Old Man for his Lieutenant, he ſent him to Kom with theſe words; If thou govern'ſt no better than this dead Dog has done, I will put thee to a more cruel Death than this.

Leaving Kom, for four hours you travel over a fair Champain Country, after which you come to a fair Village with five or ſix Inns in it. Beyond that is nothing but Sand, till you come to a place call'd Abſchirim, or Freſh-water, where there are three Inns at a Diſtance from any Villages. From Abſchirim to Cachan is ſix hours journey through a Corn Country, and ſtor'd with great Villages.

Cachan is a large City, well peopl'd, and furniſh'd with all things neceſſary for humane ſubſiſtance: There is an old Wall about it which is faln down in many places, ſo that there is no need of ſeeking for Gates to get into the City. On that ſide which looks toward Iſpahan the Soil is good, and produces great ſtore of Fruit and Wine, which the Jews take care to make. It is reckon'd that there are in Cachan a thouſand Families of Jews; in Iſpahan about ſix hundred; but in Kom there are not above nine or ten. Not but that there are many Jews in Perſia, but thoſe that live in Iſpahan, Cachan and Kom, boaſt themſeves particularly of the Tribe of Judah.

There are an abundance of Silk-Weavers in Chachan that are very good Workmen, which make all the beſt purfl'd Sattins mix'd with Gold and Silver, that come out of Perſia. There they alſo coyn Money, and make Copper-veſſels, which they vend in great quantities at a good diſtance off. The Market-houſes are very fair ones, ones, and well vaulted, the Inns large and convenient: but there was one among the reſt which was very magnificent, near the King's Gardens, at the entry of the City. As well the Inn as the Gardens were made by the order of Sha-Abbas, the firſt of that Name, who was at a vaſt charge. The Inn is above a hundred Paces ſquare, built of Brick two Stories high, containing twenty-ſix vaulted Chambers of a reaſonable bigneſs. It was a Structure too fair to be ſo little regarded, as now it is, being much faln to decay. In the middle of the Court was a Fountain to receive Water, which is ſpoil'd. The Perſians and Turks are of that bad humor, rather to build new Houſes than to repair old Buildings. For which reaſon they have ſince built at Cachin four or five Inns, as fair and commodious as that of Sha-Abas. This Cuſtom is grown to that height, that the Children are ſo far from taking care to repair the old Houſes where their Parents liv'd, that they will not ſo much as live in them after their deceaſe, covetous of the honour of building Houſes for themſelves.

Before we leave Cachan you muſt take notice, that as you are to travel from that City to Guilan, you cannot avoid travelling thorough Plains for twelve hours together, which are all pure Salt; and there is nothing to be met with by the way, but one Ciſtern; nor can the Water which is in it be otherwiſe than very bad.

Leaving Cachan, you croſs a Plain of three Leagues, after which you enter in among the Mountains, where you come to a very fair Inn of Brick. From thence you deſcend a pleaſant Vale, where you travel a long time by the ſide of a River, over a very narrow way. At the end of the Valley you meet a great Wall, which croſſes it, and joyns the two Mountains together. This Wall is above a hundred Paces long, above thirty Foot thick, and fifty high. It was the Work of the Great Sha-Abas, whoſe deſign it was to ſtop the Waters that fall from the Mountain, and to make a Receptacle for Water in that place, to ſerve his occaſions. At the foot of the Wall there is a Sluce, which being let down keeps in the Water; but is pull'd up to let out the Water over all the neighbouring Lands to the Plain of Cachan. From this Receptacle to Coron is about two hours travel.

Coron is a very large Village, and well peopl'd, in a Soil environ'd with high Mountains, and planted with great ſtore of Walnut-trees. The Houſes conſiſt but of one low Story, being built of Flint-ſtone; but the Inn therein is very fair and commodious. This Village conſiſts but of one Street, but it is almoſt half a League long, and very troubleſom in the Winter, by reaſon of a great River that runs through it. and the great quantity of Stones that lye in the way. All about this Village, as in ſeveral other places of Perſia, there are a great number of Shacales; which are a kind of Foxes, that in the night time make an ugly noiſe; for if but one cry, all the reſt will make anſwer, and ſet up a howling.

From Coron you muſt travel three Leagues between Mountains, after which you have but twelve Leagues to Iſpahan. It is a continued Plain that extends it ſelf beyond the City, and in many places the Soil is very good. At every three Leagues end you meet with Inns. The firſt is call'd Achaha-Acacamala; the ſecond, which is the half-way between Coron and Iſpahan, is call'd Michiacour. This place conſiſts not only of one Inn, for there are many others, ſo that it reſembles a large Village. From Michiacour you come to Aganura, another Inn, but ill built; and from Aganura, after you have travel'd three Leagues through a fat and fertil Country, you come to Iſpahan.

CHAP. VII.

Of the Road from Smyrna to Iſpahan, through Natolia.

Smyrna is at this day for Trade, whether it be by Sea or Land, one of the moſt celebrated Cities of all the Levant, and the greateſt Market for all ſorts of Commodities which are tranſported out of Aſia into Europe, or out of Europe into Aſia. Hither all the Weſtern Fleets are moſt regularly bound, that came formerly no farther than Ligorn, and from whence, at times moſt regularly appointed, the faireſt Caravans ſet out.

This City lyes in 50 Degrees of Longitude; and 38 Degrees, 45 Minutes of Latitude; at the bottom of a Gulf in the Archipelago, which is ſeven Leagues in length, upon the right ſide of the Iſthmus which begins to form the Peninſula of Clazomene, right againſt the Iſland of Schio. It lyes in that part of the Leſſer Aſia, which the Greeks poſſeſs'd, under the Name of Iconium; at a diſtance almoſt equal, between Epheſus and Sardis; and was one of the ſeven Churches mention'd in the Revelation of St. John. It is at this day a great City, built like an Amphitheater, upon the deſcent of a Hill that looks toward the Summer-Weſt. But it is neither ſo great, nor ſo beautiful as formerly it was, as may be eaſily conjectur'd by the Ruines of certain Edifices that remain upon that Hill, which from the middle to the top, where the ancient City ſtood, are altogether uninhabited. There are alſo to be ſeen the Walls of a fair Caſtle, and above that the Ruines of an Amphitheater, where they ſay St. Polycarp was expos'd to fight with Lions. This Amphitheater was not in the form of thoſe other, which are uſually round; for it contain'd but half a Circle, being left open to the Sea-ſide. The Turks have almoſt quite deſtroy'd it: making uſe of the Stones to build a Fort two Leagues from the City, upon the Gulf, where the paſſage is very narrow; which the Ships are forc'd to ſalute as they inter in, and to ſpeak with when they ſail out. Moreover, that they might not be put to ſend for Stones a-far-off, they conſulted whether they might not make uſe of the Stones of the Chriſtians Monuments, as alſo of thoſe of the Jews, which are near the Shore: But they took very few, whether out of kindneſs to the Tombs, or whether they did not think them ſo proper for uſe as the Stones of the Amphitheater. This Caſtle had not been long built, but upon an occaſion very remarkable. In the laſt Wars of the Turks with the Venetians, the Ottoman Fleet having been beaten in the Archipelago, the Grand Signor reſolv'd to re-fit another to Sea, and thereupon ſent to all the parts of his Empire, where he knew any Engliſh or Holland Veſſels uſually were wont to ride, to ſollicit them to ſerve him for his Pay. More particularly he aim'd at thoſe Veſſels which were in Smyrna, where there were generally more than in any other Port. But the Captains, who rejected his Propoſition of fighting againſt the Venetians, believing that he would put ſome force upon them, ſuddenly hois'd Sail and got away; it being at a time when he could not keep them in, having no Caſtle then built to command them. The Grand Viſier nettl'd at the refuſal of the Captains, as an affront done to his Maſter, and to ſee that the Ships could come in and go out, without any let or moleſtation, bethought himſelf (to the end he might keep them for the future under ſubjection) of building a Fort upon the Gulf, in ſuch a part where the Veſſels muſt neceſſarily touch; where now there lye great Cannons level with the Water, which no Veſſel can eſcape. Ever ſince the Convoys will not come to Smyrna, as they were wont to do, but lye out at Sea, out of the reach of the Fort.

Near to the Sea are yet to be ſeen ſome Remains of a Church, two ſides whereof ſeem to have been diſtinguiſh'd into Chappels by little Walls, which are yet ſtanding: But the Natives doubt whether they be the Ruines of a Church dedicated to St. Polycarp, or of an ancient Temple of Janus.

Smyrna has been oftentimes ruin'd either by the Wars, or by the Earthquakes which often happen there. One time that I ſtaid there, there happen'd one, which did not laſt long, but was very terrible. About ſixty Paces from the Sea are to be diſcern'd the Ruines of great Walls two Foot under Water; and at the end of the City

City that looks toward the Winter-Weſt, near to the Sea, appear the Ruines of a Mole, and certain ancient Magazines.

The Engliſh Merchants have dig'd among the Ruines of Smyrna, and have found great ſtore of fair Statues, which they tranſported into their own Country. There are ſtill found ſome or other every day; but when the Turks find any, they disfigure them preſently. It may be conjectur'd, that there was one of a prodigious bigneſs, by a great Toe broken off of ſome one, and for which I paid ſufficiently, out of the deſire I had to buy it. I ſent it to Paris to a Perſon of Quality, who look'd upon it as a great Curioſity. This Toe was of a hard white Stone, and well ſhap'd, and by the proportion whereof, the Figure could not be judg'd to be leſs than the Coloſſus of Rhodes.

Upon that ſide of the City where the Mole was, ſtands an old Caſtle of no defence, at the foot whereof the Sea makes a ſmall Creek, where ſometimes the Gallies of the Grand Signor lye.

The City is well peopl'd containing no leſs than fourſcore and ten thouſand Souls. There are reckon'd no leſs than 60000 Turks, 15000 Greeks, 8000 Armenians, and about ſix or ſeven thouſand Jews. As for the European Chriſtians that Trade there, their number is very ſmall. Every one of theſe Nations has the exerciſe of their Religion free to themſelves. The Turks have in Smyrna fifteen Moſquees, the Jews ſeven Synagogues, the Armenians but one Church, the Greeks two, and the Latines three. There are alſo French Jeſuits, and Italian Obſervantins, or a ſort of Grey Franciſcans. The Turks, the Greeks, the Armenians, and Jews live upon the Hill; but all the lower part toward the Sea is inhabited only by the European Chriſtians, Engliſh, French, Hollanders, and Italians. The Greeks have alſo in the ſame Quarter an old Church, and ſome few ſmall Houſes, where Sea-men make merry.

All theſe different People of Europe are generally known in Smyrna by the Name of Franks. Every Nation has its Conſul: and the French Conſul has two Vice-Conſuls under him; the one at Scalanova, the other at Chio.

Scalanova, or the New Port, is two Leagues beyond Epheſus, and being a good Haven, the Veſſels were wont to unlade there; but the Turks would not permit it any longer. For that Place being the Dowry of the Grand Signor's Mother, the Vice-Conſul agreed with the Governour of Scalanova, who permitted the Tranſportation of Goods to Smyrna, which is not above three little days journey with the Caravan: A thing that ſpoil'd the Trade of the City, and injur'd the Officers of the Cuſtom-Houſe. Whereupon they Petition'd the Grand Signor that no more Goods might be unladed at Scalanova: ſo that now no more Veſſels go thither, unleſs it be to take in freſh Victuals.

Chio is one of the greateſt Iſlands in the Archipelago, of which in another place: but the Vice-Conſul that lives there has no more buſineſs there than the other at Scalanova; for the Veſſels that touch there, neither unlade nor export any Goods from thence.

The Quarter of the Franks is only a long Street, one ſide whereof lyes upon the Sea; and as well for the Proſpect, as for the convenience of Unlading Goods, the Houſes upon the Sea are much dearer than thoſe that lye upon the Hill.

The Soil about Smyrna is fertil, and abounds in all things neceſſary for humane ſupport; but particularly in good Oyl and good Wine. There are Salt-Pits alſo half a League from the City, toward the North. The Sea affords great ſtore of good Fiſh; Fowl is very cheap; and in a word, Smyrna is a place of great plenty. There is a lovely Walk all along the Sea to the Salt-Pits, where generally abundance of People walk in the Summer-time to take the freſh Air: and there being more liberty at Smyrna than in any other part of Turkie, there is no neceſſity of taking a Janiſary along, when a man goes abroad. If a man loves Fowling, it is but taking a Boat, which lands him two or three Leagues from the City, toward the Mountains, where there is ſo much Game that he can never return empty. For the value of three Sous you may buy a red Partridge at Smyrna, and all other Fowl is proportionably cheap.

But if Smyrna have theſe great advantages, it has alſo its inconveniences: the Heats are very exceſſive in Summer, and indeed they would be inſupportable, were it not for the Breezes that come off the Sea: theſe Breezes riſe about ten in the Morning, and continue till the Evening; but if they fail, 'tis very bad for the Inhabitants. Beſides, there hardly paſſes a Year but the City is infeſted with the Plague, which however is not ſo violent as in Chriſtendom. The Turks neither fear it nor flie it, believing altogether in Predeſtination. Yet I believe, if the Inhabitants of Smyrna would take care to drain away the ſtanding Puddles that gather in the Winter about the City, they would not be ſo frequently moleſted with the Plague as they are. It is moſt rife in May, June, and July; but the malignant Fevers that ſucceed it in September and October are more to be fear'd, more People dying of them than of the Peſtilence. In all my Travels I never was in Smyrna at theſe unfortunate Seaſons. There is no Baſha in that City; it being govern'd only by a Cady, who is not ſo ſevere to the Chriſtians as in other places: For ſhould he abuſe his Office, Conſtantinople is at hand, where you may complain to the Mufti, and have relief; who for ſome good Preſent may be eaſily perſwaded to depoſe the Cady, as being glad of the opportunity to diſplace him, and to put another in his room.

The Cuſtoms of Smyrna yield a great Revenue to the Grand Signor, being paid there very exactly. But were there a certain Rate put upon Commodities, the Merchants, who would otherwiſe be loſers, would not ſtudy ſo many ways as they do to deceive the Cuſtomers: For thoſe Cuſtomers lay what Price they pleaſe upon Commodities, valuing that at a thouſand Crowns, which perhaps is not worth three hundred, being abſolute Maſters of the Rate. In my laſt Voyage to Smyrna, four Dutch Women that went thither in our Ship from their own Country, carry'd a-ſhoar under their Coats whatever I had of rich Merchandize: for the Turks have ſuch a reſpect for that Sex, that they will not ſo much as offer to ſearch them. If a man be tak'n in ſtealing Cuſtoms, there is no other puniſhment than to pay double.

The Trade of Smyrna is very great, and the principal Merchandizes which the Franks tranſport from thence, are raw Silk, which the Armenians bring out of Perſia; Chamlet-yarn, and Chamlet or Goats-hair, which come from a little City call'd Angouri, fifteen or ſixteen days journey from Smyrna; Cotton twiſted; Skins and Cordovans of ſeveral colours; Calicuts, white and blew; great quantities of Wool for Mattreſſes, Tap'ſtries, quilted Coverlets, Soap, Rhubarb, Galls, Valanede, Scammony, and Opium; which four laſt Commodities are to be had in the Countries near to Smyrna, but not in great quantities. The Caravans come generally to this Town in the Months of February, June, and October; and depart again to the Countries from whence they came the ſame Months.

Epheſus not being above a day and a halfs journey from Smyrna, on Horſe-back. I took an opportunity to go thither. There were twelve of us that joyn'd together, Franks and Hollanders, who took three Janiſaries along with us, and three Horſes to carry our Proviſion.

We travel'd this little Journey in the Summer, and ſetting out of Smyrna about three of the Clock in the Afternoon, we rode through a Country part Plains, and part Hills, till we came to a great Village, where we ſup'd.

After we had ſtaid there three hours, we took Horſe and travel'd till Midnight, to avoid the Heats: By the way we met with nine or ten Arches, very narrow; which we could not conjecture to be any thing elſe than the Ruines of ſome Aqueduct. From thence to Epheſus the way is very pleaſant, through little Thickets watred with Rivulets.

A quarter of a League from Epheſus you meet with another Moſquee, which was formerly a Chriſtian Church, built out of the Ruines of the Temple of Epheſus. This Moſquee ſtands enclos'd with Walls, and you muſt aſcend up to it by two Aſcents of twelve Steps a-piece, which bring you to a large Paſſage. From thence you enter into a large Cloyſter, the Arches whereof are ſuſtain'd with Marble Pillars of ſeveral colours, delicately wrought; and the lower part of the Gallery, which runs along three of the ſides, that conſiſts of great Squares of Stone. The Moſquée takes up the fourth ſide upon the left hand, the Gate being in the middle. The Moſquee it ſelf is a wide Arch, ſupported by five Columns, all of moſt exquiſite Work. There are four of Marble, and every one of a different Colour; but the fifth is a moſt rare piece, being of Porphyry, and the bigneſs of it makes it ſo much the more to be admir'd.

Epheſus does not look like a City, being ſo abſolutely ruin'd, that there is not a Houſe ſtanding. It was built upon the deſcent of a Hill, in a ſituation not much unlike unlike that of Smyrna, at the foot whereof runs a Rivulet, after it has made a thouſand Meanders in the Meadows. The City ſeems to have been very large, for you may diſcern upon the top of the Gates the compaſs of the Walls, with ſeveral ſquare Towers, ſome of which are ſtill ſtanding: and there is one very remarkable, having two Chambers in it, one of which is a very fair one, the Walls and Pavement whereof are Marble.

The famous Temple of Diana ſtood at the bottom of the Hill, near one of the Gates of the City. There remains nothing of it at preſent but the great Portal, which is entire. The Vaults of the Arches under ground ſtand to this day, and are very large, but all full of naſtineſs. We went in with Lanthorns; and though you muſt creep to get in, by reaſon that the Wind has almoſt ſtopt up the Hole, by gathering the Duſt about it, yet when you are in, you may go upright; for the Arches are high and fair, and little the worſe. Near the Gate lye four or five Columns upon the Ground, and near to that a Fountain, ten Foot in Diameter, and two deep. The People of the Country report, that it was the Fountain wherein St. John Baptiz'd the Chriſtians. For my part, as I have ſeen in the Indies ſeveral Pagods and Edifices much more beautiful than ever the Temple of Epheſus could be; I believe it rather to have been a Baſin wherein the People put their Offerings, of which there are ſeveral ſuch that belong to the Indian Pagods. The Greeks and Armenians, but above all the Franks, when they go to Epheſus always endeavour to break off ſome piece of that Baſin, to carry it away with 'em as a Relick: but the Stone is ſo hard, that they can break off but very little at a time.

Not far from the Temple appears another Gate of the City, over which there lyes a great Stone ſeven or eight Foot ſquare, with an emboſs'd Figure of Q. Curtius that Famous Roman, who threw himſelf, Horſe and Arms into the gaping Earth, for the good of his Country. Many Merchants have offer'd Money for liberty to carry it away, but cannot obtain leave. About five hundred Paces from Epheſus is the Grotto which they call the Seven Sleepers, at the bottom of the ſame Hill where the City was built.

From Epheſus we went to Scalanova, which is not above two Leagues off. By that time you come half the way, the little River that runs by Epheſus falls into the Sea, in the mouth whereof there are always a great number of Greek Barks fiſhing for Sturgeon. Of the Spawn of this Fiſh they make Caveare, and drive a great Trade in it in thoſe Parts: then they take the moſt delicate and ſmalleſt Entrails of that Fiſh, which they fill with the ſame Spawn, of which they make a kind of a flat Pudding, as long as a Biſket, which they call Botargo. This they dry in the Smoak, and cut it afterwards in ſlices to eat. Upon this and the Cuttle-fiſh the Greeks generally feed during their Lent, which is very auſtere.

Scalanova is a Port of which I have already ſpoken, and thither we came by ſeven a Clock in the Evening; where the Governour of the Place, more civil than uſually the Turks are accuſtom'd to be, made us very welcom.

In the Evening one of our Janizaries had quarrel'd with one of our Servants, who thereupon had beaten him; and therefore he complain'd to the Fellow's Maſter, who not giving him that ſatisfaction which he deſir'd, thereupon the Turk ſtudy'd to be reveng'd upon the whole Company. For this reaſon, upon ſome pretence or other, he went before, the better to bring about his deſign. We ſtaid till the Morning, and then departed early from Scalanova, and by Noon we came with good Stomachs to the Moſquee near Epheſus, where we had been the day before: And ſome of the Company thought it a very convenient place to dine in, i'the ſhade; thereupon we ſent for our Proviſions, with a Boracho of Wine, and another of Water, and fell to eating in the Paſſage into the Moſquee, not dreaming any harm. We had not been long at it, when we perceiv'd two or three Turks about two hundred Paces off, who came from a Village very near to the Moſquee. I knowing the cuſtom of the Country better than they, told them, that they were certainly coming to pick a quarrel with us, and therefore caus'd them to hide the Bottle of Wine immediately; for it was then the Turks Ramezan, or Lent; during which time Wine is ſtrictly forbidden. Theſe two ill-contriv'd and ill-clad Fellows were the Janiſaries of the place, whom the Cadi had ſent, upon the information of our Janiſary (who knowing we had eaten in the ſame place before, as indeed we had done, made no queſtion but we would do ſo again) thinking to ſurprize us as we were drinking Wine, in a place which they esteem Sacred, and by consequence was among them accounted an act of Sacriledge. Christian Dogs, cry'd they, when they came near us, to eat and drink in a Mosquee, and profane a holy place as you do, at a time that renders the offence more criminal! No, cry'd I, answering for the rest, we drink no Wine, we drink nothing but Water, and you may tast it, said I to him that was the most busie; with that I caus'd a Glass to be pour'd out and giv'n him; and I gave one of the Turks a private wink, who understanding it was a promise of gratuity, turn'd about to his Comrades, and cry'd, 'Tis very true, they drink no Wine. However in regard they had Orders to bring us before the Cady, there was no contending. Thereupon I and three others undertook to answer for all the rest. The Cady revil'd us as bad as the Janisary at first; but he was not only surpriz'd, but very much troubl'd, when they all unanimously affirm'd that we drank no Wine, believing they were confederates with us. But I had cunningly slipt eight Ducats into the Hand of the Turk to whom I had made a sign with my Eye, who over-joy'd at so plentiful a gratuity, had over-perswaded his Comrades not to say any thing against us. The Cady, though he did not like their Testimony, yet call'd for Coffee for us, according to the custom of the Country, and sent us to his Lieutenant; who having been often greas'd in the Fist by the Smyrna-Merchants, receiv'd us very kindly, and told us that the Cady was but newly come to his Place, and was needy; however a small matter would content him. Thereupon we gave the Lieutenant twenty-five Ducats, who most certainly went snips with the Cady, and so return'd us to our Company, who were much afraid we would not have come off so.

We were resolv'd to return to Smyrna not the same way we came, and so we took another Road, which was a very pleasant way, partly over firm Sands, and partly thorough Meadows, where we met with several narrow Dikes very well Pav'd. Then we cross a rugged high Mountain, and lay in a Mahumetan Barn.

The next day we return'd to Smyrna, having finish'd our small Journey to Ephesus in five days. When we told the Consuls how the Janizary had betray'd us, they made their Complaint to the Janizary Aga and the Cady, who, for his punishment put him out of the Consul's service, which is an advantageous Employment. For besides that the Consul's Janizaries are exempt from the Duties of War, they are well plac'd; for there is never a Merchant that is not beneficial to them some way or other; especially at good times, as New-years-day and other Festivals. Nor could the Janizary have been more severely punish'd; for the Turks love Money above all things in the World.

But to return to our matter. The Rendezvouz of all the Caravans is generally two Leagues from the City, near a Town call'd Pongarbachi. The day of their setting out being fix'd, every one provides himself for his Journey, and meets the Evening before at the place appointed, to be ready at the hour.

From Smyrna to Tocat, is thirty-five days journey with the Caravan, and the last time I went we made it thirty-eight from Pongarbachi.

The first day we travel'd eight hours through a Country whose prospect was not unpleasing, leaving some Villages more than a League from the Road; and we lodg'd in a Park, near the River Pactolus; which is a small River, the Sand whereof shines, and is of several colours. Which caus'd Antiquity to call Pactolus Golden-Sanded. It falls from the Mountain Tmolus, and after it has water'd the Territory of Sardis, mixes with the River Hermus, that throws it self into the Archipelago through the Gulph of Smyrna. The Mouth of it is not above two or three Leagues from the City, toward the North.

The next day in six hours we came to Durgout, a little City in a Plain. All Christians that live not in the Territories of the Grand Signor, and pass that way, once a Year pay Carrage, or a Tribute of four or five Crowns: but the Franks are exempt, both at Durgout and over all Turkie. There resides a Basha in this City; and we were constrain'd to stop there a whole day, because the Caravan that comes from Persia arriv'd at that time, so that they were forc'd to change their Camels.

The third day, after five hours travel in extremity of Heat, we came to lodge near a paltry Village.

The

The fourth day we travel'd ſix hours, and ſtop'd near to a ſmall River. In the Morning we paſs'd over the Ruines of the ancient Sardis, the Capital City of Lydia, and Seat of King Cræſus. There were ſtill to be ſeen the Ruines of a large Palace and two fair Churches, with a great number of Pillars and Corniches of Marble. This City having held out ſix Years againſt the Army of Temur-leng, who beſieg'd it; ſo ſoon as he had taken it, in revenge he utterly deſtroy'd it. There is a Village near Sardis of the ſame Name, where ſtood the City, which was one of the Seven Churches mention'd in the Revelation. The fifth day we rode for ſeven hours through a Country, but ill manur'd, and took up our Stage in a Plain upon the ſide of a River.

The ſixth day we paſs'd by the Walls of the ancient Philadelphia, call'd at preſent Allachars, which was alſo one of the Seven Churches of Aſia. There is ſomething of Beauty ſtill remaining in thoſe Walls, and the City is very large, but ill peopl'd. It is ſituated upon four little Hills, at the foot of a high Mountain over-looking a fair Plain to the North, that produces excellent Fruit. To witneſs its Antiquity, there is yet the Ruines of an Amphitheater, with certain Sepulchers, from whence the Inhabitants report that the European Chriſtians took out the Bodies that were buried there, and tranſported them into Europe, believing them to be the Bodies of Saints. It is now all deſtroy'd, but re-built of Earth by the Turks after their mode. It was formerly one of the principal Cities of Myſia, and in regard it was alway very ſubject to Earthquakes, the moſt part of her Inhabitants liv'd in the Country. The laſt time I travel'd that way, in the year 1664, the ſeventeenth of June, the Turks were feaſting and rejoycing upon the News, as they ſaid, which they had receiv'd, of the defeat of the Chriſtians in Candy. But the News was falſe, and only contriv'd to encourage the People; for the Grand Signor was then making Levies in thoſe Parts. We lodg'd that day, after ſeven hours travel, upon the Bank of a ſmall River, a League and a half from Philadelphia.

The ſeventh day we travel'd eleven hours over a Mountain, where thoſe Trees plentifully grow that bear Galls, and Valanede, which is the ſhell or rind of an Acorn, that Curriers make uſe of to dreſs their Leather. We lodg'd in a Meadow on the top of a Mountain which is call'd Ijagli-bogaſe, or, The Mountain of Robbers.

The eighth day we continu'd our Journey over the ſame Mountain, which is a very barren Country where there is no Proviſion to be had. We travel'd but ſix hours, and lodg'd near a River in a Plain call'd Sarrouabaqui.

The ninth day the Caravan travel'd thorough dry Lands, where there is not one Village to be ſeen, and lodg'd near a Bridge built over a River call'd Copli-ſou, in the Plain of Inahi.

The tenth day, after we had travel'd eight hours over an uneven and barren Country, we ſtopt in a Valley near a River call'd Bana-ſou, the Water whereof is not good. In the Night there aroſe a Tempeſt that put us all in a diſorder, and the Rain that fell was as cold as if it had been in the depth of Winter. We were wet to the Skins, and were forc'd to throw Coverlets over the Bales to keep the Goods from being ſpoyl'd.

The eleventh day we travel'd through a pleaſant Country, between Vales adorn'd with a moſt delightful Verdure; and we were in view as we paſs'd along of certain hot Baths, though very little regarded. We lodg'd upon the Banks of a ſmall River, by the ſide whereof we had travel'd for ſome hours.

The twelfth day we continu'd our Road for ſix hours between the ſame Vallies, and lodg'd by a River.

The thirteenth day, we travel'd eight hours, and ſtop'd near to a Village in a Country call'd Dougaſſe.

The fourteenth, after a Journey of ſeven hours we paſs'd by the Walls of Aphiom-Caraſſar, that is, The Black City of Aphiom or Opium; becauſe it has a Proſpect over a fair and large Country well cultivated, where they ſow great ſtore of Poppies, whence they draw their Opium or Aphiom, as the Turks call it.

Aphiom-Caraſſar, is a great City, dirty and ill built, the ancient Name whereof I could never learn, for the Greeks and Armenians are very ignorant. But according to all probability and the ſituation of the place, it ought to be the ancient Hierapolis ſituated upon the Maander, a famous River of the Leſſer Aſia, that winds winds and turns the moſt of any River in the World. And indeed we are the more to ſeek, in regard the Turks change the ancient Names according to their own cuſtom and pleaſure, and give no other Names to Rivers than that of the principal City through which they paſs; or elſe deriving their Names from the Colour of their Sands. There is to be ſeen in that City an ancient Caſtle of Free-ſtone upon the Point of a high Rock, ſeparated from the Mountains that are next it toward the South, which make a Semicircle. All the Armenian Chriſtians, Subjects to the King of Perſia, paſſing thorough Aphiom Caraſſar muſt there pay Carrage, from which they are not exempted, though they have paid it before at Erzerom or elſewhere. The Caravan does not ſtop at Aphiom-Caraſſar, as well for that there are no Inns but what are ruin'd, as for that about a League farther there is a place where you have excellent Fiſh, and very cheap, and they of the City bring Barley, Straw, and other things which the Caravan wants. The Caravan therefore that day lodges upon the Banks of Maander, which is to be croſs'd over a Bridge not far diſtant from a ſmall Village. In this River are great ſtore of Crawfiſh and Carps; and the Fiſhermen will be ſure to attend upon the Caravan. I have ſeen ſome Carps there above three Foot long.

The fifteenth our Caravan began to part it ſelf, ſome for Tocat, ſome for the Road to Aleppo; the one part taking the right-hand Road toward the Winter-Eaſt, for Syria; the other the left-hand Road North-Eaſt, for Armenia.

After we were parted, we travel'd two or three hours in ſight of one another. They that go to Aleppo, fall into Tarſus, where St. Paul was born, and from Tarſus to Alexandretta. But we continu'd our Road to Tocat, and after we had croſs'd a great Plain, having travel'd ſix hours, we lodg'd in a Merſhy place near a ſmall Village. There is one thing remarkable in this Road as in many others, which manifeſts the Charity of the Turks. For in moſt of the high Roads, that are far from Rivers, they have ſet up Ciſterns, whither when the Rains fail, the neighbouring Villages bring Water for the Travellers, who would elſe be very much diſtreſs'd.

The ſixteenth we travel'd eight hours through a very even Country, but ill manur'd; where we ſaw a little City call'd Boulaquandi. There are ſome Moſquees, which the Turks have built out of the Ruines of the ancient Greeks Churches, from which they have taken Pillars of Marble, and other pieces of Architecture, to adorn their Sepulchers without any order at all, which you meet with very often upon the high Roads; the number is the greater, becauſe they never lay two Bodies in one Grave. There is alſo in this City an Inn, cover'd with Lead, which is all the Beauty of it; nor do Travellers make any uſe of it but only in foul weather. We lodg'd a League and a half from the City, and ſtaid there all the next day.

The ſeventeenth we travel'd eleven hours through a mix'd and uneven Country, and came to lodge in a Village where there are not above three or four Houſes, though there be excellent Paſturage about it. There is no Water, but what is drawn out of three deep Wells; for which reaſon the place is call'd Euche derin-gin.

The eighteenth we travel'd not above five hours through deſert Countries, and took up our Stage in a kind of a Bog, near a pitiful Village.

The nineteenth, after we had travell'd eight hours through ſpacious deſert Plains, we paſs'd through a large Village, the Inhabitants whereof were gone with their Cattel into the Mountains, for the cool Air, during the Summer time, according to cuſtom. There is an indifferent handſom Moſquee of Free-ſtone; and indeed the Village, the Name whereof the People told me was Tſhaciclou, has been much bigger than now it is, as may appear by the Ruines. In two hours after we came to lodge beyond it in a Meadow, near a Rivulet.

The twentieth we croſs'd over deſert Plains, but which ſeem'd to have been formerly well manur'd; and after ten hours travel, we ſtop'd in a Bottom near a bad Water.

The twenty-firſt, for ten hours the Country was all barren and deſert, and we came to lodge at the end of a long Plain, near two Wells, the Water whereof was good for nothing.

The twenty-ſecond we travel'd through the fore-mention'd Plain, and met with little Valleys where there was very good Paſturage. The Caravan ſtop'd near to a pitiful Village, and a naſty Well.

The

The twenty-third we travel'd not above five hours; becauſe it was the time of the Turks Beiram, or Eaſter, which our Caravan, conſiſting of Turks, would needs ſolemnize. That day we travel'd through an indifferent good Country, and well till'd, where we diſcover'd ſeveral fair Villages; and we lodg'd upon a riſing Ground, from whence we had a very fair and far diſtant Proſpect.

The twenty-fourth we travel'd ſix hours, and came to lodge in a Meadow where the Water was bad. Near to that place, we diſcover'd a Plain that extends it ſelf eight or ten Leagues in length, though it be not above one or two in bredth: it ſeem'd like a Lake; and indeed it is only a ſalt Water congeal'd, and thickn'd into Salt, which you can hardly diſſolve but in fair Water. This Lake furniſhes almoſt all Natolia with Salt; where you may buy a Waggon load drawn by two Bufalo's for 45 Sous. It is call'd Douſlag, or The Place for Salt; and the Baſha of Couchahar, about two days journey from it, gets by it 24000 Crowns a Year. Sultan Amurath caus'd a Dike to be cut quite thorough it when his Army march'd to the Siege of Bagdat, which he took from the Perſian.

The twenty fifth we travel'd nine or ten hours, and met not with one Village, the Country being all deſert. We lodg'd upon a riſing Ground, near a good Fountain call'd Cara-dache-ceſmé, or, The Fountain of the Black Stone.

The twenty-ſixth we paſs'd through a great Village call'd Tſhekenagar, in a pleaſant ſituation, but very ill built; and after we had travel'd eight hours, we came to lodge in a delightful Meadow, near another Village call'd Romcouché.

The twenty-ſeventh we travel'd nine hours through Countries full of Licorice, and having paſs'd a great Town call'd Beſerguenlou, we lodg'd in a Meadow.

The twenty eighth we croſs'd a great River call'd Jechil-irma, over a long well built ſtone Bridge. At the end of the Bridge call'd Keſſré-kupri ſtands a great Village, wherein the greateſt part of the Houſes are built under Ground, like Foxes Holes. We put on farther, and after ſeven hours travel, we lodg'd below another great Village call'd Mouchiour, where there are abundance of Greeks, which they conſtrain ever and anon to turn Turks. The Country being inhabited by Chriſtians, and fit for the Plantation of Vines, there is Wine good ſtore, and very good, but it has the ſcent of the Wines of Anjou. The Village is well ſituated but ill built, moſt of the Houſes being under Ground, in ſo much that one of the Company riding careleſly, had like to have faln into a Houſe.

The twenty-ninth we rode for ſeven hours through a pleaſant Country, where we ſaw ſeveral Villages; near to one of which the Caravan lodg'd in a Meadow, cloſe by a Fountain.

The thirtieth we rode through a flat Country, well manur'd, and ſtop'd near a River wherein there was but very little Water: it is call'd Cara-ſou, or, The Black River. For two or three days together, at every two Leagues diſtance we obſerv'd little Hillocks of Earth artificially rear'd, which they told us were rais'd during the Wars of the Greeks to build Forts upon, for Watch-Towers.

The thirty-firſt we travel'd a very uneven Country, but abounding in Wheat, and after we had travel'd nine hours, we lodg'd in a Meadow, near a River, which we croſs'd next Morning before day, over a ſtone Bridge.

The thirty-ſecond, after we had travel'd eight hours, we lodg'd by a River, where we ſaw a great number of Turcomans: They are a People that live in Tents like the Arabians, and they were then leaving that Country to go to another, having their luggage in Waggons drawn by Bufalo's.

The thirty-third we met again with Mountains and Woods, which we had not ſeen in 18 days before, which had conſtrain'd us to carry Wood upon our Camels to dreſs our Proviſion: We were very ſparing of it, and ſometimes made uſe of dry'd Cows dung or Camels dung, when we came near the Waters where they were wont to drink. We travel'd eight hours that day, and lodg'd in a Meadow where the Graſs was very high, yet where there had been Houſes formerly ſtanding.

The thirty-fourth we forded a deep and rapid River call'd Jangou, from the Name of the Town next to it. A little above the place where we forded it, we ſaw a ruin'd Bridge, which had been built over it.

The thirty-fifth we travel'd eight hours through a fair Valley well manur'd, and upon the left hand we left a Caſtle rais'd upon a Rock. The Caravan lay that night upon a riſing Ground near a Village.

The

The thirty-ſixth we travel'd through the ſame Valley for eight or nine hours longer; in this Valley were ſeveral pleaſant Villages, but we lay by a ſmall River.

The thirty-ſeventh we travell'd ſix hours among the Mountains, where there are ſome very narrow Paſſages, but ſtore of Water; and we lay in a Vale abounding in Paſturage.

The thirty-eighth we rode for four or five hours over a rugged Mountain in craggy way, at the foot whereof we met with a Village call'd Taquibac; from whence it is but five Leagues to Tocat. And theſe are all the Roads from Paris to Iſpahan, through the Northern Territories of Turkie.

CHAP. VIII.

How the Author was robb'd near Tocat, and of a certain ſort of rare and fine Wool which he firſt brought into France.

Taquibac is the place where the Perſian Caravan uſes to meet, when it departs from Tocat to Smyrna, and this is the only place in all the Road where a Traveller ought to ſtand upon his guard; by reaſon of Thieves who haunt theſe Quarters, and are great Maſters in their Trade. Once as I came out of Perſia they would needs give me a taſt of their Art, notwithſtanding all the care I took. There were three or four of us that would needs ride before with our Servants to Taquibac, in expectation of the Caravan which was to come the next day; where we ſet up our Tents upon the Bank of a ſmall River. I had then a good many Bales of Wool, with which I made as it were a double Wall about my Tent: ſo that there was but one paſſage between the Bales, for one Man. In four of theſe Bales I had a quantity of Musk in lead'n Boxes, to the value of ten or twelve thouſand Crowns: which Bales I put within-ſide, ſo that they touch'd the Tent and my Beds-head. Next Night, it being very dark, the Thieves came, and finding the outward Bales ſmell ſo ſtrong of Musk, they thought one of thoſe Bales would be a conſiderable Booty. The Bales were all ty'd together with a Cord that kept them faſt; nor was it eaſie to undo them, without a noiſe. They wak'd me with their buſtle at firſt, and I ſent out my Servants to ſee if they could catch them; but they will lye ſo cloſe upon their Bellies, that in ſuch a dark Night as that was 'tis impoſſible to diſcover them. Thereupon my Servants went to ſleep again, and the Thieves to their Work; and having with a great deal of ingenuity cut the Cord, they carried away the two Bales. In the Morning four or five of us with a Camel-driver for our Guide purſu'd them, and in half an hour we met with the marks of the Robbery; for the Rogues being mad that they found nothing but Wool, which they thought to be of no great value, ſcatter'd it in the High-way for two or three Leagues together: ſo that I caus'd it to be pickt up again, and loſt not above fifteen or twenty Pound. I ſpeak this to caution the Marchants that carry Bales of Silk or other rich Commodities, to beware of theſe Thieves; for they will come creeping upon their Bellies, and then cutting the Bales with great Razors, will preſently empty a Bale of one half of the Goods.

'Tis true, the Wool was of no great value for their uſe; but it was a ſort of rare and very fine Wool, which I carry'd out of Perſia to Paris, where ſuch fine Wool was never ſeen. As to the place where it is to be had, I met with one of the Gaures, or Perſians that adore the Fire, who when I was at Iſpahan in the year 1647 ſhew'd me a Sample of it, and inform'd me that the greateſt part of this Wool comes from the Province of Kerman, which is the ancient Caramania; and that the beſt Wool is to be met with in the Mountains that are next to the City, that bears the name of the Province: That the Sheep in thoſe Parts have this particular property, that when they have fed upon new Graſs from January till May, the Fleece falls off of it ſelf, and leaves the Sheep naked, and their Skins ſmooth, like a Pig's that is ſcalded off; ſo that there is no need of ſhearing them, as with us: after they have

gather'd it, they beat it, and the courſe Wool breaking, the fine only remains. That if you tranſport it before you make it into Bales, you muſt throw Salt-water upon it, which keeps the Worms out of it, and preſerves it from rotting. Now you muſt take notice that they never dye this Wool, it being naturally of a clear Brown, or a dark Aſh-colour; and that there is very little of it White, which is alſo much dearer than the other, as well for that it is ſcarce, as becauſe that the Muftis, the Moullah's and other perſons belonging to the Law never wear any Girdles or Vails (wherewith they cover their Heads when they pray) but White: for at other times they wear them about their Necks, as the Women do their Scarfs.

Into this Province of Kerman almoſt all the Gaures are retir'd, and they are they that only Trade in this Wool, and have the whole Manufacture of it. They make thoſe Girdles of it which they uſe in Perſia; and ſome Pieces of Serge, which are almoſt as fine and tranſparent, as if they were of Silk. I brought over two Pieces into France, and preſented one to the late Queen Mother, the other to the Princeſs of Orleance.

I could not drive any Trade in this Wool till the year 1654, returning out of the Indies by Sea from Surat to Ormus. To which purpoſe, I departed from Ormus, and took Guides along with me to ſhew me the way to Kerman, whither I could not get on Horſeback in leſs than twenty-ſeven days. I dare ſay that Alexander the Great did not march this way into the Indies: for in the whole extent of the Country there is no Water to be met with but in ſome certain places, and in the hollow of ſome Rocks, where there is not enough neither to water eight or ten Horſes. Beſides, in ſome places a man is conſtrain'd, by reaſon of the Mountains, to fetch a great compaſs about; for a Foot-man that makes his way through thoſe Rocks, ſhall go farther in half an hour than a Horſe-man can do in four.

Kerman is a large City, which has been often ruin'd by being ſeveral times taken and re-taken; nor is there any thing handſom in it, but only one Houſe and a Garden, upon which the laſt Kans have beſtow'd a vaſt expence to make the place delightful. They make there a ſort of Earthen ware which comes very near to Porcelan, and looks as neat and as fine. As ſoon as I arriv'd, I went to viſit the Kan, who made me very welcom, and gave order to the Gaures to furniſh me with Bread and Wine, Pullets and Pigeons, which in thoſe parts are fat, and as large as little Capons. The Gaures are they that make the Wine; and to make it more ſweet and pleaſant, they take away the ſtalks, and never preſs any thing but the meer Grape.

The Kan was but newly entred into the poſſeſſion of his Government, and being deſirous, according to the cuſtom of the new Governours, to have a noble Sword and Dagger, with a rich Furniture of his Horſe, which requir'd ſome Jewels, I preſented him with a Diamond worth eight hundred Crowns, which he caus'd to be ſet in the end of the handle of his Dagger. He alſo deſir'd to have of me as many more Jewels as came to ſeven or eight hundred Livres: and by the Preſent and the Bargain I facilitated my purchaſe of the Wool which I intended to buy. Two days after he invited me to his Entry-Feaſt, which he made for the cheif of the City; and knowing I wanted a Mule, he ſent me one well worth a hundred Crowns. This is the Nobleſt Carriage in all Perſia, which the great Perſonages chooſe before Horſes, eſpecially when they are in years. But it was not the Kan alone who was civil to me. A young Lord, who liv'd in Kerman, and was at the Feaſt, whoſe Father had been formerly Kan himſelf, took great delight to diſcourſe with me concerning my Travels; and offer'd me his ſervice in a very obliging manner. Now the Perſians are very curious, and great admirers of the Rarities of Forein Countries: which inclination led the young Lord to enquire of me whether I had any Fire-Arms, telling me he would content me for them to my ſatisfaction. The next Morning I preſented him with a Carbine, and a pair of Piſtols that pleas'd him exceedingly; and a little Watch, for which I would take no Money, whereat he ſeem'd to be not a little troubl'd. However he ſent me a ſtately Horſe worth about two hundred Crowns, or twelve Tomans. This young Lord was of a clear humour, civil, accompliſh'd, generous, and did every thing with a good grace. So that when he ſent me the Horſe, he ſent to entreat me withal, if I did not like that Horſe, to come and chooſe which I lik'd beſt in his Stable.

By the favour of this Lord and the Kan, I made good the Purchaſe that I intended. For the People began to murmur (knowing what a Parcel I had got together) and told the Kan that I would carry away all the Cloth out of the Country, ſo that they ſhould have none to ſet the Poor on work. Thereupon the Kan ſent for me, and for thoſe reaſons told me I muſt buy no more. To fend off the blow, I made anſwer, That it was the King of Perſia's deſire to try if we could make as fine Cloth of his Wool in France, as they did in England and Holland; and that if it ſucceeded, I ſhould bring French Workmen into Perſia, and ſo by ſettling the Trade in his own Country, free him from the Charge of forein Manufacturers. This ſilenc'd the Kan, ſo that I ſtill bargain'd for more. But when I was return'd to Iſpahan, the People of the Country would not keep touch with me. However, I wrote ſo home to the Kan, threatning withal to complain to the King, that he fearing the King's diſpleaſure, forc'd the Natives to ſend me my Bargain to Iſpahan.

CHAP. IX.

Of the Road from Kerman to Iſpahan; and the Fortune of Nazar Mahomet-Ali-Beg.

FRom Kerman to Iſpahan is no leſs than five and twenty days on Horſeback. In thoſe places where there is any Water, the Conntry is very good; but thoſe places are very rare; for the Road is generally Sandy, and offenſive to the Eyes. The Chiefeſt comfort to a Traveller is, that every Evening he meets with an Inn, where there are Ciſterns, which is a great refreſhment in thoſe deſert Countries. The moſt part of thoſe Inns were built ſome Years ſince by the ſpecial care of Mahomet-Ali-Beg Nazar, or Grand Maſter of the King's Houſe and Treaſury; a Perſon the moſt Virtuous of any that Perſia can boaſt of for many Years. He was Generous, and favour'd the Franks in all things, for he lov'd them exceedingly. He faithfully ſerv'd his King, and defended the People againſt the Oppreſſion and Inſolencies of the Great ones; which drew upon him the hatred of many: but ſtill he preſerv'd himſelf by his ſyncerity and prudence; as by the following Story will remarkably appear.

The Great Sha-Abas the Firſt, being one day a Hunting in the Mountains far out of ſight from his followers, met a young Lad playing upon a Pipe by an Herd of Goats. The King asking him ſome Queſtions, he anſwer'd him to the purpoſe to every one, not knowing who he was. The King ſurpriz'd at his Repartees, made a ſign to Iman-couli-Kan Governour of Schiras, who was juſt come up to him, not to tell the Goat-herd who he was. After that he proceeded to ask him other Queſtions; to which the young man anſwer'd ſo ſmartly, that the King could not chooſe but ſtand in an amaze. Thereupon the King ask'd the Kan what he thought of the Goat-herds Wit? Who anſwer'd, that he believ'd if the Boy were taught to Write and Read, he might do good ſervice to his Majeſty. Upon that the King immediately caus'd him to be ſent to School, where the young Lad being naturally of a ſolid Wit, clear Judgment, and happy Memory, grew ſo accompliſh'd, and ſo well acquitted himſelf of ſeveral Employments which his Majeſty beſtow'd upon him, that the King advanc'd him to the Office of Nazar, or Grand Maſter of the Houſe, and did him the honour to call him Mahomet-Ali-Beg. The King obſerving his fidelity, and good management of all things, ſent him twice Ambaſſador to the Great Mogul, and both times was extreamly pleas'd with his Negotiation. Mahomet lov'd Juſtice, and would not ſtoop to be corrupted by Preſents: A thing which is very rare among the Mahumetans. This great Integrity of his made all the Lords of the Court his Enemies, eſpecially the Eunuchs and the Women, who have always the King's Ear. But while Sha-Abas liv'd, there was no perſon that durſt open his lips againſt the Nazar, ſo much was he in favour, and that juſtly, with the King. Sha-Sefi ſucceeding his Grandfather Sha-Abas, and being very young, the Nazar's Adverſaries thought they had now a fair Game to play. Thereupon the Eunuchs, Eunuchs, who are always at the King's Ear, ſuggeſted to him many things to the diſadvantage of the Grand Maſter; but whatever they ſaid, the King gave little heed to their Tales. At length, one day when the King was looking upon certain Skains and Daggers ſet with precious Stones, one of the Eunuchs told him thoſe were trifles, and then deſir'd his Majeſty to ſend for a Scimeter that the Grand Signor had ſent Sha-Abas, all over ſet with Diamonds. True it is, that the Grand Signor had ſent a rich Scimiter to Sha-Abas; but Sha-Abas had defac'd it long before Mahomet's time, and had made a noble Jewel of the Stones that adorn'd it. Thereupon this Scimitar was ſought for in the Treaſury, where Mahomet was chief Officer; but not being to be found, the King was troubl'd, finding it regiſtred in the Book of Preſents. Then certain Eunuchs and Grandees of the Court took their opportunity to rip up Mahomet's Life; they repreſented to the King how many Inns, Bridges, and Dikes Mahomet had built at his own charge; what a Houſe he had rear'd for himſelf, fitting for his Majeſty to live in: and aggravated withal, that he could not do ſuch great things as thoſe, without purloining notably from the Publick Stock; for which he ſhould do well to call him to an account. As they were thus diſcourſing, Mahomet came into the Preſence, to whom the King (not receiving him as he was wont to do) ſpoke ſome hard words about the Scimiter that could not be found: telling him withal, that he would ſee if the all reſt of the things in the Treaſury were agreeable to the Regiſter, and then gave him fifteen days time to give in his Account. Mahomet not at all mov'd, reply'd to the King, that if his Majeſty pleas'd he might come to the Treaſury to morrow: and withal beſought him ſo to do, though the King a ſecond time gave him fifteen days. Thereupon the King did go to the Treaſury next morning, according to Mahomet's deſire, and found all things in good order; having heard before what became of the Scimiter. From thence he went to Mahomet's Houſe, who made the King a mean Preſent: For it is the cuſtom, that he whom the King honours with a Viſit, muſt make a Preſent to his Majeſty. After the King had receiv'd it, he walk'd up and down, and viewed the Chambers, Halls, Parlours and Rooms of State; and wonder'd to ſee them ſo ill ſet out with plain Felts, and courſe Carpets; whereas in other Lords Houſes a man could not ſet his Foot upon any thing but Cloth of Gold and Silk. For the King, as they had ſet the Nazar out, expected to have found other things; which made him admire at ſo great a Moderation in ſo high a degree of Honour. Now at the end of a Gallery, there was a Door lockt with three great Padlocks. Of this the King took no notice: whereupon the Meter, who is the White Eunuch, and chief of his Chamber, as he came back, ſhew'd the King the Door that was ſo ſtrongly Padlock'd; which made the King ſo curious to have it open'd: withal, asking Mahomet what he had got there lock'd up with ſo much care? Oh Sir, ſaid he, it behoves me to keep that lockt, for there is all the Eſtate I have in the World. All that your Majeſty has ſeen in this Houſe is yours, but all that is in that Chamber is mine, and I dare aſſure my ſelf, your Majeſty will be ſo gracious as never to take it from me. Thoſe words inflam'd the King's curioſity ſo, that he commanded the Door to be open'd: But he was ſtrangely ſurpriz'd, when he ſaw nothing more within than Mahomet's Sheep-hook, that lay upon two Nails, his Scrip wherein he us'd to put his Victuals, his Bottle for his Water, his Pipe, and his Shepherd's Weeds, all hanging againſt the Wall. The Nazar beholding the King's aſtoniſhment at ſuch a Sight, Sir, ſaid he, when the King Sha-Abas found me in the Mountain keeping Goats, then that was all I had, and he took nothing from me: I beſeech your Majeſty that you would not deprive me of theſe things neither; but rather, if you pleaſe, let me reſume them again, and fall to my old calling. The King touch'd at ſo high a piece of Virtue, caus'd himſelf to be diſapparel'd, and gave his Habit to the Nazar, which is the greateſt Honour that the King of Perſia can beſtow upon a Subject. Thus Mahomet continu'd and dy'd honourably in his Employment. This brave Perſon was the Protector of all the Franks in Perſia: and if any one had done them wrong, upon complaint he did them Juſtice immediately. One day as I was ſhooting Ducks, upon the River of Iſpahan near the Nazar's Gardens, with two Servants, ſome of the Nazar's people that did not know me ſet upon me, and would have taken away my Gun; which I would not let go till I had broke the Stock about the Shoulders of the one, and flung the Barrel at the other's Head. Thereupon I took ſome of the Franks along with me, and complain'd to the Nazar: He teſtifi'd his ſorrow for what had happen'd, and gave us evident Proofs thereof, by the blows which he caus'd to be laid upon thoſe that had done me the injury.

Another time, Sha-Sefi being upon his return from Guilan, his Tents were ſet up near Zulfa in Armenia, where the King ſtaid to hunt two or three days. Now among the reſt of the Courtizans that follow'd the Court, to divertiſe the King with Dancing and Mummery, there was one who was perfectly handſom, to whom the King had already ſent Preſents; which could not be unknown to any Lord i'the Court. But the Nazar's Son, for all that, being in the heat of Youth, got this Courtizan to his Tent, and there lay with her: which came to his Father's Ears next day. The Nazar, whether out of his zeal to the King, or whether it were an effect of his prudence to prevent the King's anger, which would have certainly been the death of his Son, caus'd him to be drub'd, after the manner of the Country, and baſtinado'd all over, till the Nails of his Toes dropt off, and that his Body was almoſt a perfect Gelly. Which when the King underſtood, together with the Young Man's Crime, he ſaid no more, but that the Nazar had done wiſely by puniſhing his Son himſelf, to prevent his Juſtice.

But to return to the Road from Kerman to Iſpahan. The firſt day that I ſet out from Kerman, at my Stage in the Evening I met with a rich Moullah, who ſeeing I had Wine, civilly offer'd me ſome of his Ice to cool it. In retaliation, I gave him ſome of my Bottle. He invited me to his Houſe, which was well built, with a handſom Garden with Water in it. He entertain'd me with Spoon-meat, according to the mode of the Country; and when I took my leave, he fill'd my Baracho with very good Wine.

The following days I ſaw nothing worthy obſervation; the Country being as I have already deſcrib'd it.

Yezd lyes in the Road, almoſt in the mid-way between Kerman and Iſpahan, in 93 Deg. 15 Min. of Longitude, and 13 Deg. 45 Min. of Latitude. It is a great Town in the middle of the Sands, that extend themſelves for two Leagues round it: ſo that when you leave Yezd you muſt take a Guide, for upon the leaſt Wind the Sand covers the Highway, whereby a man may be apt to fall into Holes, which ſeem to have been either old Ciſterns, or the Ruines of ancient Buildings. Between the Town and the Sands there is a little good Soil, which produces excellent Fruits, but above all, Melons of ſeveral ſorts: the Pulp of ſome is green, of others yellow and vermilion; and ſome there are, the meat whereof is as hard as a Renneting. There are alſo very good Grapes, and good Wine; but the Governour will not permit the Inhabitants to make Wine. Some therefore they dry, and of the reſt they make a kind of Confection to eat with Bread. There are alſo abundance of Figs, which are large and well taſted. They diſtil vaſt quantities of Roſe-water, and another ſort of Water with which they dye their Hands and Nails red, which they ſqueeze out of a certain Root call'd Hina. There are three Inns i'th' City, and ſeveral Bazars or Market-places cover'd and vaulted, which are full of Merchants and Workmens Ware-houſes. They alſo make at Yezd ſeveral Stuffs of Silk intermix'd with Gold and Silver, which they call Zerbafte; and another ſort of Stuff of all pure Silk, call'd Darai, like our ſmooth ſtrip'd Taffata's. Other Stuffs they made, half Silk half Cotton; others all of Cotton, like our Fuſtians. They make alſo Serges of a particular Wool, which is ſo fine and delicate, that it looks handſomer, and is much better than Silk.

Though I had nothing to do, I ſtaid in Yezd three days, becauſe I met with ſome Armenians of my acquaintance. In which time I found the general Opinion to be true. For certainly the Women of Yezd are the handſomeſt Women in all Perſia. There is no Feaſt made, but five or ſix of them come to divertiſe the Gueſts with Dancing, who are generally none of the meaneſt Beauties and Converſations among them. However it comes to paſs, the Perſian Proverb is, That to live happy, a Man muſt have a Wife of Yezd, eat the Bread of Yezdecas, and drink the Wine of Schiras.

CHAP. X.

Of the Caravanſera's, and Government of the Caravans.

THE Caravanſera's are the Eaſtern Inns, far different from ours; for they are neither ſo convenient, nor ſo handſom. They are built ſquare, much like Cloyſters, being uſually but one Story high; for it is rare to ſee one of two Stories, A wide Gate brings you into the Court; and in the midſt of the Building, in the front, and upon the right and left hand, there is a Hall for Perſons of the beſt Quality to keep together. On each ſide of the Hall are Lodgings for every man by himſelf. Theſe Lodgings are rais'd all along the Court two or three Steps high, juſt behind which are the Stables, where many times it is as good lying as in the Chamber. Some will rather lye there in the Winter, becauſe they are warm, and are roof'd as well as the Chambers. Right againſt the Head of every Horſe there is a Nich with a Window into the Lodging-Chamber, out of which every man may ſee how his Horſe is look'd after. Theſe Niches are uſually ſo large, that three men may lye in them; and there it is that the Servants uſually dreſs their Victuals.

There are two ſorts of Inns. For ſome are endow'd; where you may be receiv'd for Charities ſake; others, where you muſt pay for what you call for. There are none of the firſt, but between Buda and Conſtantinople. Nor is it lawful for any others to build ſuch, but only the Mothers and Siſters of the Grand Signor, or ſuch Viziers, and Baſha's as have been three times in Battel againſt the Chriſtians. In theſe Inns, which are built out of Legacies, there is a very good allowance of Diet to Travellers. and at your departure you have nothing to do but to thank the Benefactor. But from Conſtantinople to Perſia, there are none of thoſe endow'd Inns; only ſuch where you have nothing but bare Walls. It is for you to provide Utenſils for your Kitchin, and a Bed to lye on: as for Proviſion, the people bring Lambs, Pullets, Butter, and Fruits in their ſeaſons: or elſe you may buy it, provided before-hand by the Maſter of the Houſe. There you alſo meet with Barley and Straw for the Horſes, unleſs it be in ſome few places that I have been at upon the Road. In the Country you pay nothing for your Chambers; but in the Cities you pay ſomething, though it be but a ſmall matter. Uſually the Caravans never go into the Towns, which are not able to contain ſo many People and Horſes. When you come to your Quarters every one looks after his own Chamber, for there is no regard to Poor or Rich: ſometimes out of Breeding, or out of Intereſt, an ordinary Tradeſman will give way to a great Merchant; but no man is permitted to leave the Chamber which he has once made choice of. In the night the Inn-keeper ſhuts up his Gates, being anſwerable for all things that ſhall be loſt; for which reaſon he keeps a Guard about the Inn.

As for the Perſian Caravanſera's, they are more commodious, and better built than thoſe of Turkie, and at more reaſonable diſtances, throughout almoſt all the Country. By which deſcription of Inns it is eaſie to obſerve, that though theſe Caravanſera's are not ſo commodious for the Rich as our European Inns, yet they are more convenient for the Poor, to whom they never refuſe to give admittance: no perſon being oblig'd to eat or drink more than he pleaſes; but every one being allow'd to ſpend according to his Stock, without grumbling.

You may travel in Turkie or Perſia, either with the Caravan, or elſe in company, ten or twelve together, or elſe alone with a Guide. The ſafeſt way is to go with the Caravan, though you are longer upon the Road, by reaſon of the ſlowneſs of their march, eſpecially when the Caravans conſiſt of Camels.

The Caravans are as it were great Convoys, which conſiſt of a good number of Merchants, that meet at certain times and places, to put themſelves into a condition to defend themſelves from Thieves, that are very riſe in Troops in ſeveral deſert places upon the Road. Theſe Merchants chooſe among themſelves a Caravan-Baſhi, who orders them how they ſhall march, aſſigns the places of lodging at night, and who with the chief of the Caravan, is a kind of Judge of the differences that fall out by the way. There is no honeſt man that covets the employment; for the Caravan-Baſhi, being to diſcharge ſeveral ſmall duties upon the Road, however he behave himſelf, is ſtill ſuſpected for his fidelity. When the Turks are moſt numerous, they make choice of a Turk; when the Armenian Merchants are moſt, they chooſe an Armenian.

There are two ſorts of Caravans. There are Caravans which conſiſt of Camels, which are the moſt uſual; in regard that Camels are cheap, and for that ſome Camels will carry as much as three Horſes, others as much as four or five. But among the Caravans of Camels, there are ſeveral Horſes and Mules, which the Merchants themſelves ride upon; it being very tedious to ride upon a Camel when he only goes a foot-pace, but very pleaſant when he goes upon his large trot. There are other Caravans that conſiſt only of Horſes; and among theſe, if the Merchant have none of his own, he may hire one. The Servants ride upon thoſe Horſes that are leaſt laden; but at Smyrna you may meet with ſeveral good Horſes very cheap, from thirty to ſixty Crowns. As for thoſe perſons that are either unwilling or unable to be at any expence, they make uſe of Aſſes, of which there are enow to be had. Above all things, you muſt take care to provide Pack-Horſes to carry your Wine; for the Camel-Maſters being Mahometans, will not permit you to lade their Camels with any ſuch Liquor; that Beaſt being particularly conſecrated to Mahomet, who ſo ſtrictly forbad the uſe of Wine. You put your Wine in Bottles made of wild Goats Skins, with the hairy ſide turn'd innermoſt, and well pitch'd within. There are ſome of theſe Bottles from which they take off the Hair; but they are not ſo good, as being ſeldom without holes.

Theſe Camel-Maſters are an inſolent ſort of people, which you ſhall never know how to deal with, unleſs you can bring them to puniſhment. There was one that play'd me ſome of his jades tricks in the Road from Smyrna to Tauris; but when I came to Eſcrivan, I complain'd to the Kan, who preſently caus'd a hundred Baſtinado's to be giv'n him upon the ſpot. Nor is there any other way to bring thoſe Scoundrels to reaſon, eſpecially at Smyrna and ſuch other places, where the Merchants have their Conſuls, who upon the leaſt complaint to the Cady have Juſtice done them immediately. The examples of ſome of theſe Camel-drivers that have been paid off, keep the reſt in good decorum; and they will be very tractable for a good while after.

The Journies of the Caravans are not equal; ſometimes not above ſix hours travel, ſometimes ten, and ſometimes twelve; it being the convenience of Water, which is not every where to be met with, that is the Rule of Lodging the Caravan. At all times the Caravan travels more by night than by day; in Summer to avoid the heat, and at other times, that you may be ſure to have day enough to ſet up your Tents. For if the Caravan ſhould come to pitch in the night, it would be impoſſible for them to find where to ſet up their Tents, to dreſs and look after their Beaſts, make ready their Kitchins, and provide things neceſſary for ſo large a Company. True it is, that in the depth of Winter and in the great Snows, they ſeldom ſet out till two or three hours after midnight; and that ſometimes they ſtay till day-break. But in Summer, according to the Journey which they intend, they ſet out either at midnight, or an hour after Sun-ſet. The laſt time I went from Smyrna the Caravan conſiſted of ſix hundred Camels, and almoſt the ſame number of Horſe. Sometimes their number is greater, ſo that the Camels going but by one and one after another, a Caravan ſeems to be an Army; and whether it be in travelling or lodging, they take up a world of Ground. Now by reaſon they travel all night in Aſia, it happens that the Air is indifferent wholſom; and that the Travellers, that lye for the moſt part upon a Carpet ſpread upon the Ground, find themſelves very little inconvenienc'd by it.

The Camels that go into Perſia through the Northern Provinces of Turkie, travel like Horſes in a Cart, by ſeven and ſeven; they are ty'd together by a Cord about the bigneſs of a Man's little Finger, and a Fathom long; faſten'd to the Pack-ſaddle of the Camel that goes before, and to the Head-harneſs of the Camel that follows. Thoſe little Cords are made no ſtronger, to the end that if the Camel before ſhould chance to fall into any hole, the Camel behind ſhould either keep him up, or elſe not be pull'd in after the other. And to the end that the Camel-driver who leads the foremoſt, may know whether the other ſix follow him or no, the laſt Camel has a Bell about his Neck, which if it ceaſe to ring, 'tis a ſign that ſome one of the ſmall Cords is broken, and that a Camel has got a miſchance. The ſeventh Camel generally carries the Proviſions. For if a Merchant have ſix Camels laden, he is generally allow'd one to carry his Proviſion; if he have but three, he is allow'd but half a Camel's load; but if he have nine or twelve, he pays nothing for the carriage of his Proviſions of Food, or any thing elſe that he pleaſes. Every Merchant with his Servants rides by the Camels that are laden with his Goods, eſpecially in the dark nights; for there are a ſubtil ſort of Thieves, that have a trick to cut the two Cords behind and before, and without any noiſe drive the Camel out of the way; for having no Hoofs, his Feet cannot be ſhod, and conſequently he makes no noiſe. As well Merchants, as others, Camel-drivers and Servants, keep themſelves from ſleeping ſometimes by ſinging, and ſometimes by taking Tobacco, and ſometimes by diſcourſe.

The Caravan lyes in ſuch places as they think moſt convenient, chiefly near to the Water-ſide. When the Sun is ſet, the Shaoux, who are a ſort of poor people, are diligent to guard the whole Field, and take care of the Goods. They walk up and down, and either in the Arabian or Armenian Dialect they cry one to another, God is one, and he is merciful; adding from time to time, Have a care of your ſelf. When they ſee that the time grows near to ſet out, they give notice to the Caravan-Baſhi, who gives order to bid them cry, Saddle your Horſes; and after that, to cry again, Load. And it is a ſtrange thing to conſider, that upon the ſecond Cry of the Shaoux every thing is ready upon an inſtant, and the Caravan begins to ſet forward in great order and great ſilence. Every one takes care to be ready, for it is dangerous to be left behind, eſpecially in thoſe Countries which are haunted with Thieves. The Wages of theſe Shaoux is the fourth part of a Piaſter for a Bale from Smyrna to Erivan.

When the Stages are long, and that they believe that they ſhall not get thither by ten or twelve in the morning, every one carries two ſmall Wallets on each ſide his Horſe, and when they come to the place where they intend to Break-faſt, they ſpread a Carpet upon the Ground and fall to.

When you go from Conſtantinople, Smyrna, or Aleppo with the Caravan, it behoves all people to carry themſelves according to the mode of the Country; in Turkie like a Turk, in Perſia as a Perſian; elſe would they be accounted ridiculous, nay ſometimes they would hardly be permitted to paſs in ſome places, where the leaſt miſcarriage makes the Governours jealous, who are eaſily perſwaded to take Strangers for Spies. Always, if you have upon the Road but an Arabian Veſt, with a mean Girdle, whatever Clothes you wear under, there is no danger of paſſing any where. If you wear a Turbant, you muſt of neceſſity ſhave off your Hair, elſe it will never ſtay upon the Head. As for Beards, they never mind them in Turkie, the greateſt being accounted the handſomeſt; but in Perſia they ſhave their Chins, and wear their Muſtaches: and I remember I have ſeen one of the King of Perſia's Porters, whoſe Muſtaches were ſo long, that he could tye them behind his neck, for which reaſon he had a double Penſion. More than that, you muſt provide your ſelf of Boots according to the cuſtom of the Country: they are made of red, yellow, or black Cordovan, lin'd with Linen cloth; and in regard they never reach higher than the Knee, they are as convenient to travel in as Shooes. As for Spurs, they never wear any; for the Iron at the upper end of the Stirrop, which is four-ſquare, ſerves to ſpur the Horſe: ſo much the better, becauſe it is the cuſtom of all Aſia to ride very ſhort.

Before you ſet out, you muſt provide your ſelf of ſeveral Houſhold-Goods, eſpecially of thoſe Bottles that are call'd Matares, which are made of Bulgary-Leather; every man carries his own at the Pummel of his Saddle, or elſe faſten'd to the Crupper of the Saddle behind. Beſides theſe you muſt buy Borracho's; the moſt ſerviceable things in the World; for they will never break, and will hold above ſifty Pints at a time. The ſmaller Bottles ſerve to put Aqua-vitæ in: and the Leather whereof they are made, has that peculiar to it ſelf, that it keeps the Water freſh. Then you muſt provide Food, and make a proviſion of Rice and Biſket as far as Tocat: For as for Pullets, Eggs, and ſuch like things, you meet with them almoſt every where; as alſo with Proviſion for your Horſes, and new Bread, unleſs in ſome few places. You muſt alſo carry a Tent with all its appurtenances, with a Mattreſs; and Clothes to cover the Horſes at night, eſpecially in the time of the deep deep Snows; wherein you ſhall find them almoſt buried the next morning.

When the Caravan comes near the place where it intends to ſtop, every Merchant rides before to take up a convenient place for himſelf and his Goods, for which he covets a riſing Ground, that if it ſhould happen to rain, the Water may run from the Bales. They alſo in that caſe lay Stones under the Bales, and a Cloth over them; and the Servants make a Ditch about the Tent for the Water to run into. But if it be fair weather, there is no care tak'n to ſet up the Tent: or if it be, 'tis folded up after Supper; to the end the Owners may have the more liberty to look about them, and may be in a better condition to look after the Thieves. But if there be any likelihood of foul weather, the Tent is let ſtand till the firſt Cry of the Shaoux. The Horſes are ty'd before the Tent with Cords faſten'd to a Nail, and their hinder Legs are ty'd with other Cords, to the end they may not ſtir out of their places. If it be not ſeaſonable for them to eat Graſs, you muſt buy Barley, and Straw of the Country-men that come to ſerve the Caravan, their being no Oats neither in Turkie nor Perſia.

In dreſſing your Victuals, you muſt follow the cuſtom of the Country; which is, to make a Hole in the Ground, and then kindling a Fire in it, to ſet the Pot over it.

But the greateſt inconvenience which Travellers ſuffer with the Caravans is this, that when they come to Waters, which are only Wells, or Ciſterns, or Springs, where only two or three lade up Water at a time. For after the Caravan is lodg'd, the Merchants ſhall be forc'd to ſtay for Water two or three hours together; for they that belong to the Beaſts of Carriage, will not ſuffer any perſon to take any Water, till the Camels, Horſes, Aſſes, and Mules are all ſerv'd. Nor is there any contending with theſe Camel-drivers and Muleters; for as they are a rude ſort of people, a Man runs the hazard of his Life by conteſting alone: of which one Example may ſuffice for all.

Setting out one day from Bander-Abaſſi, for Iſpahan, with a Merchant of Babylon, as we came to the Inn where we lay the firſt night, which was call'd Guatchy, the Merchant commanded one of his Slaves who was a Cafer of Mozambique, to fetch him ſome freſh Water at the Ciſtern, to drink: The Cafer went thither, and return'd without any Water, telling his Maſter, that the Camel-drivers and Muleters threaten'd to beat him, and would not let him come near the Ciſtern. The Merchant either ill adviſ'd, or not knowing the cuſtom, bid him go back, and kick thoſe that refuſ'd him. Whereupon the Cafer returning, and finding the ſame reſiſtance as before, began to give ill language to the Camel-drivers, ſo that one of them happen'd to ſtrike him. Upon that the Cafer drawing his Sword, ran him into the Belly, ſo that he fell down dead: Thereupon the whole Rabble fell upon him, bound him, and carry'd him back to Bander-Abaſſi for the Governour to put him to death. The Maſter of the Cafer, accompany'd by ſeveral Merchants, went to the Governour and repreſented to him the inſolence of thoſe people, and how the buſineſs had happen'd. Upon which the Governour took the poor fellow out of their hands, and caus'd him to be kept ſafe; after that, he caus'd ten or a dozen of thoſe Muleters to be ſeiz'd, and orderd'd them to be ſoundly baſtinado'd, for hindring a Merchant's Servant from fetching Water for his Maſter. He alſo put others in Priſon; who had not been releas'd ſo ſoon, but at the requeſt of thoſe Merchants whoſe Goods they carry'd, and who ſtood in need of their ſervice. The Governour ſpun out the buſineſs, on purpoſe that the reſt might be gone: but as ſoon as they were all departed except the two Brothers of the party ſlain, he told them, he could not do them Juſtice, becauſe their Brother belong'd to Schiras; ſo that all that he could do, was to ſend the Criminal thither. The Maſter of the Cafer being rich, and loving the Slave, made haſt to Schiras, to tell his Story firſt to the Kan. And I remember, two days journey on this ſide Schiras we met in the High way abundance of poor people, the kindred of the party ſlain, who were ſtaying for the Cafer, to carry him before the Kan, and to demand Juſtice. Two or three Leagues alſo from Schiras I met the Father and Mother, together with the Wife and Children of the deceas'd, who ſeeing me paſs along, fell at my Feet and recounted to me their Grievances. I told them by my Kalmachi, that their beſt and ſureſt way was to take a piece of Money of the Cafer's Maſter, and ſo to put up the buſineſs. This Propoſal, that would have been accepted in Chriſtendom, was rejected by thoſe poor Mahometans; in ſo much that the Father tore his Beard, and the Women their Hair, crying out, That if it were the cuſtom of the Franks to ſell the Blood of their Kindred, it was not their cuſtom ſo to do. When the reſt of the kindred came with the Cafer to Schiras, the Kan did all he could to perſuade the Widow to take Money; but not being able to over-rule her, he was forc'd to give the Cafer into their hands: and how they us'd him I cannot tell, being conſtrain'd at the ſame time to paſs from Schiras for Iſpahan.

CHAP. XI.

Of the breeding, nature, and ſeveral ſorts of Camels.

THE Female Camel bears her Burthen eleven Months; and her Milk is a ſovereign Remedy againſt the Dropſie. You muſt drink a Pint of it every Day for three Weeks together: and I have ſeen ſeveral Cures wrought thereby at Balſara, Ormus, and in other places in the Perſian Gulf, upon ſeveral Engliſh and Holland Mariners.

So ſoon as a Camel comes into the World, they fold his Feet under his Belly, and make him lye upon them; after that they cover his Back with a Carpet that hangs to the Ground, laying Stones upon each ſide; ſo that he may not be able to riſe; and thus they leave him for fifteen or twenty days. In the mean time they give him Milk to drink, but not very often; to the end he may be accuſtom'd to drink little. This they do alſo to uſe them to lye down, when they go about to Lade them; at which time they will fold their Legs and lye down ſo obediently, that it is an admirable thing to conſider. So ſoon as the Caravan comes to the place where it is to lye, all the Camels that belong to one Maſter will range themſelves in a Circle, and lye down upon their fore Feet; ſo that 'tis but untying one Cord that holds the Bales, and they will ſlide off gently from each ſide of the Camel. When 'tis time to lade again, the ſame Camel comes and crouches down between the two Burthens, and when they are faſten'd, gently riſes up with the Burthen again; which is done without any trouble or noiſe. When the Camels are unladen, they let them go a-field to feed upon the Heath and Buſhes, and half an hour before Sun ſet they return of themſelves, unleſs any one happen to wander, which they will call again with a certain Cry which is natural to them. When they return, they range themſelves in a Circle, and the Muleters give to every one little Ball's of Barley-meal kneaded, as big as two Fiſts. The Camel though he be of a large bulk, eats very little, contented with what he meets with upon the Heaths; where he more eſpecially looks for Thiſtles, of which he is a great lover. But it is more admirable to conſider with what patience they endure drowth: For one time that I croſs'd over the Deſerts, where we were 65 days upon the Road, our Camels were nine days without Drink. But what is more wonderful is this, that when the Camel is in the heat of Generation, he neither eats nor drinks for 40 days together; and he is then ſo furious, that without great care you cannot avoid being bitten by him: And whereever he bites, he carries away a piece of the Fleſh. At that time iſſues out of their Mouths a white Foam, beſides that there appears on each ſide of their Chops two Bladders large and ſwell'd, like the Bladder of a Boar.

In the Spring time all the Camel's Hair falls off in three days. The Skin remains bare, and then the Flies are very troubleſom. There is no way but to Tar them all over: though it be a ventrous thing to come near them at that time.

A Camel muſt be dreſt as well as a Horſe; but the Camel-keeper never uſes any Curry-comb, but only beats him all over with a ſmall Wand, as Carpets are wont to be duſted. If a Camel be hurt or gall'd under the Pack-ſaddle, they never apply any thing to it, but only waſh it well with Urine, without uſing any other Remedy.

There are two ſorts of Camels; the one which is proper for hot Countries, the other for cold Countries.

The Camels in hot Countries, ſuch as go from Ormus to Iſpahan, cannot travel if the Ground be dirty and ſlippery; for their Bellies burſt, while their hinder Quarters rive from their Bodies. Theſe are ſmall Camels, that carry not above five or ſix hundred Pound weight; but they are kept for little, and endure Thirſt a long time. They do not tye them Head to Tayl, as they do the great ones, but let them go as they pleaſe themſelves, like a Herd of Cows. The Camel-driver follows them ſinging, and ſometimes playing upon his Pipe: the louder he ſings and pipes, the faſter the Camels go; nay they will ſtand ſtill when he gives over his Muſick. When the Camel-drivers come to a Heathy Ground, they will give them leave to feed for half an hour, taking their Tabacco the while; and then ſinging them together again, they ſet forward. The Camels bred in the Deſerts are handſom, but very tender, ſo that they muſt be gently us'd, and never be put upon long Journies. However, they eat and drink leſs than others, and endure thirſt more patiently.

The Camels of cold Countries, ſuch as thoſe that travel from Tauris to Conſtantinople, are large Camels, that carry great Burthens, and will pull themſelves out of the dirt. But in fat Grounds and ſlippery Ways the Drivers are fain to ſpread Carpets, ſometimes an hundred one behind another; otherwiſe their hinder Quarters are alſo apt to rive from their Buttocks; but if the Road be ſlippery for too great a diſtance together, there is no way but to tarry 'till it be dry'd up and fair. Theſe Camels uſually carry a thouſand Pound weight: but if the Merchant has any hank upon the Camel driver, he will lay upon every Camel fifteen hundred weight, thereby making two of three Burthens. This the Merchants do, when they come near the Cuſtom-Houſes, eſpecially that of Erzerom, which is the moſt ſevere. The Merchant does this for his own Profit: So that when the Cuſtomer miſtruſting, demands how ſo many Camels come to travel empty, he makes anſwer, that they were Camels that carry'd Proviſion: But the Cuſtomer moſt commonly winks at that good Husbandry of the Merchant, for fear of loſing his Cuſtom, and obliging the Merchant to take another Road.

There is as much knavery among the Camel drivers, as among our Horſe-Courſers. For I remember, that being once at Caſbin, a Perſian Merchant, thinking he had bought eight good Camels, was deceiv'd in four which he thought the beſt. He verily believing they had been fat and in good caſe, but they were only blown up. For thoſe Cheats have a trick to cut a Hole near the Tail, of which the Purchaſer takes no notice, and which they know neatly how to ſow up again: In this Hole they will blow till they have puſt up a lean Camel, that he ſhall appear as fat and plump as the ſoundeſt that ever fed: whereby they often deceive the quickeſt ſights, eſpecially when the Hair is all off, and that the bare Skin is all rub'd over with Tar.

CHAP. XII.

Of the Coyns and Money of Perſia.

IN the firſt place, you muſt take notice that there are no Pieces of Gold coyn'd in Perſia, but only ſome few, to be thrown among the People when a new King aſcends the Throne: which Pieces are neither currant among the Merchants, nor of a certain Price. When the Solemnity is over, they who get the Pieces, are not ſo curious to keep them, but carry them to the Changer, who gives them the value in currant Money. Theſe Pieces of Gold may be worth five * Franks, about the fineneſs of Almain-Ducats. Once I receiv'd ten thouſand of them of one Merchant, at a prefix'd rate; for their value is uncertain.

* A Frank is worth 2 s. Sterling.

In the ſecond place obſerve, That the Silver in Perſia is good, whether it be in Barrs, or in Plate, or in Money, and it is taken for its goodneſs. For when a

Merchant

N.6. N.6. N.5. N.5. N.7. N.7.

Merchant enters into Perſia, whether it be at Erivan or Tauris, where the Money is coyn'd, he is oblig'd to tell what Silver he carry's, to the end it may be melted down and ſtamp'd with the King's Stamp; under a great Penalty, if diſcover'd to be a concealer. But if a Merchant's affairs will not permit him to ſtay at Erivan, or at Tauris; and that he think it better to carry his Money to the Mint of Iſpahan; 'tis but taking a Note from the Maſter of the Mint either at Tauris or Erivan, to atteſt that he has declar'd the truth of what he carries, and it is excuſe enough.

But they that can cunningly carry their Silver to Erivan, when the Seaſon is to go to the Indies, make a great profit of the Real; for the Merchants that go to the Indies will give them thirteen and a half, or fourteen Shayez a piece, for as many as they have. But there are few Merchants that carry their Silver to Iſpahan; in regard the Maſters of the Mints upon the Frontiers will be ſure to preſent them with a good piece of Silver Plate, rather than let them carry away their Bullion to Iſpahan, to have the benefit of Coynage themſelves.

They that traffick into Guilan for Silks carry their Silver to Teſis, where the Maſter of the Mint gives them 2 per Cent. profit for their Silver. The reaſon is, becauſe that which he gives them for it is a little ſophiſticated; but it paſſes currant all over Guilan.

In the third place, you muſt obſerve, That upon the pieces of Silver, as well for the King's Duty as the Coynage of the Money, there is requir'd 7 ½ per Cent. But upon the Copper Money, not above one half, or 1 per Cent. at moſt. Whence it comes to paſs, that when a Workman has need of Copper, rather than loſe time in going to buy it, he will melt down his Casbeké's.

There are four ſeveral pieces of Silver Coyn; Abaſſi's, Mamoudi's. Shaet's, and Biſti's: but as for the Biſti's, there are very few at preſent.

The Copper pieces of Coyn are call'd Casbeké, of which there are ſingle and double.

The ſingle Casbeké is worth five Deniers and a Half-peny of our Money.

The double Casbeké is valu'd at eleven Deniers.

Four ſingle Casbeké's, or two double ones, make a Biſti.

Ten ſingle Casbeké's, or five double ones, make one Shayet in value.

Two Shayet's make a Mamoudi.

Two Mamoudi's make an Abaſſi.

The Real or Crown of France is worth three Abaſſi's and one Shayet; and counting a Real at ſixty Sous, an Abaſſi is worth eighteen Sous, ſix Deniers. Though to ſay truth, three Abaſſi's and one Shayet make three Half-pence more than the Crown.

Number 1, and Number 2. Are two pieces, which upon one ſide bear the Names of the twelve Prophets of the Law of Mahomet, and in the middle this Inſcription, La Illah allah Mahomet reſoul Allah, Ali Vali Allah: on the back-ſide, The Conquerour of the World, Abas II. gives us permiſſion to coyn this Money in the City of Caſhan.

Num. 1. Makes five Abaſſi's; and counting our Crown at thirteen Shayet's, it comes to four Livres, twelve Sous, ſix Deniers.

Num. 2. Makes two Abaſſi's and a half of our Money, or forty-ſix Sous and one Farthing.

Num. 3. Is an Abaſſi, which comes to eighteen Sous, ſix Deniers.

Num. 4. Is a Mamoudi, worth nine Sous and a Farthing.

Num. 5. Is a Shayet, worth four Sous, ſeven Deniers, one Half-peny.

Num. 6. A Biſti, worth one Sous, ten Deniers.

Num. 7. The Copper Coyn, call'd Casbeké, worth five Deniers, one Half-peny.

Theſe Coyns, unleſs it be the Casbeké, bear no other Inſcription, but only the Name of the King reigning when they were coyn'd; the Name of the City where they were coyn'd; with the Year of the Hegyra of Mahomet.

Though all Payments are made in Abaſſi's, as well at Ormus and other parts of the Gulf belonging to the King of Perſia, as in the Iſland of Bahren, where is the great Fiſhery and Market for Pearls; yet there is no mention made but only of Larins.

The Larin is deſcrib'd in the Money of Arabia. Eight Larins make an Or; four and twenty make a Toman.

An Or is not the name of a Coyn, but of a Sum in reck'ning among Merchants. One Or is five Abaſſi's.

A Toman is another Sum in payment: For in all Perſian Payments they make uſe of only Tomans and Ors; and though they uſually ſay that a Toman makes fifteen Crowns, in truth it comes to forty-ſix Livres, one Peny and $\frac{1}{2}$.

As for pieces of Gold, the Merchant never carries any into Perſia, but Alman-Ducats, Ducats of the Seventeen Provinces, or of Venice; and he is bound to carry them into the Mint ſo ſoon as he enters into the Kingdom; but if he can cunningly hide them, and ſell them to particular perſons, he gets more by it. When a Merchant goes out of the Kingdom, he is oblig'd to tell what pieces of Gold he carries with him; and the King's people take a Shayet at the rate of a Ducat, and ſometimes they value the Ducat at more. But if he carries his Gold away privately and be diſcover'd, all his Gold is confiſcated.

The Ducat uſually is worth two Crowns, which in Perſia juſtly comes to twenty-ſix Shayets; but there is no price fixt in that Country for Ducats. For when the ſeaſon is to go for the Indies, or that the Caravan ſets out for Mecca, as well the Merchants as the Pilgrims buy up all the Ducats they can find out, by reaſon of their lightneſs; and then they riſe to twenty-ſeven, and twenty-eight Shayets, and ſometimes more, a piece.

ROADS

From PARIS to ISPAHAN, the Capital City of PERSIA;

Through the Southern Provinces of TURKY, and through the DESERTS.

CHAP. I.

The ſecond Voyage of the Author from Paris to Iſpahan: and firſt, of his Embarking at Marſeilles for Alexandretta.

THE Road from Conſtantinople to Erivan, which with all thoſe other Roads through the Northern Provinces of Turkie, the firſt time I travel'd into Perſia, I have amply deſcrib'd. It behoves me now to treat of the Southern Provinces, and of thoſe through the Deſerts, where there are ſeveral Emirs, or Arabian Princes, of which ſeveral are very potent: For there are ſome of them that can bring 30000 Horſe into the Field, five of which I have had the honour to diſcourſe, and to oblige them with ſmall Preſents; in recompence whereof they ſent me Rice, Mutton, Dates, and Sherbet, as long as I ſtaid among them.

I embark'd at Marſeilles in a Holland Veſſel that carry'd five and forty Guns, from thence we ſet ſail for Malta. At Malta we ſtaid twelve days to carine the Veſſel, and to take in freſh Victuals. Among the reſt we bought two thouſand Quails, for there are a prodigious quantity in the Iſland: but in two or three days we found five or ſix hundred of them deſtroy'd by the Vermin that peſter'd the ſhip.

From Malta we ſet ſail for Larneca, a good Road in the Iſland of Cyprus, to the Weſt of Famagoſta, which is not above a days journey from it by Land. As we were making into the Road, about two or three hours after midnight, we perceiv'd a Veſſel cloſe upon us, and both the Ships Company began to cry out, for fear of falling foul one upon another; but the Veſſel ſheer'd clear without any harm on either ſide.

In

In the morning we caſt Anchor, and went-aſhoar. It is a good half League from the Road where the Conſuls and Merchants, both Engliſh, Hollanders, and French, live in a very pitiful Village. However there is a little Monaſtery of Capuchins, who officiate in the Chapel of the French Conſul; and another of Religious Italians, that depend upon the Guardian of Jeruſalem. We ſtaid but two days at Larneca; the Captain having nothing to do but to inform himſelf what buſineſs they might have for him at his return; it being uſual then to take in ſpun and unſpun Cottons, together with courſe Wool for Mattreſſes.

From Larneca 'till we came in view of the Coaſt of Syria, we had the Wind very favourable; but at length coming to prove a little contrary, inſtead of carrying us to Alexandretta, it caſt us to the Northward, two or three Leagues higher, upon the Coaſt of Cilicia, toward a Town call'd Païaſſes. Half a League from that City lyes a vaſt Rock, and between that Rock and the Land runs a very high Sea: And here it was that the people of the Country believe that the Whale caſt up Jonas again; though the common Opinion reports it to have been done near Joppa in Paleſtine. All along that Coaſt from Alexandretta to Païaſſes, and farther, the way is ſo narrow and ſtraiten'd by the Mountain, that in ſome parts the Camels and Horſes muſt dip their Feet in the Sea: and yet you muſt paſs that way of neceſſity, travelling from Syria to Conſtantinople. Between Alexandretta and Païaſſes it was, that the Chevalier Paul, in a Veſſel that carry'd only three hundred Men, miſs'd but little of ſurpriſing the Caravan that every Year carries the Tribute of Egypt to Conſtantinople, which ſince hath never been ſent by Sea for fear of the Malteſi. This Knight had landed his Men, and laid them in Ambuſcade; but unfortunately his Deſign was diſcover'd, ſo that the Caravan, that might have been eaſily ſurpriz'd, ſtood upon their Guard.

We were near the Coaſt, when we diſcover'd a Skiff with fifteen or ſixteen Turks, that were ſent by him that commanded four Galleys of Rhodes to demand the Cuſtomary Preſent from our Captain. Thoſe Galleys then anchor'd at Païaſſes, and had there diſcharg'd themſelves of their Proviſions of War for Bagdat, which the Grand Signor was going to beſiege. And it is the cuſtom, that when the Great Turk's Galleys are out at Sea, that whatever ſtrange Veſſel paſſes by them muſt ſend them a Preſent, either willingly or by force. When the Baſha of the Sea, who is the Admiral of the Turks, is in Perſon at Sea, the Veſſel which he meets is not excus'd for 2000 Crowns: ſo that when he ſets out from Conſtantinople to cruiſe, the Veſſels of the Franks do all they can to avoid him. There are ſome that will ſeek to eſcape in ſight of the Galleys, but it has coſt them dear. And it happen'd, that one day the Wind ſlackning, they boarded a Veſſel of Marſeilles, the Captain and Notary whereof were both ſeiz'd, and drub'd 'till their Bodies were almoſt bruis'd to a Gelly, and they had like to have dy'd upon it, without being the better in their Purſes; for the rudeneſs of the Chaſtiſement did not excuſe them from paying the Money which was demanded. Whether our Captain knew any thing of this Example, or whether it were out of his natural heat of Valour, he laugh'd at the Skiff-men, bidding them be gone, and telling them he had no Preſents for them but Cannon-Bullets. Thereupon the Men return'd to their Galleys, who ſoon deliver'd us from the true fear we were in, that the gallantry of the Captain had drawn us into an inconvenience. For while we kept the Sea cloſe by the Coaſt, to obſerve the Countenances of the Turks, they weigh'd Anchor, and turn'd their Prows toward Rhodes. However, before they left us they ſent us a Broad-ſide, and our Captain, whatever we could ſay, ſent them another, which render'd us more guilty. For the Turks pretend that when their Navy is at Sea, or only one Squadron, and that a ſtrange Veſſel is in ſight, ſhe is bound to come as near as the Wind will permit her without being hal'd, for which they will otherwiſe make the Commander pay very ſeverely. The Conſuls and Merchants of Aleppo underſtanding what had paſs'd very much blam'd the Captain, fearing a worſe conſequence of the buſineſs; But by good fortune the miſcarriage was ſtifl'd and never went farther.

The ſame day the Wind veering to the Weſt-North-Weſt, we ſail'd into the Road of Alexandretta, where we came to an Anchor, about a quarter of a League from the Land. Upon the advice which they have out of Chriſtendom, ſo ſoon as they of Alexandretta diſcover a Veſſel, and know what Colours ſhe carries, the Vice-Conſul of the Nation to which the Veſſel belongs, fails not to advertiſe the Conſul of Aleppo, by a Note which is carry'd in four or five hours, though it be more than two or three days journey on Horſe-back. For they tye a Note under the Wing of a Pigeon, who is taught what to do, and ſhe flies directly to the place whence ſhe was brought. For more ſurety, they uſually ſend two, that if the one ſhould miſcarry i'the dark, which has many times happen'd, the other may ſupply the defect.

Conſul

Alexandretta is nothing elſe but a confus'd heap of paltry Houſes, inhabited by the Greeks, who keep little Fudling-ſchools, for the Mariners and others, the meaner ſort of the people: for the Merchants lye at the Vice-Conſuls of the Nation. There were but two then, the Engliſh Vice-Conſul and the French; who had each of them a very convenient dwelling. However, they muſt be men who love Money at a ſtrange rate, that accept of thoſe Employments. For the Air, like that of Ormus, is generally ſo bad, eſpecially in the Summer, in ſo much that they who do not dye, cannot avoid very dangerous Diſtempers. If there be any ſo ſtrong that they can hold out for three or four Years, and can accuſtom themſelves to a bad Air, they do well to ſtay there; for for them to betake themſelves to a good Air, is to hazard their Lives. Mr. Philips the Engliſh Conſul has been the only Perſon that ever liv'd two and twenty Years at Alexandretta: but you muſt know he was a brisk merry Man, and of an excellent temper of Body; and yet for all that he had been forc'd to be cauteriz'd. That which renders the Air ſo bad, is the great quantity of ſtanding Pools and Plaſhes in the neighbouring Plains, extending to the Eaſt and South; but when the great Heats begin to approach, the moſt part of the Inhabitants retire to a Village call'd Belan, upon the next Mountain to the City, where there are very good Waters and excellent Fruits. They come alſo thither from Aleppo, when there is an appearance of a Peſtilence; and yet there are few people in this Village who are not troubled with a ſort of Fever, that makes their Eyes look yellow and hollow; which they never can remedy as long as they live.

About half a League from Alexandretta, on the right hand of the High way, juſt againſt the Merſh on the other ſide, is a Tower whereon are to be ſeen the Arms of Godfrey of Bulloign. In all likelihood it was built for the defence of the High-way, which is enclos'd between theſe two Merches, whoſe Exhalations are very noxious.

It is but three little days journey from Alexandretta to Aleppo, and ſome well mounted have rid it in two. The Franks are not permitted to go thither on Foot. For before that Prohibition, in regard the way was ſhort, every Sea-man that had a hundred Crowns, more or leſs, went on Foot to Aleppo, and got eaſily thither in three days, with little expence. Now becauſe they had but little Money to ſpend, and were willing to diſpatch their buſineſs, they would not ſtand to give Four or Five in the Hundred extraordinary for what Goods they bought, which was of dangerous conſequence to the Merchants. For you muſt obſerve, that when the Ships arrive, the firſt man that either out of raſhneſs or ignorance, gives two Sous more for a Commodity that is not worth a Crown, ſets the Price, and cauſes all the whole Commodity to be ſold at that rate. So that the Merchants that lay out ten or twelve thouſand Crowns together, are very careful leſt thoſe Saylors ſhould get before them, and enhance the Price of the Market.

To remedy which inconvenience, the Merchants obtain'd an Order, That no Strangers ſhould be permitted to go a-foot from Alexandretta to Aleppo, but that they ſhould be bound to hire Horſes, and to give for every Horſe ſix Piaſters thither, and ſix back; which expence would ſoon eat out the Profit of a poor Mariner's ſmall Sum.

Uſually you ſtay at Alexandretta three or four days, as well to reſt your ſelf, as to make ſome little Proviſions for your Journey to Aleppo. For though you meet with good Stages at Evening, yet the Janiſaries will be very glad to eat by the way.

Setting out from Alexandretta, we travel'd over a Plain to the foot of a Mountain which is call'd Belan. There is a wide Gap in the midſt of this Mountain, which giving liberty to the North-Eaſt Wind, when it blows hard, doth ſo enrage the Road of Alexandretta, which is otherwiſe very calm, that no Ship can ride there at that time. In ſo much that all Ships that happ'n to be there when the Wind riſes, preſently weigh, and get out to Sea, for fear of being caſt away. Almoſt at the

the top of the Mountain you meet with an Inn; but though it be very fair one, with Fountains round about it, yet Merchants never ſtop there, but go on a little farther to a Grecian that ſpeaks good Italian, and whoſe entertainment is indifferent good, conſidering the Country. When you go away, you give him a Crown for your accommodation, which is the manner at other Stages, by a cuſtom, which the Franks themſelves having eſtabliſh'd, will never be left off.

Deſcending down the Mountain you diſcover the City of Antioch, built upon a Hill. Formerly the Road lay through that City, but the Janizaries of the place exacting a Piaſter from every perſon that travel'd that way, that Road is now diſus'd. Antioch once made more noiſe in the World, being fal'n to ruine ever ſince the Chanel, that ran from the City to the Sea, where Galleys might ride, has been ſtop'd up by the Sands that have encroach'd upon the Mouth of the Haven.

When you are at the bottom of the Hill toward the North, you diſcover a Caſtle built upon a Hill ſtanding by it ſelf, from whence you have a proſpect over a good part of the Plain of Antioch. It is about fifteen Leagues long, and three broad, in that part where the Road lyes. Somewhat more than half the way, you meet with a long Cauſey parted by ſeveral Bridges, by reaſon of certain Rivulets that croſs it, without which the Road were hardly paſſable. The frequent Revolts of Bagdat and Balſara, which the Grand Signor has been forc'd ſo often to beſiege, caus'd the Grand Viſier in the Reign of Achmat to undertake this Cauſey, which together with the Bridge was finiſh'd in ſix Months, that was lookt upon as a Miracle. This was done for the more eaſie paſſage of the Artillery, and other Proviſions of War, that were brought out of Romania and Greece to the Siege of Bagdat, which could never have been done, but for this Cauſey. At the end of this Cauſey ſtands a Bridge, very long and ſtrongly built, under which runs a River, which, with the other Rivulets that wind about the Plain, forms a Lake toward the South, that is call'd the Lake of Antioch. This Lake affords a great Revenue, by reaſon of the Eels that are caught there, which are taken two Months before Lent, and tranſported to Malta Sicily, and other parts of Italy.

This Plain is very full of Olive-Trees; which produces that great Trade of Soap, that is made at Aleppo, and tranſported into Meſopotamia, Chaldea, Perſia, and the Deſert; that Commodity being one of the moſt acceptable Preſents that can be made to the Arabians. Sallet Oyl is alſo in great eſteem among them: ſo that when you make them a Preſent of it, they will take off their Bonnets, and rub their Heads, their Faces, and their Beards with it, lifting up their Eyes to Heaven, and cry in their Language, God be thank'd. Therein they have loſt nothing of the ancient cuſtom of the Eaſtern People, of which there is often mention made in Holy Scripture.

About a League and a half beyond the Plain, you meet with a Rock, at the foot whereof is a little deep Lake, wherein they catch a world of Fiſh that are like our Barbels. I have kill'd them with my Piſtol; and found them to be of an excellent taſte; though they are not regarded at Aleppo.

Two hours after you ford a River which is call'd Afrora; though if it have happen'd to rain, you muſt ſtay 'till the Waters are fal'n. Having paſt the River, upon the Banks whereof you ſtay to feed your ſelf and your Horſes, you come to lye at a poor Village call'd Shaquemin, where there is an Inn. Here the Country-people bring Proviſions of Food to the Travellers; and whether you eat or no, you muſt pay a Piaſter, according to the cuſtom which the Franks have eſtabliſh'd. After you have paſs'd the Plain of Antioch as far as Shaquemin, the Horſes in Summer are ſo terribly tormented with a ſort of great Flies, that it were impoſſible to travel three or four hours together, were it not for going out of the Road, either to the right, or to the left, and riding through the Fields, which are full of thoſe Burrs that our Clothworkers make uſe of: For in regard they grow as high as the Crupper of the Horſe, they keep the Flies off from ſtinging and tyring the Horſes.

Leaving the Village of Shaquemin, the Road lyes among Stones; and for half this tedious way, for two or three Leagues round about, you ſee nothing but the Ruines of ancient Monaſteries. There are ſome of them which are built almoſt all of Free-ſtone; and about half a days journey toward the North, quite out of the Road, ſtands the Monaſtery of St. Simeon the Stylite, with the remainder of his ſo famous famous Pillar, which is ſtill to be ſeen. The Franks that travel to Aleppo, uſually go out of their way to ſee that place. That which I find moſt entire and worthy obſervation among the Ruines of thoſe Monaſteries, is the number of arch'd Ciſterns of Free-ſtone, which time has not defac'd.

From Shaqnemin you come to dine at a Village call'd Angare, where every Traveller is entertain'd for his Piaſter, as at the other Stages. Between the other Villages it is ten hours journey; but between the Angare and Aleppo, but three. We alighted at the French Conſul's Houſe, at what time the Cuſtomers came preſently to ſearch our Cloak-bags; after which we went to the Quaiſſery, which is a place where all Strangers are at the expence of half a Crown a day for themſelves, and a quarter ſo much for every Servant, and are well entertain'd.

CHAP. II.

The Deſcription of Aleppo, now the Capital City of Syria.

ALeppo is one of the moſt famous Cities in all Turkie, as well for the bigneſs and beauty of it, as for the goodneſs of the Air, and plenty of all things; together with the great Trade which is driv'n there by all the Nations of the World. It lyes in 71 Deg. 41 Min. of Longitude, and 36 Deg. 15 Min. of Latitude, in an excellent Soil. With all the ſearch that I could make, I could never learn how it was anciently call'd. Some would have it to be Hierapolis, others Berœa: And the Chriſtians of the Country agree with the latter. The Arabian Hiſtorians that record the taking of it, call it only Aleb, not mentioning any other name. Whence this Obſervation is to be made. That if the Arabians call it Aleb, others Alep; the reaſon is, becauſe the Arabians never uſe the Letter P in their Language. This City was taken by the Arabians in the fifteenth Year of the Hegyra of Mahomet, which was about the Year of CHRIST 637, in the Reign of Heraclius Emperour of Conſtantinople.

The City is built upon four Hills, and the Caſtle upon the higheſt that ſtands in the middle of Aleppo, being ſupported by Arches in ſome places, for fear the Earth ſhould tumble and moulder away from it. The Caſtle is large, and may be about five or ſix hundred Paces in compaſs. The Walls and Towers, though built of Free-ſtone, are of little defence. There is but one Gate to enter into it from the South, over a Draw-bridge, laid over certain Arches croſs a Moat about ſix or ſeven Fathom deep. There is but one half of it full of Water, and that a ſtanding Puddle to boot; the reſt is a meer dry Ditch; ſo that it cannot be accounted a wholſom place. However there is Water brought into the Caſtle through a large Pipe from the Fountains in the City: and there is a ſtrong Garriſon kept in it.

The City is above three Miles in circuit, and the beſt half of it is unmoated; that Moat there is not above three Fathom deep. The Walls are very good, and all of Free-ſtone; with ſeveral ſquare Towers, diſtant one from the other about fourſcore Paces; between which there are others alſo that are leſs. But theſe Walls are not all of them of an equal height, for in ſome places they are not above four Fathoms from the Ground. There are ten Gates to enter into the City, without either Moat or Draw-Bridge; under one of which there is a place that the Turks have in great veneration; where they keep Lamps continually burning, and report that Eliſha the Prophet liv'd for ſome time.

There is no River that runs through Aleppo; and but only a ſmall one without the City, which the Arabians call Coïc. However, though indeed it be but properly a Rivulet, yet it is very uſeful to water the Gardens, where grows an abundance of Fruit, particularly Piſtaches, much bigger, and better taſted than thoſe that comes from the parts near Casbin. But though there be no River, yet there are ſtore of Fountains and Receptacles of Water, which they bring from two places diſtant from the City.

The Edifices, neither publick nor private, are very handſom, but only within-ſide; the Walls are of Marble of ſeveral colours, and the Cieling of Foliage Fret-work, with Inſcriptions in Golden Letters. Without and within the City there are ſix and twenty Moſquees, ſix or ſeven whereof are very magnificent, with ſtately Duomo's, three being cover'd with Lead. The chiefeſt and largeſt of all, was a Chriſtian Church which they call'd Alhha, or Liſten'd unto: which is thought to have been built by St. Helen. In one part of the Suburbs alſo ſtands another Moſquee, which was formerly a Chriſtian Church; in that there is one thing worthy obſervation. In the Wall upon the right ſide of the Gate there is a Stone to be ſeen two or three Foot ſquare, wherein there is the figure of a handſom Chalice, and a Sacrifice over the hollow of it, with a Creſcent that covers the Sacrifice, the two Horns whereof deſcend juſt upon the brims of the mouth of the Chalice. One would think at firſt that thoſe Figures were in Moſaic Work: but it is all Natural, as I have found with ſeveral other Franks, having ſcrap'd the Stone with an Iron Inſtrument, when the Turks were out of the way. Several Conſuls would have bought it, and there has been offer'd for it 2000 Crowns; but the Baſha's of Aleppo would never ſuffer it to be ſold. Half a League from the City lyes a pleaſant Hill, where the Franks are wont to take the Air. On the ſide of that Hill is to be ſeen a Cave or Grotto, where the Turks report that Haly liv'd for ſome few days; and for that there is an ill-ſhap'd figure of a Hand imprinted in the Rock, they farther believe it to be the Hand of Haly.

There are three Colledges in Aleppo, but very few Scholars, though there be Men of Learning that belong to them, who have Salaries to teach Grammar, and their odd kind of Philoſophy, with the Grounds of their Religion, which are the Principal Sciences to which the Turks apply themſelves.

The Streets of the City are all pav'd, except the Bazar's, where the Merchants and Handicraft-Tradeſmen keep their Shops. The chiefeſt Artiſts, and the moſt numerous are Silk and Camlet-Weavers.

In the City and Suburbs there are about forty Inns; and fifty publick Baths, as well for Women as for Men, keeping their turns. 'Tis the chiefeſt Paſtime the Women have to go to the Baths; and they will ſpare all the Week long to carry a Collation, when they go at the Weeks end to make merry among themſelves, in thoſe places of privacy.

The Suburbs of the City are large and well peopl'd, for almoſt all the Chriſtians have their Houſes and Churches there. Of which Chriſtians there are four ſorts in Aleppo, I mean of Eaſtern Chriſtians, that is to to ſay, Greeks, Armenians, Jacobites or Syrians, and Maronites. The Greeks have an Archbiſhop there, and are about fifteen or ſixteen thouſand in number; their Church is dedicated to St. George. The Armenians have a Biſhop, whom they call Vertabet; and are about twelve thouſand in number; their Church is dedicated to the Virgin. The Jacobites being about ten thouſand, have a Biſhop alſo; and their Church is likewiſe dedicated to the Virgin, as is that of the Armenians. The Maronites depend upon the Pope, not being above twelve hundred; their Church being conſecrated to St. Elias. The Roman Catholicks have three Churches, ſerv'd by the Capuchins, Carmelites, and Jeſuits. They reckon that in the Suburbs and City of Aleppo there are about 25000 Souls.

There is a vaſt Trade at Aleppo for Silks and Camlets, but chiefly for Gall-Nuts, and Valanede, which is a ſort of Acorn-ſhell without which the Curriers cannot dreſs their Leather. They have alſo a great Trade for Soap, and for ſeveral other Commodities; the Merchants repairing thither from all parts of the World. For not to ſpeak of the Turks, Arabians, Perſians, Indians, there are ſeveral Engliſh, Italians, French, and Hollanders, every Nation having their Conſul to carry on their Intereſts, and maintain their Priviledges.

Nor does this place happ'n to be ſo great a Mart, through the convenience of the two Rivers of Tigris and Euphrates, as ſome have writt'n; by which they ſay ſuch vaſt quantities of Commodities are tranſported and imported out and into the City. For had that been, I ſhould never have croſs'd the Deſert, coming from Bagdat to Aleppo; nor at another time, going from Aleppo to Balſara. And as for Euphrates, certain it is, that the great number of Mills built upon it, to bring the Water to the neighbouring Grounds, have not only render'd it unnavigable, but made it very dangerous.

I muſt confeſs, that in the year 1638 I ſaw a great part of the Grand Signor's Army, and ſeveral Boats full of Warlike Proviſions fall down the Stream, when he went to beſiege it: but when they were forc'd to take away all the Mills that are upon the River; which was not done without a vaſt trouble and expence. As for Tigris, it is not navigable 'till beyond Babylon down to Balſara, where you may take Water, and be at Balſara in nine days. But the Voyage is very inconvenient, for at every Town which the Arabs have upon the River, you muſt be hal'd, and be forc'd to leave ſome Money behind you. Sometimes indeed the Merchants of Mouſſul and Bagdat, and others that come out of Chaldea to Trade at Balſara, carry their Goods by Water from Bagdat; but in regard the Boats are only to be tow'd by Men, it takes them up a Voyage of ſeventy days. By this you may judge of the time and expence of carrying Goods by Water up the River Euphrates to Bir, where they are to be unlad'n for Aleppo.

In ſhort, if the convenience of Morat-ſou (for ſo the Turks call Euphrates) were to be had, and that Goods might be tranſported by that River, the Merchants would never take that way: for the Arabian Princes, with their People and their Cattel lying all the Summer long upon the Banks of the River, for the ſake of the Water and the Graſs, would make the Merchants pay what Toll they pleas'd themſelves.

I ſaw an Example of this, coming one time from Babylon to Aleppo. In all which Road we met but with one of thoſe Arabian Princes, who lay at Anna: yet he made us pay for every Camel's Load forty Piaſters. And which was worſe, he detain'd us above five Weeks, to the end his Subjects might get more of our Money by ſelling us their Proviſions. The laſt time I paſs'd the Deſert, I met another of theſe Arabian Princes together with his Brother, both young Men: He would not let us go a ſtep farther, unleſs we would exchange two hundred Piaſters in ſpecie for Larins, the Money of the Country; and he forc'd us to take them what ever we could urge to make it appear how much we ſhould loſe by them. And indeed we ſaid as much as we could, for the diſpute laſted two and twenty days to no purpoſe; might overcoming right. By this you may gueſs what the other Arabians would do, who are not a jot more civil; and whether the Merchants would get by taking the Road of Euphrates.

The City is govern'd by a Baſha, who commands all the Country from Alexandretta to Euphrates. His Guard uſually conſiſts of three hundred Men, and ſome years ago he was made a Vizier. There is alſo an Aga or Captain of the Cavalry, as well within the City as without, who commands four hundred Men. There is another Aga who has under him ſeven hundred Janiſaries, who has the charge of the Gates of the City; to whom the Keys are carry'd every Evening, neither has he any dependance upon the Baſha. The Caſtle is alſo under another Commander, ſent immediately from Conſtantinople, who has under him two hundred Musketeers, and likewiſe the charge of the Cannon; of which there are about thirty Pieces; eight great Guns, the reſt of a ſmall ſize. There is alſo another Aga or Captain of the City, who commands three hundred Harquebuzes; beſide a Son-Baſhi, who is a kind of Provoſt of the Merchants, or Captain of the Watch, going the round every Night with his Officers though the City and Suburbs. He alſo puts in Execution the Sentences of the Baſha, upon Criminal Offenders.

In Civils there is a Cadi, who ſits ſole Judge, without any Aſſiſtants, of all Cauſes as well Civil as Criminal; and when he has condemn'd any Man to Death, he ſends him to the Baſha, together with his Accuſation, with whom the Baſha does as he pleaſes. This Cady makes and diſſolves all Contracts of Marriage; all Acts of Sale and Purchaſe paſs in his preſence. He alſo creates the ſworn Maſters of every Trade, who make their inſpection that there may be no deceit in the Work. The Grand Signor's Duties are receiv'd by a Teſterdar, or Treaſurer-General, who has under him ſeveral Receivers in divers places.

In matters of Religion, the Mufti is the Chief, and the Interpreter of the Law, as well in relation to the Ceremonies, as in all Eccleſiaſtical differences. Among theſe Interpreters of the Law there is a Chieke or Doctor, appointed to inſtruct thoſe that are newly converted to Mahumetaniſm, and to teach them the Maxims and Cuſtoms of their Religion.

Three days after I arriv'd at Aleppo, Sultan Amurat made his Entry, going to his Army, which was upon its march to the Siege of Babylon. Now you must take notice, that not far from Aleppo, toward the East, there ſtands a Houſe inhabited by the Dervies, which are a Religious Order among the Turks; though it formerly belong'd to the Monks of St. Baſil, and was a fair Covent. It is ſtill in good repair, the Walls of the Chambers, Halls, and Galleries being all Marble. All the Dervies of this Houſe went half a League from the City, as far as Mount Ozelet, to meet the Grand Signor; and the Superiour, at the Head of the reſt, having made a Speech to his Highneſs, two Dervies came and made their obeiſance in particular. Which being perform'd, from that place to the Caſtle of Aleppo, for half an hours march together; they went juſt before the Grand Signor's Horſe, turning round continually with all their might, 'till they foam'd again at the Mouth, and dazl'd the Eyes of thoſe that beheld them. There are ſome of theſe Dervies that will turn in that manner for two hours together, and glory in that which we account folly.

While the Grand Signor ſtaid at Aleppo, the Baſha of Cayro came thither with a thouſand Janiſaries: And indeed, there never was a ſight of Men more active, or better order'd. Every one of them had Scarlet Breeches that reach'd down to their Ancles, with a Turkie-Robe of Engliſh Cloth, and a Waſt-coat of Calicut painted with ſeveral Colours. The moſt part had Buttons of Gold and Silk; and as well their Girdles as their Scimitars were adorn'd with Silver. The Baſha march'd at the Head of this Magnificent Regiment in a modeſt Garb; but the Harneſs of his Horſe was as rich as his Habit ſeem'd to be careleſs, having ſpar'd for no Coſt to appear before the Grand Signor in a ſtately Equipage.

There is a neceſſity for a Man to ſtay ſome time at Aleppo, as well to diſpoſe of his Affairs, and in expectation 'till the Caravan be ready, unleſs he will venture himſelf alone without a Guide, which I have done more than once. And thus much for Aleppo, next to Conſtantinople and Cayro, the moſt conſiderable City in all the Turkiſh Empire.

CHAP. III.

Of ſeveral Roads in general from Aleppo to Iſpahan, and particularly of the Road through the great Deſert.

THere are five principal Roads from Aleppo to Iſpahan, which being added to thoſe other Roads which I have diſcrib'd through Natolia, make ſeven Roads into Perſia, parting from Conſtantinople, Smyrna, or Aleppo.

The firſt of the five Roads, ſetting out from Aleppo, is upon the left hand, toward the Summer-Eaſt, through Diarbek and Tauris. The ſecond directly Eaſt, by Meſopotamia, through Mouſſul and Amadan. The third upon the right hand, toward the Winter-Eaſt, through Bagdat and Kengavar. The fourth ſomewhat more to the South, croſſing a little Deſert, through Anna, Bagdat, and Balſara. The fifth through the great Deſert, which is an extraordinary Road, never travel'd but once a year, when the Merchants of Turkie and Egypt go to buy Camels. Of theſe Roads I intend to treat diſtinctly, and in ſeveral Chapters. And firſt of the Road through the great Deſert.

The Caravans that go to Balſara this way never ſet out 'till the Rains are fal'n, that they may not want Water in the Deſert: and the Rain ſeldom holds up 'till December. This Caravan, with which I travel'd, ſet out upon Chriſtmas-day, conſiſting of about ſix hundred Camels, and four hundred Men, Maſters and Servants together: the Caravan-Baſhi being only on Horſe-back, and riding before, to find Water, and convenient places to lodge in.

I muſt confeſs I had the convenience my ſelf to ride my own Horſe, which I kept all the while I was at Aleppo. A liberty permitted the Franks only at Conſtantinople, Smyrna, and Aleppo: for at Damas, Seyde, or Cayro, none but the Conſuls are ſuffer'd to keep Horſes: others can only keep or hire Aſſes, which ſtand ready in the publick Streets at all times.

The next day we diſlodg'd by day-break, and by noon we came to a place whe e there were five Wells, about five hundred Paces diſtant one from the other. The Water was excellent, and caus'd us to repleniſh our Boracho's: and about four a Clock in the Afternoon we lay at a place where there was no Water.

The next day near noon we met with two Wells, but the Water was not good, and only the Camels drank of it, there we alſo lodg'd that night.

Having now travel'd two days in the Deſert, I will deſcribe it in a few words. You begin to enter upon it two or three Leagues from Aleppo, where by degrees you meet with nothing but Tents inſtead of Houſes. It ſtretches out to the Winter-Eaſt, all along the Euphrates to Baſſara, and the Shoar of the Gulf of Perſia; and upon the South to the Chain of Mountains that divides it from Arabia Petræa and Arabia the Happy. Theſe Deſerts are almoſt quite thorough nothing but Plains of Sand, which in ſome places lye looſer than in others; and are hardly paſſable till the Rains are but newly fal'n, and have knit the Sands together. 'Tis a rare thing to meet with a Hill or a Valley in theſe Deſerts; if you do, there is as ſurely Water, and as many Buſhes as will ſerve to boyl a little Rice. For thoughout the whole Deſert there is no Wood to be found; and all the Bavins and Charcoal that you can load upon Camels at Aleppo, will not laſt above eight or ten days. Therefore you muſt take notice, that of ſix hundred Camels that paſs through the Deſert, there are ſcarce fifty laden with Merchandize, which is generally courſe Cloth, ſome little Iron Ware, but chiefly black and blew Calicuts, which the Arabians make uſe of without ever whitening them. All the other Camels are only laden with Proviſion, and all little enough; ſo many People being to travel for ſo many days through ſo long a Tract of Ground where there is nothing in the World to ſuſtain Life and Soul together.

For the firſt fifteen days travel we met with Water but once in two days, and ſometimes not above once in three days. The twentieth day after we ſet out from Aleppo, the Caravan lay at a place where there were two Wells, and the Water very good. Every one was glad of the convenience of waſhing his Linnen, and the Caravan-Baſhi made account to have ſtaid there two or three days. But the News that we receiv'd, caus'd us to alter our Reſolutions. For we had no ſooner giv'n order to dreſs our Suppers, when we ſaw a Courier with three Arabs, all mounted upon Dromedaries, who were ſent to carry the news of the Taking of Babylon to to Aleppo and other Cities of the Empire. They ſtop'd at the Wells to let their Beaſts drink; and immediately the Caravan-Baſhi, and the principal perſons of the Caravan made them a ſmall Preſent of dry'd Fruits and Granates. Who thereupon were ſo kind as to tell us, that the Carriage which carried the Baggage belonging to the Grand Signor and his Train being tyr'd, his Officers would be ſure to ſeize upon ours, if they ſhould chance to meet with us: they adviſ'd us moreover not to come near Anna, leſt the Emir ſhould ſtop us.

Upon this news, we departed three hours after midnight; and keeping directly to the South, we put our ſelves into the midſt of the Deſert.

Eight days after we came to lye at a place where were three Wells, and three or four Houſes. We ſtaid there two days to take freſh Water, and we were juſt ſetting forward again, when thirty Horſemen well mounted came from one of the Emirs, to tell the Caravan Baſhi that he muſt ſtop his Caravan. We ſtaid impatiently for him three days; and at length he came, and was preſented by the Caravan-Baſhi with a piece of Satin, half a piece of Scarlet Cloth, and two large Copper Cauldrons. Now although thoſe Cauldrons could not but be very acceptable to an Arabian Prince, who moſt certainly had none ſuch in his Kitchin, yet he did not ſeem contented with his Preſent, and demanded above four hundred Crowns. We conteſted ſeven or eight days to have kept our Money in our Pockets, but in vain, ſo that we were forc'd to rate one another, and to raiſe him his Sum; which being paid, he treated the chief of the Caravan with Pilaw, Honey, and Dates, and when he went away, give them five or ſix Sheep ready boyl'd.

Three days after we had left this Arabian Prince, we met with two Wells near certain old decay'd Brick Buildings. The Water of thoſe Wells was ſo bitter, that the Camels would not drink it: however we fill'd our Boracho's, thinking it it would have left its bitterneſs by being boyl'd: but we found the contrary.

From thoſe two Wells that were good for nothing, we travel'd ſix days before we met with any Water, which with their three days before, made nine; and all that time the Camels never drank, as I have hinted already. At the end of nine days we croſs'd a Hilly Country for three Leagues together, at the feet of three of which Hills there were three ſtanding Pools. The Camels, that ſmelt the Water half a League off, put themſelves upon their great trot, which is their manner of running, and no ſooner came to the Pools but they crouded in all together, which caus'd the Water to be thick and muddy. Thereupon the Caravan-Baſhi reſolv'd to ſtay there two or three days together, 'till the Water was ſetl'd. Here we had alſo the opportunity to boyl us ſome Rice, there being good ſtore of Buſhes that grew about the Lake. But above all, the People were overjoy'd that they had an opportunity to make Bread, which they do after the following manner. Firſt they dig a round Hole in the Ground, half a Foot deep, and two or three in diameter, which they croud full of Buſhes, and then ſet them on fire, covering them with Bricks or Stones 'till they are red hot. In the mean while they prepare their Dough upon a Sofra, or round piece of Copper, which ſerves at other times for Table and Table-Cloth to eat upon. Then they take away the Aſhes and Bricks, and making the Hole very clean, put in their Dough, and covering it again with the hot Bricks or Stones, leave it ſo 'till the morning. The Bread thus bak'd is very well taſted, not being above two Fingers thick, and as big as an ordinary Cake.

While we ſtay'd at the three Ponds, I ſpent my time in killing Hares and Partridge, of which there was very great plenty in thoſe parts. The night before we departed we fill'd our Baracho's again, the Water being very good and clear; though it be nothing but Rain water preſerv'd in thoſe Cavities, which in the Summer are dry again.

But now the Caravan-Baſhi, ſeeing we had travel'd already nine days without finding any Water, reſolv'd to leave the South, and to keep to the Weſt; and if he met not with Water in two or three days, to take to the North-Eaſt, or Winter-Eaſt, in queſt of the River Euphrates.

Two days after we had chang'd our Road, we paſs'd between two little Hills, where we met with a Pond, near to which were two Arabians, each with his Wife and Children, tending a Herd of Goats and a Flock of Sheep. They told us they were going toward Mouſſul, and put us in the beſt Road to find Water; and indeed, from that place to Balſara, we never travel'd three days together, but we met with enough.

Five days after we had left thoſe two Arabians, we diſcover'd a large Palace all of Brick; which ſhew'd ſome probability, that the Country had been formerly ſow'd, and that the Bricks had been burnt with the Straw. To the Palace belong'd three large Courts; in every one of which were fair Buildings, with two Stories of Arches, one upon another. Though this large Pile was ſtanding, yet no body liv'd in it, nor could the Arabians, (very ignorant in Antiquity,) tell us by whom it was built. Before the Gate of the Palace there is a Lake with a Channel, the bottom whereof is brick'd, as alſo the Arch, which is even with the Ground. This the Arabians believe to have been a conveyance of Water from Euphrates: which ſurely could never be, in regard that Euphrates is above twenty Leagues diſtant.

From that Palace we kept to the North-Eaſt, and after we had travel'd five days, we arriv'd at a pitiful Town, formerly call'd Cufa, now Meched-Ali, where Ali, Mahomet's Son in-law lyes buried in a plain Moſquee. Generally there ſtand four Tapers lighted about the Tomb, and certain Lamps burning over-head, which are faſten'd to the Roof.

Though the Perſians have Ali in ſo much veneration, yet they rarely go in Pilgrimage to his Tomb. The reaſon is, becauſe that there being no way to come at it, but through Bagdat, which is under the Dominion of the Great Turk, there is a demand of eight Piaſters from every Pilgrim; which is an Impoſition that no way pleaſes the King of Perſia. Sha-Abas ſcorning that his Subjects ſhould be tributary to the Turks, endeavour'd to divert them from this Pilgrimage by another ſort of Devotion, which he ſet up at Meſhéed, upon the Road from Tauris to Candahar. Nor have the Kings his Succeſſors been leſs unwilling to give their Subjects leave to viſit their Prophet Ali, taking it for an Affront to pay Tribute to the Grand Signor.

Which

Which is the reaſon that this Moſquee is no more enrich'd by the Perſians. For beſides the Lamps and Tapers that burn continually, there are only two Moullah's that read the Alcoran according to cuſtom. In this Town there are only three or four bad Wells of brackiſh Water, and a dry Chanel, which they ſay Sha-Abas made to bring the Water of Euphrates to the Town for the benefit of the Pilgrims. As for Food, we met with nothing but Dates, Grapes, and Almonds, which the People ſold at a dear rate. When any Pilgrims come thither, which is very rare, and that they want Victuals, the Sheck cauſes a diſtribution to be made among them of Rice boyl'd with Water and Salt, and a little Butter pour'd atop. For there is no Paſturage for Cattel, and by conſequence there can be no ſtore of Food.

Two days journey from Ali's Town, by nine of the Clock in the morning we met two young Arabian Lords, that took upon them the name of Sultans. They were two Brothers, one of the age of ſeventeen years, the other of thirteen: and as we pitch'd our Tents, they pitch'd theirs cloſe by us; which were of a very fine Scarlet Cloth; and among the reſt there was one cover'd with Purple Velvet, lac'd with a rich Galoon-lace. So ſoon as they were ſettl'd in their Tents, the Caravan-Baſhi and I went to wait upon them; who underſtanding that there were Franks in the Caravan, ask'd me whether I had any Curioſities to ſell them; but when I made them anſwer that I had nothing worthy their Purchaſe, they would not believe me, and therefore commanded the Caravan Baſhi to fetch my Trunks, that they might be open'd in their preſence. While the were opening, one of the chief perſons about thoſe Princes would not ſuffer any of the reſt of the Arabs to come near, for though moſt of the Arabs are great Thieves, yet ſome of them are perſons of great integrity. Now I had in my company a young Painter, who had in his Cheſt ſeveral engrav'd Cuts, part Landskips, part Figures, together with the Pictures of certain Courtiſans drawn to the Waſt. The young Lords made choiſe only of twenty of thoſe Courtiſans, which I would have preſented to them, but they gave me to underſtand, that they knew how to pay for what they had, and eſpecially the youngeſt, who ſeem'd to be very generous; him I pleas'd in an extraordinary manner; for his Teeth being very foul, I order'd a Chirurgeon that I carry'd along with me at the ſame time to clean them, which he did to the great ſatisfaction of the young Prince. Thereupon they ſent me and my Train, of their beſt Victuals they had. The Caravan Baſhi preſented them with half a piece of Scarlet, and two pieces of Tiſſue of Gold and Silver. When we were ready to go, the young Sultan gave me twelve Ducats for my Pictures, and ſent the Caravan-Baſhi and my ſelf two Frails of the beſt Dates that we had met with ſince we left Aleppo.

About midnight the Princes diſlodg'd, and took to the North toward Euphrates. We ſet forward after them, driving Northward toward the ſame River. After we had travel'd four days we met one of the moſt potent Emirs of Arabia, who coming from the South, and going Northward, was to croſs the Road that we kept. He was about fifty years of age, well made, and of a comely preſence. He had not then above two thouſand Horſe, of thirty thouſand which we heard had paſs'd by ſome days before. Behind the two thouſand Horſe were fifty Camels that carry'd his Women; their Cajavas being cover'd with Scarlet-cloth fring'd with Silk. In the midſt of theſe Camels there were ſix encompaſs'd with Eunuchs, the Fringes of the Cajavas being Silk, Silver, and Gold. The Arabians do not ſeem to be jealous of their Wives, as in Turkie and other places; for they led their Camels by our Caravan, never requiring us to retire, as is the cuſtom in other places. They lodg'd a quarter of a League off, where we thought to have pitch'd, for the conveniency of two or three Ponds, which they depriv'd us of. This Arabian Prince had a great number of lovely Horſes richly harneſs'd: others he had that were neither ſadl'd nor bridl'd, yet the Riders would turn them with a Wand which way they pleas'd, and upon a full gallop would ſtop 'em, by only holding them by the Hair. He had ſome Horſes of an exceſſive price; and this is to be obſerv'd, that they are never ſhod.

The Caravan-Baſhi believing he could not eſcape ſcot-free from ſo powerful a Prince, among the Merchants of the Caravans found out a rich Saddle, with Bridle and Stirrups, which were all ſet out and garniſh'd with maſſy Silver, with an embroider'd embroider'd Quiver full of Arrows, together with a Buckler, the whole coming to about eleven or twelve hundred Livers; and adding to these of his own a piece of Scarlet, four pieces of Tissue of Gold and Silk, and six pieces of Tissue of Silver and Silk, made a Present of all together to the Emir. But he refus'd all, demanding only two hundred thousand Piasters for Larins: which exchange being no way for the Merchants profit, rais'd a great dispute. But at length, considering that it was in his power to stop and starve us there, we only endeavour'd a Composition; which was obtain'd. Thereupon he took the Present, which perhaps he would not else have done. For two days that we staid to weigh the Money, he sent Provisions to the chief of the Caravan; and at our departure, he sent us twelve Frails of Dates, and four young Camels that might be worth about forty Crowns a-piece.

Two days after we met a Schek, who among the Arabians is one of the chief of the Law. He was going to Mecca, cross some part of Arabia the Happy, with a Train of ten or twelve Camels. He staid all night with us, and one of his Servants having been dangerously wounded about two days before with a Musket-bullet, my Chirurgeon dress't him, and gave him Salve and Tents, for which he was extreamly thankful. He sent me to Supper a great Dish of Pilaw, and the next day a whole Sheep. The Caravan-Bashi likewise presented him with two Ells of Scarlet.

The next we met with nothing worth observation, but the day following we met another Emir, of about Five and Twenty years of age, who came from Euphrates, and was travelling into the Happy Arabia. He had with him about five hundred Horse, and three hundred Camels that carry'd his women. He presently sent to know what Caravan it was, and understanding that it consisted of many Franks, among whom their was a Chirurgeon: He sent again to desire the Caravan Bashi to follow with the Caravan, to the place where he intended to pitch his Tents, which was not far out of the way. We did not think to have gone so far that day, but he led us to the best water in all the Desert. The Princes Tent being set up, he sent for my Chirurgeon, with whom I went along to know what his pleasure was. He had upon his left Arm a Tetter, with a most filthy Scab as broad as a Crown piece; and this went and came at certain times in the year. He presently ask'd the Chirurgeon whether he could cure him? to whom the Chirurgeon made answer, that the cure was not impossible, provided he knew where to get such remedies as were convenient: For had he said, he could have absolutely cur'd him, the Emir would have carry'd him away with him, without any farther Ceremony. Thereupon he would have giv'n the Chirurgeon five hundred Crowns to have bought Medicines. But I made answer, that the cure would not cost so much, and that if the Chirurgeon could meet with proper Drugs, I would lay out the Money my self. The Emir content with that answer, sent one of his chief People to Balsara, to come back with the Chirurgeon, when he had bought his Medicines. He himself staid there three days in expectation of him; but after we had pretended to seek for what we wanted, up and down the Town (for we enquir'd for such things as we knew were not to be had) we sent him back word that we could not find what we took'd for, and desir'd his excuse, in regard the attendance of the Chirurgeon would be of no use, where he had not proper remedies; which was the only way we could think of, to get cleverly rid of him.

The next days Journey after we had left the Arabian Prince, was through a Country altogether uninhabited; but the day following, which was the sixty-fifth and last day of our being in the Desert, we met after some time, with the ruines of some houses on both sides the way; which made us conjecture, that some great City had stood formerly in that place.

At length we came to Balsara, which I shall describe in another place.

While I stay'd at Balsara, which was about three weeks, an Ambassador from the Great Mogul arriv'd there, who from Constantinople went to Bagdat to congratulate the Grand Signor for the Conquest of that City, which he had taken in so short a time. The Emperour presented him with three stately Horses, and a little Watch, the Case whereof was set with Diamonds and Rubies. But the Ambassador not knowing what belong'd to that little Engin, winding it up the wrong way, broke the string. Coming to Balsara he sent to the Carmalites to desire them to mend his Watch; for he fear'd the loss of his head, should he return to his Master Maſter, and not ſhew him the Watch entire. It was at their Houſe that I then lay; and therefore not knowing what to do with it, they deſir'd me to ſhew my skill: Thereupon I put on a new ſtring. But the Ambaſſador, when he underſtood to whom he was beholding, though it were but a trifle, profer'd me all the ſervice and kindneſs imaginable. Thereupon the Carmelites and Auguſtin Fryars deſir'd me to requeſt of the Ambaſſador in their behalf, that he would obtain the Great Turks protection for them, in caſe he took Balſara, that their Houſes and Churches might be preſerv'd; which I did, and obtain'd by his means full protection from the Grand Viſier. But they had no need of it, for the Turks did not make any attempt upon Balſara, hearing that the Perſians were advancing; beſides that the rainy ſeaſon was at hand, which will not permit an Army to keep the Field: So that had Bagdat held out eight days longer, the Grand Signor would have been conſtrain'd to have rais'd the Siege.

Having ſpoken of the Arabian Horſes, I muſt needs ſay, that there are ſome that are valu'd at a very high rate. The Mogul's Ambaſſador gave for ſome three, four, and ſix thouſand Crowns, and for another he offer'd eight thouſand Crowns, but the Horſe would not be ſold under ten, and ſo he left it. When he was got home into the Indies, and had preſented the Mogul thoſe Horſes which he had carry'd along with him, being very lovely Creatures; he told his Maſter how he had offer'd eight thouſand Crowns for a Horſe more beautiful than any of them; but becauſe the Owner would not let him go under ten, he left him. The King incens'd that his Ambaſſador has ſtood for ſo ſmall a Sum, when it was for one of the greateſt Monarchs in the World, upbraided the poorneſs of his Spirit, and baniſh'd him for ever from his preſence, into a Province far diſtant from the Court. Thereupon the King wrote to the Engliſh to buy him the Horſe, who accordingly did ſo, and brought him to Surat, where the Governour repaid them their Money. But the Horſe dy'd at Brampour.

Nor muſt I forget, that while I was at Balſara, twice there flew by ſuch a prodigious number of Locuſts that a far-off they appear'd like a Cloud, and darkn'd the Air. They paſs by Balſara four or five times in the year, the Wind carrying them into the Deſert, where they alight, and moſt certainly dye. Should they not be thus wind-driv'n, there could nothing live upon the Earth in ſome parts of Chaldea. They ſwarm all along the Perſian Gulf, and when the Veſſels come to Ormus at the time of the year, there are little Shops where people ſell Locuſts fry'd in Butter to thoſe that love that ſort of Diet. Once I had the curioſity to open the Belly of a Locuſt ſix Inches long, and found therein ſeventeen little ones that ſtirr'd; whence it is eaſie to gueſs how thoſe Inſects come to be ſo numerous, eſpecially in hot Countries.

There are ſeveral Barks that go from Ormus to furniſh both ſides of the Perſian Gulf, where the people eat neither Bread nor Rice. I agreed with the Maſter of one of theſe Barks, and made my agreement that the Bark ſhould not be above half laden; for generally they lade them too deep, and in foul weather they are forc'd to throw half the Freight over-board, to ſave the reſt.

From Balſara to the mouth of the River Euphrates, it is reck'nd to be twenty Leagues of Freſh-water. We ſtaid ſeven whole days for a Wind, which proving favourable, we came to Brander-ric, in forty-eight hours. This is the place where you muſt land, if you intend for Perſia, unleſs you are bound for Ormus. Brander-ric conſiſts only of five or ſix little Fiſhers Hutts; which Hutts are only Hurdles ſet one againſt another, and cover'd over, where they and their Families live. To the ſame place come Aſſes lad'n with Dates, which I was forc'd to hire for want of Horſes.

We were ſix days upon the Road from thence to Cazerom. This is a Mountainous Country, where there is Wood enough; but you muſt lodge in the Fields, for there are no Inns upon the Road. The way is pleaſant in ſome places, along the Banks of ſeveral Rivulets, and through verdant Groves ſtor'd with great quantities of Turtles. We kill'd a good many; which we eat, part with Pilaw, inſtead of Henns; ſome we roſted, making Sticks to ſerve for Spits.

Cazerom is a little City ill built, where there is but one Inn, and that none of the moſt inviting to Strangers neither.

From Cazerom to Schiras it is five days journey. The Road lyes over very craggy Mountains, which had been impaſſable, but for the Liberality of Ali Couli-Kan, Governour of Schiras. He made Ways where there were none before, and joyn'd Mountains together by Bridges, in Countries which otherwiſe had been inacceſſible. In the midſt of the Mountains is a wide gap or diſcontinuance, from whence a Plain extends it ſelf of about twenty Leagues in circuit. It is inhabited by Jews only, who are Silk-Weavers. In theſe Mountains you met with Tents, where the Chaldeans ſojourn, that come for cool Air and Paſturage in the Summer.

Coming to Schiras, I took Horſe there for Iſpahan, which I arriv'd in nine days. The Country over which you travel, between theſe two Cities, is part Plains, part Mountains; part wild, and part manur'd. Three days journey from Schiras you paſs the Mountain of Mayen, a little City where there is nothing worthy obſervation. Two days journey from thence you enter upon the Plains of the Province of Cuſcuzar, where the King of Perſia keeps his Race-Horſes. The next day I arriv'd at Yeſdecas, where the beſt Bread in Perſia is made. This is a little City upon a Rock, wherein there is a very fair Inn: at the foot whereof runs a little River that glides into the Valley, wherein grows that excellent Corn which is utter'd in Bread from that City.

In three days I went from Yeſdecas to Iſpahan. This was the firſt Road from Aleppo to Iſpahan.

CHAP. IV.

Of the Road from Aleppo to Iſpahan, through Meſopotamia and Aſſyria, which I travell'd in my third Voyage to the Indies.

I Departed from Paris in my third Voyage to the Indies upon the ſixth of December 1643, and went to Ligorn, where I found the Dutch Fleet ready to ſet Sail for the Levant. The Veſſel wherein I embark'd ſeeming rather a Man-of-War than a Merchant-Man. We paſs'd through the Chanel of Meſſina, and lay there at an Anchor four days before the City. From thence paſſing by the Morea, we enter'd into the Archipelago, where the Fleet parted, according as every Ship was bound. Our Ship ſayl'd directly for the Port of Alexandretta, but though the Wind were favourable, we were ſtop'd for ſome time by a Pirate that met with us off the Eaſtern Point of Candy. We endeavour'd to have got clear of him; but the Pirate gaining upon us, we made ready. Thereupon the Pirate gave us three Broad-ſides, that went over the Ship without doing us any harm: which we anſwer'd by as many from our Ship, the firſt whereof brought his Fore-maſt by the Board; and the third Shot went through the Fore-caſtle and kill'd him ſome Men, as far as we could diſcern. At that very inſtant one of our Mariners cry'd out from the Top-maſt-head, A Sail from the South. Thereupon the Pirate left us, and made Sail after her: and we, glad of ſuch an eſcape, purſu'd our Voyage to Alexandretta, where we happily arriv'd; from whence I took Horſe for Aleppo, as I have already deſcrib'd.

The ſixth of March I departed from Aleppo in the company of two Capuchin Friars, Father Raphael and Father Yves, and the Venetian whoſe name was Dominico de Sanctis.

From Aleppo to Bir, where you croſs the Euphrates, it is four days journey for the Horſe-Caravan. The Country is well wooded, and well manur'd.

The ſeventh of March the great Rains that fell hinder'd us from getting to the uſual Stage, ſo that we could not gain Telbechar, another Town, where there is no Inn: which conſtrain'd us to ſtop a League on this ſide, and to go to a Cave that was able to contain three hundred Horſe. This is a Cave where the Bedouins or Feeders of Cattel thereabouts oft retire, who live after the manner of the Arabs, either in Rocks or in poor Hutts. The Cave has been hollow'd from time to time, there being ſeveral Niches in it like little Chambers. Our Caravan-Baſhi fearing ſome Ambuſcade, rode thither before to view the place, but finding it empty and free, we reſted there that night, and the next night came to lye at Mezara, which is only a ſmall Village without an Inn: Neither was there any thing remarkable upon that Road. Only that near the Cave, in the Mountain, there is very good Water: And formerly upon the Mountain ſtood a Caſtle, of which ſome ruines are ſtill remaining. From the top of the Mountain there is a fair Proſpect as far as you can ſee, over very fair Plains on every ſide, and in ſeveral places very good Land, water'd by divers Channels which are brought from the River Euphrates. All the Rivolets alſo that you croſs from Aleppo to Bir come from the ſame River.

The fourth day after we parted from Aleppo, being the ninth of March, we came to the banks of Euphrates. Bir is on the other ſide of the River; and becauſe that ſometimes the Goods cannot be unladen all in a day; their is a fair and large Inn, to defend the Merchants from the Bedoüins, which would elſe diſturb and rob them, were not they and their Goods in that manner ſecur'd.

You croſs the Euphrates in large Ferry Boats, and as ſoon as you are got over the other ſide of the River, the Cuſtomer and his Officers comes and tells the Bales, and writes down the names of the Merchants to whom they belong. The Caravan does not lye in the Town, which is built like an Amphitheatre upon the brow of a very craggy Mountain, but paſſes forward over a ſcurvy Road to an Inn upon the top of the Mountain. Near the Inn there are ſeveral Chambers cut out of the Rock, where they that cannot get room in the Inn are forc'd to lye. That Evening the Cuſtom-Officer comes to receive his duties, being two Piaſters upon every load of Goods, whether upon Horſe or Mule, though the Mules carry more than the Horſes; and half a Piaſter for every Beaſt that carries Proviſions. But for Saddle Horſes or Mules there is nothing demanded.

The Bir, or Berygeon, as the Natives call it, is a large City for an Eaſtern City, ſituated upon the brow of a Hill. Below upon the River ſtands a Caſtle that declares its Antiquity; it is half as long as the City, but narrow, and without any other Fortification, ſaving only a Tower that ſcours the River, in which there are eight or nine pitiful Culverins. In the higheſt part of the Town ſtands another Caſtle where the Governour reſides, who is an Aga, whom ſome call a Baſha, having under him two hundred Janiſaries, and four hundred Spahi's. The City is ill built, as are the moſt part of the Cities of Turkie: But there are an extraordinary plenty of all things, excellent Bread, good Wine, and great ſtore of the beſt ſort of Fiſh.

The tenth day after we had travel'd elev'n hours in the firſt Lands of Meſopotamia, that lye between the two Rivers Euphrates and Tigre, which at preſent they call Diarbek, we came in the evening to Sharmley. This is a very good Town, with a fair Inn, and Baths round about it. About twice Muſquet-Shot from thence, ſtands a Mountain alone by it ſelf, like Montmartre near Paris: Round about it are Plains, and at the top of it ſtands a Fortreſs, with a Garriſon of two hundred Spahi's, by reaſon that the Arabs ſometimes croſs Euphrates, and make incurſions upon that ſide. In the year 1631, the Grand Viſier returning from Bagdat, where he had loſt the greateſt part of the Grand Signor's Army, not being able to take the City; fearing the loſs of his head if he return'd to Conſtantinople, and knowing himſelf to be in great eſteem among the Souldiers, reſolv'd to quarter himſelf upon this Mountain, and to erect a Fortreſs to ſecure himſelf from the tempeſt that threaten'd him. No doubt but if he could have brought about his deſign, he might have made himſelf Maſter of all Meſopotamia, and would have put the Grand Signor to a great deal of trouble. For if you intend for Aleppo, whether it be from Tauris, Moſſul, or Bagdat, unleſs you travel thorough the Deſert, you muſt paſs through Sharmley, under the command of this Fortreſs, for Proviſion and Waters ſake. The work was gone ſo far forward, that there was a good defence rais'd, and the Viſier had already enclos'd all the Mountain together with the Inn, with a Wall almoſt twenty foot thick, and three fathom high, when he was ſtrangl'd by thoſe in whom he moſt confided, the Grand Signor having gain'd them either by threats or by rewards.

The eleventh, after a Journey of ten hours we came to Ourfa, where the Caravan uſually ſtays eight or ten days; for here it is that they live that hire the Horſes and the Mules, who have always ſome buſineſs in this place. We lay at an Inn three or four hundred paces distant from the City toward the North. When the Inn is full, the rest retire into the Grotto's which are near at hand, and are very good quarters. Here the Toll-gatherer presently comes and counts the Bales without op'ning them. They that carry any Sacks must pay for half a Load; if not, he op'ns the Sack to see if there be any Merchandise therein, for then the Merchant must pay the whole duty.

Ourfa is the Capital City of Mesopotamia, built as they say, in the same place where Abraham liv'd, and where stood the ancient Edessa, where the people of the Country report, that King Abagarus generally kept his Court. There are still to be seen the ruines of a Castle; from whence they add, that the same King sent to CHRIST for his Picture, and offer'd him his Kingdom and his people to defend him against the Jews, whom he understood to be his Enemies. The Chronicles of the Armenians report, that Abagarus was their Country-man, and that in his Reign they began to be Christians, and to be Baptiz'd by the hands of an Apostle, whom CHRIST sent to that Prince after his Resurrection. Neither is this Castle yet so far ruin'd, but that there is still to be seen a spacious Hall, and three or four handsom Rooms with some relicks of Mosaick work. I was curious to see what ever was remarkable in this City. And first they led me to a large Fountain which resembles a Fish-pond, the Spring whereof is under the Foundations of the principal Mosquee, which was built in honour of Abraham. The Christians of the Country say, that it was in that place where he pray'd, before he went about to Sacrifice his Son Isaac, and that two Springs of Water arose from the two places where he rested his knees, which now feed the large Fountain I have made mention of. It is pav'd with Free-stone, and so full of Fish, that if you throw them in a little Bread, they will follow you from place to place as you walk by the side of the Pond. There is no medling with them; for the Turks have a great veneration for those Fish, which they call Abraham's Fish. Besides that, the place about the Fountain where the water wid'ns it self to water all the City, is cover'd with very fair Carpets, for about twenty paces in bredth. This Fountain at length falls into a little River that runs by the Walls. As for the Grotto where the two Springs rise, there is no going into it before you have pull'd off your Shooes, and it is a great favour for a Christian to see it; such a favour as cost me six Piasters. I also saw the Church, under the portal whereof, they say, St. Alexis liv'd seventeen years a private life. It stands in the middle of a Church-yard, in the highest part of the Town, in the possession of the Armenians. But their principal Church is about a quarter of an hours walking from the City, built by St. Ephren, who is there buried. The Monastery stands yet entire, enclos'd with fair Walls. In the Church I saw a large Bible in Armenian Characters. The Sepulchre of St. Ephren is in a Cave at the foot of the Mountain, to which there also belongs a Chappel, where they keep three or four Lamps continually burning. There are other Grotto's up and down the Mountain, where are to be seen very ancient Sepulchers of the Christians. The City of Ourfa is seated in a good soil, very well manur'd, which extends it self out of sight toward the East. There are several pleasant Gardens near the walls, water'd by little Channels brought thither by Art. The soil produces good Wine, so that a man may live as well at Ourfa, as in any part of Turkie. While I stay'd there, I kill'd abundance of Feldfares in those Gardens; and indeed there is great store of wild Fowl all the Country over. The Walls of the City are of Freestone, with Battlements and Towers; but within, the houses are small, ill built, and ruinous: And there are several void spaces in the City, which makes Ourfa to look rather like a Desert than a Metropolis. The City is Govern'd by a Basha, who has under him a hundred and fifty Janisaries, and six hundred Spahi's, standing more in need of Cavalry than Infantry, by reason of the Incursions of the Arabians, especially in harvest time. In short, Ourfa is the place where they dress such great quantities of Cordovan Skins, by reason of the waters particular to the Country, which give them that peculiar beauty. The Yellow Skins are dress't at Ourfa, the Blew at Tocat, and the Red at Diarbequir.

The twentieth of March, we set out of Ourfa, and after a Journey of six hours, we lay at a pittiful Village where the Inn was fal'n all to decay. There is a Fountain of excellent water by it, which is all the convenience of the place, for there is no Provision to be had.

The

The twenty-firſt we travel'd nine hours, and came to lye near ſeveral Caverns which are very deep; at the entry whereof there are little Rooms, which are ſuppos'd to be the places where the People of the Country liv'd that fed their Cattel thereabouts. There is alſo Rain-Water to be had in ſome of the Concavities of the Rock. Half this days journey you muſt paſs over Rocks, where it is almoſt impoſſible, and very dangerous to keep your Horſes back.

The twenty ſecond, having travel'd elev'n hours, we lodg'd near a Cavern, having forded a River that runs at the foot of it. There are two great Grotto's on each ſide, where Travellers take up their Quarters, and whither the Natives of the Country bring Proviſions both for Horſe and Man. The Toll-gatherers, coming from a Fort about three Leagues diſtant from theſe Caverns, here exact two Piaſters and a half for every Horſe and Mules Load; and ſearch your Sacks, to ſee if there be no Merchantable Goods therein. About half the way of this days journey you meet with a City quite deſerted by the Inhabitants; and about an hours march after that, with Tombs of Stone, in the middle whereof ſtands a Croſs, with Armenian Characters.

The twenty-third we travel'd elev'n hours, and lay at Dadacardin. This appears to have been a great Town, but is all ruin'd: nor is there any thing remaining but a long Stone ridge very well built, under which runs a River that is very broad when it overflows. The People of the Country have no other Habitations than the Hollows of Rocks; yet they bring to the Travellers Hens, Butter, Cheeſe, and other Proviſions; which they ſell very cheap.

The twenty-fourth we travel'd nine hours, and lay at a place call'd Cara, built upon a Hill. The Caravan lay at the Inn; but the two Capuchins and I lay at a private Chriſtian's Houſe, who carry'd us to the Church, where was then the Vertabet or Biſhop of Merdin. It was a pitiful poor Church, where they had nothing but two Planks ſupported with four Sticks inſtead of an Altar. They dare not leave any Furniture in it, but as ſoon as the Prieſt has ſaid Service, he muſt have a care to take away every thing, as well the Planks as the Covering of the Altar, which was only a Painted Cloth: For the Turks that travel that way, if it be foul weather, will break open the Door, put their Horſes there, burn the Altar, and take away whatever they find.

In the Village where we lay, there was a Pond, the ſides whereof were ſurrounded with fair Free-ſtones, which were fetch'd from the Chriſtian Churches, and the Tombs of the Chriſtians thereabouts. Among the reſt, there was one very large Stone, with an Epitaph upon it in large Latin Letters; whereby we knew it to be the Tomb-ſtone of a Norman Gentleman, who had been a Captain of Foot. The Biſhop inform'd us, that it is recorded in the Armenian Stories, that the French were a long time in this Country, at what time the Chriſtians were Maſters of Syria. This Country is all a large Plain, about twenty Leagues in length; which might be well manur'd, and make the Inhabitants rich, did not the Tyranny of the Turks, and the Incurſions of the Arabs, reduce them to the utmoſt degree of Poverty.

The twenty-fifth, after we had travel'd eight hours, we lay at a Village call'd Couſaſar, where there was no Inn. There were formerly three great Monaſteries, a quarter of a League one from the other. The Turks have ruin'd two, all but the Steeples of the Churches that belong'd to them. The third, which ſtands all entire, and is the faireſt Pile of Building, ſerves for a Moſquee. They have made Shops round about the Cloyſters, in the middle of which is a fair Spring of Water.

The twenty ſeventh we lay ſtill at Couſaſar, being the place where you muſt pay the Cuſtoms of Diarbequir, which is not above two days journey off, amounting to two Piaſters and a fourth part, for every Load of Merchants Goods.

Merdin is not above two Leagues from Couſaſar. This is a little City ſeated upon a Mountain, with good Walls, and a fair Fountain repleniſh'd from the Caſtle; which ſtands upon the North-ſide, in a place yet higher, that commands the City; where there lives a Baſha, who has under him two hundred Spahi's, and four hundred Janizaries. Merdin is the place where was born the Lady Maani Gioerida, the firſt Wife of Pietro de la Valle, ſo well known for his famous Travels.

As for Couſaſar, which is a large Village, it is inhabited for the moſt part by Armenian Chriſtians and Neſtorians. The Armenians perform Divine Service in their own Language; the Neſtorians in the Chaldaic. The latter ſhew'd me two Bibles in a large Volume, in the ſame Language, writt'n in Vellum, all the Capital Letters being in Gold and Azure. They ſeem'd to be very old; and one of their Prieſts told me, that it is 937 years ago ſince one of them was writt'n; the other not above 374 ſince. When Service is done, they put them in a Cheſt, and hide them under Ground. I would have giv'n 200 Piaſters for the oldeſt, but they durſt not ſell it, in regard it belong'd to the Church, and was not at their diſpoſal.

The twenty-ſeventh, after we had travel'd nine hours, we arriv'd at Karaſara, which had been formerly a great Town, and no doubt inhabited by Chriſtians; as appears by ſeven or eight Churches half ruin'd, though the Steeples are little the worſe. They ſtand at a good diſtance one from the other; and upon the North-ſide of one of thoſe Churches there is a Gallery, at the end whereof, through a little Door you deſcend about a hundred Steps, every Step being ten Inches thick. When you come under the Church, you meet with a larger and bigger Vault, ſupported with Pillars. The Building is ſo contriv'd, that there is more light below than in that above; but of late years the Earth has ſtop'd up ſeveral Windows. The great Altar is in the Rock; on the right ſide whereof is a Room, which receives the light from ſeveral Windows contriv'd in the Rock. Over the Gate of the Church was a great Free-ſtone, wherein were certain Letters that I could not read. On the North-ſide of the ſame Church under Ground are to be ſeen two great Ciſterns, each four hundred and fifty Paces long; with two great Arches, ſuſtain'd with ſeveral Pillars. Every year they fill them with the Water that falls from the next Mountain, and makes a kind of a River. A quarter of a Leagne from the Church, you deſcend the Mountain for above a hundred Paces together among the Rocks, on each ſide whereof are Rooms cut out of the Rock. Upon every Door there is a Croſs; and in every Room as it were a Bench, and a Table, with a little place about the length of a Man, like a Bedſted, all cut out of the Rock. At the bottom of the Rock is a Hall, round about the Wall whereof is a Bench to ſit on. The Roof is all plain, without any Arch; in the middle whereof there is a Hole to the top of the Mountain: but in regard it gives no light, 'tis very probable 'twas only made to let out the Smoak when they dreſt their Meat; or elſe to let in the freſh Air, as I have ſeen in many Villages upon the Perſian Gulf. Upon the higheſt of thoſe Mountains ſtands a paltry Village, where they buy their Victuals. But before the Caravan arrives, certain Merchants ride before to inform themſelves from the Herdſmen, whether they know of any Thieves in the Grotto's, that often hide themſelves there in expectation of Prey.

In the year 1638, Sultan Amurat going to beſiege Babylon, march'd this very way, as well to ſee theſe Ruines, as to give order for the demoliſhing a Fort that ſtood not above two Leagues off of Karaſera, which the Thieves of the Country made their place of retreat. He alſo at the ſame time caus'd the Road to be clear'd for four days journey, by ord'ring the Stones to be pickt up and laid in heaps, all along the Road. He alſo built a Bridge over the River. And indeed, that March of the Grand Signor was very advantageous to all Travellers that paſs this way.

The twenty-eight we travel'd eight hours, and came to Nesbin, anciently Niſibis. Two or three hours travel on this ſide, near the Road, is a kind of Hermitage, being a ſmall Room enclos'd with Walls, the Door whereof is ſo low, that a Man muſt creep upon his Belly to get in. Three or four Jews went and perform'd their Devotions at this Hermitage, believing it to be the place where the Prophet Eliſha was buried.

The Country from Couſaſar to Nesbin is a large Plain, where for the firſt days journey you ſhall ſee no other green Herb upon the Ground but only Pimpernel; the Roots whereof are ſo large, that there are ſome a Foot and a half in diameter. The next day, the Fields are cover'd with a large thick Leaf, the Root whereof is bulbous, and as big as an Egg. There are alſo great ſtore of yellow, red, and violet Flowers, Tulips of ſeveral colours, Emonies, and ſingle Daffadillies. But in general Meſopotamia is a very barren Country, and there are very few places that can be better'd by Art or Induſtry.

Nesbin is only the Shadow of the ancient Niſibis, being now only a large Village; the Inhabitants whereof are Chriſtians, both Armenians and Neſtorians. Our Caravan lodg'd a little beyond, in a Church-yard adjoyning to one of the Armenian Churches. The next day, hearing people ſing, I went to the Church with the two

Capuchins,

Capuchins, where I ſaw an Armenian Biſhop, with his Miter, and a wooden Croſier, accompany'd with ſeveral Prieſts and a good Congregation. When Service was done, after ſome few Compliments between us, he led us down under the Church into a Chapel, where he ſhew'd us the Sepulcher of St. James Biſhop of Niſibis. In the Church-yard is a Stone about a Foot thick, and ſix high; upon which were laid ſeveral Candles of Wax and Tallow, which the Poor offer in their Neceſſities, but eſpecially in their Sickneſſes. They believe that Stone to have been the Pedeſtal for the Statue of ſome Saint, which the Turks have defac'd: ſo that they give the ſame Honour to the Pedeſtal, as they would have giv'n to the Statue. There are alſo ſome Roman Characters to be ſeen, but half worn out, and ſpaces brok'n off in ſome parts: ſo that I could not learn, in Honour of whom that Statue was erected. Half a League from Nisbin runs a River, which you croſs over a Stone-Bridge. In the way to the River are ſeveral pieces of Wall, with an Arch, which made me conjecture, that formerly the City extended as far as the River.

Twice Musket-ſhot from the River you meet with a Stone half buried, upon which are written certain Latin Words; whereby it appears that it was the Tomb-ſtone of the General of an Army that was a French-man: but I could not read his Name, which time had defac'd. The ſame Biſhop inform'd us, that formerly the Moors having beſieg'd City, there came ſuch a prodigious company of ſtrange Flyes, and did ſo torment both Men and Horſes, that they were forc'd to ſtrange the Siege. You muſt pay the ſame Toll at Nisbin as in other places, that is, two Piaſters and a half for every Mule or Horſes Load. We lay there three days together, to furniſh our ſelves with Proviſions 'till we came to Mouſſul, which is five days journey from Nisbin; the Country between being altogether deſert and uninhabited. There is no Water to be found but in two places, and that not very good neither; near to which you ſhall ſee ſome few Herdſmen grazing their Cattel.

The firſt of April we departed from Nisbin; and after we had travel'd eleven hours, we lay near to a River, whither certain Shepherds brought us Hens to ſell.

The ſecond we travel'd ten hours, and lay at a paltry Town, where we met with nothing to eat.

The third we travel'd thirteen hours, and lodg'd by a pitiful Fountain, the Water whereof was hardly good enough for our Horſes.

The fourth we travel'd ten hours, and came to lodge by the Bank of a little River, near to which appear'd the Ruines of a Bridge and a Caſtle.

The fifth we travel'd eleven hours, to reach Mouſſul, which is not far from the ancient Niniveh.

Mouſſul is a City that makes a great ſhew without, the Walls being of Free-ſtone; but within it is almoſt all, ruin'd having only two blind Market-places, with a little Caſtle upon the Tigris, where the Baſha lives. In a word, there is nothing worth a Man's ſight in Mouſſul, the place being only conſiderable for the great concourſe of Merchants; eſpecially the Arabians and Curds, which are the Inhabitants of the ancient Aſſyria, now call'd Curdiſtan, where there grows great plenty of Galls, and for which there is a great Trade. There are in it four ſorts of Chriſtians, Greeks, Armenians, Neſtorians, and Maronites. The Capuchins had a pretty Dwelling upon the Tigris; but the Baſha laying a Fine upon them, becauſe they went about a little to enlarge it, they were forc'd to quit it. The City is govern'd by a Baſha, that has under him, part Janizaries, part Spahi's, about three thouſand Men.

There are only two ſcurvy Inns in Mouſſul, which being full when we came, I caus'd my Tent to be ſet up at the Meydan, or great Market-place.

Now to ſay ſomething in general of the difference of the two Rivers, Tigris and Euphrates, in reference to their Courſe and Waters: I obſerv'd that the Water of Euphrates appear'd ſomewhat red; and that the Stream was not ſo ſwift as that of Tigris, which ſeem'd to be whitiſh, like the Loire. As for its Courſe, Euphrates runs a far longer way than Tigris. But now let us croſs the Tigris, over a Bridge of Boats, to view the ſad Ruines of a City that has made ſuch a noiſe in the World; though there be now ſcarce any appearance of its ancient ſplendour.

Niniveh was built upon the left Shoar of the Tigris, upon Aſſyria-ſide, being now only a heap of Rubbiſh extending almoſt a League along the River. There are abundance abundance of Vaults and Caverns uninhabited; nor could a man well conjecture whether they were the ancient Habitations of the people, or whether any houſes had been built upon them in former times; for moſt of the houſes in Turkie are like Cellars, or elſe but one Story high. Half a League from Tigris ſtands a little Hill encompas'd with Houſes, on the top whereof is built a Moſquée. The people of the Country ſay 'twas the place where Jonas was bury'd; and for that place they have ſo great a veneration, that no Chriſtians are ſuffer'd to enter into it, but privately, and for Money. By that means I got in with two Capuchin Fryars; but we were forc'd to put off our Shooes firſt. In the middle of the Moſquée ſtood a Sepulchre, cover'd with a Perſian Carpet of Silk and Silver, and at the four corners, great Copper Candleſticks with Wax Tapers, beſides ſeveral Lamps and Oſtridge-Shells that hung down from the Roof. We ſaw a great number of Moores without, and within ſat two Dervi's reading the Alcoran.

About a Musket-Shot from Mouſſul toward the North-Eaſt, ſtands a great Ruin'd Monaſtery, enclos'd with high Walls, the greateſt part whereof is ſtill to be ſeen.

We ſtay'd ten days at Mouſſul, and having provided all things ready for the reſt of our Journey, we ſet forward for Iſpahan.

CHAP. V.

A Continuation of the Road from Nineveh to Iſpahan: Together with the Story of an Ambaſſador, call'd Dominico de Santis.

HAving paſs'd the Tigris, we ſtay'd three quarters of an hours Journey from Nineveh for ſome Merchants that were to go along with the Caravan. The way which we took was not the uſual Road to Perſia; but it was a way wherein there were leſs Duties to be paid; and beſides, it was a ſhort cut, the Caravan making but fifty-eight days Journey between Aleppo and Iſpahan. From the very banks of the River to the place where we Lodg'd that Evening, we ſaw nothing but continu'd Ruines, which makes me believe, it was the place where the ancient Nineveh ſtood.

We ſtaid two days near the Moſquée, where according to the tradition of the Turks, Jonas was bury'd, and made choice of a Curd, or Aſſyrian, for our Caravan-Baſhi, though the people are generally Thieves, and muſt be carefully look'd after. But it was a piece of Policy, becauſe we were to croſs the ancient Aſſyria, now call'd Curdiſtan; the Language of which Country is a particular Speech.

In the two firſt days Journey we croſs'd two ſmall Rivers that fall from the Mountains, and empty themſelves into Tigris. Our firſt Journey was through a plain Country all along by the ſide of a little River; and the ſecond Evening we lodg'd by the ſide of a great River that falls from the Mountains toward the North, and running to the South, diſcharges it ſelf into Tigris It is call'd Bohrus, being a very rapid Stream, full of Fiſh, but more eſpecially excellent Trouts. The Caravan was two days paſſing that River, by reaſon there were no Boats. For the people are forc'd to tye long Perches four five together one upon another, which the Natives call a Kilet. They make it four-ſquare, and put underneath it about a hundred Goat-Skins full of wind, to the end the Kilet may not touch the water. Beſides the Merchant muſt be careful to ſpread good ſtore of thick Felts over the Kilet, of which he muſt be provided to keep off the Water, leſt the Bales that ſink the Kilet ſhould take wet. At the four corners are four Perches that ſerve for Oars, though they avail but little againſt the force of the Tide; ſo that you muſt be forc'd to hale the Kilet four or five hundred Paces a'this ſide up the River, and then row down the Stream to the place where you intend to Land the Goods. When the Goods are Landed, the men are forc'd again to draw the Kilet by main ſtrength out of the water, to take away the Goat-Skins which are then to be lad'n upon the Mules appointed to carry them. As for the Horſes, Mules, and Aſſes, as well thoſe that carri'd

the Goods, as thoſe upon which the men ride; ſo ſoon as the Herdſ men thereabout ſee a Caravan coming, they flock to the River-ſide. Thoſe people that wear nothing but a courſe piece of Linen or a Goat-skin to cover their nakedneſs, take off their Cloaths and wind them about their Heads, like a Turbant. Then every one tyes a Goat skin blow'd up under his Stomach; and then two or three of the moſt expert mounting the ſame number of the beſt Horſes, which are bridl'd, put themſelves firſt into the Water, while others follow them ſwimming, and drive the Horſes before them; holding the Beaſt by the Tayl with one hand, and ſwitching him with the other. If they find any Horſe or Aſs that is too weak, they tye a Goat-skin under his Belly to help him. Conſidering which difficulties, it cannot take up leſs time than I have mention'd to get over a Caravan of five or ſix hundred Horſes.

The Caravan being thus got over, for two or three days has but a very bad Road. The firſt days journey the Horſes were continually in the Water up to the mid-leg; and the ſecond, and part of the third we travel'd through a very deſert Country, where we met with very little food for our Horſes, and only a few Brakes to boyl our Rice. Having got over this bad way, we came to a River call'd the great Zarbe, over which we paſs'd upon a Stone-Bridge of nine Arches. They report that this Bridge was built by Alexander the Great, in his March againſt Darius. A quarter of a League to the South-Eaſt, two Rivers meet, which empty themſelves into Tigris. Leaving the Bridge, we came to a Town call'd Sherazoul, built upon a riſing Ground, upon three Redoubts. There reſides a Baſha, who muſt be brib'd with a ſmall Preſent to let the Caravan paſs; we lay by the Banks of a River, and ſtaid there two days. From thence we travel'd one days journey over dry Mountains, not finding any Water. But the next day we came into a pleaſant Plain, ſtor'd with Fruit-trees. This was the Plain of Arbele, where Alexander defeated Darius; containing about fifteen Leagues in all. It is water'd with ſeveral Rivulets, and in the middle of the Mountain riſes a little Hill about half a League in circuit. It is all over cover'd with the faireſt Oaks that ever were ſeen; and on the top are the Ruines of a Caſtle, that ſeems to have been a ſumptuous Structure. The Country-people ſay that Darius ſtaid there while his Captains gave Battel to Alexander. Three Leagues from thence, near a great Mountain toward the North, are to be ſeen the Ruines of another Caſtle and ſeveral Houſes, where they add, that Darius ſecur'd ſome of his Wives when he loſt the Battel. This Caſtle is ſeated in a moſt lovely Proſpect. At the foot of the Mountain riſes a Spring, which a quarter of a League off ſwells into a River that bears good big Boats. It runs winding about the Mountains to the Southward; ſo that two days journey from the Hill, you croſs it near a Town call'd Sherazoul, over a fair Stone-Bridge of nine Arches, whereof the Great Sha-Abas caus'd three to be brok'n down after he had tak'n Bagdat.

This City of Sherazoul is built after another manner than any other of the Cities in thoſe parts, being all cut out of a ſteep Rock for a quarter of a League together; ſo that you muſt go up to the Houſes by Stairs of fifteen, or twenty ſteps, ſometimes more, ſometimes leſs according to the ſcituation of the place. The people have no other Doors to their Houſes than only a thin round Stone, like a Mill ſtone, which they will roll away when they go in or out, the ſides of the Wall being ſo cut as to receive the Stone like a Caſe, being level with the Rock.

The tops of their Houſes are like Niches in the Mountain, where the Inhabitants have contriv'd Caves to keep their Cattel in: So that we judg'd it to be built for a place of ſafety to ſecure the Inhabitants from the Incurſions of the Arabians and Bedouins of Meſopotamia.

We came to Sherazoul upon Eaſter-Eve, and ſtaid there three days to refreſh our ſelves, after a Lent which we had kept very ſparingly. Here I found certain Springs that roſe up in large Bubbles, which after I had mix'd with two Glaſſes of Wine and drank up, I found to have a Purgative quality, having a kind of Mineral taſt. Theſe Springs boyl up near the ſide of a River call'd Altun ſou, or, The River of Gold, that falls into the River Tigris, three days journey on this ſide Bagdat.

The next day we lay at a pitiful Town, upon the Frontiers of Turkie and Perſia.

The next day, being the fifth after we ſet out from Nineveh, we paſs'd over ſeveral Fens and hot Waters, that part the two Empires. Entring thus into Perſia, we met with a high Mountain cover'd with fair Oaks, which bear the Gall-Nuts, ſo high, that the Caravan was ſome hours ere it could get to the top. As we aſcended, but eſpecially when we were up, we heard ſeveral Muskets go off. At firſt we thought the people had been hunting the wild Boars or Stags, of which the Mountains are full: but the report of the Guns being too loud and too thick for Hunters, we ſtood upon our guard; and I believe we ſhould have mended our paces, had we known what was intended us. Beſides, I remember'd that the Country-people would not ſell any thing but for Powder and Bullet, which the Caravan-Baſhi adviſ'd me not to let them have, for fear they ſhould make uſe of it againſt our ſelves. From the Mountain we deſcended into a fertil Plain, water'd with ſeveral Rivers; and night approaching, we ſet up our Tents, not fearing any thing, becauſe we were in the Dominions of the King of Perſia, where there is ſo much ſecurity in travelling. After that we ſent our Servants to the Tents of the Country-men, but they brought us nothing but Bread made of Acorns, than which the poor people thereabouts eat no other. This Acorn is about the bigneſs of our Nuts; and once I met with a Branch that had thirty Acorns, and twenty-three Gall-Nuts, all at one time growing upon it.

The Province which we travel'd through then, compos'd the greateſt part of the ancient Aſſyria. But now to come to the Story of Dominico de Santis the Venetian. He had Letters of Credence from the Pope, the Emperour, the King of Poland, and the Republick of Venice, to the King of Perſia; and he went in the Caravan through the Grand Signor's Territories, never diſcovering himſelf who he was; but coming into Perſia, he took upon him without fear the Title of Ambaſſador from the Commonwealth of Venice.

From the Plain where we lodg'd, it is two days journey to a good big Town, to which belongs a Fortreſs, where the Governour of the Province has a Lieutenant, with about two thouſand Horſe under his Command. The Fortreſs is upon the right hand toward the South, after three hours riding upon the High-way. To this Lieutenant, the Caravan-Baſhi was according to duty bound to give notice of the Arrival of the Caravan, and an account of the Perſons and their Merchandize. This Venetian was a perſon ill fitted for the quality of an Ambaſſador, being a perſon of no Parts; which made me wonder that ſuch great Princes, and ſo wiſe a Commonwealth, ſhould ſend ſuch a perſon upon a Concern of that importance. For the Grand Signor then aſſailing Candy, he was ſent to excite the King of Perſia to engage him in a War againſt the Turk, thereby to keep off the Storm that threaten'd Chriſtendom. Thereupon I told the Ambaſſador, that it was neceſſary for him to give the Commander of the Fort firſt notice of his coming, to the end he might give advice thereof to Solyman-Kan Governour of the Province, whoſe duty it was to advertiſe the King. Thereupon he requeſted me to ſend my Interpreter, which I did. Upon whoſe intelligence the Lieutenant of the Fort came to Compliment the Ambaſſador on the behalf of the chief Commander, and to conduct him to the Caſtle.

Thereupon the Ambaſſador, my ſelf, and my Interpreter, together with ſome Armenian Merchants went with him, travelling for three hours over the Mountains. By that time we came half the way, as we paſs'd through a Wood, we heard as it were ſome perſon give a Whiſtle; at which when the Lieutenant perceiv'd us to be ſomewhat ſtartl'd, he carry'd us to the place from whence the Whiſtle came, where we ſaw a Serpent about as big as a Man's Thigh, and about twelve Foot long, whoſe head was ſqueez'd between two Trees, that put him to pain. From that Mountain we deſcended into a pleaſant Plain, where the Commander of the Fortreſs ſtaid for us under his Tent. He had ſet it up by the ſide of a River, under the ſhade of ſeveral great Walnut-trees. So ſoon as he ſaw us, he roſe from his great Silk Tapeſtry Coverlet, and ſaluted us in a moſt civil manner, telling us, that aſſuredly Sha-Abas, his Maſter, would be very glad to hear that the Monarchs of Chriſtendom had ſent him an Ambaſſador, and that he would write to Solyman Kan, whoſe duty it was to advertiſe the Emperour. Thereupon he wrote and diſpatch'd away a Meſſenger, giving him order to tell the Deroga, or Judge of the Town, through which we were to paſs, that he ſhould make Proviſion for us and our Horſes 'till we came to the Governour. After he had ask'd us ſeveral Queſtions concerning the War between the Grand Signor and the Venetians, how many thouſand men he had as well by Sea as Land, and what number of Galleys and Ships? wherein we ſatisfy'd him according to the beſt of our knowledge. After he had civilly treated us, he ſent his Lieutenant back with us again to the Caravan. About ten a Clock the next night we diſlodg'd, and the Lieutenant and ſix Souldiers attended upon us; who told us he had order not to leave us, 'till he had brought us to Solyman Kan.

The next night we lodg'd between two Hills, among ſeveral Tents of Herds-men. Here it was that the Commander had order'd that we ſhould be treatrd by the Deroga. A Deroga, as I have ſaid, is the Judge of a Village: But this Deroga was chief of many Families, ſome of which were of Meſopotamia, others of Arabia. Theſe are all Herdſmen that never live in Houſes, but retire with their Cattle to the holes in the Rocks, where partly Nature, partly Art, have contributed to make them convenient Habitations.

So ſoon as we were alighted, four ancient men came and led the Ambaſſador and my ſelf to the Deroga's Tent. It ſeem'd to conſiſt of many Rooms, with a Hall in the middle, ſpread with Perſian Carpets. He caus'd us to ſit down upon Cuſhions, and then preſented us with a Pipe of Tobacco, and Water to waſh our Feet. After he had nobly treated us, and that we were upon taking our leaves, the Deroga was very much troubl'd that we had made a ſmall Preſent to his Son; telling us, that it was a crime for him to take any thing of the King's Gueſts, eſpecially from Strangers that had come ſo long a Journey.

The next day we lodg'd in a place where there was ſuch a prodigious quantity of Lillies that the Ground was almoſt cover'd with them. There were none that were white, being for the moſt part of a fair Violet colour, with a ſtreak of Red in the middle of every leaf; they are like our Lillies, but much bigger. And to drink the infuſion of the Roots of theſe Lillies, eſpecially thoſe whoſe Leaves are blackeſt, for fifteen days together, is a moſt Sovereign remedy againſt the Pox. Not long after came a Perſon of a goodly Aſpect, who ſeem'd to be an Arabian, but he ſpoke the Perſian Language, whom Solyman Kan had ſent to Compliment the Ambaſſador. He carry'd us to the Tent which the Governour had caus'd to be ſet up in a Garden near the Town, where he alſo Lodg'd the Capuchins. The Ambaſſador alſo ſent to Compliment the Kan by my interpreter; and when the hour was come that we were to ſet forward, he gave order to ſix of the Captains of his Cavalry to accompany the Ambaſſador. The Houſe where the Governour liv'd in, was one of the moſt beautiful in Perſia. And as for the Governour himſelf, we found him in a Gallery that look'd upon the Garden, the Floor being all ſpread over with Tapeſtry of Gold and Silk, with large Cuſhions of Cloth of Gold all along the Wall. After ſome Queſtions and diſcourſe concerning the Affairs of Europe, they ſerv'd in Supper, which conſiſted of ſeveral Diſhes; but no Wine was to be had; our drink being only Sherbet and the juice of Granates, with Sugar for thoſe that deſir'd it. We were a long time at Supper, for 'tis the cuſtom of Perſia that when one man riſes, another takes his place and falls too, in ſo much that the Maſter of the Feaſt muſt have the Patience to ſtay 'till ſeveral have tak'n their turns; and when every one has done, the Cloth is tak'n away without any more to do. Here the Ambaſſador committed an abſurdity; for there are no Silver or Gold Spoons in Perſia, but only long Wooden Ladles that reach a great way. Now the Ambaſſador reaching his Ladle to a Purſlane-Diſh full of Pottage that was ſcalding hot, clap'd it preſently into his mouth; but finding it ſo hot that he could not endure it, after ſeveral ſcurvy faces, he threw it out of his mouth again into his hand, in the preſence of all the Company.

After we had ſtay'd five days at Sneirne, the Caravan-Baſhi ſignifi'd his deſire to purſue his Journey. Thereupon the Ambaſſador took his leave of the Governour, preſenting him with a Watch and a pair of Piſtols; who in retaliation preſented the Ambaſſador with a ſtately Horſe, and a Colt of two years old. The next day we diſlodg'd, and purſu'd our Road to Amadan, which is not above three days Journey from Sneirne.

Amadan is one of the largeſt and moſt conſiderable Cities of Perſia, ſeated at the foot of a Mountain, where do ariſe an infinite company of Springs that do water all the Country. The Land about it abounds in Corn and Rice, wherewith it furniſhes the greateſt part of the neighbouring Provinces. Which is the reaſon that ſome of the Perſian Stateſmen hold it very inconvenient for the King of Perſia to keep Bagdat, as well by reaſon of the vaſtneſs of the Charge, as alſo for that it draws from Amadan that which ſhould ſupply other Provinces. On the other ſide, it is eaſie for the Grand Signor to hold it, by reaſon of the neighbourhood of Meſopotamia, Aſſyria, and the Arabs, Enemies to the Perſians: by which means Proviſions are very cheap, which the people would not know where to put off, if the King of Perſia were Lord of Bagdat.

We ſtaid at Amadan about ten days, by reaſon of the Rains; during which time the Caravans cannot travel. While we tarry'd there, we were viſited by ſeveral Babylonian Chriſtians, who were glad to ſee that we had eſcap'd the Clutches of the Baſſa of Bagdat, who had giv'n order to the Baſſa of Karkou, and the Bey of Sharaſſon that commands the Frontiers of Turkie, to ſeize us, and carry us back to Bagdat. For which we might have thank'd the Ambaſſador, and a malicious Rabbi, that came along with us in the Caravan from Aleppo; who finding the Feaſt of the Tabernacles to be at hand, and that we had a great way to Iſpahan, left us at Niniveh, to keep the Feſtival with the Jews of Babylon. Where that he might inſinuate himſelf into the Baſſa's favour, he inform'd him that there was a Fringuiz in the Caravan, whom he look'd upon as a Spy, and that he was an Envoy into Perſia from the Commonwealth of Venice; for he carry'd no Merchandize, but had three Cheſts full of rich Habits, and ſeveral other things, which he took for Preſents to the Perſian King. For out of vanity or folly, the Venetian had ſeveral times open'd his Cheſt and expos'd his Gallantry to view. And yet he was ſo clutch-fiſted and niggardly in every thing, that when there was any occaſion to reward the Kan's Servant, or any of the Country-men that brought us the Dainties of the place, it came all out of my Pocket. So that I left him to my Interpreter and the two Capuchins; and with three Servants and a Guide, after I had ſtaid at Amadan three days, I took Horſe for Iſpahan.

When I came there, the Nazar or Maſter of the King's Houſhold hearing I had left an Ambaſſador behind me with the Caravan, enquir'd of me what manner of Perſon he was, but I pretended I had but little converſe with him, unwilling to diſcover his mean Spirit. The Evening before his Arrival the Nazar ſent to give the Fringuiz notice in the King's Name, that they ſhould be ready to go meet the Ambaſſador the next day; which we did, and brought him into the City and through Ali's Gate, that joyns to the King's Palace. Now 'tis the cuſtom for all Ambaſſadours to ſalute that Gate, by reaſon of a white Marble Stone made like an Aſſes back, and which ſerves for a Step: being, as they report, brought anciently out of Arabia, where Ali liv'd. So ſoon as you have ſtrid over that Stone without touching it, which were a great crime, you enter into a kind of a Gallery, where there are Rooms on each ſide, which ſerve for a Sanctuary for Criminals, which the King himſelf cannot fetch out of that place. That day that the new King receives his Enſigns of Royalty, he goes to ſtride over that Stone; and if by negligence he ſhould chance to touch it, there are four Guards at the Gate, that would make a ſhew of thruſting him back again.

But now the Maſter of the Ceremonies being ready to conduct the Ambaſſador to the Apartment alotted him, as an Ambaſſador that came from three great Monarchs, and a potent Commonwealth, he deſir'd to lodge at the Houſe of one Pietro Pentalet, deſcended from Venetian Parents; whereupon the Maſter of the Ceremonies conducted him thither, and caus'd his Dinner to be brought him. While we were eating, I counted thirteen Languages ſpoken at the Table; Latin, French, High-Dutch, Engliſh, Low-Dutch, Italian, Portuguez, Perſian, Turkiſh, Arabic, Indian, Syriac, and Malaye, which is the Language of the Learned, that is ſpoken from the River Indus to China and Japan, and in all the Iſlands of the Eaſt, like Latin in Europe; not reck'ning the little Moreſco or Gibbriſh of the Country. So that it is a difficult thing to obſerve what is talk'd in one Company, where the Diſcourſe begins in one Language, is purſu'd in another, and finiſh'd in a third: and for the Turks and Armenians, they never ſpeak above three or four Languages at moſt.

Now to ſhew you the Civility of the Perſians; the Maſter of the Ceremonies came to the Ambaſſador and told him, that if he did not like the Cookery of the Perſians, he had Order from the Aſchadvilet, who is as the Grand Vizier in Turkie, to offer him Money Money instead of Diet, to the end he might dress his own Meat as he pleas'd himself. Upon which the covetous Ambassadour accepted his offer, and two hours after there was a Bag brought him of 50 Tomans, which amount to about 800 Crowns. The Franks being offended at his baseness, slighted the Ambassador, and left him to keep House by himself, which was poor enough God knows; an Onion or a Turnep serving his turn for a Meal. Some days after, he had audience of the King, to whom he presented his Letters Credential from the Pope, the Emperour, the King of Poland, and the Commonwealth of Venice. Those from the three last were well receiv'd, because the Seals were of Gold, and for that the Paper was embelish'd with curious Flourishes: but the Pope's Letters were rejected with scorn, because the Seals were only of Lead, as the Bulls are usually seal'd; and for that the Writing was very plain. For the Kings of Persia, who are very nice, love things that are gay to the Eye, otherwise they look upon themselves to be affronted. Dominico de Santis had better have taken upon him the meaner quality of an Envoy, than the title of an Ambassador, unless he had known better how to behave himself; especially being so eclips'd as he was by a real Ambassador that arriv'd at Ispahan some time after. All the Franks went forth to meet him, and the Master of the Ceremonies made him the same proffers as he had done to the Venetian: but he nobly answer'd, That whatever it were that the King of Persia sent him, he should take it for a very great Honour: otherwise, if he would have eaten Gold, the King his Master would have allow'd him 30 Mules Load. Such persons as behave themselves with decency and a good grace, are the persons that the Christian Princes should send into Persia, who are the most refin'd Wits, and the best Politicians of all Asia.

To conclude the story of the Venetian, I will give you his Character. An Indian naturally of a good Wit having embrac'd Christianity and an Ecclesiastical Life, went to Rome, to compleat his Studies which he had begun at Goa; whether, the Pope, taking an affection to him, sent him afterward as his Vicar. Dominico de Santis being then at Rome, put himself into his service, and follow'd him into the Indies, where I saw him the first time I went, in a mean condition. Upon his return to Venice, where he was in no credit before, he made people believe that he understood the Trade of Asia; whereupon some particular Merchants trusted him with some Goods, which were cast away at Seide. Thus poor and bare he return'd to Goa, where he got 800 Crowns by a charitable Contribution. From thence he travel'd to Ispahan; where he fell into the acquaintance of Father Rigordi a Jesuite, with whom he went into Poland: where making his brags of the great knowledge he had of the Affairs of Persia, the King gave him that Commission which I have already mention'd. The Emperour follow'd his Example, and the Commonwealth of Venice did the same; and to give the more lustre and authority to his Embassy, they got the Pope to joyn with them. But alas! both Dominico de Santis, and all such persons as he, that go into Asia without Brains and good Behaviour, do but prostitute the Reputation of the Princes that send them. Such another was Father Rigordi, who after he had been thrust out of Goa by the Portugals, went to Ispahan, where he insinuated himself by a Proposition which he made of Marrying the King of Persia, who was then a very young Prince, to the Dutchess of Orleance. Under which pretence he was well receiv'd and treated by the King; from whom he also receiv'd some Presents by virtue of that Proposal, which was good sport to the Dutchess when she heard of it.

As for the Venetian, the Atemadoulet, who was very glad to be rid of him, desir'd the Muscovite Ambassador, who was then upon his return home, to take him along with him, which he did as far as the Caspian Sea, where they take Shipping for Astracan; but there the Muscovite told him he could carry him no further: thereupon he was forc'd to come back to Ispahan, and so to travel to Goa, whence the Portugals shipt him home for Charities sake. But when he came to Venice, he was so far from being well receiv'd, that the Senate had like to have punish'd him severely for giving so bad an account of his Negotiation.

CHAP. VI.

Of the Road which the Author kept, when he Travell'd the fourth time into Asia, to go from Paris to Ormus. And first of his Voyage from Marseilles to Alexandretta.

I Set out from Paris in the company of Monsieur d' Ardiliers the eighteenth of June, 1651. and arriv'd at Marseilles the sixteenth of July. On the twenty-sixth of August we set Sail, with a favourable North-West Wind that blew very briskly the two next days; but at length it grew so very slack, that coming about to the North North-East, we made for Sardinia. Upon the second of September by Sun-rising, we discover'd the Western Coast of Sardinia, six Leagues from the Land. About Noon the Wind chopping about again to the North West, we held on our first Course; and upon the third of September, we descry'd the Island Galita upon the Coast of Africa. On the fourth we discover'd the Island of Zambino before Tunis, and about Evening Cape Bon, which is the most Southerly Point of all Africa. The fifth we had a sight of the Island of Pantalaria, and the Coast of Sicily. The sixth we discover'd the Island of Goza, and the seventh the Castle that bears the same name.

We landed at Malta upon the day of the Nativity of the Virgin, which is a great day among the Malteses, upon which they give thanks to God, for that the Turks rais'd their Siege upon that day.

The Grand Master goes to the Church of St. John, accompanied with all the chief Commanders in their Robes of Command, and the greatest part of the Knights. All the Country-men and Citizens are up in Arms upon that day, and march to the Inn call'd the Auvernian-house, with the Knight that goes to fetch the Standard. This Knight is clad in a Casslock of Crimson Velvet, with a Cross of the Order, before and behind. He wears a Helmet upon his head, and carries the Standard upon his shoulders; and by him marches the Grand-Master's Page, who carries a Sword in one hand, and a Dagger in the other, both very richly Embellish'd, and giv'n the the Order by CHARLES the fifth. The Page that carry'd the Sword and Dagger was the youngest Nephew of Pope Innocent the tenth. The Souldiers and Citizens marching before to the Church door make a Lane for the Knight and the Page to pass on to the Altar, where the Knight makes three bows, and having done as much to the Grand-Master, places himself on the right hand of the Grand-Masters Chair, and the Page on the left. Then the Mass and the Musick begins, and while the Gospel is reading, the Grand-Master takes the Sword and the Dagger out of the Page's hand, and holds them with the points upward all the remaining part of the Mass. During the Elevation of the Host, the Knights repeats the same Ceremony as at the beginning; and then the Bells ring, the great Guns go off, and the Souldiers give three Vollies. Mass being ended, the Grand-Master retires, accompany'd as before, only that he is then attended by all the Ecclesiastical persons of the City, and coming out of the Church, he proceeds with all the Infantry marching before him toward our Lady's of Victory, where they all go in procession. While they make a stand in that place, the Souldiers give another Volley, which is answer'd by all the Canons in the Town, as also from the Ships and Galleys. After that they return to St. John's; and the Infantry Guard the Standard back to the Inn, while the Grand-Master goes to his Palace.

The ninth we view'd the Fortifications, which are stor'd with very fair pieces of Canon.

The tenth we saw the Pages perform their Exercises before the Grand-Master, which are generally vaulting and handling their Arms, both Musquet and Pike.

The eleventh we view'd the Arsenal, where I was assur'd that there were Arms for twenty thousand men, being in good order, and rarely well look'd after.

The nexte day we visited the Infirmery, where the sick are serv'd in Plate, as well the poor as rich.

The

The twentieth we ſet Sail, having the Wind at Weſt-South-Weſt, and a freſh gale; ſo that upon the twenty-third we diſcover'd the Coaſt of the Morea, to which we approach'd ſo near, as to deſcry Navarin. In the Evening we ſaw the City of Coron, where there is a great Trade for Sallet-Oyl. From thence it was that the Great Turk Embarqu'd for Candy in the year 1645.

The twenty-fourth the Wind was at Eaſt-North-Eaſt. In the Morning we diſcover'd the Cape of Matapan, which is the moſt Southern Point of Land in Europe, lying in the Morea, and at Noon the Iſland of Chergigo.

The twenty-fifth we drew near Cyprus, and deſcry'd a Mountain in that Iſland call'd Cameliere, with ſome other Promontories toward the South.

From the twenty-ſeventh day 'till we came to Alexandretta, we perceiv'd the Sea to be all over cover'd with Pumice-ſtones, which happen'd from an Earthquake that had for ſome time before ſwallow'd up the Iſland of Santorini. Some think that it proceeded from the abundance of Sulphur, of which that Country is full, which took Fire, and was the death of above 750 of the Iſlanders, that were partly buried in the Ruines, and partly dy'd out of fear. They that remain'd alive became black like Charcoal; and the Vapours that aſcended out of the Abyſs ſully'd all the Silver as far as Conſtantinople; the noiſe of the Earthquake being heard as far as Smyrna.

The twenty-ninth by break of day we diſcover'd the Iſland of Cyprus.

The firſt of October by eight in the Morning we came to an Anchor before Salines, which is one of the Ports of Cyprus, where our Conſuls live. Here I ask'd ſeveral of the Chriſtians of the Country, how they did to live and pay their Carage? Who told me that it was with a great deal of difficulty, in regard the Iſland was very bare of Money; which was the reaſon that many Chriſtians turn'd Mahometans, to avoid paying their Carage, which is a Tribute that the Grand Signor lays upon all Chriſtians throughout his Dominions. He exacts from the pooreſt ſix Piaſters a Head; but there are ſome that pay a hundred, or a hundred and fifty; and this Tribute is due ſo ſoon as ever they come to be eighteen years of age.

The Iſland of Cyprus is one of the moſt conſiderable in the Mediterranean Sea, more to the Eaſt than any of the reſt; bearing the title of a Kingdom, as being 500 Miles in circuit. It is not all of the ſame bredth, being of a triangular form, the ſides whereof are very unequal. To it there belong ſeveral Capes or Promontories, the principal whereof are St. Epiphanio, toward the Weſt; Cape de Gate, toward the South; Cape Diegrega, toward the North-Eaſt; Cape Cormachiti, toward the North; and Cape St. Andrew, upon the moſt Eaſtern Point of the Iſland. The principal Roads are that of Salines or Larneca, that of Paphos, and that of Cerines or Cerigni. The Haven of Famagoſta ſignifies nothing as to great Ships, there being none but ſmall Veſſels that can ride there. The Venetians had formerly made a ſmall Mole there to harbour their Gallies; but it is now quite ruin'd. The Road of Cerines is that where the Barks and Galliots lye that come from Caramania, and Payaſſes; and where the Baſha's land that are ſent as Governours of the Iſland from Conſtantinople, who reſide generally at Nicoſia. That City is almoſt in the middle of the Iſland, and was formerly a very large one, as appears by the compaſs of the ancient Walls. The new Walls are well terraſs'd within-ſide, and in a good poſture of defence. There are three Gates belong to the City; that of Famagoſta, that of Paphos, and that of Cerines. The City it ſelf is no uncomely place; the Venetians having adorn'd it with many fair Palaces, which the Turks demoliſh every day, out of hopes to find hidd'n Treaſure therein, and ſell the Stones to build new Houſes. The Cathedral that goes by the name of Santa Sophia is an ample and fair Structure, of which the Turks have now made a Moſquee, together with one more, which was formerly a Monaſtery belonging to the Auſtin-Fryars. The Greeks have there four Churches, and the Franks two; that is to ſay, the French Miſſionary Capuchins, and the Italian Miſſionary Soccolans. The firſt have a Church didicated to St. James, the others another, which is call'd Holy Rood Church. The Armenians alſo have another belonging to them, which is a very neat Building, which was formerly a Monaſtery of the Carthuſians. There it is that there is a Tomb, adorn'd with ſeveral Sculptures of Religious Nuns, eſpecially an Abbeſs with a Croſs in her Hand, the Writing about the Stone being in French Characters. The City is ſeated in a temperate Air and a fertil Soil, abounding with Water. It extends more in length than bredth, having been anciently nine Miles in compaſs; but the Venetians to make it ſtronger, reduc'd it to the circuit of three. The Work of the Fortification was ſo neat, and ſuch a proportion obſerv'd in all things, that the moſt famous Engineers eſteem'd it one of the moſt ſtately Fortreſſes in the World, when Selim the Second ſent an Army againſt it, under the Command of Muſtapha his Grand Vizier.

Famagoſta is a Sea-Town upon the Eaſt-ſide of the Iſland, and the chief Bulwark of it. It is kept in good repair, the Caſtle within being in form of a Cittadel. The Turks have converted into Moſquees the Churches of the Chriſtians, who are not ſuffer'd to dwell in the City. They have only the liberty to come thither in the day, and to open Shops, which they ſhut up again at night, and then go home to their Houſes in the neighbouring Villages. The City is govern'd by a Bey, who has no dependence upon the Governour of the Iſland, who is oblig'd to maintain a Galley for the guard of the Coaſt.

Cerines is another little City, but without any defence, the Walls thereof being all tumbl'd to ruine. Only there is a Fortreſs toward the Sea, well built, with a Garriſon in it. There is alſo a handſom Monaſtery of Religious Greeks, built ſomewhat after the French manner; wherein there are ſome of the Cells which ſtand ſo upon the Sea, that they can fiſh out of the Windows. The Fields about it bear Cotton, which is the chief Revenue of the Monaſtery. There is only the Fort of Cerines upon the North, where the Iſland does not lye ſo open as toward the South and Eaſt; which beſides by that of Famagoſta, are guarded by the Forts of Salines, Limiſſo, and Paphos. The Inhabitants of the Iſland are for the moſt part Greeks, eſpecially in the Villages. They are clad after the Italian manner, both Men and Women; the Men wearing Hats like the Franks, and retaining their ancient Cuſtoms as much as is poſſible for them to do. The Trade of the Iſland lyes in Cotton wool, which is the beſt in all the Eaſt; and ſome Silk, which is neither good, nor very plentiful. However the Iſland is fertil enough, did it not want Inhabitants enough to till it. As for Bread, Wine, Cheeſe, and Milk, they are all very cheap, and there is Oyl enough to ſerve the Iſland. But for the Wine, it is tranſported out of the Iſland to all the places of Trade not far diſtant. The beſt grows at the foot of Olympus, and is a delicious ſort of Drink. The Country between Nicoſia and Famagoſta produces Cotton, of which there grows alſo ſome between Paphos and Limiſſo. The chief place where the Silk is made is call'd Cytherea, a large Town water'd with a fair River that runs from the Mountain of Venus. The River turns ſeveral Mills, which are the chief Revenue of the Iſland. There is Silk alſo made between Paphos and Limiſſo; upon the Road between which two places you meet with a Town call'd Piſcopi, where are to be ſeen ſeveral Aquæducts, that carry'd the Water into the Rooms and Magazines were the people formerly made Sugar. But ſince the Iſland was tak'n from the Venetians, one of the Baſha's that was ſent as Governour, burnt up all the Sugar-Canes in the Country. Toward the Sea ſhoar near Limiſſo, is to be ſeen one of the faireſt Gardens of Cyprus, which they call Shiti; to which there belongs a magnificent Houſe, and a Grove of Orange-Trees. It was built by a rich Venetian, who had a good Eſtate in Lands thereabouts.

In Cyprus the people take a vaſt number of Birds as big as a Lark, eſpecially near the Mountain of the Holy Croſs. In the Months of September and October the Country-people of the adjacent Villages make themſelves little Hutts in the Fields, where uſually thoſe Birds are wont to light, and feed upon the Seed of an Herb that grows there; which when it is dry, the people daub over with Lime twigs. But this they never do but when the North-Weſt Wind blows, and that the weather be very cold; for with a Southerly Wind they never take any. Theſe Birds are accounted great Dainties by the Venetians, who make no great Feaſts in Carnival-time wherein they do not ſet theſe Birds upon the Table, pil'd up in Diſhes like a Pyramid. They buy them up every year; being firſt prepar'd fit for exportation by the people, who having pull'd off their Feathers, parboyl them, and pickle them up in Barrels with Vinegar and Salt. When they are to be eat'n, they are ſet upon a Chafing diſh, between two Diſhes. Sometimes there are above a thouſand Barrels exported out of the Iſland; and indeed, were it not for this Trade, the poor people would ſee but very little Money.

Upon the Mountain of the Holy Croſs ſtands a Church of the ſame name; upon which which the report of the Country goes, that St. Helena returning from Jeruſalem left a piece of our Saviour's Croſs with the Chriſtians of Cyprus, who built a Church there, by means of the Liberality of the ſame Princeſs. Afterwards thoſe of the Town of Leucara took it from hence, and carry'd it to their Church, where I ſaw it. The piece is as big as the Palm of a Man's Hand, ſet in a great Croſs of Litten, emboſs'd with ſeveral Figures.

In the Kingdom of Cyprus that there is an Archbiſhop, and three Suffragans. The Archbiſhop takes upon him the Title of Nicoſia; to which Famagoſta belongs with all the Country between Nicoſia and Famagoſta, with the Territories of Nicoſia and all the Villages round. He has a Houſe about a League from Nicoſia, where the chiefeſt of his Revenue lies. Some years ſince he caus'd the high Altar of the Church to be painted and guilded, being a neat piece of Workmanſhip. Thus the Archbiſhop has under his Juriſdiction all the middle part of the Iſland, and ſome part toward the Eaſt. The Biſhops are the Biſhops of Paphos, Larneca, and Cerines.

The Greeeks are very much addicted to the obſervation of their ancient Cuſtoms and Ceremonies; and generally their Maſſes are very long. Upon Sundays and Holy-days they riſe between one and two of the Clock in the Morning to ſing Mattens. To which purpoſe there is a Clerk that goes from door to door and knocks with a Hammer, to wake the people, and then cries out with a loud voice, Chriſtians go to Church. The men and old women fail not to go as being more zealous; but the maids and young women never go out of doors in the night for fear of the Turks. There are ſeven or eight Villages, the Inhabitants whereof are Maronites, who came from Mount Libanus, and ſpeak Arabic at home, but Greek among the Iſlanders. They follow the Romiſh Religion, and have their Churches peculiar to themſelves.

The Iſland of Cyprus is no wholeſom Air, being ſubject to the ſpoil of a ſort of Locuſts, that ſome Summers deſtroy all their Fruit and Corn During the heats they hover in the Air, which they will darken with their number like a thick Cloud; but when the North Wind blows, it carry's them into the Sea, where they periſh.

There are in Cyprus three ſorts of colour'd Earth, a Grey black, a Red, and a Yellow; of which the Venetians fetch away great quantities for their courſer ſort of Painting. There's alſo a Mine of White Alome, which is the ſtone call'd Damiantius. 'Tis thought that the Ancients had a way to ſpin this Alome into a kind of Cotton, and ſo to make out of it a certain ſort of Cloath that would not conſume in the Fire, but only be the more perfectly whiten'd thereby. The Indians formerly bury'd the dead bodies of their Kings deceas'd in Shrouds of this kind of Linen, and then putting them into the Fire, found the bodies all reduc'd to aſhes, but the Cloth whole; out of which they took the aſhes, and carefully put them into an Urne, which was prepared for their preſervation.

When the Baſha of Cyprus has a mind to view the Fortreſs of Famagoſta, he ſends to give the Bey, who is Governour thereof, notice of it. For it is at the Governours choice whether he will give him admiſſion or no. The Baſha Hali-Giorgi, being a comely old man of above a hundred and two years of age, ſetting out of Nicoſia in his Litter with about two hundred Horſe, when he was come within half a League of Famagoſta, the Governour of the place ſent his Lieutenant with a hundred Horſe to Compliment him, and to conduct him to the Town. Immediately they took upon them the Guard of the Baſha's Litter, who was not permitted to take along with him above eight or ten of his principal Officers. The Canons roar'd at his entry, and he was treated magnificently, but he lay not in the Town, being conducted back by the ſame party to the place where they met him in the Morning.

Upon the third day of October we ſet Sail about three a Clock in the Morning with a Weſt-North-Weſt Wind, and about Noon we were within ſight of Famagoſta, into which place we could by no means be admitted, by reaſon of the Wars between the Turks and Venetians. But as far as I could diſcern a far off, there is no eaſie acceſs to the Port, and for the City I could deſcry no part of it.

The fourth by break of day we got ſight of the Coaſt of Syria, Cape Canger, and the Golf of Antioch, and about Evening we arriv'd in the Road of Alexandretta.

From thence we went to Aleppo, and ſtay'd there from the ſeventh of October to the thirteenth of December.

On the thirteenth we ſet forward for Nineveh, and with little variation of the Road which I have already deſcrib'd in my third Voyage from Paris. We arriv'd the ſecond day of February at Mouſſul or Nineveh, where we ſtay'd 'till the fifteenth, 'till the Kilets or Boats of the Country could be got ready. Our Kilet carry'd thirty Paſſengers, and ſixty hundred of Aleppo Weight, or thirty three thouſand pound of Paris Weight, upon which the Tigris bore us from Monſſul to Babylon.

CHAP. VII.

A Continuation of the Road which the Author kept in the fourth Voyage into Aſia, and particularly of his paſſage upon the Tigris from Nineveh to Babylon.

THE fifteenth of February we put off from Mouſſul, and after we had ſwam ſix hours, we came to lye near a hot Bath, about a Musket-ſhot from the Tigris. It was throng'd with Sick people that came thither for their Recovery. We kept our ſelves upon the Watch all night; but for all we could do, the Arabs ſtole two Coverlets from a Merchant, and a Turk's Cloaths that was gone into the Bath.

The ſixteenth, after we had row'd about five hours, we came to a huge Dam; it is 200 Foot wide, and makes a fall in the River of about 20 Fathoms ſteep. The Arabians ſaid that Alexander the Great made it to turn the courſe of the River; others will have it, that Darius caus'd it to be made to hinder the paſſage of the Macedonians by Water. However, we were forc'd to land our ſelves and our Goods, and to lade them upon Horſes which the Arabs brought us.

The paſſing this Dam is worthy obſervation. For it is a thing of wonder to ſee the Kilet all of a ſudden fall above ſixſcore Foot, and yet to be kept by the Leather-Bottles ſtill above Water. The Water-men that guide the Boat, tye themſelves and their Oars faſt to a Pearch bent like a Semicircle, to defend themſelves from the force of the Water. And indeed this is the Dam that renders Tigris unnavigable.

The Kilet being come to the place where we expected it, we put our Goods aboard, and lay in the ſame place upon the Bank of the River. For the Arabs, if they perceive the Merchants aſleep, cut the Cords of the Kilet, and ſetting it a-drift, ſwim after it, and rifle away what they pleaſe.

The ſeventeenth, after three hours rowing we met with the River Zab, that empties into the Tigris, upon Chaldea ſide. Half a League above the River ſtands a fair Caſtle of Brick upon a little Hill; but no body dwelling in it, it runs to ruine. We were twelve hours that day upon the Water, and came to lye at a place which was full of Wood, where we made great Fires, and ſhot off our Muskets often in the night to ſcare the Lions.

The eighteenth we were upon the Water eighteen hours, and lay upon the Bank of the River, upon Aſſyria ſide. That Evening the Arabs brought us Milk-Meats, and freſh Butter. They ſwim from the other ſide of the River with a Boracho under their Stomachs, and another upon their Heads, wherein they bring their Commodities; for which they will have no Money, but only Tobacco, or Bisket, or Pepper.

The nineteenth, in four hours time we met with a River call'd Altum-ſou, or The River of Gold. It flows from the Mountains of the Medes, and I travel'd by the ſide of it for threee days together, returning from Tauris to Aleppo, and paſſing the Tigris to Meſia. The Water of the River is of an excellent taſt, and it falls into Tigris upon Aſſyria ſide. All along the Tigris, on the ſame ſide, are great ſtore of Bituminous Springs, and other Streams of hot Water that ſmell of Sulphur. All that day we ſaw none but Arabs and Curds marching along the Banks of the River, the Curds upon Meſopotamia ſide, and the Arabs upon Aſſyria ſide. They were at War, and both ſides march'd in very good order. The Young men went formoſt with Bows and Arrows, and ſome Muskets, but ſeveral Half-Pikes. Next to them their Wives, Virgins, and Children, with their Cattel, Herds, and Camels; after which march'd the Old men in the rear. As well the Curds as the Arabians ſent out Horſe-men to ſcout upon the high Grounds; for as ſoon as they find any advantage, they preſently ſwim their Horſes over the River and fall on. Now becauſe we would not truſt thoſe ſort of People, we row'd nineteen hours to avoid 'em.

The twentieth we were eleven hours upon the Tigris, and came to lye at a Town call'd Tegrit, upon Meſopotamia ſide. There belongs to the Town a Caſtle half ruin'd, and yet there are ſtill ſome handſom Chambers to be ſeen. Upon the North and Eaſt, the River ſerves for a Moat; but upon the Weſt and South it has a deep Artificial one pav'd with Free-ſtone. The Arabians ſay that formerly it was the ſtrongeſt place in all Meſopotamia, though it be commanded by two Hills not far from it. The Chriſtians dwelt half a League from the City, where the Ruines of a Church and part of a Steeple are ſtill to be ſeen, whereby it appears to have been a a conſiderable Pile of Building.

The twenty-firſt, after we had row'd three hours, we met with a Town upon Aſſyria ſide, which was call'd Amet-el-tour, from the name of a perſon that lyes inter'd in a Monaſtery, whom the people account to be a Saint. Therefore is it a place of great Devotion among them, ſo that great numbers of Votaries go thither in private. That day we were twelve hours upon the Water, and lay upon the Banks of the River.

The twenty ſecond, having been upon the Waters two hours, we met with a great Chanel cut out of Tigris to water the Lands, which runs up as far as juſt over-againſt Bagdat, and there falls into the Tigris again. Coming thither, we landed upon Chaldea ſide, by reaſon that there were certain Turks with us, who would of neceſſity perform their Devotions at a place call'd Samatra. In the ſame there is a Moſquee not above half a League from the River; to which many Mahometans pay their Devoirs, eſpecially Indians and Tartars, who believe forty of their Prophets to be buried there. When they knew us to be Chriſtians, they would not permit us, no not for Money, to ſet our Feet in it. About five hundred Paces from the Moſquee ſtands a Tower very ingeniouſly built. There are two Stair-caſes without, that belong to it, made twirling like a Periwinkle-ſhell: one of which Stair-caſes was built deeper into the Tower than the other. I would have taken better notice of it, could I have been permitted to have come nearer it. Only I obſerv'd that it was made of Brick, and that it ſeems to be very ancient. Half a League from thence appear three great Portals, that look as if they had been the Gates of ſome great Palace. And indeed it is not improbable but that there was ſome great City thereabouts; for, three Leagues all along the River there is nothing to be ſeen but Ruines. We were twelve hours that day upon the Water, and lay upon the Banks of Tigris, according to cuſtom.

The twenty-third, we were twenty hours upon the Water, and all the day long we ſaw nothing upon either ſide of the River but pitiful Hutts made of the Branches of Palm-trees, where live certain poor people that turn the Wheels, by means whereof they water the neighbouring Grounds. We alſo met that day with a River call'd Odoine, that falls into Tigris upon the ſide of the ancient Chaldea.

The twenty-fourth, we were twenty two hours upon the Water together, never ſtirring off from the Kilet. The reaſon is, becauſe the Merchants having tak'n out of the Kilet, all their Money and the beſt part of their Merchandizes, give them to the Country people, who carry them very faithfully to Bagdat, whither they to ſell their own Commodities: which the Merchants do, to avoid the payment of Five in the Hundred, in the City. I truſted them alſo with ſeveral things of which they gave me a very good account, as they did to others, being contended with a ſmall matter for their pains.

The twenty-fifth, about four of the Clock in the Morning we arriv'd at Bagdat, which is as uſually call'd Babylon. They open the Gates by ſix, and then the Cuſtomers come to take an account of the Merchandize, and to ſearch the Merchants themſelves. If they find nothing about 'em, they let the Merchants go: but if they have any thing about 'em which ought to pay, they carry the perſons to the Cuſtom-Houſe, where they write down the quantity of the Goods, and let them go. All the Merchandize upon the Kilet is carry'd thither alſo, which the Merchant fetches away again in two or three days, paying the Cuſtom: All which is done in very great order, without any noiſe or diſturbance in the leaſt.

Though Bagdat uſually bear the name of Babylon, yet it is at a great diſtance from the ancient Babylon, whereof in due place. But now for Bagdat, as it ſtands at this day.

Bagdat is a City ſeated upon the River of Tigris, on the Coaſt of Perſia, and ſeparated from Meſopotamia by the ſame River. It lyes in 33 Deg. 15 Min. of Elevation. The Chronicles of the Arabians report that it was built by one of their Califfs nam'd Almanſour, in the year of the Hegyra of Mahomet 145, and of Chriſtianity 762, or thereabouts. They call it Dar-al-ſani, that is, the Houſe of Peace. Some ſay it deriv'd its name from a Hermitage that ſtood in a Meadow where the City now ſtands, whence it was call'd Bagdat, or, a Garden bequeath'd. About forty years ago digging up the Foundations of an Inn, the Work-men found a Body entire, habited like a Biſhop, with a Cenſor and Incenſe by him. And in the ſame place ſeveral Cells of Religious Houſes ſhew'd themſelves: which makes it very probable, that where Bagdat is built there was anciently a great Monaſtery, with ſeveral Houſes where the Chriſtians inhabited. The City is about fifteen hundred Paces long, and ſev'n or eight hundred broad, and cannot poſſibly be above three Miles in circuit. The Walls are of Brick, and terraſs'd in ſome places, with large Towers like Baſtions. Upon all theſe Towers there are mounted about ſixty pieces of Cannon, the biggeſt whereof carries not above a five or ſix Pound Ball. The Moats are wide, and about five or ſix Fathom deep. There are not above four Gates; three upon the Land-ſide, and one upon the River, which you muſt croſs, over a Bridge of thirty-three Boats, diſtant one from the other about the bredth of one Boat. The Caſtle is in the City, near to one of the Gates call'd El-Maazan, upon the North ſide. It is partly built upon the River, encompaſs'd only with a ſingle Wall, terraſs'd in ſome places; and adorn'd with little Towers, upon which are planted about a hundred and fifty Cannon, but without Carriages. The Moat is narrow, and not above two or three Fathom deep, neither is there any Draw-Bridge before the Gate. The Garriſon conſiſts of three hundred Janiſaries, commanded by an Aga. The City is govern'd by a Baſha, who is generally a Vizier. His Houſe is upon the ſide of the River, making a fair ſhew; and he has always ready at command ſix or ſeven hundred Horſe. There is alſo an Aga that commands three or four hundred Spahi's. They have beſides another ſort of Cavalry which is call'd Ginguliler, that is to ſay, Men of Courage, commanded by two Aga's; and uſually there are about three thouſand in the City and the Towns adjoyning. The Keys of the Gates of the City and the Bridge-Gate are in the cuſtody of another Aga, who has under him two hundred Janiſaries. There are alſo ſix hundred Foot-men, who have their particular Aga, and about ſixty Cannoneers, who were at that time commanded by an expert Artiſt that went by the name of Signor Michaël, who paſs'd for a Turk, though he were born in Candy. He put himſelf into the Grand Signor's ſervice, when he went to beſiege Bagdat, in the year 1638. Though the Turk had the good fortune to carry the City in a ſmall time; not ſo much by virtue of the Breach which Signor Michaël had made in the Wall, as the Sedition and Revolt that happen'd at the ſame inſtant, the Story whereof was thus in ſhort.

The Kan that ſuſtain'd the brunt of the Siege at firſt, was originally an Armenian, and his name was Seſi-couli-Kan. He had commanded the City a long time, and had defended it twice from the Army of the Turks, who were not able to take it before. But the King of Perſia having ſent one of his Favourites to command in his room, who had enter'd upon his Command before the Cannon had made the Breach, the old Kan finding himſelf diſplac'd by the Commiſſion of the new Governour, rather choſe to dye, than ſurvive the Affront which was put upon him. To which purpoſe he ſent for his Servants, the Officers of the Army, his Wife and Son, and taking three Cups of Poyſon in his Hand, he commanded his Wife, if ever ſhe lov'd him, now to ſhew the marks of her affection by generouſly dying with him. He gave the ſame exhortation to his Son; and ſo all three together drank up the Poyſon, which procur'd their ſpeedy death. The Souldiers, who had a great love for their Governour, having having beheld ſo diſmal a Spectacle, and knowing the Grand Signor was preparing for a general Aſſault, would not obey their new Kan, but began to act like Revolters; and to that purpoſe they agreed to deliver up the City, upon condition they might march away with their Arms and Baggage: but the Turks did not keep their words. For ſo ſoon as the Turks were got into the City, the Baſha's told the Grand Signor, that to weak'n the force of the Perſian, it was neceſſary for him to put to the Sword all the Souldiers that were in the City: and thereupon there were above twenty thouſand maſſacr'd in cold Blood. The Turks had ſeiz'd upon the Capuchins Manſion, but Signor Michaël chief of the Canonneers, got it to be reſtor'd them again.

As to the Civil Government of Bagdat, there is none but a Cady, who does all, acting even the Muſti, with a Skiekelaſton or Teſterdar, who receives the Revenues of the Grand Signor. There are in it five Moſquees, of which two are indifferently well built, and adorn'd with Duomo's cover'd with varniſh'd Tiles of different colours. There are alſo ten Inns, all ill built, except two, which are reaſonably convenient. In general, the City is ill built; there being nothing of beauty in it but the Bazars, which are all arch'd; elſe the Merchants would not be able to endure the heats. They muſt alſo be water'd three or four times a day; for which office ſeveral poor people are hir'd upon the publick charge. The City is full of Trade, but not ſo full as it was, when in the hands of the King of Perſia: for when the Turk took it, he kill'd moſt of the richeſt Merchants. However there is a great confluence thither from all Parts; whither for Trade, or for Devotions ſake, I cannot tell: becauſe they that follow the Sect of Haly, do believe that Haly liv'd at Bagdat. Beſides, all they that are deſirous to go to Mecca by Land, muſt paſs through Bagdat, where every Pilgrim is forc'd to pay four Piaſters to the Baſha. You muſt take notice that there are in Bagdat two ſorts of Mahometans, the firſt are call'd Rafedi's, or Hereticks; the ſecond, Obſervers of the Law, in all things like thoſe at Conſtantinople. The Rafedi's will by no means eat or drink with a Chriſtian, and very hardly with the reſt of the Mahometans: or if they do happen to drink out of the ſame Cup, or to touch them, they preſently waſh themſelves, as believing themſelves unclean. The others are not ſo ſcrupulous, but eat and drink and converſe with all the World. In the year 1639, after the Grand Signor had tak'n Bagdat, a Rafedi who was a Carrier of Water not only refus'd to give a Jew to drink, who deſir'd it of him in the Market-place, but abus'd him alſo in words. Thereupon the Jew complain'd to the Cady, who immediately ſent for him, and caus'd his Boracho and his Cup to be brought along with him; when he came before him, he ask'd for his Cup, and gave the Jew to drink, and then made the Porter drink alſo out of the ſame Cup: After that, he order'd the Rafedi to be Baſtinado'd, and this Leſſon to be taught him while he was chaſtiſing, That we are God's Creatures, as well Mahometans, as Chriſtians and Jews. This has made them leſs zealous in their Superſtition, though they are the chiefeſt part of the Inhabitants of the City.

As to their Funerals, I have particularly obſerv'd, that when the Husband dyes, the Wife pulls of all her Head-gear, and lets her Hair fall about her Ears; then ſhe all beſmears her Face with the Soot of a Kettle, and having ſo done, friſks and leaps about after ſuch a ridiculous manner, as from others would rather produce laughter than tears. All the kindred, friends and neighbours meet at the Houſe of the deceas'd, and ſtay for the Celebration of the Funeral. At what time the Women ſtrive to out-vie one another in a thouſand Apiſh tricks, clapping their Cheeks, yelling like mad people; and then of a ſudden letting themſelves to dance to the ſound of two Drums, like thoſe which the Tabor-and-Pipe-men carry, upon which the Women beat for a quarter of an hour. Among them there is one more accuſtom'd to this fool'ry than the reſt, that fills your Ears with mournful Dinns; to which other Women make anſwer, by redoubling their Cries, which may be heard at a great diſtance. It would then be a vain thing to ſeek to comfort the Children of the deceas'd; for they ſeem to be ſo much beſide themſelves, that they are not in a condition to hear any thing. And they are oblig'd to carry themſelves in that manner, unleſs they intend to run the reproach of not having any kindneſs for their Parents. When the Corps is carry'd to the Grave, abundance of poor people go before with Banners, and Creſcents at the ends of Sticks, ſinging moſt diſmal Dirges all the way. The Women are not to be at the Interment, who are not to go abroad but only upon Thurſdays, when they go to the Sepulchers to Pray for the Dead. And becauſe that by their Law the Husband is oblig'd to lye with his lawful Wife upon Thurſday-night or Fryday-night, upon Wedneſday-morning the Women go to the Baths, where they perfume their Heads and Bodies with a ſweet Water. They may go abroad ſometimes at the other ſeaſons, when their Husbands give them leave to viſit their Kindred; but then they are to be wrapt up from Head to Foot, that it is impoſſible for their Husbands themſelves to know them if they meet 'em i'the Streets. By the way take notice, that the Perſian Women, unleſs they be ſuch as are very poor, would rather ſtay within all the days of their Lives, than go abroad without a Horſe. And it is a certain ſign to know a Curtiſan from an honeſt Woman; for that the Curtiſans put their Feet in the Stirup, and the honeſt Women only in the Stirup-leathers. The Women of Bagdat are very richly habited, after their faſhions; but they are not contented to wear their Jewels about their Necks and Wriſts, for they hang them like Bracelets about their Faces, and will bore holes in their Ears to put in a Ring. The Arabian Women only bore the ſeparation between the two Noſtrils, where they wear hollow Rings, as well to ſpare coſt as for lightneſs; for ſome are ſo big, that you may almoſt thruſt your Fiſt through them. Beyond all this, the more to beautifie themſelves, they make a round Ring about their Eyes with a certain ſort of Blacking: And as well Men as Women, in the Deſert, put the ſame near their Eyes, to preſerve them, as they ſay, from the heat of the Sun.

Of Chriſtians there are three ſorts: Neſtorians, who have a Church; Armenians and Jacobites, who have none, but go the Capuchins, who adminiſter the Sacraments to them. The Chriſtians go in Devotion to a Chappel, about a ſhort quarter of a League from the City, dedicated to a Saint whom they call Keder-Elias, paying a ſmall Fee, for admiſſion, to the Turks, who keep the Keys. Two days journey from the City ſtands another ruin'd Church in a pitiful Village, where they ſay, that St. Simon and St. Jude were both Martyr'd and Buried. If a Chriſtian dyes, all the reſt come to his Burial, and returning home, find a Supper prepar'd to welcome them; the next day they return to the Grave, and pray for the deceas'd; and the third day there is a Dinner for all comers and goers. Sometimes there will be a hundred and fifty perſons at a Burial. They repeat the ſame Ceremonies for the ſeventh, fifteenth, thirtieth and fortieth days afterwards; having a great veneration for the Dead, for whom they pray too often. This cuſtom of Feaſting is very inconvenient for the Poor; for they being deſirous to imitate the Rich, run themſelves ſometimes ſo far in Debt, that they are forc'd to ſell their Children to the Turks to diſcharge themſelves.

There are ſeveral Jews alſo in Bagdat, but more that come every year in Devotion to viſit the Sepulcher of the Prophet Ezekiel, which is a day and a halfs journey from the City. In ſhort, ſince the taking of Bagdat by Sultan Amurat, the number of Inhabitants cannot be leſs than fifteen thouſand Souls; which ſhews that the City is not peopl'd according to its bigneſs.

About a day and a halfs journey from the Point of Meſopotamia, at diſtance almoſt equal between Tigris and Euphrates, there appears a vaſt Heap of Earth, which the people call to this day Nemrod. It ſtands in the midſt of a wide Plain, and may be diſcover'd a great way off. The vulgar ſort believe it to be the Remains of the Tower of Babel; but there is more probability of the Arabians Opinion, who call it Agartouf, and believe it to have been built by an Arabian Prince, who always kept a Beacon at the top to aſſemble his Subjects together in time of War. This Heap of Earth was about three hundred Paces in circuit; but it is not eaſie to gueſs at the ancient height, the reſt being fall'n to ruine, but only eighteen or twenty Fathom. It is built of Brick dry'd in the Sun, every Brick being ten Inches ſquare, and three thick. The Building is thus rais'd. Upon every row of Canes or Reeds bruis'd to pieces and mix'd with Wheat-ſtraw, and ſpread an Inch and a half thick, lye ſeven orders of theſe Bricks with a little Straw between each; then another Bed of Reeds, and ſix rows of Bricks; then a third with five rows, decreaſing in that manner 'till you come to the top. The form of it ſeems to have been rather ſquare than round; and in the higheſt part of that which remains there appears a Hole like a Window; if it were not rather an Out-let for Water, or a Hole for the Scaffolding. In ſhort, according to the Deſcription of Moſes there

CHAP. VIII.

A Continuation of the Road from Bagdat to Balſara; and of the Religion of the Chriſtians of St. John.

THE fifteenth of March we hir'd a Bark from Bagdat to Balſara. And we obſerv'd, that a little beyond Bagdat the River Tigris divides it ſelf into two Arms; the one which runs through the ancient Chaldea, the other keeps its courſe toward the Point of Meſopotamia; theſe two Arms making a large Iſland, croſs'd by ſeveral ſmall Chanels.

When we came to the place where Tigris divides it ſelf, we beheld as it were the compaſs of a City that might have formerly been a large League in circuit. There are ſome of the Walls yet ſtanding, upon which ſix Coaches may go a-breſt. They are made of burnt Brick, every Brick being ten Foot ſquare, and three thick. The Chronicles of the Country ſay, that theſe were the Ruines of the ancient Babylon.

We follow'd that Arm of Tigris that runs along the Coaſt of Chaldea; for fear of falling into the hands of the Arabs, who were then at War with the Baſha of Babylon, denying to pay the ordinary Tribute to the Grand Signor. We were ten days upon the Water in our paſſage from Bagdat to Balſara, and lay every night upon the Water, dreſſing our Victuals in the Bark. For when we came to any Villages, we ſent our Servants a-ſhoar to buy Proviſions, which we had very cheap. Now the Towns we met with upon the Shoar were theſe; Amurat, where there ſtood a Fort of Brick bak'd in the Sun; Manſoury, a great Town; Magar, Gazer, and Gorno. At this laſt place Euphrates and Tigris meet together: where are alſo three Caſtles to be ſeen; one upon the Point where the two Rivers meet, which is the ſtrongeſt, and where the Son of the Prince of Balſara then commanded; the ſecond upon Chaldea ſide; and the third upon Arabia ſide. Though the Coſtoms be there exactly demanded, and paid, yet they never ſearch any perſon. The Tides come up to that place: ſo that having but fifteen Leagues to Balſara, we got thither in ſev'n hours, having both Wind and Tide.

All the Country between Bagdat and Balſara is inter-cut and parted by Dikes, like the Low Countries; the two Cities lying a hundred and ſixty Leagues one from the

the other. It is one of the beſt countries in the poſſeſſion of the Grand Signor, being ſtor'd with large Meadows and excellent Paſturage, where are bred infinite numbers of Beaſts, eſpecially Mares and Bufalo's. The Female Bufalo's go twelve Months, and yield ſo much milk, that there are ſome that will give two and twenty Pints. And there is ſo large a quantity of Butter made, that in ſome Villages upon the Tigris, we ſaw ſometimes five and twenty, ſometimes twenty Barks lad'n with Butter, which the people ſell all along the Gulf of Perſia, as well upon Arabia, as Perſia ſide.

Half the way betwixt Bagdat and Balſara, we perceiv'd ſeveral Pavilions ſet up in the Meadows along by the ſide of the River. Upon enquiry we heard that the Teſterdar was come from Conſtantinople to gather the Grand Signor's duty's. For from Bagdat to Gorno, for all the Bufalo's as well Male as Female, there is to be paid a Piaſter and a quarter for every head once a year; which is worth yearly to the Grand Signor a hundred and fourſcore thouſand Piaſters. Every Mare alſo pays two Piaſters, every Sheep ten Sous; which if the Country people were not very cunning would be worth fifty thouſand Piaſters more than it is.

After this we came to Gorno, a Fortreſs upon the point where the two Rivers meet, beſides two other ſmall Caſtles upon each ſide, ſo that there is no paſſing without leave. Upon the Fort of Gorno, which was well furniſh'd with Cannon, we ſaw the Prince of Balſara's Son, who was Governour of the Fort. And here it is that the Account of the Cuſtoms is taken. But though they are very exact in ſearching the Barks, they are very civil, for they ſearch no body. However leſt any Goods ſhould be hid between the Planks of the Ships, over which they generally throw Fagots and Canes, the Cuſtomers bring a great Piercer, with which they bore the ſides of the Bark quite through for the diſcovery of conceal'd Goods. The Goods are Regiſter'd at Gorno, but the Cuſtoms are always paid at Balſara, according to the accompt giv'n from the Fort.

The ſame day entring into the Chanel that is cut out of Euphrates to Balſara, we met the chief of the Holland Factory taking his pleaſure in a Boat cover'd with Scarlet, who took me with him to Balſara.

Balſara ſtands upon the ſide of Arabia deſerta, two Leagues from the Ruines of a City, which was formerly call'd Beredon, and anciently ſtood in the Deſert, to which the Water was formerly conveigh'd out of Euphrates in a Brick Chanel ſtill to be ſeen.

By the Ruines it appears to have been a great City, from whence the Arabians fetch away the Bricks and ſell them at Balſara. The City of Balſara is half a League from Euphrates, which the Arabians in their Language call Shetel-arch, or the River of Arabia. The Inhabitants of the City have made a Chanel to it about half a League long, which bears Veſſels of 150 Tuns; at the end whereof ſtands a Fort, ſo that no Veſſel can get into the Fort without leave. The Sea is above fifteen Leagues off, but the Tide comes up to the Chanel, and fills the River other fifteen Leagues upward beyond Gorno. The Country is ſo low, that were it not for a Dam that runs along the Sea-ſhoar, it would often be in danger of being drown'd. The Dam is above a League in length, and built all of Free-ſtone ſo ſtrong, that the fury of the waves can do no injury, though it lie open to a Boyſtrous Sea.

It is not above a hundred years ſince Balſara belong'd to the Arabians of the Deſert, and had no commerce with the Nations of Europe. For thoſe people were contented to eat their own Dates, having ſo great a quantity, that they only live upon them. 'Tis the ſame thing all along the Gulf on each ſide; for from Balſara to the River Indus for above ſix hundred Leagues together, and all along the Coaſt of Arabia to Maſcaté, the poor ſort of people know not what it is to eat Rice, but live upon Dates and Salt-fiſh dry'd in the wind. The Cows eat no Graſs, and though they go abroad in the fields, they find little or nothing among the buſhes which is proper for them to eat. But every Morning before they drive them to the Field, and when they return home, they give them heads of fiſh and Date-nuts boil'd together.

The Turks having had War with the Arabians took Balſara; and yet becauſe the Arabians always hover'd about the Town, and made booty of all they could lay their hands on, they were forc'd to come to an agreement with them, that the Arabs ſhould quietly enjoy all the Deſert, 'till within a League of the City; and that the Turks should remain peaceable Masters of the City, where they have a Basha for Governour. But this Treaty endur'd not long; for in the middle of the City there is a Cittadel, call'd Aushel Basha, or the Basha's Court, which the Turks built; so that the Garrison being Turks and the Inhabitants Arabians who could not endure to be curb'd, they oft-times quarrell'd with the Turks and came to blows. Thereupon the Arabians of the Desert came to the relief of the Citizens and besieg'd the Basha in the Fortress. At length because there could be no such agreement made, but that one party or other took an occasion presently to break it, there was one Basha whose Name was Aiud, who after many contests and revolts which had almost tyr'd him, resolv'd to rid himself of the trouble, and sold his Government for forty thousand Piasters to a rich Lord in the Country, who presently rais'd a sufficient number of Souldiers to keep the people in awe. This great man took upon him the name of Efrasias Basha, being the Grandfather of Hussen Basha, who was Governour at the time when I pass'd through before. This Efrasias threw off the Turkish yoak, and took upon him the title of Prince of Balsara. As for the Bashs that sold his Government, he no sooner arriv'd at Constantinople, but he was strangl'd. But after Amurath had taken Bagdat, the Prince of Balsara was glad to feed him continually with Presents that chiefly consisted in Horses, which are very beautiful in that Country. The Great Sha-Abas having taken Ormus, sent a powerful Army under the Command of Imian-Kouli-Kan Governour of Shiras, to take in Balsara. Whereupon the Prince finding himself too weak to resist so great a Pow'r, made anagreement with the Desert Arabians to break down the Dam that stops the Sea. Which being perform'd, in came the Sea tumbling fifteen Leagues to Balsara, and four Leagues beyond it, which constrain'd the Persians, surrounded with water, and hearing at the same time of the death of Sha-Abas, to raise their Siege. Since that inundation, several Lands and Gardens have been utterly Barren, or have born very little, by reason of the Salt which the Sea has left behind.

Turks

The Prince of Balsara has enter'd into Leagues with several strange Nations, so that whencesoever you come, you may be welcome. There is so much liberty and so good order in the City, that you may walk all night long in the Streets without molestation. The Hollanders bring Spices thither every year. The English carry Peper and some few Cloves; but the Portugals have no Trade at all thither. The Indians bring Calicuts, Indigo, and all sorts of Merchandizes. In short, there are Merchants of all Country's, from Constantinople, Smyrna, Aleppo, Damascus, Cairo, and other parts of Turkie, to buy such Merchandizes as come from the Indies, with which they lade the young Camels which they buy in that place; for thither the Arabians bring them to put them to sale. They that come from Diarbequir, Mousful, Bagdat, Mesopotamia, and Assyria, send their Merchandizes up the Tigris by Water, but with great trouble and expence. In regard the Boats are to be tow'd by men, that cannot go above two Leagues and a half in a day, and against the Wind they cannot stir, which makes them oft-times between Balsara and Bagdat to be above sixty days, nay there have been some that have been three months upon the Water.

The Customs of Balsara amount to five in the hundred, but generally you have some favour shew'd you, either by the Customer or the Prince himself, that the Merchant does not really pay above four in the hundred. The Prince of Balsara is so good a Husband, that he lays up three millions of Livers in a year. His chiefest Revenue is in four things, Money, Horses, Camels, and Date-trees; but in the last consists his chiefest wealth. For all the Country from the meeting of the two Rivers to the Sea, for the space of thirty Leagues together, is all cover'd with these Trees; nor does any one dare to touch a Date, 'till he has paid for every Tree three fourths of a Larin, or nine Sous French. The profit which the Prince makes upon money, proceeds from this, that the Marchants that come from abroad are oblig'd to carry their Reals to his Mint, where they are Coyn'd and converted into Larins, which is worth to him eight in the hundred. As for his Horses, there is no place in the world, where there are more fit for travel, or handsomer shap'd; for there are some that will travel thirty hours together and never draw bit, especially the Mares. But to return to the Palm-Trees it is worth observation, that there is more Art to bring up those Trees than any other. The Natives dig a hole in the ground, wherein they heap a great quantity of Date-nuts in a Pyramidical form, the top whereof ends in one ſingle Nut, which being cover'd with Earth produces the Palm-tree. Moſt of the people of the Country do ſay, that in regard there is among the Palm-trees the diſtinction of Male and Female, that therefore they muſt be planted one by another, for that otherwiſe the Female Tree will bear no Fruit. But others affirm that nicety to be unneceſſary; and that it ſuffices, when the Male is in Bloſſom to take a Flower from the Male, and put it into the Heart of the Female a little above the Stem; for unleſs they ſhould do ſo, all the Fruit would fall off before it came to maturity.

There is at Balſara a Cady that adminiſters Juſtice, and who is eſtabliſh'd by the authority of the Prince that commands there. In the City are alſo three ſorts of Chriſtians, Jacobites, Neſtorians, and Chriſtians of St. John. There is alſo a Houſe of Italian Carmelites; and there was a Houſe of Portugal Auſtin-Friars, but they have forſak'n the Town ever ſince their Country-men quitted the Trade.

The Chriſtians of St. John are very numerous at Balſara, and the Villages thereabouts; who anciently liv'd by the River of Jordan, where St. John Baptiz'd; and from whom they took their Name. But ſince the time that Mahomet conquer'd Paleſtine, though Mahomet formerly gave them his Hand and his Letters of Priviledge that they ſhould not be moleſted, nevertheleſs they that ſucceeded the falſe Prophet reſolv'd to extirpate them all; to which purpoſe they ruin'd their Churches, burnt their Books, and exercis'd all manner of cruelties upon their perſons: which oblig'd them to retire into Meſopotamia and Chaldea, and for ſome time they were under the Patriarch of Babylon, from whom they ſeparated about a hundred and ſixty years ago. Then they remov'd into Perſia and Arabia, and the Towns round about Balſara; as Souter, Deſpoul, Rumez, Bitoum, Mono, Endecan, Calafabat, Aveza, Dega, Dorech, Maſquel, Gumar, Carianous, Balſara, Onezer, Zech, Loza. Nor do they inhabit City or Village by which there does not run a River. And many of their Biſhops have aſſur'd me, that the Chriſtians in all the foregoing places make above five and twenty thouſand Families. There are ſome among them who are Merchants; but the moſt part of them are Trades-men, eſpecially Gold-ſmiths, Joyners, and Lock-ſmiths.

Their Creed is full of fables and foul errours. The Perſians and Arabians call them Sabbi, a People that have forſak'n their own Religion, to take up a new one. In their own Language they call themſelves Mendai Jabia, or Diſciples of St. John, from whom, as they aſcertain us, they have receiv'd their Faith, their Books, and their Traditions. Every year they celebrate a Feaſt for about five days, during which time they go in Troops to their Biſhops, who Baptize them according to the Baptiſm of St. John.

They never Baptize but in Rivers, and only upon Sundays. But before they go to the River they carry the Infant to Church, where there is a Biſhop who reads certain Prayers over the Head of the Child; from thence they carry the Child to the River, with a Train of Men and Women, who together with the Biſhop go up to the knees in Water. Then the Biſhop reads again certain Prayers out of a Book which he holds in his Hand, which done he ſprinkles the Infant three times, ſaying, Beeſmebrad er-Rabi, Kaddemin, Akreri, Menhal el gennet Alli Koulli Kralek; or, In the Name of the Lord, firſt and laſt of the World and of Paradiſe, the high Creator of all things. After that, the Biſhop reads ſomething again in his Book, while the God-father plunges the Child all over in the Water; after which they go all to the Parents Houſe to feaſt. If any tax their Baptiſm for inſufficient, in regard the Three Perſons of the Divinity are not nam'd therein, they can make no rational defence for themſelves. Nor have they any knowledge of the Myſtery of the Holy Trinity, only they ſay that Chriſt is the Spirit and Word of the Eternal Father. They are ſo blind as to believe the Angel Gabriel to be the Son of God, begotten upon Light; yet will not believe the Eternal Generation of Chriſt, as God. Yet they confeſs he became Man, to free us from the Puniſhment of Sin: and that he was conceiv'd in the womb of a Virgin without the knowledge of Man, by means of the Water of a certain Fountain which ſhe drank of. They believe he was crucifi'd by the Jews; that he roſe the third day; and that his Soul aſcending up to Heaven, his Body remain'd on Earth. But like the Mahometans they corrupt their Faith, by ſaying, that Chriſt vaniſh'd when the Jews came to take him, and that he deluded their cruelty with his Shadow.

In

In the Euchariſt they make uſe of Meal or Flow'r, kneaded up with Wine and Oyl: For, ſay they, the Body of Chriſt being compos'd of the two principal parts, Fleſh and Blood, the Flow'r and the Wine do moſt perfectly repreſent them; beſides, that Chriſt at his Supper made uſe of Wine only, and not of Water. They add Oyl, to ſignifie the benefit we receive by his favour of the Sacrament, and to put us in mind of our Love and Charity towards God and our Neighbour. To make this Wine, they take Grapes dry'd in the Sun, which they call in their Language Zebibes, and caſting Water upon them, let them ſteep for ſo long a time. The ſame Wine they uſe for the Conſecration of the Cup. They make uſe of Raiſins, in regard they are more eaſie to be had than Wine; the Perſians, eſpecially the Arabians, under whoſe Government they live, not permitting, nor indeed allowing them the uſe of it. Of all people that follow the Law of Mahomet, there are none ſo oppoſite to other Religions, as theſe Perſians and Arabians about Balſara. The words of their Conſecration, are no other than certain long Prayers, which they make to praiſe and thank God, at the ſame time bleſſing the Bread and Wine, never making mention of his Body and Blood; which they ſay is not at all neceſſary, becauſe God knows their intentions. After all the Ceremonies are ended, the Prieſt takes the Bread, and having eaten ſome of it, diſtributes the reſt to the People.

As to their Biſhops and Prieſts, when any one dyes, who has a Son, they chooſe him in his place; and if he have no Son, they take the next a-kin that is moſt capable and beſt inſtructed in their Religion. They that make the Election, ſay ſeveral Prayers over him that is elected. If he be a Biſhop, after he is receiv'd, and that he go about to Ordain others, he ought to faſt ſix days, during which time he continually repeats certain Prayers over him that is to be ordain'd Prieſt, who alſo for his part faſts and prays all the ſaid time. And whereas I ſay the Father ſuccedes the Son, it is to be obſerv'd, that among the Chriſtians in thoſe Parts, both Biſhops and Prieſts marry, as do the reſt of the people; only if their firſt Wife dye, they cannot marry another unleſs ſhe be a Virgin. Moreover, they that are admitted to Eccleſiaſtical Function, muſt be of the race of Biſhops or Prieſts; and their Mothers muſt have been always Virgins when they were marry'd. All their Biſhops and Prieſts wear their Hair long, and a little Croſs wrought with a Needle.

When there is any Wedding to be, the kindred and perſons invited go together with the Bridegroom, to the Houſe where the Bride lives. Thither comes the Biſhop alſo, and approaching the Bride, who is ſitting under a Canopy, he asks her if ſhe be a Virgin. If ſhe anſwer that ſhe is ſo, he makes her confirm it by an Oath. After which he returns to the Gueſts, and ſends his Wife with ſome other skilful Women to make an inſpection. If they find her to be a Virgin, the Biſhop's Wife returns and makes Oath of it; and then they all go to the River, where the Biſhop re-baptizes the Couple to be marry'd. Then they return toward the Houſe, and making a ſtop before they come quite near it, the Bridgroom takes the Bride by the Hand, and leads her ſeven times from the Company to the Houſe, the Biſhop following them every time, and reading certain Prayers. After that they go into the Houſe, and the Bride and Bridegroom place themſelves under the Canopy, where they ſet their Shoulders one againſt another, and the Biſhop reads again, cauſing them to lay their Heads together three times. Then op'ning a Book of Divination, and looking for the moſt fortunate day to conſummate the Marriage, he tells them of it. But if the Biſhop's Wife do not find the Bride to be a Virgin, the Biſhop can proceed no farther, ſo that if the young Man have ſtill a mind, he muſt go to ſome meaner Prieſt to perform the Ceremony. Which is the reaſon that the people take it for a great diſhonour to be marry'd by any other than the Biſhops; for when a Prieſt marries, 'tis an infallible ſign that the Bride was no Virgin. The Prieſts alſo, in regard they take it to be a great Sin for a Woman to marry not being a Virgin, they never marry any ſuch but by conſtraint, and to avoid enſuing inconveniencies; for ſometimes in deſpite they will turn Mahometans. The reaſon of the Inſpection is, that the Husbands may not be deceiv'd, and to keep the young Girls in awe.

As to what they believe touching the Creation of the World, they ſay, that the Angel Gabriel undertaking to create the World according to the command which God gave him, took along with him three hundred thirty-ſix thouſand Demons, and made the earth ſo fertile, that it was but to Sow in the Morning and Reap at Night. That the ſame Angel taught Adam to Plant and Sow, and all other neceſſary Sciences. Moreover that the ſame Angel made the ſeven lower Spheres, the leaſt whereof reaches to the Center of the World, in the ſame manner as the Heavens do, all contriv'd one within another. That all theſe Spheres are of different Metals, the firſt next the Center is of Iron, the ſecond of Lead, the third of Braſs, the fourth of Laten, the fifth of Silver, the ſixth of Gold, and the ſeventh of Earth. The ſeventh is that which contains all the reſt, and is the chiefeſt of all, as being the moſt fruitful and profitable to Man, and the moſt proper to preſerve Mankind, whereas the reſt ſeem rather to be fram'd for its deſtruction. They believe that over every Heaven there is Water, whence they conclude that the Sun ſwims in a Ship upon that Water, and that the Maſt of his Ship is a Croſs, and that there are a great number of Boys and Servants to guide the Ships of the Sun and Moon. Beſides, they have the Picture of a Barque, which they ſay belong'd to the Angel Bacan, whom God ſends to viſit the Sun and Moon, to ſee whether they move right or no, and keep cloſe to their duty.

In reference to the other World and Life to come, they believe there is no other World, but where Angels and Devils, the Souls of good and bad reſide. That in that World there are Cities, Houſes, and Churches, and that the Evil Spirits have alſo Churches, where they pray, ſinging and rejoycing upon Inſtruments, and Feaſting as in this World. That when any one lies at the point of death, three hundred and ſixty Demons come and carry his Soul to a place full of Serpents, Dogs, Lyons, Tygres, and Devils; who, if it be the Soul of a wicked man, tear it in pieces; but being the Soul of a Juſt man, it creeps under the bellies of thoſe Creatures into the preſence of God, who ſits in his ſeat of Majeſty to judge the World. That there are Angels alſo that weigh the Souls of Men in a Ballance, who being thought worthy, are admitted immediately into Glory. That the Angels and Devils are Male and Female, and beget Children. That the Angel Gabriel is the Son of God engender'd upon Light, and that he has a Daughter call'd Souret who has two Sons. That the Angel Gabriel has ſeveral Legions of Demons under him who are inſtead of Souldiers, and others that are his Officers of Juſtice, whom he ſends from Town to Town, and from City to City, to puniſh the wicked.

In reference to Saints, they hold that Chriſt left twelve Apoſtles to Preach to the Nations. That the Virgin Mary is not dead, but that ſhe lives ſomewhere in the World, though there be no perſon that can tell where ſhe is. That next to her St. John is the chiefeſt Saint in Heaven, and next to them Zacharias and Elizabeth, of whom they recompt ſeveral Miracles and Apocryphal Tales. For they believe that they two begat St. John only by embracing; that when he came to be of age they Marry'd him, and that he had four Sons which he begat upon the waters of Jordan. That when St. John deſir'd a Son, he pray'd to God, who drew him one out of the water; ſo that St. John had no more to do with his Wife but only to give her the Child to bring up. That he dy'd a natural death, but that he commanded his Diſciples to Crucifie him after his death, that he might be like Chriſt. Laſtly, that he dy'd in the City of Fuſter, and that he was buri'd in a Chryſtal Tomb, brought by miracle to the City, and that this Sepulchre was in a certain Houſe near the River Jordan.

They highly honour the Croſs, and ſign themſelves with it; but they are very careful of letting the Turks obſerve them; and during their Ceremonies, they ſet a Watch at their Church doors for fear the Turks ſhould enter, and lay ſome unjuſt Fine upon them. When they have ador'd the Croſs, they take it in two pieces, which they never put together again, 'till their Service re-begins. The reaſon why they ſo adore the Croſs is drawn out of a Book which they have, Entitul'd The Divan. Where it is written that every day early in the Morning, the Angels take the Croſs and put it in the middle of the Sun, which receives his light from it, as the Moon alſo doth hers. They add, that in the ſame Book are Pictur'd two Ships, one of which is nam'd the Sun, the other the Moon; and that in every one of theſe Ships there is a Croſs full of Bells: And moreover, that if there were not a Croſs in thoſe two Ships, the Sun and Moon would be depriv'd of Light, and the Ships would ſuffer Shipwrack.

Their

Their chief Feſtivals are three. The one in Winter, that laſts three days, in memory of our firſt Parent and the Creation of the World. The other in the Month of Auguſt, that alſo laſts three days, which is call'd the Feaſt of St. John. The third which laſts five days, in June, during which time they are all re-baptiz'd. They obſerve Sunday, doing no work upon that day. They neither Faſt nor do any penance. They have no Canonical Books, but a great number of others that treat of nothing but Witchcraft, in which they believe their Prieſts to be very crafty, and that the Devils are at their beck. They hold all Women to be unclean, and that it is not at all available for them to come to the Church.

They have one Ceremony, which they call the Ceremony of the Hen, of which they make great Accompt, which is not lawful for any to perform but a Prieſt Born of a Virgin at the time of her Marriage. When a hen is to be kill'd the Prieſt puts off his ordinary habit, and puts on a Linnen Cloth, girding his waſte with a ſecond, and throwing a third about his ſhoulders like a Stole. Then he takes the Fowl, and plunges it in the water to make it clean; after which he turns toward the Eaſt and cuts off the head, holding the Body in his hand 'till it has bled out all the blood. While the Hen bleeds, with his Eyes lifted up to Heaven, as if he were in an extaſie, he repeats in his own Language theſe words following: In the name of God, may this fleſh be profitable to all that eat of it? They obſerve the ſame ceremony when they kill Sheep. For firſt, they cleanſe the place very carefully where the Sheep is to be kill'd, waſhing it with water, and ſtrewing it with boughs, nor is the number of people ſmall that aſſiſts at this Ceremony, as if it were at ſome ſolemn Sacrifice. If you ask them why it is not lawful for the Laity to kill Fowls? They anſwer that it is no more lawful for them to kill than to conſecrate them; and that is all the reaſon which they bring. They eat of nothing dreſt by the Turks; and if a Turk ask them for drink, ſo ſoon as he has drank, they break the Cup. And to make the Turks more hateful, they Picture Mahomet like a great Gyant, ſhut up in Priſon in Hell with four more of his Parents; and they ſay, that all the Turks are carry'd into the ſame place full of wild Beaſts to be there devour'd.

They pretend all to Salvation. For, ſay they, after the Angel Gabriel had fram'd the World by the command of God, he thus diſcours'd him. Lord God, ſaid he, behold I have built the World as thou didſt command me. It has put me to a great deal of trouble, and my Brethren alſo, to raiſe ſuch high Mountains that ſeem to ſuſtain Heaven. And who indeed was able to make way for Rivers through Mountains without vaſt labour, and to give every thing its proper place? Moreover, great God, by the aid of thy powerful Arm, we have brought the World to ſo much perfection, that men cannot think upon any thing needful for them, which is not to be found therein. But inſtead of that ſatisfaction which I ought to have for having accompliſh'd ſo great a work, I find no reaſon but to be altogether griev'd. When God demanding the cauſe, the Angel Gabriel anſwer'd: My God and Father, I will tell you what afflicts me; becauſe that after the making of the World as I have done, I foreſee that there will come into it a prodigious number of Jews, Turks, Idolaters, and other Infidels, Enemies of your Name, who will be unworthy to eat and enjoy the Fruits of our Labours. To whom God thus reply'd: Never grieve, my Son, there ſhall live in this World which thou haſt built, certain Chriſtians of St. John who ſhall be my friends, and ſhall be all ſav'd. Upon which the Angel admiring how that ſhould be! What, ſaid he, will there not be ſeveral Sinners among thoſe Chriſtians, and by conſequence will not they be your Enemies? To whom God thus concluded: That at the day of Judgment the Good ſhould Pray for the Wicked, and by that means they ſhould be all forgiv'n, and obtain Salvation.

Theſe Chriſtians have a ſtrange Antipathy againſt the Blew Colour call'd Indigo, which they will not ſo much as touch. For certain Jews dreaming that their Law ſhould be aboliſh'd by St. John, told it their Country-men. Which they underſtanding, and ſeeing that St. John prepar'd to Baptize Chriſt, in a great rage, fetch'd a vaſt quantity of Indigo, which they call Nill in their Language, and flung it into Jordan. They add alſo that thoſe Waters continu'd unclean for ſome time, and had hinder'd the Baptiſm of Chriſt, had not God ſent his Angels with a large Veſſel of water, which he caus'd them to fill out of Jordan before the Jews had defil'd it with Indigo; for which reaſon God particularly Curs'd that Colour.

CHAP. IX.

A Continuation of the Road from Balſara to Ormus.

THe tenth of April we ſet out from Balſara for Bandar-Congo, for which paſſage we hir'd a Terrade or a Barque for the purpoſe; for they which are laden with Dates are generally ſo overcharg'd, that if a Storm riſes, they are in danger of being overſet. The River of Balſara is very dangerous, by reaſon of the Sands which alſo lie up and down the Perſian Gulf, and are very prejudicial to Navigation in that place. On both ſides the Gulf that ſeparates Perſia from Arabia the Happy, live a ſort of poor people that follow no other Trade than fiſhing; ſo poor, that when they bring fiſh to your Veſſel, they require nothing for it but Rice; and not the beſt neither, but ſuch coarſe ſtuff as we feed our Hens and Pigs withal. I gave them a Sack of thirty or fourty pounds, and bid them make merry with it, but they told me, they muſt be careful how they ſpent ſuch Rice as that, unleſs it were for their Sick, or at their Weddings; ſo that if the reſt of Arabia the Happy be like that, aſſuredly 'tis rather a moſt unfortunate Country.

There are ſeveral Iſles in the Perſian Gulf, but the chiefeſt of all is the Iſle of Baharen, where they fiſh for Pearls, of which I have ſpoken in its proper place.

Near to the place where Euphrates falls from Balſara into the Sea, there is a little Iſland, where the Barques generally come to an Anchor, in expectation of the wind. There we ſtay'd four days, whence to Bandar-Congo, it is fourteen days Sail, and we got thither the twenty-third of April. This place would be a far better habitation for the Merchants than Ormus, where it is very unwholeſom and dangerous to live. But that which hinders the Trade from Bandar-Congo is, becauſe the Road to Lar is ſo bad, by reaſon of the want of Water, and craggy narrow ways, which only Camels can endure; but from Ormus to Lar the way is tolerable. We ſtay'd at Bandar-Congo two days, where there is a Portugais Factor, who receives one half of the Cuſtoms by agreement with the King of Perſia. By the way take notice, that they who will go by Water from Ormus to Balſara, muſt take the Natives for their Pilots, and be continually ſounding beſides.

The thirtieth, we hir'd a Veſſel for Bander-Abaſſi, and after three or four hours Sailing, we put into a Village upon the Sea-ſide, in the Iſland of Keckmiſhe.

Keckmiſhe is an Iſland three Leagues about, and about five or ſix from Ormus. It excedes in Fertility all the Iſlands of the Eaſt, that produce neither Wheat nor Barley; but at Keckmiſhe is a Magazine of both, without which Ormus would hardly ſubſiſt, in regard it furniſhes that City with moſt of their Proviſion for their Horſes. There is in the Iſland a Spring of good Water, for the preſervation of which, the Perſians have built a Fort, leſt the Portugals when they held Ormus, ſhould get it into their Poſſeſſion.

In 1641. and 1642. the Hollanders falling out with the King of Perſia about their Silk Trade, beſieg'd this Iſland. For the Ambaſſadors of the Duke of Holſtein coming into Perſia, the Dutch were jealous that they came to fetch away all the Silk; and thereupon enhanc'd the Market from forty-two to fifty Tomans. When the Ambaſſadors were gone, the Dutch would pay no more than forty-four, which was two Tomans more than they were us'd to do. The King netl'd that they would not ſtand to their words, forbid that they ſhould make ſale of their Goods 'till they had paid their Cuſtoms, from which 'till that time they were exempted. Thereupon the Hollanders beſieg'd the Fortreſs of Keckmiſhe, but the Heats were ſo intolerable, that they were forc'd to quit their deſign with great loſs of their Men; and at length by great Preſents to the chief Courtiers, they obtain'd to pay no more than forty-ſix Tomans.

Larec is an Iſland nearer to Ormus than Keckmiſhe, well inhabited, and ſo ſtor'd with Stags and Hinds, that in one day we kill'd five and forty.

From Keckmiſhe we Sail'd for Ormus, where we arriv'd the firſt of May. I had put put my choiceſt Goods in a Cheſt directed for the Holland Commander at Ormus, by which means I got the Cuſtom free.

The Perſian Gulf is the moſt dangerous Gulf I know, by reaſon of the ſhallowneſs and ſharp Promontories that point out into the Sea; and therefore the beſt way is to take a Pilot at Ormus or Bander-Congo, and the moſt proper Pilots are the Fiſhermen, who are only skill'd in that Sea and no farther. The Soyl about the Perſian Gulf is dry Sand and without Water, ſo that it is impoſſible to Travel by Land from Ormus to Balſara. The Merchants would be glad to find a way through the Coaſt of Arabia to get to Maſcaté, whence there might a cut be made to Sindi, Diu, or Surat, which are the three chief Ports of India. During the difference between the King of Perſia and the Hollanders, the Emir of Vodana an Arabian Prince, offer'd to ſhew them an eaſie Road from Maſcaté to Balſara. But the Hollanders fearing to break with the King of Perſia, where they vended above fifteen or ſixteen hundred thouſand pounds of their Pepper, and paid therewith for all their Silk, did not think it worth their while to quit Ormus to ſettle themſelves at Maſcaté.

Had it been yielded to, the way had been from Balſara to Elcatif a Sea-Town in Arabia the Happy, where there is a Fiſhery for Pearls that belongs to the Emir of Elcatif. From Elcatif to Maſcalat, another City of Arabia, and the reſidence of another Emir. From Maſcalat to Vodana, a good handſom City ſeated upon the meeting of two little Rivers that carry Barques to the Sea, and run together by the ſingle name of Moyeſur. The Soyl about Vodana produces no Corn, and very little Rice; but it abounds in Fruits, eſpecially Prunes and Quinces, which are not ſo ſour as ours, and are eaten by the Natives as Pears. There are extraordinary good Melons and great Store of Grapes, of which the Jews, who inhabit the beſt part of the City, are permitted to make Wine. From Vodana to the Gulf, the Country of each ſide is full of Palm-Trees, the Dates being the Food of the common people, who have not Money to buy either Corn or Rice. From Vodana to Maſcaté it is but fifteen Leagues, though by the Maps, which are Erroneous, the way is deſcrib'd to be much longer.

Being at Ormus, the Emir of Vodana ſhew'd me a Pearl tranſparent and perfectly round, that weigh'd ſeventeen Abas, or fourteen Carats and ſeven Eights; for in all the Pearl Fiſheries of the Eaſt they uſe no other weights but Abas, which make ſeven Eights of a Carat. I offer'd him 300000 Piaſters, or 60000 Roupies for the ſame Pearl, but the Emir refus'd to take it, telling me that he had been offer'd more Money for it by ſeveral Princes of Aſia, who had ſent to him to buy it, but that he was reſolv'd never to part with it.

CHAP. X.

Of the Authors firſt Voyage, and the adventure of four French-men.

I Departed out of Paris in the year 1657, and Embark'd at Marſeilles for Ligorn.

We ſet Sail from Ligorn ſeven Veſſels together, two bound for Venice, one for Conſtantinople, one for Aleppo, and three for Smyrna, in one of which being a Dutch Veſſel I Embark'd. But before I leave Smyrna, to begin my Journey from Tauris, give me leave to relate the ſtory of four French-men, the various accidents whereof will much enlight'n the Reader into the Cuſtoms and Manners, as well of the Turks as Perſians.

While I ſtay'd the departure of the Caravan, which could not be ready in five or ſix Weeks, as alſo upon the advice of a rich Jew and a Merchant of Jewels at Conſtantinople, who had ſeveral Pearls to ſell, as well for their beauty as their bigneſs, the beſt Commodity a man can carry to the Indies, I ſent to Conſtantinople a perſon that I carry'd carry'd along with me, one that was well vers'd in that ſort of Commodity. There was a Norman Gentleman nam'd de Reville then at Smyrna, who would needs accompany my Factor, ſo that they went both together in a Veſſel that carry'd the French Ambaſſador and his Lady to Conſtantinople. This Gentleman had two or three thouſand Ducats in his Purſe, wanting neither wit nor courage, beſides a good preſence; but perhaps he was more haſty in his proceedings than the reſerv'dneſs of that Country requir'd. He had left the Service of the Muſcovites, thinking to find an employment in the Service of the Venetians at Candy; but failing in his expectations, he reſolv'd to travel into Perſia. While he was at Conſtantinople, the Jews, who lay hold upon all opportunities of gain, ſoon found out my Factor; and beſides the Pearls which he deſired to ſee, they ſhew'd him ſeveral other rich Stones to try whether they could draw him in; for he had refus'd the Pearls becauſe they held them at too high a Rate. The Norman Gentleman fell into their acquaintance; and picking out the richeſt, told him, that being reſolv'd for the Indies, he had a mind to lay out four thouſand Ducats in Pearls. He added alſo, that he would pay him half in Money, half in Goods, and at the ſame time ſhew'd the Jew two thouſand Ducats, which the Jew had already devour'd with his eyes. Some four days after, the Jew brought the Gentleman four fair Pearles with ſome Emraulds; and you may be ſure they eaſily agreed upon the price, in regard the Gentleman had a deſign to put a trick upon the Jew. Thereupon he ſhews his Ducats a ſecond time, which the Jew, who thought he had a Cully, preſently told out as his own. After that the Jew deſiring to ſee the Goods, which made up the other part of the payment, the Gentleman without any more ado told him, that all the Merchandize which he had to pay him, was a good ſtrong Quartan Ague which had held him a long time, and indeed ſuch a one, that he could not poſſibly meet with a better, but that he would not over-rate it, in regard he ask'd but two thouſand Ducats for it. The Jew who was rich and in great credit at Court, was ſo incens'd at his raillery, that he had like to have made a wicked ſtir about it. For as he had heard him ſay, that the Gentleman was going into the Indies and Perſia, he might have eaſily caus'd him to have been apprehended for a Spy. But in regard the Jews can do nothing in point of Trade without the aſſiſtance of the French Merchants, he adviz'd with ſome of them, who perſwaded him that it was an Act of folly, which it better became him to excuſe, and deſir'd him to take his Goods again, and put up the buſineſs; which with much ado they perſwaded him to condeſcend to. The Gentleman fearing leſt the Jews underhand ſhould do him a private miſchief, ſtole away with what ſpeed he could, and return'd to Smyrna.

De Reville being thus return'd to Smyrna, put himſelf into an Almadier, which is a ſmall Veſſel of War, that generally touches at Chio and Rhodes, being bound for Cyprus, from whence there is always ſome convenience or other to get to Alexandretta. From thence he went to Aleppo; and while he ſtay'd there he met with two French-men, the one whoſe name was Neret, the other Hautin, who was an Accomptant. They had four Wooden Cheſts full of falſe Stones ready ſet, by which they flatter'd themſelves to be great gainers in Perſia. They went from Marſeilles to Seyde, from Seyde to Damas, hearing that there was an opportunity to Travel to Bagdat with the Topigi-Baſhi. This Topigi-Baſhi or chief of the Engineers, was he that aſſiſted Amurath in the taking of Bagdat; in recompence whereof the Grand Signor gave him a Timar, or Lordſhip in Damas worth four thouſand Crowns a year. Now it was his cuſtom every year to viſit Bagdat, and to ſtay there during the Seaſon, that there was any probability of the King of Perſia's beſieging it; which Seaſon not laſting above three or four Months, when that was over, he return'd to Damas. He uſually had about thirty Horſe with him, with which he never made it above eighteen or twenty days, taking the ſhorteſt cut directly through the Deſert, where the Arabs are commanded to bring him Victuals upon the Road. And he is willing at any time when he has this opportunity, to conduct the Franks that deſire it that way, in regard they are never ungrateful to him for it. Theſe two Franks therefore having deſir'd that they might be taken into his Company, the Topigi-Baſhi readily conſented; provided they could ſtay 'till he went, which would not be 'till two or three Months; with which anſwer they were well ſatisfy'd. But the two Franks had not ſtay'd at Damas above ſeven or eight days but they fell acquainted with a Spahi, a Renegado of Marſeilles, who proffer'd to carry them through through the Road of Meſopotamia, ſo that they ſhould be at Iſpahan before the Topigi-Baſhi, ſet out from Damas. Thereupon they privately departed out of Damas without acquainting the Topigi-Baſhi, who underſtanding they were gone after the courteſie he had offer'd them, was ſo enrag'd at their uncivility, that he ſent two of his Arabian Servants directly through the Wilderneſs to the Baſha of Bagdat, to give him advice of two Franks that were to paſs that way, who were moſt certainly Spies, deſcribing them withal from head to foot.

In the mean while the two Franks being arriv'd at Ourfa, the Spahi, as he had contriv'd his own deſign at Damas, goes to the Baſha of Ourfa, and informs him that he had conducted thither two Franks, who could be no other than Spies. Thereupon the Baſha ſeiz'd upon them and all their Goods, among the reſt he laid his paws upon ſeven hundred Piaſters, of which the Spahi no doubt had his ſhare. And this may ſerve for inſtruction to Travellers to have a care how and with whom they Travel in Turkie.

While the two French-men were in hold at Ourfa by one ſort of Treachery, the Norman Gentleman and his Companion arriv'd at Bagdat. But they had no ſooner ſet their feet upon the ſhore, when the Baſha verily believing them, to be the perſons, of whom the Topigi-Baſhi had giv'n him notice, caus'd them to be brought before him, and ſeiz'd upon their Goods and Letters, of which they had ſeveral for the Conſul of Aleppo, and other rich Merchants for Perſia. The Baſha ſent for the Capuchins to read thoſe Letters, but not believing them, he ſent for a Sicilian Phyſician which he had in his Service, and his Treaſurer who had been a Slave tak'n in Candy. But neither Phyſician, Treaſurer, nor Capuchins would interpret any thing in prejudice of the French-men; yet all that could not preſerve them from being ſhut up in a Stable full of dung, and from being threaten'd to be Shot out of a Cannon's mouth if they would not confeſs the truth. Thereupon the Capuchins and the Cadi beg'd him to ſuſpend his Sentence 'till the Arrival of the chief of the Cannoniers, to which he readily conſented.

When the Topigi-Baſhi came, the Baſha commanded the Priſoners to be brought before him. But when the Topigi-Baſhi deny'd them to be the perſons, the Baſha grew into ſuch a rage, that he no leſs reproach'd the Topigi-Baſhi for Treachery, than he had accus'd the others. Which ſo incens'd the Topigi-Baſhi on the other ſide, that he never left till he had obtain'd the releaſe of the two French-men; yet not ſo, but that the Baſha would have his due; ſo that Reville was forc'd to leave ſome of his Ducats behind which the Jew ſhould have had.

But now to return to Smyrna where I expected the Caravan for ſome time in order to my Journey into Perſia. Every thing being provided, we ſet forward in the Road for Tauris, which I have at large deſcrib'd, nor was there any thing worthy obſervation all the way. I Will only take notice, that when we departed from Tocat, in regard the heat was ſo extream, we left the common Road toward the North, and took the way through the Mountains, where there is always a freſh Breeze and ſtore of ſhady Lanes. In many of which high Mountains we met with Snow, and abundance of excellent Sorrel; and upon the tops of ſome of thoſe Mountains, we met with ſeveral ſorts of ſhells, as it had been upon the Sea ſhore, which is very extraordinary. From Erzerom we went to Cars; from Cars we came to Erivan. The Kan was not there then, being retir'd during the heat into the Mountains, a days Journey from the City. His Lieutenant telling me that I could not well paſs farther without paying my duty to the Kan; I follow'd his advice, and found him in his Tent in a fair Dale, where there was a great quantity of Snow: and where when it began to melt, appear'd ſeveral beautiful Flowers, ſo that Summer and Winter ſeem'd to lodge both in the ſame place. The Kan entertain'd both me and all my Company moſt nobly for ten days. I drove alſo a ſmall Trade with him. For I durſt not ſhew him the rarities I had, being deſign'd for the King. For as in India, ſo in Perſia, neither will the King look upon any thing which his Subjects have ſeen before, nor will the Subjects buy any thing which the King has ſeen, it being an affront to preſent any thing to the King which he had formerly view'd, and the Subject buys nothing rare but what he intends to preſent.

Being paſt Erivan you may leave your Caravan when you pleaſe, by reaſon of the ſecurity of the Roads in Perſia. And indeed I intended to have viſited the Kan of Gengée, but finding the Road ſo full of Rocks and Precipices, where a man was continually in danger of breaking his Neck, I turn'd my Horſes head and met the Caravan at Nacksivan in the Road to Tauris.

From Tauris to Iſpahan I met with nothing worthy obſervation. When I came to the Court I was well receiv'd by the King, and I ſold him as many Jewels and other Goods of great value, as came to ſixty-two thouſand Crowns. But of this more in another place.

CHAP. I.

Of the Authors ſixth and laſt Voyage from his ſetting out of Paris, to his Landing at Smyrna.

I Set out of Paris in the year 1663. for Lyons, with ſix ſeveral Servants of ſeveral profeſſions, which I thought moſt proper for my buſineſs. I carry'd with me the value of about four hundred thouſand Livers, part in Jewels, part in Goldſmiths work and other curioſities, which I deſign'd for the King of Perſia and the Great Mogul. Being at Lyons I bought a Steel Mirrour round and hollow, about two foot and a half in Diameter, would immediately melt a Half-Crown by the heat of the Sun-beams: and if you ſet a Candle by it in the night, you might read two hundred Paces off in your Bed by the reflection.

From Lyons I rode to Marſeilles, and ſet Sail for Ligorn the tenth of January, 1664. in a ſmall Bark, but being ſcar'd by a great Veſſel that we ſaw off at Sea, we came to an Anchor in the Port of Agaïe, two Leagues from Frejus, where there ſtood a pittiful Fort with two or three Houſes. There we alſo went aſhore and ſaw a Garden, the Alleys of which were diſtinguiſh'd with rows of Citron and Orange Trees, which look'd as Green in the depth of Winter as in the midſt of Summer, with ſeveral other curioſities after the mode of Italy. We were no ſooner got aboard again, but we perceiv'd another Veſſel making into the ſame Port with full Sail. It was a Veſſel which the Maſters of the Forein Office at Toulon, had ſet out to force all Ships that were bound into Italy to pay certain Customs, which those of Marseilles would not pay when they came into the Port of Toulon. Thereupon foreseeing that there would be mischief done, I called for my little Chests that contain'd my Goods of greatest value, carrying some part my self, and giving the rest to one of my most trusty Servants, thinking to have skipt into a Genoa Bark that lay hard by us; but instead of leaping a-board, I fell into the Sea: where by reason of the Tumult I had perish'd without relief, had I not by good fortune laid hold of a Cable and redeem'd my self. At what time one of my Servants, luckily coming to my aid, with much ado drew me up safe again.

Having escap'd this danger, I got a-shoar with such of my Servants as I had about me, and meeting with a Bark of Frontignan that carry'd Languedock Wine to the Coast of Italy, I hir'd him for Ligorn; and setting Sail, we first touch'd Villafranca, and afterwards at Monaco.

At Monaco I went a-shoar, and went to wait upon Madam the Princess, who shew'd me the Rarities in the Castle; among the rest, several pieces of extraordinary Painting, several pieces of Clock-work and Goldsmiths-work. But among all her Curiosities she shew'd me two pieces of Crystal, about the bigness of two Fists each, in one of which there was above a Glass full of Water, in the other a good quantity of Moss; which were clos'd in by Nature when the Crystal first congeal'd.

Monaco is a Castle situated upon a steep Rock, advancing out into the Sea; which advantage, together with others which it receives from Art and Nature, renders it one of the most considerable Forts in Italy.

The next day finding the Frontignan Vessel to be deep-laden, and that it made little way, I took a Faluke, and kept along by the Shoar, which was most pleasantly adorn'd with beautiful Villages and Houses, as far as Savona; where I chang'd my Faluke, to compleat the rest of the way which I had to Genoa. Half the way we did very well, but the Wind rising, we were forc'd to put into a great Town, where we landed; and from thence, having but nine Miles, I got in good time by Horse to Genoa. There can be no Prospect certainly more pleasing than that nine Miles riding. For on the one side you see nothing but a continu'd Row of magnificent Buldings and lovely Gardens; on the other a calm Shoar, upon which the Waves seem not to beat, but lovingly to kiss.

Arriving at Genoa, I met with the rest of my Servants; and at the end of two days I embarqu'd for Ligorn, where we arriv'd in four and twenty hours.

From Ligorn I went to the Court of Florence, to wait upon the Grand Duke. By whom I had the honour to be admitted into his Chamber, where I found no body attending but one Mute, who had a long time serv'd his Highness: and I observ'd that they understood one another by Signs, as perfectly as if the Mute had had his Speech and Hearing. So that whenever the Duke sent him into his Closet for any Papers or other thing whatsoever, he never fail'd to bring the right.

After I had tak'n my leave of the Duke, he sent me a noble Present of Wine and Fruits; but that which I valu'd more than all the rest, was a Case of Medicaments and Counter-poysons, in the composition whereof the Italians are very exquisite. And yet they did me no service; for when I came into the hot Countries their fermentation was so strong, that all the Oyls and Treacles broke their several Boxes, that I could save nothing of that precious Present.

The next day, being the twenty-sixth of March 1664, I embarqu'd with all my Servants in a Dutch Vessel call'd The Justice.

The twenty-seventh we staid in the Road, expecting the rest of the Fleet, consisting of eleven Ships, two Men of War, and nine Merchant-men; four of which were bound for Smyrna, three for Ancona, and two for Venice. About seven that evening we set Sail, and all that night the Wind was favourable, but blew hard and veer'd often; which was the reason that two of our Fleet separated from us, steering between the Isle of Elbe and Corsica, while we kept on between the Isle of Elba and Italy.

The twenty-eighth by eight in the Morning we found our selves between Porto Ferraro and Piombino, and it being fair Weather, we had a pleasant prospect of those two places. From thence we steer'd between two Ilands, the one call'd Palmajola, the other being nameless. About six hours after we saw Portolongone, afterwards at a distance we descry'd Monte-Christo. An hour after Noon we discover'd cover'd Caſtiglon-ſere, all the reſt of the day we coaſted by the Ilands of Gigio and Sanuti.

The twenty-ninth, with the ſame Wind at North-Weſt, by Morning we diſcover'd the Ilands of Pontia and Parmerola, and about Evening thoſe of Ventitione and Iſchia. Night approaching, and there being no news of the Ships we had loſt, inſtead of making the Pharo of Meſſina, it was reſolv'd that we ſhould ſteer a Courſe round about Meſſina, where we expected to overtake them. At eleven a Clock in the Evening we had but little Wind at North-North-Weſt, ſo that we made not above fourteen Leagues of way.

The thirty-firſt the ſame Wind continu'd, with a high Sea; but about nine at Night the Wind chopping about to the Weſt, we kept our former Courſe.

The firſt of April, by eight of the Clock in the Morning we diſcover'd the three Ilands that lye before Trepano, Levanzo, Maretima, and Favagna.

The ſecond and third the Weather was ill, and the Wind unconſtant, ſo that we made but little way.

The fourth, by break of day we diſcover'd the Iland of Pantalarea.

The fifth by Morning we found our ſelves within a League and a half of the Coaſt of Sicily, juſt againſt Cape Paſſaro, at what time, the Weather being fair, we had a view of Mount Gibello, all cover'd with Snow. Doubling the Cape in the Afternoon, we diſcover'd the Coaſt of Saragoſſa. The ſixth we had little or no Wind. But the ſeventh in the Morning, the Weather being fair, we diſcover'd Cape Spartivento; and the ſame Wind continuing all that day, toward Evening we ſail'd in view of other Ilands of Calabria.

The eighth we found our ſelves near to Cape Borſano, and all the reſt of the day we ſail'd in view of Cape Stillo and Cape delle Colonne.

The ninth we made little way. But on the Tenth in the Morning the Wind coming about to the South, we found our ſelves at the entry of the Gulf of Venice, between Cape St. Mary and the Coaſt of Greece, where the Mountains were cover'd with Snow. About ten of the Clock we tack'd to our own Courſe, while the Ships that were bound for Venice and Ancona entered the Gulf.

The tenth by Morning we ſaw two little Iſlands, the one call'd Fauno, the other Merlera, and were in ſight of Corfu. About Noon, the Wind being at Eaſt, we kept out at Sea: and about Evening abundance of little Birds lighted upon our Cordage, of which we caught enow to make a luſty Fricaſie. We alſo caught four Falcons, Owls, and good ſtore of Turtles.

The eleventh and twelfth the Wind being at Eaſt, we lay hovering about the Shoar, without making any way.

The fourteenth and fifteenth having the Wind at North-Weſt, we were two days without ſeeing Land, yet we caught good ſtore of Birds.

The ſixteenth the ſame Wind continuing, we found our ſelves near the Iſland of Zant. From eight in the Morning 'till three in the Afternoon we were becalm'd; but then a good briſk Weſt Wind carry'd away all our little Birds.

The ſeventeenth and eighteenth we were becalm'd.

The nineteenth in the Morning, the Wind being at North-Weſt, we diſcover'd Cape Gullo, between Modon and Coron, in the Morea.

The twentieth, with the ſame Wind that blew freſh, we found our ſelves by Morning within two Cannon-ſhot of Cape Matapan, which is the moſt Southern Cape of all Europe. About Noon the Wind coming full Weſt, in three hours we paſs'd by the Point of the Iſland Cerigo.

The twenty-firſt in the Morning, we diſcover'd the Iſlands of Caravi and Falconera on the one ſide, and Cape Schilli on the other hand. Two hours after, having a freſh Gale at South-Weſt, about Evening we were in view of the Iſland of St. George.

The twenty-ſecond though the Wind ſlackn'd, yet we made ſome way; for in the Morning we found our ſelves between the Iſland of Zea and the Morea, near to another Cape delle Colonne: afterwards we diſcover'd the Iſland of Negropont, and doubl'd the Cape three hours after Noon, having left ſight of the Iſland of Andros by ten in the Forenoon.

The twenty-third the Wind blowing freſh all the night, by morning we found our ſelves near the Iſland of Ipſera. At noon we made the Point of the Iſland of Chio, Chio, near to the Land; and that night we came to an Anchor near the Caſtle, being becalm'd.

The twenty-fourth the Wind roſe at North-Weſt, which blew us into the Port of Smyrna.

The twenty-fifth we went a-ſhoar, having had a quiet as paſſage as ever I had in my Life for twenty days together.

CHAP. II.

A Continuation of the Author's ſixth Voyage, as he travel'd from Smyrna to Iſpahan.

WE ſtaid at Smyrna from the twenty-fifth of April to the ninth of June; during which time there happ'nd ſo terrible an Earthquake; that I had like to have tumbl'd out of my Bed.

The Caravan being ready to ſet out for Tauris, I took with me three Armenian Servants, beſides thoſe that I carry'd out of France to ſerve me upon the Road.

We ſet out of Smyrna upon Monday the ninth of June at three a Clock in the afternoon. The Caravan rendevouz'd at Pont-garbaſhi, three Leagues from the City, conſiſting of ſix hundred Camels, and almoſt the ſame number of Horſe. We ſet out the next night, two hours after midnight. As for the Road I ſhall ſay nothing, only relate ſome Paſſages that fell out by the way.

Being come to Erivan, the fourteenth of September we encamp'd in a pleaſant green place between the Caſtle and the old Town; for we would not lye in the Inn, becauſe we heard that ſeveral ſick people lodg'd there. We ſtaid there two days; during which time I reſolv'd to wait upon the Kan, I found him in a Room made in one of the Arches of the Bridge which is built over the River, which I have deſcrib'd already, with ſeveral Captains and Officers about him: when he had ask'd me whence I came, and whither I was travelling, he caus'd a Glaſs of Liquor to be fill'd me. After that I preſented him with a Proſpective-Glaſs, ſix pair of ordinary Spectacles, twelve other pair of Spectacles that caſt ſeveral Reflexions, two little Piſtols, and a Steel to ſtrike Fire, made like a Piſtol. All which pleas'd him extremely well, eſpecially the Spectacles, for he was ſixty years of age. Thereupon he commanded a Lamb, Wine, Fruit, and Melons to be carry'd to my Tent, and that I ſhould want nothing. After that we ſate down to Dinner, but I obſerv'd the Kan himſelf drank no Wine, though he preſs'd me to it. The reaſon was, becauſe he was an Agi, that is, one that had made his Pilgrimage to Mecca; for then it is not lawful to drink Wine, or any other inebriating Drink. After Dinner, finding him in a pleaſant humour, I reſolv'd to complain to him of one of the Cuſtom-Officers about an injury he had done me. For it is uſual with the Cuſtomer in this place to op'n the Cheſts of all the Merchants, both Turks and Armenians, to the end that if they have any thing of Rarity the Kan of Erivan may ſee it: for many times, he buyes what pleaſes him beſt to ſend to the King. This Officer would not excuſe me for his Cuſtom, and therefore at my very firſt arrival he would have me to op'n my Cheſts; and becauſe I did not do it according to his Orders, he ask'd me very rudely why I had not obey'd his Commands: I anſwer'd him as ſurlily, that I would op'n my Cheſt no where unleſs it were in the preſence of the King, and that as for him, I knew him not: Upon that he threaten'd me, that if he did not find my Cheſts op'n the next day, he would op'n them by force; thereupon I ſaid no more, but bid him have a care I did not make him repent of what he had done already. This was the ground of the Quarrel, and I was about to have complain'd to the Kan; but his Nephew intreated me for the love I bare him, not to ſay any thing of it, and promis'd to ſend the Cuſtomer to me to beg my Pardon, which he did, and the Cuſtomer was forc'd to crave it heartily. To avoid the ſame inconvenience for the future, I deſir'd the Kan to give me his Paſport, to the end I might paſs Cuſtom-free through the Territories of his Government, which he freely and courteouſly granted me: Come, ſaid he, and dine with me to morrow, and you ſhall have it.

The twenty-ſixth of September we departed from Erivan, and the ninth of November we came to Tauris, taking the ordinary Road.

At Erivan two of my Servants, the one a Watch-maker, the other a Gold-ſmith, dy'd; I left them ſick there, but caus'd them to be buried in the Church-yard belonging to the Armenians. One of them dy'd in fifteen days, of a Gangrene, which eat out his Mouth and Throat; being the Diſeaſe of the Country. Though had the Armenians known that one of them had been a Proteſtant, they would never have allow'd him to have been bury'd in their Church-yard.

Here obſerve the exact Juſtice, wherewith the Perſians preſerve the Goods of Strangers. For the Civil Judge hearing of the death of the Watch-maker, caus'd his Chamber to be ſeal'd up to the end the Goods might be preſerv'd for the kindred of the deceas'd, if they came to demand them. I return'd to Tauris a twelve-month after, and found the Chamber cloſe ſeal'd up.

We ſtaid twelve days at Tauris: during which time I reſolv'd to attend the Kan of Shamaqui, a frontier Town of Perſia toward the Caſpian Sea; but I found him not there, in regard it was Harveſt ſeaſon, at what time he goes to gather the King's and his own Duties.

Two days journey on this ſide Shamaqui you paſs the Aras, and for two days journey you travel through a Country all planted with white Mulberry-Trees; the Inhabitants being all Silk-Weavers. Before you come to the City, you muſt croſs over ſeveral Hills: But I think I ſhould rather have call'd it a great Town, where there was nothing remarkable but a fair Caſtle which the Kan built himſelf, I ſpeak of the time paſt: For as I return'd from this preſent Voyage of which I now write, when I came to Tauris I underſtood, that there had happen'd ſuch a terrible Earthquake in the Town as had laid all the Houſes in a heap; none eſcaping that diſmal ſubverſion, but only one Watch-maker of Geneva, and one more who was a Camel-driver. I had ſeveral times deſign'd to return into France through Muſcovy; but I durſt never adventure, being certainly inform'd that the Muſcovite never permitted any perſon to go out of Muſcovy into Perſia, nor to come out of Perſia into Muſcovy. So that it was by particular connivence that that favour was granted to the Duke of Holſtein's Ambaſſadors. This laſt time I was reſolv'd to have try'd whether I could have open'd a Paſſage from Perſia through Muſcovy into France, but the Ruine of Shamaqui deterr'd me.

We departed from Tauris the twenty-ſecond of November, from whence to Caſhan we met with nothing conſiderable, but only one of the Muſcovite Ambaſſadors upon his return into his own Country, with a ſmall Retinue of ſixty, his Companion dying at Iſpahan.

Upon Sunday the fourteenth of December taking Horſe by three of the Clock in the morning, the Ice bearing very well, we came to Iſpahan about noon: but in regard it was ſlippery before day, and very plaſhy after the Sun was up, the Journey was both tedious and troubleſom.

CHAP. III.

The Road from Aleppo to Tauris through Diarbequir and Van.

THere are two Roads more remaining to be deſcrib'd; one through the North part of Turkie, the other through the South. The firſt through Diarbequir and Van, and ſo to Tauris; the ſecond through Anna, and the ſmall Deſert leading to Bagdat.

I will deſcribe the firſt of theſe Roads, and make a skip at the firſt leap to Bir, whither I have already led you in the Road from Aleppo.

From Bir or Beri, you travel all along the River Euphrates to Cachemé.

From Cachemé you come to Mileſara, where you pay the Cuſtoms of Ourfa, when when you do not pass through the City, which amounts to four Piasters for every Horse-load.

From Milesara you come to the River Arzlan-chaye, or, the Lion River, by reason of the rapidity of the Stream which falls into Euphrates.

From Arzlan-chaye you go to Seuerak. This is a City, water'd by a River, that also falls into Euphrates. It is environ'd with a great Plain to the North, the West, and South. The way which the Horses, Mules, and Camels keep is cut through the Rock like a Channel, two Foot deep, where you must also pay half a Piaster for every Horse-load.

From Seuerak you come to Bogazi, where there are two Wells, but not a House near; and where the Caravan usually lodges.

From Bogazi you come to Deguirman-Bogazi, and from Deguirman-Bogazi to Mirzatapa, where there is only an Inn.

From Mirzatapa you come to Diarbequir, which the Turks call Car-emu.

Diarbequir is a City situated upon a rising ground, on the right side of Tigris, which in that place forms a Half-moon; the descent from the Walls to the River being very steep. It is encompass'd with a double Wall; the outward Wall being strengthned with sixty-two Towers, which they report were built in Honour of the sixty two Disciples of JESUS CHRIST. The City has but three Gates, over one of which there is an Inscription in Greek and Latin, that makes mention of one Constantine. There are in it two or three fair Piazza's, and a magnificent Mosquee, which was formerly a Christian Church. It is surrounded with very decent Chamel-houses, near to which the Moullah's, Dervi's, Book-sellers and Stationers do live, together with all those other people that concern the Law. About a League from the City there is a Channel cut out of Tigris, that brings the Water to the City: And in this Water are all the red Marroquins wash'd that are made at Diarbequir, surpassing in colour all others in the East: which Manufacture employs a fourth part of the Inhabitants of the City. The Soil is very good, and yields according to expectation; there is excellent Bread and very good Wine, nor is there any better Provision to be had in any part of Persia: more especially, there is a sort of Pigeons which in goodness excel all the several kinds that we have in Europe. The City is very well peopl'd, and it is thought there are in it above twenty thousand Christians. The two thirds are Armenians, the rest Nestorians, with some few Jacobites. There are also some few Capuchins, that have no House of their own, but are forc'd to lodge in an Inn.

The Basha of Diarbequir is one of the Viziers of the Empire. He has but an inconsiderable Infantry, which is not much requisite in that Country; the Curds and Arabs which infest that Country being all Horse-men. But he is strong in Cavalry, being able to bring above twenty thousand Horse into the Field. A quarter of an hours riding on this side Diarbequir there is a great Town with a large Inn, where the Caravans that go and come from Persia rather choose to lye than at Diarbequir; in regard that in the City-Inns, they pay three or four Piasters for every Chamber, but in the Country-Inns there is nothing demanded.

At Diarbequir, you cross the Tigris, which is always fordable unless when the Snow and Rains have swell'd it; for then you must go a quarter of a League higher, and cross it over a great Stone-Bridge. Half a League on the other side of Tigris stands a Village, with an Inn, which is the Rendevous of the whole Caravan, and where they that first come have time enough to provide themselves for a Journey of nine or ten days, as far as Betlis. For though you may find Towns and Inns thick enough upon the Road, yet there is no good Bread to be met with.

When the Caravan proceeds, the first days journey is fourteen hours on Horse-back, and you come to lye at Shaye-batman, where you must pay a Piaster for every Horse-load.

From Chaye-batman you come to Chikaran.

From Chikaran to Azou, which you leave half a League from the great Road, where the Toll-gatherers take their Toll, which is four Piasters upon every Horse-load.

From Azou you come to Ziarat; from Ziarat to Zerque, where you pay a Duty of two Piasters for every Horse-load.

From Zerebe to Cochaken.

From

From Cochakan, to Carakan, a bad Inn; where you enter among the Mountains, that being full of Torrents reach as far as Btelis.

From Carakan to Betlis, a City belonging to a Bey or Prince of the Country, the moſt potent and moſt conſiderable of all the reſt for he neither acknowledges the Grand Signor nor the Perſian: whereas all the other Beys are Tributary either to the one or the other. And it is the Intereſt of thoſe two Potentates to correſpond with him; for it's an eaſie thing for him to ſtop up the paſſage from Aleppo to Tauris, or from Tauris to Aleppo; the Streights of the Mountains being ſo narrow, that ten Men may defend them againſt a thouſand. Coming near Betlis you muſt travel a whole day among high ſteep Mountains, that reach two miles beyond, with Torrents on each ſide; the way being cut out of the Rock on each ſide, where there is but juſt room for a Camel to paſs. The City ſtands between two high Mountains, equally diſtant one from the other, and about the height of Montmartre. It is built like a Sugar-loaf, the aſcent being ſo ſteep on every ſide, that there is no getting to the top, but by wheeling and winding about the Mountain. The top of all is a Platform, where ſtands a Caſtle well built, at the Gate whereof is a Draw-Bridge. Then you paſs through two great Courts, and then into a third, oppoſite to the Bey's Apartment. It is very troubleſom to get up to the top of the Caſtle, and a Man muſt be very well Hors'd that does it. There is no other perſon but the Bey and his Eſquire, who is permitted to ride up on Horſe back. There is one Inn within the City, and another as it were without, in which the Merchants rather chooſe to lye than in the other, by reaſon that it is ready to be overflown when the Torrents ſwell, that run throngh every Street. The Bey, beſide the ſtrength of his Paſſes, is able to bring above five and twenty thouſand Horſe into the Field; and a very conſiderable Body of Foot, compos'd of the Shepherds of the Country, who are to be ready at a Call. I went to wait upon the Bey himſelf, and made him a Preſent of two pieces of Satin, the one ſtreakt with Silver, and the other with Gold: two white Bonnets, ſuch as the Turks wear, very fine, and adorn'd with Silver at the top; together with a ſute of Handkerchiffs, ſtreak'd with Red and Silver. While I ſtaid with the Bey, who ſent for Coffee for me according to the cuſtom, a Courier came to him from the Baſha of Aleppo, to deſire him that he would deliver up into his hands a French Chirurgeon that was his Slave, having been tak'n in Candia; complaining withall, that he had run away from him with the value of three thouſand Crowns. The Bey, who underſtood what belong'd to a Sanctuary, and was reſolv'd to protect the French-man, ſchool'd the Meſſenger ſo ſeverely, that he threaten'd to put him to death if he did not get him gone preſently; charging him to tell his Maſter withal, that he would complain to the Grand Signor of his inſolence; and that if he were ſtrangl'd, he might thank himſelf. And indeed it behov'd the Great Turk to keep fair correſpondence with him; in regard that if the Perſians ſhould at any time beſiege Van, the Grand Signor muſt march through the Bey's Country to relieve it; who has Forces enow to oppoſe him if he ſhould be his Enemy.

But to travel through the Country of the Curds is very pleaſant: for if on the one ſide the ways are bad, and difficult to be travell'd, in other places you have a proſpect of ſeveral ſorts of Trees, as Oaks and Walnuts, and not a Tree which is not embrac'd with a wild Vine. Below the Mountains, in the Level, grows the beſt Wheat and Barley in all the Country.

From Betlis, where you pay five Piaſters for every Horſe-load, to Taduan, where you pay two.

Taduan is a great Town within a Cannon-ſhot of the Lake of Van, in ſuch a port, where Nature has made a Hav'n, ſhelter'd from all the Winds; being clos'd on all ſides with high Mountains, the entry into which though it ſeem narrow, is very free. It is able to contain twenty or thirty great Barks; and when it is fair Weather, and that the Wind ſerves, the Merchants generally Ship off their Goods from thence to Van: from whence it is but four and twenty hours ſail, and a very good paſſage; whereas by Land from Taduan to Van it is eight days journey on Horſe-back. Returning back, you may alſo take Water at Van for Taduan.

From Taduan to Karmouſhé.

From Karmouſhé to Kellat.

From Kellat to Algiaoux, a ſmall City, where you pay one Piaſter for every Load.

From Agiaoux to Spanktiere.
From Spanktiere to Soüer.
From Soüer to Argiche.
From Argiche to Quiarakierpou.
From Quiarakierpou to Perkeri.
From Perkeri to Zuarzazin.
From Zuarzazin to Souſerat.

From Souſerat to Devan, where two Piaſters are gather'd for every Horſe-load, or elſe you muſt pay at Van.

From Devan to Van, where there is a Duty of two Tomans and four Abaſſis to be paid for every Horſe-load. For though Van be in the Territories of the Grand Signor, yet the Perſian Money is better lik'd than his own Coyn.

Van is a great City upon the ſide of a wide Lake of the ſame name. There is a good Fortreſs belongs to it, that is ſeated upon the top of a high Mountain which ſtands by it ſelf. There is but one ſort of Fiſh in the Lake, a little bigger than a Pilchard, of which they take great ſtore in the Month of April. For about a League from the Lake there is a great River that is call'd Bendmahi, which deſcending from the Mountains of Armenia, empties it ſelf into the Lake. Now in March when the Snow melts and ſwells the River, vaſt numbers of theſe Fiſh come down the River into the Lake; which the Fiſher-men obſerving, ſo ſtop up the Mouth of the River that the Fiſh cannot go back; for elſe they would not ſtay above forty days; at which time they catch 'em up in wide-mouth'd Baskets at the Mouth of the River, thinking to return; it being lawful for any man to fiſh. The people drive a great Trade in theſe Fiſh, tranſporting them into Perſia and Armenia; for, the Perſians and Armenians both, drinking Wine at the end of their Feaſts, they then bring this Diſh to the Table for a Reliſhing-bit. The people of Van tell a Story, how that there was a certain rich Merchant who farm'd the whole Fiſhery, paying a good ſum of Money for it to the Baſha; who thereupon ſtrictly forbad any to fiſh but the Merchant; whereas before it was free for any man. But when the Fiſhing-ſeaſon came, and that the Merchant thought to have caught his Fiſh, he met with nothing but Serpents. So that after that time the Fiſhery was never more farm'd. And there ſems to be ſomething in it; for the Baſha's, who are a ſort of people that will loſe nothing they can get, would be certain to farm the Fiſh again and again, were there not ſome ſtrange reaſon to hinder it. There are two principal Iſlands in the Lake of Van; the one call'd Adaketons, where there ſtand two Covents of the Armenians, Saurphague and Sourp-kara: the other Iſland is call'd Limadaſi, and the name of the Covent is Limquiliaſi, all which Armenian Monks live very auſterely.

From Van to Darcheck.

From Darcheck to Nuchar; it ſtands in the Territories of a Bey of Curdiſtan, being a paltry Village conſiſting of two or three little Houſes. Theſe Bey's are a kind of particular Lords, upon the Frontiers of both the Empires of Turkie and Perſia, who care for neither: for they lye ſo ſecure among the Mountains, that there is no aſſaulting them by force. The Curds in general are a brutiſh ſort of people; who though they ſtile themſelves Mahometans, have very few Moullah's to inſtruct or teach them. They have a particular veneration for black Grey-hounds: ſo that if any perſon ſhould be ſeen to kill one of them, he would be knock'd o'the Head immediately. Neither does any one dare to cut an Onion with a Knife in their preſence; but it muſt be ſqeez'd between two Stones by him that intends to make uſe of it; ſo ridiculouſly ſuperſtitious they are.

The Bey to whom Nuchar belongs has his Toll-gatherers in that place, who exact ſixteen Abaſſi's for every Horſe-load, beſides a Preſent which the Caravan-Baſhi is oblig'd to preſent him, which comes ſometimes to ſeven or eight Tomans: ſometimes more: for otherwiſe the Bey would be ſure to watch the Caravan at ſome ſcurvy place, and plunder it to ſome purpoſe. As once it happen'd to a Caravan, with which my Nephew went along in the year 1672; though he had the good luck to loſe nothing more than one Camel laden with Engliſh Cloth, and another with his Proviſion. The Baſha of Van and the Kan of Tauris took the Field with an intention to remedy theſe diſorders: eſpecially the Baſha of Van, who perceiving that the Merchants would forſake that Road by reaſon of the Injuries they daily

receiv'd, was reſolv'd to make the Baſha reſtore ſome part of his Goods which he had taken from the Merchants; and for the future to leave two of his Subjects in Tauris, and two in Van, that ſhould be reſponſible for what miſchief ſhould be done to the Caravan. For otherwiſe the Merchants like this way beſt, as being the neareſt from Aleppo to Tauris, and where they pay leſs Duties.

From Nuchar to Kuticlar, is a long Journey through the Mountains, by the ſide of ſeveral Torrents, which are to be croſs'd in ſeveral places. This bad way brings Fifty i'the Hundred profit to the Bey of Nuchar; for were the Caravan to travel through Plains, or a level Country, one Horſe or Camel would carry as much as two or three, and the Merchant would pay Cuſtom for no more. Here therefore the Caravan-Baſhi and the Merchants muſt underſtand one another, and agree as cunningly as they can together.

From Kuticlar to Kalvat.

From Kalvat to Kogia.

From Kogia to Darkavin.

From Darkavin to Soliman-Sera: all which four places are very convenient Inns.

From Soliman-Sera to Kours: in that City reſides a Bey, who is tributary to the King of Perſia. He lives in an ancient Caſtle about half a League off, where the Caravan pays nine Abaſſi's for every Horſe-load, beſides a Preſent. But that Preſent conſiſts only in Sugar-loaves, Boxes of Treacle, or Marmaled; for he ſtands ſo much upon his Honour, that he ſcorns to take Money. The Wine of Kours is ſweet and tart.

From Kours to Devogli.

From Devogli to Checheme. About half way between theſe two places you croſs a Plain, which upon the South extends it ſelf a League to the Mountains, but upon the North-ſide enlarges it ſelf out of ſight. Upon the High-way, on the left hand ſtands a Rock three hundred Paces in compaſs, and about fourſcore Foot high; round about it were to be ſeen ſeveral Dens, which moſt certainly had been the Habitations of thoſe that fed their Cattel thereabouts. Under the Rock, which is hollow, appears a Fountain of clear cold Water, wherein there was great ſtore of Fiſh; thouſands of which would come up to the top of the Water, when a man threw any Bread into it. The Fiſh had a great Head, and a large Muſtache. I ſhot a Carbine into the River charg'd with Hail-ſhot, upon which they all diſappear'd, but preſently five or ſix return'd wounded to the top of the Water, which we eaſily took. The Armenians laught at me for ſhooting, believing it had been impoſſible to catch them in that manner; but they admir'd when they beheld them again turning up their bellies at the top of the Water. The Turks and ſome of the Armenians would not eat of them, believing them to be defil'd: but the Armenians that had been in Europe laugh'd at their Superſtition, and fell to, when they were dreſt.

From Checheme to Davaſhiler.

From Davaſhiler to Marand; a City where you muſt pay ſixteen Abaſſi's for a Camel's-load, and eight for a Horſes.

From Merand to Sefian.

From Sefian to Tauris. Theſe are the two biggeſt days journies throughout the Road.

Returning out of Perſia this way, we could not get Bread for Money, ſo that we were forc'd to give the Women ſome Trifles which they lov'd better. Through the People are Mahometans, yet they will not ſpare to drink luſtily.

CHAP. IV.

Another Road from Aleppo to Tauris, through Geziré and other places.

FRom Aleppo to Bir or Beri, where you muſt croſs Euphrates, days 4
From Bir to Ourfa, days 2
From Ourfa to Diarbequir, days 6
From Diarbequir to Geziré, days 4

Geziré is a little City of Meſopotamia, built upon an Iſland in the River Tigris; which is there to be croſs'd over a fair Bridge of Boats. Here the Merchants meet to buy Gall-nuts and Tobacco. The City is under the Juriſdiction of a Bey.

Having paſt the Tigris, all the Country between that and Tauris is almoſt equally divided between Hills and Plains; the Hills are cover'd with Oaks that bear Galls, and ſome Acorns withal. The Plains are planted with Tobacco, which is tranſported into Turkie, for which they have a very great Trade. One would think the Country were poor, ſeeing nothing but Galls and Tobacco; but there is no Country in the World where there is more Gold or Silver laid out, and where they are more nice in taking Money that is in the leaſt defective either in weight or goodneſs of Metal. For Galls being a general Commodity for Dying, and no where to be found ſo good as there, bring a vaſt Trade to the Country; wherein there are no Villages, yet it is over-ſpread with Houſes a Muſquet-ſhot one from another; and every Inhabitant has his quarter of his Vineyard by himſelf, where they dry their Grapes: for they make no Wine.

Amadié is a good City, to which the Natives of a great part of Aſſyria bring their Tobacco, and Gall-nuts. It is ſeated upon a high Mountain, to the top whereof you cannot get in leſs than an hour. Towards the middle of the Rock three or four large Springs fall down from the Cliffs, where the Inhabitants are forc'd to water their Cattel and fill their Borachio's every morning, there being no Water in the City. It is of an indifferent bigneſs, and in the middle is a large Piazza, where all ſorts of Merchants keep their Shops. It is under the Command of a Bey that is able to raiſe eight or ten thouſand Horſe, and more Foot than any other of the Beys, by reaſon his Country is ſo populous.

From Amadié to Giouſmark, days 4
From Giouſmark to Alback, days 3
From Alback to Salmaſtre, days 3

Salmaſtre is a pleaſant City upon the Frontiers of the Aſſyrians and Medes, and the firſt on that ſide in the Territories of the Perſian King. The Caravan never lyes there, becauſe it would be above a League out of the way: but when the Caravan is lodg'd, two or three of the principal Merchants with the Caravan-Baſhi according to cuſtom go to wait upon the Kan. The Kan is ſo glad that the Caravan takes that Road, that he preſents the Caravan-Baſhi and thoſe that go with him, with the Garment of Honour, or the Calaat, the Bonnet, and Girdle; which is the greateſt Honour that the King or his Governour can do to Strangers.

From Salamaſtre to Tauris, days. 4

In all thirty-two days journey this way from Aleppo to Tauris. But though this be the ſhorteſt cut, and where they pay leaſt Cuſtoms, yet the Merchants dare hardly venture for fear of being ill us'd by the Beys.

Teren, whoſe Capital City the Perſians call Cherijar, is a Province between Mazandran and the ancient Region of the Perſians known at this day by the name of Hierac, to the South-Eaſt of Iſpahan. 'Tis one of the moſt temperate Countries, that has nothing in it of the contagious Air of Guilan, where the King goes for the purity of the Air, and for his ſport of Hunting; beſides, that it produceth excellent Fruits in many places. The Capital City whereof, which ſome call by the name of the Province, is of a moderate compaſs, but there is nothing worthy obſervation in it: only a League from it are to be ſeen the Ruines of a great City, which had had been two Leagues in Circuit. There were abundance of Towers all of burnt Brick, and Pieces of the Wall ſtanding. There were alſo ſeveral Letters in the Stones which were cemented into the Walls; but neither Turks, Perſians, nor Arabians could underſtand them. The City is round ſeated upon a high Hill, at the top whereof ſtood the Ruines of a Caſtle, which the Natives ſay was the Reſidence of the Kings of Perſia.

CHAP. V.

The Road from Aleppo to Iſpahan through the ſmall Deſert, and through Kengavar.

I Will deſcribe this Road as if I were to return from Iſpahan to Aleppo. This Road lies through Kengavar, Bagdat, and Anna, where you enter into the Deſert, which I call The little Deſart, becauſe you get over it in far leſs time than the great Deſert that extends Southwards to Arabia the Happy, and where you may often find Water, all the whole Journey being not far diſtant from the River Euphrates. A man that is well mounted may ride this way from Iſpahan to Aleppo in three and thirty day, as I have done, and perhaps in leſs, if the Arabian, whom you take for your guide at Bagdat, knows the ſhorteſt cut through the Wilderneſs.

The Horſe Caravans travelling from Iſpahan to Kengaver are fourteen or fifteen days upon the Road; but being well mounted ten or twelve in a Company, you may Ride it in five or ſix days. The Country through which you travel, is very fertile in Corn and Rice, it produces alſo excellent Fruits and good Wine, eſpecially about Kengavar, which is a large Town well peopl'd.

From Kengavar to Bagdat I was ten days upon the Road. The Country is not ſo fertile but very ſtony in ſome parts. And it conſiſts in Plains and ſmall Hills, there being not a Mountain in all the Road.

Now for a man that travels quick, the Road lies thus:

From Iſpahan to Conſar.
From Conſar to Comba.
From Comba to Oranguié.
From Oranguié to Nahoüand.
From Nahoüand to Kengavar.
From Kengavar to Sahana.
From Sahana to Poliſha, or the Bridge-Royal, being a great Stone Bridge.
From Poliſha to Maidacht.
From Maidacht to Erounabad.
From Erounabad to Conaguy.
From Conaguy to Caſliſciren.
From Caſliſciren to Iengui-Conaguy.
From Iengui-Conaguy to Caſered.
From Caſered to Charaban.
From Charaban to Bourous.
From Bourous to Bagdat.

There are ſome, who inſtead of paſſing through Kengavar, take Amadan, one of the moſt conſiderable Cities of Perſia in their way, and ſo from thence to Toucheré; but the way is longer; and according to the Road which I have ſet down you are to leave Amadan to the North upon the right hand.

Between Sahana and Poliſha you leave the only high Mountain in all the Road to the North. It is as ſteep and as ſtraight as a Wall, and as high as you can ſee; you may obſerve the Figures of men clad like Prieſts, with Surplices and Cenſors in their hands, and yet neither can the Natives tell you, nor any perſon imagin the meaning of thoſe Sculptures. At the foot of the Rock runs a River, over which there is a Bridge of Stone.

About

About a days journey beyond the Mountain you meet with a little City, whose ſituation, the Streams that water it, the good Fruits that grow there, and particularly the excellent Wine which it affords, render a moſt pleaſant Manſion. The Perſians believe that Alexander when he return'd from Babylon dy'd in this place, what-ever others have writt'n that he dy'd at Babylon. All the reſt of the Country from this City to Bagdat is a Country of Dates, where the people live in little Hutts, made of the Branches of Palm-trees.

From Bagdat to Anna you ride in four days, through a deſert Country, though it lye between two Rivers.

Anna is a City of an indifferent bigneſs, that belongs to an Arabian Emir. For about half a League round about the Town, the Lands are very well manur'd, being full of Gardens and Country-houſes. The City for its ſituation reſembles Paris; for it is built upon both ſides of the River Euphrates; and in the midſt of the River is an Iſland, where ſtands a fair Moſquee.

From Anna to Mached-raba is five days riding, and from Mached-raba to Taïba, five days more.

Mached-raba is a kind of a Fortreſs upon the point of a Hill, at the Foot whereof ſprings a Fountain like a large Vaſe, which is very rare in the Deſerts. The place is encompaſs'd with high Walls, defended by certain Towers, and in which are little Hutts where the Inhabitants keep their Cattel, of which there is great ſtore, but more Mares and Horſes than Cows.

Taïba is alſo a fortifi'd place in a level Country, or a high Bank of Earth and Brick bak'd in the Sun. Near to the Gate a Fountain ſprings out of the Earth, and makes a kind of a Pond. This Road is moſt frequented by thoſe that travel through the Deſert from Aleppo or Damas to Babylon, or from Damas to Diarbequir, by reaſon of this Fountain.

From Taïba to Aleppo is but three days journey; but theſe three days are the moſt dangerous of all the Road for Robbers, in regard that all the Country is inhabited only by the Bedouïns, or Arabian Shepherds, who make it their buſineſs only to plunder and ſteal.

Now to take the ſame Road from Aleppo to Iſpahan, it lyes thus:

From Aleppo to Taïba, days	3
From Taïba to Mached-raba, days	5
From Mached-raba to Anna, days	5
From Anna to Bagdat, days	4
From Bagdat to Bourous, days	1
From Bourous to Charaban, days	1
From Charaban to Caſered, days	1
From Caſered to Conaguy, days	1
From Conaguy to Caſſiſcerin, days	1
From Caſſiſcerin to another Conaguy, days	1
From Conaguy to Erounabad, days	1
From Erounabad to Maidacht days	1
From Maidacht to Sahana, days	1
From Sahana to Kengavar, days	1
From Kengavar to Nahoüand, days	1
From Nahoüand to Oranguie, days	1
From Oranguie to Comba, days	1
From Comba to Conſar, days	1
From Conſar to Iſpahan, days	1

So that whether you travel from Aleppo to Iſpahan, or from Iſpahan to Aleppo you may eaſily ride it in thirty days.

From whence I make this Obſervation, That a man making it but two days more from Alexandretta, and finding a Ship ready there to ſet ſail for Marſeilles, with a fair Wind he may travel from Iſpahan to Paris in two months.

Another time, having an occaſion to go from Aleppo to Kengavar, and ſo to Bagdat; and from thence, ſo through the Deſert; at Bagdat I met with a Spaniard that was travelling the ſame way, with whom I luckily met to bear half the Charges of the Guide; which as ſoon as we had hir'd for ſixty Crowns, we ſet forward from

Bagdat

Bagdat; the Spaniard, and I, and our Arabian, who was afoot, walk'd about a Piſtol Shot before our Horſes. From thence to Anna we met with nothing remarkable, but only that we ſaw a Lyon and a Lyoneſs in the Act of Generation: Whereupon our Guide, believing we had been afraid, told us, that he had met them oft'n, but that he never found them do any harm.

The Spaniard according to the humour of his Nation, was very reſerv'd, and contenting himſelf with an Onion, or ſome ſuch ſmall matter at meals, never made much of his guide; whereas I was mightily in his favour, in regard there was never a day paſs'd wherein he did not receive of me ſome good buſineſs or other. We were not above a Muſquet Shot from Anna when we met with a comely old man, who came up to me, and taking my Horſe by the Bridle; Friend, ſaid he, come and waſh thy feat and eat Bread at my Houſe. Thou art a Stranger, and ſince I have met thee upon the Road, never refuſe me the favour which I deſire of thee. The Invitation of the old man was ſo like the cuſtom of the people in ancient times, of which we read ſo many Examples in Scripture, that we could not chooſe but go along with him to his Houſe, where he Feaſted us in the beſt manner he could, giving us over and above Barly for our Horſes; and for us he kill'd a Lamb and ſome Hens. He was an Inhabitant of Anna, and liv'd by the River, which we were oblig'd to croſs to wait upon the Governour for our Paſſports, for which we paid two Piaſters apiece. We ſtaid at a Houſe near the Gate of the City to buy Proviſions for our ſelves and our Horſes; where the woman of the Houſe having a lovely ſprightly Child of nine years of age, I was ſo taken with her humour, that I gave her two Handkerchiefs of Painted Calicut, which the Child ſhewing her Mother, all we could do could not make her take any Money for the Proviſions we had agreed for.

Five hundred paces from the Gate of the City, we met a young man of a good Family, for he was attended by two Servants, and rode upon an Aſs, the hinder part of which was Painted red. He accoſted me in particular, and after ſome Compliments that paſs'd, Is it poſſible, ſaid he, that I ſhould meet a Stranger, and have nothing to preſent him withal? He would fain have carry'd us to a Houſe in the Country whither he was going; but ſeeing we were reſolv'd to keep our way, he would needs give me his Pipe, notwithſtanding all the excuſes I could make, and though I told him that I never took any Tobacco; ſo that I was conſtrain'd to accept of it.

About three Leagues from Anna, we were going to eat among the Ruines of certain Houſes, and had thought to have lain there 'till midnight, when we perceiv'd two Arabians ſent by the Emir, to tell us that he had ſome Letters which he would put into our own hands to the Baſha of Aleppo, to which purpoſe he had order to bring us back. There was no refuſing, ſo that at our coming into the City the next day we ſaw the Emir going to the Moſquée, mounted upon a ſtately Horſe, and attended by a great number of people afoot, with every one a great Poniard ſtuck in their Girdles. As ſoon as we ſaw him we alighted, and ſtanding up by the Houſes, we ſaluted him as he paſs'd by. Seeing our Guide, and threatning to rip up his Belly; Ye Dog, ſaid he, I will give ye your reward, and teach ye to carry Strangers away before I ſee them. Carry them, ſaid he, to the Governours Houſe 'till I return from the Moſquée. Returning from the Moſquée, and being ſeated in a ſpacious Hall, he ſent for us and our Guide, whom he threatned again for carrying us out of the Town without giving him notice. But the Governour pleaded his excuſe, and appeas'd the Emir. After that he ſent for Coffee for us, and then caus'd us to open the Budget that we carry'd behind our Horſes, to ſee whether there were any thing that pleas'd him or no. In my Budget were two pieces of Calicut exquiſitely painted, for two Coverlets of a Bed; two pieces of Handkerchief of Calicut; two Perſian Standiſhes beautify'd with Japon Varniſh; two Damaſcene Blades, one inlaid with Gold, the other with Silver. All which he lik'd, and made me give him. In the Spaniards Budget he found nothing but a few old Clothes: But afterwards being known to have had ſome Diamonds about him, the French Conſul at Aleppo ſentenc'd him to pay me half the charges of what I gave the Emir.

The Prince ſatisfi'd with what he had tak'n, gave order that we ſhould be furniſh'd with all neceſſary Proviſions for our ſelves and our Horſes: but being provided before, before, we only took three or four handfuls of excellent Dates, to ſhew that we did not ſlight his kindneſs.

Between Anna and Mached-raba is the Guide to take ſpecial care ſo to order his Stages, as to come every morning to the Wells by break of day, for fear of meeting the Arabs, that come to fetch Water there by that time the Sun is up, who are apt enough to be injurious to Travellers.

At Mached-raba I ſaw one of the moſt beautiful Virgins that ever I beheld in my life. For I had given a Piaſter to an Arab to get me ſome Bread, and going to ſee whether it were bak'd, I found the Virgin putting it into the Oven, who being alone, made me a ſign to retire. There I alſo ſaw a Colt of that wonderful ſhape, that the Baſha of Damas had offer'd three thouſand Crowns for it.

Coming to Taïba, we did not go into the Town, but lay without under the Walls. Only our Arab went in and brought us chopt Straw for our Camels. The Governour of the Town came along with him, and demanded twenty Piaſters of every one, for certain Duties which he pretended payable to him. We knew there were but four due, and refus'd to pay any more; but the Arab having a mind to put a trick upon the Spaniard, gave me a wink, intimating to me that I ſhould not trouble my ſelf: Thereupon the Governour incens'd goes back to the Town, and by and by returns with an Iron Chain; and had certainly carry'd the Spaniard fetter'd to the Fort, had he not laid down the twenty Piaſters. For my part, I was diſcharg'd for my four Piaſters, according to cuſtom.

Drawing near to Aleppo, the firſt Houſes that we came at bordering upon the Deſert were the Houſes of the Arabs and Bedoüins; the ſecond of which being the Habitation of a Friend of our Guide's, I deliver'd my Horſe to the Guide, to whom I had ſold it before at his own earneſt requeſt; for I was reſolv'd to go a-foot to Aleppo: and therefore that I might ſave the Cuſtom of a parcel of Turquoiſes that I had about me, I put them in the Pouches which I carry'd behind my Horſe, and threw the Pouches into a little Cheſt, as if they had been things of no conſequence; and deſir'd the Man of the Houſe to keep them a day or two. The Arab told me, that were it all Gold it ſhould be ſafe; and indeed when I ſent for them within a day or two after, I found nothing miſſing.

When I came to Aleppo, the Engliſh Conſul ask'd me what news from Iſpahan: I made anſwer, that he muſt of neceſſity know better than I, in regard the Engliſh Preſident there had ſent away an Expreſs to him while I was there; and that he went away with two Capuchins and an Arabian Guide. There upon the Conſul miſtruſting ſome miſchief was befal'n them, requeſted the Baſha to lend him ſome of his Soldiers; who readily granted him eight Men, part Arabians, part Bedoüins. Theſe the Conſul order'd to diſperſe themſelves upon ſeveral Roads in the Wilderneſs, to ſee if they could meet with any tidings upon the Way. In a ſhort time two of them return'd with two little Pouches, in one of which was the Packet of Letters. They reported alſo, that in a by-place between Taïba and Mached-raba they ſaw the Bodies of four dead Men lying upon the Sand. One of them which was in black Clothes, being hack'd and mangled in a moſt miſerable manner; but the Bodies of the other three were entire, though run through in ſeveral places. Some time after the perſons themſelves that did the fact told both at Diarbequir and Damas, how it came to paſs. For certain Merchants of Damas going to Diarbequir, perceiv'd four Men early in the morning at certain Wells where they were to ſtop; whereupon they ſent two of their Company before to know who they were. But the Auſtin-Frier having a little parcel of Diamonds about him, and believing them to be Thieves, inconſiderately let fly his Gun and kill'd one of them immediately upon the place: the Merchants ſeeing one of their companions dead, fell all at once upon the other three, cut the Auſtin-Frier to pieces, and flew the reſt; and ſo without rifling them purſu'd their Journey.

From Aleppo I went to Alexandretta, and there embarqu'd in a Veſſel of Marſeilles, with a favourable Wind, 'till we came to make the Coaſt of Candy, where we were becalm'd for two days. One morning by break of day we diſcover'd a Pickaroon, whereupon ſeeing we could not avoid being fetch'd up by him, we made ready. He made two or three ſhot at us, which did us no other harm but only touch'd the Beak-head of the Ship. Our Gunner made a ſhot at him, which brought down his Top-gallant; a ſecond went through and through the great Carbin, and caus'd a great diſorder in his Ship, as far as we could diſcern with our Proſpective-Glaſſes. But when the Wind began to blow freſh, the Pirate, who had enough of us, and had diſcover'd another Veſſel which perhaps he thought better prize, made all the Sail he could from us toward the other Veſſel. Thereupon we purſu'd our Voyage with a fair Gale, and came to Malta.

From Malta we departed ſeven or eight in company, in two of the Pope's Gallies, ſtaying three days at Syracuſe, and one at Meſſina; where our Company increaſing, we hir'd a Feluck for Naples. But as we were coaſting by the Shoar to the Port of Naples, ſo terrible a Tempeſt ſurpriz'd us near to Paolo, that we were forc'd to put in there upon Palm-Sunday. The next day we went to ſee the Covent of St. Francis of Paolo; the way to it lying between a high Mountain on the right, and a Precipice on the left hand. This Mountain leans ſo, that it ſeems to be tumbling down; and there is a good height upon the Rock the ſeeming print of a Hand, which as the report goes, was the print of St. Francis's Hand, who ſuſtain'd it a whole day, and kept it from falling. From Paolo we went to Naples, where we arriv'd upon Eaſter-eve; and as we enter'd into the City, the great Guns went off round the City, in honour of the Reſurrection. At Rome we all ſeparated, according as our Buſineſs led us.

CHAP. VI.

Another Road from Conſtantinople to Iſpahan, by the Euxin or Black Sea; with ſome Remarks upon the principal Cities thereabouts.

THere are three Roads yet remaining, leading out of Europe into Perſia or the Indies. That of Conſtantinople, all along the Coaſts of the Black Sea; that of Warſovia, croſſing the ſame Sea at Trebiſond; and that of Moſco, down the Volga, which has been amply deſcrib'd by Olearius, Secretary to the Embaſſy of the Duke of Holſtein. In this and the next Chapter I ſhall deſcribe the Way from Conſtantinople, all along the Black Sea, and that from Warſovia, not knowing any perſon that has hitherto mention'd any thing upon this ſubject. And firſt of all I will give a ſhort Deſcription of the principal Places that lye upon that Sea, as well upon the ſide of Europe as of Aſia, with the juſt diſtances of one Place from another.

The principal Cities upon the Black Sea, on the Coaſt of Europe.

From Conſtantinople to Varna they count it two hundred Miles, four of which make an Alman League; miles 200

From Varna to Balſhiké, miles 36

From Balſhiké to Bengali, miles 70

From Bengali to Conſtance, miles 60

From Conſtance to Queli, miles 25

Near to this City of Queli the great Arm of Danow throws it ſelf into the Black Sea. Here is the grand Fiſhery for Sturgeon.

From Queli to Aquerman, miles 50

The City of Aquerman belongs to a Kan of the leſſer Tartary; but it is not the place of his reſidence, for he keeps his Court at Baſha-Serrail, twenty-five miles up in the Land.

From Aquerman to Kefet or Kaffa, miles 350

This is a great City, and a place of great Trade, wherein there are above a thouſand Families of the Armenians, and about five hundred Greeks. They have every one their Biſhop, and ſeveral Churches. St. Peter's is the biggeſt, very large and very beautiful; but it falls to decay, becauſe the Chriſtians have not Wealth enough to repair it. Every Chriſtian above fifteen years of age, pays a Piaſter and a half tribute to the Grand Signor, who is Lord of the City; and he ſends a Baſſa that lives in the ancient City call'd Frink-Heſſer. However the Kan of the Leſſer Tartary extends his Juriſdiction as far as the Gates of Kaffa.

From Kaffa to Aſſaque, miles 70

Aſſaque is the laſt City in Europe, belonging alſo to the Grand Signor. By it runs a great River of the ſame name, the other ſide being in the Territories of the Duke of Moſcovy. Down this River come the Coſſacks that do ſo much miſchief to the Turks. For ſometimes they come with threeſcore or fourſcore Gelia's which are a kind of Brigantines, the bigger ſort of which carry a hundred and fifty men, the leſs a hundred. Sometimes they divide themſelves into two parts, one of which makes Havock toward Conſtantinople, the other Ravages the Coaſt of Aſia, as far as Trebizond.

The Coaſt of Europe bord'ring upon the Black Sea is 861 miles in length.

The chief Citys upon the Black Sea on the Coaſt of Aſia, which is 1170 miles in length.

From Conſtantinople to Neapoli, miles 250

In this City are made the greateſt part of the Galleys and Veſſels that belong to the Grand Signor.

From Neapoli to Sinabe, miles 250
From Sinabe to Ouma, miles 240
From Ouma to Keraſon, miles 150
From Keraſon to Trebiſond, miles 80
From Trebiſond to Riſe, miles 100
From Riſe to Guni, miles 100

The City of Guni belongs half to the Grand Signor, and half to the King of Mengrelia, with whom he keeps a good Correſpondence, becauſe the greateſt part of the Steel and Iron that is ſpent in Turky comes out of Mengrelia through the Black Sea.

The only good Ports upon the Black Sea from Conſtantinople to Mengrelia, are, Quitros, Sinabe, or Sinope, Onnye, Samſom, Trebiſond, Gommé.

The Haven of Quitros is very deep, and the Veſſels lie ſhelter'd from the winds, but the entrance into it is very bad, which only the Pilots of the place, or they who have often accuſtom'd themſelves to that Trade can only find out. It ſeems that anciently there had been moſt ſtately Buildings round about the Port; and ſeveral noble Pillars are to be ſeen all along the ſhore, not to ſpeak of thoſe which have been Tranſported to Conſtantinople. Near the City towards the South ſtands a high Mountain, whence there flows good ſtore of excellent Water, which at the bottom gathers into one Fountain.

To go from Conſtantinople for Perſia by Sea, you muſt embark at Conſtantinople for Trebiſond, and many times for Riſe or Guni, which are more to the North. They that Land at Trebiſond go directly to Erzerom, which is not above five days Journey off, and from Erzerom to Erivan or Tunis. But there are few that will venture upon this Sea where there is no good Anchorage; beſides that it is ſubject to prodigious Tempeſts, from which there are very few good Ports to defend them; which is the reaſon it is call'd Gara-dengis, or the Black Sea: The Eaſtern people giving to all things, miſchievous and dangerous, the Epithet of Black.

They that are Bound for Riſe or Guni, go to Teflis the Capital City of Giorgia, and thence to Erivan, for though the way be bad yet it is far better and ſmoother than the Road to Tauris.

The principal places from Teflis to Erivan are theſe, together with their reſpective diſtances.

From Teflis to Soganlouk, leagues 3
From Soganlouk to Senouk-kupri, leagues 7
From Senouk-kupri to Guilkae, leagues 7
From Guilkae to Dakſou, leagues 6

From

From Dakſon to Achikent, leagues 6
From Achikent to Dillou, leagues 6
From Dillou to Yazegi, leagues 6
From Yazegi to Bicheni, leagues 4
From Bicheni to Erivan, leagues 2
From Erivan you keep the ordinary Road to Tauris.

CHAP. VII.

The Road from Warſow to Iſpahan, over the Black Sea, and from Iſpahan to Moſco; with the Names of the principal Cities and Iſlands of Turky according to the vulgar pronunciation and as they are call'd in the Language of the Turks.

FRom Warſow upon the left hand of the Viſtula, the ordinary reſidence of the Kings of Poland, to Lublin, days 6
From Lublin to Iluove, days 5
There all the Bales are open'd, and the Cuſtomers take Five in the Hundred for their Merchandize.
From Iluove to Jaſlovieer, days 1½
This is the laſt City of Poland toward Moldavia, where if you ſell any quantity of Goods you muſt pay Five per Cent.
From Jaſlovieer to Yaſhé, days 8
This is the Capital City of Moldavia, and is the Reſidence of the Vaywood which the Grand Signor ſends to govern in the Country. There they open all the Bales, and there is a Roll of what every Merchant ought to pay, which may amount to Five per Cent.
From Yaſhé to Ourſhaye, days 3
This is the laſt City of Moldavia, where there is no Cuſtom to be paid.
From Ourſhaye to Akerman, days 4
Here they never open the Bales, but they take Four in the Hundred.
From Akerman to Ozou, days 3
Here they never open the Bales, but the Cuſtom amounts to two per Cent.
From Ozou to Precop, days 5
Neither do they here open the Bales, but truſt to the Merchant's word, and the Cuſtoms amount to Two and a half per Cent.
From Precop to Kaffa, days 5
Nor are the Bales open'd here, but the Cuſtom comes to Three per Cent.

Thus from Warſow to Kaffa the Journey takes up one and fifty days, in the Wagon, which is the manner of Carriage in thoſe Countries. All the Cuſtoms amount to Eighteen and a half per Cent. to which you muſt add the Carriage, and Paſſage by Sea to Trebizond: where you pay three Piaſters for every Mules-load, and four for every Camels-load.

Obſerve by the way, that the Armenians do not uſually take ſhipping at Trebizond but go to another Port more to the Weſt, upon the ſame Coaſt, where they never pay above a Piaſter and a half for a Camels load. This Port, call'd Onnie, is a very good Haven; and there is another a little farther off, call'd Samſon, which is no bad one, but the Air is unwholſom and dang'rous.

There is alſo another Road from Warſow to Trebizond, ſhorter by three days journey.

From Warſow to Yaſhé, according to the Road already ſet down, days 31
From Yaſhé to Galas, days 8
All Merchandize is Tax'd at this place, and the Duties are tak'n at Galas, according to the Note which the Merchant brings from Galas. Galas is a City of Moldavia.

From Galas to Megin, days 1

The Bales are not open'd here, but the Merchant pays three and a half, or four per Cent.

From Megin to Mangalia, days 8

This is one of the four Ports to the Weſt upon the Black Sea, and the beſt of all.

The three others toward the South upon the Coaſt are Kavarna, Balgik, and Varna. At Mangalia they demand but half a Piaſter for every Bale. Croſſing from thence to Trebiſond you have five days Journey to Erzerom.

Now to the Road of Muſcovy; which having been exactly deſcrib'd by Olearius, going into Perſia, I will deſcribe it returning out of Perſia.

Having led the Reader to Shamaqui, I will return home from thence.

From Shamaqui to Derbent, days 7

Derbent, which the Turks call Demir-Capi, is the laſt City within the Juriſdiction of the Perſians; by which there runs a River which is call'd Shamourka.

From Derbent to Tetarck, days 8

By this Town runs a River which is call'd Bocan.

From Tetarck to Aſtracan they hire ſmall Barks with a dozen Oars. All along the ſhoar the Oſiers grow ſo very thick, that they afford ſhelter for the Barks in fowl weather. If the Wind ſerve they will put up a little Sail and be at Aſtracan in four or five hours; but if they only Row, they cannot be there in nine.

When you Embark upon the Caſpian Sea, where you only creep along by the ſhore, you muſt provide your ſelf with Water for the three firſt days, in regard the Water is bitter and ill taſted all along the Coaſt all that while; but for the reſt of the Voyage it is very good. If you carry heavy Goods, you may hire large Boats to ſave Charges.

When you come to Aſtracan you unlade your Goods; at what time the Officer comes, and ſealing up every Bale, cauſes them to be ſent to the Merchants Lodging. Three days after the Cuſtomer comes to op'n the Bales, and takes five per Cent. If the Merchant happ'n to want money, and takes it up at Aſtracan, to pay again at Moſcow, he pays ſometimes thirty per Cent. according to the Rate of Gold Ducats.

If a Merchant have any Diamonds, or any other Jewels, and let it be known, he pays five per Cent. But if a Merchant have any Jewels, or any other Rarities, and tells the Governour that he intends to carry them to the Grand Duke; the Governour ſends a Convoy with him either by Land or Water, that coſts him nothing: and moreover ſends a Courrier before to the Court, to give Notice of his coming. There is very good Wine at Aſtracan; but better at Shamaqui, where I adviſe the Traveller to provide himſelf.

From Aſtracan to Moſcow, you take Shipping in great Barques, that make uſe both of Oars and Sails, rowing againſt the Tide, and weigh whatever you put Aboard, to a very Coverlet. Generally you pay for every pound fourteen Caya, and three Abaſſi's and a half, and an Abaſſi makes eighteen Sous and three Deniers.

In Muſcovy, they reckon the way neither by Leagues nor Miles, but by Shagerons, five of which make an Italian Mile.

From Aſtracan to Courmija, Shagerons	300
From Courmija to Sariza, ſha.	200
From Sariza, to Sarataf, ſha.	350
From Sarataf to Samarat, ſha.	200
From Samarat to Semiriskat, ſha.	300
From Semiriskat to Coulombe, ſha.	150
From Coulombe to Caſan, ſha.	200
This is a great City with a ſtout Fortreſs
From Caſan to Sabouk-ſha, ſha.	200
From Sabouk-ſha to Godamijan, ſha.	120
From Godamijan to Niguina, ſha.	280
Niguina is a large and well Fortifi'd Caſtle
From Niguina to Mouron, ſha.	300

From

From Mouron to Caſin, ſhs. 100
From Caſin to Moſcow, ſhs. 250
So that from Aſtracan to Moſcow they count it ſhs. 2950 which makes 590 Italian miles.

At Sarataf you may go aſhore, and ſo by Land to Moſcow. When the Snow is gone you travel in Wagons, but when the Snow lies, in Sledges. If a man be alone, and that his Goods weigh not above two hundred pounds Paris weight, they put them into two Bales; and laying them upon the Horſes back ſet the man in the middle, paying for Carriage as much as from Aſtracan to Moſcow.

From Sarataf by Land to Inſerat, days 10
From Inſerat to Tymnek, days 6
From Tymnek to Canquerma, days 8
From Canquerma to Volodimer, day 6

Volodimer is a City bigger than Conſtantinople, where ſtands a fair Church upon a Mountain in the City, having been formerly the reſidence of the Emperours themſelves.

From Volodimer to Moſcow, days 5
In all, days 35

Obſerve by the way that they never go aſhore at Sarataf but in caſe of neceſſity, when the River begins to be Frozen. For from Sarataf to Inſerat is a Journey of ten days, in all which time there is nothing to be had, either for Horſe or Man. The Cuſtom is the ſame at Moſcow as at Aſtracan, that is Five per Cent. All the Aſiaticks, Turks, Perſians, Armenians, and others, lodge in a ſort of Inns: but the Europeans lie in a place by themſelves altogether.

CHAP. VIII.

Remarks upon the Trade of the Iſland of Candy, and the principal Iſles of the Archipelago, as alſo upon ſome of the Cities of Greece adjoyning; with a particular Relation of the preſent Condition of the Grand Signor's Galleys, belonging as well to the Iſles as to the Continent.

Of the ISLAND of CANDY.

OUT of the Iſland of Candy Strangers export great ſtore of Wheat and Sallet-Oyl, all ſorts of Pulſe, Cheeſe, yellow Wax, Cottons, Silks, but more eſpecially Malmſey, wherein conſiſts its chiefeſt Trade. When Vintage draws near, the Country-people that are to gather the Grapes wrap their Feet in a piece of a Boar's Skin, which they tye together upon the upper part of the Foot with a piece of Pack-thred, to preſerve their Feet from the violent heat of the Rocks upon which they are to tread. Thoſe Skins are brought out of Ruſſia by the Ruſſes, that bring Botargo and Caviare to Conſtantinople, where they have a vaſt vent for it all over Turky, Perſia, and Ethiopia; where they that follow the Greek and Armenian Church, eat little or nothing elſe all the Lent. By the way take notice, that the Turks make a certain Glew out of Sturgeon, which is the beſt in the World, ſo that whatever is faſten'd with it, will rather break in another place than where it is glew'd. They make it thus: When they have caught a Sturgeon, they pull out his Guts, and then there remains a Skin that covers the Fleſh; this Skin they take off from the head to the belly. It is very clammy, and about the thickneſs of two Sheets of Paper, which they roll as thick as a Man's Arm, and let it dry in the Sun. When they uſe it, they beat it with a Mallet, and when it is well beat'n they break it into pieces, and ſteep it in Water for half an hour in a little Pot.

When the Venetians were Maſters of Candy, they that had committed any Crime which deſerv'd Death, if they could get out of the Iſland before they were apprehended hended, went directly to Conſtantinople, to beg their pardon. For you muſt know, that no perſon but the Ambaſſador of the Commonwealth of Venice had the Priviledge to pardon Crimes committed in Candy. For example, when Signor Derviſano was Ambaſſador for the Common-wealth of Venice at Conſtantinople, a Candiot having a deſire to lye with a Woman by force, ſhe told him ſhe would ſooner eat her Child's Liver than yield to his Luſt. Whereupon, the Villain enrag'd he could not compaſs his deſign, took his opportunity, kill'd the Child, cut out the Liver, and made the Mother eat it, and then ſlew the Mother alſo. Upon this he fled to Conſtantinople, to beg pardon of the Ambaſſador, and obtain'd it there: But the Ambaſſador at the ſame time wrote word to the Governour of Candy to put him to death at his return; having only granted him his Pardon, to preſerve his Priviledge. And indeed, to ſpeak truth, the Candiots are the moſt wretched people under Heaven.

Of the ISLAND of CHIO.

THE City of Chio, which gives the Iſland its Name, contains about thirty thouſand Inhabitants; where there are little leſs than fifteen thouſand Greeks, eight thouſand Latins, and ſix thouſand Turks.

Among the ſeveral Greek and Latin Churches, the laſt of which hath continu'd ever ſince the time that the Genoeſes poſſeſs'd the Iſland, there are ſome indifferent handſom Structures. The five principal Latin Churches are the Cathedral, and the Churches belonging to the Eſcalantines, the Dominicans, the Jeſuites, and the Capuchins. The Turks have alſo their Moſqueés, and the Jews their Synagogue.

Four Miles from the City, near to the Sea-ſide is to be ſeen a vaſt Stone, which was cut out of ſome Rock; it is almoſt all round, only the upper part, which is flat, and ſomewhat hollow; round about the upper part, and in the middle, are places like Seats, cut into the ſame Stone; of which there is one higher than the reſt, like a School-maſter's Chair; and Tradition reports that this was Homer's School, where he taught his Scholars.

In this Iſland there is ſuch an infinite number of Partridges, that the like is not to be found in any part of the World. But that which is a greater Rarity is this, that the Natives breed them up, as we do our Poultry, but after a more pleaſant manner; for they let them go in the fields all the day long, and at night every Country-man calls his own ſeverally home to Rooſt by a particular Note, whither they return like a Flock of ſo many Geeſe.

There are great quantities of Damasks and Fuſtians wrought in the Iſland of Chio, which are tranſported to Grand Cairo, and to all the Cities upon the Coaſt of Barbary, Natolia, and particularly to Conſtantinople.

Three Leagues from the Iſland of Chio, upon a Mountain to the South there grows a peculiar ſort of Trees; the Leaves are ſomewhat like a Myrtle, their Branches ſo long that they creep upon the ground; but which is more wonderful, that when they are down, they riſe again of themſelves. From the beginning of May to the end of June, the Inhabitants take great care to keep the Earth under the Tree very clean; for during thoſe two Months there iſſues out a certain Gum from the joynts of the Branches, which drops upon the ground; this is that which we call Maſtick, and the Turks, Sakis, according to the Name which they give the Iſland. The Iſland produces great ſtore of this Maſtick, which is ſpent in the Seraglio of Conſtantinople, where the Women continually chew it, to cleanſe and keep their Teeth white. When the Maſtick Seaſon draws near, the Grand Signor every year ſends a certain number of Beſtangi's to take care that it be not exported, but be preſerv'd for the uſe of the Seraglio. If it be a plentiful year for Maſtick, the Beſtangi's that cull out the leſſer ſort to ſell, put it into little Bags and ſeal it up; which Bags being ſo ſeal'd, are never queſtion'd by the Cuſtom-houſe Officers. The Iſland alſo yields very good Turpentine.

Of the ISLAND of NAXIS.

THere is not one Port belongs to this Island; the Vessels that are Bound thither for Trade, being forc'd to stay in the Haven of the Isle of Paros, call'd Derion six miles from Naxis, which is one of the best Havens in the Archipelago, able to contain a thousand Ships. There are the ruines of a Wall still to be seen that made a Mole, where four or five Galleys might ride. There are also the ruines of several Houses of the ancient Dukes, the Stables standing almost whole, all Arch'd, and built of Marble. These Dukes were also Lords of twelve other Islands. As for the Island it self, it is well stor'd with Villages, and has three good Cities, Barequa, Qüsa, and Falet.

Near this Island within a stones throw, there is a curious piece of Antiquity still to be seen. It is a flat Rock, as big about in compass as the ancient Court of the Louvre. In the middle of this Rock it was that the Temple of Bacchus was built all of Marble, of which there is nothing but the Foundations that remain. The Gate is still standing made of three Stones, whereof two make the sides, and the third lies across. From the Isle to this Rock there is a fair Stone Bridge of Free-stone, upon each side whereof are to be seen the Pipes that convey'd the Wine into the Temple, that was drank at the Feast of Bacchus. Naxis also is the Island that produces the best Emeril.

As to the Inhabitants themselves, if the Husband or Wife happens to dye, the Surviver never stirs out of the House in six Months after, upon any business how urgent soever, no not to hear Mass. There are both Latins and Greeks in the Island, but the latter are the most numerous. There is a Latin Arch-bishop, and Canons belonging to the Metropolitan Church, with two Religious Houses, one of Capuchins, and the other of Jesuites: The Greeks also have their Arch-bishop.

The Island of Naxis is sixscore miles in compass, being one of the fairest and pleasanteſt Islands in the Archipelago. The ancient Dukes made it their residence, whence they command the greatest part of the Cyclades. There is great plenty of White Salt made in Naxis, and it produces excellent Wine both White and Claret, which caus'd the Inhabitants to build a Temple to Bacchus, who according to their ancient Tradition chose that Island for his Habitation. The Island produces excellent Fruits, feeds great store of Cattle, and abounds in several other things necessary for human support. There are also in it large Woods full of small Deer, and frequented by a great number of Eagles and Vultures.

Here follow the names of the Cyclades, as the people of the Country Pronounce them.

1. Delos or Sdilis.
2. Giaros.
3. Andros.
4. Paros.
5. Nicuria.
6. Samos.
7. Pathmos.
8. Olearos.
9. Sitino.
10. Rhena.
11. Micanos.
12. Tenos or Tino.
13. Scitos or Sira.
14. Subinima.
15. Syphnus or Sifanto.
16. Nixia.
17. Chios or Scio.
18. Astypalea.
19. Amorgus or Amorga.

Of the Islands of Zea, of Milo, of Paros, and other Islands of the Archipelago.

ZEA is an Island wherein there is nothing remarkable, and from whence there is nothing to be Exported but Valanede, to dye Leather withal. Neither are there any Goods Imported into it but what the Pirates bring in, which are very few, in regard the Islanders are careful to provide themselves otherwhere.

Milo

Milo affords nothing but Millſtones to grind Wheat, which are carry'd to Conſtantinople.

Paros where there is no Trade neither, has nothing remarkable in it but one Greek Church, very well built all of Marble, call'd Our Lady's Church.

As for the Iſlands of Siſante and Miconoa, in regard there is nothing of Trade in either but only with the Pirates, who ſometimes touch there, if there be any Conſuls that live there, it is only to buy their ſtol'n Goods.

Of the City of Athens, Corinth, Patras, Coron, and Modon.

THE City of Athens is about four miles diſtant from the Sea, and contains two and twenty thouſand Inhabitants, twenty five thouſand Greeks; five or ſix thouſand Latins, and a thouſand Turks. Among all the Antiquities that yet remain, thoſe in the Caſtle are the beſt preſerv'd. The Caſtle ſtands upon a Hill, upon the North deſcent whereof ſome part of the City ſtands. It encloſes a very fair and ſpacious Temple, built all of white Marble from the top to the bottom, ſupported by ſtately Pillars of black Marble and Porphiry. In the front are great Figures of Armed Knights ready to encounter one another. Round about the Temple, except upon the Roof, which is all of flat Marble Stones well order'd, are to be ſeen all the famous Acts of the Greeks in ſmall carving, every Figure being about two foot and a half high. Round about the Temple runs a fair Gallery, where four perſons may walk a-breſt. It is ſupported by ſixteen Pillars of white Marble upon each of the ſides, and by ſix at each end, being alſo pav'd and cover'd with the ſame Stone. Cloſe to the Temple ſtands a fair Palace of white Marble, which now falls to decay. Below the Caſtle, and at the point of the City toward the Eaſt, ſtand ſeventeen Pillars, the remainder of three hundred, where anciently, they ſay, ſtood the Palace of Theſeus firſt King of the Athenians. Theſe Pillars are of a prodigious bigneſs, every one eighteen foot about. They are proportionable in height, but not all of a piece, being thwarted moſt of them by Stones of white Marble, one end whereof reſts upon one Pillar, and the other upon that which follows it; which was the ſupport of the whole building. Upon the Gate, which is yet entire, are to be ſeen theſe words upon the front without.

Αἵδε Ἀθῆναι Θησέως ἡ πρὶν πόλις.

The City of Athens was aſſuredly the City of Theſeus.

Within-ſide of the ſame City theſe other words are Engrav'd.

Αἵδε Ἀθῆναι Ἀδριανῆ καὶ οὐχὶ Θησέως πόλις.

The City of Athens is the City of Adrian, and not of Theſeus.

There are in Athens ſeveral other pieces of Antiquity which are well worthy to be ſeen.

Corinth, which formerly made ſuch a noiſe in the world, is now a Village of ſome five or ſix and twenty houſes, but all of them the Habitations of rich Greeks. The Town lies at the foot of the Caſtle, which is ſeated upon an inacceſſible Rock guarded by the Greeks, commanded by an Aga. Corinth Exports great quantities of Currants.

Patras does the ſame, which is all the Trade of thoſe two places.

Coron and Modon drive a Trade in Sallet-Oyl, which is ſo good and ſo plentiful, that ſeveral Engliſh, Dutch, and other Ships are load'n away with it from thence every year.

There are Conſuls in Athens, Patras, Coron, Modon, and Napoli of Romania.

The Athenian Merchants buy up Tiſſues, Velvets, Satins, and Cloth, with which they ſerve other Countries adjoyning. The Commodities which Foreigners export from thence, are Silks, Wool, Sponges, Wax, Cordivan-Leather, and Cheeſe. Which is all that can be ſaid in few Words, of the Trade of all theſe places.

A Particular Relation of the Gallies belonging to the Grand Signor, as well at Conſtantinople, as in the Iſles and other Parts of the Empire.

FOrmerly there lay in the Road of Conſtantinople above a hundred and fifty Galleys: But the Grand Viſier perceiving that ſo great a number did but cauſe confuſion, and that the Captain-Baſha could not conveniently take ſo great a burden as to look after ſuch a number, he gave order that no more than twenty-four ſhould lie in the Port of Conſtantinople; ſending the reſt to other Ports, as well of the Continent, as the Iſlands.

At preſent the Number of the Grand Signor's Gallies is fourſcore, thus diſtributed under the Command of their ſeveral Beys or Captains.

At Conſtantinople, twenty-four under the Command of the Captain-Baſha, or Admiral of the Sea; who when he goes out upon any Expedition, ſends to the reſt to meet him according to Orders. When he goes in perſon to Sea, he gives to every one of his Slaves beſides their ordinary Habit a kind of Caſſock of Red Cloth, and a Bonnet of the ſame colour. But this is only in the Admiral's Gally, and at his own Coſt. His Gally carries uſually 366 Slaves, and to every Seat of the Rowers, a Bonne Vole. Theſe Bonne Voles are certain Volunteers that freely offer themſelves to the Service of the Admiral, and there is great care taken for their being well paid. Their Pay is 3500 Aſpers for their Voyage, which generally continues ſeven or eight Months. They feed as the other Slaves; but if they Row negligently or lazily, they are beaten worſe than the Slaves; for the Volunteers have nothing to do except it be to Row: But the Slaves are put to ſeveral other Duties. Take notice alſo that the Volunteers that ſerve in the General's Gally, have 500 Aſpers more than thoſe in the other Gallies, that is to ſay, 4000 Aſpers for their Voyage, which comes to 40 Crowns.

The Reer-Admiral carries Two hundred and fifty men, as well Slaves as Volunteers. That Galley and the great Teſterdar's or Treaſurers, are the beſt provided of any in the whole Fleet: For the Reer-Admiral Baſha has his choice to take four of the beſt men out of every Galley for his own, or elſe to receive 3500 Aſpers for every man, which is paid by the Captain of the Galley; which makes him the richeſt of all the Beys.

The great Teſterder's Galley is one of the Twenty four Galleys of Conſtantinople, and he ſends a particular Treaſurer, in the quality of a Lieutenant, to command her. That Command is very much conteſted for, in regard that Galley is very well provided with all things; and for that all the Captains Court the Teſterdar, who, when the Galleys return to Port, rewards them according to their Merit.

The Janizary-Aga's Galley is of the ſame number; but he never goes to Sea, always ſending one in his room.

The Bey of Rhodes, that takes upon him the Title of Baſha, has eight Galleys.

The Bey of Stancho, an Iſland about an hundred Miles from Rhodes, Lieutenant to the Bey of Rhodes, has one Galley.

The Bey of Suſſam, a ſmall Iſland near Scio, has one Galley, and his Lieutenant another. Theſe Galleys are generally appointed to watch the Malteſi, and Ligorn.

The Bey of Scio formerly had but three; but ſince the War with Candy, he has had ſix.

The Lieutenant of the Bey of Scio has two Gallies. There be alſo three other Beys in the Iſland of Scio, who have no dependance upon the Baſha of Scio, but buy their Proviſions where they can find it beſt cheap.

The Bey of Smyrna and his Lieutenant have two Gallies; but they can do nothing without the Orders of the Bey of Scio.

The

The Bey of Metelin has two Gallies.

The Bey Cavale, a ſmall Bay, twelve Miles on this ſide the Dardanells, upon the Coaſt of Europe, has one.

The Bey of Neſtrepont, ſeven.

The Bey of Napoli in Romania, five.

The Bey of Coron, one.

The Bey of Modon, one.

The Bey of Famagoſta, ſix.

The Bey of Alexandria in Egypt, five.

The Bey of Canée, two Gallies.

The Bey of Candia, one.

The Bey of Caſtel-Tourneze or Navarin, two Gallies.

All theſe Gallies make up the number of Fourſcore.

The light Gallies carry not above 196 men; the four men that are wanting of two hundred, being the Bey's profit.

Every Captain is allow'd thirteen thouſand Piaſters for his Proviſion; and every Chriſtmas he gives to every Slave a pair of Breeches, and a Caſſock of courſe Cloth, with a ſcantie kind of a Cloak.

Every Slave has every day a pound and a half of good Bread, and nothing elſe. But upon Friday, which is the Mahumetans Sunday, they have hot Peaſe, or Beans, or Lentils boyl'd in Butter. They receive alſo ſometimes the Alms of the Greeks, when they lie in any Port. But at Conſtantinople they fare ſomewhat better; for twice a week, as well the Turks, as the Greeks and others, come to the Bains, and beſtow their Charity of Rice and other good Victuals. The Bains is the name of the place where the Sea-men are kept when they are not at Sea.

Sometimes when they are to go Sea, they will counterfeit themſelves ſick or lame; but they are ſo narrowly obſerv'd, that it ſerves them to no other purpoſe than to procure to themſelves the more Blows.

CHAP. IX.

A Relation of the preſent State of Georgia.

GEORGIA, which others call Gurgïe, or Gurgiſtan, extends Eaſtward to the Caſpian Sea; and upon the Weſt is bounded by Mountains that part it from Mengrelia. Formerly it was a Kingdom, all the Inhabitants whereof were Chriſtians, of the Armenian, and of the Greek Church; but of late the Mahometans have got footing among them. And the King of Perſia having fill'd them full of Diviſions, has made two Kingdoms of it, which he calls Provinces; over which he has plac'd two Governors. They are generally Princes of the Country, who muſt turn Mahometans before they can be admitted to that Dignity. When they are advanc'd, they take upon them the title of Kings; and while they have any Iſſue, the King of Perſia cannot diſpoſſeſs their Children.

The moſt Potent of theſe two Kings, is he that reſides at Teflis, who in the Language of the Country is call'd the King of Cartelé. The preſent King is the laſt that has continu'd a Chriſtian, with his four Sons; the Eldeſt of which, the King of Perſia having entic'd to Court, partly by Promiſes, and partly by Preſents, has won to Mahumetiſm. Immediately thereupon, he caus'd him to be declar'd King of the other Province.

Theſe two Kings have each of them a Guard of Mahumetan Horſe-men under their own pay; and at preſent I believe there are in both Kingdoms near upon 12000 Mahumetan Families.

The King of Teflis coyns Money in the King of Perſia's Name; and the Silver which he coyns, is in Spaniſh Reals, French Crowns, and ſuch other Money, which the Armenians bring out of Europe for their Goods. As to the Juſtice of the Countrey, neither the King himſelf, nor the Mahometans have any thing to do with it. A thief is acquitted, paying ſeven-fold what he has ſtole; two parts whereof go to the Party robb'd, one part to the Judges, and four parts to the King. If the Thief has not wherewithal to make reſtitution, he is ſold: If the Product do not yet equal the Sum, if he have a Wife and Children, they firſt ſell the Wife, and if that will not do, then they ſell the Children: But if the Party robb'd be ſo merciful, as to forgive the Thief his ſhare, then neither the King nor the Judges can demand any thing for their ſhare. If any man commit a Murder, they condemn him to die, and deliver him up into the hands of the Kindred of the Party ſlain, to do Execution as they pleaſe themſelves. However, it is in their power to pardon him, if he be able to give ſixty Cows or more to the next a-kin to the Party kill'd. In matter of Debt, a Creditor has Power to ſeize upon all the Eſtate of the Debtor; and if that will not ſatisfie, he may ſell his Wife and Children.

The Chriſtians of Georgia are very ignorant, eſpecially in Matters of Religion. They learn that little they know, in the Monaſteries, as alſo to write and read; and generally the Women and Maids are more knowing than the Men; not only becauſe there are more Religious Houſes for Women than for Men, but alſo becauſe the Boys are bred up to labour, or ſent to the Wars. For if a Virgin grows up, and happens to be handſom, ſome one or other preſently endeavors to ſteal her, on purpoſe to ſell her into Turky, Perſia, or the Territories of the great Mogul. So that to prevent their being ſtoln, their Fathers and Mothers put them very young into Nunneries, where they apply themſelves to ſtudy; wherein, if they attain to any proficiency, they uſually ſtay as long as they live: After that, they profeſs, and when they come to a certain Age, they are permitted to Baptize, and to apply the holy Oyls, as well as any Biſhop or Arch-Biſhop can do.

The Georgians are very great Drinkers; and Nature has fitted them a Countrey that produces good ſtore of Wine. They love the ſtrongeſt Drinks beſt; for which reaſon, at their Feaſts both men and Women drink more Aqua vitæ than Wine. The women never eat in publick with their Husbands; but when the man has invited his Friends, the next day the Woman invites her She-companions. And it is obſervable that at the Womens Feſtivals there is more Wine and Aquavitæ drank than at the mens. The Gueſt is no ſooner enter'd into the Dining-room, but he is preſented with 2 or 3 Diſhes of Sweet-meats, and a Glaſs of half a pint of Aquavitæ to excite his Appetite. They are great Feeders upon Onions and Herbs, which they eat raw out of the Garden. The Georgians are alſo great Travellers, and very much addicted to Trade; they are very dext'rous in ſhooting with Bow and Arrows, and are accounted the beſt Souldiers in all Aſia. They compoſe a great part of the King of Perſia's Cavalry, who keeps them in his Court at peculiar pay, and relies very much upon their fidelity and courage. There are ſeveral alſo in the Service of the Great Mogul. The Men are very well complexion'd and very well ſhap'd; and for the Women, they are accounted the faireſt and moſt beautiful of all Aſia; and therefore out of this Country it is that the King of Perſia chooſes all his Wives, being not permitted to marry a Stranger. Teflis, where the Women have more liberty than in any part of Aſia, is the Capital City of Georgia, well ſituated, large and well built, where there likewiſe is a great Trade in Silk.

CHAP. X.

A RELATION of the preſent State of Mengrelia.

MEngrelia extends from a Chain of Mountains, that ſeparates it from Georgia to the Black-Sea, and is now divided into three Provinces (every one of which has their King.) The firſt is call'd the Province of Imareté, or Baſſa-Shiouk, the king whereof pretends to a ſuperiority over both the other, which is the reaſon they are often at War, and that with ſo much cruelty, that when they have tak'n any Priſoners of either ſide, they ſell them into Turky. They are ſo accuſtom'd to ſell one another in this Country, that if a man or his wife have any occaſion for money, they will go and ſell one of their Children, and many times they will exchange a Child for Ribands or other Toyes at the Mercers Shops.

The ſecond Province is that of Mengrelia, and the King of this Province is call'd the King of Dadian.

The third is the Province of Guriel, the King of which Province is call'd the King of Guriel.

The Province of Mengrelia was formerly ſubject to the King of Baſſa-Shiouk, who ſent thither a Governor, which is call'd in their language Dadian.

One of thoſe Governours being a perſon of wit and courage, gain'd ſo far upon the affection of the People, that they choſe him for their King.

The chief of the Province of Guriel, ſeeing how the Dadian had obtain'd the Kingdom, following the Example of Mengrelia, ſhook off the Yoke of the King of Baſſa-Shiouk, and choſe another King among themſelves, who keeps his Soveraignty to this day, by the ſupport of the Grand-Signor. For when the Dadian rebell'd he entr'd into an Alliance with the Grand-Signor, and oblig'd himſelf to furniſh him every year with ſuch a certain quantity of Iron, upon condition that if the King of Baſſa-Shiouk ſhould war upon him, he ſhould furniſh him with twenty thouſand Horſe. Of which the Turk was very glad, finding thereby the Country of Mengrelia divided, which being united, was able at any time to have diſturb'd him with an Army of fifty thouſand Men.

The King of Baſſa-Shiouk coyns money of the ſame bigneſs and weight with that of the King of Perſia. But in regard it is not ſo fine metal as that of the King of Perſia, he would have much ado to make it paſs in the trade between his Subjects and the Perſians, which is very great, had he not found an expedient by putting the King of Perſia's name upon the Coyn as well as his own, which makes it paſs without any difficulty. He would alſo put the Grand-Signor's Name upon his Coyn, but that the Turk coyns none but ſmall money, or Aſpers, excepting only ſome Ducats which he coyns at Cairo. The King of Baſſa-Shiouk, as well as the King of Teflis coyns all ſorts of foreign money.

Theſe three Kings of Baſſa-Shiouk, Mengrelia and Guriel, are Chriſtians alſo. And when they go to war, all the Eccleſiaſtical Perſons attend them; Arch-biſhops and Biſhops, Prieſts and Monks: not ſo much as to fight as to encourage the Souldiers.

Being at Conſtantinople the firſt time I travell'd into Perſia I ſaw there an Embaſſador from the King of Mengrelia, whoſe behaviour gave all the Franks occaſion of laughter. The preſent which he made the Grand-Signor was in Iron and Steel, and a great number of Slaves. The firſt time of his Audience, he had a train of above 200 Perſons. But every day he ſold two or three to defray his expences; So that at his departure, he had none but his Secretary and two Vaſſals more left. He was a man of preſence but no wit: and every time he went to viſit the Grand Viſier, he preſum'd to wear the white Bonnet which all the Franks wonder'd at; when they ſaw that the Grand-Viſier wink'd at it. For ſhould any other Chriſtian have done ſo, he had been moſt certainly put to death, or conſtrain'd to turn Mahumetan. By which it was apparent how much the Grand Signor valu'd the Friendſhip of the King of Mengrelia, and how careful he is of offending thoſe that are ſent from his Court. He knew thoſe People ſuffer no affronts, but upon the leaſt word preſently draw; beſides that there is nothing to be got by provoking them.

This Embaſſadour going once upon a viſit into the Country, returning home was ſurpriz'd ſurpriz'd with a Storm, whereupon he pull'd off his Boots and carri'd them under his Coat, chooſing rather to go bare-foot to his lodging, then to ſpoil his Boots.

Another time, it being the cuſtom of all Catholick Ambaſſadors to go to Maſs to the Covent of Grey Friars in Pera, upon St. Francis's day, the Mengrelian Ambaſſador after Maſs was done, coming out of the Church, and ſeeing ſeveral baubles which the Pedlers expoſe in the Cloyſter upon that day, bought a Tin Ring, two or three ſmall Looking-Glaſſes, and a Pipe, which he put in his mouth and went piping all the way i'th Street, as Children do coming from Fairs.

But to return to the matter, you muſt take notice that there are not only Iron Mines, but alſo Mines of Gold and Silver in two places five or ſix days Journey from Teflis, the one call'd Soüanet, the other Obetet. But the miſchief is, the people can hardly be got to work there, for fear the Earth ſhould tumble down, and bury them in the Mine, as it has many times happen'd.

There is alſo a Mine of Gold near to a place which is call'd Hardanuſhé, and a Mine of Silver at Guniſhé-Koné, five days Journey from Erzerom, and as many from Trebiſond.

As for the people themſelves both Georgians and Mengrelians, they never trouble themſelves about the ignorance and viciouſneſs of their Prieſts, or whether they be able to inſtruct them or no. The richeſt among them are they which are in moſt credit, and abſolutely give Laws to the poor. There are alſo ſome heads of the Church, that aſſume ſuch a juriſdiction over the people, as to ſell them both to the Turks and Perſians, and they chooſe out the handſom'ſt Children, both Boys and Girls, to get the more money, by which authority alſo the great men of the Country enjoy Marry'd Women and Maids at their pleaſure. They will chooſe out their Children for the Biſhops while they are yet in their Cradles; and if the Prince be diſſatisfi'd at it, all the Clergy joyns with him that makes the choice, and then together by the Ears they go. In which Skirmiſhes they will carry away whole Villages, and ſell all the poor people to the Turks and Perſians. And indeed the cuſtom of ſelling men and women is ſo common in that Country, that a man may almoſt affirm it to be one of their chiefeſt Trades.

The Biſhops diſſolve Marriages when they pleaſe, and then Marry again after they have ſold the firſt. If any of the Natives be not Marri'd to his fancy, he takes another for ſuch a time as he thinks fit, for which he pays her all the while as the Turks do. Very few of theſe people know what Baptiſm means. Only two or three days after the woman is brought to Bed, the Prieſt comes and brings a little Oyl, mumbles over a few Prayers, and then anoints the Mother and the Infant, which they believe to be the beſt Baptiſm in the World. In ſhort, they are a people of no Devotion at all, neither in their Ceremonies nor in their Prayers. But there are great ſtore of Nunneries, where the young Maids apply themſelves to their Studies, and after ſuch an age, whether they ſtay in the Nunneries or betake themſelves to the Service of any of the great Lords, they Confeſs, Baptize, Marry, and perform all other Eccleſiaſtical Functions, which I never knew practis'd in any other part of the World beſide.

CHAP. XI.

Of Comania, Circaſſia, and of certain people which they call Kalmouchs.

Comania is bounded toward the Eaſt by the Caſpian Sea; Weſtward by the Mountains that divide it from Circaſſia; Northward it lies upon Moſcovia; and Southward it is bounded by Georgia. From the Mountains that bound upon the North-Eaſt to Tereki, which is the River that parts Moſcovia from Comania, it is all a level Country excellent for Tillage, and abounding in fair Meadows and Paſturage. However it is not over-peopl'd, which is the reaſon they never Sow twice together in one place. The Climate is much the ſame as between Paris and Lion, where it Rains very much; and yet the Country people have cut ſeveral Channels from the Rivers to water the Grounds after they have Sow'd them, which they learnt from the Perſians. Thoſe Rivers fall from the Southern Mountains, being not at all tak'n notice of in the Map. There is one among the reſt a very large River, which can be forded at no time. They call it Coyaſon, or The thick water, in regard it is continually muddy, the ſtream being ſo ſlow, that they can hardly diſcern which way it runs. It falls gently into the Caſpian Sea to the South of the mouth of Volga. Not far from this River, in the months of October and November, all along the Shore of the ſame Sea, you may ſee vaſt ſhoals of fiſh about two foot long. Before, they have two legs, like a Dog's legs, behind inſtead of legs they have only claws. Fleſh they have none, but only fat with a bone in the middle. Now in regard they are but ſlow pac'd, when they come upon Land the Country people eaſily knock them on the head, and make Oyl of them; which is the greateſt Trade they have.

The people of Comania, commonly call'd Comouchs, dwell for the moſt part at the foot of the Mountains, becauſe of the Springs ſo plentiful in thoſe places, that in ſome Villages you ſhall have above twenty or thirty. Three of theſe Springs meeting together, make a ſtream ſtrong enough to drive a Mill. But this is not the ſole reaſon, for there is Water enough in the plain. But in regard they are a people that only live upon the ſpoil and plunder of their Enemies, and of one another, as they are in continual fear of being ſet upon, they love to dwell near the refuge of the Mountains, whither they fly with their Cattle upon any occaſion of danger. For all the people round about, as Georgians, Mengrelians, Cirkaſſians, Tartars, and Muſcovites, live altogether by rapine, and continual In-roads into one anothers Countries.

There are another ſort of people which are call'd Kalmouchs, that inhabit upon the Coaſt of the Caſpian Sea between the Muſcovites and the Tartars. The men are ſtrong, but the moſt deformed under Heaven. Their faces are ſo flat and broad, that there is the breadth of five fingers between each Eye. Their Eyes are very ſmall, and that little Noſe they have is ſo flat, that there is nothing to be ſeen but two little holes inſtead of Noſtrils. Their Knees alſo and their Feet turn inward. When they go to the Wars, they carry their Wives and their Daughters, if they be twelve years of age, along with them, who fight as couragiouſly as the men themſelves. Their Arms are Bows, Arrows, and Skains, with a great wooden Mace at the Pummel of their Saddles; their Horſes being the beſt in all Aſia. Their Captain is of ſome ancient Family, but they more particularly chooſe him for his valour. The Duke of Muſcovia ſends them preſents every year, to preſerve their friendſhip, which preſents conſiſt in Cloth. And he grants them free paſſage through his Territories, when ever they have a mind to invade the Mengrelians, Georgians, or Cirkaſſians, at which ſport they are much more dextrous than the leſſer Tartars. Sometimes they advance into Perſia, as far as the Province of the Uſbekes, which is a part of Great Tartary, ranging up as far as Caboul and Candahar. Their Religion is particular to themſelves, but they are great Enemies to the Mahumetans.

As for the Comouchs or people of Comania, they are Mahumetans, and very preciſe ones too. They are under the protection of the King of Perſia, who makes great account of them, in regard they defend the Paſſes into his Country on that ſide againſt the Kalmouchs. They are habited both men and women like the Leſſer Tartars, fetching all the Silk and Calicut which they uſe out of Perſia; for as for Cloth, they are contented with what they make in their own Country, which is very courſe.

Circaſſia is a pleaſant good Country, and full of variety. There are Plains, Foreſts, Hills, and Mountains abounding in Springs, ſome of which are ſo large, that ſome of them will ſerve ſeven or eight of the neighbouring Villages. But on the other ſide, in all the Rivers that proceed from theſe Springs, there is not a fiſh to be ſeen. Flowers they have in abundance, eſpecially fair Tulips. There is a ſort of Strawberry alſo with a ſhort ſtalk, of which five or ſix grow in a bunch; the leaſt are as big as a ſmall Nut, of a pale yellow Colour. The Soil is ſo fertile, that it brings forth without any great trouble a vaſt plenty of all ſorts of Fruits. Nor do the people need any other Gardens than their Fields which are cover'd with

Cherry-

Cherry-trees, Apple-trees, Pear-trees, Walnut-trees, and all other uſeful Trees of the ſame nature: but their chiefeſt Wealth conſiſts in Cattel, but eſpecially in well-ſhap'd Horſes, not much unlike the Spaniſh Gennets. They have alſo an abundance of Goats and Sheep, whoſe Wool is as good as that of Spain; which the Muſcovites fetch away to make Felts. They neither ſow Wheat nor Oats, but only Barley for their Horſes, and Millet to make Bread; nor do they ever ſow twice in the ſame place: not but that the Land is good enough to bear Wheat, but becauſe they love Bread made of Millet better. They have very good Fowl, and Veniſon, and Wild-Fowl more than they know what to do withal; which they never hunt with Dogs, nor fly their Hawks at; for their Horſes are ſo ſwift and ſo good, that they will tire the Beaſt, and force him to lye down and yield. Ev'ry Horſe-man has a Rope with a ſliding-knot ready at the Pummel of his Saddle, which they are ſo dextrous to throw about the neck of the Beaſt that begins to be weary, that 'tis twenty to one if they miſs him. When they have kill'd a Deer, they cut off the legs, and breaking the Bones, eat the Marrow, which they ſay is the beſt thing in the World to ſtrengthen the Body. When they go to ſteal Cattel, they carry along with them great Cows-horns ſtuft with boyl'd Tripes cut in ſmall pieces; then watching their times when the Herdſmen are aſleep, when the Dogs begin to bark, they throw to ev'ry one a Horn, with which the Dog preſently runs away: and ſo while the Shepherds are aſleep, and the Dog is buſie to get the Meat out of the Horn, which is there ramm'd in on purpoſe, the Thieves drive away what they pleaſe.

The Drink of the Sherkes is Water and Boſa. Boſa is a Drink made of Millet as intoxicating as Wine, which they want in the Country.

The Men and the Women, Boys and Girls go habited all alike, and their Habit is a colour'd Robe of Fuſtian, with a kind of large Petticoat underneath; with this they wear a little pink'd Waſtcoat that reaches down to their Thighs; and over that a Caſſock of courſe Cloth that reaches down to their Knees, girt about their Waſts with a Cord. The Sleeves of the Caſſock are op'n below and above, and ſometimes they pin them behind their Backs. They wear no Beards 'till they are ſixty years of age. And as for their Hair, neither Men nor Women, Boys nor Girls, ever wear it longer than the tips of their Ears. The Men, both young and old, ſhave the middle of their Heads about the bredth of two Fingers from the Forehead down to the Nape of the Neck: and then in ſtead of Hats or Head-clothes, both Men and Women wear only a little Bonnet of the ſame Cloth as the Caſſock, made like a Night-cap. 'Tis true, when the Maids come to be marry'd there is ſome diſtinction upon their Heads; for then they faſt'n to the hinder part of their Heads a round piece of Felt, which they cover with a white Veil very artificially pleated. Their Breeches are ty'd below their Knees, and reach to their Ancles; their Shooes, which are of Cordovan, both upper and under Leather, have but one ſeam upon the upper part of the Foot, being light, and cut like a pair of Pumps.

As for their Beds, they take ſeveral Sheep-ſkins and ſow them together, and then ſtuffing them full of Millet-leaves, make a kind of Quilt. Now when they beat the Millet, the Leaf comes to be as ſmall as the Chaff of Oats; ſo that when the perſon riſes off from the Quilt, the Quilt riſes and ſwells again of it ſelf. Their Cuſhions are of the ſame Make, only ſometimes they are ſtuft with Wool.

The People are neither Chriſtians nor Mahometans, all their Religion conſiſting in ſome Ceremonies which they perform with the greateſt Solemnities which they can imagin: for at that time old and young of all Ages and Sexes, and all the whole Town muſt be there at the place appointed, unleſs impotency or ſickneſs excuſes them. I call them Villages, for in all theſe Countries there is neither Fortreſs nor City, and as for their Villages, they are all built after the ſame Model, round, with a Piazza in the middle, according to the Figure,

CHAP. XII.

Of the Ceremonies and Cuſtoms of the People of Comania and Circaſſia.

THe Principal of all the Feaſts which the Comouchs and Sherkes or Cirkaſſians make, is that which they make at the end of Autumn, after this manner. Three of the ancienteſt of the Village are appointed to manage it, and to diſcharge themſelves of a Duty impos'd upon them in the company of all the people. Theſe three old men take a Sheep or a Goat, and having mutter'd certain Prayers over the Beaſt, they cut the throat of it: after they have dreſt it very clean, they boil it whole, all but the Gathers, and them they roaſt. The Sheep being boil'd, they ſet it upon a Table, and carry it into a large Barn, where the People are appointed to meet: There the three old men ſtand upright before a Table, and all the People, Men, Women and Children behind them. When the Table upon which the Meat ſtands, is brought in, two of the three old men cut off the Legs and the roaſted Gathers, and hold them up above their heads, and the third holds up a great Cup of Boſa in the ſame manner, to the end the people behind may ſee them. When the people ſee the Meat and Boſa ſo lifted up, they proſtrate themſelves upon the ground, and ſo continue till all the reſt of the Meat be ſet upon the leſſer Table, and that the old men have ſaid ſome few words. Then the two old men that held up the Meat, cut off two little pieces, and give each of them a piece to him that holds the Cup, which being done, they take each of them a piece for themſelves. When they have all three eaten of the meat, the old man that holds the Cup, drinks firſt, then gives the two old men to drink, firſt to him upon the right hand, next to him upon the left, never letting go the Cup all the while. This firſt Ceremony being thus accompliſh'd, the two old men turn toward the Aſſembly, and go and preſent both of the Meat and the Drink, firſt to their Chief or Lord, then to all the people, who equally eat their ſhare, both men and women. That which remains of the four feet, is carry'd back to the Table, and the three old men eat it. This done, they go and place themſelves at the Table, where the Mutton is ſet, where the oldeſt of the three taking the Head, eats a little Morſel; after him, the ſecond, and next to him, the third does the ſame. Then the firſt old man commands the reſt to be carry'd to the Lord, who receives it with a great deal of reſpect, and after he has giv'n it to his next a-kin, or the Friend whom he loves beſt, the Head is giv'n from one to another, till it be eat'n up. This being done, the three old men begin to eat of the Mutton a bit or two, and the Lord of the Village is call'd, who comes with his Bonnet in his hand, in a trembling poſture; to whom, one of the old men preſenting a Knife, he cuts off a piece of Mutton, and eats; and having drank a Cup of Boſa, he returns to his Seat. After him, all the people, according to their turns in quality, do as much; and then, for the Bones the Children go together by the ears among themſelves.

They have another Feaſt before they begin to Mow their Meadows; at which time all the people of the Village, that have wherewithal, take every one a Goat, (for in their Ceremonies they eſteem Goats better than Sheep) and for the poor, they join eight or ten together for a Goat. Let them be Goats, Sheep or Lambs, when they are all brought together, they cut their Throats and then flea off the skin, leaving the four feet and the Head in it. Then they ſtretch the Skin with ſticks that croſs from one foot to the other, and ſet it upon a Pole fix'd in the Earth, the top whereof enters into the head of the Beaſt, as is to be ſeen in the Figure of the Village; and as many Beaſts as there are kill'd, ſo many Poles are planted in the midſt of the Village, with every one a particular Skin upon it; to which, every one that paſſes by, makes a profound obeyſance.

Ev'ry one having boil'd his Goat, brings it into the void place in the middle of the Village, and ſets it upon a great Table with the reſt. There is the Lord of the Village with his Servants, and ſometimes the Lord of ſome other Village is invited. Now all this Victuals being upon the Table, three of the oldeſt men of the Village ſit down and eat a Bit or two: Then they call the Lord of the Town, and if there be any other Lord, they come both together, with ſome other of the Seniors of the Pariſh; who being ſet down, eat up one of the Beaſts, which the old men had ſet apart for them; the reſt is divided among the people, ſitting upon the ground.

There are ſome Villages where you ſhall have fifty Goats and Sheep, or Lambs and Kids, kill'd together at one time. As for their Boſa, there are ſome that bring above 200 Pints; others more or leſs, according to their quality. All the day long they eat and drink, and ſing and dance to their Flutes a dozen together, which are in ſome meaſure harmonious, as conſiſting of ſeveral parts, and decreaſing proportionably from the Treble to the Baſe. When the old men have ſolac'd themſelves with eating and drinking, they go home, and leave the young people, Men and Women, Boys and Girls to be merry by themſelves: They ſtay as long as there is any Drink; and the next day they go early to Mowing.

They have other Ceremonies particular only to their Families. Once a year in every Houſe they make a Croſs after the Form of a Mallet, about five Foot high, the two Sticks that compoſe the Croſs, being as big as a man's Arm. This the Maſter of the Houſe ſets in the Evening near the Door in his Chamber, and calling all his Family together, gives them every one a lighted Wax-Candle. Then firſt he fixes his own to the Croſs, next his Wife ſticks hers, and ſo all the Children and Servants: If the Children be ſo young, that they cannot do it themſelves, the Father and Mother do it for them. If one of the Candles burn out before it be put out, 'tis a Prognoſtick that he or ſhe that fix'd it there, ſhall not live out their year. If the Candle falls, then he whoſe Candle it was, ſhall be robb'd, or be forc't to fly for his Life.

If it thunders, all the people run out of the Village, and the young people of both Sexes ſet themſelves to ſinging and dancing in the preſence of their Elders: And if any one be Thunder-ſtruck, they bury that perſon honourably, believing him to be a Saint. Beſides that, they ſend over all the Country for a white Goat, which they breed up and keep in the Village where it happen'd to thunder, having it in great veneration, till thundring in another place, the people ſend for it thither alſo. If the Thunder fall upon any of their Houſes, though it kill neither Man, Woman, Child, nor Beaſt, all that Family ſhall be kept upon the publick ſtock all that year, without being ty'd to any Labour but of Singing and Dancing. Theſe people, during that time, go from Village to Village Dancing and Singing at peoples Doors, but never going into their Houſes; for which the Inhabitants are bound to bring them out ſomething to eat.

There is a day in the Spring, when all that have been ſtruck'n with Thunder, meet together in the Village where the white Goat is kept; who has always a Cheeſe hanging about his Neck as big as a Parma-Cheeſe. This Goat they take and carry to the Village of the chief Lord of the Countrey. They never go in, but the Lord with all the reſt of the Village coming out, they all together proſtrate themſelves before the Goat. Having ſaid ſome Prayers, they take away his Cheeſe, and immediately put another in its place. The Cheeſe which was taken away, is at the ſame time cut into little pieces, and diſtributed among the people. After that, they give the Strangers to eat, and beſtow their Alms upon them; ſo that by this wandring from Village to Village, they get good ſtore of Money.

They have among them but only one Book; and it is as big as one of our largeſt Folio's, and it lies in the hands of an old man, who has only the priviledge to touch it. When that old man is dead, they chooſe another old man to keep the Book; whoſe Duty it is to go from Village to Village, where he hears of any ſick people. He carries the Book with him, and after he has lighted up a Wax-Candle, and put the people out of the Room, he lays the Book upon the Stomach of the ſick perſon, opens it, and reads in it, then blows over it ſev'ral times, ſo that the Breath paſſes toward the mouth of the Party: Then he cauſes the party diſeas'd to kiſs the Book ſeveral times, and as often lays it upon his head, which is a Ceremony of half an hour. When the old man goes away, one gives him a Beef or a Heifer; another gives him a Goat; every one according to their Quality and Eſtate.

They have alſo Old Women that take upon them to cure the Sick. Theſe women feel the body of the ſick party, all over, but more particularly they handle and grope that part where the diſtemper lies: during which time they let go ſeveral belches out of their mouths, and the more ſick the party is, the louder and thicker, they fetch their belches. The ſtanders by hearing them belch in that manner and fetch ſuch vilanous ſighs from their ſtomacks, believe their friend to be dangereuſly ill, and that the louder the Women belch, the more eaſe and comfort they receive; but whether they do or no, the women are well pay'd for their pains. VVhen any one feels a pain in the Head, they ſend for the Barber, who gives two cutts upon the Head acroſs with the raſor, and then pours Oyl into the wound. For they believe the Head-ach proceeds only from a wind between the fleſh and the bone, for which the Inciſion opens a paſſage to let it out.

At their Funerals they that are the near Relations or Friends of the dead, ſome cut their faces, and other parts of their Bodies with ſharp flints, others proſtrate themſelves upon the ground, and tear their hair; ſo that when they return from the Burial, they are all of a gore blood: However, notwithſtanding all this affliction, they never pray for the Dead.

As to their Marriages: VVhen a young man has ſeen a Virgin which he has a liking to, he ſends one of his friends to agree with her Parents or her Tutor, what he will give for her. Commonly the guift conſiſts in Horſes, Cows or ſome other ſort of Cattel. VVhen the agreement is made, the Parents and Kindred of the party thereby contracted, together with the Lord of the place, go to the Houſe where the Virgin lives and bring her to the Bridegrooms Houſe, where there is a Feaſt ready prepar'd; and after they have made merry, and ſung, and danc'd for a while, the Bridegroom and Bride go and lye together, without any other Ceremony. If the man and Maid are of two Pariſhes, the Lord of the Village where the Man lives accompany him and his Kindred to the next Village all together, to fetch the Bride from thence.

If a Man and the wife have no Children, he is permitted to take ſeveral wives one after another till he have Iſſue. If a marri'd woman have a Gallant, and that the Husband ſhould come and find his wife abed with him, he goes away again without ſaying a word, and never takes any further notice of it. The woman alſo in the ſame caſe, does the like by the man. Nay, the more Gallants a woman has, the more ſhe is reſpected: And it is a common cuſtom when they fall out, to taunt one another, that if they were not ugly, or ill natur'd, or diſeas'd, they would have more Admirers than they have. The People are of an excellent Complexion, eſpecially the women, who are extreamly fair, and finely ſhap'd, and keep their beauty till five and forty or fifty years. They are very laborious, and work themſelves in the Iron Mines, which they melt afterwards and forge into ſeveral Tools and Implements. They make abundance of Embroidery of Gold and Silver for their Saddles, their Quivers, and their Pumps, as alſo upon the Calicut of which they make their Handkerchiefs.

If the man and the woman happen to quarrel often together, ſo that they cannot be reconcil'd: the Husband complaining firſt to the Lord of the Place, He ſends for the Woman, and having giv'n order to ſell her, gives the Man another. But if the Woman complain firſt, the Man is ſerv'd the ſame ſawce. If a man or Woman be a diſturber of their Neighbours, if the Neighbours complain to the Lord, he preſently cauſes the party to be apprehended and ſold to the merchants that buy Slaves, for they are reſolv'd they will live in quiet.

They that take upon them the quality of Gentlemen, ſit ſtill, do nothing, and ſpeak very little. In an evening they ride out, and meet ſome twenty or thirty together to go a ſtealing. Nor do they rob only their Enemies, but their Neighbours, from whom the chief prey which they take are Cattle and Slaves. All the Country-people are Slaves to the Lord of the Village where they live, whom he imploys to till his Land, and cut wood for him upon occaſion, of which they ſpend vaſt quantities. For not being very warm clad, they keep fire all night in the places where they ſleep.

CHAP. XIII.

Of the leſſer Tartars, call'd Nogaïes, bord'ring upon Comania.

THE leſſer Tartars have a very ancient race of Horſes, which they breed up even to Superſtition; ſo that it would be among them an act of Sacriledge to ſell them to ſtrangers, as being not a little curious how they ſell them to one another. Theſe are the Horſes which they ride, fifty or ſixty in a Troop together when they go a thieving; and ſometimes a hunder'd together, when they deſign any Incurſion upon their Enemies. When the old Men come to be infirm and impotent, if they know any ſtout young Man that is a Souldier, they will lend him one of their Horſes (if he have none of his own) to make an Incurſion, upon condition to have half of the Booty. Many times they run up as far as Hungary, near to Comora and Javarin. Theſe Horſes, partly by nature, partly by early cuſtom, will travel four or five days together with a handful of Graſs giv'n them once in eight or ten hours, and a little Water every four and twenty hours. But they never go a robbing with them 'till they come to be ſeven or eight years old: beſides that, they muſt undergo a very ſevere education ere they make uſe of them in thoſe hardſhips. Their Bit is only a piece of Iron with a Buckle on each ſide, to which they faſt'n the Bridle and Head-ſtall. For eight days together they put under the Saddle a bag of Gravel or Earth. The firſt day the Sack is a Horſe-man's weight; and ſo they add to it every day, 'till it come to be double the weight at the end of the eight days. As they increaſe every day the weight upon the Horſes back, they abate every day the Horſe's Provender and Drink. During theſe eight days, they get up and walk the Horſe two or three Leagues. The next eight days, they abate every day of the weight, 'till the Sack be quite empty. Proportionably alſo they abate him of his Meat and Drink as in the firſt eight days, and every day take up the Girt a hole ſhorter. The three or four laſt days they afford the Horſe neither Provender nor Drink, according as they find him able to endure hunger and thirſt, and the labour which he is to undergo. The laſt day, they work him 'till he be all over of a Sweat; then they unbridle and unſaddle him, and pour upon him the coldeſt Water they can meet with. That done, they lead him into a field, and tye him by the leg with a Cord, at ſuch a length as they intend he ſhall feed; yet ſtill from day to day allowing him more Rope, 'till at laſt they let him looſe, and feed with the reſt of the Horſes. This terrible faſting and labour, during which time, that little which they do eat and drink, they eat and drink with the Bit in their mouth, brings them to be ſo lean and out of fleſh, that their very bones are ready to ſtart out of their skins: So that if any one ſhould ſee them in that miſerable condition, that does not know the nature of the Horſes, would think they would never be fit for good ſervice. The hoofs of theſe Horſes are ſo hard that they never ſhoe them, and yet they will leave the prints of their feet in the Earth, or upon the Ice, as if they had been ſhod. Theſe Tartars are ſo curious in having Horſes that will endure labour, that ſo ſoon as they ſee any handſom Colt in their Breed, they preſently take him up, to ſchool him as I have related: but hardly ten in fifty endure the tutoring.

As for their Diet, 'tis a great advantage for theſe Tartars to ride a Mare, in regard they Drink the Milk. They that ride Horſes, carry along with them a little Bag full of pieces of Cheeſe dry'd in the Sun; they have alſo a ſmall Boracho of Goat-skin, which they fill with Water where they meet with it, into which they put two or three bits of their hard Cheeſe, which ſoftens with the motion of the Horſe, the Boracho being ty'd under his Belly: and thus the Water becomes a kind of ſowr Milk, which is their ordinary Drink.

As for their Inſtruments of Cookery, every Horſe-man has a large wooden Ladle hanging at the Pummel of his Saddle, out of which the rider drinks himſelf, and gives his Horſe likewiſe to drink. They that encounter them, can hope for no better Booty than than their Horſes; but they are very hard to be tak'n; for when one of theſe Horſes perceives that his Rider is ſlain, he follows thoſe that fly with all the ſwiftneſs imaginable. Beſide that, thoſe Horſes being carri'd into other Countries, are preſently ſpoil'd, and come to nothing.

Their Cloathing is only a Sheep-skin, which in Winter they wear with the wool next their Bodies; in the Summer turning the other ſide. They that are the Nobility of the Countrey, wear Wolves-skins, with a kind of Shirt, and Breeches of courſe Fuſtian of divers Colours, which the Taylor gets little credit by ſhaping.

Their Women are very white and well proportion'd, but their Faces are broad, and their Eyes little, ſo that by thirty years of Age they become very deformed. There is not a man but has two or three Wives, which they never chooſe but out of their own Tribe. Every Tribe has a Chief; who is one of the Nobility of the Countrey, and carries for his Banner a Horſe-tail faſten'd to a half-Pike, and dy'd into the Colour belonging to the Tribe. When they march, every one knows where to place himſelf, and how much ground they ought to take up for their Tribe and their Cattel; one Tribe never encroaching upon another.

The Women and Maids are generally clad in a large Shirt that reaches down to their feet. Upon their Heads they wear a large white Vale, their Foreheads being bound about with a large black Handkerchief ty'd in five or ſix Rolls. The Noble ſort of Women and Maids wear over this Vail a Bonnet open behind, which comes down upon their Foreheads like a three-corner'd Cap: One of theſe Points ſtands up in the midſt of the Forehead, lin'd with Velvet, Satin, or Cloth of Gold, and ſet with ſmall pieces of Gold and Silver, and falſe Pearls, of which they alſo make themſelves Bracelets: Their Breeches are of ſingle-colour'd Cloth, and for Shoes and Stockings, they only wear a Cordovan Boot of what Colour they pleaſe, neatly ſew'd.

When a young man intends to marry, it behoves him to give the Father and the Mother of the Maid a certain quantity of Horſes, Bullocks or Cows, or other Cattel, which is done in the preſence of the greateſt part of the ancienteſt of the Tribe, and a Moullah beſide. When the Agreement is made, the young man has the liberty to ſee his Miſtreſs, but not till then: For before, he has only the information of her Mother, his Siſters, or ſuch Women as were his own Friends. Beſides the three Wives which the man is allow'd to take, he may keep ſeveral female Slaves; but the Children are ſtill ſlaves, and can never inherit. Theſe Tartars are of a very hot conſtitution, though not ſo hot as the women. Both the one and the other are very fair-hair'd; but the men have little or no Beards: So that if there be any one that has more Beard than ordinary, and can but write and read, they make him a Moullah.

Theſe people have no Houſes, but live in Tents, or in Waggons which are drawn after them where-ever they go. The Tents are for the old people and little Children, with their Slaves that attend them. The young women ride in Waggons clos'd up with Boards, and to let in the Air, upon one ſide they open a Window that is made like a Lattice. In the Evening they are permitted to ſpend a little time in the Tents. When the Girls have attain'd to the age of ten or twelve Years, they never ſtir any more out of their Waggons till they are married, not ſo much as for the neceſſities of Nature; but in the middle of the Waggon there is a Plank to be taken up; and if it be in a place where they ſtay, a Slave preſently comes and cleanſes all underneath. The Maidens Waggon is eaſie to be known, as being painted with Flowers; and generally there is a Camel ty'd to the Tail of it beſmear'd with ſeveral colours, and ſeveral Noſegays or Poſies of Flowers ſtuck about the Head of the Beaſt.

The young men have alſo every one their Charlot, wherein they only carry a Boracho of Horſe-skin, containing about 38 Quarts, which they uſuall filly with Mares-milk, which is very ſowr. They have alſo every one another Waggon next to that wherein they ride themſelves; wherein they carry ſeveral Boracho's full of Cows-milk, which is very ſowr. At Meals they drink this Milk: But before they powr it out, they ſtir it in the Boracho with a great Stick, that the Curd may mix with the thin Milk. But the Mares-Milk is only for the Maſter and Miſtreſs, though before they drink of either, they mix it with water. When a Friend comes to ſee them them, they fetch out their dri'd Cheese, which they call Kouront, and breaking it into little Bits, eat it with fresh Butter. At their Feasts they sometimes kill old Sheep, sometimes old Goats. But for their Horses they never kill them but at the Funerals of their Kindred, at the Birth of a Child, or at their Marriage-Feasts, or lastly, when their Friends return laden with Spoil from any incursion, and are slor'd with Slaves. They never drink any thing but Mares-Milk or Cows-Milk, and when they can get neither, they will endure thirst for three or four days together before they will drink water, being always grip'd with a terrible Colick when they drink it. They never eat any Salt, being of an opinion that it is naught for the Eyes. They live long, and are very strong, and seldom sick; nor do they refuse any Diet but Swines-flesh.

Their Countrey is very level; only for some few Hills in some places. They have great store of Pasture-grounds, and every Tribe has their peculiar Wells to water their Cattle. In the Winter they lodge upon the banks of great Rivers, near to Woods and Marishes, suffering their Herds to feed at liberty. When the Snow is very deep, the Cattel scrape it away with their feet to come at the Grass, though they meet with very little else but Reeds and Bushes. In the mean while the men cut down the Woods, make great Fires, and employ themselves in Fishing. There are some parts of these Rivers where the least Fish they take is about four or five foot long; and some there are above ten or twelve foot in length. Some they dry in the wind, and preserve against Summer; some they smoke in holes which they make in the Earth: As for the smaller sort, they boil them, and eat them without Salt or any other seasoning. When they have eat'n their Fish, they scoop up a large wooden Ladel full of the Fish-water and gulp it down. As for Bread, there is no talk of it in their Countrey.

When they are not at Wars, or are but newly return'd from any Incursion, they spend their time in Hunting, but cannot endure any other Hounds except Greyhounds: So that he must be a very poor Tartar indeed that do's not keep a Greyhound. Take notice however by the by, that these petty Tartars, concerning whom I have last discours'd, are certain people adjoyning to Comania, which the Turks, Persians and Mengrelians call Nogaïes; who may be well reckon'd among the number of the petty Tartars, in regard they are all under one Prince, whom the Grand Signor appoints King over all Petty Tartary, and who receives his investiture at Constantinople.

These Tartars are all Mahumetans. Nor have they any Physician among them; making use only of certain Simples of which they have a traditional knowledge. When the sik person lies in any extremity, they send for a Moullah, who comes with the Alcoran, which he opens and shuts three times, saying certain Prayers, and laying it upon the sick person's face. If by chance the sick person recover, they attribute his recovery to the Sanctity of the Alcoran, and present the Moullah with a Sheep or a Goat: If he die, all his Kindred meet and carry him to the Grave with great Testimonies of Sadness, crying continually Alla, Alla. When he is interr'd, the Moullah mutters certain Prayers ov'r the Grave, and is paid for his pains according to the wealth of the Heirs. For the poor he generally spends three days and three nights in that exercise; for the rich he as usually spends a Month, never stirring all the while from the Grave; and sometimes sev'n or eight.

When any one of them is wounded, they use no other Salve but only boil'd Flesh, which they apply hot to the wound. If the wound be deep, they thrust in a piece of Fat as hot as the wound can endure it; and if the person be able to kill a Horse, the wound is cur'd so much the sooner; for the Flesh and Fat of a Horse are much more medicinable than the Flesh of any other Creature.

Were it not the Custom of the Tartars to buy their Wives when they marry, there would be fewer Whores. But in regard there are an abundance of poor young men that have not wherewithal to buy Wives, they never marry at all. This is that which makes so many Souldiers among them, and emboldens 'em to invade their Neighbors, and to get something whereby they may be enabl'd to buy them a Wife. For the Virgins they are nev'r to be defil'd, being always shut up in their waggons: But for the women they are oft'n debauch'd, appointing their private Meetings, when they go to fetch water for their Cattel, when their Husbands are a-hunting, or looking after their Herds. Nor is it a hard thing to conceal it from their Husbands, in regard the Tartars are not in the least prone to Jealousie.

By

By the way take notice, that the Nogaïes, though they live almoſt after the ſame manner as the Tartars, and are under the ſame Prince, yet they perfectly hate them; reproaching them for effeminate, becauſe they live in Houſes and Villages, whereas the true Souldier ſhould live in Tents as they do, to be ready upon all occaſions.

They that run a-foot, as well in theſe Countries, as in Perſia, when they are weary, take Walnuts and bruiſe them, and then rub the Soles of their feet with them before the fire as hot as they can endure it, which preſently makes them freſh again.

Having thus done with all the ſeveral Roads; here follows an Alphabetical Table of the Longitudes and Latitudes of all the Principal Cities of the whole Empire of Perſia.

The End of the Third BOOK.

THE

THE FOURTH BOOK OF THE TRAVELS OF MONSIEUR TAVERNIER: BEING, A DESCRIPTION OF PERSIA.

CHAP. I.

Of the Extent of PERSIA, and its division into Provinces.

PERSIA, according to the present State of the Empire, to the North is bounded by the Caspian Sea; Southward, by the Ocean; Eastward it joyns to the Territories of the Great Mogul; Westward, to the Dominions of the Grand Signor; the two Empires being parted by the Rivers Tigris and Euphrates.

But that you may the better understand the full extent of the Dominions of the Persian King, you are to know, That this great Monarch, besides that Tract of Ground which is properly call'd Persia, possesses a vast part of the ancient Assyria and the great Armenia, the ancient Kingdoms of the Parthians and Medes, the Kingdom of Lar, the Kingdom of Ormus, and all Eastward of Persia beyond Candahar, almost as far as the Kingdom of Scindi.

But because those Europeans that have Travel'd before me, either were not so curious, or had not perhaps the opportunity to learn the true number of the Provinces that compose the whole Continent of Persia, I have undertak'n, though the Persians themselves are ignorant enough, to give the best account I can, finding it necessary for the better satisfaction of the Reader, to take some notice of the Names of Places according to the ancient Geography.

The first is the Great Armenia, which our Maps without any ground or reason at all call Turcomannia; in regard they might have more properly call'd it Ermenick in general, since the Inhabitants are the greatest part Armenians. That part whereof which is situated between the two Rivers of Araxes and Cyrus, at this day call'd Aras and Kur, by the Natives is call'd Iran, or Cara-bag, being one of the most beautiful, and richest pieces of Land in all Persia; the principal Cities of which are Erivan, Nacksivan, Zulpha, and Van.

The

The second is Diarbeck, formerly Mesopotamia, between Euphrates and Tigris; the chief Cities whereof are Bir, Car-Emir or Diarbequir, Ourfa, Mouſſul, Geziré, Merdin, &c.

The third is Curdiſtan, formerly Aſſyria, extending all along the East-ſide of the River Tigris, from the Lake Van to the Frontiers of Bagdat; the principal Cities are Niniveh, Sheriſoul, Amadié, Sneirne, Betlis, and Salmaſtre.

The fourth is Hierak-Arabi, otherwiſe the Country of Babylon or Chaldea; the principal Cities whereof are Felougia upon Euphrates, Bagdat upon Tigris, Merſhed-Ali, Gourno, and Balſara; and in the Country of Bourous, Sharaban, Eronnabat, &c.

The fifth is Hierak-Agemi, or the ancient Parthia; the principal Cities whereof are Hiſpahan, Touſhercan, Hamadan, Caſhan, Kan, and Caſbin; and perhaps Yeſd, if it be not rather in Kerman or Sigiſtan.

The ſixth contains Shirvan, all along the Caſpian Sea, where ſtand the Cities of Derbent or Demir-Capi, Baku, and Shamaki; and the Province of Edzerbaijan; wherein ſtand the Cities of Tauris, Ardevil, and Sultany. Which two Provinces comprehend the ancient Media within a very little, extending to the very Shoar of the Caſpian Sea.

* Derbent in the Perſian Tongue ſignifies a Strait Gate, and Demir-Capi in the Turkiſh, a Gate of Iron; near to which place were the ancient Caſpian Gates, or Caſpiæ Pylæ of the Ancients.

The ſeventh contains Kylan and Mazandran, lying likewiſe upon the Caſpian Sea, formerly Hyrcania; wherein are the Cities and Towns of Firuzouh, Sukar-abad, and Mionikiellé at the entry of the Mountains; Giru, Talara-peſti, and Saru, in the Plain; Ferh-abad, Ciarman, and Gſcref, toward the Sea.

The eighth is Eſtarabad, formerly Margiana, which extends to the River Ruthkhané-kurkan, which the Ancients call'd Oxus; the principal Cities whereof are Eſtarabad, Amul, Damkam.

The ninth contains the Province of the Uſbeck-Tartars, comprehending all the ancient Sogdiana and Bactriana; the chief Cities whereof are Balk, Samarcand, and Boccara, &c.

The tenth is Coraſſan, formerly Aria, with ſome part of Bactriana; the chief Cities whereof are Eri, Meſhed, Niſabur, Thun, &c.

The eleventh Sableſtand, formerly Peloponneſus; the principal Cities whereof are Beksabat, Aſbé, Buſt, Sarents; the Territory and City of Candahar being alſo comprehended within the extent of this Province, together with Duki and Alunkan, upon the Frontiers of the Great Mogul's Dominions.

The twelfth is Sigiſtan, formerly Drangiana; the principal Cities whereof are Siſtan, Shalack, and Kets.

The thirteenth comprehends all the Territories of the ancient Arachoſia, bord'ring upon the Kingdom of Scindi, not having any Cities that we know of.

The fourteenth is the Province of Makran, lying all along upon the Sea of Mogoſtan, formerly Gedroſia; the chief Cities whereof are Makran, Firbk, Chalak, and the Port of Guadel toward Guzerat.

The fifteenth Kerman, formerly Caramania, extending as far as the Gulf of Ormus; the chief Cities whereof are Kerman, Bermazir, the Port of Kuheſtek, and the Cape of Jaſques.

The ſixteenth is Farſiſtan, or that part of Perſia ſo properly call'd; the chief Cities whereof are Schiras, Caſeron, Benarou, Firus-abat, Darab-guier, &c. To which you may add the little Province of Laraſton, with the City of Lar, juſt againſt Ormus. But this Province formerly extended no farther than Benarou, two days journey from Lar, before Sha-Abas conquer'd the Kingdom of Lar, and then the Kingdom of Ormus. Now they are both united; though they have both ſeveral Governours, as they had diſtinct Princes before. The Ports in this Province upon the Perſian Gulf are Bander-Abaſſi and Bander-Congo.

There are two other little Ports in the Perſian Gulf, about thirty hours ſail from the Mouth of Euphrates, but not capable of receiving any other than ſmall Barks; which are very much to be admir'd; for in regard the Inhabitants are ignorant of the uſe of Iron, it is ſtrange to ſee their Boats made ſo handſom and ſtrong withal; the Planks being only ty'd together with a Cord, which is made of a kind of Hemp tak'n from the out-ſide of the Coco-nut.

The laſt is the Province of Curſiſtan, formerly Suſiana, which Euphrates and Tigris joyning together ſeparate from Chaldea; the principal Cities whereof are Suſter, anciently Suſa, the Capital City of the Empire of King Ahaſuerus, Ahaſwas, Scabar, Rambormus, &c.

The

The temper of the Air in Perſia varies according to the variety of ſituation. The Countrey of Edzerbaijan is very cold, but very healthy. The Air of Mazandran is very unwholſom; for being a low fenny Country, and full of Inſects, when the Waters dry up in the Summer, the Inſects alſo dye and infect the Air. Sometimes thoſe bad Waters over-flow the Country; in ſo much that the Inhabitants receive a tincture in their Complexions from the colour of the Earth. The Province of Guilan is included in the Province of Mazandran; and the Air is ſo unwholſom, that the People cry of him that is ſent to command there; Has he robb'd, ſtol'n, or murther'd, that the King ſends him to Guilan?

At Iſpahan, which is almoſt in the middle of Perſia, there are ſix months of hot, and ſix months of cold weather. The Snow falls three or four times in a ſeaſon, and ſometimes ſo very thick, that there is hardly any travelling upon the Road. About a League from the City, toward the Mountain, there ſtands a Stone about two or three Foot high, which when the Snow hap'ns to cover, prognoſticates a plentiful Year; and the firſt Country-man that carries the news thereof to the King, receives a hundred Tomans. As for Rain, there is very little falls there, unleſs it be in April, and then it ſometimes rains very hard.

In the Southern Provinces, the heats are very exceſſive, and kill abundance of our Europeans, eſpecially thoſe that are giv'n to drink.

All Perſia is water'd with little Rivers; but there is not one navigable River through the whole extent of it, unleſs it be Aras, or the Araxes of the Indians, which carries ſome few flat-bottom Boats. The other Rivers, inſtead of growing bigger, the farther they keep their courſe from the Springs, grow ſhallower for want of Water, by reaſon of the infinite number of Kreiſes or Channels, which they cut out of the Rivers to water the Lands, which would not bring forth ſo much as only Graſs without the help of thoſe Cuts; unleſs it be in the Province of Mazandran, which from September to March ſeems a kind of Terreſtrial Paradiſe, through the pleaſing variety of Herbs and Fruits. However, Perſia in general being thus water'd is a moſt fruitful Country: though it be true, that many of their Springs and Channels are loſt and brok'n. And Mirza-Ibrahim Governour of the Province of Edzerbaijan told me one day, that in the very Territory of Tauris, there were above two hundred Springs utterly loſt, either by accident or negligence.

As for their Gardens, they water them with Well-water, by the help of a Wheel and an Ox; but the running Water is much better, as not being ſo cold, and more fatning to the Earth. And therefore the Fruits that grow in the Mountains which are only water'd by the Rain or by the Dews, are much better taſted, and keep longer.

Perſia is a mountainous Country, but for the moſt part the Mountains are very dry and barren. As for Woods, there are none in all the Country. Travellers are alſo forc'd to go a great way out of their Road to find a Spring; and ſometimes they ſhall ride ten or twelve Leagues, before they meet with any Water but what they carry in their Bottles. There are ſome Mountains out of which they dig Salt, as Stones out of a Quarrey. There are alſo Plains where the Sand is nothing but Salt, though it be not ſo ſavoury as our Northern Salt.

Of late ſeveral Copper-Mines have been found out, of which the Natives make all ſorts of Kitchin-Houſhold-ſtuff. Their Lead comes from Kerman; their Iron and Steel from Coraſan and Kasbin, though not ſo good as that of Spain. Their Steel is very fine, with a ſmooth grain, and grows very hard in the Water, but it is as brittle as Glaſs. Neither will this ſort of Steel agree with the Fire: ſo that if the Fire have not more than a double heat when the Steel is forg'd, it will look juſt like a piece of burnt Charcoal. The Steel which we call Damas-Steel comes from the Indies, and the Perſians call it Gauberder.

There are alſo ſome Mines of Gold and Silver in Perſia, wherein it appears that they have anciently wrought. Sha-Abas alſo try'd again, but found his expence to be more than his profit: whence it is become a Proverb in Perſia, Nokre Kerven debkrarge nohhaſſel; The Silver-Mine of Kerven, where they ſpend ten to get nine, wihch is the reaſon that all the Gold and Silver of Perſia comes out of Forein Countries.

CHAP. II.

Of the Flowers and Fruits of Perſia, of Turquoiſes and Pearls.

THE Flowers of Perſia are nothing comparable to our European Flowers, neither for variety nor beauty. For having paſs'd the Tigris in the Road to Perſia, you meet with nothing but Roſes and Lillies, and ſome other Fruits peculiar to the Country.

As for Roſes, they have great ſtore, which they diſtil, as they do Orange-flowers, and tranſport the Waters into all the Eaſtern parts of Aſia.

I never left the Court of Perſia, but ſome of the Lords, eſpecially four of the white Eunuchs, beg'd of me to bring them ſome Flowers out of France; for they have every one a Garden before their Chamber-door: and happy is he that can preſent the King with a Poſie of Flowers in a Cryſtal Flower-Pot.

There are in Perſia Apples, Pears, Oranges, Granates, Prunes, Cherries, Apricots, Quinces, Cheſnuts, Medlers, and other ſorts of Fruit, which is not generally ſo well-taſted as ours.

Their Apricots indeed, eſpecially the leſſer ſort, are better than ours. When you open this Apricot, the Stone cleaves in two, and then the Kernel, which is only a ſmall Skin, as white as Snow, is more pleaſing to the taſt than if it had been preſerv'd.

As for their Melons, they are moſt excellent, and very plentiful, neither is it ſo dangerous to eat them to exceſs, as ours. There have been ſome that have eat'n ſix and thirty pound in a day, and have never been the worſe. There is a prodigious quantity of them ſold in Iſpahan, where they are brought to Market, from midnight 'till four a Clock in the afternoon. Thoſe Melons which are firſt in ſeaſon, and are call'd Guermez, are inſipid, and taſt of nothing but Water. However the Phyſicians adviſe you to eat them, ſaying that they plump up the Fleſh, and renew the habit of the Body. The next to the Guermez, are better than they, and they increaſe in goodneſs 'till they come to be quite out of ſeaſon; the laſt of which they keep all the Winter long.

Though they have ſuch vaſt plenty, yet they never leave but one Melon upon a ſtalk, and when it is as big as a Nut, the Gard'ner, or his Wife, or his Children, lye down upon the ground and lick off the Down, which they ſay keeps the Melon from being ſweet, and rip'ning kindly.

The Perſians have alſo a particular ſort of Quince-Pipin, but not ſo good as ours, which they fry unpar'd, caſting great ſtore of Salt in the Pan to excite thirſt, and then preſent them to their Friends at their Collations. They have alſo Almonds and Figs, but few Small-nuts or Wall nuts.

Oyl they have none, but in the Provinces of Mazandran and Guilan, which furniſh all the reſt of Perſia; but the Olives are rotten, black, gravelly, and not worth any thing, compar'd with Province-Olives.

Armenia, Mengrelia, Georgia, and Media abound in Vineyards. They bury their Vines all the Winter, and take them up again in the Spring by reaſon of the cold. In the hotter Countries they dreſs their Vines as we do, without any under-propping them. There are three ſorts of Wines in Perſia. That of Yeſd is very delicate; that of Iſpahan but ordinary: that of Yeſd is tranſported to Lar where there lives a great number of Jews, who care not to live but where they may have good Wine, and that at a cheap rate. It is alſo carry'd to Ormus, where it is ſold half in half cheaper than the Wine of Schiras. As for the Wine of Schiras, it is made of one only Grape, ſweet in taſt, but which heats the Mouth extremely. This ſort of Grape is call'd Kichmiſhé; it is a white Grape, without any ſtone, as vulgarly believ'd; but however it has a ſtone, though it be hardly to be perceiv'd, which nevertheleſs will appear in new Wine, when it frets like a little Ligament. They ſay that the Wine of Iſpahan is cold upon the Stomach, but that it fumes into the Head. For its coldneſs upon the Stomach I can ſay little, but I know it will warm the Head, if a man takes too much of it. In Perſia they never keep their Wine in Tuns, but in great great earthen Veſſels bak'd in an Oven, either glazed, or elſe ſmear'd over with the fat of a Sheeps rump, ſtopp'd up with wood'n Covers, cover'd over again with a great piece of red Calicut, that lyes over all the lids of the Pots.

The King and his Lords have other ſorts of Cellars for magnificence, where they treat ſuch as they invite. Theſe are four ſquare Rooms not above three or four ſteps deep, with a Well in the middle, the floor being ſpread with Turky Carpets. Now at the four corners of the Well ſtand four great Bottles containing twenty Pints apiece, the one of White, the other of Claret. Between the great Bottles ſtands a row of leſſer Bottles filled, a Bottle of White, and a Bottle of Red. In the Cellar-wall are ſeveral niches one above another, and in every nich a Bottle, ſtill vary'd Gules and Argent; a very pleaſant ſight to good Companions in a Room, which is as light as day.

As for Herbs and Roots they have very good in Perſia, but above all, moſt excellent Roman Lettuce. But there is no ſort of Pulſe, nor can they find a way to make Peaſe grow among them. The Carmelites carry'd Aſparagus, Artichoaks, and Succory, which were never ſeen there before, but now begin to thrive very well.

As for Turquoiſes and Pearls I ſhall ſpeak thereof in my diſcourſe of Jewels, toward the end of my Indian Travels.

CHAP. III.

Of the Beaſts of Service; of the Fiſh and Fowl of Perſia.

THe Beaſts for ſervice in Perſia, are Horſes, Mules, Aſſes, and Camels: The Horſes of Perſia are but of an ordinary ſtature, leſs than ours, very narrow before, but very ſwift and light. They carry their heads very ill in running, by reaſon of the Cuſtom to which the Perſians uſe them. For they have got a trick of managing their Horſes, yet never getting upon their backs; they teach them to Amble by tying their feet with two Cords of an equal length, to the middle whereof are faſten'd two other Cords that are faſten'd to the Saddle, which two Cords keep their feet ſo, that they cannot ſtir but at ſuch a diſtance; and ſo they deal with their Mules upon which the old men generally covet to ride. The Horſes of Perſia are very docible, and eaſily brought up. They give them nothing elſe from one Evening to another but a Sack full of chopt Straw, with a meaſure of Barley which they mingle together with the Straw, to the end they may eat both together. When the Barley is newly ear'd, they give it them for fourteen or twenty days together to purge their Bodies, as we for the ſame end put our Horſes to Graſs in the Spring. The Perſian Horſes hold out very well 'till eighteen or twenty years of age; but they never cut their Stone-Horſes in that Country. In the Winter, they never take off their Shooes, but only Froſt-nail them. Their Furniture is very light and handſomly made. And this is further obſerv'd, that whereas we keep Goats in our Stables and Inns, the Perſians keep Hogs.

There are two ſorts of Aſſes in Perſia. Thoſe that are bred in the Country only ſerve to carry burthens; but there are a ſort of Arabian Aſſes that are ſwift and very handſom, excelling in price the common ſort of Horſes. The Merchants of Iſpahan keep theſe Aſſes in their Country Houſes, taking it for a great piece of Grandeur to Ride every Morning to their Shops.

Some parts of Perſia are perplex'd alſo with wild-Beaſts, as Lyons, Bears, and Leopards, but there are but very few; nor have we heard that ever they did any great miſchief. Porcupines they have alſo; and I my ſelf ſaw brought before the King two men, the one of which was Shot through the Thigh, and through the Leg with a Porcupine's Quill. The ſecond was kill'd, the Porcupine having darted his Quill a little above his right Pap through his Breſt. As for their Fiſh, there are an abundance of Carps, Trouts, and Pikes in the River Aras: but in all the other Rivers of Perſia there is but one ſort of Fiſh, which is a kind of Barbel. In the ſubterranean Channel which they bring to water their fields there is another ſort of Fiſh very plentiful of bones, and as little as can be eaten.

Where the white Mulberies grow by the River ſide, ſo ſoon as they begin to bear fruit, 'tis very good paſtime to ſee the Crabs, as big as the Palm of a man's hand, come out of the River after Sun-ſet, and climb the trees to eat the fruit, and then by break of day return into the River again. They are delicate food, far beyond Crey-fiſh, but a hot provocative Diet, as the Phyſicians well obſerve.

During the Froſt they bring from the Caſpian Sea great ſtore of Salmon or Salmon-Trouts, four or five Foot long. The Province of Media is well ſtor'd with Sturgeon from the mouth of the River Araxes. In the ſame Sea there is a certain Fiſh like a Carp, which they ſalt and dry like our Herrings. From the Perſian Gulf comes nothing but Salt-fiſh, which is tranſported over all the Kingdom.

Their Fowls are much the ſame that we have in Europe, only I do not remember that I ever ſaw any Quails in the Country. As for their Pigeons, they fly wild about the Country; but only ſome which they keep tame in the City, wherewithal to decoy the reſt: which is a ſport the Perſians uſe in hot weather as well as in cold. Now in regard the Chriſtians are not permitted to keep theſe Pigeons, ſome of the vulgar ſort will turn Mahometans to have that liberty. There are above three thouſand Pigeon-houſes in Iſpahan. For every man may build a Pigeon-houſe upon his own Farm, which yet is very rarely done; all the other Pigeon-houſes belong to the King, who draws a greater Revenue from the Dung than from the Pigeons: which Dung, as they prepare it, ſerves to ſmoak their Melons.

Poultrey is very plentiful in Perſia; and the Armenians brought out of Europe the way how to Fat Capons; the firſt ſo fatted they preſented to the King, who lik'd them ſo well, that he order'd that the richeſt of the Armenians ſhould be commanded to provide him ſuch a number every year. There are no Turkeys in all Aſia; but the Armenians trafficking to Venice carry'd ſome from thence, which when the King had taſted, he lik'd ſo well, that he order'd the Armenians to breed him up ſuch a number, and to ſtock the Kingdom with them. But the Armenians, ſeeing the King would impoſe a new Tribute of Turkeys as well as Capons, grew negligent, and ſuffer'd the Chickens to dye as ſoon as they were hatch'd. Thereupon the Perſians ſuſpecting the fraud, commanded the Armenians to keep the dead Turkeys, that they might be Judges how they came by their deaths: And it was my wonder to ſee ſo many young Turkeys hanging againſt the Walls of ſome Houſes in Zulpha, that occaſion'd this Story to be told me.

All ſorts of Water-fowl are as plentiful in Perſia, as with us.

Upon the Frontiers of Media and Armenia, at a certain ſeaſon of the year are to be ſeen a great number of Birds, much like to our Owzils. Much about the ſame time the Corn begins to appear, but then is the ground cover'd with ſuch infinite ſwarms of Locuſts, that the Armenians are forc'd to betake themſelves to their Proceſſions, and to water the ground with a Water which they fetch a great way off, whereinto the Bodies of ſeveral martyr'd Chriſtians were thrown. Three days theſe Proceſſions and waterings of the ground continue, and after that, whether it be that the fore-mention'd Birds do eat the Locuſts, or only drive them away, in two or three days the Country is clear of them.

As for Birds of prey, the Country wants none, Falcons, Sparrow Hawks, Lanerets, &c. of which the Kiug of Perſia is very well provided, having above eight hundred belonging to his Game. Some of theſe Birds are taught to fly at the wild Boar, or wild Aſs, or wild Goat; others at Cranes, Herons, wild Geeſe, and Partridg. The chiefeſt of which Birds are brought from the Southern Mountains extending from Schiras to the Preſian Gulf.

The King takes great delight to hunt the Boar and Hart; and if it come to paſs that the Game out-run the Dogs, then they let fly one of their Hawks, who preſently ſeizes the head, and while ſhe is continually pecking and diſturbing the Beaſt, the Dogs are preſently at his heels. The Hawks are taught to ſtop like a Horſe at full ſpeed: elſe they would never quit their prey, which they preſently do, as ſoon as ever the Falconer ſhews them their reward. Now their way of ord'ring or making the Hawk is this. They take the skin of a Hart, head, body, and legs, and ſtuff it with Straw, to the end it may be like the Beaſt which they intend to repreſent in the nature of a Quarry. When they have ſet it in the place where where they uſually train up the Hawk, they lay meat upon the head, or in the holes of the eyes, to the end the Bird may be ſure to ſeize thoſe parts at his down-come. Being accuſtom'd to feed in this manner for ſome days together, they fix the Beaſt upon a Plank with four Wheels, and cauſe it to be drawn with long Cords by certain men, that mend their pace ev'ry day, 'till at length it is drawn by a Horſe at full ſpeed, whereby the Bird is accuſtom'd by degrees not to forſake her prey. After the ſame manner they counterfeit all other ſorts of Quarrys to enter their Hawks, as well wild Boars, wild Aſſes, as Hares and Foxes. Some there are that will order a Crow with the ſame induſtry as you would make a Hawk. They have alſo a certain Beaſt which they call Once, which has a ſpotted skin like a Tiger, but which is nevertheleſs very gentle and tame; this a Horſe-man will carry behind him, and when he ſees a wild Goat, he ſets down the Once, which is ſo nimble, that in three leaps he will be upon the back of the wild Goat; though the wild Goat be a very ſwift Creature. The Once immediately ſtrangles him with his ſharp teeth. But if by accident the wild Goat get from him, the Once will ſtand ſtill in the ſame place abaſh'd and troubl'd, ſo that an Infant may take him and kill him, without the leaſt reſiſtance made in his own defence.

The Kings of Perſia take great delight in Hunting, and in that ſport it is that they love to ſhew themſelves magnificent: Inſomuch that Sha-Sefi deſirous to treat all the Ambaſſadors then at his Court, which at that time were the Tartarian, Muſcovite, and Indian, carry'd them along with him into the field, and having tak'n a great number of Harts, Fallow dear, Hinds, and wild Boars, he caus'd them all to be made ready to be eat'n the ſame day; And while he was feaſting, an Architect had order to raiſe a Pyramid of the heads of thoſe Beaſts in the middle of Iſpahan, of which there are ſome remains to this day. When the Architect had rais'd it to a conſiderable height, he came very pleaſantly to the King, and told him he wanted nothing but one head of ſome great Beaſt to finiſh the Work. The King, whether in his Wine, or to ſhew the Ambaſſadors how abſolute he was over his Subjects, turning briskly toward the Architect; Thou ſay'ſt well, ſaid he, nor do I know where to meet with a Head more proper than thy own. Thereupon the miſerable Architect was forc'd to ſubmit his own Head, the King's Command being preſently put in execution.

Of the manner of Building in Perſia.

IN regard there is little Wood or Stone in Perſia, all the Cities, except ſome Houſes, are generally built of Earth; but of an earthen, or rather a kind of Potter's Clay, ſo well wrought, that you may cut it like Turf, being wrought to a juſt conſiſtency. The Walls are made with lays of Earth, according to the proportion intended, and between every lay of Earth, three Foot high, two or three rows of Bricks bak'd in the Sun. Theſe Bricks are made in a ſquare Mold three fingers thick, and ſeven or eight inches broad: and for fear they ſhould cleave with drying in the Sun, they lay over them pounded Straw to keep them from chopping in the heat. They never lay the ſecond lay 'till the firſt be dry, nor is the ſecond lay to be ſo broad as the lowermoſt. Thoſe Buildings which are made of Brick bak'd in the Sun are very handſom; and after the Wall is rais'd, the Maſon plaiſters it over with a Morter made of Potter's Clay mingled with Straw; ſo that the defects of the Building being cover'd, the Wall appears very firm and cloſe. Then the Work-man plaiſters the Morter over again with a Lime mixt with Muſcovy-Green, which he pounds with a certain Gum, to render the Lime more glutinous: and then rubbing the Wall over with a courſe Bruſh, it becomes as it were damask'd and ſilver'd, and looks like Marble. The poor are contented with only bare Walls, or ſome courſe daubing that coſts little. The middle of the Houſe conſiſts of a large Portico, twenty or thirty Foot ſquare; and in the middle of the Portico a Fountain full of Water. It is all open upon one ſide; and from the Portico to the Pond or Fountain all cover'd with Carpets. At every corner of the Portico is a Room to ſit and take the freſh Air; and behind another large Room, the floor whereof is ſpread with Carpets, Mattreſſes, and Cuſhions, according to the quality of the Maſter of the Houſe. Upon the two ſides of the Portico are two other Chambers, and doors to go from one Chamber to another: and thus are the Houſes of the great Lords built, but only they are more ſpacious. For their Houſes conſiſt of four great Parlours, that look toward the four corners of the World, and every Parlour has two Chambers upon each ſide, which make eight Chambers, that ſurround a great Hall in the middle. The King's Palace is alſo built after the ſame faſhion: and generally the Perſians Houſes are very low, it being a rare thing to ſee one three Stories high. Yet all their Chambers and Rooms are arch'd, wherein the Perſian exceeds us. For without all that trouble and time that we ſpend, they will preſently raiſe an Arch ſo broad and high as eaſily demonſtrates the skill of the Work man. The tops of their Houſes are flat and terraſs'd; being plaſter'd with Earth mixt with Straw chopt very ſmall, and well temper'd; which they bind together with a layer of Lime beat'n for ſeven days together, which makes it as hard as Marble, and if they want Lime, they pave the Terraſs with ſquare Tiles bak'd in an Oven, ſo that the Rain can do no harm. But they are very careful to ſhovel off the Snow, for fear it crack the Terraſs with lying. Without the Houſes ſhow nothing, but within they are curiouſly painted with Birds and Flowers, wherein the Perſians are no bad Artiſts. They take great delight to have ſeveral little Chambers, with ſeveral Doors, and Lattice-windows, the quarrels whereof are of Glaſs of various colours. This ſort of glazing ſerves generally, and indeed more properly, for the Apartment where the Women may come. For they might have Cryſtal-windows if they pleas'd, but they glaze the void ſpaces in this matter, that their Women may not be ſeen; after they have fram'd the op'n place that gives light, like a Flower-Pot with ſeveral Flowers in it, which the Glaſs of ſeveral colours imitates to the life; whereby it is impoſſible that the Windows ſhould be peer'd through; beſides, that it is pleaſant to the Eye. The Doors of their Houſes are of Tebinar-Wood, which is very noble, and their Wainſcoting is as neat. The Perſians that love oſtentation, always diſplay their rich Carpets, Mattreſſes, Cuſhions, Coverlets, and all the moſt coſtly Furniture they have, in the fore part of their dwellings: For the Haram, or the Women's Quarter is but meanly adorn'd, in regard they are never viſited by any men but their Husbands. In ſome of their Rooms they have very narrow Chimnies; for the Perſians ſet all their Wood upright which they burn, becauſe of the Smoak; beſides, they make but ſmall Fires, in regard they have ſo great a ſcarcity of Wood. When they would go to ſleep, they lye down upon a Plank cover'd with a Carpet, and wrap themſelves in a quilted Blanket. In the Summer they ſleep in the open Air, upon their Terraſſes; and in regard the Women lye there too, there is an order obtain'd, that the Moullahs that ſing upon the Moſquees ſhall not preſume to go up in the morning, becauſe it might be their hap to ſee the Women as they lay; it being one of the higheſt pieces of infamy imaginable for a Woman to be diſcover'd with her Face op'n.

There are ſome Houſes that belong to great Lords, that have a ſquare place before their Doors, where they that come to viſit them may put their Horſes, to the end the Street ſhould not be peſter'd. If you look upon the Front of their Houſes, there is little ornament to be ſeen, unleſs it be upon ſome which have been lately built.

CHAP. V.

A Deſcription of Iſpahan, the chief City of the Kingdom and Dominions of the King of Perſia.

ISpahan, Sphahan, or Sphaon, as the Perſians pronounce it, which ſome Travellers have too unwarily affirm'd to be a fine City, lyes in the Province of Hierac, which compoſes ſome part of the ancient Kingdom of the Parthians. It is the Capital City of all Perſia, and a very large place, where the King uſually keeps his Court. The Records of the Perſians declare that formerly it was two contiguous Towns, one part

part whereof belong'd to Haider, and the other to Neamed-Olahi, two parts of Iſpahan ſtill retaining thoſe two names, which has occaſion'd great quarrels and debates among the people, while they have both been eager to prefer their own quarter. Nor indeed could Iſpahan be accompted other than a Village, before Sha-Abas had conquer'd the Kingdoms of Lar and Ormus. But then obſerving ſo fair a Situation, where he might as well be near the Provinces which he had newly conquer'd, as for the deſign which he had to extend his Dominions to the Eaſt and Weſt, as he had enlarg'd them to the South, he quitted Caſbin and Sultany to reſide at Iſpahan, as in the center of his Empire.

This City is ſeated in a vaſt plain, which extends it ſelf three ways fifteen or twenty Leagues. Upon the South about two Leagues from Iſpahan riſes a very high Mountain, on the top whereof toward the Weſt are to be ſeen the remains of a very ſtrong Fortreſs, where Darius kept himſelf, when Alexander gave Battle to him in that Plain. In the ſide of the Rock is a Grotto, either natural or artificial, or both, out of which iſſues a natural Spring of excellent Water, where a Dervis uſually inhabits.

The Circuit of Iſpahan, taking the Suburbs all in, is not much leſs than that of Paris; but the number of Inhabitants is ten times greater at Paris than at Iſpahan. Nor is it a wonder that a City ſhould be ſo large and yet ſo ill peopl'd, where every Family has its particular Houſe, and every Houſe its particular Garden. What ever way you come to it you may diſcover firſt the Towers of the Moſquées, and then the Trees that environ the Houſes, ſo that Iſpahan ſeems rather a Forreſt than a City. The Plain being fertile is well inhabited, but there are no Villages in it, only three or four Houſes in a place together.

The Walls of Iſpahan are of Earth, to which do belong ſome pittiful Towers without Battlements or Platforms, Baſtions or Redoubts, or any other Fortification. The Moats alſo are as bad, neither broad nor deep, but always dry. In ſome places alſo the people have beaten down great gaps in the Wall, to get the neareſt way into the City; yet they reckon ten Gates, which are but of Earth however, and of no defence; the chief of which are Der-Vaſalſchah, not far from the King's Palace, Der-Tokſhi, Der-Mark, Der-Vaſal-Lembon, Der-Naſan-Abad, Der-Sha, and Der-Dekt. The Gates are made of Planks rudely joyn'd together, and cover'd with plates of Iron four fingers broad, and as thick as a Crown, faſten'd with flat-headed Nails. The Keys are never carry'd to the Governour, but left with a ſilly Porter that op'ns and ſhuts the Gates as he pleaſes himſelf; for indeed there is no neceſſity of ſhutting the Gates when there are ſo many other ways into the City.

The City of Iſpahan is ill laid out; for the Streets are narrow and unequal, and for the moſt part dark, becauſe of the Arches that go from one Houſe to another, ſo that a man is forc'd ſometimes to feel his way for two hundred paces. Moreover the Streets are many times annoy'd with Loads of Ordure and the Carcaſſes of dead Beaſts, which cauſe a moſt filthy ſtench, and would be very infectious certainly, but for the wholeſomneſs of the Air. In the moſt part of the Streets are Wells, which are ſtop'd up in Summer, and open'd in the Winter to carry away the Rain and the Snow into the Arch'd Channels which run under Ground through the middle of the Street. There are alſo before every Door certain Troughs to receive the filth and ordure of every Family, which the Country-men come and carry away to Dung their Grounds. Every morning the Country-man comes with his Aſs to lade Dung; and it is obſervable that he is more diligent to carry away the Dung of the Armenians, Franks, and Jews that drink Wine, than of the Perſians that drink none. And this is the profit of the Servants of the Houſe that ſell an Aſſes Load of Dung for five, and ſometimes for ten or twelve Kasbeſhé.

The Streets of Iſpahan, as of all the reſt of the Cities of Perſia are not pav'd, which makes them very incommodious both Summer and Winter. For in Summer the duſt puts out your Eyes, unleſs it be in the Streets where the great Merchants live, and about the Meydan, where there are people hir'd to water the Streets Morning, Noon, and Night. Thoſe people go about the Streets alſo with a Boracho full of Water, and a Glaſs, with Ice in a Bag, to give them drink that deſire it: Nor do they take any money, being paid out of the Legacies left by perſons deceaſed for that purpoſe. In the Winter this duſt turns to mire half the leg deep; though it be very true that there are very few people to be seen then in the Street; for in regard of the vaulted Channels that run through every Street, should the Soak'd Earth chance to fall under the Horse, it might endanger a Limb. Besides, the Persians are so superstitious, that they will hardly receive a man within their doors with a spot of Dirt upon his Cloaths, for fear of being defil'd by him.

You shall also meet with little Holes against the Walls of the Houses in the op'n Street, where the Persians are not asham'd to squat and Piss in the face of all the World. If there be any running Water in the Street, they take a little in their Hands and wash their Member with it; or if there be no Water, they rub it against a Stone or the Wall, which they take for a great piece of gentility and modesty.

That which farther contributes to the nastiness of the Streets of Ispahan, is, that the Butchers throw the Blood and Excrements of the Beasts which they kill into the Streets. If a Horse or a Mule, a Camel or an Ass dye, they presently throw him into the Street. True it is, that there are people who come presently to buy it of the Owner; who make Harisse, which they sell to the poor Work-men. This Harisse is thus prepar'd; they boyl the flesh of the dead Beast with Corn, and after it is well boyl'd they mash it together, 'till it becomes like a Pottage. They also make Harisse of good Mutton; both which sorts they sell in the Market-place, or great Meydan of the City.

Though the City of Ispahan be dirty, yet there is a way for persons of Ability to avoid it; for they never stir but on Horse-back, with two or three Lackeys, call'd Chatres, that run before to make room. For the Men are all upon the false Gallop in the Streets, without any fear of hurting the Children: by reason that the Children are not suffered to play in the Streets like ours, but as soon as ever they come from School, they sit down by their Parents, to be instructed by them in their Profession.

These Valets or Foot-men make a Trade of Running; of which the King and the Lords have several in their service; it being a piece of grandeur to keep a great many. They serve from Father to Son, undergoing an Apprentiship in Running. From six to seven years of age, they only set themselves to walk slowly. The next year they run a League at a time upon a handsom trot, the next year after they run two or three Leagues, and so proportionably for the rest. At eighteen years of age they are allow'd a Scrip of Flowr, with a flat piece of Copper to bake their Bread upon, and a Bottle of Water; all which they carry about them when they run. For these people when they are sent Post never take the Caravan-Road but the shortest cuts through the Deserts, and must therefore accustom themselves to carry their Provision. The King and the Lords have no Chatres, but what are Masters; which degree they are not to arrive at without some Ceremony and performing a Race, like our Jemmy and the Butcher of Croyden.

If he be a Lord that owns the Chater who desires to be a Master, he sends for all his Friends, sets up a Scaffold in the Meydan, provides a Collation, and sends for the Curtisans to divert the Company. Now there is not one of these Guests that does no bring something to give this Chater after the Race is run, either a Bonnet or a Girdle, or some other thing, part of which the Chater gives to his fellows. Then the Chater appears with his Legs greas'd, his Thighs bare, only a slight short pair of loose Breeches, and a Girdle with three little bells hanging upon his Belly. Thus accouter'd he starts from Ali-Capi, and between Sun-rising and Sun-setting he runs backward and forward to a Stone a League and a half from the City toward the Mountains; running in that time six and thirty of our common Leagues, or a hundred and eight Miles. While he runs, there is Kouroukchi in the Meydan, and upon all the Road where he runs, and three or four Horse-men that continually ride to and fro, to see that there be no deceit in the Chater's Race; who when he approaches near the City, ride before to give notice of his coming. Every time he starts and returns, the Drums and Trumpets sound; at the end of the Race there stand several persons with Arrows in their Hands, and ev'ry time he comes to the Stone they give him an Arrow, which he carries back every course to Ali-Capi. Every time he returns, the Curtisans rub him and make much of him. All the time he runs, he eats nothing, but drinks Sherbet now and then. If he acquit himself well well, which appears by the number of Arrows brought back, he is admitted a Maſter by the approbation of the King's Foot-men, who are ſuperior to all the reſt. The Kans or Governours of Provinces run their own Chaters with the ſame Ceremonies, and in the ſame manner.

The Fortreſs of Iſpahan is nothing at all conſiderable. It joyns to the Wall upon the South ſide of the City, and is twice as long as broad, but without any defence in the World, unleſs it be of ſome pitiful Towers made of Earth. Here it is that the King keeps all the Rarities which he has purchas'd, or that has been preſented to him. For as to his main Treaſure, I believe it conſiſts chiefly in Gold-Plate. Within the Fortreſs there is a large Field, ſow'd every year with Rice and Corn; hard by which ſtands the Houſe of the Capuchin-Friars.

Iſpahan in general, unleſs it be the Meydan and ſome few arch'd Streets where the Merchants live, is more like a great Village than a City; the Houſes ſtanding at a diſtance one from the other, with every one a Garden, but ill look'd after, not having any thing in it perchance but only one pitiful Tree: true it is that they begin to build better of late days, but it is without the City. As for the Women, 'tis not a pin matter whether they live out of the City or within, in regard they never ſtir out of doors, and as ſeldom go a-ſtoo.

The Meydan or great Piazza of Iſpahan was the contrivance of the great Sha-Abas, who had never done it, if a great Prince of the ancient Race of the Kings of Perſia had not refus'd him the old Meydan, with ſeveral Priviledges, and the Houſe that ſtood by it. Thereupon he deſign'd this new Piazza, to draw off the Merchants, and to ſpoil the old Market-Place, by their departure from that quarter of the City which is leſs inhabited at this day. It is not far from this old Meydan, that the Auſtin-Friars on the one ſide, and the Carmelites on the other have their Habitations. There are alſo two ſides of that Meydan entire, under the Portico's, where ſit only ſuch People as ſell Herbs, Fruit, and Victuals; the other two ſides are almoſt faln to decay; but when it was all ſtanding, it was as handſom as the new one: and it is to be wonder'd, that the Prince, who built it, did not chooſe the place where Sha-Abas has built his, as being near the Water, and conſequently far more convenient.

The great Meydan then is a place about ſeven hundred Paces long, and between two and three hundred broad. It has Buildings upon all the four ſides; it lyes in length directly North and South; the Fronts are every one Portico'd, and Terraſs'd at the top; and on the City-ſide are little Chambers nine or ten Foot high, which fall very much to decay, being only built of Brick bak'd in the Sun. They are inhabited, the greateſt part of them, by the moſt infamous Curtiſans of the City. At ſome Paces diſtance from the Portico's, is a Channel which is pav'd with ſtone, and runs round about the Piazza; Sha-Abas caus'd ſeveral Trees to be planted by the ſide of it, but both the Channel and the Trees being altogether neglected, are faln to decay; beſides, that the ſmell of the Water in the Summer time is very noyſom.

In the midſt of the Piazza ſtands a kind of a May-Pole, or Maſt of a Ship, where the People exerciſe ſhooting at Birds. When the King comes to ſhoot, they ſet a Cup of Gold upon the top of the Maſt, which he is to ſtrike down with an Arrow. To which purpoſe he muſt ride full ſpeed, nor is he permitted to ſhoot 'till after he has paſt the May-Pole, turning himſelf upon the crupper of his Horſe: a remain of the ancient cuſtom of the Parthians, that kill'd their Enemies flying.

The Cup belongs to him that ſtrikes it down; and I have ſeen Sha-Sefi, Grandfather of the preſent King, in five Courſes ſtrike down three Cups.

From this Maſt or May-Pole down to the great Moſquee, they ſell nothing but Wood and Charcoal: from the ſame Pole to the Sun-Dial upon the North-ſide, are none but ſuch as ſell old Iron-Tools, old Harneſs for Horſes, old Coverlets, and other Brokery-ware, as in our Long-Lane.

From the Pole to another Moſquee, to the South, juſt again the Sun-Dial, is the place for all the Poulterers. The reſt of the Piazza toward the Palace, is always kept clean, without any Shops, becauſe the King comes often abroad in the Evening to ſee Lions, Bears, Bulls, Rams, Cocks, and all other ſort of Creatures fight which are brought thither.

The people of Iſpahan, as in many other Cities, are divided into two parts, the one one call'd Hedari, the other Nametlaï; and upon all the Combats of Beasts before-mention'd, there are always very considerable Wagers laid between these two Tribes. The King, who is a neuter, gives to the Master of the Beast that gets the upper hand sometimes five, sometimes ten, sometimes twenty Tomans, according to the value of the Wager laid; and he that wins the Wager, presents the Master of the Beast likewise. They have also a Sport at breaking of Egg, by knocking the ends one against another, some of which Eggs come to three or four Crowns. The Hens that lay them are bred in a Country which they call Sausevare, about a hundred leagues from Ispahan, toward the Province of Karasan; the Cocks of which Country are bigger and stronger than other Cocks, and cost some of them a hundred Crowns. There are a sort of Tumblers also, that after Dinner set up their Stages in the Meydan, and toward the Evening, they that play the Maid-Marians come and encompass a square place with a course piece of Calicut; and then through another very fine Cloth, the Wenches shew a thousand tumbling Tricks and antick Postures. When they have done, they come and ask the Spectators for Money, who give them every one what they think fit. Every Friday, which is as it were Market-day, the Country-folks bring to Town what they have made in the Villages, as Doors and Windows fitted to be hung up, Window-frames, Locks, and other things of that nature. Upon that day also they sell Mules, Horses, Camels, and Asses, which brings a great confluence of people from all parts.

Upon the West-side, where stands the Gate of the Palace, and Ali's Gate, between the Canal and the Portico's are rang'd some seventy Pieces of Cannon upon their Carriages. These Guns, together with the Sun-Dial, were brought from Ormus by the Great Sha-Abas, of which the English ought to have had their share; for without their assistance he never could have tak'n the Town.

From the corner of that Front, which touches upon the Eastern Front of the Mosquee, in the middle, are all Sadlers Shops; and from that Mosquee to another corner that touches upon the Western Front, live the Book-Sellers, Book-binders, and Trunk-makers. In the middle of the Southern Front stands a Portal, with a Tower upon each side, which leads to a Mosquee, the Gate whereof is cover'd all over with Plates of Silver, and is certainly the neatest Portal and fairest Entrance into any Mosquee of Persia.

At the other end of the same Front, where it joyns to that upon the West, there is a great Portal that leads to a false Gate of the King's Palace; near to which, as soon as you are enter'd, you meet with the Apartment of the Great Treasurer, who is a white Eunuch, and having the Keys of the Chamber where the Money lyes, takes care to pay what-ever the King orders him. Through that false Gate all the King's Provisions are carry'd into the Palace. This way also enter they that are entertained for the Manufactory of the King's Tissues, Silks, Sattins, Coverlets, and the like. In the same Enclosure also the Franks, who are under the King's Wages, and live at Zulpha, come every day to work; as also all the most particular and eminent Artists that the King hires.

The Western Front, which makes one of the two lengths of the Meydan, is thus appointed; from the Southern angle that touches the Trunk-maker's quarter, live all your Pedlers that sell all the small Commodities of Norimberg and Venice.

As for the King's Palace, I cannot make any handsom description of it, in regard there is nothing of Beauty either in the Building or in the Gardens. I think I have been as far in the House as a man could go, every time I was sent for by His Majesty; but excepting only four Rooms which they call Divans, I saw nothing but pitiful low Galleries, and so narrow that hardly two men could pass a-breast in 'em. In one of those Galleries I had audience of the King, in the Garment of Honour which he had bestow'd upon me. But In regard I have spok'n of two of them in another place, and that the other two are much alike both Building and Furniture, I shall say no more of them here.

From the King's Palace Gate to Haly's Gate live the Goldsmiths, Lapidaries, and Gravers of Stones for Seals: Haly's Gate is a plain Gate, naked of Work: of which I have already spok'n.

Between Haly's Gate, and the other angle of the same Western Front, stands a great Gate which leads into a Bazar, where all the Armenians that live at Zulfa keep their Shops, and sell all sorts of Cloth that comes out of Europe, and other the choicest choiceſt Wares of Perſia. At the end of that Bazar ſtands a fair Inn two Stories high, which the Mother of Sha-Abas the ſecond caus'd to be built. In the middle ſtands a great Fountain with four great Gates, which lead into four other Inns. Here by the way let me give a Traveller and a Trader in Perſia this advice; that if his Goods be not very heavy, he never hire a low Chamber, as being three times dearer than thoſe above: For the Chambers which the Sun lies upon moſt in the Summer, are the Chambers which coſt leaſt. Not but all the Chambers in the Inn are Tax'd at the ſame rate by the King; but the Hoſt for his profit will find ſome pretence or other to raiſe his price, pretending thoſe Chambers be hir'd already which you deſire, eſpecially if they be corner Chambers, which are the largeſt and moſt commodious. And indeed without this colluſion Chambers would be very cheap. The beſt convenience of thoſe Inns is, that a man is more ſecure in one of them then in a private Houſe: For there if it happ'n that a piece of Goods be ſtol'n; or that your Chapman prove inſolvent for Goods bought, the Inn-keeper is to make all good; being by the Law to receive ſo many blows aday 'till he pays the ſum demanded. The Merchant alſo gives two in the hundred for every thing that he ſells, and when the Market is done they preſently go to the Hoſt, who ſets down in his Book the quality of his Goods, and the names both of buyer and ſeller. If he knows not the buyer, he is bound to go and enquire after him, and if he be not ſolvent, the Merchant takes his Goods again. Sometimes the Merchant to ſave the two in the hundred, combines with the Purchaſer to carry away ſome of his Goods without the knowledge of the Hoſt, which is done by greaſing his Deputies fiſt, who will preſently ſhut his Eyes. But then if the Purchaſer proves inſolvent, the Merchant dares not complain, becauſe his Goods are not Regiſter'd in the King's Book, whom he has defrauded of his Cuſtom.

No leſs ſecure are the Bazars or Market-places, where the Merchants ſhut up their Shops very ſlightly, the Bazars being ſtrongly guarded both within and without all night long. As for the petty Stalls in the Meydan, every one puts up his Ware in a Box Padlock'd up, and then lay them down at one end of the place one by another. As for the courſe ſort of Ware, as Tents, Cords, Ropes, and ſuch other things they only heap them under a large Coverlet faſten'd at the four corners by four ſticks, for the Meydan alſo is as ſtrongly guarded as the Bazar.

Between Haly's Gate and that which leads to the Bazar where the Armenians keep their Shops, live all thoſe that deal in Ruſſia Leather, making Boracchio's to tye under the Horſes Bellies, little Buckets, and Furniture for Horſe-men, as alſo Bowyers, Fletchers, and Forbiſhers. From the laſt Gate to the end of the Gallery, live all the Druggiſts and Apothecaries.

At the Angle upon the two fronts upon the Eaſt and North, there is a Gate that leads to the Great Bazar; next to that live only your Sails-men that ſell whole Habits for men, as Shirts, Sheets, Hoſe, and the like. There be alſo thoſe that ſell Leather Shoes for men and women; which Shoes are always worn by perſons of quality.

Out of this Bazar you go into another full of men that work in Copper, ſuch as make Pots, Plates, and other Utenſils for the Kitchin. Here alſo live thoſe that make Files, and the blades of Sythes. The reſt of the Bazar is poſſeſs'd by Dyers of Calicut; and at the end of the Bazar is a fair Inn, where all the Merchants live that ſell Muſk, Ruſſia Leather, and Furrs.

I have in another place obſerv'd that the King has a great Revenue out of the Bazars and Inns which he has caus'd to be built, which is particularly laid out in proviſion for his Table. For the Law of Mahomet forbidding Princes to impoſe Taxes or Cuſtoms upon the People, they do not believe that the money which ariſes from thence is fit to be employ'd or laid out for the neceſſaries of life, believing that their food ſo purchas'd would do them no good. By virtue of this prohibition of Mahomet it is, that the Merchants take all the liberty they can to deceive the King of his Cuſtoms, believing that they cannot offend the Prince, while they tranſgreſs not the Law. Beſides, that if they ſhould pay all the King's Duties, the price of Goods would riſe ſo high, ſo as to ſpoil the whole Courſe of Trade and Commerce. Neither would the Revenue of the Caravanſera's, Bazars, and Gardens ſuffice for the Kings Kitchin, were not the ſeveral Kans or Governours of Provinces oblig'd to ſupply that expence every Week in their turns, whereby thoſe expences coſt the King little or nothing.

Upon the North-Front of the Meydan, are made under the Portico's ſeparations for Chambers, that look upon the Piazza, where people go to ſmoak Tobacco and drink Coffee. The Seats of thoſe Rooms are plac'd as in ſo many Amphitheaters, and in the midſt of every one ſtands a large Veſſel full of running Water, wherewith their Pipes be cleans'd when they are over-foul. All the Perſians that have any ſpare time, fail not every day to reſort to thoſe places between ſeven and eight in the Morning, where the Owner of the Room preſently brings them every one their Pipe and their Diſh of Coffee. But the Great Sha-Abas, who was a man of a great underſtanding, finding thoſe places were only ſo many Meeting-houſes, where men aſſembl'd to talk and prattle of State-affairs, a thing which no way pleas'd him; to break the neck of thoſe petty Cabals, he order'd that a Moullah ſhould be ſure to be betimes at every place before the reſt of the People came thither, and that he ſhould entertain thoſe Tobacco-whiffers, and Coffee-quaffers, ſometimes with a point of the Law, ſometimes with Hiſtory, ſometimes with Poetry. This cuſtom is ſtill obſerv'd: ſo that after this entertainment has laſted two or three hours, the Moullah riſing up, crys to every one in the Coffee-Room, Come my Maſters, in good time, let's all now retire every man to his buſineſs. Straight every one retires upon the Moullah's words, who is liberally entertain'd all the while by the Society.

In the midſt of the North-Front ſtands a great Portal, with a large Dial over it, which Sha-Abas brought from Ormus when he took it from the Portugals. But the Dial is of no uſe, nor is ever like to be. Round the Tower of that Portal runs an op'n Gallery, with a kind of a Cieling over head ſupported with Pillars; from whence every Evening about Sun-ſet, and at Midnight, a noiſe of Drums and Trumpets is to be heard through the whole City. Though the truth is, the Muſick would never charm a curious Ear. Out of ſome parts of the Gallery are contriv'd little Dormitories, where the chiefeſt of the Court lye. In all the Cities where the Kans reſide is the Cuſtom of making this ratling noiſe of Drums and Trumpets obſerv'd, and not elſewhere.

On each ſide of the Portal, under the Horologe, are five or ſix Banks of Jewellers, who there put to ſale certain parcels of Pearls, Emralds, Granats, and Turquoiſes, which are not of any great value: every parcel being ſet by it ſelf in a Diſh, and the whole Stall cover'd with a ſilk Net, to preſerve the Stones from being ſtoln.

Juſt againſt the ſame Portal, going toward the South-Front, you meet with two little Goals five or ſix Foot high, and ſev'n or eight diſtant one from the other. Here the men play at Pall-mall on horſe-back, the Horſe-man being to ſtrike the Ball running at full ſpeed, between the two Goals.

Through that Portal you enter into an Encloſure much like the place where the Fair of St. Germans is kept, and there it is that the Merchants of Gold and Silver-Tiſſues and other rich Stuffs, with all your fineſt ſorts of Calicuts and Linnens, keep their Shops.

The Court ſide of the Meydan, which is upon the Eaſt, and which anſwers to the grand Front where the King's Houſe ſtands, is thus appointed. In the middle ſtands a Duomo cover'd with a kind of bak'd Earth, and as well the Duomo as the Portal, which is very high, are all varniſh'd over. You aſcend nine or ten ſteps, the Port of Haly facing it on the other ſide of the Piazza. From the end of the Portico's that touch the North-ſide of the Moſquee, live the Shop-keepers that ſell ſowing-Silk, and ſmall Manufactures of Silk, as Ribands, Laces, Garters, and other things of the ſame nature. From the Moſquee to the other end, are all Turners, that make Cradles for Children, and Spinning-Wheels. There are alſo ſome Cotton-beaters, that make quilted Coverlets. Without the Portico's are none but Smiths, that make Scyths, Hammers, Pincers, Nails, and ſuch like things; with ſome few Cutlers.

This is all that can be ſaid of Iſpahan, and that great Piazza, which ſome perhaps have ſet out in better colours. But I have repreſented all things as they are, as being one that have ſeen them oftner, and beheld them a longer time than ever any Frank that Travell'd into Aſia.

CHAP.

CHAP. VI.

Of Zulpha, a little City, ſeparated from Iſpahan by the River Senderou.

Zulpha, which others call Julpha and Giolpha, is diſtant from Iſpahan toward the South half an hours walk, the River Senderou running almoſt at an equal diſtance between the two Cities. The way that leads from one City to another is a Walk ſome fifteen hundred Paces long, and ſeventeen broad, almoſt equally divided by the River. It begins from a Pavilion or Tabernacle forty Foot ſquare, which joyns to the hinder part of the King's Houſe, with a double Story, to which ſeveral Windows give light, clos'd with wooden Lattices very artificially wrought. None but the King and his Houſhold paſs that way into the Walk. For they that go from Iſpahan to Zulpha, find the way into the Walk through a Gate which is cloſe adjoyning to the Tabernacle. This Walk is call'd the Street of Tcharbag, or the Street of Four Gardens.

A Channel runs all along the Walk from the Tabernacle, where a little Rivulet falls into it, and fills it as far as the great Bridge. The two ſides of the Channel which are pav'd with Stone, and are two or three Foot broad, makes one way which Paſſengers may, and many times do take; for the uſual way both for Horſe and Foot, lyes upon each ſide of the Walk, behind the Trees, which are panted in a ſtreight line to the very Walls of the King's Gardens, which cloſe the Alley on each ſide. It is a kind of a Cauſey of Free-ſtone, ſomewhat rais'd, and four or five Foot broad. There is but one row of Trees on each ſide, ſtraight and high, call'd Tchinards, with one tuft at the top. The ſpace between the Channel and the Trees is not pav'd, but lyes common, and is ſometimes ſow'd. About two hundred Paces from the Tabernacle or Banqueting-houſe, the River falls into a great Pool, about thirty or thirty-five Foot in diameter; and in that place, as alſo in others ſomewhat beyond it, where there are alſo other Pools, the Walk is croſs'd by a Cauſey pav'd and rais'd, ten or twelve Foot broad, as the reſt are. Upon the left hand of the firſt Pool ſtands another Tabernacle or Banqueting-houſe, much alike in ſtructure and bigneſs to the former; in which place, in a low arch'd Room with a Fountain of Water in the middle, you may go and drink Coffee. From that houſe to the Bridge the Walk deſcends, and the Water makes ſome falls.

All the Gardens on each ſide of the Walk, both on this ſide and beyond the Bridge belong to the King. But you muſt not imagin that theſe Gardens, or that of Hezardgerib, which is the faireſt of all Perſia, are ſo curiouſly ſet out, nor ſo well kept as ours in Europe. For they have no ſuch lovely Borders, nor ſuch cloſe Walks of Honeyſuckles and Jaſmin as are to be ſeen in the Gardens of Europe. They ſuffer the Graſs to grow in many places; contented only with a good many great Fruit-trees, tufted a-top, and planted in a line, which is all the grace of the Gardens of Perſia.

In each ſide of the Walls between which the Walk runs, at a true diſtance of ſpace, are gates neatly contriv'd, and over each a little Room. Almoſt in the middle of the Walk between the great Banqueting-houſe and the Bridge, upon the left hand, ſtands a Houſe of the Dervi's, to whom the King has given one of his Gardens to build upon. There they keep the Relicks of Haly, or ſome other Prophet; for you ſhall ſee them ſtanding under a certain Arch, before which the Perſians make a moſt profound Reverence. Theſe Dervi's come every Afternoon about three or four a Clock into the Bazars of Iſpahan, every two, an old one and a young one, chooſing his quarter. They go from Shop to Shop, inſtructing the People upon ſome Point or other of the Law: the young Dervi's anſwering the old ones at certain times. Their Habit is only two Sheep-skins or Goat-skins, the one hanging before, the other behind, with a great leathern Girdle, four or five fingers broad, garniſh'd with ſeveral great Plates of Latten. They throw another Sheep-skin croſs their Shoulders, which they tye before, under their Chins. Upon their Heads they only wear a little Lamb-skin in form of a Bonnet, letting the feet hang down to their Necks, over their Cheeks. They carry a great Club in their hands, as the Painters repreſent John the Baptiſt in the Wilderneſs. Between their Girdles and their waſts they ſtuff a company of pitiful Flowers, or elſe a ſort of Herbs, which after Exhortation, both the young, and the old Dervi's beſtow upon the Merchants and Tradeſmen, from whom at the ſame time they receive Alms. Toward the evening they go home again; and I forgot to tell you, that before the door of the houſe, ſtands always a large Veſſel of water, with ſeveral little Cups, and Ice in the Summer, where all paſſengers may drink upon free-coſt.

The River of Senderou, which, as well as the reſt of the Rivers of Perſia, except the Aras, is not able to carry a Boat, is a very great relief to Iſpahan. Behind the Mountains of the South beyond Zulpha is another River, call'd Abkuren, which about five or ſix Leagues above Iſpahan, runs within a League and a half of Senderou. Sha-Abas the firſt attempted to have joyn'd the two Rivers together, to which purpoſe he went about to have remov'd certain Rocks that ſtood in his way; but not being able to compaſs his deſign, his Succeſſors laid aſide all the thoughts of attempting any more. Could it have been done, the Campaign of Iſpahan would have been one of the moſt fertile and delicious places in the world; whereas now the River is of no uſe, running through deſart Coutreys and Plains of Salt. As for the River of Senderou, in Winter it over-flows, but in Summer it has very little water, being oftner foarded than croſs'd over upon Bridges. About four Leagues above Iſpahan they are conſtrain'd to force it into their Lands, to water their Fields and Grounds, which elſe would produce nothing at all. Wells they have a great many in ſeveral places; but beſides that, they are not able to furniſh that great quantity of water which is neceſſary; the River Water is much better to fatten the Land. Now you muſt obſerve, that their Channels never return to the River, being waſted upon the Ground; ſo that the River of Iſpahan being very much waſted before it comes to the City, by reaſon that it is ſtill leſſen'd by ſo many Channels, about ten or twelve Leagues from thence, it ends as it were quite ſpent in a few Merſhes. This ſcarcity of water which is ſo general over all Perſia, is the reaſon that they are extraordinary Husdands of it, and buy it very dear. Therefore is the Superintendent of the water, which brings the King in a very conſiderable Revenue, one of the moſt contended-for employments in the whole Court. For every Garden is tax'd more or leſs according to its bigneſs, for the water it requires once a week; which water is let go into the quarters which have need of it; every Garden having a particular Channel, whence they have their water by turns. But you muſt have a care of attempting to bring this water in before your turn; for ſhould it come to be known, an eaſie Fine would not excuſe the matter. I knew two Franks, who, becauſe they preſum'd to take in water in the night time before it was their turn, had like to have loſt all their Land by Confiſcation, had it not been for the particular Favour of the King to the Franks; and yet all that favour did not excuſe them from being ſoundly amerc'd.

There are four Bridges a quarter of a Leagues diſtance one from another, that croſs the River of Senderou to Iſpahan. That which croſſes the walk, bears the name of Alyverdi-Kan, who caus'd it to be built, being alſo call'd the Bridge of Zulfa. It is built of good Brick, joyn'd together with Free-ſtone, and very level, not being higher in the middle than at either end. It is not above three hundred and fifty paces long, and twenty broad, being ſupported by ſeveral ſmall Arches of Stone, which are very low. Of each ſide there is a Gallery eight or nine foot broad, which runs from one end to the other, ſeveral Arches twenty five or thirty foot high ſupporting the Platform, where, when the heat is not extream, they that pleaſe may walk for the ſake of the freſh Air. But the moſt uſual paſſage is under the Galleries, where there are ſeveral out-lets upon the River, to let in the freſh Air. For the Galleries are very high, from the level of the Bridge, to which you aſcend by eaſie ſteps, the middle of the Bridge not being above twenty five foot broad, ſerving for Wagons and Pack-horſes. There is alſo another way all along by the water ſide, where there are ſeveral Stones laid to ſtep upon, to keep you from being wet-ſhod. It croſſes through all the Arches of the Bridge, through little doors made in every Arch from one end to the other, deſcending from the Bridge by a little pair of Stairs, tak'n out of the thickneſs of the Arches ſupporters. There is another Staircaſe to aſcend up to the Galleries of about two fathoms broad, with Stays or Rails on both ſides. This Bridge is truly a very neat piece of Architecture, if I may not ſay, the neateſt in all Perſia.

There

There are alſo three other Bridges upon the River, one above the Bridge of Zulfa, and two below. The firſt but meanly built, but very commodious for the Armenians, when they travel Weſtward, who would elſe be forc'd to go a great way about, through the whole City of Iſpahan.

The firſt of the other two Bridges below the Bridge of Zulfa, was built by Sha-Abas the ſecond, Father of the preſent King. It is almoſt equal to it in Structure; but it has one particular beauty, which is a hexagonal place in the middle of the Bridge, which cauſes the Water to fall in that part with a pleaſing noiſe. For that being the deepeſt part of the River, Sha-Abas reſolv'd to build a Bridge there; partly for the Gaurs ſake, to the end, they might not come through the walk of Tcharbag, and that going from Iſpahan they might have a ſhorter cut home. The Habitation of the Gaurs is only a large Village, the firſt Houſes whereof are but a little way from the River; though the walk that goes from Iſpahan to the King's Bridge is both longer and broader than that of Tcharbag, planted on both ſides with a row of Trees, but no Channel in the middle.

Before each of the Avenues to the Bridge, ſtands a Houſe that belongs to the King for his divertiſement. That upon the left ſide of the River toward Iſpahan was by the great Sha-Abas giv'n to the Capuchins. For as ſoon as they came to Iſpahan, upon their Examination, the King was extreamly tak'n with their behaviour. He ask'd them how they liv'd, and whether they took any money? To which the Capuchins making anſwer, that they never handled any money, but contented themſelves with Alms; the King believing his Subjects, would give them very little, beſtow'd that Houſe and Garden upon them. But they ſtay'd not long there, becauſe it was too big for them to repair, and too far from the City, ſo that the Roman-Catholicks in the Winter could not get to their Chappel. Now they have built themſelves a very handſom Houſe not far from the King's Palace, at the Coſt of Father Joſeph, one of their own order.

There is another old Bridge a quarter of a League below the Gaurs Bridge, which is upon the Road from Iſpahan to Schiraz.

But to return to the long-walk of Tcharbag, which continues above eight hundred paces beyond the Bridge of Zulfa to the Garden of Hezardgerib. The Rivulet that paſſes that other part of the walk, comes from the ſame River which they have cut three or four Leagues above Iſpahan. When you have walk'd about four hundred paces, you met with a fall of Waters that tumbles into a Pool, from whence there are twelve ſteps to aſcend to the end of the Alley. The walk is fronted by the great Houſe which ſtands before the Garden of Hezardgerib, or the thouſand Acres. The Houſe conſiſts but only of one great Hall over the Gate, and four ſmall Chambers at the four corners of it.

Hezardgerib is the faireſt Garden in Aſia, though it would be acounted nothing in Europe. However as it lies upon the deſcent of a Hill, it conſiſts of ſixteen Teraſſes, ſuſtain'd by a Wall ſixteen or ſeventeen foot high. There is but little Water in any of the Wells; but that which has moſt is in the fourth Terraſs. That is a great Octagonal Pool about a hundred and twenty foot in Diameter, round about which are ſeveral Pipes that throw up the Water about three foot high, and there are three ſteps down to the Water. A Channel pav'd with Stone runs through the principal Alley, which goes no farther than the building. This Channel is as wide as that of the Channel of Tcharbag, whence it is ſupply'd as being right oppoſite to it. In the tenth Terraſs you meet with another Fountain of the ſame bigneſs and form with that in the fourth; and in the laſt which terminates the Grand Alley and the length of the Garden, there is another Channel which croſſes all the Alleys which, like the great one compoſe the length of the Alley. Beſides this, there are op'n Rooms to take the freſh Air, ſome falls and murmurs of Water, but for borders and cloſe Alleys, and Arbours, you muſt expect no ſuch thing, either in Hezardgerib, nor in any other part of Perſia.

Having walk'd in the great walk of Tcharbag, you meet upon the right hand with a Street between two Walls of the Gardens that belong to the King, which Street leads you to Zulfa, not above two or three Muſquet Shots diſtance off.

Zulfa a Colony of Armenians which Sha-Abas brought from Zulfa, a City of Armenia, is ſo much encreas'd for ſome years ſince, that it may now paſs for a large large City, being almoſt a League and a half long, and near upon half as much broad. There are two principal Streets which contain near upon the whole length, one whereof has on each ſide a row of Tchinars, the roots whereof are refreſh'd by a ſmall Channel of Water, which by a particular order the Armenians bring to the City, to water their Gardens. The moſt part of the other Streets have alſo a row of Trees, and a Channel. And for their Houſes, they are generally better built, and more chearful than thoſe of Iſpahan.

See the Deſcription of Zulpha.

How they came to be ſetled here, I have already deſcrib'd: And now the number of Inhabitants is ſtrangely increas'd by the acceſſion of ſeveral other Chriſtians of divers Sects, as Jacobites, Cophtes, and Neſtorians, who formerly liv'd in the Suburbs of Iſpahan. Neither was Sha-Abas ſo cruel in tranſplanting the Armenians away out of their own Countrey, for they were all at that ſeaſon poor labouring men, who knew not at all what belong'd to Trade. Since that time they are grown very rich: ſo that the Armenians have no cauſe to be covetous of the Habitations of their Anceſtors. And now I will tell you how they came to be ſuch great Proficients in Trade.

Sha-Abas, who was a man of a great Genius, and a perſon of great undertaking, conſidering that Perſia was a barren Countrey, where there was little Trade, and by conſequence little Money, reſolv'd to ſend his Subjects into Europe with raw Silks, ſo to underſtand whence the beſt profit would ariſe, to bring Money into his Country. To which purpoſe, he reſolv'd to make himſelf Maſter of all the Silk in his own Country, by purchaſing it himſelf at a reaſonable rate, tax'd by himſelf, and to reap the gains by his Factors: and withal, thought it neceſſary to ſeek an Alliance with the great Kings of Europe, to engage them on his ſide againſt the Turk. He firſt ſent to the King of France, Henry the Fourth. But he dying before the Ambaſſador arriv'd, anſwer was made the Ambaſſador, That if the King of Perſia had any thing to ſay to the King of France Lewis the Thirteenth, he muſt ſend a new Ambaſſador, which was never done.

Three or four years after he ſent an Ambaſſador to the King of Spain, accompany'd with a Perſian Merchant of Iſpahan, putting into their hands a conſiderable quantity of Bales of Silk. He alſo ſent along with them a Portuguez Auſtin-Friar, to be their Guide and Interpreter. The Perſian Merchant would have ſold the Silks, as was the King's order, and have bought a Preſent more becoming. But the Ambaſſador over-rul'd by the Friar, reſolv'd to preſent the King of Spain with the Bales of Silk. The Merchant not able to oppoſe the Ambaſſador, returns home forthwith to give an account to the King, who approv'd his management. The Ambaſſador proceeds, and coming to the Spaniſh Court, preſents his Bales of Silk to the King, who ask'd the Ambaſſador, whether his Maſter took him for a Woman, that he had ſent him ſo many Bales of Silk to ſpin; and immediately ſent away the Preſent to his Queen, preſenting the Ambaſſador but very meanly: who thereupon ſeeing the Errour he had committed, made haſt home; but upon his return, the Perſian King having notice of the ill ſucceſs of his Negotiation, caus'd his Belly to be ript op'n in the publick Market-place.

About fifteen years after, he truſted a conſiderable quantity of Silk with a Merchant's Son of Iſpahan, and ſent him to Venice: who when he came there, took a ſtately Lodging, and ſpent his Money at a ſtrange rate, eſpecially among the Courtiſans; to maintain which expence, he continually ſold great quantities of Silk. The Venetians ſeeing a private man live ſo ſplendidly among them, and not believing ſo great a quantity of Goods could belong to one ſingle Merchant, but rather imagining him to be a Factor for ſome Company who ſuffer'd for his folly, wrote to all the Ports of the Levant, and having intelligence who he was, the Senate thought fit to ſeize his Perſon and his Goods, before he had conſum'd all; at the ſame time giving a civil account to the King of Perſia, what they had done. To which the Perſian King return'd a moſt obliging Anſwer of Thanks, ſending withal an intelligent Perſian Merchant to take an account of what was left, to whom the Venetians were very punctual. As for the Prodigal Perſian, who thought it not his wiſeſt way to return into Perſia, what became of him is not material to this Story.

Sha-Abas by theſe Experiments obſerving the little inclination of his Subjects to Trade, who were naturally addicted to Pride and Expence, which is no part of a Merchant's buſineſs, caſt his Eyes upon the Armenians, men able to endure the labour labour of long Journeys, ſober perſons, and great Husbands, and ſuch who being Chriſtians, might more freely Trade among the Chriſtians; and made choice of them, as being moſt proper and fit for Trade. Whereupon, picking out the moſt Judicious among them, he deliver'd to every one ſo many Bales of Silk, according to their Capacity; for which they were to pay at their return, a reaſonable Rate tax'd by the King, who allow'd them what more they got for their Expences and Gains. Thoſe people in a ſhort time became ſo expert, that there is not any ſort of Trade which they will not now undertake; for now they run as far as Tunquin, Java, and the Phillippines, and indeed over all the Eaſt, except China and Japan. But if they do not thrive, they never return; as being a place where they muſt either give an exact Account, or elſe ſuffer the quick and ſevere Juſtice of Drubbing, which never fails thoſe Factors that are ill Husbands for their Maſters.

And indeed the Armenians are ſo much the more fit for Trading, becauſe they are a people very ſparing, and very ſober; though whether it be their virtue or their avarice, I know not. For when they are going a long Journey, they only make proviſion of Bisket, ſmoak'd Bufalo's fleſh, Onions, bak'd Butter, Flowr, Wine, and dry'd Fruits. They never buy freſh Victuals, but when they meet with Lambs or Kids very cheap in the Mountainous Countries; nor is there one of them that does not carry his Angle to fiſh withal, when they come to any Ponds or Rivers. All theſe proviſions coſt them little the Carriage. And when they come to any Town where they are to ſtay, they club five or ſix together, and lye in an empty Chamber which they furniſh themſelves; every one carrying his Mattreſs, his Coverlet, and his Kitchin-Inſtruments, which is a great piece of Thrift. When they travel into Chriſtendom, they carry along with them Saffron, Pepper, Nutmegs, and other Spices; which they exchange in the Country-Towns for Bread, Wine, Butter, Cheeſe, Milk-Meats, and other Proviſions which they buy of the poor Women. When they return out of Chriſtendom, they bring along with them all ſorts of Mercery-ware, and Pedlery-ware of Noremberg and Venice; as little Looking-glaſſes, trifles of Tin enamel'd, falſe Pearls, and other things of that nature; which pays for the Victuals they call for among the Country-people.

In the beginning of their Trade, there return'd very few Caravans into Perſia without two hundred thouſand Crowns in Silver, beſide Engliſh and Dutch Clothes, fine Tiſſues, Looking-glaſſes, Venice Pearls, Cochenel, and Watches; which they thought moſt proper for the Sale of Perſia and India.

At length thoſe Armenians became ſo exquiſite in Trade, that ſeveral of them have left Eſtates of two, ſome twenty thouſand Tomans. But the richeſt among them was Cotgia, or Monſieur Petrus, who left forty thouſand Tomans in coyn'd Money, beſides his Horſes, Furniture, and Lands in the Country, his Jewels and Plate; all which are never reckon'd a Merchant's Eſtate, but only the ready Caſh with which he trades. Cotgia Petrus was very much eſteem'd for his Charity, and the great Church which he built, which is a kind of Covent, with a Biſhop and Monks. Nor is the fair Market-place, all environ'd with Shops, a little beholding to his Generoſity.

The Armenians of Zulpha have this advantage over all the Chriſtians of the Eaſt, that they enjoy Lands and Priviledges, the King not permitting the leaſt injuſtice to be done them, nor that any Mahometan ſhould live at Zulpha. They have alſo the priviledge to be as well clad as the Perſians, and to make uſe as they do of Bridles of Gold and Silver. Their Wives alſo are very richly habited, in ſtrip'd Sattins purfl'd with Gold, and other rich Europæan Silks.

The King names whom he pleaſes among the Armenians to be their Chief; whom they call Kelonter, who judges all their differences, and taxes them to make up the Sum which they are to pay to the King every year.

The Language of the Armenians is either vulgar or learned; the learned is only us'd by the Eccleſiaſticks, in reference to their Religion. They write like us, from the left to the right, having found out peculiar Characters about four years ſince. They have three Languages very natural to them, which however are very different: the Armenian, which is their ancient Country-ſpeech, which they have preſerv'd from Father to Son; the Perſian, which is the Language of the Country where they live; and the Turkiſh, of which they make very much uſe in courſe of Trade. As for their Women, they ſpeak nothing but the Armenian, as having no converſe with ſtrangers, ſtrangers, and never ſtirring out of their houſes. There are ſome Armenians ſpeak Italian and French, as having learnt it in Europe.

There are in Zulpha fifteen or ſixteen Churches and Chappels of the Armenians, among which you are to count two Nunneries for Women. There are in Iſpahan Auſtin-Friars, Carmelites, and Capuchins, and in Zulpha Jeſuits. The Jeſuits that came laſt have but a little Houſe, but to make them amends they have a large Garden. Though the number of the Religious Teachers is far greater then the number of Hearers: for in all Iſpahan and Zulpha, take the Franks that come out of Europe, or born in Perſia, as well Men as Women, there are not ſix hundred perſons that profeſs the Catholick Religion. As for the Armenians, they are ſo obſtinately fix'd to their own Religion, that they will hear of no other; and nothing but Money has ſometimes caus'd them to feign the embracing of another. Friar Ambroſe a Capuchin ſtaid a while at Zulpha, to whom ſeveral of the principal Armenians came to School to learn French, in hopes of eſtabliſhing a Trade with France. But the Armenian Archbiſhop and Biſhops fearing leſt the Children ſhould be infected with ſome other Religion, excommunicated all Fathers that ſent their Children to School. And finding that they little regarded the Excommunication, they ſhut up the Church doors, and ſtir'd up the People againſt the Religious Franks; ſo that Father Ambroſe was forc'd to leave Perſia, and retire to Surat.

Moreover there are in Iſpahan both Jews and Indian Idolaters. Nor are the Jews ſo miſerable and beggarly, as they ſeem to be: they intrude, according to cuſtom, into all Buſineſs; ſo that if any has a mind to buy or ſell any rich Jewel, he need do no more but ſpeak to them. In the Reign of Sha-Abas, the Athemadoulet perſecuted them ſo grievouſly, that either by force or by cunning he caus'd them to turn Mahometans; but the King underſtanding that only power and fear had conſtrain'd them to turn, ſuffer'd them to reſume their own Religion, and to live in quiet.

There are about ten or twelve thouſand Banians in Iſpahan, who are known by their yellow Complexions, or rather by a yellow Mark made with Saffron upon the top of their Foreheads. Their Turbants are leſs than uſual, and their Shoes are almoſt like ours, embroider'd with Flowers a-top. They are all Bankers, and very knowing in Money. The greateſt part of the Money of the principal Money'd men of Iſpahan is in their hands for improvement ſake. So that if you want a conſiderable Sum, you may have it the next day upon good Security, and paying a ſevere Intereſt, which thoſe Banians will ſqueez up ſometimes to 18 per Cent. But if it be not very privately exacted and paid, the Law of Mahomet, which forbids the taking of Intereſt, lays hold upon the whole Sum, and confiſcates it every Penny.

CHAP. VII.

Of the Religion of the Perſians; of the great Feaſt of Hocen and Huſſein, and the Camel-Feaſt.

THE difference among the Mahometans, doth not conſiſt in the different Explanations which they put upon the Alcoran; but in the ſeveral Opinions which they hold concerning the firſt Succeſſors of Mahomet, from which have aris'n two particular Sects entirely oppoſite; the Sect of the Sunnis, and the Sect of the Schiais.

The firſt, who are of the Turkiſh belief, maintain that Abou-baker ſucceeded immediately to Mahomet, as his Vicar or Vicegerent; to him Omar; to Omar Oſman; to Oſman Mortuz-Ali, Nephew and Son-in-law to Mahomet by Marriage of his Daughter. That Oſman was Secretary to Mahomet, a perſon of Courage, as well as the other three; and that they were all valiant Souldiers, and great Captains, who extended their Conqueſts more by force of Arms than by Reaſon. And thence it comes that the Sunnis will not allow of Diſputes, but propagate and maintain their Religion altogether by force.

The Schiais, who are of the Perſian belief, deteſt Abou-baker, Omar, and Oſman, as Uſurpers to the Succeſſion of Mahomet, which only belong'd to Haly, his Nephew and Son-in-law. They hold that this ſucceſſion conſiſts in elev'n High Prieſts deſcendants from Haly, who makes the twelfth in this order. 1. Haly, Son of Aboutaleb. 2. Hocen, eldeſt Son of Hali. 3. Huſſein, his ſecond Son, who ſuffer'd death in defence of his Father's Succeſſion. The place where the Sunnis gave him battel and ſlew him, is call'd Kerbela near to Babylon, and is a holy place in high veneration among the Perſians. 4. Iman-zin-el-Abedin. 5. Mahomet-el Baker. 6. Iafer-el-Scadek, who introduc'd the Law into Perſia, that if any Chriſtian, Jew, or Idolater turn'd Mahometan, he ſhould be declar'd general Heir to his Family to the excluſion of Brothers and Siſters, and that he might allow what he pleas'd to his Father and Mother. Whence aroſe two miſchiefs, that ſome Armenians, Chriſtians, and Jews turn'd Mahumetans, to get the Eſtate of the Family, and others turn'd Mahumetans, to keep their poſſeſſions. 7. Mouſſa-Katzem. 8. Hali-el-Rezza, whoſe Tomb at Meſhed is ſo highly venerated among the Perſians, as Mahomet's among the Turks. 9. Mahammet-el-Ioüad. 10. Hali-el-Hadi. 11. Hocen-el-Askeri. 12. Mouhemmet el-Mouhadi Shaheb-zaman. The Perſians hold the ſame belief as to the laſt Iman, as we do of Enoch and Elias, which is the reaſon that ſeveral people leave them in their Wills Houſes ready furniſh'd, Stables full of ſtately Horſes, and other neceſſaries for them to make uſe of when they return to Earth again. They attribute to this Iman the Sirname of Zaheb-zaman, or Lord of Time.

Theſe two Sects of Sunnis and Schias over-run the three principal Kingdoms of India, viz. the Great Mogul's, the King of Golcondæ's, and the King of Viſapour's. The firſt and laſt being Sunnis, that is to ſay, both the Kings and Lords of the Court; for their Subjects are moſt of them Idolaters. Some Schiais there are in the Courts of both Kings, in regard the Officers of the Army are for the moſt part Perſians, though in outward ſhew they may follow the Religion of the Prince. But the King of Golconda Koutoub-Sha is a zealous Schiais.

I come now to the Grand Feſtival of the Perſians, which is the famous Feaſt of Hocen and Huſſein.

Eight days before the Feſtival begins, ſome of the more zealous ſort black all their Bodies and their Faces, and go naked in the Streets with only a covering about their ſecret parts. They carry two Flints, one in each hand, which they knock one againſt another, wrything their Bodies, and making a thouſand antick Faces; and all the while crying out, Huſſein, Hocen; Hocen, Huſſein; which they act and ſpeak with ſo much Labour, 'till they foam again at the mouth. In the Evening, the devout people admit them into their Houſes, and feed them very well. During thoſe days, as ſoon as the Sun is ſet, you ſhall ſee at the corners where ſeveral Streets meet, Pulpits ſet up for certain Preachers, who prepare the people that flock to hear them to the devotion of the Feaſt. Now in regard all Ages, and Sexes go, there is no time in all the year ſo favourable for the Women to meet their Gallants.

In the year 1667. the third of July, I ſaw the Feſtival by the favour of the Nagar, who appointed me a place juſt againſt the Dèla where the King ſate. This Dela is a Room built with a jetting upon that ſide of the Meidan next the Palace Gate, one ſtory high. Several Pillars ſuſtain the flat bottom or floor of the Dèla, enrich'd with a Groteſco work of Gold and Azure, in the mid'ſt whereof there was a Fountain that was fill'd with Water by the contrivance of a Pipe. The Stage or Dèla was op'n upon three ſides, the longeſt ſide jetting out upon the Piazza. Upon the Wall of the oppoſite ſide, which was cloſe, were to be ſeen ſeveral Engliſh and Hollanders, both men and women pictur'd with Bottles and Glaſſes in their hands, as if they were drinking to one another. Sha-abas the ſecond caus'd this Painting to be drawn by a Hollander.

About ſev'n a Clock in the Morning Sha-Sephi the ſecond, who ſince has chang'd his name to Sha-Soliman the ſecond, came and ſeated himſelf upon his Throne ſet up in the mid'ſt of the Dèla, all his Nobility ſtanding about him. So ſoon as he was ſate down, the Great Provoſt appear'd at the end of the Piazza mounted upon a fair Horſe, attended by certain young Lords, who caus'd the People, conſiſting of the Companies of the two quarters of the City, which are twelve in all, to advance to the places which were deſign'd them. For formerly the Companies would ſtrive for the way; and therefore the King to prevent diſorder, order'd there ſhould be a Provoſt, or Maſter of the Ceremonies to place them without diſturbance.

As he was about his duty, a Horſe-man entred the Piazza, arm'd with a Bow, a Quiver, and a Scimitar, follow'd by ſeven Men that carry'd every one a Pike upright in their hands, with every one a Man's Head at the top. Thoſe were the Heads of certain Usbeck-Tartars, the neighbouring and mortal Enemies of the Perſians, which thoſe men had cut off from the ſhoulders of their conquer'd Foes. The King caus'd five Tomans a piece to be giv'n to them that carry'd the Heads, and ten Tomans to their Leader. After them enter'd three hundred Turks, which were fled from the Borders of Turky, from whence the Country-people were tak'n by force, and ſent to the Warrs of Candy. They complain'd, that whereas they were wont to be ſent to their Winter-Quarters about the middle of October, the Turk kept them to the ſame hard ſervice in Winter as in Summer. All theſe were order'd to advance into the middle of the Piazza, where they made their obeyſance to him three times, and then humbly beſought him that they might dwell in his Kingdom, with their Wives, their Children, and their Cattel. The King order'd Money to be diſtributed among them, and that they ſhould have Lands aſſign'd them to manure. Then the Prévoſt caus'd the Companies to advance, every Company having the Thill of a Wagon carry'd before him; upon every of which Thills was a Bier three or four Foot high, the Wood of the Thill being painted with a Groteſco of Gold and Silver, and the Bier cover'd with Sattin. When the firſt Company had order to march, three Horſes were led before, richly harneſs'd; when they were come about a hundred Paces forward into the Piazza, in view of the King, they that led the Horſes caus'd them to gallop, and then all the Company fell a running and dancing about with the Bier. Beſides that, every one flung up his ſhort Caſſock, his Girdle, and Bonnet, put their fingers in their mouths, to whiſtle as loud as they could. While the naked people, with their Flint-ſtones in their hands, ran knocking their Stones together, crying out, Huſſein Hacen, Hacen Huſſein, 'till they foam at the mouth again: not omitting to wryth their Bodies, and to make all the ſeurvy Faces as before deſcrib'd. The three Companies ſucceeding one another in the ſame Formalities, by and by came two Companies more with a little Bier upon their Thills, and in each Bier a little Child that lay as if dead. They that accompany'd theſe two Biers wept and ſigh'd moſt ſadly. Theſe two Infants repreſented the Children of Huſſein, who when the Prophet was ſlain, were tak'n by Yezid, Caliph of Bagdat, and put to death.

Upon this occaſion you ſhall ſee a great number of Curtiſans that come to the Ceremony fall a weeping, who thereby believe their Sins are forgiv'n.

When all the people were come into the Piazza, notwithſtanding all the care and good order that was tak'n, there were ſeveral that went to Sharps, accounting it a great honour to fight ſmartly in the Kings preſence; and farther believing, that if any one be kill'd upon that occaſion, he ſhall be Sainted; as indeed every one gives ſomething toward his Interment. The Grand Provoſt ſeeing the Quarrel grow hot, and fearing more miſchief, ſent for five Elephants, which ceas'd the Combat, by drawing the Eyes of the Spectators upon them. The Elephants march'd one before another, according to their Pay that was allow'd them, and their skill in War. Not that the King of Perſia makes any uſe of them in the Field, but only for State, keeps ſuch as the Indian Princes preſent him withal. Thoſe five Elephants were cover'd with Houſes of Cloth of Gold, with a Fringe of the ſame round about. And upon the firſt, which was the higheſt and the biggeſt, ſate two Men, the one upon the neck, who guides the Elephant; the other upon the crupper, carrying the King's Arms in a Standard fix'd to a half-Pike. Upon the other four ſate only one Man a-piece, who were the Governours. When they came before the place where the King ſate, they were all rank'd five a-breſt, at what time the biggeſt, which was in the middle, ſtretch'd out his two fore-legs forward, and his two hinder-legs backward, 'till his belly almoſt touch'd the ground; after which manner the Elephant makes his obeyſance. The other four did the ſame. Then laying their Trunks upon the ground, and raiſing them again over their heads three times more, they were made to ſtand with their heads where their tayls ſtood; and their Houſes were turn'd up, to the end the King might ſee in what condition they were, and whether well look'd after or no: which being done, they were led away again.

Upon one ſide of the Room where the King ſtood, a little Scaffold was ſet up, cover'd with Tapiſtry, ſome five Foot lower than the Kings. In the middle of the Scaffold ſtood a great Elbow-Chair cover'd with black Velvet, where ſate a Mouſſah with ſix other Moullah's round about him. The Moullah made a Diſcourſe upon the Death of Huſſein and Hocen of about half an hour long, which being ended, the King caus'd a Calaat or Habit of Honour to be giv'n him, as alſo to the others, though not ſo rich. When they had all put on the Habit, the ſame Moullah return'd to his Chair, and made a Prayer for the health of the King, and the proſperity of his Kingdom.

All theſe Ceremonies laſted from ſeven in the Morning 'till Noon, at what time the King retir'd into his Haram. As for the People, they carry their Biers up and down the City, and where-ever two Companies meet, whether it be for the upper hand, or to get formoſt, they preſently fall together by the Ears, and knock one another down: For they are not permitted to carry any other Arms than good big Clubs, almoſt as big as Levers.

Some time after the Feaſt of Huſſein and Hocen, the Perſians celebrate another Feſtival, which they call the Feaſt of the Camel, in remembrance of Abraham's Sacrifice. They have a great reverence for this Feſtival, ſaying that it was a Camel and not a Ram which God ſent to reprieve Iſhmael (affirming that Iſhmael was to have been ſacrific'd, and not Iſaac.) They chooſe out for this Ceremony one of the faireſt Camels they can meet withal, and adorn and dreſs him up with ſeveral Plates of counterfeit Gold and Silver, and then lead him without the City to a place which is before a Moſquee on the other ſide of the River of Iſpahan, upon Zulpha ſide; the Deroga or Provoſt accompanying the people. The King was formerly wont to be at this Feaſt, accompany'd with his Nobility, and I have ſeen him there; but of late years he never goes, the Deroga ſupplying his place.

When the King went thither, ſeveral Moullahs pray'd for half an hour, after which the King took a kind of a Jav'lin and darted it againſt the Camel: but now in the abſence of the King, the Deroga gives the firſt ſtroak. At the ſame time they fling the Camel to the ground, with Ropes ty'd to his legs, and cutting off his head and neck together, they divide the reſt of the Body into eleven parts more, to the end all the twelve Companies may have every one their ſhare. Every Company carry their ſhare to the Maſter of the Companies Houſe, who is generally the ancienteſt among them. Which part is kept and ſalted up 'till the next Feaſt, and the piece the year before, ſo 'till then preſerv'd, is then boyl'd with Rice, and is the foundation of the Feaſt for the chief of the Company, who take it for an honour to eat of it: For the reſt, they boyl Rice with Mutton and Hens, and beſides that, diſtribute large Alms to the Poor.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Religion of the Gaurs, the Relicks of the ancient Perſians, adorers of Fire.

THere are no men in the world ſo ſcrupulous of diſcovering the Myſteries of their Religion, as the Gaurs; ſo that I was forc'd to frequent their company very much in moſt of my Travels, to pick out what I have here to deliver.

Of the preſent Condition of the Gaurs.

AFter the Perſians began to perſecute the Gaurs, great numbers of them retir'd to Surat, and others into the Province of Guzerat. Now the King of Perſia lets them live in quiet; and there are now above 10000 in Kerman, where I ſtaid three Months in the year 1654. All that live in India are Tradeſmen, and for the moſt part Turners in Ivory; thoſe in Kerman deal in Wool. Four-days journey from whence ſtands their principal Temple, where their Chief Prieſt reſides; whither they are once in their lives oblig'd to go in Pilgrimage. There are ſome of theſe Gaurs live near Iſpahan.

Of their Original, and their Prophets.

THey say that the Father of their Prophet was a Frank by Nation, whose Name was Azer, and a Carver by Trade. That he left his own Country to live in theirs, which at that time was the City of Babylon; where he took a Wife who call'd her self Dughdon. That one night his Wife dreamt that God had sent an Angel from Paradise to visit her, who brought her very rich Cloaths, which she put on. That a Celestial Light presently over-spread her Face, and render'd her as beautiful as the Sun; and that when she wak'd she found her self with Child, which Child prov'd to be the Prophet Ebrahim-zer-Ateucht. That the Astrologers of that time, by their skill in the Stars knew of the Birth of that Infant sent by God, who was to govern Men, and reign in their Hearts. That those Astrologers went and declar'd the same thing to the King, telling him that there was a Child suddenly to be born, that would one day reprive him of his Crown. Whereupon the said King, call'd Neubrot, and a great Tyrant, caus'd all the Women with Child to be put to death, through the whole extent of his Dominions.

But by a Miracle the big Belly of the Mother of their Prophet not appearing, she remain'd undiscover'd, and brought forth a Son. Her Husband, who knew nothing of this Mystery, fearing he should lose his head if he did not discover the business to the King, before he found it out another way, went and confess'd that he had a Child born, but that he knew nothing of her being with Child.

Now you must know, that contrary to the custom of other Children, that cry so soon as they come out of the Mothers womb, this Child laugh'd so soon as he was born. For being to triumph over the Hearts of the people, he was to shew signs of joy; so that the people began already to rejoyce in their future felicities. This being signifi'd to the King, he call'd his Astrologers together, to tell him the meaning of so extraordinary a thing, and what would become of the Infant. But the Astrologers not being able to satisfie him, he sent for the Infant, and would have slain him with a Sword with his own hand, but God dry'd up his Arm immediately, so that he could not. However, not terrifi'd with so great a punishment, transported with Choler, he caus'd a great Fire to be kindled, and commanded the Infant to be thrown into it. But by the power of God, the Fire which he had prepar'd to consume the Infant turn'd into a Bed of Roses, where the Child most sweetly repos'd.

They who from that hour began to honour the little Prophet, took away some of that Fire, which has been preserv'd to this time. They keep it, say they, in honour of so great a Miracle; and they have it in great veneration, because it discover'd the merit of their Prophet.

Nevertheless the King stop'd not there, but still obstinate in his impiety, notwithstanding all these Miracles, he prepar'd new torments for the little Infant; but God chastis'd his incredulity and that of his people very severely, by sending such an infinite number of Flies, and that of such a pestiferous nature, that who-ever were stung with them dy'd without remedy, unless they immediately came and worship'd the Prophet, and kiss'd his Feet, in testimony of their repentance. As for the King, who still continu'd in his impenitency, an exemplary fate befel him. For one of those Flies stinging him in one of his Ears, he dy'd a most tormenting death.

His Successor was Sha-Glochtes. He also at the beginning of his Reign began to persecute the little Infant, who now began to increase in years and vertue. The King imprison'd him: but he was astonish'd when he heard that one of his Horses, which he always confided in when he went to Battel, as being assur'd of Victory when he rode him, had lost his four legs. Thereupon, wiser than his Predecessor, and acknowledging from whence so dire a Correction proceeded, he sent for the Prophet out of Prison, ask'd pardon for his incredulity, and pray'd him by his intercession to restore his Horse his legs again. The Prophet willing to do him that favour, pray'd to God four times, and every time he pray'd one leg return'd to the Horse again. The King beholding such a Miracle, was half converted; but being desirous to be farther convinc'd, he desir'd the Prophet to throw himself into a Bath of melted Silver, which he would provide for him; promising, if he came out safe, that he and all his People would receive him as one sent from God, and be obedient to his Precepts in all things. The Prophet resolutely undertook his offer, and the Bath being ready, cast himself ſearleſly into it; and as he went in, ſo he came out without the leaſt harm. Then the King and all the people that were preſent ador'd him for a real Propher, and gave him the name of Zer-Ateucht, or Waſh'd in Silver.

The Prophet perceiving that all the people had him in ſo much veneration, withdrew himſelf, and would not be ſeen any more. Nor do they juſtly know what became of him; which makes the greateſt part of the Gaurs believe, that he was tak'n up into Paradiſe both Soul and Body together. Others ſay, that having found an Iron Coffin upon the Road near Bagdat, he put himſelf into it, and was carry'd into Heav'n by the Angels. They allow their Prophet three Children, who are not yet come into the world, though their names be already giv'n them. They ſay that this Prophet Ebrahim walking one time upon the River without a Boat, three drops of his nature fell from him upon the water, which are ſtill preſerv'd there. That their God will ſend a Virgin, very much belov'd by him, upon the ſame River, who by the receptien of the firſt drop ſhall become big of the firſt Child, whom they call beforehand Ouchider. He ſhall come into the world with authority, and ſhall cauſe his Fathers Law to be receiv'd, and confirm it, not only by his eloquent Preaching, but by many miracles. The ſecond, whoſe name is Ouchiderma, ſhall be conceiv'd after the ſame faſhion; he ſhall aſſiſt his Brother, and by cauſing the Sun to ſtand ſtill ten years, ſhall convince all the world of the Truth of his Doctrine. The third ſhall be conceiv'd by the ſame Mother, and ſhall be call'd Senoiet-batius: He ſhall come with more authority than his two Brothers, and ſhall perfectly reduce all people to the Religion of their Prophet. After which ſhall be the univerſal Reſurrection, at what time all the Souls, either in Paradiſe or Hell, ſhall return to take poſſeſſion of their Bodies. Then ſay they, ſhall all the Mountains, and all the Minerals in the world be melted, and ſhall fill up the great Chaos of Hell, whereby the Manſion of the Devils ſhall be utterly deſtroy'd? After this the world ſhall be levell'd, and be made fit to inhabit, and men ſhall have every one their apartment anſwerable to the degree and quantity of the good which they did in their life time: but that their chief delight ſhall be to behold and praiſe God and Ebrahim their Prophet. They add that before the Reſurrection, thoſe that are in Paradiſe do not behold the face of God, no not the Angels themſelves, except only one, who is always attendant on him to receive and execute his commands. They alſo ſay that God will have pity upon the Damn'd, and that they ſhall go into Paradiſe, as having ſuffer'd enough already for their ſins. By which it appears, that the Paradiſe of the Gaurs is leſs remote from ſenſe than that of Mahomet's invention; and that they have a confus'd knowledge of the myſteries of Chriſtian Religion.

Of the Books of the Gaurs.

Ebrahim-zer-Ateucht being taken up into Paradiſe, they receiv'd by his means ſeven Books of Laws, which God of his goodneſs ſent them to inſtruct them in the way of their Salvation. They alſo receiv'd ſeven others, containing an Interpretation of all the Dreams that could be Dream'd. Laſtly, ſeven others, wherein were written all the ſecrets of Phyſick, and all the poſſible means for the long preſervation of health. They ſay that fourteen of theſe Books, which contain'd the explication of Dreams and ſecrets of Phyſick are loſt; for that Alexander the Great carry'd them away, as eſteeming them a vaſt treaſure; and for the Books of their Religion, becauſe they were written in a language that none but the Angels underſtood. Alexander for madneſs caus'd them to be burnt: for which raſhneſs of his, God puniſh'd him, and afflicted him with that terrible ſickneſs whereof he Dy'd. Some Doctors and Prieſts that had hid themſelves in the Mountains to ſave their lives from his Butchery, after Alexander was Dead, met again together, and compos'd one Book by the ſtrength of their memories. I ſaw that Book which is a good large one; and written in a different Character, either from the Arabian, Perſian, or Indian. Their Prieſts themſelves that read in that Book hardly underſtand what they read, but they have other Books that explain what is contain'd therein. When they read in that Book, as alſo when they pray, they tye a Handkerchief about their mouths, as if they were afraid their words ſhould mix with the Air and receive any impurity.

Of the manner of their Baptiſm.

THe Gaurs never uſe Circumciſion, but at the Birth of their Children practiſe ſomething like our Baptiſm. For ſome days after the Child is born, they waſh it with Water wherein certain Flowers are firſt boyl'd; and during that dipping, the Prieſt, who is preſent, makes certain Prayers. If the Child dye without that Waſhing, they do not believe but that it goes to Paradiſe; but they hold that the Parents ſhall give an account for their neglect of the Infant, becauſe that Waſhing increaſes his favour and his merit in the ſight of God.

Of their Marriages.

THe Religion of the Gaurs permits them to have five Wives, if they can maintain them; nor is it laudable to repudiate any one but in caſe of an evident Adultery, or that ſhe turn Mahometan; beſides, it behoves her Husband to ſtay a whole year, to ſee whether ſhe will repent or no. If ſhe come and acknowledge her fault to the Prieſt, he enjoyns her Penance for three years; after which he remarries them, and they become man and wife again.

As to the Ceremony of Marriage, the Prieſt, when the Couple come to him, asks the Man and the Woman in the preſence of Witneſſes, whether they both conſent; then taking a little Water he ſays a few Prayers over it, and then waſhing both their Foreheads he pronounces certain words, and there's all. But they are not to marry within the third degree; nor do they know what it means to deſire a Diſpenſation.

But you muſt obſerve by the way, that though they are allow'd five Wives, there is but one which can be truly ſaid to be marry'd, with whom they are oblig'd to lye at leaſt two nights in a week, Fryday and Saturday, and ſhe always goes before the reſt. But if ſhe have no Children in ſeven years, the man is allow'd to marry another, but not to repudiate the other, whom he is bound ſtill to maintain according to his quality.

So ſoon as Women or Maids perceive the cuſtom of Nature upon them, they preſently leave their Houſes, and ſtay alone in the Fields in little Hutts made of Hurdles or Watlings, with a Cloth at the entring in, which ſerves for a Door. While they are in that condition, they have Meat and Drink brought them every day; and when they are free, they ſend according to their quality, a Kid, or a Hen, or a Pigeon for an Offering; after which they go to the Bath, and then invite ſome few of their Kindred to ſome ſmall Collation.

Of their Faſts, Feaſts, and principal Ceremonies.

THe Gaurs drink Wine both men and women, and eat Swines-fleſh, provided it be of their own breeding and feeding. They are very careful leſt their Hogs eat any ordure; for ſhould they perceive that they had devour'd any thing of naſtineſs, they are ſtrictly forbid'n to eat them. They never pare their Nails; ſo that if by way of diſgrace, or by any misfortune they are conſtrain'd to cut their Nails or their Hair, they carry that which they cut off to ſome place appointed without the City for that purpoſe. Five days in a year they abſtain from Meat, Fiſh, Butter, and Eggs; and three other days they faſt altogether 'till Evening. They have alſo thirty Holy-days in honour of thirty of their Saints, which they keep very ſtrictly, no man daring to work. But the day of the Birth of their Prophet is celebrated with an extraordinary Pomp; beſides, that then they beſtow large Alms.

There is one day in the year when all the Women of every City and Village meet together to kill all the Frogs they can find in the fields; and this is done by the Command of their Prophet, who was one day very much annoy'd by them.

Their Prieſts have ſeveral Books full of ſmall Pictures in Water-Colours, ill done, repreſenting how the ſeveral Sins of Men ſhall be puniſh'd in Hell, eſpecially Sodomy, which they abominate.

Of their Funerals.

WHen the Gaurs are ſick they ſend for their Prieſts, to whom they make a kind of Confeſſion; whereupon the Prieſts enjoyn them to give Alms, and other good Works, to gain pardon of their Sins.

They

They neither burn nor bury their dead, but carry the Corps without the City, into a wall'd place, where are abundance of Stakes seven or eight Foot high, fix'd in the ground, and tye the dead Corps to one of the Stakes, with his Face toward the East. They that accompany the Corps fall to their Prayers at a distance, 'till the Crows come; for those Cemitaries draw the Crows to them. If the Crow chances to fasten upon the right Eye of the deceas'd, then they believe the person to be happy, and for joy they give large Alms, and make a Feast in the field. But if the Crow fixes upon the left Eye, then they take it for an ill Omen, return home sad, without speaking to one another; give no Alms, nor eat nor drink.

Of their Adoration of Fire.

THe Gaurs would not be thought to give Honour to Fire under the title of Adoration. For they do not account themselves Idolaters, saying that they acknowledge but only one God, Creator of Heaven and Earth, whom they only adore. As for the Fire, they preserve it and reverence it, in remembrance of the great Miracle, by which their Prophet was deliver'd from the Flames. One day being at Kerman, I desir'd to see that Fire, but they answer'd me, they could not permit me. For say they, one day the Kan of Kerman being desirous to see the Fire, not daring to do otherwise, they shew'd it him. He it seems expected to see some extraordinary Brightness; but when he saw no more then what he might have seen in a Kitchin or a Chamber-fire, fell a swearing and spitting upon't as if he had been mad. Whereupon the Sacred Fire being thus profan'd, flew away in the form of a white Pigeon. The Priests considering then their misfortune, which had happen'd through their own indiscretion, fell to their Prayers with the People, and gave Alms; upon which, at the same time, and in the same form the Sacred Fire return'd to its place: which makes them so shy to shew it again. When they put any persons to their Oaths, they Swear them before this Fire; for they think no person so impious, as to swear falle before that Sacred Fire, which they take for the Witness of their Oath. Their Priests put them in dread of very great punishments, and threat'n them that the heavenly Fire will forsake them, if they prove so wicked as to swear falsely before it.

Of their Manners and Customs.

THe Language of the Gaurs is different from the Persians, as is their Character and manner of Writing. They love to feast, and to eat and drink well, being very profuse of their Wine and Strong-water. They never eat Hares, because they have their monthly Purgations, like Women: for the same reason they never eat Mulberries, believing that they partake of the nature of Women and Hares.

If, when they comb their Hair or their Beards, any one hair happens to fall upon their cloaths, those cloaths must be wash'd in the stale of a Cow or an Ox to purifie them again. If by chance they happ'n to touch any ordure or nastiness, when they come home they must wash themselves in the same Urin. If one of their Priests meet a dead Corps in the High-way, and chances to see it, he is oblig'd to wash himself in Cows-Piss, which they hold to be a good Purification: an Opinion held in some parts of India also. I ask'd one of their Priests how they came to understand the virtue of this Urin; who answer'd me, that a certain person who was contemporary with the first Man, having his Arm bruis'd and very black, by reason of some accident that befel him through the malice of the Devil, fell asleep in the fields, and as he lay, an Ox staling, a drop of the Urin flew upon his Arm, and presently heal'd that part which it wet, and restor'd it to its former whiteness: which the man perceiving when he wak'd, presently follow'd the Ox, and staid by him 'till he stal'd again, and then receiving the Piss upon the whole wound, was perfectly cur'd. They also preserve it, and compound it with a Water, which they cause them to drink who have committed any Sin, after they have been at Confession for it. They call that Water the Cazi's Water; which Urin ought to be preserv'd forty days, with an infusion of Willow-Bark, and certain Herbs. When any person is confess'd of his Sin, if it be a crying Sin, the party is bound to stay ten days in the Cazi's House, and not to eat or drink but what the Priest gives them. And in order to Absolution, the Priest strips him naked, and tyes a little Dog to his right great Toe, which he leads with him about the Cazi's

House

House wherever he goes, sometimes a whole day, sometimes longer, according to the hainousness of the crime. In that posture he desires the Cazi to purifie him, telling him that for his part he believes himself to be purifi'd. The Priest makes answer that it is the Dog that must purifie him, and not he. After that he powrs the compounded water seven times upon his head, then gives him a draught to drink, and so he is absolv'd. This Penitence costs the criminal Sawce, who is afterwards bound to feast all his friends at the Cazi's House. Being surpriz'd at this superstition, I ask'd whether the women were shrifted thus by the Cazi; but I found that the Cazi's Wives confess and absolve the women and maids.

One more strange custom they have, that when a man is upon the point of death, they take a little Dog and set it upon the expiring parties breast. When he is just breathing his last, they put the mouth of the Dog to the mouth of the person dying, and cause him to bark twice in that posture, that the Soul of the deceas'd may enter into the Dog, who they say will deliver it into the hands of the Angel appointed to receive it. Moreover when any Dog happ'ns to dye, they carry him out of the City, and pray to God for the Carrion, as if the Beast receiv'd any kindness after death by their Prayers.

Of the Beasts, which they love or hate.

THere are some Beasts which the Gaurs do mightily respect, and to which they give a great deal of Honour. There are others which they as much abhor, and which they endeavour'd to destroy as much as in them lies, believing that they were not created by God, but that they came out of the body of the Devil, whose ill nature they retain.

The Beasts which they principally admire are the Cow, the Oxe, and the Dog. They are expresly forbid to eat of the flesh of a Cow or an Oxe, or to kill them. The reason why they so esteem these Creatures is, because the Oxe labours for man, and Ploughs the Ground that produces his food. As for the Cow they more dearly affect her for the Milk she gives, but especially for the purifying quality of her Urine.

The Creatures which they abhor are Adders, Serpents, Lizards, Toads, Frogs, Creyfish, Rats, Mice, but above all the rest Cats; which they say are the resemblance of the Devil, who gave them so much strength that a man can hardly kill them; so that they rather suffer the inconveniency of Rats and Mice, than ever to keep a Cat in their Houses.

As for the other Animals before-mention'd, if any of the Gaurs fall sick, they hire poor people to go and find those Creatures out and kill them; which they reck'n in the number of those good works that comfort the Souls of the deceas'd. The reason why they hate them so, is, because they believe the Devils make use of them to torment the Damn'd; and therefore they do a work of charity that destroy them, whereby they mitigate the pains and torments of Souls in Hell.

The last King of these Gaurs was Sha-Iesberd, who was driv'n out of his Country by Omar the second, successor to Mahomet.

Of the RELIGION of the ARMENIANS, and of their Principal CEREMONIES.

CHAP. IX.

How the Armenians Conſecrate and Adminiſter the Sacrament.

SInce the Armenians Traded into Europe and began to be Travellers, their Churches are better ſet out then they were heretofore. They ſpare no coſt to adorn the Choir and the Altar; you tread upon rich Carpets, and for the ſtructure and embelliſhments of it, they employ the beſt Workmen and the choiceſt Materials they can meet with. From the body of the Church to the Choir there is uſually an aſcent of five or ſix Steps. Nor is there above one Altar in any Church, upon which they ſet the Conſecrated Bread, before they ſet the Chalice where the Wine is. When the Maſs for the Ceremony is ſaid by an Arch-biſhop, at the reading of the Goſpel they light an abundance of Wax Tapers, which Tapers are like Torches. After the Goſpel is read, ſeveral of the Noviciates take ſticks in their Hands about five foot long, at the end whereof are Latten Plates with little Bells hanging about them, which when they are ſhak'd, imitate the ſound of Cymbals. Other Noviciates there are which hold a Copper Plate in their Hands hung about with Bells, which they ſtrike one againſt another: and at the ſame time the Eccleſiaſticks and Laity ſing together indifferent Harmoniouſly. All this while the Arch-biſhop has two Biſhops of each ſide of him, who are in the room of a Dean and a Sub-dean; and when it is time, he goes and unlocks a Window in the Wall on the Goſpel ſide, and takes out the Chalice where the Wine is. Then with all his Muſick he takes a turn about the Altar, upon which he at length ſets down the Chalice, ſaying certain Prayers. After that, with the Chalice in his hand, and the Bread upon the Chalice, he turns toward the People, who preſently proſtrate themſelves upon the Ground, beat their Breſts, and kiſs the Earth, while the Arch-biſhop pronounces theſe words; This is the Lord who gave his Body and Blood for you. Then he turns toward the Altar, and eats the Bread dip'd in the Wine; for they never drink the Wine, but only dip the Bread in it. That done, the Arch-biſhop turns once more toward the people with the Bread and Chalice in his hand, and they that will receive, come one after another to the bottom of the Choir, whither it is not lawful for any Lay-perſon whatſoever to aſcend; to whom the Arch-biſhop gives the Bread dip'd in Wine that is in the Chalice, which Bread is without leven, flat, and round, about as thick as a Crown, and as big as the Hoſt of the Maſs, being Conſecrated the day before by the Prieſt, whoſe Office it is. They never put Water in their Communion-Wine; affirming that Water is for Baptiſm, and that Chriſt when he inſtituted the Holy Supper drank it pure, without any mixture of Water.

When the Armenians come to the Communion, the Arch-biſhop or the Prieſt ſays theſe words: I confeſs and believe that this is the Body and Blood of the Son of God, who takes away the ſins of the World, who is not only ours, but the Salvation of all Mankind. The Prieſt repeats theſe words three times to the people, to inſtruct them and to teach them to what end they receive the Sacrament. Every time the Prieſt ſays the words, the people ſay after him word for word; and when the Prieſt ſerves the people, he breaks the Hoſt into little bits which he dips in the Wine, and gives to every one of the Communicants. That which I moſt wonder at is, that they give the Communion to Children of two or three months old, which their Mothers bring in their Arms; though many times, the Children put it out of their mouths again. They never adminiſter the Sacrament all the time of their Lent, for then they never ſay Maſs but upon Sunday noon, which they call Low-Maſs, at which time they never ſee the Prieſt, who has a Curtain drawn before the Altar, and only reads the Goſpel and Creed aloud. Sometimes upon Thurſday in the Paſſion week they say Low-Mass about noon, and then they Confess and administer the Sacrament: But generally they stay 'till Saturday, and then the Communicants, after they have receiv'd, are permitted to eat Fish, Eggs, Butter, Oyl, or any thing else except Flesh. Upon Easter day, by break of day, the Priest says Low-Mass, Confesses, and Administers, after which it is lawful to eat Flesh. But the Beasts must be kill'd upon Easter-day, and not so much as upon Easter-eve. They have four other Feasts in the year, wherein they observe the same Ceremony, eating neither Flesh, Fish, Eggs, Butter nor Oyl for eight days: which four Feasts are Christmas, the Ascension, the Annunciation, and St. George's. Before this last Feast they stretch their devotion to the utmost, for some will fast three days, some five, one after another.

CHAP. X.

Of the ordination of their Priesthood; and their Austerites.

WHen a Father designs his Son to the Priesthood, he carries him to the Priest, who puts the Cope, op'n on both sides, about his Shoulders; after which the Father and Mother take him home again. This Ceremony is repeated seven times in several years, according to the years of the young Child, 'till he come to be of age to say Mass. If he be not design'd for a Monk, but for the Priesthood, after the fourth time of putting on the Chasuble or op'n Cope, they marry him; for their Priests marry once, but if that Wife dye, if they intend to marry again, they must give over saying Mass. The six first Ceremonies being over, when the Youth comes to the age of 18 years, at what time they are capable of saying Mass, as well those who are design'd for Monks, as those who are marry'd Priests, they proceed to the seventh and last Ceremony, which must be perform'd by an Archbishop or a Bishop; who invests the young Priest with all the Habits which the Priests wear that say Mass. That being done, he goes into the Church, out of which he is not to depart for a whole year; during all which time he is altogether employ'd in the service of the Church. The Priest who is marry'd, must be five days after he has said Mass before he returns home to eat or drink, or lye with his Wife. And as well the Monks as Priests, when they intend to say Mass again, must remain five days in the Church, without either going to bed or touching any thing with their hands, unless it be the Spoon where-with they eat their meat: not daring all the while to spit or blow their noses. The next five days after they have said Mass, though such days upon which they might otherwise eat Flesh and Fish, they are oblig'd to feed upon nothing else but Eggs without Butter, and Rice boyl'd with Water and Salt. The morning before they celebrate Mass, if the Priest have by chance swallow'd a drop of Water, he must not say Mass.

Their Austerities are such, that many of their Bishops never eat Flesh or Fish above four times a year; but more then that, when they come to be Archbishops, they only live upon Pulse. They have six months and three days in a year wherein they keep Lent, or particular Fasts, which you please to call them; and during all that time, as well the Ecclesiastical persons as the Laity, feed only upon Bread, and some few Herbs which grow in their Gardens. There was an Armenian of Zulpha whose superstition was so great, that he made his Horse to fast with him, allowing him but very little either to eat or drink for a whole week together. As for the poor labouring people, they only feed upon Pulse, boyl'd in Water and Salt: for during their chief Lent, they are permitted no more then others, to eat either Butter or Oyl; nay though they lay a dying, it is not lawful for them to eat Flesh upon those days wherein that diet is forbidd'n. They may only eat Wall-nuts or Small-nuts, Almonds or Pistaches, or some such other Fruit that affords no Oyl; and they have this farther liberty, to pound them, and put them among their Pulse or their Herbs, and boyl them with Rice.

CHAP. XI.

Of their Baptiſm.

THIS the cuſtom of the Armenians to Baptize their Infants upon Sunday; or if they Baptize any upon the week days, it is only in caſe of neceſſity when they think they will not live. The Midwife carries the Infant to Church, and holds it in her arms, 'till either the Archbiſhop, the Biſhop, or the Prieſt has ſaid ſome part of the Form of Baptiſm. Then he that baptizes takes the Infant which is naked, and plunges it in the Water, and then taking it out again, puts it into the hands of the God-father, and goes on with the Prayers. While he reads them, with the Cotton which he has in his hand he twiſts a ſtring about half an Ell long. He makes another alſo of red Silk, which is flat; then twiſting thoſe two ſtrings together, he puts them about the Child's neck. They ſay, that theſe two ſtrings, one of white Cotton, and the other of red Silk, ſignifies the Blood and Water which flow'd from the Body of CHRIST, when he was wounded with the Lance upon the Croſs. Having ty'd the cord about the neck of the Child, he takes the holy Oyl and anoints the Child in ſeveral parts of the body, making the ſign of the Croſs in every place where he drops the Oyl; every time pronouncing theſe words, I baptize thee in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt. He firſt anoints the Forehead, then the Chin, then the Stomach, the Arm-holes, the Hands and Feet.

As to the making this Oyl, you muſt know, that every ſeven years, upon the Eve of our Lady in September, againſt which day they obſerve a ſmall Lent of eight days, the Patriarch makes this holy Oyl; there being no perſon but he who has power to make it. He uſes all ſorts of fragrant Flowers, and Aromatical Drugs; but the principal Flower is that which the Armenians call in their Language Balaſſan-Jagué, we in ours, the Flower of Paradiſe. When the Oyl is made, the Patriarch ſends two Bottles to all the Covents of Aſia, Europe, and Africa, without which they cannot baptize.

The Ceremony of Baptiſm being over, the God-father goes out of the Church with the Infant in his arms, and a Taper of white Wax in each hand. According to the quality of the perſon, when the Child is carry'd out of the Church, the Trumpets, Drums, Hautboys, and other Inſtruments of the Country make a hideous noiſe and go before the Infant to the Parents Houſe, where being arriv'd, the God-father delivers the Child to the Mother. She proſtrates her ſelf at the ſame time before the God-father, kiſſing his feet; and while ſhe continues in that poſture, the God-father kiſſes her head. Neither the Father nor the God-father names the Child, but he that baptizes gives him the Name of the Saint whoſe Feſtival falls upon the Sunday on which the Child is baptiz'd. If there be no Saint's day that Sunday in the Almanack, they take the next Name whoſe Feſtival ſucceeds the Sunday of Baptiſm; ſo that they have no affected Names among them. Upon the return of the God-father with the Child home, there is a Feaſt prepar'd for all the Kindred and Friends, and him that baptiz'd the Infant, with whom all the Prieſts and Monks of the Covent, at leaſt of the Pariſh, go along. The poor people were wont to be ſo prodigal at theſe Feaſts, as alſo upon their Marriages and Burials, that the next day they had not wherewithal to buy Victuals, much leſs to pay what they have borrow'd for ſo needleſs an expence. But now the poor Armenians are grown ſo cunning to avoid the Baſtinado's which are giv'n to Debtors upon the ſoles of the Feet, when they cannot pay, according to the cuſtom of Perſia; that they carry the Child to Church upon the week-days: without any Ceremony, with tears in their eyes, pretending it to be ſickly and like to dye, and ſo make no Feaſts at all.

If the Women lye in fifteen or twenty days, or two months before Chriſtmas, they defer the baptizing the Infant 'till the Feſtival, provided the Infant be healthy. Then in all the Cities and Villages where the Armenians live, if there be any River or Pond, they make ready two or three flat-bottom'd Boats, ſpread with Carpets to walk upon, in one of which upon Chriſtmas-day they ſet up a kind of an Altar. In the morning by Sun-riſing all the Armenian Clergy, as well of that place as of the parts adjoyning, get into the Boats in their Habits, with the Croſs and Banner. Then they dip the Croſs in the Water three times, and every time they drop the Holy Oyl upon it. After that they uſe the ordinary form of Baptiſm, which being done, the Arch-biſhop or the Miniſter plunges the Infant in the River or Pond three times, ſaying the uſual words, I Baptiſe, &c. and the ſame anointings as before: though it ſeems a wonder to me that the extremity of the weather does not kill the Child. The King of Perſia is many times preſent at this ceremony when it is perform'd at Iſpahan, riding on Horſe-back to the ſide of the River with all his Nobility. The Ceremony being over he goes to Zulpha to the Kelonter's Houſe, where there is an entertainment prepar'd for him. Neither is there any place in the World where a King may be entertain'd with leſs charge than in Perſia. For if any private perſon invite the King, and that His Majeſty pleaſes to do him that Honour, 'tis but for the inviter to go to the chief of the Officers, and to carry him twenty Tomans, or three hundred Crowns, and to tell him withall, that the King has promis'd to accept of a ſmall Collation with his Slave. For then the Governour is oblig'd to ſend to the Houſe of him that treats the King all things neceſſary for the entertainment. Elſe it were impoſſible to be done, in regard the King eats in nothing but in Gold Plate. At the end of the Feaſt the King is always preſented with ſome European Rarity, not leſs worth than four or five thouſand Crowns. Or if the perſon have no Rarity to preſent, it ſuffices to offer in a Baſon the value in Venetian Ducats of Gold, with all the ſubmiſſion imaginable. Beſides all this, ſome Preſents muſt be giv'n to ſome of the Lords and principal Eunuchs of his train; and others ſent to the Queen Mother, if living, and to the Sultaneſs, his Wives and Siſters. Thus though the entertainment may be made with little trouble, yet otherwiſe it proves ſomewhat expenſive; though the Armenians of Zulpha are well enough able to bear the charge. I was twice at this Ceremony upon Chriſtmas day in Iſpahan. The firſt time I ſaw Sha-Sefi, and the ſecond time Sha-Abas the ſecond, who drank both ſo hard, that in their Drink they committed thoſe crimes that very much ſtain'd their memories: For Sha-Sefi returning home ſtab'd his Wife, the Mother of Sha-Abas. Sha-Abas another time returning home in drink, would needs drink on, and force three women to drink with him; who finding he would not give over, ſtole out of his Company. The King perceiving them gone without taking leave, in a mad humour ſent his Eunuchs for them, and caus'd them to be thrown into the Fire, where the poor women were burnt; for there is no reſiſting nor examining the Kings command.

CHAP. XII.

Of the Marriages of the Armenians.

THE Armenians Marry their Children before either party have ſeen each other, nay before the Fathers or Brothers know any thing of it. And they whom they intend to Marry muſt agree to what their Fathers or Parents command them. When the Mothers have agreed among themſelves, they tell their Husbands, who approve what they have done. Upon this Approbation, the Mother of the Boy, with two old Women and a Prieſt come to the Houſe where the Mother of the Daughter lives, and preſent her a Ring from him whom they intend to betroth. The Boy appears afterwards, and the Prieſt reads ſomething out of the Goſpel as a bleſſing upon both parties; after which they give him a ſum of Money according to the quality of the Father of the Girl. That done, they preſent the company with drink, and this is call'd a betrothing or affiancing. Sometimes they agree a Marriage when the Children are not above two or three years old; ſometimes two women that are friends being both with Child at one time together, will make a match between the two Children before they are born, if the one be a Boy and the other a Girl. So ſoon as they are born the Contract is made; and when once the Boy has giv'n the Ring, though it be twenty years after before they are Marry'd, he is bound every year upon Eaſter-day to ſend his Miſtriſs a new Habit with all the trimming belonging to it according to her quality. Three days before the Celebration of Marriage, the Father and Mother of the Boy prepare a Feaſt, which is carry'd to the houſe of the Father and Mother of the Girl, where the kindred of both parties meet. The Men are in one place by themſelves, and the Women in another; for they never eat together at publick Feaſts. The Evening before the Nuptials the Bridegroom ſends a Habit to the Bride; and ſome time after he comes to receive what the Mother of the Bride has provided for him, on her part. If the Bride has no Mother, ſome ancient Woman next a-kin dreſſes the Bride. At length the Bride gets upon one Horſe, and the Bridegroom upon another, each Horſe being ſumptuouſly harneſs'd, with Bridles and Saddles of Gold and Silver, if the perſons be rich: thoſe that are poor, and have not Horſes of their own, repair to the Great men, who willingly lend theirs upon ſuch an occaſion. As they ſet out from the Virgins habitation, the Bridegroom goes before with a Veil of Carnation-Tiffany upon his Head, or elſe of Gold and Silver Net-work, the Meſhes whereof are very cloſe, that reaches below the Stomach. He holds in his Hand one end of a Girdle ſome three or four Ells long, and the Bride that rides behind holds the other. She is alſo cover'd with a large white Veil from head to foot, that ſpreads alſo a good way over the Horſe. Under which Veil, that rather ſeems a large white Sheet, the Bride is hid in ſuch a manner, that there is nothing to be ſeen of her but her Eyes. Two Men walk on either ſide of each Horſe; and if they be Children of three or four years old (for ſo young they marry) there are three or four Men to hold them in the Saddle, according to the quality of their Parents. A great Train of young Men, the kindred and acquaintance of both parties, follow after, ſome a horſe-back, ſome a-foot, with Tapers in their hands, as if they were going in Proceſſion: and beſides all theſe, the Drums, Trumpets, Hautboys and other Inſtruments of the Country, all attending to the Church-door. When they are alighted, every one makes way for the Bridegroom and Bride, who advance up to the foot of the Altar, ſtill holding the Girdle in their hands. Then the Bridegroom and the Bride meet, and lean forehead to forehead. Then comes the Prieſt, and turning his back to the Altar, lays his Bible upon their Heads, inſtead of a Desk, a weight ſufficiently heavy, as being a thick ponderous Folio. There he lets it lye while he reads the form of Matrimony, which Office is moſt uſually perform'd by a Biſhop or an Archbiſhop. The Form is very much like ours. The Biſhop demands the Bridegroom, Wilt thou have ſuch a one to thy Wife? then to the Bride he ſays, Wilt thou have ſuch a one for thy Husband? to which they both anſwer with a nod of the Head. The Matrimonial Benediction being giv'n, they hear Maſs; which being ended, they return both together to the Daughters habitation, in the ſame order as they ſet out. Theſe Nuptials laſt three days: where the Women drink more than the Men. The Man goes to Bed firſt, the Woman pulling off the man's Breeches, though ſhe does not lay aſide her Veil 'till the Candle be put out. Let it be what time in the year it will, the Woman riſes before day. So that there be ſome Armenians that in ten years after they are marry'd never ſaw their Wives faces, nor ever heard them ſpeak. For though her Husband may ſpeak to her, and all the reſt of her kindred, yet ſhe never anſwers but with a Nod. The Women never eat with their Husbands; but if the Men feaſt their Friends to day, the Women feaſt theirs the next Day.

CHAP. XIII.

How the Armenians Bury their Dead.

SO ſoon as any perſon dyes, one appointed for the Services of the Dead runs immediately to the Church to fetch a Pot of Holy-Water, which he preſently pours into a great Veſſel full of Water, into which they put the dead Corps. This man is call'd Mordichou, or the perſon that waſhes the Dead; which Mordichou's are ſo much deteſted among the people, that it is an ignominy to eat or drink with thoſe ſort of people. Whatever the party deceas'd has about him at the time of his death belongs to them, though it be any excellent Jewel; for it is the cuſtom of the Eaſt to lye in their Breeches, Shirt, and Waſtcoat, in regard they never never make use of Bed-cloaths. So soon as the Corps is wash'd, they dress it with a clean white Shirt, a pair of Breeches, a Wastcoat, and a Bonnet, all new, never having been worn before. Then they put the Body in a linnen Sack, and sow up the mouth of it. That being done, the Priests come and take up the Body to carry it to Church, which is attended by all the kindred and friends of the deceas'd, with every one a Taper in his hand. Being come to Church, they set down the Corps before the Altar where the Priest says certain Prayers; and then setting up lighted Tapers round about the Corps, they leave it so all night. The next day in the morning a Bishop or an ordinary Priest says Mass, at the end whereof they carry the Body before the door of the Bishop's house, attended as before; at what time the Bishop comes forth and says a prayer for the Soul of the deceas'd. Then eight or ten of the poorer sort that are next at hand, carry the Body to the Church-yard. All the way they sing certain Dirges, which the Priests continue, whil'e the Body is let down into the Grave. Then the Bishop takes three handfuls of Earth, and throws them one after another into the Grave, pronouncing these words; From Earth thou cam'st, to Earth thou shalt return, and stay there 'till our Lord comes. These words being said, they fill up the Grave. Those of the kindred and friends that will go back find a Collation ready; and if any other persons will go along, they are not refus'd. For seven days also they allow Dinners and Suppers to certain Priests and poor people, if they are persons of ability: believing no Soul departed can be sav'd, unless the survivors are at that expence. Whence it comes to pass, that so many of the poor people are so miserable, and Slaves to the Mahometans, by borrowing Money to defray those expences, which they are not able to pay again.

When an Archbishop or a Bishop dyes, they add this farther Ceremony, that an Archbishop or a Bishop writes a little Note, and cutting op'n the Sack puts the Note into the Hand of the deceas'd, wherein are these words; Remember thy self, that from Earth thou cam'st, and to Earth thou shalt return.

If a Slave dye before enfranchiz'd, when the Body is brought into the Church, the Master writes a Note, wherein are these words; Let him not grieve, I make him free, and give him his liberty. For they believe that he would be reproach'd in the other World for being a Slave, for which his Soul might suffer tribulation. If the Master be dead, the Mistress does the same. If an Armenian makes away himself, they never carry the Body out of the door of the house, but make a hole in the wall, where they can most conveniently, and carry him to his Grave without any Ceremony.

The night preceding the Feast of the Holy Cross, Men, Women, and Children go to the Church-yard, whither they carry good store of Food, not forgetting their Wine. Immediately they fall a weeping over the Graves of the dead, and after they have spent some time in that doleful Exercise, they all fall to eating and drinking; thus passing the whole night by turns, in blub'ring, eating, and bubbing.

As for the poor people, they would think themselves undone, and the most unfortunate in the world, should they want Provision and Wine to go to the Church-yards, the night before the Feast of St. George, where they go to frolick it, rather then to pray for the Dead.

There may be some few Armenians that embrace Mahometanism for worldly Interest, but they are generally the most obstinate persons in the world, and most firm to their superstitious Principles.

CHAP. XIV.

Examples of the Constancy of the Armenians, in maintaining their Religion against the Persecutions of the Mahometans.

IT is the custom of the Armenians, that when any one of them apostatizes, and desires to return again to the Church, he cannot have Absolution but at the same City or Village where he first abjur'd his Religion.

Now it happen'd that a young Armenian being sent to Smyrna with a very considerable quantity of Goods, and falling to debauchery, turn'd Mahometan, to the

the end he might defraud his Father and his Brethren of their Eſtate, according to Haly's Law, already mention'd. But after he had ſpent good part of the Goods in Debauchery, he return'd to the Three Churches, where the Grand Patriarch liv'd, to be abſolv'd from his Fault; but the Patriarch telling him he muſt go to the Biſhop of Smyrna, he went accordingly; and in ſome few days after he had undergone the Penance enjoyn'd him, he went to the Cadi, and with a great Reſolution, Sir, ſaid he, you know that ſome years ſince I turn'd Mahometan; now I come to declare before ye that I have repented, and do repent of the foul Crime I committed, when I deny'd the Saviour of the World, and embrac'd your wicked Law. The Cadi, who thought it had been at firſt only ſome evaporation of Extravagance, endeavour'd to reclaim him by fair words and promiſes; but when he heard him perſiſt in his reſolution, when he heard him curſe and blaſpheme Mahomet, he caus'd him to be carry'd to the Piazza, where he was cut to pieces immediately. For no perſons go with more courage and joy to ſuffer for their Faith, then the Armenians.

In the year 1651 there happen'd to be a Wedding between a young Turk and a Virgin of the ſame Nation. To this Wedding was invited an Armenian Lady, who was a great friend of the Bridegroom's Mother. The Armenian had an only Son of about twelve years of age, that earneſtly deſir'd to go along with her; at firſt ſhe refus'd him, knowing that after the age of five or ſix years, no Youth is permitted to be in company with the Turkiſh Women or Maids. But the Boy ſtill preſſing his Mother, and being ſeconded by an Aunt, who to pleaſe her Nephew, told her ſhe might let him go in Girls Apparel; at laſt the indulgent Mother, over-rul'd by the importunity of the Child, took him along with her in a female dreſs. Three days the ſolemnity of the Turkiſh Weddings laſt: but the very firſt day, an old Gipſy-Turk caſting her Eye upon the young Armenian, and finding him too ſparkiſh and too nimble for a Girl, ſuſpected his Sex; and calling his Mother aſide, told her, that by all the geſtures and actions of the Child, ſhe could be no Girl, but a Boy in diſguiſe. The Mother not only deny'd the matter, but alſo ſeem'd highly offended at the old Womans ſuſpition; who as much incens'd to have her judgment queſtion'd, decoy'd the Child among the Eunuchs of the Family, and caus'd him to be ſearch'd; and finding herſelf in the right, ſpred it preſently about the houſe. Immediately the people cry'd that the Chambers were defil'd, that the Armenian Lady had done it in deriſion of their Law; and ſeizing Mother, Aunt, and Youth, carry'd them all before the Baſha, demanding Juſtice. The Baſha diſmiſs'd the Mother and the Aunt, but kept the Youth ſix or ſev'n days, hoping the rage of the people would be over. But in vain he ſtrove to plead for the Child, though the Father offer'd them half the weight of him in Gold, for the Baſha was forc'd to deliver him up into the hands of the marry'd Womans kindred; who carry'd the Child to the Market-place of the City, where they ſtript him ſtark naked; and firſt they flea'd him from his Neck behind down to the Waſt, and ſo left him with a Guard upon him all night. The Cadi and Moullah's exhorted the Child to turn Mahometan, and they would preſerve him from further miſchief. His Mother beg'd him to have pity upon her and himſelf, and to turn Mahometan to ſave his life. But neither tears, nor all the tender words that grief and affection could inſpire, could ſhake the conſtancy of the Infant, who with a reſolute utterance anſwer'd, that he had hitherto ſuffer'd, and ſtill would ſuffer patiently; and that nothing griev'd him, but that his Mother ſhould exhort him to deny his Saviour. Next day the pitileſs Turks came and flea'd all his Breaſt and his Stomach, and ſo left him all night under a Guard, intending to have flea'd him part by part every day. But the Baſha abhorring their Cruelty, came the next day with his Guards, and caus'd his Head to be cut off.

Van is a City peopl'd as well with Armenians as Turks; ſo that it is a uſual thing for the Armenian and Turkiſh Boys to play together. One day it unfortunately fell out, that the Boys playing one among another, and ſlinging Stones at each other, an Armenian Boy hit a young Turk full upon the Temples, and ſtrook him dead. Preſently the other Turkiſh Boys and the Rabble ſeiz'd him, and carry'd him to the Baſha; the Father and Mother of the Child ſlain follow'd with hideous out-crys, bawling for juſtice, or that the Boy ſhould turn Mahometan to expiate his fault. The Armenian Parents offer'd a large ſum of Money to redeem their Child; but the adverſe party obſtinate againſt all accommodation, the Baſha was conſtrain'd to deliver the Child, giving ſentence that the young Armenian ſhould endure the ſame death the Turk had ſuffer'd, and no other. Immediately the Turks hurry'd the poor Child to the place where he had unfortunately ſlain his play-fellow; and after the Parents of the young Turk had had the two firſt hits, he was preſently brain'd by a ſhow'r of Stones from the Rabble. Yet as near death as he knew himſelf to be, without any diſturbance at all, he exhorted his weeping play-fellows to ſtand firm to the Faith of Jeſus Chriſt, for which he was going to dye.

Another time an Armenian Merchant coming from the Indies to Grand Cairo, went to the Coffee-houſe according to cuſtom, being a rendezvous of all the Merchants in the Town. There falling into diſcourſe, by reaſon of the heat of the weather, he took off his Bonnet made after the Armenian faſhion of divers Colours, and laid it behind him, keeping his black Cap only upon his head. When the Moullah came about to haſten the people to go away according to the cuſtom, which I have already declar'd, the Armenian haſtily riſing up, a Turk, concealing the Merchant's Bonnet, clap'd his own Bonnet upon his head. Upon that all the Turkiſh Merchants that were there came and congratulated the Armenian Merchant, telling him, how glad they were to ſee that he had embrac'd the good Law. At which words the Armenian ſurpriz'd, takes off the Turbant, throws it to the Ground before all the Company, and ſtamp'd it under foot. This action of contempt ſo enrag'd the Turks, that they carry'd him before the Baſha, before whom it was in vain to juſtifie himſelf, or to affirm that the Turbant was malitiouſly put upon his head; for the Turks ſwore the contrary, and that he took it of his own accord, and therefore he muſt either turn Turk or dye for it. Upon his refuſal they put him in Priſon, and in a few days the ſentence was brought him from the Mufti and Cadi, that he muſt either turn or be burnt alive. The ſeverity of the ſentence overpowr'd him at firſt to embrace the Mahumetan Law. But four or five years after returning from the Indies to Cairo, he came where the Baſha was ſitting in Council with the Grandees of the Country, and getting as near the Mufti as he could, and throwing his Turbant in his face; There Dog, ſaid he, Thou wert the cauſe that I have worn it ſo long, of which I have repented, and do repent from the bottom of my heart; for I know that neither thou nor thy Law are worth a Straw. At the ſame time the croud laid hold of him, and drag'd him to the Piazza, where he dy'd in the midſt of the flames with an admirable conſtancy.

A rich Merchant of Zulpha, call'd Cotgia Soultenon, was ſo well belov'd by Shah-Sefi, that he often went to Dine at his houſe. But one day it fell out that the King having eat and drank to exceſs, upon his return home fell crop-ſick, upon which the report ran that the Armenian had poyſon'd him. Which report coming to his ears, fearing leſt the King ſhould dye, and himſelf be put to cruel Torments, he took a doſe of Poyſon and dy'd. Which when the King, who was well again the next day, underſtood, he was very much troubl'd for his death.

The ſame Cotgia Soultenon had a Cafer ſent him from Melinda for a Slave; who being young and very apprehenſive, ſoon learnt the Perſian and Turkiſh Languages, and was inſtructed in the Chriſtian Religion, and Chriſten'd by the name of Huzed or Joſeph. After his Maſter's death he turn'd Mahumetan, and ſo contin'd twenty years. At the end whereof returning to Zulpha, he beg'd pardon of the Church; and all the reſt of his days ſo crucify'd himſelf with Faſting, that every one pitty'd him; and when the Armenian Biſhops told him he had done well, he made no other anſwer, but that he was not worthy to live upon the Earth who had deny'd his Saviour, only he hop'd that he would have mercy upon him; and ſo continu'd his auſtere penance 'till he dy'd.

CHAP. XV.

Of the Author's reception at the Court of Perſia in his ſixth and laſt Voyage, and what he did there during his ſtay at Iſpahan.

I Arriv'd at Iſpahan the 20*th* of December, 1664. So ſoon as the Nazar was inform'd of my arrival, he ſent the Kelonter or chief of the Armenians with ſeven or eight more to congratulate my arrival, and to aſſure me of all the kind Offices he could do me. The next day he ſent the ſame Armenians with four Horſes; and to tell me that the King had a deſire to ſee what I had brought; for which purpoſe the Kelonter had order to furniſh me with men. Thereupon I took Horſe, accompany'd by all the Franks that were at Zulpha. When I came to Court, I was brought into the place where all the great Ambaſſadours had audience, where I found attending the Nazar, and Father Raphael ſuperior of the order of the Capuchins, ready to deliver me my Box of Jewels which I had left with him in the Covent for more ſecurity. After I had expos'd my Goods upon a fair Table cover'd with a Carpet of Gold and Silver, and that the Nazar had diſpos'd every thing in order with his own hand, the King enter'd, attended only by three Eunuchs for his Guard, and two old men, whoſe office it was to pull off his Shoes when he goes into any Room ſpread with Gold and Silk Carpets, and to put them on again when he goes forth. The King had nothing on but a ſingle pair of Drawers of Taffata, chequer'd red and white, which came half way the Leg, his feet being bare; a ſhort Caſſock that came but half way his body, with a large Cloak of Cloth of Gold with hanging-ſleeves down to the Ground, furr'd with Sable Martin. The firſt thing I ſhew'd was a large Candleſtick of Chryſtal of the Rock, the richeſt piece of that nature that ever was ſeen. The next was a ſuit of Tapeſtry hangings held up by ſeveral men, as I had appointed. The Nazar then caus'd me to advance and do my obeyſance to the King, who preſently knowing my Face again; Oh, ſaid he to the Nazar, This is the Fringui Aga who ſold me ſo many Rarities about ſix years ago, when Mahomet Beg was Athemadoulet. After that the Nazar ſhew'd him all my Rarities as they lay in order. Among the reſt I beſought His Majeſty by Frier Raphael, to accept of a great Steel Mirror, which when he look'd in, he wonder'd to ſee his Face ſo big. But when Frier Raphael had told him the nature of it, he caus'd it to be held to one of his Eunuchs, which had a monſtrous Hawk Noſe, the ſight whereof held him in laughter and divertiſement for above a quarter of an hour. After that the King retir'd, leaving me alone with the Nazar and Friar Raphael. As for my Jewels I put them up my ſelf, and had a place aſſign'd me to Lock them up and keep the Key, but for my large pieces of Goldſmiths work, the Nazar committed them to the truſt of one of the principal Officers of the Houſe.

The next day early in the morning the Nazar ſent for me and Father Raphael, and made his Secretary write down the price of every thing, according to his demands. He had alſo his own Artiſts to prize them; but that I did not value, in regard I knew the price much better then they. After he had ſhew'd the Jewels, price and all to the King, we were ſeveral times before we could agree; but at length he told me, that the King would give me Twenty-five in the Hundred profit for all the Stones; leaving me the Pearls, which he thought I might put off at a better price in the Indies; which was an offer I could not refuſe, and therefore I ſign'd the Agreement according to the Nazar's deſire: Which when his Majeſty had ſeen, he bid the Nazar tell me I ſhould be his Jeweller in Ordinary, and that for my ſake all the Franks ſhould be the better us'd within his Territories, and that I ſhould have any favour of him that I deſir'd. I beſought his Majeſty to give me his Patent with his Seal affix'd, whereby I might be priviledg'd to Trade in his Dominions, without paying Cuſtom for ſuch and ſuch Merchandize, and in ſuch manner as I ſhould think fitting. I alſo beſought him graciouſly to grant his Protection to a Nephew of mine, whom I had left at Tauris to learn the Language, that he might be ſerviceable to his Majeſty when I was dead and gone.

Thereupon he caus'd my Nephew to be enrol'd presently as one of his Domestick Servants, and order'd the Nazar to take particular care of him.

The next day after my agreement with the Nazar, the King gave audience in the great Hall of the Palace to the Ambassador of the Usbeck-Tartars. All the Lords and Officers of the Crown stood in the Court where the Ambassador was to pass: there were also nine stately Horses, whose Furniture was very rich, and all different. Two Harnesses were cover'd with Diamonds, two with Rubies, two with Emralds, two with Turquoises, and one embroider'd with fair Pearls. Had he been an Ambassador from a Monarch for whom the King of Persia had had a greater esteem than he had for the Cham of Tartary, there had been thirty Horses: for according to the value which the King puts upon the Prince that sends to him, he either augments or abates of the number of his Horses of State. Every Horse is ty'd by the Reins to a Nail of Gold fasten'd in the Ground, with a Hammer of Gold lying by. There was another Nail of Gold behind, with a Cord ty'd to it, that held their hinder legs. They set also before every Horse a Caldron of Gold, out of which they draw up Water into a great Manger; though all this be only for State, for they never water their Horses in that place.

Out of the first Court the Ambassador enter'd into a large Gallery, between a long File of Musqueteers on each side. Thence he enter'd into a Garden through an Alley about eight Fathom broad, all pav'd with great Marble Stones, in the middle of which runs a Channel of Water four Foot wide, with several Water-works that spurted out of the Channel at equal distances. On each side of the Walk to the Hall where the King sat, there is a Pond almost as long as the Walk, and in the middle of the Pond another sort of Water-works. Several Officers of the Army were rang'd all along the Alley; and at the end of one of the Ponds were four Lions ty'd; and at the end of the other, three Tigers couchant upon Carpets of Silk, having Men to guard them with Half-pikes in their hands. The Hall took up more ground in length then in bredth, being op'n every way; the Cieling was sustain'd by sixteen wooden Pillars, of eight pannels every one, and of a prodigious thickness and height. As well the Cieling as the Pillars were all painted with Foliage-work in Gold and Azure, with certain other Colours mix'd therewith. In the middle of the Hall was a Vase of excellent Marble, with a Fountain throwing out Water after several manners. The Floor was spread with Gold and Silk Carpets, made on purpose for the Place: and near to the Vase was a low Scaffold one Foot high, twelve Foot long, and eight wide, cover'd with a magnificent Carpet. Upon this Scaffold sate the King upon a four-square Cushion of Cloth of Gold, with another Cushion behind him cover'd with the same, set up against a great Tap'stry-Hanging, wrought with Persian Characters, containing the Mysteries of the Law. On each side of the King stood several Eunuchs with Musquets in their hands. The King commanded the Athemadoulet and four others to sit down by him, and the Athemadulet made me a sign to sit down; but the King knowing how little the Franks care for sitting cross-leg'd, order'd me to be told that I might stand upright, if I thought good. The King was clad in a Silk streak'd with Gold: His Cloak was a Gold-ground with Flower of Silk and Silver, Furr'd with a Martin Sable, the blackest and most glist'ring that ever was seen. His Girdle was very rich, and upon his Bonnet he wore a Plume of Herons Feathers fasten'd with a transparent Jewel; in the middle of the Jewel was a Pear-fashion'd Pearl, set with great Topaze's and Rubies.

About half and hour after the King was sat, the Nazar and the Master of the Ceremonies brought the Ambassador, who neither himself nor any of his Train were very well clad, and caus'd him to stay at the foot of the steps into the Hall from the Garden. When the Ambassador had ascended the steps, he prostrated himself before the King, then advancing nine or ten paces he did the same again; after which the Master of the Ceremonies caus'd him to sit down, leaving between him and the King space enough for eight men. After that I observ'd that the Nazar went often between the King and the Ambassador, and between the Ambassadour and the King; but I could not tell what they said. So that I being by that time quite tyr'd, made my obeysance to the King, and went home to my Lodging.

The next day the Nazar signify'd to me that it was the King's pleasure to favour me with a compleat Calaat, or Habit of Honour, and to pay me my money.

The next day in the Morning being ſent for to the Court, I found the Nazar, the Grand Treaſurer, and ſeveral other great Officers expecting me in the Treaſury, where the Money lay ready in ſeal'd Bags. My Sum amounted to three thouſand four hundred and ſixty Tomans, of which the Treaſurer would have abated me a hundred and ſixty for Fees. After a long conteſt, I gave him half, and carry'd away my Money; having firſt weigh'd two Bags Toman by Toman, and then weigh'd the reſt of the Bags, Bag by Bag.

CHAP. XVI.

Of the Honours and Preſents which the Author receiv'd from the King of Perſia.

THE day following one of the Nazar's principal Officers brought me the compleat Calaat, conſiſting of Veſt, Tunick or Super-Veſt, Girdle, and Bonnet. He alſo deliver'd me three Patents, ſeal'd by his Majeſty and the Athemadoulet, which exempted me from paying any Cuſtoms within his Kingdom. Another to the Kan of Schiras, with a little Seal or Signet, commanding him to let me have three Loads of good Wine when I travell'd that way. A third with his Signet, in favour of my Nephew at Tauris; wherein the King declar'd that he own'd him as his Domeſtick Servant, and that he was under his Protection.

The Firſt PATENT ran thus.

THE Command of him whom all the Univerſe obeys has been made, That the Beglerbegs of High Nature, the victorious and great Lords, Ornaments of the Kingdom, Poſſeſſors of Honour, the Judges in high place, practiſers of Juſtice, the Viſiers who preſerve Reaſon, and have in their thoughts the removal of Vice, and the Commiſſioners who act in affairs and difficulties of the Palace, the Overſeers of the Roads, and the Conſervators of the good Cuſtoms of the well-order'd Kingdoms of Kragon (which God preſerve from all misfortune) MAY KNOW, That whereas the choiceſt of his Reſemblers and Companions, *Aga TAVERNIER, French Merchant has brought ſo many Rarities of all ſorts to the preſence and view of the Lieutenant of the Eagles, who has all things according to his wiſh, has found the degree of favour and good will. And whereas We have commanded him to perfect ſome Buſineſs for Us, which ſo ſoon as he has finiſh'd, he is to bring to the holy and pure view. Therefore through whatſoever Road or Coaſt of Our Thrice-ſpacious Kingdom the above-nam'd, ſhall have a deſire or occaſion to paſs, Let not the Receivers of the Palace, out of any ſeeming expectancy from the above-nam'd, give him any trouble or moleſtation. But let them know, that it is neceſſary for them to give him all honour, and to make much of him, that he may go where he pleaſes. And whereas the Seal of High Nature, the Light of the Univerſe of Kragon, of thrice-noble extraction, the Maſter of the Age, has illuminated and adorn'd this Writing, Let them reſt there, and give Credence to it. By the thrice-high Command. &c.

Kragon: A King of China, ſo renown'd for his Juſtice, Victory, and Magnanimity that ſometimes the Kings of Perſia aſſume that Title in their Patents, and ſometimes, in honour of him, ſtile themſelves his Lieutenants.

Receivers of the Palace, are Farmers of the Cuſtoms and other Subſidies.

The Second PATENT.

To the Governour of Schiras,

THE Command of Him whom all the World ought to obey, is ſuch, That the Illuſtrious and High Lord, whoſe Office ought to be honour'd, the Governour and Prototype of Viſiers and Grandees, Mirza-Mahomet-Sadée, the Viſier of Fars may be aſſur'd of Royal Favours when he underſtands the Contents of this Command. He ſhall give three Loads of Wine, of that which he has in his cuſtody, to the Cream of his Equals, Aga TAVERNIER, French Merchant, and you ſhall take an Acquittance. All the Grand Viſiers, and Officers of Cuſtoms, and Guarders of Paſſes alſo let them not moleſt him at all, let them take nothing from him, let them permit him to go and come as he pleaſes, and let them obey him. Given the Month of Jamady-Elaker, in the Hegyra of Mahomet 1075.

January,

The Cream, is the Character of an honeſt man among the Eaſtern people.

But to return to the Calaat. You muſt take notice, that the Perſians call a Calaat, any Preſent which one perſon makes to another inferior to him in dignity; ſometimes a Veſt alone, ſometimes a Tunick with the Girdle only, ſometimes a Turbant, or a Horſe, with Bridle and Saddle; to thoſe in the Army the King ſends a Sword or a Dagger, and all theſe go by the name of Calaat's. Secondly, you muſt take notice, that when the King ſends a Calaat to a Governour of a Province, he names himſelf the perſon, that is to carry it. For both in Turkie and Perſia, the Receiver of the King's Preſent is oblig'd to pay the Meſſenger, in ſo much that ſometimes they hardly ſcape for a thouſand Tomans. But when the Calaat is ſent to any private perſon, the Nazar chooſes out of his Domeſtick Servants one to carry it. I gave twenty-five Tomans into Father Raphael's hand, who order'd his buſineſs with ſo good a grace, and ſo advantageouſly for my Purſe, that he complemented away the Meſſenger very well ſatisfi'd with half.

The next day the Nazar ſent to me to put on my Calaat, and to come and do my obeyſance to the King, who was that day to go abroad. Thereupon I ſummon'd together all the Franks, and order'd the Trumpets and Drums to be made ready as I rode from the Palace home. For then the people come out to ſee who the King has honour'd that day, who is always known by his Habit, which is ſtill the neweſt and gayeſt of all the reſt.

It happen'd, that the King being indiſpos'd did not go away that day; however I apply'd my ſelf to the Nazar, and told him how much I was oblig'd to the King for the honour he had done me, and that I was reſolv'd to ſhew my ſelf before the greateſt Monarchs in Europe in the Habit he had beſtow'd upon me; that they might behold the beauty and richneſs of my Calaat. The Nazar fail'd not to repeat my Compliment to his Majeſty; who thereupon order'd me the Perſian Cloak, with hanging-ſleeves, and fac'd with ſable Martins.

Two or three days after the Nazar ſent for me again to Court, whither I went, accompany'd by the Zulphian Franks, as before. I was no ſooner come to the Palace, but the Nazar met me in the great Hall, attended by two Officers, who carry'd the Cloak which the King had appointed for me, and preſently taking the Cloak out of their hands, he put it about my ſhoulders, ſaying theſe words, It is the King's pleaſure to honour thee entirely. It was a moſt magnificent piece of Silk, and very richly furr'd, having been valu'd at eight hundred Crowns. In this I was particularly beholding to the Nazar, who might have ſent me my Cloak home to my Lodging as well as the Calaat; but he was pleas'd to put it upon my back in the Palace with his own hands, to ſpare me the charges of a new Preſent. After this the Nazar took me by the hand, and led me to the Hall, where the King was ſitting upon a large large Cuſhion, having no more than twelve Eunuchs for his Guard; ſome with Bows and Arrows, and ſome with Muſquets. By that time I had advanc'd two or three paces in the Hall, the Nazar order'd me to fall upon my knees, and touch the Ground with my forehead; then taking me by the hand, he led me within two or three paces of the place where the King was ſitting, where I was order'd to make the ſame obeiſance as before; after that he caus'd me to retire ſeven or eight paces, and there to ſtand. And then it was that His Majeſty was pleas'd to tell me, that he had contriv'd the Models of ſeveral pieces, which he would have made in France; and ask'd me whether I would carry them along with me, or whether I would preſently ſend them into France to be made up while I diſpatch'd my buſineſs in the Indies? I told His Majeſty, that ſo ſoon as he would be pleas'd to deliver them to me, I would ſend them for France. After this and ſome other diſcourſe I made my obeiſance, and retir'd toward the door of the Hall. Having thus done my duty to the King, I went and kiſs'd the Nazar's hand; and then taking Horſe at the Palace-Gate, with the reſt of the Franks that accompany'd me, we rode home with the Trumpets and Drums of the Country before us. When we came to Zulpha with our Torches before us, for it was three hours after Sun-ſet, the Men and old Women came out of their Houſes to ſee us paſs along, and ſeverall preſented us with Fruits, Sweet-meats, and Wine, obliging us to drink almoſt at every Houſe 'till we got home.

How the King was pleas'd to divertiſe himſelf in the Author's Company.

ABout two days after betimes in the Morning I was ſent for to the Court in that haſt, that I had ſcarce time to make me ready. When I came to Court, I found the Nazar, Father Raphel, and two Hollanders, upon whom the Nazar had began to caſt a particular eye of favour all together. After we had ſtay'd a while, the Nazar brought us to the Room where the King was, ſitting upon a low Pallet, with two Mattreſſes cover'd with a rich Carpet. He lean'd his back againſt a large Cuſhion four foot long, having before him eight or ten Plates of Fruits and Sweet-meats. Before him alſo ſtood two Bottles, with long round necks of Venice Cryſtal ſtop'd with Pitch, full of Schiras Wine, with a Cup of pure Gold; upon one ſide a kind of a very ſmall Fat and with a handle, within three or four Fingers full of the ſame Wine, with a Gold Ladle that held a good Chopine of Paris. The Bottles were for the King's drinking; that in the Fat for thoſe that the King did the Honour to drink with him. After we came in and had made our ſeveral obeyſances; ſaid the King to Father Raphael, Raphael, bia, bia, that is, come hither, come hither, who thereupon riſing, and falling upon his knees when he came near the King; Raphael, continu'd the King, if thou wilt drink Wine, ſtay here, if not, be gone. The Fryar unaccuſtom'd to drink Wine, reply'd that ſince His Majeſty did him ſo great an Honour, he was willing to drink a little. 'Tis very well, anſwer'd the King ſmiling, go then and take thy ſeat. Thereupon the King commanded one of the Dutch-men to fill ſome Wine, which he did, but with a trembling hand Heav'n, knows, as never having been at ſuch a Feſtival before. And I obſerv'd that having laid his Hat upon the Carpet, the King commanded him to put it on, it being a very ignominious thing in Perſia to be bare-headed. Thus the great Ladle went about very ſmartly, conſidering it was but early in the Forenoon: But at length the King bethinking himſelf that the Franks were not uſed to drink without eating, gave ſuch order, that immediately they ſpread before us a Sofra of Cloth of Gold inſtad of a Table-Cloth; and over that a Leather Covering of the ſame length and breadth, and over that a ſort of Bread as long as the Sofra; for had the Sofra been ten Ells long, the Bread muſt have been as long. This Bread is no thicker then a piece of Paper, and folds like a Napkin. It is made with a Rolling-

Rolling-pin, and bak'd upon Plates of Tinn'd Copper. This Bread is never eat'n but only serves for a Table-Cloth to preserve what falls from the Dishes, and what every man leaves particularly upon his own Place, which is all wrap'd up in the Leather and giv'n to the poor. Next to that they set upon one end of the Sofra a sort of most excellent Bread two foot long and one broad, then which never was better eat'n in the World. By and by follow'd Boyl'd and Roast flesh and fish, with two Chests of Limons of Mazandran, and Granates from Schiras.

After we had made a large Breakfast, the King was pleas'd to put me upon a discourse of my Travels into the Indies, and ask'd me what Princes I had had access to, and how many I knew by their faces? Then causing a Satchel to be brought him, he open'd it himself, and shew'd me several portraitures in Miniature. Presently I knew Sha-Geban, Aurenge-Zebe, and three of his Sons; the King of Golconda and Visapour; Sha-Est-Kan, and two Raja's. Among the rest he shew'd me a Persian Lady's Picture and gave it me; to the end, said he, that your French Ladies may see how our Persian Ladies are clad. After that he shew'd me the Pictures of two Venetian Curtisans, the one a Widow, and the other a Virgin, with a Parrot upon her hand clad after the French mode. Upon which the King putting the question to me which I lik'd best? I reply'd that she pleas'd me best who had the Parrot upon her fist. And why not the other, said the King? Because, answer'd I, she looks like one that had renounc'd the world. Thereupon the King falling into a laughter, and turning toward Father Raphael; Patri, Patri, said he, is it possible that such a Lady as this should have renounc'd the World? This led us into a discourse of beauty, wherein when the King demanded my opinion, I told him that Womens beauty depended very much upon the Custom of the Country; for that in Japan Women with broad faces were most in request; in China small feet were admir'd; in the Isles of Borneo and Achen, Women the blacker their Teeth were, the more they were belov'd; that in the Island of Macassar, to make their Women lovely, they pull out four of their Teeth when they are young, to put in four of Gold in their room; as I have seen a Captain of Java, who pull'd out four of his fore Teeth, and set four Diamonds in their place. In short, I told his Majesty that in his own Dominions full Eye-brows which meet together were highly esteem'd; whereas the Women of France pull them up by the Roots. But which, said the King, dost thou like best, the black or the fair? Sir, continu'd I, were I to buy Women as I purchase Diamonds, Pearls, and Bread, I would always choose the whitest. With that the King fell a laughing, and order'd me a brimmer in his own Cup, which was a great Honour indeed. From hence we fell into a more serious discourse concerning the present State of Europe, speaking very low, and the rest of the Company retiring all the while out of hearing. Only I observ'd that there was one Lord middle ag'd, and clad after the Georgian mode, who stood within five or six paces behind the King, and that many times as the King drank, he only wet his Lips, and gave the rest to that Lord to drink, which when he had done, he retir'd again to his place. Upon inquiry I found he was the King's Uncle by the Mothers side.

While we were talking of serious things the Curtisans were bid to retire out of the Hall, which they did, into a Gallery that look'd upon a Garden, where they sate, where immediately a Sofra was laid before them cover'd with Fruits and Sweetmeats, and one of their Society continually powr'd out the Wine which they drank round without intermission: One would have thought they should have been fudd'd; yet when they came in again, no man could perceive they had been drinking. After they had Danc'd a while, they were order'd to retire again, and the King sent for his Musick, which was both Vocal and Instrumental; his Instrumental Musick consisted of a kind of a Lute, a Guittar, a Spinet, and two or three Base Flutes. He had also in the Gallery where the Curtisans were, a large Ebony Cabinet eight foot high, adorn'd with several Silver figures, which prov'd to be an Organ that went alone. It was part of the present which the Muscovite Ambassadors made the King, which he order'd to be set a going, that we might hear it as we sate. No sooner had the Organ stop'd, but the Curtesans were call'd in again, and the King caus'd the Gold Ladle to go round, commanding that no man should leave a drop. When every man had done, the King was pleas'd to ask me which of the Curtisan's I thought to be handsomest? Thereupon I rose up, and taking a

Wax-

Wax-Candle in my hand, I went and view'd them all. The King laugh'd, and being very glad to ſee my face among theirs, Bring hither, ſaith he, her to whom thou haſt moſt a fancy. In obedience to which, I pick'd out the eldeſt, as I thought, and led her to his Majeſty, who cauſ'd us to ſit down by him. Then the King pointing to another, And why, ſaith he, did you not chooſe yonder Girl, which is younger and handſomer; commanding them both to kiſs me one after another, that I might underſtand the difference between the Careſſes of one and the other. But I reply'd, that were I to chooſe again, I would make the ſame choice, believing prudence to accompany age. However I beſought his Majeſty to conſider, that it was not for me to look upon elder or younger, and that though he had giv'n me the liberty to ſend the elder home to my Lodging, yet it was not in my pow'r to accept of his favour, in regard I had a Wife, to whom I never had been unfaithful.

We had thus droll'd together 'till eleven a Clock at night; when the King ſtarted another Queſtion, Whether any one preſent knew how to Sing? It happen'd that there was one Monſieur Daulier there, that Play'd upon the Virginals, and pretended to Sing, who immediately began a Court-Air. But his Voice being a high-pitch'd Voice, and for that the Perſians are altogether for Baſes, the King did not like him. When I perceiv'd that, being in a merry vein, though I knew not a Note, yet having a good deep voice, and clear, I ſung an old Air that came into my head, which begins,

Fill all the Bowls then, fiill 'em high,
Fill all the Glaſſes there, for why Should every Creature drink but I?

The King was ſo pleas'd, that he cry'd out, Baricala, Baricala, as much as to ſay, Oh the works of God! an expreſſion of admiration uſual among the Perſians.

By this time it was very late, and the King growing ſleepy, gave us leave to depart; which we did very willingly, having had hard labour for ſeventeen hours together.

The next night the King fell a drinking again, and there was in his preſence an Agi or Pilgrim newly return'd from Mecca, and conſequently oblig'd never to drink Wine after that. While the Agi ſtaid, there was one of the Perſian Lords got ſo impertinently fuddl'd, that he twice ſtruck the Agi's Turbant from his head, refus'd to drink when the King commanded him, play'd the fool with the Curtiſans when they were dancing, and committed ſo many other acts of folly, that the King incens'd at ſuch a continuation of Buffonry, in a great fury, This Raſcal, ſaid he, has loſt all his reſpect, and thinks he is no more my Slave; drag him out by the feet, and throw him to the Dogs to eat. Immediately four or five of the King's Officers came and drag'd him out of the Hall by the feet, and every body wonder'd he was not thrown to the Dogs, according to the King's Command; but 'tis thought that ſome of the King's Woman beg'd for him, ſo that his puniſhment was chang'd.

There was one of the Curtiſans that gave one of her Companions a box on the ear, not in the King's preſence, but in the Gallery where they were drinking together. However ſhe did not ſtrike ſo ſoftly, but that the King heard the noiſe of the blow. Whereupon he commanded her that had giv'n the blow to be had before the Deroga or Judge of the Town, whom he order'd to expunge her out of the number of Curtiſans, and to put another in her place; that ſhe ſhould have a hundred Tomans giv'n her, and that the Deroga ſhould cauſe her to be marry'd.

The next day I waited on the King, and receiv'd thoſe Models which he had beſpoke me to ſend into France. They were the Patterns of certain Drinking-Cups and Trenchers, with the Model of a Dagger drawn with his own hand: for he had learnt to draw of a couple of Dutch-men that were in his Service. The Dagger was to be Goldſmith work enamel'd. When I had receiv'd his Inſtructions, I took my leave of his Majeſty: and then going to wait upon the Nazar at his Country-houſe, I took leave of him alſo, who aſſur'd me of his affection upon all occaſions, and did me ſeveral kindneſſes at my departure.

And it is the cuſtom, where Kans or Governours of Provinces reſide, that all the Sophies both in the City and the neighbouring parts, meet in the Piazza every Friday in the afternoon, where they pray to God for the health of the King and the Kan, and for the proſperity of the Kingdom; after which the Kan ſends them Victuals to eat, not without ſome other effects of his Liberality.

The Cheiks Sons conſidering of what a number of Slaves they were Maſters, and that the greateſt part of the people, prepoſſeſs'd in favour of their Father, out of the opinion they had of his Sanctity, took their part; the more powerfully to engage them, ſhew'd themſelves liberal to all, and when they found themſelves ſtrong enough, revolted againſt Alamout King of Perſia, their lawful Soveraign. After many Skirmiſhes, at length they gave him Battel near to Tauris, wherein Azimout was defeated, and ſlain by the hand of Iſmael Sophi, the Cheiks third Son, who is properly to be accounted the firſt King of that Race: I mean of the Race of them that did not embrace the Alcoran, but according to the Interpretation of Haly, Mahomets Son-in-Law.

To Iſmael Sophi ſucceeded Sha-Tammas his Son, and to Sha-Tammas Sha-Iſmael the ſecond, who reign'd but a ſhort while; for his cruelties conſtrain'd the Nobility of the Country to ſet up in his room Mahomet-Coda-bendé his Brother; though little skill'd in the affairs of Government or War, Many thought he was blind, but he was only dim-ſighted, through the application of a hot Iron to his eyes, by the Command of his unnatural Brother in the beginning of his reign. He was the Father of Sha-Abbas, that ſucceeded him, who ſetl'd the affairs of Perſia in a very good condition.

Sha-Abbas the firſt, by his Valour and good Conduct gain'd the name of Great. When he came to his Throne, upon the North and Weſt ſide he found nothing in his power but the City of Casbin; but afterwards, as he was a perſonage of great wit as well as courage, partly by policy, and partly by force, he recover'd ſeveral Provinces to the Weſt, and conquer'd the Kingdoms of Lar, Ormus, and Candahar.

Of many Sons that Sha-Abbas had, not one ſurviv'd but only Sophi-Mirza, a Prince of great wit, and dextrous at his Arms. All the people lov'd him, which made his Father jealous of him, that he waited for his death to aſcend the Throne. And that which augmented his jealouſie was, for that one day being a hunting, Sophi-Mirza drew the firſt arrow at a Boar; it being a capital crime in Perſia to ſhoot before the King. However Sha-Abbas for the time conceal'd his diſpleaſure, unwilling to fly out in fury againſt the Prince, in regard he had no more Sons. But Sophi-Mirza having had a Son by a Slave, which pleas'd him, Sha-Abbas's joy encreaſing as the Child grew, his jealouſie alſo daily encreas'd againſt the Father of the young Prince; ſo that being no longer able to diſſemble his fear, he caus'd his eyes to be put out. Nay his jealouſie went a great way farther; for he now fear'd the blind Prince, and having therefore reſolv'd his death, he commanded a Lord of the Court to bring him his head. The Lord in an aſtoniſhment refus'd to obey the King, and beſought him rather to take away his life, than to conſtrain him to embrue his hands in the blood of his Prince. The King offended at him for his refuſal, baniſh'd him his Court; and the next day gave the ſame command to another Lord, who without any ſcruple put it in execution, and brought him the head of his Son in a Baſon of Gold. That object of pity brought him to himſelf; ſo that not being able to look upon ſo ſad a ſpectacle without tears in his eyes, upbraiding the villany of the Lord, he expell'd him from his ſight, forbad him his preſence for ever, and ſequeſterd all his eſtate, only allowing him a Mamoudi, or nine French Sous aday. The other Lord, who had ſo generouſly refus'd to aid him in ſo bloody an act, the King recall'd from Exile, and beſtow'd upon him one of the beſt Governments of the Empire.

Ever ſince that time all the Male Children of the Blood Royal are ſhut up in the Womens Haram, where they are bred up in ignorance, having only two or three Eunuchs to teach them to write and read, and to keep them company in their recreations, whether it be in ſhooting with a Bow, or riding about the Gardens upon an Aſs; for they never allow 'em a Horſe: beſides that all that time they are never permitted to ſee the people. In this manner it was that Sha-Abbas bred up his little Grandſon, many days cauſing him to take Opium to render him more ſtupid. So that when he came to the Throne, after his Grandfathers death, the Phyſicians thought it convenient that he ſhould drink Wine, to reſtore his natural heat, and renew his vigor. Sha-Abbas reign'd forty years, and dy'd at the end of the year 1628. Before he dy'd, he gave command, that he should be bury'd in some place unknown to all the world, and that they should set his Grand-child upon his Throne, and give him the name of Sha-Sefi.

So soon as Sha-Abbas's eyes were clos'd, the General of the Horse, and the chief Captain of the Harquebusses, with whom the Commands were left, rode in all haste to Ispahan, and coming to the Palace, desir'd to speak with the Mother of the Child. The Mother was in a sad affright, believing that they came to put the young Prince to death. But when they had dissipated her fears, and that she understood that they came to set him upon the Throne by the command of his Grand-father, she embrac'd the young Prince, and return'd him into the hands of the Eunuchs. When he was come out of the Haram, the two Lords, attended by several others, saluted him King, and acknowledg'd him for their Soveraign. At the same time they took off his Cloaths and tore them, which in Persia is a mark of mourning; and according to custom, put him on another plain Garment, which he wore till midnight. Then they disrob'd him again, and put him on his Royal Robes, and set him upon the Throne, where all the Lords came and did him homage, and the next day he was acknowledg'd by all the Acclamations of the People. For when the Royal Habit is put upon the new King, the Drums, Trumpets, Timbals, Hautboys, and other Instruments, make a din in a peculiar place of the Meydan appointed for that purpose. Which is the Signal to give notice to the people to meet the next morning, to acknowledg the new King. Sha-Sefi for many years was a Novice in the art of Government. But time opening his eyes the first remarkable thing which he did, being at Casbin, was to cut off the head of Ali-Kouli-Kan, that great Captain who had conquer'd the Kingdoms of Lar and Ormus for Sha-Abbas; and the heads of three of his Sons. After that, returning to Ispahan, he cut off the heads of seven of the principal Lords of his Court; and by little and little took the Government into his own hands. Of those Lords whom Jani-Kan was the chief.

For 'tis thought that Sha Abbas had left a private order with Mirza Také, and the Dowager Sultaness to rid themselves of those Lords so soon as Sha-Sefi should be setl'd in his Throne, and that they had plac'd Governors in all places wherein the King might confide. These Lords having smoak'd the private order of Sha-Abbas, and believing that the time of execution drew near, prevented the Athemadoulet Mirza Také; for meeting one morning before the Palace-door, they kill'd the Porter, and entring his Bed-Chamber, stab'd him before he could rise. After this execution, they went to the King, whom Jani-Kan boldly told, that they had slain Mirza Také. The King at that time dissembling his anger at so bold an enterprize, and an attempt upon the Royal Authority, answer'd him, that he had done very well, and that he had prevented those orders which he intended to have giv'n him. The Sultaness his Mother then govern'd the Kingdom, together with the Athemadoulet, from whom she receiv'd four hundred Ducats in Gold every day for her little pleasures; and held a private Council with him in her Haram, where he had free admittion, as being cut close. In this Council it was, that these two persons overthrew in the night whatever the Lords concluded in the day; chang'd the Kings mind, and over-rul'd his thoughts as they pleas'd themselves, by vertue of that power which they had over him. Eight or nine days after, as these Lords were sitting in Council with the King, an Eunuch enter'd, which was the signal for the King to get out of the way; and as soon as the King was gone, the Chamber was fill'd with Eunuchs, that rushing in immediately fell upon Jani-Kan and his Accomplices, and cut off their heads. Their heads and bodies were immediately expos'd to the view of the people in the Meydan; and for that it is not the custom in Persia to take any cognizance of what the King does, the most part of the people spurning the heads with their feet, cry'd one to another, See the heads of those Dogs that have disobey'd the will of the King.

I told ye, that Mirza Také was slain cut; which occasions a particular story: He was Governour of Guilan in the Reign of Sha-Abbas, and having abus'd one of his Pages, the young Lad stole secretly to Ispahan, and made his complaint to the King, who having heard it, immediatly sent him to be Governour of Guilan, in the place of Mirza Také, and order'd him to send him his head by one of the Officers, which he dispatch'd along with him. The King also, in regard the Page was very young, appointed him a person able to advise him in his affairs. In the mean while Mirza Také missing his Page, and making no question but he was gone to make his complaint to the King, which would of necessity prove his ruin, if not prevented; he resolv'd to divert the storm by punishing himself, and caus'd that part to be cut clean off that committed the crime. At the same time, and in that bad condition wherein he then was, he caus'd himself to be put into a Litter, and taking his Chirurgeon along with him, he gets to Ispahan by another way which was not usually travell'd, for fear of meeting the Page, and causing himself to be carry'd into the Palace in that pitiful and languishing estate, desir'd to speak with the King, who was surpriz'd at his arrival. But the Kan having presented him in a plate of Gold with the undoubted marks of his repentance, besought his Majesties pardon. Whereupon the King considering the rigor and extraordinary punishment which he had inflicted upon himself, sent him back to his Government, and recall'd the Page, whom he otherways gratify'd. And this was the man whom Sha-Abbas upon his Death bed order'd that Sha-Sefi should make Athemadoulet, as being the fittest for the employment of any person in his Kingdom.

Sha-Sefi not content to have rid himself of the Lords that had presum'd to invade his Authority, was resolv'd to have the head of Ali-merdan-Kan, Governour of Candahar; of whom he was jealous, by reason of his vast riches, his Plate being all Gold, and his House as magnificently furnish'd as the Kings. But the King could not bring about his design; for the Kan being press'd to come to Court, and believing it was only to take away his head, to free himself from the danger, deliver'd Candahar to the Great Mogul, by whom he was kindly entertain'd, and highly cares'd. Neither was Ali-merdan-Kan's wealth of his own getting, but left him by inheritance, as being descended from the ancient Kings of Candahar, who were originally Tartars. Now whatever favours or advancement the Great Mogul bestow'd upon Ali-merdan-Kan, the same did the Persian King bestow upon his two Sons; whereas all the world believ'd, that after such a piece of Treason committed by their Father, the King would have ript up their bellies. This piece of policy of Sha-Sefi was very advantageous to Sha-Abbas the second, when he besieg'd Candahar with fifty thousand men. For the greatest part of the Mogul's Army being compos'd of Persians, they remembring how kindly Sha-Sefi had us'd the two Sons of Ali-merdan-Kan, made little resistance against the King of Persia, who enter'd Candahar in a small time. The Great Mogul troubl'd at the loss, ask'd Ali-merdan-Kan, by what means he might retake Candahar; who presently made answer, that it would be very easie, if he could find such another Traytor as he had been.

But to return to Sha-Sefi; his Reign was very violent, of which I will give you this Example:

One day the King returning from the Ardoutes House in Zulpha, having drank to excess, commanded that the Sultaness should come to him; who understanding that he was in drink, made no great haste, so that the King in the mean time fell asleep. But waking again soon after, and not seeing the Queen, he call'd for her a second time; of which when she had notice, she came immediately: When she came into the Chamber, she perceiv'd the King asleep, and in expectation of his waking, hid her self in a Nich behind the Hangings, where generally the Mattresses and Coverlets are laid by. The King waking, and not yet perceiving the Sultaness, in a great chafe demanded why she was not yet come. The Queen-Mother, who was a Georgian Slave, and mortally hated the young Sultaness, who was the Daughter of the King of Georgia, and therefore disdain'd by her, took an occasion to put her out of the Kings favour; and having first spoken ill of her, made a sign to the King to let him understand that the young Queen was hid in such a Nich. Upon that the King rising in a great fury, stab'd the poor Princess with his Dagger four or five times in the belly, and hardly knowing what he had done, went to bed again. The next day, forgetful of the Fact, he call'd for the Queen; but when they told him what had happen'd, he began to be deeply sensible of his error, and sorrow'd excessively; and at the same time sent an express order through his Territories, that no man should drink Wine, and that the Governours should break all the Wine-Vessels wherever they found any, and spill the Wine. But this order did not last above a year.

During the Reign of Sha-Sefi, the Kan of Erivan sent him a Colt, which I saw, which was begot by a Male. Not long after the King dy'd of a Surfeit, with excess of drinking, after he had reign'd fourteen years.

Sha-Abbas the second was set upon the Throne at Carbin, with the usual Ceremonies, at the end of the year 1642, and made his entry into Ispahan in the beginning of the year following. Upon the day of Solemnity all the Citizens were order'd to be in Arms, and to march out of the City, where they were fil'd off upon each side of the Road. In the same manner were all the standing Infantry and Cavalry rang'd for five Leagues together. All the Road for two Leagues together without the City was cover'd with Tissues of Gold and Silver, with Carpets of Silk, and other rich Stuffs; all which costs the King nothing. For the Sha-Bander, who is like our Mayor, takes care to tax every one what he is to furnish toward that Solemnity. The English and Hollanders went also forth to meet the King; among whom I was one. When we came near the King, Jani-Kan, General of the Cavalry, gave the King notice who we were. Whereupon we all alighted, and the King holding his Leg stretcht out of his Stirrup, we all kiss'd his Boot. When he came where the way began to be spread with rich Carpets, he found the Grand Mufti and the Grand Cadi, attended by a great number of Moullahs, who made a Prayer after their manner. Prayers being ended, the King rode on, the Ambassadour being on the left hand, which is the most honourable, and the General of the Cavalry on the right, yet not even with him, but so as that their Horses heads reach'd to the Crupper of his. There was no person but the King that rode over the Tissue, that Honour belonging to him alone; nor is the way spread above the breadth of the Stuff; and as soon as the King is pass'd over it, the people fall to scrambling, and carry away every one what they can get for themselves.

About a quarter of a League from Ispahan is a Garden, with a Great Room over the Gate, where the King made a halt, thinking to have made his Entry into the City. But an Astrologer came to him, and told him, that the hour was past, and that he must tarry three days before the hour would prove propitious again. So that he was constrain'd to betake himself to the Garden of Hezardgerib till the time came; whither the Nobility also were all fore'd to come betimes in the morning, and to stay till the evening. The day that the King made his Entry, the way from the Garden to the City was also spread with Carpets. For three days together the Fire-works play'd in the Meydan; and round the Piazza from top to bottom were lights hung out; and in the principal Inns, the richest Merchants had adorn'd the Doors and Windows of their Chambers, according to the Mode of the Country; and I believe it cost the Chief of the Holland Company, above nine hundred Tomans.

In the year 1643, came the Prince of the Usbecks in person to desire aid of Sha-Abbas against his Children, who had caus'd his own Subjects to rebel and make war against him. His eldest Son first took Arms, and getting the advantage of a Battel, the other Brother treacherously took part with him; which nothing dismay'd the Father, to whom the chief of the Nobility still adher'd. Toward the end of the year 1642, the Prince lost another Battel and his left eye, which was shot thorough with an Arrow; which constrain'd him, so soon as he was cur'd of his wound, to come and crave succour from the King of Persia; which he easily obtain'd. Sha-Abbas designing to receive him honourably sent above ten thousand Horse as far as Cassan, which is four days journey from Ispahan, and five or six thousand Foot two days journey from thence to meet him. Every day he was attended by different Officers. Every day they set him up a new Tent, and spread new Carpets; and every day chang'd the twelve Horses that were led before him, whose furniture was all over cover'd with Jewels. For a League and a half from the City the way was spread with all ſorts of Silk Stuffs to the very Palace; and the King of Perſia went himſelf to meet him, as far as where the Stuffs were begun to be laid. Though Sha-Abbas was very young, yet he was reſolv'd to ſhew, that he look'd upon himſelf as a potent King in the peaceable poſſeſſion of his own Dominions, and that he went to meet a dethron'd Prince, that came to deſire his Aid. For ſo ſoon as he perceiv'd the King of the Tartars, he made a ſhew of ſpurring on his Horſe; and being come up to his Horſes head, he put his foot out of the Stirrup, as if he intended to have alighted, but did not. The Tartarian Prince, as old as he was, preſently leap't to the ground from his Saddle to ſalute the Perſian King, who return'd him ſome ſlight Compliments about his having alighted; at which time the Athemadoules and other Lords remounting him, the two Kings rode together upon the Silks, the King of Perſia giving the left hand to the Tartar. The King of Perſia very generouſly lent him a conſiderable aſſiſtance of 15000 Horſe, and 8000 Foot, and ſixty thouſand Tomans in Money. The Tartar in Exchange gave him one of his Provinces bordering upon Perſia, which yeilded him a very good Revenue, in regard the Inhabitants were all Shepherds, or Turcomans, that breed an infinite number of Cattel, wherein the wealth of that Province conſiſts.

While he reign'd, he had a Preſent made him from the Governour of Schiras, of a wild Aſs, whoſe Skin was as red as Scarlet, having a Horn growing out of his forehead about a foot long.

Sha-Abbas reign'd about twenty-four years, and dy'd at Tebzon, of an inflammation in his throat, which came by exceſſive drinking. His body by his own order was buri'd at Kour. So ſoon as he was dead, the Lords that were about him, ſent advice of his death to the Prince that now reigns, by the Topigi-Baſha, who is General of the Muſqueteers, and Mirza Bayad the Chief of the Aſtrologers. So ſoon as they came to the door of the Haram, they deſir'd to ſpeak with the Mother and the Son; who believ'd them come upon ſome diſmal deſign. But they preſently confirm'd them to the contrary. For as ſoon as the Prince came forth of the Haram, they fell at his feet, and ſaluted him King, declaring the death of his Father. Whereupon the Prince immediately tore his Garment according to the cuſtom. And indeed they have another cuſtom, that as ſoon as the new Prince comes after much entreaty out of the Haram, he throws himſelf to the ground, at the door of the Haram, and then riſing and ſitting upon his heels, one of the Lords that are ſent, girds the Scimiter about his waſte, ſaying theſe words, May it pleaſe your Majeſty to remember your Slave, that had the Honour to gird you with this Scimiter. Which done, he goes and ſets the Trumpets a ſounding, and the Drums beating, whereupon all the people in the morning come running to the Gate of the Palace, crying out, Patſha Salamalek, I ſalute thee Emperour. Which is all the Ceremony us'd when any King of Perſia aſcends the Throne. For I never ſaw any Crown ſet upon the head either of Sha-Abbas or Sha-Sefi. Only in Perſia they gird on the Scimiter, as in Turky they put on the Bonnet of the Sophi's, which is very richly ſet with Jewels, but has not the leaſt reſemblance of a Crown. The ſame Ceremony of girding on the Scimiter, is us'd to the Mogul, the Kings of Viſapour and Golconda; and they alſo put the Bonnet upon their heads, which is ſet with the richeſt Jewels in the poſſeſſion of thoſe great Monarchs.

Sha Sefi the ſecond, ſome time after his coming to the Throne, fell dangerouſly ſick, not having ever enjoy'd a perfect health before. Now it is the cuſtom in thoſe Countries, that upon ſuch an occaſion all the Lords of the Court, and Governors of Provinces, give a ſum of money, according to their willingneſs and liberality. This ſum is uſually in Gold, which they put into a Baſon very richly ſet with precious Stones, and bear it three times over the King's head, pronouncing theſe words, Patſha Baſhena Olſon, This money is ſacrific'd for the health of the Kings head. If the King recover all that money is giv'n to the poor, to which the King and his Haram add very liberally. But if the King dies, the money is put into the Treaſury, and the poor have nothing. The twentieth of Auguſt 1667, was the critical day of his diſtemper, and every one thought he would have dy'd. Upon which all the Grandees of the Court ſeeing him in that condition, went to the Moſquee call'd Baboron, which is without the City, to pray for his health, and altogether gave near a thouſand Tomans to the poor. The next day they commanded the Chriſtian Armenians to pray for the recovery of the King. Whereupon as well the Eccleſiaſticks as the Laity went to their prayers upon the ſide of the River which is between Iſpahan and Zulpha. They alſo ſent their Kelonter, with fifty Tomans in Gold, to bear over the Kings head; though the Armenians pronounce not the ſame words as the Perſians, ſaying only, Berai te Saddak, deſtin'd for Alms.

Thus the danger being over in a few days, they made it their buſineſs to recover him to a perfect habit of health; but in regard the King continu'd in a languiſhing condition, and for that the Phyſicians could not diſcover the cauſe of the diſtemper, the King began to believe that it proceeded from the ignorance of the Phyſicians; for which reaſon ſome of them had receiv'd none of the beſt entertainment already. At length it came into the thoughts of ſome others of the Phyſicians, who were afraid for themſelves, that in regard Perſia was thus doubly afflicted, with Famine and Sickneſs of the King, both at one time, it muſt of neceſſity be the Aſtrologers fault, that miſs'd the favourable hour when the King ſhould have aſcended the Throne. Thus being troubl'd at their diſgrace, pretending to have no leſs skill in future knowledg than the Aſtrologers, who had not chos'n a true time for the King to aſcend the Throne, they concluded that for the perfect recovery of his health, and the reſtoring of plenty to the Nation, it was neceſſary to renew the Ceremony at a lucky hour, and to change his name. This propoſition pleas'd the King and his Council. The Phyſitians and Aſtrologers joining together, obſerv'd the firſt unlucky day, which would certainly be follow'd by another that would prove fortunate. Now there being among the Gaures, ſome that pretend themſelves deſcended from the Ruſtans, who were ancient Kings of Perſia and Parthia, that very morning one of thoſe Gaures ſetting himſelf upon the Throne, with his back againſt a wooden Figure which repreſented him to the life, all the Grandees of the Court came and did him homage as their King, as he had order'd them to do. This action laſted till the favourable hour was come, which happen'd a little before Sun-ſet. Then it was that an Officer of the Court came behind and cut off the head of the wooden Figure, while the Gaure immediately took his heels and fled. Preſently upon that the King appear'd in the Hall, upon whoſe head when they had put the Bonnet of Sophi, and re-girt him with the Scimitar, he aſcended the Throne, and took the name of Soliman. He was forc'd to act this Comedy to ſatisfie the Law, which contriv'd that he ſhould change his Name, and take a new poſſeſſion of his Throne, by ejecting a Uſurper that had wrongfully clam'd it. For which reaſon the Gaure was ſet up as Pretender, as laying claim to the ancient Lineage of the Perſian Kings, and being of a different Religion. From that time the King recovering, and the Famine decreaſing, the Phyſicians were in great repute, and the Aſtrologers were caſt out of favour, except two or three of the moſt skilful.

Sha-Soliman before his coming to the Crown, had convers'd with none but Women and black Eunuchs; from whom he could not learn the art of Ruling. At preſent he only divertizes himſelf with his Wives in going a hunting, very rarely troubling himſelf with buſineſs but relying wholly upon his Miniſters of State. He will not be ſeen for ten or twelve days together; all which time there are no Petitions to be preſerr'd, nor Complaints to be made.

CHAP. II.

Of certain particular Actions which denote the Vertues and Vices of the Kings of Persia, from Sha-Abbas the first to Sha-Soliman the present King. And first of Sha-Abbas the Great.

Sha-Abbas, who was a passionate Lover of Honour, sought all ways imaginable to furnish his Empire with the supports of wealth and good Government. He would not suffer any Indian or Banian to live as a Tradder in his Dominions; they having crept in since under the Reigns of Sha-Sefi the first, and Sha-Abbas the second, who came very young to the Throne. Neither had Sha-Abbas any reason to permit them to trade in his Kingdom; for they are worse Usurers than the Jews, and seldom it happens, but that they have all the Money in the Nation, which they take up at nine or ten in the hundred, and let out again upon pawns at two and a half per Cent. a month. From such devouring Pests and Vipers as these, Sha-Abbas thought it but reasonable to preserve his people; so that before these Vermin crept into Persia, the Money was all in the hands of the Armenians of Zulpha. And indeed those Banians have been the ruin of many poor people, of which I will only bring one example among many.

I was at Ispahan in the year 1662, when one of those Banians lent six or seven Tomans per Cent. a month to a poor Persian, who had utter'd several pieces of Linnen upon the place. Those Banians will have their Interest paid every month; but the Persian had slipt three or four, having no Money to pay, in regard his Debtor could not pay him. Thereupon the Banian dunn'd him perpetually, and threaten'd to have him drub'd till he pay'd it, according to the Persian custom. The Mother of the Persian troubl'd to see her Son haunted in that manner, one morning as he was going to the Meydan, bid him, if he met the Banian, that he should be sure to bring him home, and she would pay him his Interest, and some of the principal, with some Money that she had sav'd of her one. Toward evening the Banian met his Debtor, whom he readily follow'd home upon promise of payment. The Mother desir'd him to set upon the Canrsi, which is the place where they make their fires, it being cold snowy weather, and set fruits before him to eat. While he thus eat and warm'd himself, night came on apace, and the woman putting him in hopes of payment, spun out the time so long, that the Banian not being unaccustom'd to cold weather and late hours, was easily perswaded to stay all night at the Persians House. When 'twas time to go to Bed, the Banian threw himself upon one Quilt, and the Persian upon another. About two houres after midnight, the Mother comes softly into the Chamber, with a sharp Razor in her hand, intending to have cut off the Banians head; but unfortunately mistaking, kill'd her own Son instead of the Banian. The Banian having had such an escape, stole cunningly out of the House, and declaring the murther to the Divan-bequé, or the Chief Justice, He caus'd the woman to be apprehended, and brought before him; who confessing the fact, he commanded her to be ty'd to the tail of a young Mule, and to be dragg'd about the City till the Mule had kick'd her to death.

In the year 1667, eight or ten days before I departed from Ispahan, there was a Banian found buri'd in a Street near the Capuchins house; they had cut off his arms and legs, and so put him into the hole; but buri'd him so shallow that the Dogs scrap'd away the Earth, and discover'd him; but who committed the fact, was not then known.

Sha-Abbas was not only willing that all the trade should be in the hands of his Subjects, to make profit thereby, and to draw the Money into his Kingdom, but he would not suffer it to be transported when it was brought in. He saw that the Pilgrimages of his Subjects to Mecca, their Expences and Presents carry'd out abundance of his Ducats of Gold; therefore more politick than religious, he strove to hinder those Pilgrimages as much as in him lay; and going going himſelf in perſon to Meſhed in Pilgrimage to the Tomb of Iman-rez already ſpoken of, over which one of the Legs of Mahomets Camel hangs as a great Relict; and upon his return relating and giving out ſtrange Miracles of Iman-rez, on purpoſe to divert his Subjects from going to Mecca.

Among the reſt of the cunning knacks that Sha-Abbas made uſe of, to know how ſquares went in his Kingdom, without truſting too much to his Miniſters, he oft'n diſguis'd himſelf, and went about the City like an ordinary inhabitant, under pretence of buying and ſelling, making it his buſineſs to diſcover whether Merchants us'd falſe weights or meaſures or no. To this intent one evening going out of his Palace in the habit of a Countryman, he went to a Bakers to buy a Man of Bread, and thence to a Cook to buy a Man of Roſt-meat, (a Man is ſix Pound, ſixteen Ounces to the Pound.) The King having bought his Bargains return'd to Court, where he caus'd the Athemadoulet to weigh both the Bread and the Meat exactly. He found the Bread to want fifty-ſeven Drams, and the Meat forty-three. The King ſeeing that, fell into a great chafe againſt three or four of them that were about him, whoſe buſineſs it was to look after thoſe things; but eſpecially againſt the Governour of the City, whoſe Belly he had caus'd to have been ript up, but for the interceſſion of certain Lords. Beſides the reproaches that he threw upon them for being ſo negligent in their Employments; and for their little affection to the publick good, he laid before them the injuſtice of falſe weights; and how ſadly the cheat fell upon poor men, who having great Families, and thinking to give them eight hundred Drams of Bread, by that fraud depriv'd them of a hundred and forty three. Then turning to the Lords that were preſent, he demanded of them, what ſort of juſtice ought to be done thoſe people? When none of them daring to open their mouths, while he was in that paſſion, he commanded a great Oven to be made in the Piazza, together with a Spit long enough to roaſt a man; and that the Oven ſhould be heated all Night, and that they ſhould make another fire to be kindl'd hard by the Oven. The next morning the King caus'd the Baker and the Cook to be apprehended, and to be led quite through the City, with two men going before them, who cry'd to the people, We are going to put the Baker into a red hot Oven made in the Piazza, where he is to be bak'd alive, for having utter'd Bread by falſe weights; and the Cook is to be roaſted a live, for having ſold meat byfalſe weights. Thus thoſe two men ſerv'd for an example not only to Iſpahan, but to all the Kingdom, where every one dreaded the ſevere juſtice of Sha-Abbas.

CHAP. III.

Of what fell out most memorable in the Reign of Sha-Sefi the first; and particularly of the death of Iman-Kouli-Kan, and his three Sons.

IMan-Kouli-Kan was the last Kan of Schiras, whose Government extended over the Province of Lar, to the Golf of Persia, under the Reign of Sha-Abbas these Kans being the most potent in all Persia. Iman-Kouli-Kan was he who in the Reign of Sha-Abbas conquer'd the greatest part of the Kingdom of Lar, and the Kingdom of Ormus, with all the Coast of the Persian Golf, from Cape Jasques to Balsara.

This Iman-Kouli-Kan was prodigiously rich, belov'd and respected by all the world; besides he was wonderfully magnificent, his expences almost equalling the Kings; which occasion'd Sha-Abbas, who discours'd with him one day particularly upon that Subject, to tell him, that he desir'd him to spend every day one Mamoudy less than he, that there might be some difference between the expences of a King and a Kan.

The noble qualities of this Iman-Kouli-Kan had gain'd the affections of the people; for he was magnificent and liberal; highly recompenc'd brave Soldiers and Students; he lov'd Strangers, and had a particular care to cherish Arts and Sciences. To which purpose he built a fair Colledg at Schiras, for the instruction of Youth; and several Inns, as well in the City as upon the Roads; for the Travellers. He caus'd Mountains to be cut thorough to shorten the way; and join'd others by Bridges, of such an advanturous Structure, that it is hard to conjecture how such prodigious Arches could be made over such vast Precipices and Torrents.

Now in regard Iman-Kouli-Kan was strick'n in years, he seldom went to Court, chusing rather to continue in his Government, where he was belov'd and respected by all men. But the King being young, and the Government of the Kingdom in the hands of the Queen-Mother and the Athemadoulet, who were extreamly jealous of the Kan, those two persons link'd together in Interest for the maintenance of the Kings Authority and their own, fretted to see the Kan's Court almost as splendid as the Kings; and that nothing of the Revenue of Schiras, Lar, Ormus, or any part of the Persian Golf came to the Kings Coffers, as being solely at the disposal of the Kan; but that on the contrary, the King was oblig'd to send him Money to pay the Army. But that which troubled the Queen-Mother most of all, was the pretention of the Kan's eldest Son to the Crown, who was also a person of a daring and ambitious courage. For the Kings of Persia esteem it a great Honour to bestow upon any Kan or great Lord, one of their Wives out of their Royal Haram; and Sha-Abbas had given to Iman-Kouli-Kan one of his own proper Wives, whom he lov'd extreamly. 'Tis thought that when she left the Haram she was three months gone with Child by Sha-Abbas, for somewhat above six months after she was bedded by the Kan, she lay-in of a Son, of which the King was the reputed Father, and who being born before Sha-Sefi, pretended a right before him to the Throne. By vertue of this claim, contrary to the will of Sha-Abbas in favour of Sha-Sefi, this ambitious Lord, who only pass'd for the Kan's eldest Son, vehemently sollicited his Father to seize upon Sha-Sefi, and to make himself King, or at least to op'n a way for him to the Throne. Now it happen'd, that one day being a hunting with the young King near Schiras, the impatient young Lord coming to his Father; Sir, said he, see now the opportunity that offers you the Throne; for I will go presently and bring you Sha-Sefi's head. But the Kan holding his Son by the Arm, told him, that he would never consent to the death of his King; protesting to him, rather to dye a thousand deaths; adding withall, that it was the Kings will to appoint Sha-Sefi to succeed him, as being the Son of his Son, and consequently his lawful Heir: that the

the young Prince was recommended to his care, and in regard he had promis'd and ſworn, he was ſo far from falſifying his truſt, that he would maintain his poſſeſſion to the laſt gaſp.

This generous reſolution of the Kan broke the young Lords deſign upon the Kings perſon. However the Sultaneſs being not ignorant of the train that was laid for the young King, and againſt the repoſe of the Kingdom, thought it her wiſeſt way to prevent the blow, and to rid her ſelf of ſuch perſons as had conſpir'd the death of the King. The Kan's two other Sons took part with him they call'd their elder Brother. And as for the Kan himſelf, though he were upright in his Loyalty, yet his power, his wealth, his reputation among the Souldiery, and the affection that the people bare him, concurr'd together not only to render him ſuſpected, but guilty. The Sultaneſs and the Athemadoulet took counſel together, which way to divert the ſtorm that threaten'd the Kings head, to whom they repreſented, that he was not ſafe in his own perſon ſo long as Iman-Kouli Kan and his three eldeſt Sons liv'd. The King eaſily believ'd them, and reſolv'd to be rid both of Father and Sons together, but the difficulty was to get 'em to Court, wherein opportunity it ſelf aſſiſted them. For at that time Amurath the Great Turk, at the head of a vaſt Army, was already advanc'd within the Confines of Perſia, had tak'n Erivan, and had ruin'd Tauris. Upon the firſt news of this march, the King ſends for all the Kans and Governours to attend his perſon, with all the Forces under their command. Among the reſt, the Kan of Schiras receiv'd the ſame orders; who thereupon aſſembl'd all his Troops, both Horſe and Foot, who were not only the moſt numerous, but the beſt diſciplin'd and ſtouteſt Souldiers of all Perſia. As he was upon his march to Casbin with his three Sons, the eldeſt having well conſider'd of affairs; Sir, ſaid he, We are making haſt to the King, to the end our heads may the ſooner fall at your feet. Perhaps my Son, reply'd the Kan, thou maiſt ſpeak the truth; but to this day I never was a Rebel againſt the King, I have done whatever he commanded, and whatever may happ'n I will obey him till death. The Kan arriving at Casbin, was by the King welcom'd with great demonſtration of joy. Some days after, he took a general Muſter, and then made a great Feaſt which laſted three day, to which all the great Lords and Kans that were at Casbin were call'd. The three Sons of Iman-Kouli-Kan were of the number; but the Father excus'd himſelf, as well by reaſon of his age, as alſo repreſenting to his Majeſty, that it better befitted him to employ his time in taking care of his affairs, and in praying for his Majeſty; however if it were his Majeſties expreſs command, he would not fail to obey; to which the King return'd for anſwer, that the Kan of Schiras was at his liberty to do as he thought fit. The third day of the Feaſt the King roſe from his Seat, and going out of the Hall, without ſpeaking a word to any perſon, went into a Room hard by. Half an hour after, three ſturdy reſolute Fellows with ſome other Ragamuffin attendants, entring the Hall with their Scimeters drawn, ſeiz'd upon the Kans three Sons, and cut off their heads. They were put into a Gold Baſon, and preſented to the King; who commanded the Fellows to carry them to their Father, and as ſoon as he had ſeen them, to take off his head to make the fourth. The Aſſaſſinates found him at his prayers; but being interrupted to ſee the heads of his three Sons, he deſir'd leave only to conclude, which having done, with a countenance undiſturb'd, and without any other words or expreſſions in his mouth than what is uſually ſaid among the Perſians, Let the Kings will be done, he ſubmitted to a death which he might have eaſily avoided. The four heads were brought back to the King, to be ſent into the Haram to his Mother. So ſoon as he had taken off the heads of the Father and the three Sons, the King diſpatch'd away certain Chappars or Courriers, with order to the Lieutenant of the Kan, to put to death all the reſt of the Children. The command was obey'd, and they were all put to death, but only two that were at Nurſe whom their Nurſes ſo well conceal'd, that never any tidings could be heard either of the Nurſes or of the Children.

After the death of Iman-Kouli-Kan, the Province of Schiras, with its dependances, has been govern'd by a Vizir, who agrees with the King what Rent to pay him yearly. In the years 1665 and 1666, the Vizir gave him fifty thouſand Tomans a year. But in the year 1667, the King abated him eight thouſand Tomans, in regard he had taken from him a ſmall part of his Government to pleaſure a Favourite.

Beſides what the Government of Schiras pays to the King in ready Money, he is oblig'd every year to ſend him a preſent of all the rarities that grow or are bred in the Province. Theſe Preſents conſiſt in Horſes, of which there is the beſt breed of any Province of Perſia. In Granates, Oranges, and Lemons, ſweet Oils and Waters of ſeveral ſorts, eſpecially Oil of Roſes, with which the women rub their bodies and heads; and the water of a certain Flower that grows upon a tree not much unlike our Willows, which water is call'd Arak-Bilmitſhe, which is a great refreſhment to thoſe that uſe it; beſides other Oils and Eſſences which the Governour is oblig'd to preſent. Yet were he only oblig'd to preſent the King, the expence might be born well enough; but for fear of being diſplac'd by any other Favourite, he is conſtrain'd to make Friends of all the other great Lords and Favourites at Court; which there is no way to do, but by continual preſents. Whereas the ancient Kans, who were a kind of petty Soveraigns in their Governments, were only wont to ſend a few Baskets of new Fruits in their ſeaſon for the ſervice of the Kings Table. To defray this expence, the Governours are forc'd to tyrannize over the people; who when they come, as many times they do, two or three Villages together, to complain to the King, are forc'd after long waiting, to return with empty Purſes home again, by reaſon that they who ſhould give them admiſſion, are the only perſons that debar them from it; and patiently to ſubmit to the Extortions of the Vizar; which is a piece of policy practis'd likewiſe by all the other Kans and Governours of the Perſian Provinces. As for Sha-Sefi himſelf, he was very ſevere, and one whoſe puniſhments oft'n amounted to acts of cruelty. One day being a hunting, a poor Country man appear'd from behind a Rock, with a Paper in his hand, being deputed by the Village to make ſome complaint to the King. But while the poor man cry'd for juſtice, the King without making any anſwer, ſhot two arrows into his body and ſlew him. That which mov'd Sha-Sefi to this act of cruelty, was becauſe he had ſome of his Wives with him in company. For then there is no mercy to thoſe poor people that happ'n to be in the way where the King chances to paſs by: no not for them that are in the Country round about, where the Eunuchs have order to kill all men they meet. When the King gives notice of his intention to carry his Wives into the Country, this is call'd Courouk; and there is nothing more troubleſome nor more inconvenient in the world to the poor people that live in the Villages through which theſe women are to paſs; for upon notice giv'n them, they muſt leave their Houſes for a League or two of either ſide. When there is a Courouk at Iſpahan, let the weather be never ſo bad, the people muſt leave their Houſes, and if they have no Friends in ſome diſtant quarter to retire to, they have no way but to repair to the Mountains. Such is the exceſs of the jealouſie of the Kings of Perſia; which indeed derives it ſelf to all his Subjects, who will not permit their women to be ſeen by any but their own Husbands.

The Perſians both men and women are ſo addicted to take Tobacco, that to take Tobacco from them, is to take away their lives. So that if the King ſhould prohibit Tobacco for any time, he would loſe a good part of his revenue. However Sha-Sefi in a humor having once forbidd'n Tobacco to be taken in any part of his Dominion, his Spies (that are in every City) found in the Indian Inn two rich Merchants of that Nation ſmoaking their noſes. Immediately they were ſeiz'd, bound, and carry'd to the King, who commanded forthwith that Juſtice ſhould be done upon them in the Meidan, which was, that they ſhould pour melted lead down their throats till they were dead.

The people thought the King had only intended to have ſcar'd them, and would have repriev'd them upon the place. Inſomuch that four Banians went to the Athemadoulet, and offer'd to pay two thouſand Tomans into the Kings Treaſury, ſo that he would be pleas'd to ſpare the two Merchants lives. The chief Miniſter made the propoſal, but the King falling into a paſſion, and asking the Athemadoulet, whether theſe Indian Dogs thought that a King of Perſia would

ſell Juſtice, ſent a ſecond order for the execution of the Merchants without delay.

The ſame Sha-Sefi having giv'n command that the Eyes of a young Lord of the Court ſhould be put out, one of the principal Officers of the Houſe being preſent, and ſeeing the Executioner prick the eyes of the unfortunate young man with the point of a ſmall knife, ſhut his own eyes and turn'd away his head, as abhorring ſuch a ſpectacle. The King perceiving it, and vex'd to ſee thoſe ſigns of pity, and a diſlike of an act that he approv'd; What, ſaid he in a fury, art thou afraid to puniſh the wicked? And at the ſame time commanded his eyes to be pull'd out of his head.

It is a cuſtom, that if any man points at the King as he paſſes along in the Street, or upon the Road, he muſt loſe his hand. One day Sha-Sefi being in the Country, two Merchants of Conſtantinople were upon the Road, where the King and his Train were to paſs. They ſtopp'd to ſee the King, and when he came near, one of the Merchants pray'd his Friend that oft'n had ſeen him, to ſhew him which was he. The other knowing that only the King wears the Heron tops in his Bonnet, innocently lifted up his hand to diſtinguiſh him, by pointing, from the reſt of the Lords that follow'd him. For which act two Horſe-men came preſently to him, and cut off his hand with a Scimiter.

CHAP. IV.

The tragical and memorable Story of Ralph Sadler, Native of Zurich, in the Reign of Sha-Sefi, who had retain'd him in his Service.

RALPH Sadler, born in Zurich, was a Watch-maker by Profeſſion, who put himſelf into the ſervice of the Emperors Reſident at the Ottoman Court, with whom he went to Conſtantinople. This man I deſir'd to take along with me into Perſia; and coming to Iſpahan, he ſet himſelf to work, and made a ſmall Watch about the bigneſs of half a Crown; which being a neat piece of work, the Engliſh would needs buy, to preſent it to Iman-Couli-Kan, paying the price demanded, which was two hundred Crowns. Iman-Couli-Kan preſented it to the King; who was mightily pleas'd with it, in regard it was the leaſt ſtriking Watch that ever had been ſeen by the King, who therefore carry'd it hanging about his Neck under his Cloathes, in a Gold Chain. One day the King happening to wind up his Watch, and turning the Key the wrong way, broke the Fuſil, for which he was ſo much troubl'd, that he ſent for the Watch-maker from Iſpahan to Casbin; whither when Ralph came, he preſently made the Watch as good as ever. The King thus ſatisfy'd in his work and in his perſon, order'd him a Penſion of thirty Tomans, and Diet for him and a man, and proviſion for two Horſes: commanding him withall to make ſome new pieces of work. Now a skilful workman in the ſervice of the Perſian King, has this advantage, that if he pleaſes the King, beſides his Wages that are duly paid, the King out of his liberality beſtows on him a preſent, which uſually amounts to a third part or half his Wages; or elſe his Wages are rais'd, which is more advantageous than a preſent.

Ralph was oblig'd every morning to wait upon the King at his riſing, to wind up his Watch; and was ſo much in the Kings favour, that every morning when he came out of the Kings Chamber, he had a Glaſs of Wine preſented him, as a mark of eſteem. And indeed the King had ſuch an affection for him, that to retain him in his ſervice he often ſollicited him to turn Mahometan.

The Embaſſador of Holſtein coming to Iſpahan, and ſeeing Ralph ſo much in favour with the King, endeavour'd to gain his Friendſhip.

Thus Ralph oft'n keeping company with the Embaſſadors, and having one time tarry'd till late at night upon the debauch with them, returning home to his his Lodging, where he kept a young Neſtorian girl, in the Court of the Houſe met a young Perſian, Brother to one of the Kings Porters. The Perſian knowing himſelf guilty, and ſurpriz'd to ſee Ralph ſo ſoon return'd, skip't over the Wall into the Garden and fled. The next day Ralph (who knew who he was) told his Brother of it, and deſir'd him to ſpeak to the young Perſian not to come any more to his Houſe; for if he did, he muſt expect what follow'd.

Some days after, the Embaſſadors treated all the Franks; when Ralph beginning to be warm, call'd the young Perſian to mind, and ſlipping home without taking his leave, open'd the door ſoftly, and found the young Perſian again with his Miſtriſs. Thereupon Ralph calling his Slaves to help him, bound his arms, and ty'd him to a Tree in the Court; and ſo leaving him there, went to bed. By and by one of Ralph's Servants, who knew the Perſian, fell a jeering him; which ſo incens'd the Perſian, that he having his feet at liberty, and the fellow within his reach, gave him ſuch a kick upon the bottom of his Belly, that he firſt ſwooned away, and then dy'd. The other Slaves ſeeing him fall, waken'd Ralph with cries, who thereupon ſnatching up a Piſtol that was charg'd with a brace of Bullets, ſhot the Perſian into the head. The Perſian being thus ſlain, Ralph went in the morning to wind up the Kings Watch; and being ask'd by the King, as he was wont to do, what news in Iſpahan, told him plainly what he had done, and the reaſon why. The King upon his report told him, he had done well according to the ſtrictneſs of the Country.

The Athemadoulet at that time was Mirza Také, who hated Ralph. For the Armenian Merchants having preſented the Athemadoulet with ſeveral Watches at a time, it happen'd that once he ſent to Ralph about thirty Watches together to be mended. For which the Athemadoulet, to gratifie him, and knowing that he kept four or five Servants, and ſeven or eight Horſes, ſent him fifteen or twenty Camels load of Straw and Barley for his Horſes. But Ralph ſlighting ſuch a preſent as that, Go (ſaid he to the Athemadoulets Servant) tell thy Maſter, that I am neither a Horſe nor an Aſs, and therefore let him eat his Preſent himſelf. Which meſſage ſo provok'd the Athemadoulet, that he ſtudy'd nothing but revenge.

Thereupon the Athemadoulet, whoſe buſineſs it is to attend the King when he riſes, and to report to him the news of the Town, told him among the reſt, what Ralph had done. The King reply'd, that Ralph had confeſs'd it to him already, and that he had pardon'd him, in regard he had reaſon to do as he did. But the Athemadoulet made anſwer, that Ralph had minc'd the matter; and repreſented the ſtory to the King far otherwiſe than it was, making the worſt of it he could upon Ralph's ſide; and the more to incite the King, he put him in mind of the fair occaſion he had to force him to turn Muſſulman, there being no way to expiate his crime, but by turning Mahometan, or ſuffering the Law. The King thus over-rul'd, ſent for Ralph, told him, he was now better inform'd of the crime he had committed, and that he muſt either turn Mahometan or dye. Thereupon the King ſent him to Priſon. Eight days after, the King (who had a great love for him, and therefore troubl'd that he muſt be conſtrain'd to put him to death, unleſs he would turn Mahumetan,) ſent for him again, and offer'd him two thouſand Tomans, after a powerful perſwaſion by words, but all ſignify'd nothing. Upon that he ſent him back again to Priſon. But yet remembring that he had once approv'd the fact, he ſent for Ralph a ſecond time, and offer'd him ten thouſand Tomans, and a Wife out of his Haram, with all her Jewels; which Ralph refus'd, with the ſame reſolution as before. The King incens'd at the fierceneſs of his reſolution, deliver'd him to the Brother of the party ſlain, to execute the Law upon him. The Holſtein Embaſſadors were reſolv'd to have beg'd his life; but the Athemadoulet, ſmelling their deſign, would not permit them Audience. However, the King commanded all the Franks, and all the Armenian Clergy to be preſent at the Execution, to ſave all his blood, and put him in a Coffin; he commanded alſo, that he ſhould be buried at Zulpha in the Armenian Church-yard, and have a Tomb made over him.

Thereupon Ralph was led to the Meidan, with that triangular Inſtrument of Wood which the Perſians call a Palenk, about his neck. This Palenk was the cauſe cauſe that the Brother of the deceas'd, who was to be the Executioner, not only miſs'd his firſt blow, but wounded himſelf in the Leg, while his Skain being born off by one of the ſides of the triangular Inſtrument, by the force of the blow lighted upon himſelf. Whereupon the people making a great ſhout hinder'd farther execution for that time. The King being advertis'd thereof, remanded him to Priſon, and after a few days ſent for him a third time into his preſence; but though the King offer'd him a thouſand Tomans, and that the Lords urg'd him to turn, though it were but for a while, and in outward appearance; yet neither threats nor promiſes could move the Zurickian, who was thereupon executed at the end of October, 1637.

All the Franks willingly contributed to raiſe him a Tomb; which was cover'd with a ſmall Duomo, ſupported with four Pillars, ten or twelve foot high. The Armenians have made him a Saint; ſo that when they are ſick of a Feaver, they come and make their devotions at this Tomb; and every time they come they carry away a piece of a Stone; ſo that the Tomb wants repairing every year.

The Athemadoulet, to the end the King might be the leſs ſenſible of the want of him, had told the King, that his Majeſty would find no great miſs of him, in regard he had a Servant who was almoſt as good as himſelf. But ſome few days after, the Kings Watch that he always carry'd about him, being out of order, and Ralphs Apprentice not being able to remedy the fault; the King for madneſs that he had been the Watchmakers death, threw the Watch at the Athemadoulets head. There, cry'd he, Dog as thou art, by thy advice I put Ralph to death, the moſt skilful man of his Profeſſion that ever will come into my Kingdom. Thou deſerveſt for thy counſel, to have thy belly ript up. But I ſwear by my Throne, that from this time forward I will never put a Chriſtian to death for his Religion. And I queſtion whether any of you would have had the ſame courage to have dy'd for the Law of Haly. And indeed they have been very cautious ever ſince; nor has any of the Franks been put to death, though they have flown out before the King in words and actions raſh enough.

CHAP. V.

Of ſome particulars under the Reign of Sha-Abbas the ſecond.

SHa-Abbas the ſecond, Son of Sha-Sefi, was no leſs cruel then his Father; and would be no leſs punctually obey'd.

He had two Siſters, which he marri'd to two of the richeſt Lords of his Kingdom, though of a very mean extraction. Some time after, the King underſtanding that they were both with-Child, order'd Phyſick to be given them to deſtroy the fruit of their Wombs. About three months after, he was told that they were big again; then he ſuffer'd 'em to be brought to bed; but commanded that they ſhould not give the Children any nouriſhment, but let 'em ſtarve to death.

The ſame Sha-Abbas caus'd the tongue of one that fill'd him Tobacco to be cut out for a word ſpok'n idly. For the King calling for Tobacco, one of the Pages ran haſtily for it to him that had it in charge, and bid him diſpatch; who anſwer'd him briskly, Gebennemé ſabreijlé, that is, to Hell, have a little patience. The King being inform'd of it, commanded his tongue to be cut out. The poor man deſir'd him that was the Executioner, to cut it as deep as he could in his throat, and to leave it very ſhort; by which means he ſpoke ſome words muffling,

The people cry'd out againſt the Nazar, who being a perſon of low extraction, and advanc'd to that high dignity in a ſhort time, grew ſo proud that he contemn'd all the Lords of the Court. There was no dealing with him about any buſineſs, unleſs he were firſt preſented; and he paid no body without making ſome advantage of it. Every body had reaſon to complain; yet no perſon knew how to come at the King to make their complaints. At length they bethought themſelves of making their application to two black Eunuchs, who had the Kings ear in the night. One was call'd Aga-Saron, who was the Meter or Maſter of the Wardrobe; and the other Aga-Kafour, or high Treaſurer. Theſe two Eunuchs ſeeing the King in a good humour one night, let fall certain words concerning the Nazar, and his management of affairs and thence ſlid into a diſcourſe of his injuſtice, that caus'd the people to cry out againſt him, and ſpeak evil of his Government. Now it happen'd one morning that the King intending to go a hunting, the Grand Maſter, who had always a large train attending him, coming to the Kings Tent, the Meter deny'd him entrance. About the ſame time the King came forth, and ſeeing the Nazar, commanded his Officers to take off the Bonnet from the dead of that Dog that took Gifts from his people; and that he ſhould ſit three days bareheaded in the heat of the Sun, and as many nights in the Air. Afterwards he caus'd him to be chain'd about the neck and arms, and condemn'd him to perpetual impriſonment, with a Mamoudy a day for his maintenance; but he dy'd for grief within eight days after he was put in priſon.

Jafer-Kan, being a generous Lord, and one that kept a magnificent train, was Governour of Aſterabat. At firſt he was very mild, but at laſt he began to exact ſuch ſums from the people, that his oppreſſions were very heavy; nor were theſe violences of his conceal'd from the Kings ear, who being one day drinking with ſome of his Lords, and ſeeing the Maſter of his Muſick in the Room, who was a merry droll, and had always ſome pleaſant news or other to tell the King; his Majeſty was pleas'd to ask him, what the people ſaid of Jafer-Kan; adding withall, that he had made him Governour of ſeveral Provinces, and had never heard any complaint of him before, but that now he was accus'd of ſtrangely tyrannizing over the people. The Muſick Maſter being a meer flatterer, and knowing that Jafer-Kan was extreamly belov'd by the King, confidently averr'd, that the Governour was falſly accus'd, and that he had always known him apter to give then to receive. There was at the ſame time in the Room, an Agis call'd Manouchar-Kan, lately return'd from a Pilgrimage to Mecca; him the King alſo ask'd, what was his opinion of Jafer-Kan, and his Government, being a perſon that had been long acquainted with him; to whom the Agis, thinking to pleaſe the King, return'd the ſame anſwer, that the Muſick Maſter had giv'n. Whereupon the King, who had been well inform'd of the Kans behaviour, turning toward the Lords that were preſent, what think you, ſaid he, of theſe two Flatterers, that abſolutely know the contrary to what they ſpeak? And at the ſame time commanded two of the Muſick Maſters teeth to be pull'd out of his mouth, and to be driv'n into the head of the Agis; which had like to have coſt him his life, being a very old man. As for Jafer-Kan, he was diſgrac'd for a time, but being a Perſon endow'd with noble qualities, valiant, generous and pleaſing in converſation, he was recall'd to Court, and knew ſo well how to make his tale good, that his Majeſty gave him the Government of Shemelouboſtan, of which Semeran is the Capital City. Shemelouboſtan ſignifies a Country manur'd to bear fruit. Nor is there any Province in Perſia that ſo abounds in Paſtures and Caſtles, that daily fall to ruine.

Jafer-Kan being reſtor'd to favour, the King ſent for ſeveral Lords of the Court to come and drink with them. He alſo commanded five French Artificers which he had in his ſervice to wait upon him, a Goldſmith nam'd Sain, two Watchmakers Lagis and Varin, and two Musket-makers Marais and Bernard. After they had heated themſelves a little with Wine, the King drew a Ruby out from off his finger, which I ſold him for a hundred Tomans, and a Diamond Jewel worth thirteen or fourteen hundred Tomans, which he gave to Jafer-Kan, with whom he was whiſpering at the ſame time. Now though the Nazar were at a diſtance, yet without doubt ſomewhat of the diſcourſe was heard; inſomuch that the Wine emboldning him, he told the King aloud, that if he would let him have but four thouſand Horſe, he would cut all that Rabble to pieces. The King bid him hold his tongue and go to ſleep; teſtifying his his displeasure at his discourse. For the Nazar conjectur'd that the King was talking to Jafer-Kan about the incursions which the Usbeck Tartars often made from Meshed side. As for the Franks three of the five were gone home to sleep, Sain, Lagis, and Bernard: Maras and Varin stay'd behind in the Room. But Marais being of a humor that when he was drunk he could not hold his tongue, and having heard what the Nazar said, he likewise took upon him to tell the King, that if the King wanted a General, there was none fitter to make a General then Jafer-Kan, and presently began a long repetition of his praises. The King commanded him to hold his tongue, which he did for a while, but then falling again into his former impertinencies, the King commanded him to be dragg'd out of the Room by the feet, and that they should rip up his belly. Thereupon Marais was seiz'd upon by the Meter, who having a great kindness for the Franks, and knowing that the King had a singular love for Marais, delay'd the execution of the Kings command, pulling his Cloathes off very slowly; and finding that the King did not rise to go into his Haram, which is the sign of no pardon to be given, he caus'd him to be dragg'd as near the person of the King as he could, thereby to try whether the King would have compassion on him or no; while certain Lords took the boldness to implore the Kings mercy in his behalf. At last when the King saw him dragg'd along, he commanded the Officers to let him go, and withall order'd him to put on his Cloaths again, and resume his place.

The King of Persia's eldest Son comes very raw to the Throne; and his first divertisement is to make short journeys into the Provinces, thereby by little and little to gain the knowledg of such things as concern him. Above all things he never fails to visit the principal Church of the Armenians at Zulpha. That which makes him so curious, is his desire to see the Armenian women, who are very handsom; being also further incited thereto by the Sultanesses, who are glad of any recreation. And then he has a Courouk through all Zulpha, at what time all the men must retire to Ispahan, or to their Friends at a distance. Sha-Abbas the second went several times in that manner to Zulpha; and one day among the rest, upon the report of the beauty of the Wife of the Kelonter Gorgia Safras, Son of Kelonter Gorgia Nazar, the King having seen her, lik'd her very well, and desir'd her to go along with the Sultanesses, who carry'd her into the Haram, where she continu'd fifteen days, and then return'd home with a fair Neck-Lace of Pearls, which the King gave her when she went away.

To say the truth of Sha-Abbas the second, he was a man too much given to drink, and too much govern'd by his passion, otherwise he was a lover of justice, and very magnificent and generous to Strangers.

CHAP. VI.

Of the misfortune of Mahomet Beg in the reign of Sha-Abbas the second.

MAhomet Beg was born at Tauris, the Son of a Taylor, who bred him a Scholar. He had a quick apprehenſion, and was naturally enclin'd to vertue; and being deſirous to advance himſelf in the world, he had the good luck to obtain the employment of Major-Baſhi, or chief of the Eſſayers and Refiners of Money, who has a power to viſit all places where money is coyn'd. After that, he became acquainted with the Aila Verdi Beg, or Mr. Godſgift, the Kings chief Huntſman, by the title of Mert-Shekar-Baſhi, who gladly preſented him to the King, to whom the King was very thankful, ſo ſoon as he had found the noble Qualities of the perſon he had preſented. Thereupon ſo ſoon as Mahomet Ali-Beg, grand Maſter of the Kings Houſe dy'd, the King beſtow'd that Employment upon Mahomet Beg, who not only gain'd the favour of his Majeſty, but the good will of all the Lords of the Court. He had a great reſpect for them all, without medling with any of their employments, and ſuppreſt his revengeful ſpirit, not finding it ſeaſonable as yet to diſcloſe his paſſions.

Kalife Sultan at that time Athemadoulet hapning to dye, the King conferr'd that place upon Mahomet Beg, who at firſt behav'd himſelf in that employment to the ſatisfaction of all men. He apply'd himſelf particularly to the ſearching out of Mines; for there had a report ran among the people for many years, that if certain mountains nine or ten miles from Iſpahan toward the Weſt were well digg'd into, there might be found ſtore of Gold, Silver and Copper. To which purpoſe he made uſe of a Norman, whoſe name was La Chapelle de Han, who vanted at that time to have great skill in Chymiſtry, Mines and Minerals, for which reaſon he was recommended by the Governor of Iſpahan to the Athemadoulet then at Casbin with the King, who preſently ſent him back again to the Governour to furniſh him with all things neceſſary for his Expences, and for the work which he undertook in the Mountains. Thither went La Chapelle, and after fifteen days toyl return'd to Iſpahan with two or three hunder'd weight of earth, and ſet up furnaces to draw out the metal. The Athemadoulet was ſo wiſe as to give order to the Governour of Iſpahan, and three or four more perſons of Quality to overview the Norman, to ſee that he play'd no foul play. But though there was not ſo much as a half peny worth of ſilver in all the earth from the bottom to the top, though the Perſians watch'd him ſo narrowly as they did, he made a ſhift to ſhuffle in an Abaſſi among the earth, as it was in the furnace without being perceiv'd. Nevertheleſs the Athemadoulet, to whom it was carry'd, preſently found out the cheat, though he took no notice of it, hoping to make better uſe of the Norman in other things; only he forbad him to dig any more in that place, in regard the expence would exceed the profit.

La Chapelle, who was very skilful at putting off his merchandize, and one who knew to make the beſt uſe of the leaſt ſmackering that he might perhaps have in Mechanicks, and the power of Motion, had the cunning to amuſe the Athemadoulet for ten years together, being a paſſionate Lover of new Inventions; and the better to inſinuate himſelf into the Kings favour aſſum'd to himſelf the Invention of ſeveral Rarities which he ſhew'd the King, who thereupon allow'd him a very handſome penſion. Thus encourag'd, he undertook to caſt Canons, bring the water to the top of the Kings houſe, and ſeveral other things, yet when all his deſigns fail'd for want of Art, and that he found he could do no more good in Perſia, reſolving for India, he dy'd at Ormus.

The Athemadoulet miſſing of Gold and Silver Mines, applg'd himſelf to the diſcovery of Copper Mines, wherein he was more fortunate; for in thoſe Mines he alſo found veins of Azure, of which there is a great quantity conſum'd in painting the Groteſco Flouriſhes upon the Ceilings and Arches of their Houſes. He alſo found out a Mine of Lead near Yerde: and being ſtill upon new diſcoveries, he found out a Mine of Talk, Stone, Allum, and Coles, but of neither ſo good as in other Countries. He was ſo obſtinate in the ſearch of Metals, that if any perſon had an occaſion to ſpeak with him, let him be never ſo buſie upon never ſo important affairs, it was enough to bring him ſome ſtones of a ſuppoſed Mine, or ſometing rare either for Colour, Figure or Weight. He alſo gave full power to them that brought him any tidings of a Mine to go to the place, and to preſs the Countrymen from their labour to dig in the Mountains and break up rocks: and if they found nothing he caſt the fault upon the ignorance of the Labourers.

He alſo apply'd himſelf to the ſtudy of Mechanic Motions. He would have found an Invention, whereby the half Vail that hangs in the Kings Megeler, or Council Chamber, and is drawn to and fro by certain Officers in the Summer, to gather the cool Air, ſhould have bin made by Engine-work. Then he took a fancy for water Engines, the moſt neceſſary thing in the world for Perſia to relieve the drowth of the Country, but wanting neceſſaries, as Beams, Rafters, Wheelwork, Cordage and Iron, he could not begin thoſe Engines, the figures whereof La Chapelle had left him in a Book.

But as Mahomet Beg was ſtudious in theſe things, ſo was he Ambitious and Revengeful to that height that he could not obſerve a moderation in his reſentment againſt thoſe that had given him any diſtaſte. In his height of Paſſion he caus'd ſeveral Kans to be depriv'd of their Provinces, and by confiſcating their Eſtates reduc'd them to utmoſt neceſſity.

The Kan of Erivan had a Son who was a lovely and a well proportion'd Gentleman, and always attended at the Kings Elbow. One day that the King was drinking with ſome Lords, he commanded the Kan of Erivans Son to carry a Gold Cup full of Wine to the Athemadoulet, who perceiving that he had enough already, made a ſign with his eye to the young Lord to return it back. The young Lord paſſing by the King told him ingeniouſly that the Athemadoulet had no deſire to drink, whereupon the King commanded him to go and powre the Wine into his boſome. As the one was oblig'd to obey, the Athemadoulet was forc'd to ſuffer, and to permit the young man to open his boſome and powre down the Wine; for not daring to ſhew his anger, he was forc'd to diſſemble the beſt he could for that time. But having reſolv'd to revenge the affront upon the Kan of Erivan Father of the young Lord, who had only done what the King commanded him, he reſolv'd to lay hold upon the opportunity that preſented it ſelf, knowing that there were ſeveral complaints come againſt him from the Armenians of Erivan. Thereupon the Athemadoulet ſends for the Kelonter, encourages him in his ſuit, and gives him inſtructions how to proceed. To this end Mahomet Beg appoints him to meet him ſuch an hour at the Kings Stables, whither the King preſently coming, the Kelonter threw himſelf at the Kings feet, and beſought him for Juſtice againſt the Kan of Erivans oppreſſions: while Mahomet Beg fail'd not to heap up aggravations againſt the Governour, and the King, though he had heard but one ſide, as eaſily condemn'd him upon the Accuſation of the Kelonter and his Prime Miniſter. Thereupon an Officer of the Kings, call'd Negef-Couli-Beg, a man of a quick and active ſpirit was commanded to go in all haſte, and ſeize upon the Perſon of the Kan. Who being come to Erivan found him upon his ſeat of Juſtice, confiſcating and condemning to fine and Corporal puniſhment a near Kinſman of the Kelonters. The Meſſenger boldly entered into the Megeler or Council Chamber, goes directly to the Kan, told him he was the Kings priſner, and gave him a blow with his fiſt upon the neck, about which he was to wear the Triangle of great thick pieces of wood already deſcrib'd, into which the neck is enclos'd, while the Arms and Hands of the Priſner are put through another piece of wood that croſſes the Triangle, which is a great pain to the Priſner. Thus was the Kan carry'd night and day to Iſpahan, but when he came there the King ſhew'd him more mercy, and allowed him his houſe for a priſon, yet not ſuffering him to go to the Bath, nor to ſhave his hair, nor to ſtir out of the Apartment where his women were. Theſe are penalties impos'd upon thoſe that fall into diſgrace at Court, whom the King ſhuts up in their houſes, intending no ſeverer puniſhment. For the Kan being belov'd by the King was reſtor'd to his favour, and to his former charge of ſuperintendant of the Kings Moſquee.

Neither did this fright'n others from bearing up againſt the Power of Mahomet Beg, though every one had not the ſame ſucceſs. For ill it far'd with the Governour of Schiras, who was call'd Mirza Haddi. He was a perſon of great wealth and knowledge, and one day in Council took upon him to tell Mahomed Beg, that he was not of his opinion, and withall to lay before him his defects, and ill conduct. But the Prime Miniſter ſo deeply lay'd to heart the boldneſs of Mirza Haddi, that he reſolv'd to revenge himſelf by all means imaginable. He ſuborn'd falſe witneſſes, and other perſons to make complaints before him of the Governour of Schiras. There was a neceſſity for the party accus'd to appear before Mahomet Beg as his Judge, but the Governor truſting to his Innocence, nere minded the rage of his adverſary, not believing he could receive any injury from him. In the mean time Mahomet Beg inform'd the King what he pleas'd himſelf, and overpow'ring him by his authority, confiſcated all Mirza Haddi's Eſtate, and ſent him to priſon to the Houſe of the Nazar, who was call'd Iſmaet Beg. When he came there they hung him upon Tenter-hooks by the feet againſt the wall, and drub'd him ſo long, that he was forc'd to be carri'd into another Room upon a Slaves back. His Lieutenant and an Eunuch, that had bin his Treaſurer, were ſerv'd in the ſame ſawce, and all three put into a high Chamber that ſerv'd inſtead of a priſon. His Vizier or Lieutenant was releas'd in a ſhort while, but Mirza Haddi and his Eunuch were ſtill kept cloſe.

Nor is the manner of his revenging himſelf upon Mir-Kaſſem-Beg, the Deroga, or Provoſt of Iſpahan leſs remarkable. While Mahomet Beg was only Majer-Baſhi, there was ſome gold Plate ſtoll'n out of the Kings Kitchin. Thereupon the Deroga ſent his Officers to ſeize upon all the Goldſmiths in Iſpahan, that knew nothing of the matter, as being utterly innocent of the Robbery. In the mean time he put them all in priſon, and lockt them cloſe up, intimating to them that he was reſolv'd not to releaſe them without a good ſum of money. The poor Goldſmiths thus ill us'd, apply'd themſelves to the Majer-Baſhi, who ſent his Officers to intreat the Deroga to conſider that the Gold-ſmiths were innocent of the Robbery, and that being in ſome manner under the Juriſdiction of the Mayer-Baſhi, as being Artificers in Gold and Silver, he ought not to refuſe to diſcharge them at his requeſt. But the Deroga not ſeeing the money come, bid the Officers of Mahomet Beg tell their Maſter that he knew what belong'd to his employment, and further, ſaid he, Let the Taylors Son meddle with his own buſineſs; tell him withall, added he, that if he pleaſes I will ſhew him his Siſter's drawers. For a little before the Deroga had by his Spies ſurpriz'd her toying in a Garden with two young Lords, from whom he ſqueez'd a conſiderable ſum of money. Mahomet Beg not powerful enough then to proſecute his revenge, let it ſleep, but when he came to the height of preferment, he remember'd the Deroga, and bethought himſelf which way to ruin him. Nor was it long ere an opportunity offer'd it ſelf. For there being a report that the Enemy appear'd about Candahar, a Frontier Town of Perſia upon the Mogulls Territories, the Athemadoulet advis'd the King to raiſe a good number of Souldiers about Iſpahan, as being luſty nimble fellows and us'd to labour, and to ſend them to Candahar, to be ready againſt all accidents. The King having an entire confidence in the Athemadoulet, order'd him to loſe no time, but to commit the management of the Levies to ſuch perſons as had perfect knowledge of the plain Country. Then Mahomet Beg, ſtudying his revenge, told the King that there was no perſon fitter for the employment than the Deroga, Mir Kaſſembeg, who according to his cruel and covetous humor, ſoon abus'd his Commiſſion, the thing which he, who had procur'd it, chiefly deſir'd. For whereas the King intended that none ſhould be enroll'd but thoſe that were willing, the Deroga forc'd every body, eſpecially the Sons of the richeſt Farmers, who rather than part with their Sons gave the Deroga his own demands to ſpare them. When Mahomet Beg had got matter enough againſt the Deroga, he underhand ſtirr'd up the Country people to make their complaint, giving them to underſtand that it was contrary to the Kings intention to have them tormented in that manner, that his Commiſſion was only to liſt thoſe that would go of their own accord. The Villages eaſily encourag'd, ſent their Deputies to Iſpahan, whom he kindly receiv'd and preſented the ſame hour to the King. His Majeſty having heard them, and Mahomet Beg having ſeconded their complaint, the King order'd that they

ſhould make an exact liſt of what the Commiſſioners of the Deroga had robb'd them of. Mahomet Beg loſt no time, but by vertue of his Authority and the Kings command, ſent his Officers into all the Villages to take the Oath of every Country-man to the end they ſhould declare the truth, under the penalty of a Fine and Corporal puniſhment, of what had been exacted from them to the utmoſt Shayet. This Oath was to be put in Paper, ſign'd by every one that made it, in theſe words, Let my head be confiſcated to the King, and my goods to his Divan, if I do not punctually the Order of his Majeſty. The accompt being made of all the money for which they had compounded with the Deroga, it was preſented by Mahomet Beg, who aggravated the Tyranny of the Deroga, and repreſented to his Majeſty that for thirty years he had thus devour'd the Territories of Iſpahan. Thereupon by the command of the King, who was then at Iſpahan, the Deroga was to be carry'd into the Meydan, and being ty'd up by the heels to receive a certain number of Baſtinado's upon the ſoles for ſo many Fridays one after another; and moreover the nerves of his heels were to be cut, and his ankles to be boar'd thorough. The Kings command being thus ſeal'd, Mahomet Beg committed the execution thereof to his truſty Inſtrument Negef-Couli-Beg, who coming to Iſpahan aſſembl'd the chief of the City, together with the Vizir or Governour, and the Deroga or Provoſt, who thought of nothing; being met, before they broak open the Kings Seal they made a publick Prayer for the proſperity of the King; which being ended, the Vizir open'd the Letter and read it with a loud voice. When the Vizir came to read the Sentence againſt the Deroga, he was ſeiz'd with aſtoniſhment, at what time Negef-Coulı-Beg coming to the Deroga, and ſtriking him upon the Neck with his fiſt, threw him down under his Horſes feet, and caus'd him to be bound according to cuſtom. Immediately he was hurri'd to the Piazza, where he receiv'd ſo many Baſtinado's upon the ſoles of his feet that his nayls fell off. The next Friday they brought him to the ſame place, where they repeated the ſame Execution, and boar'd his ankles. The Deroga being very ancient, his pains put him into ſuch a condition as mov'd Negef-Couli-Beg himſelf to compaſſion, who wrote preſently to Court, that the continuance of ſo much torment, would infallibly be the death of the old man. Upon that the King order'd that there ſhould no more be done to him; only that he ſhould be ſhut up in the inner part of his Houſe with his Wives, depriving him of his employment, but leaving him his Eſtate.

But Mahomet Beg, not having yet compleated the revenge he ſought, was reſolv'd after he had thus tormented him to deprive him, alſo of his Eſtate. To which purpoſe he advanc'd to the Office of Deroga, a Georgian Renegado who was call'd Padada-Beg, whom he taught all the tricks imaginable to pick the peoples pockets. The deſign of Mahomet Beg in this, was to let the King underſtand, that if the new Deroga could heap up ſuch a ſum of money in five or ſix months, what a prodigious ſum muſt Mir-Kaſſembeg have heap'd up in ſo many years. In ſhort, the new Deroga inſtructed and encourag'd by Mahomet Beg, levy'd unjuſtly ſuch a vaſt number of fines, committed ſo many extortions and rapines upon the people, that at the end of ſix months the people began to tumult at the Palace gate. The Divan-Bequi, who is the firſt Miniſter of Juſtice, took the peoples part; whereupon Mahomet Beg perceiving he had been too haſty in his deſign to be reveng'd upon the Divan Bequi, who had croſs'd his deſigns, one morning caus'd ſeveral files of Muſqueteers to be drawn up at the Kings Haram. The King ſurpriz'd at the ſight, Mahomet Beg told him that his Majeſty was not ſafe ſo long as the Divan Bequi ſtirr'd up the people to Rebellion: which ſo incens'd the King, that he caus'd the Groom Porter to go immediately and pull out the Divan Bequi's eyes, which was immediately done; nor did the old man ſay any more, but with his face all beſmear'd with his own goar, deſir'd the ſervant upon whoſe arms he lean'd, to turn him toward Mecca that he might pray for the proſperity of the King. All his goods were confiſcated and brought into the Treaſury; but Mer Kaſſem-beg ſtill enjoy'd his, though he was forc'd to ſpend the remainder of his days in his own houſe.

Thus Mahomet Beg preſerv'd himſelf ſtill in the Kings favour, and had remov'd all thoſe perſons from the Court that had no kindneſs for him, and was indifferently ſafe, till Mir-Tchekar-Baſhi another favourite, whom the King highly lov'd, began to make head against him. These two haughty spirits would not give an inch one to another: and both equally strove to possess the Kings favour, to have the disposal of Affairs. Mir-Tchekar-Bashi, who had brought Mahomet Beg into Favour, being the elder pretended a respect due to his years, and Mahomet Beg pretended more due from him by reason of his place. During this contest ran a report of a rebellion upon Georgia side. Whereupon the Athemadoulet perswaded the King to send Mir-Tchekar-Bashi, lately made Koular Agasi or General of the Slaves toward Georgia, that so he might remove his Rival from Court. The Favourite sets forward with a flying Camp, but not finding any Enemy that oppos'd him, wrote back to the King that he saw no appearance of an Enemy, and that therefore it was a needless thing to tire the Souldiers in a Country where there was no face of War, and begg'd his Majesties leave to return. The Athemadoulet on the other side labour'd to hinder his return by preaching to the King the advantages of the stay of those forces in those parts.

In this interim the Usbek Tartars had made inroads upon the Frontiers of Carassan, and had slain several of Manoutchiks people, who was governor of the Province. Mahomet Beg who was his Kinsman, gave the King to understand that the Kan of Corassan had behav'd himself valiantly, but conceal'd the defeat of the Kan. On the other side the Koular Agasi sent Letter upon Letter to the King, but perceiving that none of them came to the Kings hands, he sent to Ispahan one of his discreetest and most trusty servants, who coming to Court intermix'd himself among the rest of the Lackeys. The Athemadoulet spying an unknown face, and being always mistrustful, demanded who he was? To whom the Messenger answer'd that he was a poor Souldier upon the frontiers of the Kingdom, who because he could not get his pay there was come to Court to see if he could there get any recompence for his service: upon which reply the Athemadoulet took no farther notice of him. Presently after, the young man meeting the Meter told him he had Letters of importance to deliver into the Kings own hand, of which the Meter giving notice to the King, the messenger was immediately call'd in. The King having read the Letters which discover'd to him what the Athemadoulet had conceal'd from him touching the no necessity of keeping forces upon the Frontiers of Georgia, and the loss which the Kan of Korassan had receiv'd, transported with choler against his prime Minister, sent for him, and after he had most bloodily revil'd and reproach'd him, he was within a little of killing him with his own hands. But the Nazar and some other Lords there present took the boldness to represent to the King the long services which Mahomet Beg had done the Kingdom, and that since his Majesty had rais'd him from the dust to the highest honours of the Kingdom, it would not be for his honour to destroy at one blow a person that he had lov'd, and might still be useful to him. This discourse somewhat appeas'd the King, so that he only gave him in custody to the Nazar. Three days after the King exil'd him to Kom, with all his Family, not permitting him to shave himself, go to the Bath, or to come abroad. This Exilement lasted for several years. But my Letters from Persia in the year 1674. enform'd me that Sha-Solyman, the present King, has restor'd him to his Primier Dignity, and that he still governs as Athemadoulet, the King finding no man more capable than himself.

CHAP. VII.

Of the Rebellion of the Prince of Jaſque, a Vaſſal to the King of Perſia, in the reigns of Sha-Sefi I. and Sha-Abbas II.

BEtween Cape Jaſque, and Cape Guadel which are the two moſt Southern points of Perſia, there lies a mountainous and meriſhie Country, which extends it ſelf from the Ocean toward the Province of Kerman, and in ſeveral places is inacceſſible. It is poſſeſs'd by three petty Princes, the one a Mahumetan, the other two toward the Eaſt both Idolaters. The firſt is the moſt potent of the three, and neareſt to the Province of Ormus. He alſo aſſumes the title of Prince of Jaſque, as his Anceſtors did before him. Now after Sha-Abbas the firſt had conquer'd Ormus, he went about to have made himſelf maſter of all the coaſt that extends it ſelf beyond Cape Jaſque; but meeting with reſiſtance, he only obtain'd that the Prince of the Country ſhould acknowledge the King of Perſia for his Lord, and that as his Vaſſal he ſhould pay him an annual tribute. And indeed during the reign of Sha-Abbas, who knew how to make himſelf fear'd, the Prince of Jaſque pay'd his tribute very orderly. But Sha-Sefi ſucceeding his Grandfather very young, this tributary Prince ſhook off his yoak, and refus'd to pay. Which not being regarded in the reign of Sha-Sefi, the Prince of Jaſque thought to do the ſame in the reign of Sha-Abbas the ſecond. But at length after he had refus'd to pay for ſome years, the Kan of Ormus pretending the Country to be under his Juriſdiction, and that the Kings honour was concern'd in the Princes refuſal, incited Sha-Abbas to ſend forces againſt him to reduce him to obedience. The King granted the Commiſſion to him that had undertaken the buſineſs: who preſently gathering together an Army of 20000 men, the moſt part Horſe, thought to have ſurpriz'd his Enemy. To which purpoſe that he might take the neareſt way, he march'd directly toward Cape Jaſque. But as it was the ſhorteſt cut, it was the moſt dangerous; inſomuch that the Kan, who hunted all the way he march'd, according to the cuſtom of Perſia, had the misfortune to fall into a bogg, where he was ſtifl'd, together with 20 or 30 horſemen more. The death of the Kan being divulg'd, the Army retreated back again: but as ſoon as the King receiv'd the news, he ſent the Brother of the deceas'd Kan to ſucceed him. In the mean while the Rebel Prince believing within himſelf, that he was not to be thus at quiet, and expecting to be attack'd by the new Kan, ſtood upon his guard. And indeed the new Kan march'd with all the ſpeed he could, and enter'd the territories of the rebellious Prince, but being beat'n was forc'd to make more haſte back again to Ormus, with the loſs of an abundance of men.

The Prince of Jaſque puft up with this ſucceſs, did not believe that the Perſians would be ſo haſty to come again: and thereupon he reſolv'd upon a Voyage for Mecca to give the Prophet thanks for his Victory. To which end he embarqu'd at the neareſt place he could to Cape Jaſque, thence to make ſail toward Arabia. But the Governor of Kan underſtanding his deſign by his ſpies, way-laid him by Sea, took him and brought him to Ormus. At that time the heats being exceſſive, the Governour was retir'd, according to cuſtome, to the Mountains ſome ten or twelve Leagues from the City, whither the Prince was carry'd and brought to the Kans tent. But while the Kan was expecting the return of the Meſſenger which he had ſent to the King for orders what to do with the Priſoner, the Princes wife hearing of her husbands misfortune, and being a woman of a manlike courage, taking along with her about five or ſix hundred horſe, with little noiſe and by long marches ſhe at length fell unawares upon the Kan about midnight, kill'd him with her own hand, cut in pieces the greateſt part of his men, whom ſhe found aſleep, carry'd away ten or twelve of his wives, and ſet her husband at liberty in ſpite of the Perſians, who had not time to rally themſelves.

The news of this defeat coming to Court, the King being highly incens'd, ſent away the third Brother to be governour of Ormus, with ſpecial command to the Gover-Governours of Schiras, Lar and Kerman forthwith to raiſe 30000 horſe to revenge the affront and reduce the Rebel. The Kan of Ormus march'd at the head of that Army, and gave Battel, but the Prince being ſuccour'd by the other two Idolatrous Princes his neighbours, the Perſians were again beaten. Only the Prince of Jaſque loſt his Lieutenant General, a valiant Captain, and a very good Souldier.

The King underſtanding that the Lieutenant General was the Kans Priſoner, gave him leave to do with him what he would, in revenge of his Brothers death: who thereupon deviſ'd the moſt cruel torments that ever were heard of. For he firſt caus'd the body of the Lieutenant General to be larded with lighted Candles, and then ſetting him upon a Camel order'd him to be led ſoftly about the ſtreets every day in the very heat of noon. A torment almoſt inſufferable, which the heroic Indian nevertheleſs endur'd with an invincible courage. After the Kan had tormented him in this manner three days together, the chief of the Holland Company and other ſtrange Merchants abhorring ſo much cruelty, begg'd of the Kan to ſurceaſe his rigour, who readily granted them their requeſt.

CHAP. VIII.

Obſervations upon the reign of Sha-Soliman the preſent King.

Ali-Couli-Kan had bin three or four times exil'd from the Court, for ſpeaking with two much liberty. For he was bold and could not keep his tongue between his teeth. For which reaſon he was call'd the Kings Lyon, who was wont to chain him up when he had no occaſion for him, and to let him looſe when he had any buſineſs for him to do. The laſt time he was exil'd, he was kept five or ſix years in a Fortreſs out of which he had never ſtirr'd: But one day, having a ſmooth tongue, he over-perſwaded the Commander to give him leave to go a hunting with him. When he return'd, with the help of ſome of his ſervants, he fell upon the Commander, and gave him ſo many Baſtinadoe's upon the feet, that he had like to have kill'd him: telling him withall, that it was to teach him his duty, not to let a man go that the King had committed to his charge. Sha-Sephi, though very young, hearing of this, and deſirous to ſee Ali-Couli-Kan, notwithſtanding all the endeavours of the Grandees to hinder his return, commanded him to be ſet at liberty, and that he ſhould have a better allowance to live upon. Two or three days after, the King ſitting in Council, the whole Aſſembly was amaz'd to ſee Ali-Couli-Kan enter, who approaching his Majeſty with a profound reverence, told him, that the Lyon being now let looſe was humbly come to kiſs his hands. Thereupon the King fell a laughing, and caſting a favourable glance upon him told him he had done well. Nor was it long ere the King finding him no leſs pleaſant in converſation, then a valiant and expert Captain, made him Generaliſſimo of his Armies, as he had bin in the reign of Sha-Abbas.

When the Court ſaw Ali-Couli-Kan ſo well receiv'd, every one then labour'd to teſtifie their joy for his return. They ſent him Horſes, Mules, Camels, rich Carpets, and every thing fit to furniſh a Lords houſe. But all this while he wanted money, which becauſe he could not meet with among the Perſians, he was forc'd to have recourſe to the Armenians, of whom he deſir'd to borrow five or ſix hunder'd Tomans. As for the Kalenter he would have had the ſum lent, but the reſt would not. Thereupon the King taking a walk to Zulpha, Ali-Couli-Kan put it into his head to go and ſee the great Cathedral belonging to the Armenians, where ſeveral Biſhops with ſeveral Monks reſide. The King entring into the Church, where the Biſhop ſtood ready at the head of the Clergy to receive him, and ſeeing all things new and ſtrange, as coming but lately out of the womens Haram, ask'd his favourite what ſort of people thoſe were clad in ſuch an extraordinary manner. Ali-Couli-Kan told him they were Devils, Devils! ſaid the King, What! added he, doſt bring me into a houſe of Devils? The King thus incens'd againſt the Armenians, reſolv'd to force 'em to turn Mahumetans. But Ali-Couli-Kan, being a Georgian, repenting that he had rais'd the Kings indignation to ſo high a pitch, and not believing it would be any advantage to him for the Armenians to turn Mahumetans, contented himſelf only with frighting them, which was enough to bring the Armenians upon their knees, and to make them come and beg the Interceſſion of his authority. Which favour, as he order'd it, coſt the Armenians ten thouſand Tomans to the King, and four or five thouſand Tomans to his Favourite.

The 23. of September 1677. the King made a Cavalcade, then which there could be nothing imagin'd more magnificent. All the richeſt Furniture was brought out of the Exchequer into the Meydan. The golded buckets to water the Horſes. The golden Fat out of which they take the water, together with buckles, harneſs and nails of gold, to which the Horſes are ty'd. After the King had play'd at Mall, as I have already deſcrib'd, and had alſo ſhot at the Goblet upon the top of the Maſt in the middle of the Meydan, he went and ſate in the Divan, which is over the Gate call'd Ali Capi, where he had the paſtime to ſee Lyons, Bulls, Bears, Tygers and Rams fight. But that which was moſt admirable, was to ſee a man ſtand upright upon the Saddle while the horſe ran full ſpeed, which he did three times the whole length of the Meydan. The firſt time, 'tis true, he fell but the two laſt times he ſtood firm.

One day the ſame Ali-Couli-Kan preſented two handſom Youths to the King, which had both delicate voices. The King hearing them ſing, was very much troubl'd that he could not make uſe of them in his Haram, which Alli-Couli-Kan obſerving, ſent for a French Chirurgeon, and promis'd him a great reward if he could cut the youths and ſave their lives. The Chirurgeon for lucre of a large recompence, cut them both and cur'd 'em very well. Which done, Ali-Couli-Kan, preſented the two youths to the King, who was ſurpriz'd to ſee them, but was well pleas'd that he had got two ſuch new attendants in his Haram. But ſee the reward of ſuch a wicked action. Ali-Couli-Kan dy'd ſoon after. The Chirurgeon never was pay'd: and being advis'd to preſent a Petition to the King by the Meter, the Meter ask'd him whether he would turn Mahometan: which when the Chirurgeon deny'd to do, the Meter bid him be gone like a Raſcal, telling him withall that he did not think the Religion of the Chriſtians had permitted ſuch acts of villany. The two youths were born at Coſhan, and had both Fathers and Mothers, and were promis'd in Marriage. When their Parents heard of it, they came to Iſpahan, to weep over their Children. Which the King obſerving, to appeaſe their ſorrow, gave them a Penſion during life.

CHAP. IX.

Of the Government of Perſia.

THE Government of Perſia is purely Deſpotick or Tyrannical. For the King has the ſole power of life and death over all his Subjects, independent from his Council, and without any Trials or Law-proceedings. He can put to what death he pleaſes the chief Lords of the Kingdom, no man daring to diſpute the reaſon, nor is there any Soveraign in the world more abſolute then the King of Perſia.

The King deceaſing and leaving Male Iſſue behind him, the Eldeſt aſcends the Throne, while his Brothers are kept in the Haram, and their eyes are put out: and if there be the leaſt ſuſpicion of any contrivance againſt the King, they are forthwith put to death without any farther examination. And not only they, but the Children alſo of the Kings Brothers and Siſters. I remember when I firſt travell'd into Perſia, they were not ſo rigorous, but were contented to move a red hot iron to and fro before their eyes. But Sha-Sefi perceiving his command had been negligently executed, and that the poor unhappy Princes had ſome ſight left them he order'd their eyes to be digg'd out of their heads. Sha-Sefi's cruelty went yet farther, for he ſpar'd not his Eldeſt Son Sha-Abbas, the lawful Heir to his Throne, ordering one of his Eunuchs to move an Iron before his eyes, no man being able to tell the reaſon. But the Eunuch compaſſionating the young Prince, did indeed move an Iron, but not a red hot Iron before his Eyes, and teaching him to counterfeit himſelf blind, preſerv'd his ſight till his Father lay upon his death-bed: at which time his Father was very penitent, for having put out the eyes of his Eldeſt Son, to whom the Throne of right belong'd. The Eunuch ſeeing the King ſo ſadly afflicted and ready to give up the ghoſt, aſſur'd him that he would reſtore the Prince to his ſight, and to comfort him at his death, brought the Prince with perfect eyes to the bed ſide. The ſight of which prolong'd the Kings life till next day; and gave him time to command all the Grandees of the Court to obey Sha-Abbas his Eldeſt Son, as his lawful Succeſſor and their King.

But to return to theſe blind Princes; There were ſeveral at Iſpahan when I was there: and I knew one particularly, who is ſtill alive, and is a perſon of excellent natural parts, As blind as he is, he is a great lover of Curioſities, and has built him a Houſe in Iſpahan, which is worthy a mans ſight. He is overjoy'd when any perſon brings him any rarities out of Europe, feeling them in his hands, and cauſing his Eunuchs, which are very apprehenſive, to tell him the meaning of every thing. He is a great admirer of Clock-work and Watches, and can tell by his finger when a Watch is right in the Caſe. To know what a Clock it is, he has little points ſet up in the Dial-plate, and a half hand, to the end he may not be deceiv'd which part of the hand points to the hour. By means of certain figures which he makes of ſoft wax, and ſets in order upon a Table, he will caſt up an accompt very exactly. Several other good qualities I admir'd in him; and it griev'd me to ſee a man reduc'd to that miſerable Condition, only becauſe he was of the blood Royal of Perſia.

Though the Employments of the Kingdom generally fall from Father to Son, yet the King if he pleaſes may bequeath the Governments of Provinces or any other dignities to any of his Goulams which are his Slaves, if he find them capable, and thinks they may be fit for his ſervice. The Father to leave the Employment to his Family, labours by degrees to introduce his Son, and to obtain the Survivorſhip for him. But if the Father dye, and leaves the Survivorſhip to an Infant, there is generally a perſon of Age and Experience ſent along with him. Some there are alſo that obtain employments by preſenting the Favourites at Court.

The State of Perſia is diſtinguiſh'd like moſt of the European States, into three Bodies. The firſt is that of the Sword, which anſwers to the Nobility, and comprehends the Kings houſhold, the Kans, and all the Souldiery. The ſecond is that of the Quill, comprehending all thoſe that belong to the Law and the Courts of Juſtices. The third is compos'd of Merchants, Handicrafts-men and Labourers.

CHAP.

CHAP. X.

Of the firſt of the three Orders or States of Perſia, which comprehends the Kings Houſhold, the Kans or Governours of Provinces, and the Souldiery.

THE Primier Miniſter of the Kingdom is call'd Athemadoulet, or the ſupport of Riches. His office is the ſame with the Grand Vizir's in Turkie, and may be compar'd to the ancient Mayors of the Palace in France. In regard all the affairs of the Kingdom paſs through his hands, he ought to be rather a Gownman then a Souldier: and herein he only differs from the Grand Vizier, who is always to be at the head of the Army, and for every ſlight fault or diſtaſte is ſubject to be ſtrangl'd by the Grand Signior. Whereas in Perſia where the Government is milder, the Prime Miniſters generally dye in their beds, or if they are Depos'd, they are only exil'd to ſome frontier City, where they live as private men.

When the King is young, the Prime Miniſter has a hard game to play, for then the Favourite Eunuchs and the Sultaneſſes diſannul and cancel in the night whatever orders he makes in the day time.

The Nazar or Seer has the charge of all the Kings goods, of his breeds of horſes, of his moveables, of his Cloaths and Plate: much like the grand Maſter of the Kings Houſe in France.

The Mehter, who is always a white Eunuch, is the firſt Gentleman of the Kings Chamber, and follows the King with a kind of bag hanging by his ſide full of handkerchiefs. And as he is always at the Kings elbow, if he have the Kings ear, it is eaſie for him to befriend or do unkindneſſes, as his inclination leads him. During the minority of the King, ſome of theſe Mehters have been known to govern the Kingdom.

The Mir-Akhor-Baſhi, or Grand Eſquire, has the Charge of the Kings Stables, which as well as the Gate of Ali-Capri, are a place of Refuge, and whoever ſaves himſelf therein, let it be for Murther or Debt is ſafe. All the Horſes in the Kings Stable are mark'd with a hot iron upon the left hip, and thoſe that belong to private perſons upon the right. Thoſe that the King gives to them that ſerve in his Armies, have the Kings mark, and are not to be ſold, but they may be chaffer'd away. If any of thoſe Horſes happens to dye in a Horſe-mans hands, he muſt flea off the Kings mark, and carry it to the under Officers of the General of the Cavalry, to have a nother, otherwiſe he would be forc'd to buy another at his own expences. Thoſe people by laying the skin in the water, know, though by what art I cannot tell, whither the Horſe dy'd of age or ſickneſs, or whither he were malitiouſly kill'd. For in times of Peace there are ſom Horſe-men that will kill their Horſes, to ſave the Charges of keeping any more than themſelves: then at the next Muſter they bring the skin of their Horſe, with the mark on, to the Officers, and get another, unleſs they be found out. Nor are their Horſes only mark'd, but their Scimitars, Muſquets, Bows and Quivers, all which they muſt ſhew to the Commiſſioners every Muſter.

Sha-Abbas, the ſecond being at Casbin in the year 1654, took a general view of his Cavalry, which laſted for ten or twelve days. For the King ſitting in the Portal of one of his Gardens, with his Officers ſtanding about him, every day caus'd ſo many troopers to ride by him: which were all ſtout active men and well mounted. Every Souldier gallop'd ſingly by him; and coming juſt under the King, he ſhot an Arrow againſt a Butt of Turf that was thrown up upon his left hand, and when the Muſter was over, the King advanc'd the Pay of every Horſeman, who according to the ſentence of the Judges had ſhot neareſt the mark.

I was then at Casbin, and I remember one Souldier, who quite contrary to what the other Horſe-men did, walk'd his Horſe along by the King, and never ſhot, but only lay'd his hand upon his breſt, and then upon his forehead, which is the Ceremony of Salutation us'd by the King. He was a very homely fellow, with a flat tawny countenance: ſo that his behaviour and his preſence offending the King, in a chaſe he commanded that black raſcal to be caſhier'd out of his ſervice. Immediately they took away his Horſe and his Arms, and were going about to have drubb'd him, but that the General of the Cavalry made them a ſign to let him alone. Immediately the General gave the King to underſtand that he was one of the beſt Souldiers in the Army: as he had ſignally made it appear at the Sieges of Erivan and Candahar. Upon that the King caus'd his Horſe and Arms to be reſtor'd him again, and commanded him to ride by him as the reſt of the Souldiers had done. When he came againſt the Butt, inſtead of obeying the Kings command, he turn'd his Horſe to the right and left, without ſaying a word. The General fearing he would offend the King again, bid him ſhoot. What ſhall I ſhoot at? Sir ſaid he. Againſt the place where all the reſt have ſhot, anſwer'd the General. Then the Souldier ſhaking his head and ſmiling, 'Tis not my way, ſaid he, to ſpend my Arrows againſt a wall; for I know how to make uſe of 'em better againſt the body or head of the Enemies of my King. I would then ſhoot thrice before another could ſhoot once. At the ſame time he draws out two Arrows out of his Quiver, one of which he held in his mouth, and put the other to his bow: and then ſetting ſpurs to his Horſe he out-rid the Butt for the nonce, to ſhoot backward, which he did, and hit the very middle of the white, then turning his horſes head and paſſing the Butt as before, he ſhot the ſecond Arrow into the ſame hole, whence they had pull'd the firſt Arrow. Then the General approaching near the King, told him that by what he had heard and ſeen, he might well believe that Horſeman to be as brave a Souldier as any in the Army: which his Majeſty confeſs'd, and from three Tomans advanc'd his pay to 15 Tomans.

The Mir-Shikar-Baſhi, or the Grand Maſter of the Hunt, who is alſo employ'd as Grand Falconer. He has under him a thouſand Officers, and a great number of Birds of prey, and manag'd Hawks.

The Seguan Baſhi receives the orders of the Grand Maſter of the Hunt. He has charge of the Doggs, Lyons, Leopards, and other Beaſts for Chace.

The Kindar Baſhi, who has charge of the Kings Saddles.

The Zinkan-Courlſhiſi is the chief of the Querries, that hold the Kings ſtirrup, when he gets a Horſeback.

The Kelege-Courlſhiſi carrys the Kings ſword.

The Oriaje-Courlſhiſi carrys his Bow and Arrows.

The Vakanviez is as it were the chief Secretary of State: an employment never conferr'd but upon a Favourite. He alſo reads all Petitions and Papers that are repreſented to the King.

The Kaſnadar-Baſhi is he that keeps all the Money which is in the Kings Coffers, whom we call the High Treaſurer.

The Iſhik-Agaſi-Baſhi is the Grand Maſter of the Houſhold, who has ſeveral Officers under him.

The Mehmender-Baſhi is the Maſter of the Ceremonies.

The Hakim-Baſhi is the Kings chief Phyſitian, by whoſe allowance all the Phyſitians of the Kingdom are licens'd.

The Munedgin-Baſhi is the chief of the Aſtrologers.

The Divan-Bequi is the chief Juſticiar, as well in Civil as in Criminal cauſes, and he keeps his Court either in Ali Capi, or in the Kings Houſe, where his Majeſty ſometimes preſides himſelf when he pleaſes. Before him as being and Officer of great Authority, all the Criminals in the Kingdom make their appeal, and he makes out proceſs againſt the Kans and other Grandees of Perſia.

The Deroga is much like the Lieutenant Criminal in France, from whom it is lawful to appeal before the Divan-Bequi. He has an eye upon Robberies, Batteries and Murthers, and he has power to ſuppreſs Houſes of Debauchery. If he catch any debauch'd perſons, he has power to give them the Baſtinado, or to fine them; and moſt commonly he ſpares corporal chaſtiſement to puniſh their purſes.

The Sofragi-Baſhi is he that ſpreads the Sofra before the King.

The Chirakgi-Baſhi is he that has charge of the Wine: chiefly the Schiras wine, which is particularly kept for the King, who ſeldom drinks any other. Nor can any

any particular perſon in Schiras make Wine till the Court be firſt ſerv'd, and that with the leave of the Chirategi-Baſhi; there being none but the Franks and Jews that make it.

The Meſheal-Baſhi is the chief of the Torch-bearers; who furniſhes the Court with Candles, which are all of Wax. To this Meſheal-Baſhi belong all the fines of thoſe that play at Cards or Dice, the Law of Mahomet forbidding all Games of hazard. This Officer has ſeveral inferior Officers under him, who go from place to place to ſpy where they can find any perſons at play: and he has power to break open any houſe, unleſs the Maſter be of great Quality.

The Kahuergi-Baſhi is he that has care of the Kahué, the Roſe-water, and other diſtillations which the Perſians drink; as Bilmiſhe, made of the buds of brown Sallows.

The Kara-Setaſhe is the King's Chirurgeon, or Barber, who lets him Blood, and ſhaves his Head; and cannot part with his place to another.

The Capigi-Baſhi is the great Porter, who has under him ſeveral other Officers.

The Melikultugagear is he that has charge of the Stuffs for the King's Houſhold, and puts them out to the Taylors. He takes an account of the ſhreds and old habits, which ſerve to make Cloathes for the Souldiers, deducting for them out of their pay.

The Gelander-Baſhi is the chief of the Foot-men.

The Mir-abe, or the Prince of the Seals, is the Superintendent of the Seals; and for profit, is one of the beſt employments in the Kingdom. He has the ſale of the Canal-water to the Country-men; for which he makes the Farmers pay a ſevere rate.

The Karkone is the Houſe for the Royal Manufactures, where the Gold and Silver-Carpets are made, as alſo thoſe of Silks and Worſted, together with Tiſſues, Velvet, and Taffeta's. There are other Workmen that make Coats of Mail, Bows, Arrows, Scimitars, and other Arms. In other Apartments are Limners that paint in Water-colours; Lapidaries, and Goldſmiths, that only make Silver-Rings. For in regard the Perſians cannot ſay their Prayers when they have any Gold about 'em, they never wear Jewel or Ring of Gold, becauſe it would be troubleſome to pull 'em off, and lay 'em up ſo many times a-day. And therefore the King of Perſia cauſes all his Jewels to be ſet in Silver, as we ſet all our Stones in Gold. As for working Goldſmiths, they have none in Perſia; all their Gold and Silver-Plate being wrought by the Copper-ſmiths in round figure, for they have not the art to frame an Oval.

The Nakkaſhe-Baſhi is the Serjeant-Painter, who only works in miniature; they cover their Pictures with a Varniſh made of Maſtich ſteep'd in a certain Oil that diſtils from a Rock that points upon the Caſpian-Sea not far from Shamatri. It diſtils out of the Rock at firſt like water; but afterwards it thickens till it become as thick as Sallet-Oil, preſerving ſtill its whiteneſs. There are alſo three other Rocks not far from the former, from whence this Oyl diſtils; but it is thicker, and of darker colour.

The Negeach-Baſhi is the chief of the Joyners.

The Embardar-Baſhi has the charge of the King's Granaries, and other Proviſions, having ſeveral Officers under him.

The Odondar-Baſhi is the Maſter of the Wood-yard.

The moſt part of theſe Officers have their diet in the King's Houſe, or elſe an allowance of Diet from thence.

The Tuſhemal-Baſhi is the Clerk of the Kitchen. He orders what ſhall be ſerv'd up to the King, and when the Table is clear'd, he ſticks his Knife in the beſt diſh, and orders it to be carri'd home to his own Houſe.

Now for the Officers of War, the principal are; Firſt, the Sepeh-Salar, Generaliſſimo of the King of Perſia's Armies, who is never conſtituted but in time of War; which being ended, his employment ceaſes. His place in Council is immediately next to the Athemadoulet.

Now in regard the Militia is divided into three ſorts, there are alſo three Generals. The three Bodies of the Militia are the Corſchis, the Goulams, and the Tufenlegis.

The

The Corſchis are deſcended from a forreign race, which have ſtill a great repute for their Valour. Theſe people live in Tents, like the Turcomans; and they ſend their Youth betimes to the King. They furniſh their Youth alſo with all neceſſaries, and maintain them till they come to be taken notice of by the King. They are all Horſe-men, well paid, and well look'd to, and are many times advanc'd to the Supreme Dignities of the Kingdom. They are generally call'd Keſel-Baſhi, or Red-heads, becauſe that formerly they wore red Bonnets. It is ſaid that the King has about 22000 of theſe Corchis in pay, all good Souldiers, that do wonders in Battel. Sha-Abbas the firſt did what he could to aboliſh this Militia, and to ſet up the Goulams in their ſtead. His hatred againſt them was only becauſe he thought them too powerful; for he was wont to ſay to his Favourites, that nothing but the Puiſſance of the Corchis, could oppoſe the Royal Power, Thereupon he took away ſome of their Priviledges, and gave them to the Goulams; but he could not bring about his deſign any farther.

The General of the Corchis is call'd Corſchi-Baſhi, and ought to be one of their Body; nor can the King impoſe another upon them. The Mim-Baſhi commands a thouſand Men, the Yux-Baſhi commands a hundred, and the Om-Baſhi commands ten. The Corſchi-Baſhi has 150 Tomans a year; the Mim-Baſhi ſixty-two; the Yuz-Baſhi thirty, and the Om-Baſhi fifteen. The pay of every Horſe man is from nine to fifteen Tomans a year. Beſides, every year the King makes a general Muſter, and then he gives to the Corſchis a third part more than their uſual pay; however, to ſome more, to others leſs, either according to favour or merit. When the King has reſolv'd to put a great Man to death, he commits the execution of his command to a Corſchi.

The Goulet-Agaſi is General of the Goulams, or Slaves. For indeed they are either Slaves, or the Sons of Slaves of all ſorts of Nations, who do the King very good Service. They are for the moſt part runnegade Georgians; and there are about 18000 of theſe Goulams, being all Horſe-men whoſe pay is from five to eight Tomans a year. The Corſchis are very good Husbands; but the Goulams, as ſoon as they have receiv'd their pay, fall a drinking and ſwaggering; whereas the other, if he has a Piaſter to ſpare, will buy a Sheep with it: For in regard they live in Tents, their Riches conſiſts in Flocks. The greateſt part of the Court of Perſia is made up of theſe two Bodies. The Goulams have this peculiar to themſelves, that they are very rarely known to revolt. For being all Slaves, and of different Nations, there are no ties of Affection or Kindred between them: And if the King has an occaſion to puniſh any of them, the chief of their Body is to execute his orders. The Goulams carry no other Arms beſides a Bow and Arrows, with a Skain. Though ſome wear Coats of Mail, and Head-pieces: others Vambraces and Battel-Axes. Theſe Horſe-men never entrench in the Field like ours in Europe, nor have they any Field-Marſhals to aſſign them quarters. For after the chief have taken up the beſt places, the reſt ſet up their Tents as neer as they can to the Pavillion of the General.

The Tufenkgiler-Agaſi is the General of the Tufenkgis, who compoſe the third Body of the Militia. This part of the Souldiery was but lately inſtituted, being compos'd of men taken from the Plough, as being moſt fit for labour. They are Foot-men with only a Scimiter and a Musket. But when they march, they have a Horſe or a Mule between three or four, to carry their Baggage and Proviſions. Their pay is not above four or five Tomans a year. And for their Officers, their pay is more or leſs according to their Quality and Command. They are in no great reputation, being laugh'd at by the old Souldiers, as being a company of poor Countrey-men, that dare not look an enemy in the face. Not but that the Infantry of Perſia is able to do good ſervice; though, as numerous as they are, the King never makes uſe of them, but in caſe of neceſſity. When he marches in perſon, he ſends for eight or ten thouſand, which he ſends for out of what Province beſt pleaſes him, and they prove very uſeful to the Army, as Sutlers. This Infantry is compos'd of the Countrey-men that live in Tents, abiding in the Mountains all the hot Summer, and betaking themſelves in the Winter to the hot Countreys. Every Tribe or Family knows how many men it ought to ſet out. And there is not a Foot-man that has not his new-Suit in his Cheſt, and his Musket and Scimiter in very good order. They are well train'd, and well diſciplin'd; for every three three months the Governor of the Province takes a view of all the Souldiers in his Province, and cauſes them to be exercis'd in his own preſence. They are order'd to ſhoot at a mark, and they that hit it, are ſure to have ſome reward from the Governor. When the King ſends for any part of his Infantry, they preſently know who is to lead 'em; and they are luſty, and well clad, never putting on their beſt Cloathes but when they muſter, or march into the Field. They pay to the King little or nothing: for of all their Cattel great and ſmall, they pay but one in the hundred to him, and one Abaſſi, or 18 Sous of our Money.

The Eſhek-Agaſi, or chief of the Keſhekſhi's, who are the King's Guards, and carry a Musket with a very wide bore. They were but lately inſtituted by the Athemat-doulet, when he intended to deſtroy the Divan-begni. This Officer has about 2000 men under him, of which he diſpoſes every night a certain number, round about the Palace. When the King ſits in Council, he ſtands there with a Battoon in his hand, and throws himſelf to the ground when the King beckons to him to come and receive any command from his mouth. The Topigi-Baſhi is the Maſter of the Ordnance, and chief of the Sea-affairs, but he has little to do in either employment. For, as for the Cannon, there are only ſome two or three pittiful Guns in ſome of the Frontier-towns: And for Ships, there are none in Perſia but what come from Europe or the Indies to Ormus or Balſara. The Perſians themſelves have no other Ships than ſome few large Barks in the Perſian-Gulph, and in ſome parts of the Caſpian-Sea, where they keep a Fleet againſt the Usbeck Tartars, the Kalmoukes, and other people.

As for the Kans or Governors of Provinces, they are generally choſen out of the body of Corſchi's and Goulams; who are handſom perſons, and generally much more Valiant than the natural Perſians. For the natural complexion of the Perſians is not good, as may be ſeen by the Gaures, the original Inhabitants of the Countrey, who are for the moſt part tann'd, and ill-ſhap'd. So that there is hardly a Perſian, from the King to the meaneſt of his Subjects, who is not a Georgian, or ſprung from the loins of Georgians, For they fetch a great number of Slaves out of Georgia; by the frequent Marriages of which women, the Georgian Valour and Beauty are become Natives of Perſia.

The Kans or Governors of Provinces are as ſo many petty Kings, fear'd and reſpected by all the people. And when they are ſettl'd, they are never depos'd, but upon repeated complaints of their exceſſive Tyranny. There are ſome of theſe Governments that yield the Kan ſeven or eight thouſand Tomans. But they are bound to preſent the King every year at Nourons, or New-year-tide.

Under the Kans there are alſo Governors of leſſer quality, who are alſo immediately preferr'd by the King, and cannot be depos'd by any perſon but himſelf. If they abuſe their Authority, the complaints brought againſt him are firſt carri'd to the Kan, which, if they concern the Government of the Kingdom, the Kan is bound to inform the King thereof. But if the complaints are not conſiderable, then the Kan may do Juſtice himſelf, and make the Sultans know their duty.

There is yet a third ſort of Governors, call'd Aſephs, who are the King's Lieutenants in places where he had Kans in former times; or where he ought to have them ſtill, but only to ſave charges. For in the Provinces where Kans Govern, they and their Officers, almoſt equalling in name and number the Officers of the King's Houſhold, devour all the profits of the Province, but what the Kan is oblig'd annually to pay.

By what I have wrote as well concerning the King's Houſhold, the Governors of his Provinces, and the Officers of his Army, it may be eaſily concluded that the King of Perſia's Court is the moſt magnificent and glorious of all the Courts of Aſia; and beſides, that it is the moſt Polite and Civil of all the Orient.

CHAP.

CHAP. XI.

Of the ſecond Order, containing all thoſe that belong to the Eccleſiaſtical Law, and their Courts of Juſtice; and, in general, of all the Gown-men; ſuch as are chiefly the Officers of the Chamber of Accounts.

THE ſecond of the three Eſtates of Perſia comprehends the Gown-men, ſuch as are the Doctors of the Law, the Officers of Juſtice, and thoſe of the Chamber of Accounts.

As the Athemat-doulet is the Prime Miniſter in Temporals, the Sedre is the Prime Miniſter in Spirituals, and the High-Prieſt of the Law. However, he does not pretend to take place before the Athemat-doulet either in Council, or in the publick Ceremonies. There is this difference between the Sedre and the Muſti in Turkey, that in Perſia, Eccleſiaſtical Dignities are no bar from Civil Employments; ſo that the Sedre is many times made Athemat-doulet.

The Dignity of Sedre is not limited to one ſingle perſon, but may be divided between two, in regard there are two ſorts of Legacies, the one from the King's of Perſia, the other from particular perſons. Therefore for the more careful Superintendency over theſe two ſorts of Legacies, there are ſometimes two Sedres appointed. The one is call'd Sedre-Kras, particular or peculiar Sedre who manages all the Revenues of the Royal Foundations, and diſtributes them to the Mullaks and Students according to their merit. The other is call'd Sedre-el-mankouſat, who has the management of private Foundations. In the year 1667 the King created two Sedres, and marri'd them to two of his Siſters.

The Sedre has two men under him, whoſe Authority is almoſt equal to theirs. The one is call'd Sheik-el-ſelom, and the other Cadi: and theſe are they that decide all controverſies in Religion, judge of Divorces, make Contracts and publick Acts. Theſe two Dignities are in the King's nomination: and in all the principal Cities of the Kingdom there are two of theſe Eccleſiaſtical Judges for all matters that concern the Law.

To every Moſquee there belongs a Pichnamaz, who is always firſt there before Prayers begin; and he teaches the people to Pray by learning of him, having their eyes always fix'd upon him to that end. This Pickanmaz is the ſame with him whom the Turks call Iman. The Moullah's are the Doctors of the Law, as are the Hodgia's in Turkey, and they are well paid out of the Legacies giv'n to the Moſquees, for reading every Friday, and interpreting the Alcoran to the people. He that reads, ſits in one Chair; and he that interprets, in another, ſomewhat lower upon the left-hand of the Reader. They are alſo bound to teach the Sciences to all thoſe that require it: And as a mark of Sanctity, they wear a great white Turbant, with a ſingle Chamlet-habit of the ſame colour. Their gate is grave, and their diſcourſe very ſerious; yet all this is but pure hypocriſy. When they light into any conſiderable company of people, they preſently riſe, and exhort 'em to go to Prayers. At the ſame time they waſh their heads, their hands, and their feet, and ſpread a felt upon the ground, or if they are poor, a ſingle mat. Upon this, at one end, the Moulla kneels, at the other lies a flat Stone about the bigneſs of the palm of a man's hand, which was brought from Mecca. Which Stones the Moullah's always carry about 'em; for being commanded while they are at their devotions often to kiſs the ground, they rather chooſe to kiſs a Stone brought from ſo holy a place, than the prophane Earth. They have a kind of a Mariners compaſs, which directs them punctually where Mecca ſtands, to the end they may know which way to turn when they ſay their Prayers. The Prayer which the Moulla's make, ſeems to be accompani'd with a great deal of zeal, and they take great notice all the while whether the company be attentive or no. Some Perſians are ſo ſuperſtitious, that a Vizir of Schiras ſuffer'd his leg to rot off, becauſe he would not let a Chriſtian Chirurgeon touch him, for fear of being defil'd.

Ther

There belongs alſo to every Moſquee a Monteveli, who looks after the repairs of the Building, and the Proviſion of what belongs to the Moſquee; together with a Mouazan, who cries morning and evening from the top of a Tower, That there is but one God, and that Mahomet is his Prophet.

Colledges, the Perſians call Medreſe; where there are a great number of Scholars bred up at little charge, out of the Legacies left to the Foundation. They allow them a Chamber without any Furniture, they being to provide a Coverlet and a Matraſs for themſelves. They have no certain Maſters, but ſometimes they go for their inſtructions to one, ſometimes to another, ſeldom to the Principal of the Colledg, who is call'd Monderes, and is generally the greateſt Blockhead of them all. But there are ſeveral other perſons in every good City that are forward to teach the Sciences to purchaſe honour to themſelves. For which reaſon they are very liberal, to get a great company of Followers together, who are as ſo many Trumpets to publiſh the wiſdom of their Akroom or Doctor. But when their Liberality ceaſes, the Trumpets want breath at the ſame time.

Now as to their manner of ſtudying, the Student firſt reads two or three lines, and then the Doctor Expounds. Then another reads two or three lines more, and ſo one after another; every one riſing up out of reſpect after he has done reading, and ſtanding upright till the Doctor bids him ſit down again. One of theſe Doctors ſhall teach all manner of Sciences in one day; for he is not learned that cannot talk of all. And certainly had the Perſians thoſe advantages of Books, and that method of ſtudy which we have in Europe, they would prove to be men of great underſtanding: for with thoſe little helps they have, they will give a good account of their own Theology, of Logick, Phyſick, and the Mathematicks, wherein they ſtrive to reach the bottom of things as deep as they can. Their Books are for the moſt part the works of an ancient Perſian Author, whoſe name was Kodgia Neſir in the City of Thouſi, in the Province of Koraſſan. 'Tis very probable he was well skill'd in the Greek and Arabick, having tranſlated into Perſian ſeveral Books out of thoſe two Languages. They have ſome pieces of Ariſtotle which are accounted the beſt in the Weſt: The Almageſter of Ptolemy, which they call Mageſti, ſome tractates of Euclide, ſome fragments of Archimedes: the Opticks of Ebne, Heiſter, and other excellent Books. Some have affirm'd that they have been skill'd in the doctrin of Sines and Tangents for above this 800 years: and indeed they are very curious at this day in Mathematical Inſtruments. They have alſo a great inclination to Poetry, the chief grace whereof they believe to conſiſt in deſign of accidents, and high compariſons obſerving thime as we do. As for Phyſick, they have Galen, whom they call Galenous; Averroes, whom they call Abonalt, or great Father; and Hermes Triſmegiſtus, whom they call Ormous. The moſt conſiderable of their Hiſtorians is Ronze el Sapha, who wrot a Chronology from the Creation of the World to his time; wherein there are abundance of fables, but little truth. He ſays that the World was inhabited by Devils for an infinite number of years before the Creation of Adam, and that God for their enormities depriv'd them of their power upon earth, and gave it to man to manage. Their Books, though deer, are very common, and every Trades-man buys 'em, being very ambitious to learn the Sciences themſelves, and to encourage their children to do ſo too. They ſend them betimes to the School, which they call Meklebe, of which there are ſeveral in every Quarter. They make a hideous noiſe in their Schools, repeating their Leſſons altogether aloud, while the Maſter corrects every Boy that does not keep along with the Cry. As for the children of perſons of Quality, they have Tutors at home, never ſtirring out of doors till they are 18 years of age, unleſs it be to go a hunting or a ſhooting now and then. Hence it comes to paſs, that the Children are diſcreet, civil and modeſt; ſo that you ſhall never hear an ill word come out of their mouths.

In the Chamber of Accounts are many Officers, whom I look upon as Gown-men. All the Books and Regiſters paſs through their hands, particularly ſuch Papers as concern'd the King's Revenue. All which are regiſter'd in the Chamber of Accounts at Iſpahan, which is call'd Defter Krone. As to the Fee-Lands call'd Moulkerbar, which belong to particular perſons, they owe to the King a certain annual Rent, which the Governors of Provinces exact with a ſevere extortion.

The Meſtempti and the Memaleck are they that value the Rent of all Lands in Demeſh, which is one of the principal charges of the Defter Kroon. They alſo take cogniſance of all the King's Farms, Quit-Rents, Proviſions and Expences of Receivers and Collectors. There is alſo a Meſtempti to value Legacies.

The Nazar controuls the Meſtempti and the Memalek, and his hand is requir'd to all Papers of diſpatch.

The Deroga or Provoſt of the Defter-Kroon is to proſecute and puniſh all that are guilty of falſe Receipts, or of Exaction.

Into this Office are deliver'd all the Grants and Aſſignations of the wages of the King's Officers. Every man comes and receives his own, or ſends for it to thoſe places upon which this Money is aſſign'd.

In every Village or Borough there is a Reis, or chief of the place, to whom the Officers apply themſelves for their Money: For ſhould they terrify the Countrey-man, he would run quite away, and pay nothing. The greateſt cheat in this Chamber of Accounts, is, that in regard the Officers keep the Roll of the Officers wages, they will give them divers Bills to receive little parcels at ſeveral places diſtant from one another, till the Sum be made up; to which trouble rather than the Kings ſervant will be put, he will give a good gratuity to the Officer to pay him all together. But becauſe the Officers are not able to ſatisfy all that come, there are certain Thabſilders or hoarders up of Rent, who buy for ready Money as cheap as they can, ſuch Bills as private men come to receive at the Chamber; and when they have got a good number together, they go and receive them altogether at the Chamber, and make great advantage. By this miſgovernment of the Defter-Kroon, ſeveral perſons are very much oppreſt. For he that has but 30 Tomans a year, ſhall be forc'd to give a good ſhare out of it to have the reſt in ready Money; which has been often the ruine of the Perſian Army, through the abuſes and defalcations put upon the poor Souldiers. During the Reign of Sha-Abbas the 1; and toward the beginning of the Reign of Sha-Sefi his Son, the Exchequer was better regulated; but when the Perſians come to be at Peace with their Neighbours, the King and his Lords have minded nothing leſs then the payment of the Souldiery.

The greateſt part of the Lands in Perſia belong to the King, and are only farm'd by private perſons. The reſt of the Lands are meaſur'd, and every Land pays ſo much a meaſure. The King alſo has a vaſt income by the Merchandizes that pay Cuſtom and Toll. The Port of Bander Abaſſi alone brings him one year with another, when leaſt, beſides accidents, neer upon 20000 Tomans.

CHAP. XII.

Of the third Eſtate of the Kingdom, comprehending the Tradeſmen and Merchants: as alſo of the Trades, Manufactures, and Commodities of Perſia.

THe Commerce of Perſia, as in all other Kingdoms, conſiſts in the Trade of the Country and Forraign Traffick. Only with difference, that the Country Trade is in the hands of the Perſians and Jews, the forraign Traffic in the hands of the Armenians only, who are as it were the Kings and the Noble mens Factors to ſell their ſilk.

As for the Handicraft trades, there are ſome Corporations that pay a certain yearly duty to the King, as Shoemakers, Cutlers, Smiths, and others. Some are free, as the Joyners and Maſons; though he get by their labour as much as others pay him in money. For when the King requires twenty Maſons for a work which is in haſt, the Marmar Baſhi who is their Chief, ſummons them together, and they that gave moſt are excus'd. For when the King requires twenty, he ſummons forty: and thus every man lives by his calling. The practice is the ſame with the Chief of the Joyners, and all other Trades, who are Officers pay'd by the King, and never work unleſs they pleaſe themſelves, commanding all that are under their Juriſdiction. As for Carpenters and Joyners work, the Perſians know little what belongs to it, which proceeds from the ſcarcity of Wood, that does not allow them materials to work upon. So that for Chairs, Tables and Bedſteads, there are no ſuch things to be ſeen in Perſia: the Joyners buſineſs being only to make Doors and Frames for Windows, which they make very neatly of ſeveral pieces of wood joyn'd together, ſo that a man can hardly put a Tennis Ball through the holes where they put the glaſs. Nor can it be expected that the Perſians ſhould work like other Europeans, having no other Tools then a Hatchet, a Saw, and a Chizzel, and one ſort of Plainer, which a French-man brought among them.

Their nobler Arts are Writing, for Printers they know none. All their Books are writt'n, which is the reaſon they ſo much eſteem that Art. There was an Armenian who had ſet up a Printing-Preſs at Iſpahan, and had Printed the Epiſtles of St. Paul, the ſeven Penitential Pſalms, and was going about to Print the whole Bible, but not having the way of making good Ink, and to avoid the ill conſequences of the Invention, he was forc'd to break his Preſs. For on the one ſide the Children refus'd to learn to write, pretending they wrote the Bible themſelves, only to get it the ſooner by heart: on the other ſide many perſons were undone by it, that got their living by writing.

The Perſians uſe three ſorts of hands, the firſt is call'd Neſtalick, or the Set-hand; the ſecond Shakeſte or Divanni, which is their Court-hand: the third Neskre, or the Running-hand, very like the Arabic. They write with ſmall Indian Reeds, and ſay, that to write well, a man ought to lean ſo ſlightly upon his Pen, that ſhould a fly ſtand upon the other end it would fall out of his hand. When they write they hold their Paper in one hand to turn it according to the motion of the Pen, otherwiſe they could not make their daſhes large and free, as the Character requires. They make their Paper of Cotton Fuſtian, very courſe, brown, and of no ſtrength, for the leaſt folding tears it. They ſleek it with a ſleek ſtone, and then rub it over to make it more ſleek. Their Ink is made of Galls and Charcoal pounded together with Soot.

The Perſians reck'n four Languages among 'em. The Perſian call'd Belick, that is, ſweet and pleaſing. The Turkiſh, call'd Sciaſcet, or the Rodomontado Language. The Arabian, to which they give the Epithite of Feſchiſh or Eloquent: and the fourth, call'd Cohabet, or the Speech of the Country people. The Perſian in uſe among the Gentry is compos'd almoſt of all Arabic words; by reaſon that the Perſian is very barren. But the Gibbriſh of the Country people is ſo corrupt that they in the City can hardly underſtand 'em. The Arabian is the Language of the Learned, in which tongue their Books are written. The Language of the Court is Turkish, but much more soft and elegant then at Constantinople. As for the Persian Language, it is spoken in the Courts of the Great Mogul, and the Kings of Golconda and Visapour, in all which Courts a Noble man would take it for an affront to be spok'n to in the Indian Language.

As for their Painters they only paint in miniature, and for Birds and Flowers they will draw them indifferently: But for figures and stories they know not what belongs to any such thing.

The Persians are most excellent Artists for manufactures of Gold, Silk and Silver, of which their rich Carpets and Tissues are made: nor do their Gold and Silver Manufactures ever grow black or lose their luster by long wearing or lying by. There are abundance that work in Silk stuffs of all sorts, and others that make Bonnets and Girdles of Gold and Silk. Others there are whose business it is to fall in flowers of Gold and Silver to their Taffata's, with gum water, of which the women make Shifts and Drawers. And now they begin to make such large quantities of Taffata's, that they care not for the stuffs which are brought out of India, though they be much finer.

They also make great quantities of Linnen Cloth of all sorts of colours, upon which they fall in several flowers with gum water, and some figures, though the Law forbid it. Which they learnt to do upon the Armenians carrying out of Europe some ill-favour'd cuts and pieces in distemper which they bought here without judgment: these pieces they hang before their doors, and those hollow places in the walls where they put their Quilts and Carpets when they rise.

The Persians are excellent Artists at Damasquing with Vitriol, or engraving Damask-wise upon Swords, Knives, and the like. But the nature of the Steel which they make use of, very much contributes to their Art, in regard they cannot perform the same work neither upon their own nor ours. This steel is brought from Golconda, and is the only sort of steel which can be damasqu'd. For when the workman puts it in the fire, he needs no more then to give it the redness of a Cherry, and instead of quenching it in the water as we do, to wrap it in a moist Linnen cloath: for should he give it the same heat as to ours, it would grow so hard that when it came to be wrought it would break like glass. I speak this to undeceive those people who think our Scimitars and Gut-lasses are made of steel of Damascus, which is a vulgar error; there being no steel but that of Golconda that can be Damask'd.

The Persians are also excellent Artists at making Bows and Arrows, and such other weapons as are us'd in that Country. As for Bridles and Sadles their Artists far exceed ours, especially in their sowing, which they do so neatly and with so much art with a kind of back-stitch, that it looks almost like an embroidery. There are an infinite number that live by dressing Seal-skins and Goat-skins, the first to make boots for the Gentry and better sort of Merchants, the latter for the poor people.

There is also a sort of earthen ware made at Kerman which is very fine, and being brok'n looks as white within as without. It does not endure heat so well as Porcellane, which has this quality, that if you powre never so hot liquor into a Porcellane cup, neither the foot nor the brims a-top will be any thing the warmer.

There are abundance of poor people that get their living by mending glass Tobacco-pipes, for when they are brok'n they join them together again with a certain mastic made of lime, and the white of an egg, then with a Diamond-pointed piercer they make holes in the glass, and bind the pieces together with a thin Latten-wire.

The most considerable commodities of Persia are the Silks which come out of the Province of Guilan. But there is not so much transported out of Persia as men imagin. For formerly great quantities of Velvets, Tissues and Taffata's were transported out of Persia into these parts, but now we make them better and cheaper in Europe.

There is also a vast quantity of flat silk transported out of Persia into Turkie, Muscovy and Poland, which the women use in embroidery: for the Colours being lively, they embroider their shifts, hankerchers, vails, and other linnen with it.

The Seal-skins and Goat-skins which are dress't in Persia are transported by the Hollan- Hollander into India and Japan. Great quantities also of both are transported into Muscovy and Poland.

The Ronas, that famous Root, of which I have already spoken, is transported over all India, where there is also a great vent of Persian fruits pickl'd in Vinegar, as also of their sweet waters.

Their Pistaches grow in great abundance about Casbin; Almonds from the Territories of Yesd and Kerman, Raisins from several parts of the Kingdom, especially from Sebirus: And their purgative Prunes, which they call Alobbedra, from the Frontiers that border upon Tartary.

Great store of Quinces candied, and boxes of Marmaled made at Balsara, are thence transported into India, where they are bought up by the Mahometans and Portugueses. For the Banians will eat none, for fear they should by accident bury a fly in their stomachs.

Great store of dry'd Fruits are brought out of the Country of the Medes, and transported to Tocat, to Diarbequir, Nineveh and Dagdat. Among the rest a sort of small Apricots, very pleasing to the taste, which being boyl'd in water make a pleasant syrup, and are the only diet for the sick in those parts.

There are also great store of painted Calicuts made in Persia, which being course, are only worn and made use of by the poor, so that there is very little transported out of the Country, but what is carried into Turkie.

The Persians also make a great deal of money of their Cattel; and to begin with their Camels, they sell vast numbers of them into Armenia and Natolia. But the Governours of the Provinces are very unwilling to part with them; which very much abates the trade. For the Turks very highly esteem the Persian Camels, as being stronger than their own. They also sell great store of Horses and Mules; but that trade is not so considerable, the chiefest part being only sent into India.

As for their Sheep, 'tis a wonderful thing to see what prodigious numbers come out of the Province of the Medes and the Higher Armenia, and the Forrain Merchants come as far as Tauris and Hamadan to fetch them away. They drive them as far as Constantinople and Adrianople, and the greatest part of the Mutton which is spent in Natolia and Romania comes out of Persia, which very much enriches Persia with ready mony. But when Lamb is in season, as we travel with the Caravans, we meet at every turn with flocks after flocks, the least of which consists of a thousand Lambs: and in regard there are some of those Lambs that are weary, and lag behind, we buy them at a cheap rate, the Shepherds that are not able to carry them, being glad to be rid of 'em.

Formerly the Merchant Fewellers brought some Turquoises of the old rock out of Persia; but for these 15 years last past there have bin none found. The last time I was there I could only meet with three, which were but reasonable. As for those of the new rock, they are of no value, because they do not keep their colour, but turn green in a little time.

CHAP. XIII.

Of the Justice and Policy of the Persians.

THe Justice of the Persians is very exact and very speedy. Suits are determin'd upon the place without any need of Advocates or Proctors. Not but that the Officers of Justice are easie to be corrupted, but in their unjust exactions, which they carry as secretly as possibly they can, they are sooner satisfi'd then the Turks: and if their injustice be discover'd, upon complaint to the King they are punisht without mercy.

The Kans do Justice in their Provinces, as representing the Kings person. Besides that, the King has a Divan Begni in every City, and the Kan places under him a Deroga, who is like the Lieutenant Criminal in France. He has under him an Asias, who is a kind of Captain of the watch; who goes about the streets in the night to hinder disorders, and carries all people to Prison that he finds abroad at unseasonable hours, if they cannot give a good accompt of themselves. There is also a Kelonter, that is, the chiefest or greatest, who seems to resemble the Tribune of the People among the Romans, or the Provost of Merchants in France. The Kelonter is only responsible to the King, who places one in every City, and it is his business to defend the People from the injustice and oppressions of the Governours.

Murther is severely punish'd, nor will money save the Criminal. When the Murtherer is tak'n, they carry him before the Divan Begni, who makes quick work. For he delivers him to the Parents or kindred of the person slain, who carry him to the place of execution, and without any compassion torture him to death.

I remember the Kan of Schiras had a Favourite, who falling in love with a young Persian Gentleman, would needs endeavour to have the use of his body. One day meeting upon the Road together, and lying at night under the same Tent, the Favourite about midnight came to his bed side, and after many sollicitations would have forc'd him. But being violently resisted, the Favourite for madness to see him disappointed, and liable to be discover'd, stabb'd the young Gentleman to the heart, and fled to the Mountains. The Murther being divulg'd, the Mother, Widow and Sister of the young man repair'd to the Kan for Justice, who willing to save his Minion, offer'd them money: but they scorning his proffer, threaten'd to complain to the King. The Kan being thereupon constrain'd to pursue his Favourite, at length took him and sent him to Ispahan, telling them that he would not judge of the Affair, but refer it to the King. The Mother, Widow and Sister immediately follow'd the Murtherer to Ispahan; and demanded Justice of the King with that eagerness, that though the King had an inclination to have spar'd the Kan's Favourite for his Masters sake, he was forc'd to abandon him, and to bid them pay themselves with his blood. Immediately he was carri'd to the Meydan, where the Widow first stabb'd him to the heart with a Dagger, then the Mother took her turn, and after the Sister; and then holding a Cup to receive his blood, drank every one a cup full to quench the thirst of their revenge.

Nor are they so exact in the punishment of Murther only; for they punish disorders in houses of Debauchery with a proportionable strictness, of which I will give the Reader two examples. A young Hollander, coming to Ispahan, presently put himself into a Persian habit; and going in the evening to a house of good fellowship, met with certain Persians, with whom he happen'd to quarrel, and being well beaten for his pains, thought it not convenient to stay any longer where he had bin so ill entertain'd. Thereupon the Dutch Interpreter went and complain'd to the Athemadoulet, who inform'd the King. The King immediately sent for the people that had beaten the Hollander, and ask'd them why they abus'd a stranger? To which the others made answer that they saw no stranger, but only a man clad after the Persian garb. Whereupon the King told the Interpreter, that if the Dutch-man had worn his own Country habit, his Subjects durst not have abus'd him, but as the case stood, he had no reason to punish 'em.

One

One day it happen'd that there was a great hubbub in one of thoſe houſes of debauchery, where the woman had proſtituted her own Daughter. The King inform'd of it, commanded the Mother to be thrown headlong from a Tower: and that the Daughter ſhould be torn a pieces by his doggs, which he keeps, a purpoſe for ſuch chaſtiſements.

Above all things there is an extraordinary care taken for the ſecurity of the High-ways. For which purpoſe guards are ſet at convenient diſtances, who are ready to purſue upon the leaſt noiſe of a Robbery, and who examin people whence they come and whither they go. If they anſwer not as they ſhould, or trip in their Anſwers, they carry them before the next Governor. Thoſe Radars are ſo poſted over all Perſia, that you need no more then ſend to the places where they keep ſtation, to know what is become of any perſon that has committed a crime. For it is impoſſible to ſcape, all the Paſſes are ſo well guarded. If any one endeavours to travel through the Mountains or unfrequented roads, then the Radars who are in all places, ſeize ſuch perſons upon ſuſpition, for not taking the direct road.

As the Caravan was one day ſetting out from Tauris for Iſpahan, a poor fellow took an occaſion to rob a Cloak-bag during the hurly-burly of packing up, and fled croſs the fields not knowing his way: the Merchant miſſing his goods, complain'd to the Governour, who having ſought for him in vain, ſent order to the Guards of the High-ways, to make a ſtrict examination, and to ſend the perſon to him ſo ſoon as they had ſeiz'd him. In a ſhort time the Thief was conſtrain'd to forſake his Cloak-bag and to come a thwart the fields for water. Who being examin'd by the Radars why he came alone by ſuch a by way, and not knowing what to anſwer, was carri'd to the Governour. He was ſoon convicted and condemn'd to death, for Thieves find no mercy in Perſia. Only they are variouſly put to death. For ſometimes they are ty'd to a Camels tayl by the feet, and their bellies rip't open. Sometimes they are buried alive all but their heads, and ſtarv'd to death: in which torment they will ſometimes deſire a Paſſenger to cut off their heads, though it be a kindneſs forbidden by the Law. But the moſt cruel puniſhment of all, is when they ſet Thief a Horſe-back, with his extended Arms faſten'd to a long ſtick behind: then larding him with lighted Candles, they ſuffer the Candles to burn into his very bowels. Another and I met two in this miſery, who deſir'd us to haſten their deaths, which we durſt not do, only we gave them a Pipe of Tobacco according to their deſire.

As for thoſe that ſteal in Cities, they tye them by the heels to the tayl of a Camel, and rip up their bellies: and then as the Camel drags the poor creature along the ſtreets, while one goes before him crying, The King has puniſh'd him for ſuch a crime. If yet he be not dead, they hang him upon the next tree.

The Radars have little wages, which makes them uſe their Rhetorick to get what honeſtly they can out of the Travellers, to whom they tell long ſtories of their care for the ſecurity of the highways.

If it happen that a Merchant be rob'd, the Governour of the Province is to make good to the Merchant whatever he has loſt, according as he ſhall make out by his Oath or his Book. Nor dare the Governors deny ſatisfaction, fearing a complaint at Iſpahan. I my ſelf was rob'd of two Bales of goods, between Lar and Schiras, to the value of 1400 Piaſters, but upon complaint to the Governour upon my own oath and ſhewing him my Book, he pay'd me all my loſs in gold, and gave me a preſent in wine beſides.

The Poſts or Shappars are thoſe that carry the Kings diſpatches to the Governours of Provinces. When they are ſent any whither, the Kings Eſquire finds them a Horſe, and a man that runs to the end of the Stage, to bring him back again. If theſe Curriers meet a Horſeman upon the road, they have power to diſmount him, if their own be not ſo good, or be tyr'd: and the Horſeman muſt either run after his Horſe, or ſend ſome body to the end of the Stage. Sometimes theſe Curriers abuſing their power, within a quarter of an hour after they have chang'd their Horſe, if they meet another better mounted, they will take away his Horſe too. Nor dares the Horſeman reſiſt, though he be never ſo much too ſtrong, for there is no pardon for them that lay ſo much as a finger upon one of theſe Shappars; at other times they will pretend to take away a mans Horſe only only to get money. But they are forbid to deal so by the Franks; and I have pass'd by them, when they have said nothing to me.

Their Government in relation to Belly-timber is the best in the world. For there is a Mohteseb, who is the chief of the Government, whose business it is to set a rate upon all sorts of Provision, being assisted by three or four more Assessors. Every first day of the week there is a publick Proclamation of tax upon the weight of every thing. Which Assessors in the evening advise together against the next day whether to raise or abate the price before set. This order was establish'd by the great Sha-Abbas, and was in his reign more punctually observ'd then it has been since. By the by observe, that all provisions of belly-timber are sold by weight and not by measure; so that you may send a Child to Market; for if the Commodity be not weight, 'tis well if the buyer be satisfy'd with having his money again. For if the seller be discover'd to sell by false weights, they are led about the streets with a Taktekolas, or a Bonnet like a Bee-hive upon their heads, and a Bell about their necks to expose 'em first to the laughter of the people; after that they are fin'd, and receive so many drubs upon the soles of their feet.

If this good order were not observ'd in Persia, the poor would suffer very much. For the handicraft tradesmen that work all day in shops remote from their houses, where their wives are continually shut up, eat nothing at noon but a little fruit in season: and then in the evening when they leave work, they go to the Market and buy for their Families boyl'd or roast meat, of which there is great plenty. Therefore are they so exact, lest so many poor labouring men should be deceiv'd.

One day a Baker of the City came to the Kan, complaining that the Judge of the Government had set too low a price upon bread, so that he should be a great loser. To whom the Kan made answer, that 'twas not his business to alter the price; bidding him go to the Magistrate that was concern'd. But the Baker believing the Kan could do any thing, sent him a present of fifty Tomans. The Kan seeing the ill design of the Baker to oppress the poor people, and the ill opinion he had of him as a seller of Justice, commanded him to be carri'd to the Piazza, and there to be drub'd upon the soles of his feet till he pay'd the other fifty Tomans, which the Kan forthwith distributed to the poor, and caus'd the price of bread to be abated instead of raising it.

CHAP. XIV.

Of the Manners and Customes of the Persians.

THe Manners and Customs of the people are usually correspondent to their Religion. The Persians never preserve the name of their Predecessors, but like the Jews, for distinction sake, say, such a one, the Son of such a one. When they Circumcise a Child and give him a Name, they write three or four Names like Lots in Paper, which are drawn by a Child, and which the Child draws, that is the Name of the Child. The women that are barren, swallow that which is cut from the Child, believing it will make them conceive.

The Persians are generally very inquisitive after the time to come, consulting their Astrologers like Oracles: The King has always two or three by him, to tell him the good or bad hour. There is an Almanac which is sold every year in Persia, which they call Tacuim; but is indeed an Ephemerides, containing the Longitudes and Latitudes of the Planets, the Conjunctions and Oppositions; and other such things. This Tacuim is full of predictions about War, Sickness and Famin. It sets the proper seasons to put on new cloathes, to let blood, to Purge, or travel, with many other instructions of the same nature. They give great credit to this Tacuim, and they that can get one, govern themselves in all things according to the Rules there set down. Others to know the success of their affairs, go to a Doctor of the Law, and deſire him to open the Al-couran, and to tell them the iſſue of their buſineſs. Thereupon the Doctor muttering ſome ſtrange words, opens the Book, and if he meets with affirmative commands, he declares the undertaking ſhall proſper. If negatives, he diſſwades from the enterprize. I remember a Gardiner belonging to the Capuchin Friers, would needs go to one of thoſe Moullah's, to know whether he ſhould get by an Ox that he was about to buy. Whereupon the Moullah aſſur'd him he ſhould reap great profit by his bargain: but quite contrary, the Ox dy'd upon his hands within three days, to the great aſtoniſhment of the Gardiner. When a Capuchin tax'd the Moullah for the falſities of his pretended Art, the Moullah reply'd, that God knew that the Gardiner would ſpend his Money upon lewd Women, and therefore took from him the means and ſupport of his debauchery.

Alcouran is the Book of the Law, ſo entitl'd for its excellency, as we ſay, the Bible.

They alſo uſe a ſort of divination, which is call'd Rambé, by even or odd, the Maſters of which myſtery, call'd Rammals, keep Shops on purpoſe to delude the people. When they ſee people coming, they have perſons ſuborn'd on purpoſe; who holding out their hands ſhut, ask the Rammal what he thinks they have in their hands. The Rammal at firſt ſeems to be at a ſtand; throwing certain Dice, call'd Kiabetain, the ſpecks whereof are ſome even, ſome uneven; but when there are people anough gathered together, he tells point by point how many ſpecks his fellow-Cheat has in his hands. Who counterfeiting aſtoniſhment, encourages the poor ſilly creatures that ſtand gazing, to ſpend ſomething for a lye which they ſell them. They alſo make uſe of the Faal, which is to open a Book, and by numbers even or odd, to prognoſticate good or bad fortune. In their interpretation of dreams, the Interpreter foretells the future to him that enquires conformable to what he ſays he ſaw in his dream. He has a great Book lying before him, full of little Pictures and Groteſco-work, wherein he ſtrives to ſhew the people ſome Fantaſm or Apparition, which they will tell you they ſaw in the night. Theſe cheats are uſually practis'd about the Palace, where all the idle people flock together; as alſo upon the Road to Zulpha, where they lye upon the Road to catch the ſilly Paſſengers.

The Perſians are mightily addicted to ill language, and foul-mouth'd reproaches. So that when two men fall out, inſtead of fighting with their fiſts, they fight with their tongues, and curſe one another. But they never blaſpheme God: for if they ſhould hear one ſwear, or wiſh themſelves at the Devil, they would cry out in an aſtoniſhment, Is not that Fellow a fool to give himſelf upon truſt to the Devil, and renounce Paradiſe? When they would affirm any thing to be true, all their Oaths are Ser-azire-ſha, By the King's beloved head; or, Erva pigumbir, by the Spirit of the Prophet. I remember once at Galata, walking with ſome of the French Embaſſador's Servants, we ſaw two Turks at Cuffs; after they were parted, one of them gave the other a thouſand curſes; to which, the other reply'd no more than only this; I wiſh, ſaid he, thy Soul may have no more repoſe in Paradiſe, than the Hat of a French-man has in this World, alluding to our manner of ſalutation, and putting off our Hats ſo often as we do.

The Perſians are naturally great Diſſemblers and Flatterers; and they make it their ſtudy to acquire eſteem and applauſe. They love to give and receive Preſents: more eſpecially to preſent the King. Which Preſents are valu'd, and according to the eſtimate, they muſt ſend ten per cent. to the Serjeant Porter, and five per cent. to his Deputy: which, if they do not pay willingly, they are forc'd to pay: which I ſaw the Deputy of the Holland-Company forc'd to do.

The Luxury and the Expences of the Perſians is exceſſive, as I have in ſeveral places obſerv'd. And though it be againſt the Law of Mahomet to make uſe of Gold or Silver-plate, which ſets aſide that metal only for Commerce and for Money; none but the poor obſerve that Law, for the rich make no ſcruple to tranſgreſs it.

The Perſians are very much accuſtom'd to make mutual Viſits one to another at their ſolemn Feſtivals, and to wiſh one another good cheer, and a merry ſeaſon. The more noble ſort ſtay at home to expect the Viſits of their Inferiors; after that they get a Horſeback, and return their Viſits. The Curtiſans continue their Viſits all the year long, and going to the Noble-mens Houſes, ſtay in the great Hall till they come out of their Harams. Whither, when the Noblemen come, they lay their hands upon their ſtomachs, and bow, which is their manner of ſaluting the Company that tarries for them. After ſome few Compliments, they get a Horſeback, attended by all their Viſitants, who accompany them to the King's Houſe, in expectation of ſome kindneſs, by vertue of their favour. The favours which the King uſually does to ſuch people, is to ſend them to the Governours of Provinces with a Hawk or a Calaat, with order that the ſaid Governours remember the Serjeant Porter.

The Kan being advertiz'd that the Calaat is coming, he rides forth of the City to meet it, attended by all his principal Officers, the chief of the City, and the greateſt part of the Inhabitants. The Juglers alſo muſt give their attendance, together with the Drums and Trumpets, and all the Muſick-makers. They rendezvouz uſually in a Garden one or two leagues from the City, where the King's Meſſenger ſtays with the Calaat. So ſoon as the Governour perceives him, he makes a low obeyſance, and a Prayer for the King; giving God thanks for that the King is pleas'd to preſerve him in his memory: then he puts on the Calaat, which is according to the quality of the Governour: ſometimes the Robe alone; ſometimes Robe and Cloak: ſometimes Robe, Cloak, Girdle, and Bonnet; to which, if he be a Grandee, are added the Scimitar and Dagger: which method is alſo obſerv'd toward Embaſſadors. When the Kan has put on the Calaat, he returns to the City with all his Retinue, goes to the King's Houſe; for the King has a Houſe in every City,) kiſſes the Columns of the Gate, and makes certain other Prayers for the proſperity of the King: At length he rides home, where he makes a great Feaſt, ſhewing the Calaat to all perſons that come to him, who by way of complement cry Moubarek-baſhet, that is, may it be bleſt, and prove a good omen.

The Perſians are not much addicted to play: for beſides, that the Law forbids it; the Meſhaldar-Baſhi has a power to fine and puniſh Gameſters, as I have ſaid already. For which reaſon he has ſpies, to which the meaner ſort of people dare not refuſe entrance into their Houſes: but the richer ſort laugh at 'em; and will give 'em nothing. Among the Perſian Games, there is one game at Cards which the Perſians call Gengefé. We have but four diſtinct marks upon ours, but they have eight. They alſo play at a kind of Cheſs, and at Tricrac; which two Games are moſt in uſe. The Shopkeepers play in the Streets with little Marbel-bowls, not much unlike our Childrens Bowling-ſtones. But as for Bowling-greens, or Tennis-Courts, they know not what they mean.

Neither the Perſians nor any of the Eaſtern People accuſtom themſelves to walk as we do. And therefore when they ſee us walking to and fro together in a Garden-Ally for two or three hours together, they are amaz'd. They only ſpread a Carpet in the faireſt place of the Garden, and ſet themſelves down to contemplate the verdure of the place: and if they riſe, 'tis only to pull the fruit from the trees. For they love to eat what they gather themſelves, never caring for what others have handl'd.

The Men never dance, only the Women of Pleaſure, which are always ſent for to their Feaſts; where they dance open-fac'd, and ſhew a thouſand poſtures to divertiſe the Company. Their juglers are every jot as good as ours; but whereas ours make uſe of Balls, they ſhew their tricks with large Hen-eggs. Their Dancers upon the Ropes far exceed ours. I have ſeen ſome of them that have ty'd a Rope to the top of a high Tower, and faſten'd the other to the ground, and then walking up to the top with their counterpoiſes in their hands, have laid themſelves upon the Rope upon their backs, and have ſlid to the bottom with a ſwiftneſs like lightning.

The Perſians are altogether as ſuperſtitious as the Turks. Before they ſay their Prayers they are oblig'd to waſh: every one having a Reſervatory for water in his own Houſe, which is always full of water. They plunge their heads in the water, waſh their mouths, rub their foreheads; and if a man ſhews them any naſtineſs in the Veſſel, there's water enough, they cry, for purification; though, if it be Pond-water, it muſt be four or five foot deep. But if it be Running-water, the leaſt quantity in the World ſerves to purify 'em, and render 'em fit to pray: while they ground their belief upon this maxim of the Law of Mahomet, that if it ſhould run through Piſhkill, or Camels-dung, it would be ſufficient for purification. There is one ſort of waſhing appointed by their Law, which is, to go to their

Baths

Baths after they have been with their Wives; and there are ſome ſo ſuperſtitious as to go there every day. Theſe Baths are round Chambers, ſo cloſe, that there is no light but what comes from little round windows made in the top of the roof. In the firſt place, there is the Kruſine, which is a Chamber ſeven or eight foot ſquare; where, in the middle of the Room, is a great Copper plate, in the form of a flat Baſon, and underneath they make a fire of Bruſhes or Horſe-dung: ſo that the Plate heats all the water which is in the Chamber: When it is hot enough, a ſervant belonging to the Bath goes up to the Terras, and winds a horn, to give notice to them that have a mind to come. Should a Perſian or a Mahumetan miſs once in eight days, he would feel an itching all over his body not to be endur'd. For the pores, which the heat of the Bath had open'd, coming to be ſhut, the vapours of the body not able to get out, prick and tickle the skin. The Men go early in the morning, and ſtay till two hours after Sun-riſing: At the entry of the Bath is the place where they undreſs; and when they are ſtript all but the ſecret parts, which they cover with a napkin, they pour hot water upon their ſhoulders: and then comes a man and rubs off all the ſweat and filth of the Body with a coarſe Cloath; after which they plunge themſelves into a Reſervatory of hot water, which they call Kollgnain. But theſe common Baths are very dangerous, and many people of both Sexes have got the foul Diſeaſe, who were never addicted to impurity.

There are alſo in Perſia hir'd people, which they call Saka's, whoſe buſineſs it is to give water to the people as they go along the Streets. Their Barbers are very neat, and ſurpaſs ours for lightneſs of hand; for a man can hardly feel their Raſors. They have alſo a Knife to pare the nails of the hands and feet, which they do very dextrouſly. As for their Beards, thoſe that belong to the Law cut it with Seiſſers, but they leave it not ſo long as the Turks do, by much. But the Courtiers and Souldiers ſhave all off, except from their upper-lips, where they take it for a mark of great honour to wear long Muſtaches, which they ſay is the ornament of the face.

The habit of the Perſians is a Robe which they call Cabaye, that comes down a little below their knees. This is of very fine quilted Cloath, well cotton'd in the Winter, but much thinner in the Summer. Theſe Linnens would be very cheap, but that the Perſons of Quality change their Robes every day. Their Sleeves are long, and cloſe to their arms, and reaching as far as the wriſt. The Robe is fit to their Bodies as far as the Waſt; but then it is made wide and looſe. Over this they wear a noble Girdle of Silk, adorn'd at the end with flowers of Gold, over which they wear another Girdle of fine Kerman wool. The richer ſort are ſo vain as to wear three Girdles, two of Silk, and one of Kerman-wool, which is ty'd uppermoſt. Under the Robe or Vaſt they wear a ſhort Waſtcoat of flower'd Fuſtion quilted, their Shirts being of Silk of divers colours. They uſe as little Soap in Perſia as they can; for Soap is very rare in Perſia. When we come out of the Indies, we are forc'd to bring with us Linnen enough to ſerve us for ſix months, and then carry it back again; for they waſh much better in India then in Perſia. Their breeches being of Silk, come down to their Ankles, without any codpieces. Their Seſſe, or Bonnet, which we call a Turban, is made of a piece of fine Silk mingl'd with Gold, being in form much like our large Pompions: the top thereof is a little flat; and here it is that the end of the Silk being garniſh'd with flowers of Gold and Silver, ends in a kind of Poſie. Theſe Bonnets are very heavy, eſpecially thoſe that are for the moſt part nothing but Gold and Silver. The meaneſt of thoſe is worth 200 Crowns; but there are ſome which the King and the great Lords wear, that are worth four or five hundred. You ſhall ſeldom meet an Officer of any Quality that does not wear a rich Jewel in his Bonnet. The Courtiers and Souldiery wear their Daggars upon their ſtomachs, ſtuck in their girdles. The meaneſt Souldier inlays the handle and ſheath of his Dagger; but the Grandees have them all beſet with Pearls. There was in the handle of Sha-Abbas the Second's Dagger, a Diamond of above ſixty Carats, which, with ſome other Stones that belong'd to it, was valu'd at 15000 Tomans, or 200000 Crowns. Over their Veſt they wear a Juſtitoar, much like ours. It is faſten'd at the top with a button: and moſt uſually they have nine tufted buttons before ſet by three and three at an equal diſtance: but they only ſerve for ornament. This Juſticoar is either of Cloath, or Tiſſue; which in Winter is lin'd with Martins, or elſe with a grey Lambskin that comes from Koraſan. And indeed the Perſians love diverſity of colours in their habits: for their Juſticoar is of one colour, their Veſt of another, their Breeches of another; and their Shooes, eſpecially the Womens are green, red, yellow, or violet. The Girdle and Turban are always of ſtrip'd Stuff, unleſs it be the Moullah's, which are always plain.

Beſides all this, in the Winter they wear a long Cloak down to their heels, with ſleeves of the ſame length, lin'd with rich Furs. The Perſons of Quality, and ſome of the meaner ſort of people make no more of Cloath of Gold and Silver, then we do of Druggets. A man that has but ſeven or eight Tomans a year, ſhall ſpend five in Cloaths; which exceſs in habit is crept down among the Rabble, ſo that a man can hardly tell the Servant from the Maſter. And it is a Proverb among the Perſians, Corbebé Lebas, fine Cloaths make Men eſteem'd at Court. Neither Sha-Abbas the Second, nor his Grandfather Sha-Abbas the Firſt, would allow of this diſorder, but that Men ſhould go clad according to their conditions. For one day, ſeeing one of his Servants with a pair of Cloath of Gold-breeches, demanded what wages he had? but when he underſtood that it was nothing neer ſufficient to maintain him at that rate; to deter others from the like vanity, he order'd him ſo many Baſtinadoes upon the ſoles of his feet, that he dy'd in a few days. Others ſay that the Fellow being ſurpriz'd at the King's Queſtion, made him anſwer, that being troubl'd with the Gout, he had been advis'd to wear that ſort of Stuff for its warmth. To which the King reply'd, that he had been told a very bad remedy, and that he would ſhew him a better and a ſhorter way to cure the Gout, and ſo commanded him to be drubb'd, as before is related.

In regard it is very cold in Perſia, they make uſe of three ſorts of Furs. The Lamb and Fox's skin for the meaner ſort, together with the Cat's and Fox's skin. But the third ſort, which is the Martin's Fur, is for Grandees of the Court, and other Perſons of high Quality. They have alſo a way to make Caſſocks that will keep out the rain, the wind, and the cold, which are made of Kerman-wool, as our Felt-makers make their Hats.

And now I have ſaid 'tis cold, give me leave to tell ye how they warm themſelves. In all Houſes there are little Chambers, in the middle whereof there is a ſquare hole about a foot deep, and three or four foot long, according to the bigneſs of the Chamber. Over the hole is a thing like one of our Tabourets, which covers the hole with a large Carpet, to keep in the heat of that which is kindl'd in the hole; ſo that being plac'd under the Tabouret as far as the waſt, though as cold as ice before, in a minute you ſhall be almoſt in a ſweat, and be ready to fall a-ſleep, if you take not a great care. All the Nobility have Chambers with Chimneys, where they ſet the Wood upright; the Mantle-tree comes forward, low, and ſemi-circular. It is two or three foot deep, and as many wide, to avoid ſmoaking.

They are full of their Compliments, which they call Travezea: and their manner of ſalutation is quite different from ours. For they never uncover their heads, but bow, and lay their right-hand upon their breſts. When they come into the company of their Betters, they fall upon their knees to ſet themſelves upon their heels, which is a mark of reſpect.

The Women in Perſia are very richly habited; but their habit is all of a piece, though little different in ſhape from the Mens. It is open before and comes not down below the calf of the leg. Their Girdle is not ty'd faſt, but hangs careleſly: their Sleeves are alſo cloſe to their arms, and reach to their wriſts. Upon their heads they wear a little Bonnet rais'd like a little ſpire, and adorn'd with precious Stones, according to their Quality; from which Bonnet falls a veil behind, which is very graceful. They wear Breeches like the men, and their Shooes are almoſt like theirs. The Women of Ormus wear only a ſingle pair of Breeches with a ſhift over them. The Armenian Women wear beſides, a little Juſticoar without ſleeves, and upon their heads, a fine Linnen-Coif ty'd under their chins. Their hair is gather'd into a long treſs, to which they ſometimes add more, which is falſe, to make a long lock, that is done up in a Velvet or Sattin-Caſe embroider'd, and hangs behind down to the waſt.

Handſome Women are very plentiful in Perſia, as well the tawny as the white. For the Merchants that bring both from all parts, chooſe the handſomeſt they can pick out. The white Women are brought from Muſcovia, Poland, Circaſſia, Mengrelia, Georgia, and the Frontiers of Tartary. The black from the coaſt of Melinda, and the Red-Sea.

The Perſian Women are ſeen by none but their own Husbands. They are very idle in their Houſes, not ſo much as looking after any thing of Houſewifery. Indeed every thing is at the Husband's diſpoſal, ſo that the Women are rather Slaves then Wives. They ſpend their time in taking Tobacco, after ſeveral faſhions. When they go to the Baths, ſhe's the Woman that wears the beſt Clothes, and brings the beſt Collation. They that have Slaves, cauſe 'em to rub their arms, their legs, and their thighs, till they fall aſleep; having no other divertiſement in their voluptuous Priſon. The higher a man is in dignity, the more he glories in having a great number of Wives and Slaves; and his abſolute power keeps them in order either willingly, or by conſtraint.

There are two ſorts of Eunuchs for the guard of the Sultaneſſes and the Wives of the Nobility: Some are white, but they never come neer the Women, but are order'd to guard the firſt doors of the Haram. The others are black, frightful to look upon, and flat-nos'd: who attend only upon the Women. If there be a neceſſity for a Woman of Quality to go abroad, the Eunuchs go before and behind with Battoons in their hands, to make the Corrouk, and drive all the people out of the way. When the King goes into the Countrey, if any one be aſleep in the high-way, and be perceiv'd before he wakens, he is immediately cut to pieces as he lies. In the time of Sha-Abbas the Second, one of the Fellows that help'd to ſet up the Womens Tents, being weary, fell aſleep in one of them upon the ground. When the Women came, they, ſeeing a man aſleep, ſet up a ſhrieking; upon which, the Eunuchs coming in, wrapt up the Fellow in the Carpet as he lay, and carrying him into the Fields, buried him alive, Carpet and all.

CHAP. XV.

Of the Diſeaſes of Perſia, and the manner of curing them.

THE Perſian Children are ſeldom ſick of the ſmall-Pox, but in lieu of that, they are very ſubject to Scald-pates, till ten or twelve years old. Which, it may be, proceeds from their ſhaving ſo young, and ſo often: for they ſhave at five or ſix months old, and two or three times a week.

As to the Pox, the Perſians would be more troubl'd with it, but that the dry Air of the Countrey is an enemy to it: beſides, they never lye twice with the ſame Woman, without going to the Bath to ſweat out the venom of that diſtemper. As for the Gout, or Gravel, the Perſians know not what it means: But the Armenians are troubl'd with the latter, eſpecially thoſe that in their youth accuſtom'd themſelves to drink more Wine then Water.

To thoſe that are troubl'd with the Cholick, they uſually preſcribe the eating of Horſe-fleſh; and I have ſeen many cur'd by that means.

Generally the Perſians, eſpecially the rich, or thoſe that have wherewithal to live handſomely, are much leſs ſubject to Sickneſs then the people of Europe. Some take the reaſon to be, becauſe of their China-drink which they drink every Spring, boyling an ounce in three pints of water, and ſo continuing the Doſe for ten or twelve days one after the other: all which time they keep a very moderate diet, and eat no fruit for a month together. This drink cauſes the Patient to ſweat; and the ſweat being wip'd off, dyes the Linnen, nay the very walls of the Chamber of a yellow colour. As for any method of Phyſick, they have none in Perſia.

For the Dyſentery, they take ſower Curdl'd-milk, with Rice unbruis'd boyl'd in water, to which they add a little Rhubarb powder'd.

At the beginning of a Diſeaſe they forbid Bread, and inſtead thereof preſcribe Rice boyl'd in Hen-broath, or ſometimes in fair water. For diet is the chief Remedy which the Phyſitians preſcribe in all Diſeaſes, and account moſt ſoveraign. Indeed the remedy is well preſcrib'd in many diſtempers; however it is by them never preſcrib'd according to reaſon or method, but only according to cuſtom; whereby it often comes to paſs that they forbid that which is good, and preſcribe that which is bad. If the Patient be ſo poor as not to be able to ſend for a Phyſitian, two or three men ſet him upon an Aſs, with a Scarf about his neck, which denotes him to be a ſick perſon, and ſo lead him to the Phyſitian; who preſently feels his Pulſe, lets him Blood, and by and by taking his Pen in his hand, in a ſmall piece of Paper preſcribes more Hog-wash at one ſtroke, then three mens bellys are able to contain.

When a Phyſitian is call'd to a Conſultation, he pretends not to take any Money: But his Atar or Apothecary finds a way to have the Doctor ſatisfi'd for his pains. They never permit the Sick to change their Linnen, how naſty ſoever it be. When they come home to the Patient, though they find him ready to expire, they tell the Servants that he will certainly recover; but then, on the other ſide, they go to the Parents or Kindred of the Patient, and tell them that the Patient is in a deſperate condition, and cannot live. By this means they ſave their credit; for happen what will, they have told truth either of the one ſide, or the other.

CHAP. XVI.

Of the diviſion of Time among the Perſians.

THE Perſians divide the natural day into four parts. The firſt is from Sun-riſing to Noon; the Second from Noon to Sun-ſet: The third from Sun-ſet till Midnight; and the fourth from Midnight till Sun-riſe. At Midnight, Morning, and Sun-ſet, they make a moſt horrible din in every great City, of Kettle-Drums, Haut-boys, Latten-Baſons, and other Inſtruments: upon which there are certain men hir'd to play, for a quarter of an hour together, in ſome place where they may be heard all over the City. They have alſo great Cornets, about ſeven foot long, with deep mouths, which may be heard above half a league. But theſe Cornets are never us'd but in Cities where the Kans or Governours reſide. Theſe Inſtruments are alſo always employ'd at their great Solemnities; as alſo when the King creates any new Officer or Governour. Theſe Inſtruments have alſo a priviledg to play at all Houſes where they underſtand there is a Male-child born. The meaner ſort dare not refuſe 'em; but the Nobility value not their priviledg of a ſtraw.

The Perſians in the computation of time make uſe of Lunar-months. The firſt Mouharrem, the ſecond Cepher, the third Rebia-el-Avel, the fourth Akner, the fifth Gemadil-Avel, the ſixth Gemadil-Akner, the ſeventh Regeb, the eighth Shaabon, the ninth Ramezan, the tenth Shaval, the eleventh Zikadè, the twelfth Zilhagge. And every Month begins from the firſt appearance of the Creſcent.

In their Aſtronomical Accounts, and the Calculations of the Longitude and Latitude of the Planets for the compoſing their Almanacks, they make uſe of Solar-months, thus call'd: Azar 31 day. Onzon 30 days. Ajar 31. Harizon 30. Temouzé 31. Ab 31. Eiloul 30. Techrion-el-Avel 31. Techrion-el-ilani 30. Kanon-el-Avel 31. Kanon-Elſani 31. Shaabat 28 or 29, anſwering to our February. The firſt month Azar begins upon our eleventh of March: ſo that it anſwer'd to our month of March before the Gregorian Reformation. Therefore they call this month Mah-Roami, or the Roman month. They alſo make uſe of the Egyptian months, which are thus call'd, Terverdin, Erdi-be-hoſt, Kourdad, Tir, Mordad, Sheriver,

Mobré

Mohré, Abon, Azer, Dei, Bahmen, Eſpendarmouzé. The firſt month, Ferverdin, begins with the Vernal Equinox, every month not containing above 30 days, adding the five which remain to the end of the year, which they call Kramſi Mouſterelzé.

The day of the Vernal Equinox is the firſt day of the year, which they call Neozonze, and is one of their Principal Feſtivals. For that day all the Grandees appear at Court, and preſent the King according to their quality. If they can meet with nothing that is rare, they preſent him in Ducats of Gold, and there are ſome that preſent him to the number of ten Thouſand. They alſo give God thanks for preſerving them to ſee the new year, and for preſerving the fruits of the Earth from bad ſeaſons, for the Corn is by that time well come up. Upon this firſt day of the year, if a Perſian has not money to buy him a new habit, he will go and mortgage his own body to have one. So proud and luxurious are the Perſians from the higheſt to the loweſt.

CHAP. XVII.

Of the Feaſts and ordinary Diet of the Perſians.

THe Perſians are nothing eager after delicacies or dainties; both the nobler and the meaner ſort being very temperate in dyet. In regard that wood is ſo ſcarce and dear about Iſpahan, they never eat boyl'd meat above once a day: and as for their Dinner which they call Shate, it conſiſts of bread, cheeſe-curds, milk, burnt wine, melons and other fruits in ſeaſon, to which the rich add wet and dry ſweet-meats: At night their uſual food is Pilaw and roſt meat. They buy their Proviſion from hand to mouth, eſpecially the Mahumetans, which is a double charge. But for the Armenians, they live thriftily, and buy at once a good quantity of proviſions to laſt for ſo long time.

Muttons, Kidds, Pullets and Pidgeons, are the uſual dyet of the Perſians; for as for Beef they very rarely eat it. The King and the great Lords will eat a piece of a Hare ſometimes when they have been a hunting: but when they have kill'd a wild Boar, they ſend it always to ſome Chriſtian, in expectation to be preſented for the honour done him. They have no diverſity of Victuals or made Diſhes in Perſia, their dyet being more proper to ſatisfie hunger, then to pleaſe a nice palate. Mutton and Lamb would be very good in Perſia, if they knew how to roaſt it our way. But the Perſians roaſt only at an oven, which is a hole made in the ground two foot and a half broad, and five or ſix foot deep. They burn nothing but buſhes, and a kind of Turf mix'd with the dung of Cattel, and dry'd in the Sun. There are ſeveral roaſting Cooks at Iſpahan, that roaſt a whole Sheep at a time where he that comes to buy may have as much cut out as he pleaſes. Other Cooks ſhops are only for boyl'd meat or rice: their fruits which they pickle up in Vinegar being the only ſawce which they have.

As for their Bread it is very white, for they have wheat enough to furniſh the whole Kingdom. They bake every day, making up their Dow in the form of a thin Cake, ſtrow'd over with Seſamum. They bake theſe Cakes in their Ovens in the ground, covering the batch over with little round flint ſtones, that are quickly hot and retain the heat. At Iſpahan they make a great fire in an earthen pot, and when it is hot they ſpread the Dow againſt the ſides of the pot. The Armenians make a ſort of bread as thin as Paper, which they bake upon a thin Iron plate which is as thin as Paper. Their Plate and Diſhes are of red Copper tinn'd within ſide. For they are forbid to make uſe of Silver by the Law of Mahomet. Nor does the King uſe any other then Gold Plate, of which he has great ſtore. They have alſo a ſort of Porcellane made at Kerman. To eat their broths they make uſe of wood'n ſpoons: for as for their rice, which is thick, they take it up in their fingers, and wipe their hands upon their handkerchiefs.

The firſt thing ſet upon the Table is the Pipe, the Tobacco, and the diſh of Coffee;

Coffee; and indeed thus it is that they begin all their debauches. They ſuck and ſmoak of their Tobacco through water in a long glaſs bottel, by which means it comes cool into their mouths: elſe they would never be able to take it all day long as they do. They ſing very little in their Cups: but they recite a vaſt number of wicked Verſes, which they rehearſe with a great deal of gravity. They are ſo accuſtomed to take Tobacco, both men and women, that a poor tradeſman that has not above five Sous to ſpend, will lay out three of them in Tobacco. If they had none, they ſay that they ſhould not have damaque, that is, gladneſs in their hearts. Many will confeſs that their exceſſive taking Tobacco is hurtful; but if you tell 'em of it, they anſwer in a word, Adedeboud, 'Tis the cuſtome.

Beſides their Tobacco they have alſo Opium made of Poppies, cut as they grow, out of which they draw the juice and make it into Pills. They take no more at firſt then the head of a pin, increaſing their doſe by degrees, till they come to take the quantity of half a wall-nut. When they are come to that pitch they dare not give over, for fear of endangering their lives, or addicting themſelves to drink wine. In their youth you ſhall ſee theſe Theriakis or takers of Opium, with pale penſive and dejected countenances, and the uſe of their ſpeech almoſt loſt: If they omit to take for a day together this ill continued drug that heats their brains, and cauſes them to act ridiculouſly and to talk idly, when it has done working, they are as cold and ſtupid as before, which obliges 'em to take it again. For this reaſon they are ſhort liv'd: or if they do live till forty, they complain heavily of the pains that proceed from the cold venome of the herb. They that have a mind to kill themſelves, ſwallow a large piece, and drink Vinegar after it, to prevent the relief of any other Counterpoyſon, and ſo they dye ſmiling.

They have another ſort of drink to make themſelves merry, which thy call Kokemaar, compos'd of boyl'd Poppy ſeed. They take it in broth, and there are particular houſes call'd Kokemaar Krone, where people meet to divertiſe thoſe that ſee the ridiculous poſtures which that intoxicating drink cauſes them to ſhew. Before it works they quarrel with one another, and call one another all to naught, but never fight. When the drug begins to work, they grow friends; and ſome are for making complements, others for telling a long tedious ſtory, which renders them very vain. They have alſo another ſort of liquor, which is call'd Bongue, very bitter, being made of the leaves of Hemp and ſome other drug mix'd with it. It makes thoſe that uſe it ſhamefully fooliſh and ridiculous, which is the reaſon the Law has forbid that and not the former. The Uſbecks have brought into Perſia, the Cuſtome of taking in Pipes Tchouberſe, which is the flower or rather the woolly ſubſtance which is found in hemp-cloſes. This fills the heads with ſtrange conceits, ſometimes pleaſant and ſometimes furious; thoſe that take it being quite beſides their ſences for two or three hours.

Their Feaſts are thus order'd: The gueſts come in the morning to the houſe whither they are invited and all the day long they ſpend their time in taking Tobacco and telling ſtories. Between whiles they have Sweetmeats, Coffee, and Fruits ſet before them. In the evening the Sofra is ſpread, and the table ſerv'd with boil'd and roaſt. If the perſon that treats be of any quality, he has a kind of a Governour of his houſe, that ſits upon his heels with a Ladle or great wooden ſpoon in his hand. Then the Inviter makes his complements to the chief of his gueſts, aſſuring him that the entertainment is only provided for him, only at his command he is ready to let the reſt ſhare with him. The Complements being thus paſs'd, the Governour of the Houſe with his great Spoon puts rice and meat upon the little plates, which the ſervants preſent by equal portions to every one of the gueſts. Then they fall to, taking out the rice by handfuls, and the meat with their fingers. Sometimes they mix curdl'd milk with their rice and meat, and making up a lump of all together as big as a Tennis ball, put it all in their mouths at a time, which is the reaſon they never ſit long at Table; one making room for another till they have all done: for as ſoon as one has done, another comes into his place without any farther Ceremony. They have ſeveral Liquors in the room in Porcellain Veſſels, but at meals they only drink to drive down their meat and to prevent thirſt. When all is done, they bring a Baſon with an Ewre full of hot water to waſh their hands and faces. After which the Inviter complements his gueſts, and every one returns home; at which time time the ſervants are very diligent to bring every man his ſhoes, in hopes of ſome little piece of ſilver.

The Armenians entertain their friends in the ſame manner, only that they begin their Feaſts with a cup of ſtrong water, and ſome ſweet-meats, after which they give a couple of hard Eggs to every one of the gueſts. The Perſians alſo have ſoon done, but the Armenians eat ſwift, and a long time without drinking, which they never do till the end of the meal. After they have given thanks and taken away the cloth, then they fall to drinking to exceſs. He that gives the entertainment never thinks he has done well, till his gueſts are not able to find the way out of the room, and the more they tumble about the room, the leſs he thinks he has ſpent his money in vain.

To conclude, the Perſians are very Gentile, and afford their victuals with a free-will to all that will come and eat with them at Supper time: admiring at the cuſtome of the Franks, who ſhut their doors when they ſit down to their meals.

CHAP. XVIII.

Of the Marriages of the Perſians.

THE Perſians betroth their Children very young, that is at nine or ten years; but among the Armenians there are ſome marry'd and lye together at five or ſix. The Law of Mahomet allows them but four lawful Wives, whom they call Nekha. But there are others whom they call Amoutha or hir'd women, and of whom they may have as many as they can keep, and for ſo long time as they pleaſe, which is ratifi'd by the allowance of the Judg. They may alſo enjoy the Slaves whom they purchaſe. The Children both of the one and the other are accompted lawful, and inherit all alike, without the diſtinction of Elder or Younger; but two Daughters can have but the ſhare of one boy. When the womans time that was hir'd is out, the man diſmiſſes her, and ſhe is oblig'd to ſtay forty days before ſhe engage again, that it may appear whither ſhe be with Child or no.

The man gives to the woman that he marries a Dowry aſſign'd upon his Eſtate, and ſends her money and ſilks to make her cloaths. The maid alſo ſends ſomething to him, but very little, and all by the interpoſition and intercourſe of the women. For the two parties never ſee one another. Upon the wedding day, they ſend to the Bridegrooms houſe, by the ſound of Drums and Trumpets, certain Horſes and Men laden with the Brides goods, which is many times done out of vain-glory, and more for ſhew then ſubſtance. The Bridegroom is led a foot, attended by ſeveral women with Tapers in their hands, and a noiſe of Drums and other Inſtruments marching before them. Being come to the door of the Bridegrooms Houſe, if he have promis'd a larger Dowry to the women then he is able or willing to give, he keeps his door ſhut. The Parents of the Maid knock, and he declares he will not have her at that price. But at length after ſome conteſts on both ſides they agree, and the Virgin enters with her Mother and all her Kindred. Then the Moullah reads the conditions of Marriage; which being done, the women retire into the inner part of the Houſe, the men feaſting by themſelves, and the women by themſelves.

This is all that is done upon the Wedding-day, but the following days are not always ſo pleaſing, and it often follows that both parties do not agree, or that the husband miſuſes his wife. Then the women that requires ſeparation, requires the Dowry promis'd her by her husband: which the man oft-times refuſes, and if ſhe perſiſts in her demand, is many times ſo ſeverely us'd by him, that ſhe is conſtrain'd to cry, I'th Devils name let me go, I demand nothing of thee. Then they both repair to the Caſi, or Cheit-Leſloon, who is a Doctor of the Law, and in his preſence they diſcharge one another. This they may do by their Law three times.

After that, the ſame woman can never return to her Husband again.

The Children derive their Nobility from the Father, whither he be born of a Slave, or an Amoutha, or a Legitimate wife. The Nobility of the Perſians which is call'd Negabet, is founded upon their being deſcended from Mahomet. They who claim that extraction, have the title of Mir or Prince: and their Daughters carry the appellation of Mirza or Princeſs. They are very numerous and very poor. But the title of Mir without a good Eſtate or high Employment ſignifies little or nothing.

CHAP. XIX.

Of the Death and Burials of the Perſians.

'TIs the Cuſtome among the Perſians, that when the Patient lyes very dangerouſly ill, they light ſeveral fires upon the Terraſs of the Houſe, togive the People notice to pray for him. So ſoon as the breath is out of his body, the whole houſe rings with cries and lamentations, eſpecially of the women who tear their hair, and ſhew ſuch antick poſtures, that a man would think them poſſeſs'd. In the midſt of their tears they make long repetitions of the worthy actions of the deceas'd, and every foot they ſet up a yelling. Then they go and advertize the Caſi, that ſuch a one is dead; to whom the Caſi anſwers Soreboam'a Salamet-Baſhet. May your head be in ſafety. In the mean while he ſeals a Licence to the Mourderchour, to take the body and waſh it in a houſe which is built on purpoſe near a running water. After that come a great number of Moullah's, with the Enſigns of the Moſquee, which are long ſtaffs like Pikes, at the end whereof are thin plates of Iron and Latten, ſo weak that they bend downward with the leaſt motion: the bodies of the ſtaves being wrapt about with certain pieces of Taffata. Theſe Moullahs tear their throats crying out Alla, Alla, Alla, repeating nothing elſe, and dancing ſometimes upon one foot and ſometimes upon another; and becauſe they that baul loudeſt get the moſt money, they put their thumbs in their ears with their fingers upon their cheeks, and tear their throats with all the force they have. The body being waſh'd, the cloaths of the deceas'd belong to the Mourderchour. When they carry the Beire, it is the cuſtome that every one that meets it, profſers their ſhouldiers to help carry, while the others eaſe themſelves; for which the Kindred of the deceas'd make ſome acknowledgment. If he be a perſon of Quality, all his Horſes are bridl'd and ſaddl'd, and others perhaps borrow'd: One carries his Turban, another his Scimitar, another his Bow, another his Arrows, another his Buckler, and whatever elſe is of any uſe to ſet forth his Quality and his Courage. The biggeſt Church-yard that belongs to Iſpahan, is Calreſton; but there is not one handſome Tomb in it. The Armenians lay a great ſtone over the grave, and the rich ſet up an Arch with four Pillars, under which they eat and drink in the ſhade when they viſit the Tombs of their Anceſtors.

Their graves are ſix foot long, ſix foot deep, and two foot wide, wherein they lay the bodies with their faces turn'd toward Mecca; and then they ſet up two tiles of each ſide his face to keep the earth from falling upon it. If he be a rich man, or have been a ſtout Souldier, they bury with him his Turbant, Scimitar, Bow and Arrows, and ſet Victuals by him; which part of the hole being made up with bricks, the reſt is fill'd up with earth. The Moulla's alone return to the houſe of the deceas'd, where they have meat ſet before 'em, and are alſo farther pay'd for their ſinging and bawling. A while after the Kindred coming to viſit the Heir, diſcourſe him upon the contempt of the world, tell him that it is but as a Caravan, ſome of which arrive ſooner at their Journeys end then others. Eight days after the Heir returns their viſits. As for the Grandees they order in their Wills that their bodies ſhall be either carry'd to Mecca or Meſhed.

As well the Perſians as the Turks, believe that as ſoon as the grave is fill'd, that the two Angels Neguir and Manguer, revive the dead as far as his waſt; ask him the the reaſon of Faith, and which way he ſaid his Prayers, and that according to his merits they uſe him well or ill. As for the torment of Souls before the Reſurrection, that only conſiſts in a grief for not having arriv'd to thoſe perfections and Sciences to which they might have attain'd, and conſequently for not having attain'd to that perfection which God requir'd of them. Others hold that the Souls of the unfortunate are tormented with Dreams and Viſions; but that the Souls of the happy always enjoy the ſight of pleaſing objects; till the Saheb-el-zaman, or Maſter of time ſhall come to confirm the Law of Mahomet, who ſhall kill Dedgar, who is like our Antichriſt, with his own hand; at which time all then alive ſhall dye in an inſtant, and then ſhall happen the general Reſurrection, which they call Moavedet-hechre. That the ſame Bodies and Souls ſhall unite to appear at the day of Judgment before the Throne of the great Judge of the world; and that to go thither they muſt paſs over a bridge call'd Polſerat, ſharper then the edge of a razor, which nevertheleſs the Muſſulmen ſhall paſs over without any danger with the ſwiftneſs of a bird. But that misbelievers ſhall fall as ſoon as ever they ſet their feet upon it, and ſhall fal into a torrent of fire among a thouſand Devils arm'd with Cramp Irons, Pincers, and tenter-hooks. So that it is a kind of a Proverb among the Perſians, if a man cannot obtain of another the Juſtice of his bargain, or to yield to right, Well, ſays he, before thou paſſeſt Polſerat, thou ſhalt reſtore it me double, for I will take hold of thy Coat, and hinder thee from getting over till thou haſt given me ſatisfaction; But the craftier ſort laugh at this, and make anſwer with a ſmile, Well, well, we will venture ſtumbling as we paſs over Polſerat. The Porter of Paradiſe whom they call Rurſuen ſhall open them the gate. There they ſhall ſit upon the banks of the great Kauſſer, which is a fountain where their Prophet ſhall give them of the water to drink out of a Ladle, and that afterwards they ſhall have a great number of women created on purpoſe for them, with all ſorts of moſt delicious food. And for fear of fouling this place of recreation and holineſs with the excrements of eating and drinking, they ſay, that thoſe things ſhall always evacuate in a perfum'd ſweat, and that they themſelves ſhall always remain in that condition. Others more refin'd, and not believing material enjoyments, affirm that Beatitude conſiſts in the perfect knowledge of the Sciences; and for the ſences they ſhall have their ſatisfaction according to their quality.

CHAP. XX.

The Author departs from Iſpahan to Ormus, and deſcribes the Road to Schiras.

I Set forth out of Iſpahan the 24. of Feb. 1665. in the afternoon, and ſtai'd a League from the City, in a field whither ſome of my friends would needs accompany me. About ten a clock at night, I ſet forward again, and travell'd till break of day; and then I came to a place where the Radars kept guard half a league from a great Town call'd Iſpſhaneck, which you are to croſs. About ten a clock in the forenoon I came to Mahiar, where there is a very good Inn. But the Land between this and Iſpahan is all very barren and without wood.

The 26*th*, three hours after midnight, I ſet forward through a dry Plain, which begins to grow more fruitful, about a Leagues from Comſhe a great City, where I arriv'd by eleven a Clock in the morning. In it are ſeveral Inns, and indifferent handſome ones, conſidering that they are built only of Earth. This City is compos'd of a row of Villages that extend about half a League in length. About three quarters of a League on this ſide the City ſtands a neat Moſquee with a pond full of fiſh. But the Moullahs will not permit you to catch any, ſaying that they belong to the Prophet to whom the Moſquee is dedicated. However becauſe it is a ſhady place in the Summer, Travellers rather chooſe to lye by this pond, then to ſhut themſelves up in the City.

The 27*th* I travell'd from four in the morning till ten in the afternoon, through a plain sow'd with store of grain, and lodg'd in an Inn call'd Maksonbegui.

The 28*th* I departed two hours after midnight, and after eight hours travel through a barren plain, I arriv'd at Yesdecas, a little City built upon a rock in the midst of a great Valley, and lodg'd in an Inn at the foot of the Rock. The same day in the morning I pass'd on to a neat house with fine Gardens call'd Amnebad; built by Iman-Kouli-Kan, Governor of Schiras.

The first of March, I departed an hour after midnight, and a little after I cross'd a short mountain, but so rugged and so craggie, that they have given it the name of Kotel-Innel-tebekeni, that is the Mountain that breaks the Horses shoes. The next day we pass'd by a scurvy Castle call'd Gombessala; then travelling through a flat Country, I came by ten in the morning to Debighirdou, or the Village of Wall-nuts. I endur'd very sharp weather all the morning, for all that Country, and that which I travell'd the next day, is very cold at some times of the year.

The second day, I travel'd from midnight till ten a clock in the morning, through the Snow over a barren Plain to come to Cuzkuzar, where there is a new Inn well built.

The third, I rode a horseback from five in the morning till noon, first over the same Plain by a Lake side in a very bad way cover'd with snow that hid the holes; then passing a tedious long and rugged mountain, I descended to a Village call'd Asepas, where there is to be seen an old ruin'd Castle upon the point of a Hill. The Inhabitants were all Georgians by descent, but now turn'd all Mahumetans. I met with wine and fish, in regard of the many Rivolets, but the Caravanserai is old, and ill provided.

The fourth, setting out by day-break, I rode over a Plain, which Sha-Abbas the first gave the Georgians to till, and in eleven hours I came to Ondgiom, a large Village upon a River, over which there is a fair stone-bridge.

The fifth, I got a horseback by two a clock in the Morning, and had two leagues in the first place of deep miery way; afterwards I pass'd a steep Mountain, craggy and durty. I pass'd through a Village call'd Iman-Sbade, from the name of one of their Prophets that lyes buried there, and gave the Mountain its name, being all cover'd with bitter Almond-trees. I travell'd sometime between rude and craggy rocks, after which I met with a small River, which runs to Mayn, a little City where I lodg'd in a fair Inn.

The sixth, I departed three hours after midnight, and travell'd through a large Plain encompass'd with high and rugged Mountains; upon one of which that is divided from the other, stood a Castle which they say was ruin'd by Alexander the Great, of which at present there does not remain the least sign or footstep. I cross'd the river of Mayne over two stone Bridges, and then came to Abgherme; a place that stands in a Plain where there is an Inn half built; so call'd by reason of a Spring of hot waters that rises not far from it. In the morning I pass'd over a fair and long Causey, call'd Pouligor, being above 500 paces long, and 15 broad divided also by certain Bridges, to give the water free passage, by reason the Country is very full of mershes. At the end of this Causey stands an Inn very well built, but the gnats that haunt it will not suffer it to be frequented. I pass'd along by the foot of a Mountain, and after three hours travel, I stopp'd a while at an Inn that stands at the foot of another steep and craggie mountain.

I arriv'd at Schiras about six a clock at night. But here give me leave before I enter the City, to make two observations, the one touching the Road from Ispahan to Schiras, the other concerning the ruins of Tche-elminar.

As to the Road from Ispahan to Schiras, observe that in winter time when the Snow is fallen, when you come to Yesdecas, you must of necessity leave the direct road, because it is impossible to pass the streights of those Mountains, which I have mention'd. Therefore you must keep the left hand road eastward, through the Plains, taking a guide along with you.

This way, which is the longer by two days journey, was formerly unknown, because of a River, that in one place beats upon a steep rock, and closes up the passage, But Iman-Kouli-Kan with a vast expence of time and money, caus'd a way way to be levell'd out of the Rock about 15 or 20 foot above the River, which he secur'd to the water-side with a Wall three or four foot high. This way continues for half a league, and then you come to lye at a great Village in a Plain, where you take Guides to shew you the Fords of the River.

Having past the River, you cross over several fertil Plains water'd with great store of Rivers. Then you ascend a Mountain, from whence you have but a league and a half to Tchel-elminar.

At the point of the Mountain, upon the right-hand of the great Road, are to be seen twelve Pillars still standing, that form a kind of a square. In the spaces of the Mountain are a great number of Niches, that are opposit to the Pillars, and were certainly the places where the ancient Persians put their Idols. Thence you come to Tchel-elminar; where are to be seen a great many old Columns, some standing, and some lying upon the ground, and some ill-shap'd Statues, with little four-square dark rooms. All which together, easily perswades me, who have well consider'd the principal Pagods of India, that Tchel-elminar was only a Temple formerly dedicated to Idolatrous worship. And that which confirms my opinion, is, that there is no place more proper for an Idolatrous Temple then this, by reason of the abundance of water. Besides, that the dark Rooms could be no other then the Chambers for the Priests; and where the Rice and Fruits that were the feigned nourishment of the Idols, were the better secur'd from gnats and flies.

Leaving Tchel-elminar, you come to lye at a Village half a league farther, where is very good Wine. From thence to Schiras is a hard days journey; especially when the Snow begins to melt: for then the Road looks like a little Sea.

CHAP. XXI.

Of the City of Schiras.

THE City of Schiras lies in 78 degr. 15 min. of Longitude, and 29 deg. 36 min. of Latitude. It is seated in a plain that extends it self about four leagues from the North to the South, and from the West to the East about five leagues. Upon the South-east there is a Lake of salt water four leagues in compass: leaving the Plain as you travel to the South, you pass between two Mountains, which are not so close, but that they leave room for certain pleasant Valleys a league and a half wide.

The Soil about Schiras is good, and fruitful; and it is particularly famous for the most excellent Wines of all Persia. As for the City it self, there is nothing handsome in it: for it looks rather like a Town half ruin'd then a City. Formerly it was begirt with walls of Earth, which are now utterly decaid. The Houses are of the same Earth dri'd in the Sun, and whiten'd over with lime; so that when it happens to rain, when the Earth comes to be well moisten'd, the Houses fall of themselves. Only the Colledg which Iman-Kouli-Kan built, and some of the Mosquees are of Brick: and the best of those Mosquees is call'd Sha-Shiraque, which out of a particular devotion is kept somewhat better in repair. However, there is nothing in it worth taking notice of. Upon the North-east side, the City runs within a quarter of a league of the Mountain: and from a Stone-bridg, as you go out of the City to the foot of the Mountain, is a long Street in a streight line, where there stands a Mosquee, built by Iman-Kouli-Kan. Without, it appears fair enough; but within, it falls to ruine. There is an Octogonal Piazza before the Gate, and in the middle of the Piazza an Octogonal Vase, which is fill'd by a little stream that runs through the Street from the Mountain. Both sides of the Street from the Mosquee to the Mountain are wall'd in: and at certain spaces are great Gates one against another, with rooms over them; the Windows whereof open into the Gardens behind the walls: all along by which, runs a row of Cypress-trees in a direct line: and in the middle of the Street about about two hunder'd paces on this side the Mosquee, is another Vase, which receives the same water as it runs from the Mountain. This Street was made by Iman-Kouli-Kan, after he had cut the Mountain at the end of it, to shorten the way from Schiras to Ispahan.

There are in Schiras three or four Glass-houses, where they make great and small Bottles, to transport the Sweet-waters that are made in the City. There are also made the several sorts of Vessels wherein they pickle their fruits of all sorts, which they send in great quantities into India, to Sumatra, Batavia, and other places.

There is no Silk made, nor any other manufacture in Schiras: only there are some few Chites or Painted-cloaths made there, which nevertheless are very coarse, and in use only among the meaner sort.

As you go out of the City upon the North-west side, you meet with a long Alley or Walk, in three parts whereof are plac'd three Stones, which they call Mills. At the end of this walk is a Garden call'd Bay-Sha, or the King's Garden. Over the Gate whereof is a great Room half ruin'd: and at the end of a large Walk planted with Cypress-trees, stands a neat piece of building, but altogether neglected. Upon the left-hand whereof is a great Pond pav'd with Free-stone, being all the beauties of the Garden: which, it is true, was full of Fruit-trees, Roses and Jasmins; yet, for want of order, it look'd like a Wilderness.

From the Garden to the Hill is a Plain of two leagues long, and one broad; which is all but one large Vinyard belonging to several persons. Beyond the Vineyard rise very high Mountains, from whence fall several little Springs that form a River, which is call'd Bend-Emir, from the name of a Town where the biggest Spring rises. This River of Bend-Emir waters the whole Vineyard of Schiras; where it never rains from Spring till Autumn: which is the reason that in the Summer there is no water in the very Channel next the City.

Their Wines are the best in Persia; but there is not so great a quantity made as people imagin. For, of all this great Vineyard, and in all the places round about the City for four or five leagues together, good part of the Grapes are dri'd, and a greater quantity pickl'd: and of the Wine, there are many Vessels full, which are burnt for the benefit of the poor Travellers, and Carriers, who find it a great refreshment to drink it with water.

Their Wine, as all other things, is sold by weight and not by measure. In the year 1666, a most plentiful year for Wine, the Provision of the King's House amounted to 50000 Mens of Keukné, or the ancient Men containing nine pound of ours, at sixteen ounces to the pound, (being the only weight for Wine,) and the King allows as much to the Franks, as for his own Household. The Jews of Schiras, who boast themselves of the Tribe of Levi, made above a hunder'd and ten thousand Mens, it being their chiefest livelihood; but the Governour of Schiras knows how to share with them in their profit. The whole account of Wine made at Schiras amounts to 20025 Mens, or 4125 Tuns, at three hunder'd pints to the Tun.

In Schiras is an ancient Mosquee, wherein is the Sepulcher of a Sadi, whom the Persians esteem the best of their Poets. It has been a very fair one, accompani'd with a large Building, which was once a Colledg; but it runs to ruine, as do also many other Edifices within the City. Just against this Mosquee you descend by a pair of Stairs into a large Well, at the bottom whereof is a Vase full of Fish, which no body dares to touch, it being Sacriledg to rob the Sadi of what belongs to him. A little beyond this Mosquee, upon a high Rock, stand the ruines of a Castle; and upon the top of all the Rock is a square Well cut out of the Rock. It is very deep, and ten or twelve foot broad: formerly, they told me, their Adulteresses were all thrown into it. There is one wonderful Well in this City; which is 15 years rising, and 15 years falling; that is, the water is one fifteen years rising to the top, and another fifteen years sinking to the bottom.

There are in Schiras two or three Bazars well built, through the midst whereof the water runs in a Channel.

To the South-west, a good league from the City, there is a little Hill divided from the great Mountain, upon which Hill are three Gates to be seen, the remainder der of an Idolatrous Tempel. There were four Gates, but the South-Gate is tumbl'd down: the reſt are ſtanding, compos'd of three Stones: Upon both the Stones that make the Jaums, there are two figures in half Relief, with their faces one looking upon another, with their arms extended; one holding in his hand a Pan, out of which iſſues a flame of fire; and the other a Towel folded up. The other Statue holds as it were a Purſe in one hand, and a bowl of Fire in the other; the Figures being as big as the Life, only their faces are ſpoil'd; and as for the other doors, they are both the ſame.

Two Muſquet-ſhot from thence, in a plain, riſes a little Mountain, from the North-ſide of which fall many Springs that meet in a large Pond full of Fiſh. Some high Trees grow there, to ſhade the Habitation of a Dervi's that lives there. The place is pleaſant, and all the Springs together fill a Channel large enough to water the neighbouring Fields. Here it was that certainly the ancient Idolaters came to waſh, and thence went to the Temple to ſay their Prayers, and make their Offerings.

Half a league beyond, at the foot of a Mountain, is a place about 500 paces in compaſs, whence there fall a good number of Springs that meet in a Pond, environ'd with high Trees, and full of Fiſh. In one corner of the Mountain ſtand Figures, cut out of the Rock much bigger then the Life. The two which are uppermoſt look one upon another; and that upon the left-hand carries a large Turbant, ſuch as the Grand Vizier of Conſtantinople wears when he goes to the Divan. From his Turbant to the middle of his Forehead, he was bound with the Treſſes of his own hair, the ends whereof were faſten'd together with large Buckles behind in his neck. His habit was a Robe after the ancient faſhion, with a kind of a Cutlace by his ſide. Nor did the oppoſite Statue much differ from this, only inſtead of a Turbant, he wore a kind of Miter upon his head. The two other Statues underneath the former, ſtretch'd forth their arms one to the other: the one repreſenting a Man, the other a Woman. The Man ſeem'd to preſent the Woman a Noſegay of Flowers; but in truth it was a difficult thing to diſcern them, in regard they were both cover'd with a Fig-tree that grew juſt before them out of the Rock.

About two thouſand paces farther, there is a Lake of ſalt water about ten leagues in compaſs, which is fill'd by ſeveral Springs that fall from the Mountains: and here it is that the people make a great quantity of Salt. There runs into it alſo a ſalt River, over which you croſs upon a large ſtone-Bridg about three miles from Schiras, in the way to Bander-Abaſſi.

Half a league from the City are two remarkable Wells: the one upon the top of the Mountain, the other upon the deſcent, cut out of the Rock: both of an extraordinary depth. There is no water in either, becauſe they are half full of Stones, which they that come to ſee the Wells, throw into 'em. There are alſo to be ſeen the Ruines of a Caſtle formerly built there for the Guard of the High-ways. But ſince Iman-Kouli-Kan made the new way, he caus'd all thoſe Fortreſſes to be defac'd, as being expenſive to the King, and burthenſome to the Merchant, from whom the Guards exacted Toll in thoſe places. Now all the ways are free, and the Merchants travel ſecurely.

About half a league from the City, toward the North, upon the brow of a high Mountain, ſtands a little Moſquee, like a Hermitage: and fifteen foot below it guſhes out a fair Spring, which is the beſt in the places neer to Schiras. Neer to it is a little place encompaſt with a Pale, with four Pillars that uphold a Ceeling. Here it is that a Dervis ſits, and entertains all them that come to viſit him, to whom he preſents Tobacco, according to the cuſtom of the Countrey. This place is one of the beſt Proſpects in all Syria, from whence you behold one way all the plain of Schiras, and all the City from one end to the other, with the Gardens. But people go not thither for the fair Proſpect, or to viſit the Dervis, but to admire a Cypreſs-tree not above three or four paces from the Proſpect, planted among the Rocks; and of that bigneſs, that four men can hardly fathom it: it is proportionably high, and is look'd upon to be the faireſt Cypreſs-tree in all Perſia, where ſo many grow beſides. This Tree is fed by the Spring which I have mention'd, falling ſome eight or ten foot below into a Ciſtern, which is always full; whence through a Canal it runs into a Garden in the plain ſome ſeven or eight hunder'd paces from the Mountain. In this Garden are to be seen the remains of a Palace of one of the ancient Kings of Persia: yet what is still to be seen, does not declare it to have been very magnificent. The King was call'd Padsha quiesbel, the Scald-pated King. A thing not to be wonder'd at, in regard there are few Persians but such as either have or have had scald heads.

Two leagues from Schiras, to the South-west, at the foot of the great Mountain, stands a Hermitage, call'd Pir-Boune, where three or four Dervis live, as being a pleasant place; for the Dervis always choose out the most delightful places to pitch their Tents in: where they sit smoaking their Pipes with that gravity, that if the King himself should come by, they would not stir to give him reverence. That which adds to the pleasure of that Hermitage, is a fair Spring of water that refreshes the Garden, and the number of fair Trees that are about it.

About a quarter of a league from the City, toward the West, is to be seen a Church-yard encompast with Walls; in the middle whereof, looking toward Mecca, stands a Monument very much frequented by the Dervis, and other devout people, who say their Prayers there, it being the Sepulcher of Hougia-Hafiz, for whom they have a very great veneration. The year of his decease is set down upon his Tomb; being in the year 1381: and he purchas'd that great esteem among the Persians, for having compos'd a great Book of Morality, and for that he was also one of the best Poets of his time. He has left one great Poem behind him in the praise of good Wine; which has caus'd many to aver, that Hougia-Hafiz was no good Mussul-man, in regard he has so highly prais'd a thing which is so strictly forbidd'n by the Law of Mahomet.

Neer to the Church-yard is a fair Garden, which men go to see for the beauty of the Cypress-trees, which are its chief ornament. They are to be admir'd for their height and bigness, among which, there is one that was planted by the hand of Sha-Abbas the Great himself, in the year 1607; and it may well deserve to have been planted by the hand of a Monarch; for it was bigger then the rest that had been planted above a hunder'd years before.

Without the City, upon the North-side, at the foot of the Mountain, is a Garden belonging to the ancient Kings of Persia, call'd Bag-Firdous. It is full of Fruit-trees, and Rose-trees in abundance. At the end of the Garden, upon the descent of a Hill, stands a great piece of Building, and below a large Pond affords it water. The rich Inhabitants of Schiras have been formerly very curious to have fair Gardens, and have been at great expences to that purpose. But neither at Schiras, nor at Ispahan, is there any thing that may compare with those lovely Paradises of France and Italy.

There are many Inns in Schiras, but the Franks generally lodg at the Convent of the Carmelite Friars; and they that would be more private, lodg at another House that belongs also to the same Friars, which they would fain sell, as being a charge to 'em at this time.

CHAP. XXII.

A continuation of the Road from Iſpahan to Ormus, from Schiras to Bander-Abaſſi.

THE ſixth of March, by eight of the Clock in the morning, I departed from Schiras; and after ſix hours travel through the plain that continues fertil for a league together beyond the City, I came to an Inn call'd Badaadgi. The water is bad, being as it were luke-warm. Here cold weather begins to ceaſe. The next day I ſet out by break of day, and came to a large and well-built Inn, only it ſtood remote from any Town. It is call'd Mouzafferi, and is the only place in Perſia where I met with black Saligots, or Water-nuts, as big and as good as ours in Dauphine. The Countrey breeds nothing but Goats and Sheep; and about two leagues off runs a River along by the Mountain to the Weſt.

The 18*th* I departed by day-break, and travell'd eleven hours through a ſtone-Countrey, cover'd with bitter Almond and Turpentine-Trees. I lodg'd in a fair Inn, call'd Paira, near to a River that comes from the Weſt, and makes the Countrey fertil. There is ſome Wood in the Valleys, and ſome Villages appear on the other ſide of the River toward the South.

The 19*th* I ſet out by four of the Clock in the morning, and travell'd along a Valley, wherein were many Villages receiving the benefit of the River laſt mention'd. About eight in the morning I ſtopt at an Inn built in an Octogonal form, a good league from the River, with ſeveral Villages between. The name of the Inn is Kaffer.

The 20*th* I ſet out two hours after midnight, and travell'd till ten in the morning through a dry Valley. By the way I met ſeveral Shepherds and Herdſmen, who were forſaking the hot Countreys, and driving toward Schiras for coolneſs.

They that travel upon their own Horſes, and would ſee one of the richeſt parts of Perſia, and ſome Antiquities, ſetting out from Kaffer, inſtead of following the Caravan-road, take the right-hand way by the ſide of the River, that runs a league and a half from the ſame Inn. When you have paſt the River, the way is very ſtreight, and lies for two leagues together through a ſteep Rock, the Mountain upon the right, and the River upon the left, where there is not room in ſome places for two Horſes to ride a-breſt. All along this way, toward the top of the Mountain, are little paths that lead to Caverns, ſome of which are ſo large, that they will contain two or three thouſand men. Having paſt this way, you come into a Plain call'd Dadivan, four or five leagues in circuit; the greateſt part of which is planted with Orange-trees, Citrons, and Granats. Some of theſe Orange-trees two men can hardly fathom, being as high as our Walnut-trees; and this is one of the moſt delicious ſituations in all Perſia. I have travell'd through it ſeveral times, and ſometimes only to divertiſe my ſelf. The reſt of the Plain is ſow'd with Rice and Wheat. You ſet up your Tents under theſe Trees, and then the Countrey people bring Proviſion of ſeveral ſorts, eſpecially Partridges, Hares, and wild Goats. The River that croſſes the Plain is full of Carps, Barbels, Pikes, and Grey-Fiſh. I remember one time a Countrey-man carri'd me down to the water, and before my face took up a Fiſh with his hand. He was ſo nimble at it, that having caught one which he did not think big enough, he threw it back again, and took up another. Now in regard that Travellers generally ſtay about ten or twelve days in that place, the Tumblers that live there-abouts, fail not to come and give you a Viſit, to ſhew ye ſome of their tricks, and to taſt your Schiras Wine. The Engliſh and Hollanders uſually ſpend the end of the Summer in this Plain, for the benefit of the River, and the Trees: which become ſo large and fair, by means of the River, which the Countrey-men bring in by Canals, and ſhut it up in Ponds, among the Trees, to water their Grounds; which is all the good this River does in Perſia: for all the reſt of its courſe is through cragged Rocks, and ſalt Marſhes.

The 20th of March, by ten in the morning, I came to an Inn which was call'd Mouſhek, which is a lone-Houſe at the foot of a Rock. There is a Spring about five hunder'd paces from it, but the water is hot, and has a ſulphury taſt; ſo that the Cattel will hardly drink it. Therefore you muſt go to a Ciſtern about two Muſquet-ſhot from the Inn, where there is one newly ſet up, inſtead of another that was there before, into which a Jew once chanc'd to fall in, and was therefore broken by the ſuperſtitious Mahometans.

Three quarters of a league from Mouſhetz are two roads that lead to Lar, the one for the Camels, the other for the Horſes and Mules. The firſt is the longeſt by three days journey, and is call'd the Road of the Deſert; for after you have paſt a great Town inhabited only by Camel-Maſters, where you lye the firſt night, between that and Lar, you ſhall meet with nothing of Houſes but only Herdſmens Tents, that feed ſometimes in one place, ſometimes in another. Upon the Camels Road there are another ſort of Fowl like the great Partridges in their bodies, but their legs and feet reſemble thoſe of wild Ducks. The Camels take this Road, becauſe it is impoſſible for them to paſs the Mountain Jarron, over which the Horſes and Mules are hardly able to travel.

I ſet out from Mouſhek the 21th of March, at two in the morning, and having travell'd till eight through a plain, but ſtony Countrey, I came to the little City of Jarron, which is, rather to be call'd a Forreſt of Palm-trees that bear excellent Dates. I lodg'd in an Inn five hunder'd paces from the City, and ſtaid there two days.

The 24th, ſetting out preſently after midnight, I travell'd a good hour, and then I began to mount the ſteep Mountain of Jarron, which is very high, and very long; but the deſcent is the moſt dangerous that ever I ſaw in all my Travels; and beſides that, the Moon did not ſhine. Being at the top, after you have deſcended three or four hunder'd paces, you meet with a Bridg of one Arch, that reaches from one Mountain to another; a bold piece of Architecture, not enough to be admir'd, being rais'd at the charges of Imam-Kouli Kan for the benefit of Travellers. Being come to the bottom of this, you muſt paſs two others as ſteep in their aſcent as in the deſcents upon the top of one of which ſtands a Ciſtern, which, though it be very large, is generally emptied by the end of the Summer. Upon theſe Mountains there is ſuch an infinite quantity of Partrids that a man cannot miſs that will but ſhoot. By eight in the Morning I came to an Inn which is call'd Shakal, which is a lone Houſe in a Deſert Countrey, but ſtor'd with bitter Almond-trees, and Turpentine-trees. Approaching neer to the Inn, you meet with two or three Ciſterns, which are a great comfort to Travellers, water being very ſcarce upon this Road. There are at Shakal nine or ten Kadars for the Guard of the Road, who are alſo Maſters of the Inn: So ſoon as you are alighted, they ask you if you will eat any Kid, being ſure of their blow, and having no more to do but to go to the Mountain and fetch one, where they ſwarm. There are ſtore of Partridges, which are almoſt as big as Pullets; of which you may eaſily kill as many as you pleaſe.

The 25th I travell'd five hours, from morning till noon. An hour after I took Horſe, I met with a Mountain, the deſcent whereof was very ſteep. They call it the Mountain of Huſhen, at the foot whereof is a Fountain of excellent water. A good league farther you meet with a fair Inn call'd Moutzeré, in the midſt of a pleaſant Grove, where there is an excellent Spring of water; but becauſe there is no food to be had, you muſt go as far as Detadombé, a Village ſeated in a plain. A quarter of a league on this ſide, upon the top of a Mountain, appears the ruins of an old Caſtle; the Village it ſelf being ſurrounded with Palm-trees. The Inn is a good one, provided with a very good Ciſtern.

The 25th I travell'd through a plain for three hours, and ſtopt at Banarou, a little City well built at the foot of a high Mountain, upon which appears the remains of a large Caſtle. Benarou is the Frontier Town of the Province of Fars, bordering upon the Province of Lar.

The 26th I departed an hour after midnight, and travell'd till nine in the morning, partly through the Plain, and partly through the Mountains, where I ſaw an old Tower for the guard of the Road. I ſtaid at Bibry, a little City ſeated upon a plain, that borders upon a high Mountain. The Inn is new, and very magnificently cently built by the Mother of Aimas, Kan of Lar, when the great Sha-Abbas took this Countrey from the Gaures, whom he conſtrain'd to turn Mahumetans.

The 27*th* I ſet out at four of the Clock in the morning, and about ſeven I paſt through a Village ſeated in a ſmall plain. A league from thence I lodg'd in an Inn call'd Pai-Cotali; that is to ſay, the foot of the Mountain, as being built at the foot of the Mountain. From thence to Lar is not above four or five hours travelling; but the way is very bad, and ſeveral ſwift Torrents are to be paſt over.

You may take another Road from Bibry, upon the right-hand toward the Weſt; it is the ſhorter way by two or three leagues: but ſo bad, and ſo narrow, that in many places two Horſemen cannot ride a-breſt, being for the moſt part all Rocks and Precipices.

Lar is the Capital City of the Province of the ſame name, which formerly bore the title of a Kingdom. It is but of an ordinary bigneſs, enclos'd on both ſides with high Mountains, being built round about a Rock, upon which there ſtands a Caſtle of Free-ſtone, wherein the King keeps a Garriſon. The whole Country is very hot, nor have they any water but Rain water, which they preſerve in Ciſterns, and which ſometimes cauſes a wide Torrent that runs by one ſide of the City, and falls from a Caſcade two ſtories high, made of Free-ſtone. In the City and parts adjacent, grow a great number of trees, eſpecially Date trees and Tamarisk. The Gardens alſo and Mountains are full of Orange trees.

There are but two Inns in Lar, the one within the City, which is not a very good one; the other at the end of the City towards Ormus, which would be convenient, but that it is always afloat when the Rains fall; for which reaſon the Franks generally lye at the Hollanders Houſe at the end of the City. And there is a neceſſity for ſtaying at Lar, to change the Camels; for the Camels that come from Iſpahan can go no further; every City having their particular priviledges. Which ſometimes proves prejudicial to the Merchant, in regard the Governour will delay the change of the Camels till he is preſented.

The Fortreſs of Lar takes up the whole ſurface of the top of the Rock; and there is but one way to climb it up, with great difficulty. It is more long than broad; and the four corners are fortifi'd with four Baſtions, or Bulwarks, between which are rais'd ſeveral Towers, for the Souldiers Lodgings. That Fortreſs is the Royal Priſon, whither the King ſends ſuch Priſoners as he takes in war, or ſurprizes by ſtratagem. I met with two there, one a Prince of Georgia, the other of Mengrelia. The two Princes had each of them a Toman a day allow'd them, and ten or twelve Servants to wait upon them. Upon one of the corners of the Caſtle, toward the Weſt, was built a Banquetting Houſe with three or four Chambers. In the middle of the Court ſtands the Magazine, full of Bows and Arrows, Bucklers and Muskets, enough to arm fifteen hundred men. For the Inhabitants of the Province, but more eſpecially of the City of Lar, are accounted the beſt Muſqueteers in Perſia, and the beſt at making the Barrels of Muskets, all but the Breach, which they know not how to order ſo well as we. The Governours Houſe anſwers to the great Road; but there is nothing at all of neatneſs without, only before the door there is a good handſome Court, about ſixty paces ſquare, and clos'd in with Walls, which leads you into two large Bazars of good Stone, very well arch'd.

The moſt part of the Inhabitants of Lar are Jews, who are famous for ſeveral Silk Manufactures, eſpecially for making neat Girdles. The Countrymen wear upon their heads a kind of a felt of fine wool, and very well wrought. It reſembles a Cap not yet ſhap'd, with four Corners behind, and cut on the ſides; and theſe ſorts of Caps are made at Kerman.

There are an infinite number of Ciſterns, as well within the City, as in the parts adjacent; and all but little enough, in regard that ſometimes it does not rain for three years together. When the Rains fall they do not fill their Ciſterns the firſt day, but rather cover them quite up, till the earth be well ſoak'd. Now for the diſtribution of this water they take an excellent courſe; for they never keep open above three Ciſterns at a time; and when they do op'n them, the Governour or ſome other perſon appointed for that purpoſe, is preſent; ſo precious is water in that place, though never so bad. The water thus standing in the Cisterns sometimes for many years together, breads worms, so that whither you strain it, or boil it, there will appear a kind of foulness in it, which is the seed of these worms. And this corruption it is that breeds worms in the legs and feet of men; which puts me in mind, that after my return to Paris, the fifth time of my travelling, I had one came out of my left foot an Ell an a half long, and another from under the ankle of my right foot half an Ell long.

The first of April I set out from Lar by five in the morning, and travell'd till three in the afternoon, through a barren stony Country, except it were only one Village call'd Tcherkah, near to which I met with some Corn-land, and several Palm-trees. I lodg'd at a little Inn call'd Shamzenghi. It is low, built like a Cross, with four doors to receive the cool winds every way. All the Inns are built in this fashion between this and Bander, and near to one another for the ease of Travellers. As for the Beasts, they lye without, for they have no Stables. All the Houses from Lar to Ormus are built after one manner. For there is a kind of a Pipe, like a Chimney, that runs from the bottom to the top to gather wind.

The second I left Shamzenghi about four in the afternoon, because the heat is cool'd by a gentle breeze toward the evening. Three hours I travell'd through a barren Plain, afterwards over most fearful Rocks, and about ten at night I came to Cormont, a great Village well stor'd with Palm-trees.

From Lar to Cormont is the worst way in all Persia. For many times there is no water to be found.

The third, I parted from Cormont a little after midnight; and having travell'd seven hours in very bad way, full of great stones and filthy puddles, I came to a new Inn call'd Tenquidalen. In the middle of it is a little vase of running water, fed by a little stream that falls from the Mountain. But the water being something brackish, they have since that built a very fair Cistern. They also broach'd the Mountain to bring the water into a Plain, which was barren before, but is now fruitful, and beautifi'd with two good Villages. This was done by a rich Merchant, whose Children enjoy the Revenues of both.

The fourth, I set forward an hour after midnight, and travell'd through an uninhabited Countrey, full of wide Torrents when the rain falls. There are but two small Inns upon the Road, and about eight in the morning I arriv'd at that which they call Gourba-Sarghant. It was built with the Money which a Merchant of Ormus left for that purpose; whose strength fail'd him in that very place, for want of a resting place. This Inn is not far from a Village that stands upon the Mountain to the North.

The fifth, setting out a little after midnight, I travell'd till seven in the morning through a dry and desert Countrey, yet stor'd with Lentisk trees, and lay at a good Village call'd Cauvreshan, where the people were mowing large Fields of Barly. Here, if the Inn be full, you may lye at the Countrey-mens Houses, who are accustom'd to entertain Travellers, and get well by it. This place is famous for water-Melons, as big as our Pumpkins; and are the best in all Persia. The meat is very red, and as sweet as Sugar, which is a great refreshment to Travellers. The Kelonter of the place gave me two Raddishes, one weighing 30, the other 45 pounds, and were very good meat.

The 6th I set out after midnight, and travell'd till it was day through plains of Sand, over which it is impossible to find the way without a guide. About three a Clock in the morning I cross'd over two Bridges joyn'd together by a long Causey. Before I came to the first, I rode over another for a good quarter of a league, which Causey runs on a great way to the second Bridg, under which flows a salt River; the shoar of which is full of moving sands; so that before those Bridges were made, it was dangerous to foard it without a guide.

This Causey and the two Bridges were made and built by a Persian, whose name was Aly; who wanting employment at home, apply'd himself to the King of Golconda, who lik'd him so well, that he made him General of his Army. Being thus advanc'd, he also turn'd Merchant, and trading first with one Vessel, then with two, got a great Estate. At length, all that he had thus got in forty years, to get himself a name in Persia, he employ'd in making this Causey and the two Bridges.

These

Theſe Bridges are both built over a River that comes from toward Kerman, and is ſwell'd by other ſtreams that fall from the Mountains with a great noiſe and diſcharges it ſelf into the Perſian Gulph, neer to Bander Congo; but becomes brackiſh by paſſing through Mountains that are nothing but Salt.

From the great Bridg to Guitchi is one of the moſt pleaſant Countries in all Perſia, being a continu'd Grove. Guitchi is a place accommodated with two Inns, one a very fair one, and convenient; the other very ill ſeated, by reaſon of the duſt that continually annoys it ſtanding upon a ſandy ground. It ſtands neer ten or twelve Arabian Tents; ſo that as ſoon as you come to the Inn, the Arabian Women preſently bring Milk and Butter, and other refreſhments.

A league and a half from Guitchi you meet with two Roads, one upon the left-hand that ſeems more beaten, the other upon the right. There a man may eaſily be deceiv'd that has no guides. For the left-hand way is a dangerous paſſage, and a kind of a continu'd Labyrinth among Rocks and Precipices. The right-hand way, which is the beſt, is all upon the ſand to Bander-Abaſſi, and is uſually a days journey. You meet with two Inns by the way, the laſt of which is call'd Bend Ali, built by the Sea-ſide.

From Bend-Ali to Bander-Abaſſi, is but a little more then two leagues through a Countrey abounding in Palm-trees.

CHAP. XXIII.

Of the Iſland of Ormus, and of Bander-Abaſſi.

Ormus is an Iſland in 92. d. 42. m. of Longitude, and in 25. d 30. m. of Latitude. It lies at the mouth of the Perſian Gulph, two good Leagues from the firm Land. There is neither tree nor herb that grows in it: for it is all over cover'd with Salt, which is very good and as white as ſnow. And as for the black ſhining Sand-duſt of Ormus, it is very much us'd for ſtandiſhes.

Before the Portugueſes came to Ormus, there was a City where the Kings of Ormus, who where alſo Kings of Larr, reſided. When the Portugals took it there were in it two young Princes, Sons of the deceaſed King, whom they carri'd into Spain. Where, in regard they were handſomely proportion'd, though ſomewhat ſwarthy, the King entertain'd them very kindly, and gave them an honourable allowance. One day that he had ſhew'd them the Eſcurial, and all the chief pieces of Architecture in Madrid, the King ask'd them what they thought of living in Spain. To whom they anſwer'd, that they had ſeen nothing but what was worthy admiration, but then fetching a deep ſigh, and perceiving the King deſirous to know the meaning of it, they gave him to underſtand that it was for grief that they muſt never more ſit under their own Tree. For near to the City of Ormus was a Banians tree, being the only tree that grew in the Iſland.

The Portugals being maſters of the Iſland from an ill-built City, rear'd it to that hight of Magnificence which that Nation admires; ſo that the very bars of their doors and windows were all guilt. The Fortreſs was a noble thing, and in good repair: and they had alſo a ſtately Church dedicated to the Virgin, where they were alſo wont to walk. For other place of promenading they had none. Since the Perſians took it, the Caſtle indeed ſtands in good repair, with a Garriſon in it: but the City is gone to ruine; for the Dutch carried moſt of the ſtones away to build Battavia.

Between the Iſland of Ormus, and the Continent the Sea is not very deep, for the great ſhips that ſail in and out of the Gulf, paſs by the other ſide of the Iſland. As for the Fortreſs which ſtands upon a poynt of the Iſland, it is almoſt encompaſs'd with the Sea, and lyes right over againſt Perſia.

Bander-Abaſſi, ſo call'd becauſe the great Sha-Abbas the firſt brought it into reputation, is at preſent a City reaſonably well built, and ſtor'd with large ware-houſes, over which are the lodgings of the Merchants. While the Portugueſes kept Ormus, though they liv'd in the City, all the trade was at Bander-Abaſſi, as being the moſt ſecure Landing-place upon all the Coaſt. About 25 years ago it was an op'n town, but becauſe it was an eaſie thing then to get into the Town, and rob the Customehouse in the night, it has bin since enclos'd with walls. To this place come all the ships that bring Commodities from India for Persia, Turkie, or any part of Asia or Europe. And indeed it would be much more frequented by the Merchants from all Regions and Countries.

But the Air of Bandar is so unwholesome and so hot, that no strangers can live there, in probability of health, unless it be in the months of December, January, February and March; though the Natives of the Country may perhaps stay without prejudice to the end of April. After that they retire to the cooler Mountains, two or three days journey off, for five or six months, where they eat what they gain'd before. They that venture to stay at Gomron during the hot weather, get a malignant Fever, which if they scape death, is hardly ever cur'd. However it bequeaths the yellow Jaundies during life to the party. March being pass'd the wind changes, and blowing at west south west, in a short time it grows so hot and so stifling, that it almost takes away a mans breath. This wind is by the Arabians call'd El-Samiel, or the poysonous wind, by the Persians Bade-Sambour, because it suffocates and kills presently. The flesh of them that are thus stifl'd feels like a glewie fat, and as if they had been dead a month before.

In the year 1632. riding from Ispahan to Bagdat, I and four more Persian Merchants had bin stifl'd but for some Arabians that were in our Company. For when they perceiv'd the wind, they caus'd us to light, lye down upon our bellies and cover our selves with our Cloaks. We lay so for half an hour, and then rising we saw our horses were in such a sweat, that they were hardly able to carry us. This happen'd to us two days journey from Bagdat. But this is observable, that if a man be in a Boat upon the water when the same wind blows, it does no harm though he were naked at the same time. Sometimes the wind is so hot that it burns like Lightning.

And as the Air of Gomron is so bad and dangerous, the soil is worth nothing: For it is nothing but Sand, nor is the water in the Cisterns very good. They that will be at the charge fetch their water from a fountain three leagues from Bander, call'd the water of Issin. Formerly there was not an herb to be seen: but by often watering the ground, Lettice, Radish and Onions have begun to grow.

The People are swarthy, and wear nothing about them but only a single shirt. Their usual dyet is dates and fish. Which is almost the dyet of their Cattel, for when they come home from browsing the barren bushes, they give them the heads and guts of their fish boyl'd, with the kernels of the Dates which they eat.

The Sea of Bander produces good Soles, good Smelts and Pilchards. They that will have oysters must have 'em caught on purpose, for the people eat none.

Upon Land they want neither for wine of Schiras nor Yesd; nor for Mutton, Pigeons and Partridge, which are their ordinary dyet.

There are two Fortresses, one upon the East, the other toward the West. The Town increases in trade and building, and fills with inhabitants, who build their houses with the remaining ruins of Ormus.

The reason why the Trade is settl'd rather at Bander Abassi, then at Bander Congo, where the Air is good and the Water excellent, is because that between Ormus and Congo lie several Islands, which make the passage for ships dangerous, besides that the often change and veering of the wind is requir'd: neither indeed is there water enough for a Vessel of 20 or 25 guns. Then the way from Congo to Lar is very bad. From Bander Abassi, to Lar it is very good, and provided with good Inns.

From the day that a Merchant takes up mony at Gomron, he is bound to return it in three months, and the change goes from six to twelve per Cent. When the Goods come to Ispahan or any other place, the Merchant is not to touch them, till he has pay'd the money which he borrow'd, unless the Creditor will trust him farther. Some Turkish and Armenian Merchants take up money at Gomron to pay it at Surat; where they take up other money for Ispahan; at Ispahan for Erzerom or Bagdat, paying the old debt with the new sums, which they take up in each place. The money taken up at Erzerom is pai'd at Bursa, Constantinople or Smyrna. Money taken up at Bagdat is pai'd at Aleppo.

I always made accompt, that to take up money at Golconda for Ligorn or Venice, at change for change, the money returns at the cheapest rate, to 95 per Cent. but more oftentimes it amounts to a hunder'd.

Of the Road by Land from Casbin to Ispahan, to the Frontiers of the Territories of the Great Mogul, through Candahar.

All this while the Men ride upon Horses, and the goods are carri'd by Camels.

The City of Candahar is the chief of one of the Conquer'd Provinces of Persia, having been often the occasion of war between the Kings of Persia and India. At length Sha Abbas became Master of it, the Prince that then raign'd there, choosing to put himself under the Protection of the King of Persia rather then of great Mogul: but upon this condition, that the Governour should be always one of his race. And therefore Akmerdan Kan was the Son of the last Prince of Candahar. That Prince left behind him such a vast Treasure, that his Plate was all of Gold, and he had so much Gold in his Coffers, that when he went to the Great Mogul he would not accept of any thing for his maintenance, but contented himself with one of the highest Dignities in the Empire, which he enjoy'd till his death. At Jehanabad he built a most neat House, with a fair Garden upon the River.

was

He got his wealth in some measure, for the greatest part came by Inheritance, by the great advantages which he made of the Caravans that then pass'd oft'ner through Candahar then they do now adays. For by delaying the Merchants at the Custome-house, and by treating them himself, and receiving treatments from them again, he caus'd them to spend their Provision, which they were forc'd to recruit again at Candahar.

The Grand Sha Abbas left the peaceable Possession of Candahar to Sha-Sefi his Grand-child. In whose time Alimerdan-Kan deliver'd it up to the Grand Mogul. Sha Abbas the Second retook it in the year 1650. Whereupon Sha-gehan sent his eldest Son to drive him out. But though his Army consisted of three hundred thousand men, yet the place was so well defended that he lost the best part of his Army before it. The next year Shajehan sent another Army under the Command of Sultan-Sujah, but he had no better success then his Brother. Thereupon Begum Sahek, Sha-jehan's eldest Daughter, and passionately belov'd by him even to Incest, bearing the greatest sway in the Kingdom, and having a Vast Treasure, rais'd an Army at her own charges, and made Aurengzeb Commander of it. After many assaults, Aurengzeb discoursing with his Generals one day who should have the honour if he took the City, and being told that his Sister would have the honour in regard she had rais'd the Army, the Prince either jealous of his Sister, or else not loath to give occasion of being envy'd by his Brothers, assaulted it no more, and when the rains came, rais'd his siege.

Thus I have finish'd the most considerable Observations as well in reference to Turkie as to Persia. I have been curious to understand things, and have lookt wich a strict eye upon them: and I am oblig'd to inform the Reader, that he must not travel into Asia, in expectation of mending his experience in any of the nobler Arts of Painting, Sculpture, Goldsmiths work, or Turning. As for the Coverlets, Embroideries, Tissues of Gold and Silver, which are made in Persia, and which we admir'd formerly in France, all these give place to our new manufactures. Insomuch that the Persians themselves admire the rich goods of Europe, and when we carry any thither, they are immediately bought up by the King and the Nobility. They neither understand any thing of Architecture: nor is there any thing in all Asia that equalls the Riches and Beauty of the Loure, or of any other of the Kings houses in France, which infinitely excell in workmanship all the magnificence of the Eastern Monarchs. Which has made me with astonishment admire that so many Travellers have ascrib'd to Persia and other Regions of Asia, those beauties for which they were never beholding either to Art or Nature. For if all they have said had been true, those wonders could never have escaped my sight; and I dare assure the Reader that I have describ'd the naked truth of things as really they are.

THE FIGURES Of the PIECES of Gold, Silver and Copper: AND OF The Sorts of Shells aud Almonds that paſs for MONEY over all ASIA.

THIS Money (Fig. 1.) is call'd Larin, and ſignifies the ſame with our Crowns. The Five Pieces are as much in value as one of our Crowns; and the Ten Half-Larins as much. Only the Five Larins want in weight Eight Sous of our Crown. This is that which the Emirs, or Princes of Arabia take for the Coining of their Money; and the profit which they make by the Merchants that travel through the Deſart, either into Perſia or the Indies. For then the Emirs come to the Caravans, to take their Tolls, and to change their Crowns, Reals, or Ducats of Gold, for theſe Larins. For they muſt of neceſſity paſs that way. And they muſt uſe very ſmooth words to boot; for there is nothing to be got by rough Languages. If they ſee the Merchants will not change their Money, then will they refuſe to take their Toll; but making as if they had not time to caſt up the accompt, they go a hunting, and leave the Merchants fifteen or twenty Days without ſaying any thing more to them; while they in the mean time ſpend their Proviſions, not knowing where to get more. If the Caravan goes on without paying their Tolls, theſe Arabian Princes will either cut them in Pieces, or take away their Camels, or rob them of all they have, as they have ſeveral times done. In one Journey that I made, one of theſe Princes kept us one and twenty days; after which we thought our ſelves happy to be quit of him, when we had given him whatever he demanded. If theſe five Larins did but weigh as much as the Crown, or Real of Spain, the Merchants would never be much troubled. But when they come to Perſia, or the Indies, they muſt carry their Money to the Mint, as I have ſaid in another place, and loſe above eight Sous in a Crown, which amounts to 14 per Cent. As for what remains, the Larins are one of the ancient Coins of Asia; and though at this day they are onely currant in Arabia, and at Balsara, nevertheless, from Bragdatt to the Island of Ceylan, they traffick altogether with the Larin, and all along the Persian Golf; where they take 80 Larins for one Toman, which is 50 Abassi's.

The Author not having given an account of the weight or fineneſs of the Coins he treats of, but having only expreſs'd their value in French Livres, it is thought fit for the better reduction thereof into Engliſh Coin, to advertiſe, That Three French Livres make a French Crown, which paſſes in Exchange from 54 pence to 58 pence half-penny; ſo that a French Livre may be in value as the Exchange goes, from 18 pence to 19 pence half-penny. And twenty Sous make a Livre.

The Money currant under the Dominions of the Great Mogul.

ALL the Gold and Silver which is brought into the Territories of the Great Mogul, is refined to the highest perfection before it be coined into Money.

The Roupy of Gold weighs 2 Drams and a half, and 11 Grains, and is valued in the Country at 14 Roupies of Silver. We reckon the Roupy of Silver at 30 Sous. So that a Roupy of Gold comes to 21 Livres of France; and an Ounce of Gold to 58 Livres, and 4 Deneer's. This Gold is like that which we buy at 54 Livres an Ounce. And if you bring this Gold in Ingots, or Ducats of European Gold, you shall have always 7 and a half profit; if you can scape paying any thing to the Custom-houses. The Half-Roupy comes to 10 Livres 10 Sous; and the Quarter-Roupy to 5 Livres 5 Sous. As I have said, you must reckon the Silver Roupy at 30 Sous, though it weigh not above 3 Drams; whereas our pieces of 30 Sous weigh 3 Drams, and half 4 grains; but the Roupy is much the better Silver. In a word, they that understand Traffick well, and carry hence Gold or Silver to the Territories of the Great Mogul, get always 7 or 8 per Cent. profit, provided they take care to shun the Custom-houses. For if you pay them, the 7 or 8 per Cent. which you might make profit, goes to them; and so the Roupy comes to 30 Sous, the Half to 15, and the Quarter to 7 and a half, the eighth Part to 3 Sous and 9 Deneers.

As for their Copper Money, sometimes 'tis worth more, sometimes less, as Copper comes to the Mint. But generally the biggest sort is worth 2 Sous of our Money, the next 1 Sous, the next to that 6 Deneers.

As for their Shell Money, the nearer you go to the Sea, the more you give for a Pecha, for they bring them from Maldives. Fifty or sixty of these make a whcih is that piece of Coin that is worthbut 6 Deneers.

For their Money of Mamoudi's, half Mamoudi's, and Almonds, all that sort of Money is only currant in the Province of Guzerat, the principal Cities whereof are Surat, Barocha, Cambaya, Broudra and Amadabat. Five Mamoudi's go for a Crown, or a Real. For small Money they make no use of these Shells, but of little Almonds, which are brought from about Ormus, and grow in the Desarts of the Kingdom of Larr. If you break one of the Shells, it is impossible to eat the Almond, for there is no Coloquintida so bitter; so that there is no fear lest the Children should eat their small Money. They have also those little pieces of Copper which are call'd Pecha, 6 Deneer's in value. They give 20 for a Mamoudi, and 40 Almonds for a Pecha; sometimes you may have 44, according to the quantity which is brought. For some years the Trees do not bear, and then the price of this sort of Money is very much raised in that Country; and the Bankers know how to make their benefit.

I have mark'd two ſorts of Roupies, the one ſquare, the other round. The ſquare one is as they coin'd it anciently; the round ones are as they make them at this day.

The Money of a King and two Raja's, all three Tributaries to the Great Mogul.

Maton-cha is a Tributary to the Great Mogul; yet he has power to coin Money. When you are at Agra, the Territories of this King lye to the North; and before you can come at them, you muſt paſs over very high and cragged Mountains. 'Tis a good Country, where are all things neceſſary for the ſupport of humane life, except Rice, which is a great inconvenience to the Inhabitants, who being all Idolaters, are depriv'd thereby of their chiefeſt delicacies, in regard they feed upon nothing ſo heartily as upon Rice. They have excellent Corn and Grapes, but they make no Wine, though they make ſome Aqua vitæ. They want neither Oxen nor Cows; but their Horſes are little, weak and ill-ſhap'd. All the Trade which theſe people have with their Neighbours, is in Copper, whereof they have two extraordinary Mines, from whence they furniſh the greateſt part of the Mogul's Territories; out of which they have Salt in exchange, not having any of their own. This Salt coſts them dear, in regard it is four months travel to the place where they fetch it, that is to ſay, from the Territories of Maton-cha to the Indian Coaſt towards Bacaim. They travel upon Oxen, and the ſame Oxen carry their Copper. There muſt be alſo ſome Mines of Lapis-Lazuli and Garnets in that Country, in regard they bring ſeveral from thence.

Fig. 1, and 2. is the Money of Maton-cha.

Fig. 1. is the Silver-Money, which weighs not above one dram and 19 grains, and is of the ſame goodneſs as the Roupy. The half-Roupy goes for 15 Sous, and this for 16 Sous, which is ſix and a half per Cent. more. But certain it is, that the more Northward you travel that way, Gold and Silver is more ſcarce. Fig. 2. Theſe pieces of Copper go for the value of a Pecha of the Great Mogul; they are heavier by half, but the Copper is not ſo good as that of Pegu or Japan.

Fig. 3, and 4. is the Money of the Raja of Parta Jajoumola.

The Raja of Parta Jajoumola, is one of the great Raja's on the other ſide of the Gagens. His Territories are directly North of Patna, nigh to the great Mogul's to whom he is Tributary, and bordering upon the King of Bantam. He is bound every year to ſend an Ambaſſador with twenty Elephants to the Governor of Patna, who ſends them to the Great Mogul. The greateſt part of his revenue conſiſts in Elephants, Muſk and Rhubarb. He lays alſo a great Impoſition upon Salt, as well that which is ſpent by his own Subjects, as upon that which is carried abroad. This is all Sea-Coaſt Salt, which comes from the Territories of the Great Mogul, and is brought from the Sea-Coaſt to Ganges, and ſo over Ganges is carried as far as the fiftieth and five and fiftieth Degree. They lade above 150000 Oxen; and for every burthen they pay a Roupy at the Salt-Pits, and no more afterwards through the whole Kingdom. Had this Raja of Parta Salt of his own, he would never be Tributary to the Great Mogul.

Fig. 5, and 6. is the Money of the Raja of Ogen.

The Raja of Ogen is alſo a Tributary to the Great Mogul; his Country lies between Brampour, Seronge and Amadabat; and it is one of the beſt Soils in the Indies. His Silver Money passes no-where but in his own Country, not being suffer'd in the Mogul's. His Silver Money goes for a quarter of a Roupy, at 7 Sous 6 Deneers; but the Silver is base. His Copper Money goes for 6 Deneers, and is currant in the Mogul's Dominions as far as Agra. For his smaller Money he makes use of those Shells whereof we have already spoken.

Pieces of Gold called Pagods, which are currant in the Territories of the King of Golconda, the King of Visapour, the Great Raja of Carnatica, the Raja of Velouche, and at the Diamond Mines.

ALL the Pieces of Gold represented in the Plate of Golconda-Money, pass through all these Countries at the same value, and are about the weight of our half Pistol; but the Gold is of a baser Mettal, so that an Ounce is not worth above 42 or 43 Livres; not going for more than four Roupies.

Fig. 1. Is one of the ancient Pagods, at the time when the Raja's were Masters of the Kingdom of Golconda, and they are only stampt upon one side as you see. They are as heavy as the new ones; and though they be no better Gold, yet some years since they went at 20, and 25 per Cent. more than the new ones; the reason is, for that the Bankers being all Idolaters, they are so superstitious as to believe, that if they melt down that Money, some Calamity will befall their Country; and they hold this for such a certain truth, That for fear the King of Golconda should melt it, they paid him for certain Years 20000 Pagods. But you must observe, that these old Pagods are no-where currant but in the Kingdom of Golconda. For my part, I think it is more for their profit than out of any Superstition, that they make use of them in that manner. For in all the Kingdom of Golconda, in matter of trade, they never mention any but the old Pagods, though they make their payments in new Pagods, or Roupies; and in this case they who receive those new Pagods, or those Roupies, play their game so well, that they gain a fourth part, or a half, and sometimes one per Cent. alledging for the reason, that those new Pagods are either the King of Visapour's, or the Raja of Carnatica's, or the Raja of Velouche's, or the English, or the Hollanders. And they make as much of the Roupies; for there is no considerable payment made, which is not received by the Cheraff or Banker, making it good to the Seller, who sometimes has no need of his Money in a Month or two, and so he receives the interest of it, though it be but for two days. If the payment be made in old Pagods, and that the sum amount to two or three hundred, or three or four thousand, the Banker takes them all, and viewing them one after another, he divides them into five or six parts; and then poising them all, he sayes of some, that they are more us'd than others, and that having passed through many hands, there is a waste of the mettal about one per Cent. Others, sayes he, want not above half one per Cent. others but a fourth part. These Pagods have been bor'd some half thorough, others a quarter thorough; and it is a wonderful thing what this boring amounts to. For in regard these Pagods are very thick, and cannot be clipt, those that are Masters of the trade, take a Piercer, and pierce the Pagod thorough the side, half way or more, taking out of one piece as much Gold as comes to two or three Sous. And provided they be not taken in the fact, they chuse rather to follow this Trade than any other; there being no handycraft Tradesmen among the Indians, that gain more than three Sous a day. After they have drawn out the piercer, they knock upon the holes with a little Hammer, and are so cunning in closing up the holes again, that he must be very skilful indeed, that can discover the cheat. For this reason, they never receive any payment till they have shew'n the Pieces to the Cheraff or Banker; and though he looks only on two or three Pieces, he takes a Sous. They have also another cunning Trick, and the more the Banker is in credit, the more he gains; for if he makes any payment, according to the quantity of the ſum, he puts the Pagods by fifty or a hundred together in little bags, and ſeals them up with his Seal, and writes upon the bag the number of the Pagods within; and ſo delivers them to him to whom he makes the payment. When the Party makes uſe of them, he never opens the bag, but gives them as they are, to him to whom they are due; who goes to the ſame Banker that ſeal'd the bags. The Banker ſeeing his Seal whole, makes anſwer, That the Pieces are good, and in that manner they ſhall paſs all the Year without opening the bags. But when ever they change the hand, they ſend for the ſame Banker, who always will have ſo much per Cent. for his Viſit. But, as I have ſaid, the Merchant leaves them in his hand to get Intereſt; who then pays Eight per Cent. for a Year, and ſometimes Twelve. Thus the Bankers have always the greateſt part of the Money in the Kingdom in their hands, of which they make large profit. 'Tis the Cuſtom in that Country, every Month to pay the Soldiery; but for the moſt part, the Soldiers, Captains, and other Officers will not ſtay till the Month be up, but come to the Bankers, who diſcount after the rate of Eighteen or Twenty per Cent. by the Year, beſides that they pay them in theſe Pagods, againſt which others would often object. If there be any large Diamond to be ſold in any Country, theſe Bankers have intelligence of it preſently; or if there be any fair Ruby, 'tis not long before they have it in pawn; for every Year when the Merchants return from Pegu, and have any Rubies, moſt commonly they are in debt; and in regard it is the Cuſtom to pay within fifteen dayes after the Merchant comes aſhoar, he pawns his beſt goods he has for payment, as well of the freight of the Ship, as of what he may have taken up at Pegu. After that he ſells the worſt of his goods to pay the Banker, who lent him the Money upon his arrival. Thoſe that work in the Diamond Mines, or the Merchants that hire the Mine, when they have any fair Stones, they ſell them to theſe Bankers, becauſe there is ready Money; or elſe they pawn them to the Bankers, till they can find a Chapman to buy them.

Fig. 7, and 8. The Raja of Velouche's Pagod.
Fig. 9, 10, 11, and 12. are the Half-Pagods of thoſe Kings and Raja's.
Fig. 13, 14, 15, 16, and 17. are little Pieces of Gold call'd Fanos, which are of different value. There are ſome whereof ſix go to a Crown; others from ten to fifteen; and ſome are very baſe mettal. This is the Money that paſſes all along the Coaſt of Coromandel; from Cape Comorin as far as Bengala. And they have very little other than that, beſides the Pecha of Copper, and the Shells, which paſs for ſmall Money.

The Money which the Engliſh and Hollanders Coin in the Indies.

Figure 1, and 2. is the Money which the Engliſh coin in their Fort St. George, or elſe at Madreſpatan, upon the Coaſt of Coromandel. They call them Pagods, as thoſe of the Kings and Raja's of the Country are call'd. They are of the ſame weight, the ſame goodneſs, and paſs for the ſame Value. Formerly the Engliſh never coin'd any Silver or Copper Money; for in ſome parts that border upon the Indians, where they have Factories, as at Surat, Maſlipatan, or at Bantam, they find it more profitable to carry Gold from England, than Silver; Gold lying in leſs room, and not being ſo troubleſome; beſides, that by carrying Gold they more eaſily eſcape the paying thoſe Cuſtoms, which the Kings impoſe upon Gold and Silver. But ſince the preſent King of England land married the Princeſs of Portugal, who had in part of her Portion the famous Port of Bombaye, where the Engliſh are very hard at work to build a ſtrong Fort, they coin both Silver, Copper and Tinn. But that Money will not go at Surat, nor in any part of the Great Mogul's Dominions, or in any of the Territories of the Indian Kings; only it paſſes among the Engliſh in their Fort, and ſome two or three Leagues up in the Country, and in the Villages along the Coaſt; the Country people that bring them their Wares, being glad to take that Money; otherwiſe they would ſee but very little ſtirring, in regard the Country is very poor, and the people have nothing to ſell but Aqua vita, made of Coco-Wine and Rice.

Fig. 3 and 4. is the Gold Money which the Hollanders coin at Pelicate, which is a Fort that they poſſeſs upon the Coaſt of Coromandel. Thoſe pieces are alſo call'd Pagods, and are of the ſame weight with the others; but for the goodneſs, I think they are better by two or three in the hundred, than thoſe of the Kings and Raja's of the Country, or which the Engliſh make. I made this obſervation, being at the Diamond-Mines, and in other parts of the Indies where there is any great Trade. For the firſt thing they ask you is, Whether you have any Pagods of Pelicate; and if you have, you ſpeed much better in your buſineſs.

Fig. 5, and 6. is a Roupy of Silver, which the Hollanders coin at Belicate, being of the ſame weight with thoſe which the Great Mogul, or the Kings of Golconda and Viſapour make. It has in the middle upon one ſide the mark of the Holland Company, to diſtinguiſh it from others. The Hollanders Roupies of Silver are quite contrary to their Pagods of Gold, which are more eſteemed by the Indians than thoſe of the Princes of the Country. For they make far leſs account of theſe Roupies of Silver; and if you pay any great ſum in theſe pieces, though the Silver be as good as the others, you muſt loſe one half per Cent.

Fig. 7, and 8. is the Hollanders ſmall Copper-Money, wherewith they ordinarily pay their Soldiers. It has upon one ſide the mark of the Company. And indeed the Hollanders, who mind nothing but their profit, had great reaſon to obtain leave to coin Money; for bringing only Gold from Japan, from Macaſſar only Gold in Powder, and from China Gold in Ingots, and ſelling all theſe to the Bankers, they found that they loſt five or ſix per Cent. which proceeded from the miſtruſt of the Changers, and the chief of the Factories belonging to the Company. Now they ſhun that loſs, and make the ſame profit which the Bankers did, coining all theſe Mettals into money. Though in every Voyage which they make to Japan, they generally loſe one Veſſel by ſtorm; yet ſome years they make five or ſix Millions of Livres profit, all freights diſcharged, and hazards eſcaped. But that profit is quite loſt, ſince their loſs of the Iſland of Formoſa.

The Money of the King of Cheda and Pera.

THis Money is of Tin, and is coin'd by the King of Cheda and Pera. He coins no other Money than Tin. Some yearsſince he found out ſeveral Mines, which was a great prejudice to the Engliſh. For the Hollanders and other Merchants buy it, and vend it over all Aſia. Formerly the Engliſh brought it out of England, and furniſhed great part of Aſia, where they conſum'd a vaſt quantity; they carried it alſo into all the Territories of the Great Mogul, as alſo into Perſia and Arabio; for all their Diſhes are of Copper, which they cauſe to be Tinned over every month. Among the meaner ſort of people, there is little to be ſeen but this Tin-money, and the Shells call'd Cori; which I have ſpoken of already.

Fig. 1, and 2. is that great piece of Tin, which weighs an ounce and a half, and in that Country goes for the Value of two of our Sous. But in regard that Tin is there at 14 Sous a pound, it is not worth above one Sous and three three Deneers. This piece of Tin is only thick in the ſides, the middle being as thin as Paper.

Fig. 3, and 4. is a piece that goes at the value of four Deneers.

Fig. 5, and 6. are their Shells, whereof they give fifty for the little piece of Tin.

The Money of Gold and Tin of the King of Achen. With the Money in Gold Coin'd by the King of Macaſſar, and the Celebes. And the Silver and Copper Money of the King of Camboya.

Fig. 1, and 2. is the Money in Gold coin'd by the King of Achen, in the Iſland of Sumatra. In goodneſs it is better than our Louis; an Ounce being well worth fifty Franks. This piece weighs 18 Grains, and would be worth ſixteen Sous and eight Deneers of our Money.

Fig. 3, and 4. is the ſmall Money made by the ſame King, being of Tin, and weighs eight Grains. The Tin being good, I value it at 16 Sous a pound; and then 75 of theſe pieces is worth one Sous of ours.

Fig. 5, and 6. is the Money in Gold of the King of Macaſſar, or the Celebes. This piece weighs twelve Grains, and the Hollanders take it for a Florin of our Money; which comes to 23 Sous and eight Deneers.

Fig. 7, and 8. is the Silver Money of the King of Camboya; being good Silver, and weighs thirty two Grains. The piece comes to 24 Sous of our Money; nor does the King coin it at any higher rate. He has a great quantity of Gold in his Country, but he never coins it into Money; for he trades with it by weight, as he does with his Silver, according to the cuſtom of China.

Fig. 9. and 10. is the Copper Money of the King of Camboya. The King of Java, the King of Bantam, and the Kings of the Molucca Iſlands coin no other Money, but pieces of Copper after the ſame form and manner. As for their Silver Money, they let it paſs as it comes out of other Countries, without melting it down. In Bantam, in all Java, in Batavia, and the Molucca's, there is little other Money ſtirring, but Spaniſh Reals, Rixdollars of Germany, and Crowns of France; the greateſt part being Half-Reals, Quarters and eighth Parts. But in Batavia they uſe beſides for ſmall Money, Shillings, double Sous and Sous, as in Holland.

The Money in Gold, Silver and Copper, of the King of Siam.

Fig. 1, and 2. is the Money in Gold, coin'd by the King of Siam; and weighs 18 Grains more than our Half-Piſtol. The Gold is of the ſame Goodneſs, and may be worth 7 Livres and one Sous of our Money. When the Merchants, that trade in that Country, bring thence either Gold or Silver, 'tis for want of other Commodities, as Silk, Musk, Sandal, Wood, Gum, Lake, Elephants teeth, and other things. For by carrying out Gold or Silver, they reap but two in the hundred profit.

Fig. 3, 4, 5, and 6. is a piece about the bigneſs of a large Hazle-Nut, flatted on the four ſides, like a ſemicircle, three ſides whereof are open like a Horſe-ſhoe; and upon two ſides are certain of their own Letters. There is no Money in the Eaſt ſo ſtrangely coin'd as this. It weighs three Drams and a half, and 25 Grains, and is as good as our Silver at three Livres and 10 Sous the Ounce. It amounts to 32 Sous and 4 Deneers of our Money.

Fig. 6, 7, and 8. is the Copper Money of the King of Siam; and they give two hundred of theſe pieces for one piece of Silver. For their ſmall Money, they they make use of certain Shells that are gather'd upon the Sea-shore, which they bring from Maldives.

The Gold and Silver Money of the Kings of Asem, Tipoura, Arakan and Pegu.

ALL the Silver Money coin'd by the Kings whom I have nam'd, is in goodness equal to our Crown, rating it at three Livres ten Sous the Ounce, as we rate our Crowns here.

Fig. 1, and 2. is the Silver Money of the King of Asem; it weighs three Drams and four Grains, and comes to 23 Sous of our Money.

Fig. 3, 4. is the Silver Money made by the King of Tipoura Chatermani. In the language of the Country, he is call'd Dieu Ara-gari, which is stampt upon one side of the Money, and upon the other Chatermani Roy de Tipoura. His Country begins about twelve days journey from Daca toward the North-West. This Money weighs two Drams and a half, and twenty-two Grains; and is in value twenty-two Sous.

Fig. 5, 6. is the King of Arakan's Money. It weighs two Drams and a half, and 15 Grains, which makes 21 Sous of our Money. This King coins no Gold; but he trafficks in Gold uncoin'd. The Mettal is very base, and not worth above 14 Carats, a Carat being the third part of an Ounce. The King however holds it at a high rate, to keep it from being carry'd out of his Country. In all Bengala this King is known by no other Name but the King of Mogne.

Fig. 7, and 8. is the King of Pegu's Silver Money, and weighs two Drams and a half, and twelve Grains, which may come to about 20 Sous, and six Deneers of our Money.

Fig. 9, and 10. are the King of Pegu's Fano's, or little pieces of Gold, and weigh not above 7 Grains to boot. Fifteen of these little pieces pass for the value of a Real, or one of our Crowns, the Gold being coarse.

Fig. 11, 12. are the Kings of Asem's Fano's; they weigh also 7 Grains; but they are a much baser Mettal than those of Pegu, for twenty-two of them amount but to the value of our Crown.

Lumps or Pieces of Gold and Silver which go for Money in the Kingdom of China, and the Kingdom of Tunquin.

YOU are first to take notice, that in all the Kingdom of China, and the Kingdom of Tunquin, there is no Money coin'd, either Gold or Silver; that their small Money is Copper, and that they make use in payments only of Lumps or Pieces of Gold and Silver, which have every one their particular weight, as is here represented.

The Pieces of Gold mark'd Fig. 1, and 2. are by the Hollanders calPd Goltschut, that is to say, a Boat of Gold, because they are in the form of a Boat. Other Nations call them Loaves of Gold; and there are but two different sizes of them. The Gold is of such a goodness, that an Ounce in France would not be worth less than 42 Franks. The great Pieces come to twelve hundred Gelders of Holland Money, and thirteen hundred and fifty Livres of our Money. The other Piece, which weighs but half as much, is in value according to its proportion.

As for their Pieces of Silver, they are of several sizes, and different weight. Fig. 3. weighs six Drams and a half, and 23 Grains; and the Silver being very very near in goodneſs to the Pariſian, it comes to fifty-nine Sous, and eight Deneers of our Money. The other Pieces as well great as ſmall, are in value according to their weight.

In great payments they make uſe of Ingots, that come to a hundred Franks in value; and they have little Pieces of Silver that are not worth above a Sous.

When they buy any Commodity, if they have not whole Pieces enough to make up the ſum, they have alwayes inſtruments ready to cut off ſo much from a great Piece as will perfect the Payment.

When the Chineſes tranſport their Golden Loaves, or their Boats, into other Countries, the Merchants cut them in the middle, not daring to truſt the Chineſes, who have often deceiv'd, them and none have been more cheated than the Hollanders. For they have a way to ſtuff their loaves of Gold, inſomuch that you ſhall ſometimes find in the middle a third part of Copper or Silver. In all ſorts of Bargains the Chineſes are ſo cunning, that there are few ſtrangers whom they do not over-reach; eſpecially, in Batavia, the Hollanders when they come firſt. They carry their weights alwayes along with them, being like a Roman Beam, or a Stelleer, about eight Inches long, with which they weigh all the Gold and Silver which they receive. As for the ſmall Money both in China and Tunquum, it is of Copper. It is made as in Fig. 4. They alſo thread theſe pieces, there being a hole in the middle, 12, 25, 50, and 300 upon a ſtring; becauſe they will not put themſelves to the trouble of telling them, when the number exceeds a dozen.

The Gold and Silver Money of Japon.

ALL the Gold that comes from Japon, is of the ſame goodneſs; ſomewhat better than our Louis; and is about that goodneſs for which we pay about 50 Franks the Ounce.

Fig. 1. This piece of Gold weighs one Ounce and ſix Drams, at fifty Franks the Ounce, comes to 87 Livres and 10 Sous.

Fig. 2, and 3. Every one of theſe pieces is of Gold, and every one weighs a third part of the great one; which is half an Ounce, and 48 Grains; and comes to 29 Livres, 3 Sous, and 4 Deneers.

Fig. 4. This, as it is mark'd is the backſide of the three pieces of Gold.

Fig. 5, and 6. are pieces of Silver of the ſame weight; every one weighing 4 Grains leſs than our pieces of 30 Sous, though it go nevertheleſs for the ſame value. As for the Silver, it is the ſame in goodneſs with our Money. However, in the Territories of the Great Mogul, whither the Hollanders carry all their Silver, their Bars, and Japon pieces, to coin them into Money, ſometimes they ſell them to the Bankers, where they have no convenience of coinage, as at Surat and Agra; and theſe Bankers, give them from two to three in the hundred more than they will give for our Crowns, Rix-dollars, or Spaniſh Reals.

Fig. 7. is the backſide of the two Silver pieces.

The Portraicture of the Silver Ingots of Japon, which go for Money.

I Said before, that all the Silver that comes out of Japon, is equal in goodneſs to our Crowns.

Fig. 1. An Ingot of this form weighs ſeven ounces, at three Livres ten Sous the ounce: the whole comes to twenty four Livres, and ten Sous.

Fig. 2. Weighs two ounces, three drams and an half: the whole comes to eight Livres, ten Sous, and seven Deneers.

Fig. 3. Weighs one ounce, half a dram, and twelve grains: the whole comes to four Livres, five Sous, and five Deneers.

Fig. 4. Weighs one ounce, eight grains: the whole comes to three Livres, ten Sous, and an eleven Deneers.

Fig. 5. Weighs seven drams, one quarter, and seven grains: the whole comes to three Livres, eight Sous, and eight Deneers.

Fig. 6. Weighs two drams and an half, and twenty four grains: the whole comes to one Livre, five Sous, and one Deneer.

Fig. 7. Weighs two drams, twenty four Deneers: the whole comes to one Livre, nine Deneers.

Fig. 8. Weighs one dram and an half, and twenty four grains: the whole comes to sixteen Sous, and four Deneers.

Fig. 9. Is the Copper-Money which they thread by fifteen, thirty, fifty, to the number of 600. which is the value of a Tell in Silver. Over all Japon they reckon by Tells: and the Hollanders reckon, that a Tell makes three Gelders and an half of their Money, which comes to four Livres, and five Sous of ours.

Fig. 10. Is the back-side of the Copper-piece.

Money that represents the Figures of the twelve Signs; and which were Coined during the twenty four hours, that Gehan-guir, King of the Indians, permitted Queen Nourmahall, his Wife, to Reign in his stead.

Sultan Selim, otherwise called Gehanguir Patcha, the ninth King of the Indians, Father of Cha-gehan, was a great Lover of Women: but he had a particular affection for one among the rest, which he kept in his Seraglio; and which he had Espous'd, as meriting more than ordinary. She was a Woman of a Sublime Wit, and very liberal; and she knew so well how to please the King's humour, and to divertize him, that he could not live without her. She had two Names; the one was Nour-gehan-begum, which signifies the light of the World; and this was the Name which was engraven upon her Signet: for as I have observ'd in my Relations, they never Sign any thing, but only set their Seals. The other Name, by which she was call'd at Court, was Nour-mahall, which signifies the Light of the Seraglio. She was always a great enemy to the King's two Sons; more especially to the second, who was called Sultan Kourom: and who afterwards comeing to the Throne, called himself Cha-gehan. He set himself to oppose all the designs of this Princess: who, for her part, had such an Ascendant over the King, that she perswaded him to spend the greatest part of the year in the Country, under-hand soliciting certain Raja's upon the Frontiers to rise against him, that she might engage him in the Wars, and keep him from the company of his Sons. This Queen, being altogether Ambitious, made it her business to please the King, that she might the more easily accomplish her designs; and having a great desire to eternize her Memory, she could not think of a better way, than to Coin a good quantity of Money in her own Name: and of a different stamp from that which the Indian Kings were wont to Coin. For you must take notice, that all the Coins of those Kings have only the Characters of the Countrey upon each side of the Piece. But this Queen caus'd one of the twelve Signs to be stamp'd upon each side of Hers, which is contrary to the Law of Mahomet, that forbids all manner of representations. However, she had never brought her design about, had Sultan Kourom been at Court. But she took her time, when the King had caus'd the eyes of his eldest Son, Sultan Kosrou to be put out, because he had taken up Arms against him, with an intention to depose him from his Throne. For after he had obtain'd that Victory, he sent his second Son, Sultan Kourom, into Decan, with with a powerful Army againſt the King of Viſapour, who was in Rebellion. Queen Nourmahall ſeeing her ſelf deliver'd from thoſe that were able to croſs her deſigns, and particularly from Sultan Kourom, the moſt Potent, and the moſt inveterate of all her enemies, and believing it ſeaſonable to diſcover her purpoſe to the King, ſet her ſelf to flatter him more than ſhe was wont; inventing new ways to divertize him, ſometimes with Hunting, and ſometimes in the Haram, with Balls and Comedies: One day that the King was extremely well-pleas'd, and having drank briskly, began to be very merry; after the Queen had Danc'd in his preſence, he took her, and ſet her by him, proteſting to her, that he lov'd her above all the Princeſſes in his Court; and that but for her, he had dy'd for grief, to ſee that his Son Sultan Koſrou ſhould be ſo traiterouſly bold, as to endeavour to deprive him of his Scepter. The Queen ſeeing the King ſo highly affected toward her, fail'd not to make uſe of ſo favourable an opportunity. To which purpoſe, Sir, ſaid ſhe, if it be true that your Majeſty has that kindneſs for me, of which you would perſwade me to aſſure my ſelf, I know you will grant me one favour which I have paſſionately deſir'd a long time; that I may only Reign as Sovereign the ſpace of twenty four hours. This requeſt ſurpriz'd the King, and kept him very ſad for ſome days, being unwilling to deny her any thing, and yet being as loth to grant her a Boon of ſo high a nature. In the mean time the Queen ply'd the King with paſtime and Divertiſements, pretending to take no notice of his melancholy. At length the fifth day after ſhe had made her Petition, the King no longer able to reſiſt her Charms, nor the ſtrong Paſſion he had for her, told her he would retire for twenty four hours, and that ſhe might aſſume the abſolute Command of the Kingdom during that time. At the ſame time he caus'd all the Grandees that were then at Court, to be ſent for into his preſence, and then commanded them to obey her, and punctually to execute her Orders, as if it were he himſelf that ſpoke to them. It was a long time before that the Queen had made every thing ready, and that ſhe had ſecretly hoarded up great quantities of Gold and Silver in all the Cities where the Mints were appointed, and had diſtributed the Stamps as ſhe thought convenient. And indeed it was a wonderful thing, that a Woman ſhould ſo politickly carry on ſo great a deſign, as to have four and twenty Stamps engrav'd, and to keep in a readineſs in Gold and Silver above two Millions in all the Cities, without being diſcovered to the King, or any of the Court. There were none but the Mint-Maſters that knew any thing of her deſign, whom ſhe engag'd by large promiſes, and larger hopes; as believing that ſhe could certainly obtain her deſire one day of the King; and then, if ſhe had her Materials ready, that ſhe could do her buſineſs in twenty four hours. The day being appointed, ſhe ſent away Meſſengers to all the Cities, commanding them on that day to Coin Roupies of Gold and Silver, to the value already mention'd. When the King and the Grandees came to underſtand the buſineſs, they were ſtrangely ſurpriz'd; eſpecially Sultan Kourom, the Queens implacable enemy, who, as ſome perſons of the Countrey aſſur'd me, fainted away at the news, and did not come to himſelf in a good while after. The thing was ſo ſuddenly done, eſpecially in the Cities neer at hand, that within two hours after ſhe was ſate upon the Throne, ſhe caus'd ſeveral quantities of that Gold and Silver to be thrown among the people, which during the Reign of Gehan-guir went currantly for Roupies. But when Sultan Kourom, who took upon him the Name of Cha-gehan came to the Crown after the death of his Father, he forbad all perſons to uſe thoſe Roupies upon pain of death, and commanded all that had any of them, either in Gold or Silver, to carry them to the Mint; where they ſhould receive the value of them, to the end they might be melted down. For which reaſon they are at preſent very rare, particularly thoſe in Gold; among the reſt, two or three of them are ſo hard to be found, that an hundred Crowns has been given for one of them. The Roupies of Gold are worth one and twenty Livres of our Money: and thoſe of Silver, thirty Sous. The Queen, during her Reign of twenty four hours, had that reſpect for the King, that on the back-ſide of the Pieces whereon the twelve Signs were Engraven, ſhe caus'd the Name of Gehan-guir to be ſtamp'd with her own, and the name of the place where they were Coin'd, all in Arabick Letters.

Perhaps the Reader may be curious to know from whence this Illuſtrious Queen of the Indians deſcended: and therefore for his ſatisfaction, I will tell him in a few words. Her Father, a Perſian by Nation, a man naturally Ambitious, and who in his own Country was no more than a bare Captain of Horſe, without any hopes of riſing to any higher preferment, travell'd into the Indies, to ſerve the Great Mogul, who was then Gehan-guir, with an intention of raiſing his Fortune in a ſtrange Country. Gehan-guir had then many Enemies, the Kings of Golconda and Viſapour being in Rebellion againſt him, and ſeveral Raja's having taken their part. So ſoon as he came to kiſs the Kings Hands, the King took a liking to him, and gave him immediately the Command of five hundred Horſe. And becauſe he was very well skill'd in Aſtrology, (which is a Science to which the Aſiaticks are very much addicted) the King eſteem'd him the more, and in a ſhort time made him General of his Army. But afterwards, forgetting his duty, and the benefits he had received, he joyn'd with Sultan Koſrou, Gehan-guir's eldeſt Son; and having gain'd a great part of the Army, they conſpir'd together to depoſe the King, and ſet up his Son in his ſtead. There was at that time in the Court, an Eunuch of great wit, who did more miſchief to the Army in his Cloſet, than he could have done in the Field. This Eunuch, ſo ſoon as intelligence was brought of the Rebellion, told the King, that if his Majeſty pleas'd, he would deliver Koſrou and the Perſian General into his hands in a ſhort time, without ſo much as ſtriking one ſtroke, or loſing one man. He was as good as his word in part, for he ſo order'd his buſineſs, by his politick contrivances, that the General was brought to the King, who would not preſently put him to death. Sultan Koſrou eſcap'd that bout, and continu'd the War many years againſt his Father, who at length took him in Fight, and caus'd his eyes to be pull'd out. The King detaining the General in cuſtody, his Wife and his Daughter found a way to ſave his life, as you ſhall hear. The Daughter of the Perſian General, who was his only Child, was about fourteen years of Age, the moſt accompliſh'd Beauty at that time in all the Kingdom; ſhe was moſt rarely educated, and could both write and read the Arabian, Perſian, and Indian Languages. The Mother and the Daughter went every day to Court, to hear what would become of the General; and underſtanding at length, that the King intended either to put him to death, or to ban ſh him, they came to the Haram, and caſting themſelves at his Majeſties feet, they humbly begg'd pardon, the one for her Husband, the other for her Father; which they eaſily obtain'd; the King being ſurpriz'd at the Beauty of the Virgin, to whom he afterwards ſurrendred his Affections. All the Court was aſtoniſh'd afterwards, how the General and his Wife could keep, ſo private, a Daughter that was ſo incomparably fair, that it ſhould not come to the Kings knowledge. At length he lov'd her ſo tenderly, that not being able to deny her the liberty of Reigning one whole day in his place, he gave her leave to ſhare with him afterwards in the Government. And ſhe it was, that gave motion to all the moſt important Affairs of State; the King excuſing himſelf to the Grandee's of his Court, who wonder'd why he let the Queen bear ſo great a ſway, by telling them that ſhe was fit for the Government, and that it was time for him to take his eaſe.

Fig. 1, and 2. is as all the reſt are, the backſide of the Twelve Signs. Fig. 1. is the backſide of the Ram, and Fig. 2. of Cancer. Both of them ſignifie the ſame thing; it being the Name of the King, Queen, and City where they were ſtamp'd. Theſe two were coin'd at Amadabat.

The Gold, Silver, and Copper Money which the Portugals coin in the Eaſt Indies.

THe Gold which the Portugals Coin in Goa is better than our Louiſſe's of Gold, and weighs one grain more than our half Piſtol. At the time when I was in Goa, this piece was worth four Roupies, or ſix Franks. They hold it up at ſo high high a rate, to the end the Merchants, who come from all the Coaſts of India thither with their Wares, may not tranſport it out of the Countrey. This piece is called St. Thomas. Formerly when the Portuguez had the Trade of Japon, Macaſſar, Sumatra, China and Moſambique, which they ſtill preſerve; and is the place whither the Indians bring the Gold of the Abaſſins and Saba, it was a wonderful thing to ſee the quantity of Gold which the Portuguez Coin'd, and the ſeveral pieces of workmanſhip which they fram'd in Gold, and ſent into Forreign Countreys, even to the West-Indies, by the way of the Philippine Iſlands. But now they have no other places but only Moſambique to furniſh them with Gold, they keep up thoſe Pieces called St. Thomaſs's at a very high rate, leſt they ſhould be carried out of the Countrey, as I ſaid before. They have alſo Silver Pieces, which they call Pardos, which go for the value of 27 Sous of our Money: As alſo a great quantity of ſmall Copper and Tin-Money, not much unlike that of the Kings already mentioned, which they thread upon ſtrings in particular numbers.

The Gold and Silver Money of Muſcovy.

I Have obſerved in my Relations, that in all parts of our Europe, where they Coin Money, there are great Sums tranſported all over Aſia, where they go currantly. But for the Money of Muſcovy there is great loſs in tranſporting it any where elſe; becauſe the Prince enhances it to ſo high a value. The pieces as well of Gold as Silver are very good Metal; for the Gold in worth is ſomewhat higher than our Lewis.

Fig. 1 and 2. This piece of Gold weighs 14 Grains; and to take the Gold at 48 Grains the ounce, would amount to 20 Sous, one Deneer, and one half-peny of our Money. But going in Muſcovy for 24 Sous, there would be nineteen and an half loſs to tranſport it any where elſe.

Fig. 3 and 4. Is a piece of Silver that weighs eight Grains; and to take an Ounce of Silver at three Livres ten Sous, it comes to a Sous of our Money. But in the Country you have but fifty of theſe pieces, or at moſt ſometimes fifty two for one of our Crowns, or a Real of Spain, or an High-German Rixdollar.

Fig. 5 and 6. Is a piece of Silver alſo which only goes in Muſcovy. But I cannot tell in what Province it is Coin'd, in regard there are no Arms upon it, and that the moſt knowing perſons, to whom I ſhewed them, could not tell me what the Characters meant; which makes me think it is very ancient. The piece weighs 25 Grains, which comes to three of our Sous, one Deneer, and one half-peny.

This is all that I could collect of moſt certainty, concerning the Money and Coins of the Eaſt, during the long courſe of my Travels. Nor do I believe that any perſon has undertaken, before me, to write upon the ſame Subject. If any one of my Readers deſires to ſee the real Pieces themſelves, as well in Gold and Silver, as in Tin, Copper, Shells and Almonds, he may, without queſtion, obtain the Favour from Monſieur, the firſt Preſident, to whoſe Study I devoted them all, together with certain Medals, of which that Supreme Senator, moſt skilful in Antiquity, has great ſtore, being ſtill curious in ſearching after what is rare.

The end of the Coins.

TRAVELS IN INDIA.

The First Book.

What Roads to take, in Travelling from Iſpahan to Agra, from Agra to Dehly and Gehanabatt, where the Great Mogul Reſides at preſent: And how to Travel alſo to the Court of the King of Golconda; to the King of Viſapour, and to many other Places in the Indies.

CHAP. I.

The Road from Iſpahan to Agra through Gomron: Where is particularly deſcrib'd the manner of Sailing from Ormus to Suratt.

IN this Relation of my Indian, I will obſerve the ſame Method as in the Recital of my Perſian Travels; and begin with the Deſcription of the Roads, which lead you from Iſpahan to Dehly and Gehanadatt, where the Great Mogul Reſides at preſent.

Though the Indies ſtretch themſelves front Perſia for the ſpace of above 400 Leagues together, from the Ocean to that long Chain of Mountains that runs through the middle of Aſia from the Eaſt to the Weſt, and which was known to Antiquity by the Name of Mount Caucaſus, or Mount Taurus; yet there are not ſo many ways to travel out of Perſia into the Indies, as there are to travel out of Turky into Perſia; by reaſon that between Perſia and the Indies there are nothing but vaſt Sands and Deſarts, where there is no water to be found. So that you have but two Roads to chooſe, in going from Iſpahan to Agra. The one is partly by Land, and partly by Sea; taking Ship at Ormus. The other altogether by Land, through Candahar. The firſt of theſe two Roads is amply deſcrib'd, as far as Ormus, at the end of my firſt Book of my Perſian Travels. So that I am now only to ſpeak of the manner of Sailing from Ormus to Suratt.

There is no Sailing at all times upon the Indian as upon the European Seas: You muſt obſerve the proper Seaſons, which being elaps'd, there is no more venturing. The Months of November, December, January, February and March, are the only Months in the year to Embark from Ormus to Suratt; and from Suratt to Ormus: But with this difference, that there is no ſtirring from Suratt after the end of February; but you may Sail from Ormus till the end of March, or the fifteenth of April: for then the Weſtern-winds, that bring rain along with them into India, begin to blow. During the firſt four Months there blows a North-eaſt-wind which carries them from Suratt to Ormus in fifteen or twenty days. Then veering a little to the North, it ſerves as well for thoſe that are bound for Suratt as thoſe that are bound from thence. Then the Merchants generally provide for a Voyage of thirty, or five and thirty days. But if they would Sail from Ormus to Suratt in fourteen or fifteen days, they muſt take Shipping either in March, or at the beginning of April; for then the Weſtern-wind blows full in their Stern.

The Veſſels which Sail from Ormus run within ſight of Maſcate upon the Coaſt of Arabia, bearing off to Sea for fear of coming too near the Perſian Coaſt. They that come from Suratt, do the ſame thing, to make the Entry of the Gulf. But neither the one nor the other touch at Maſcate, to avoid paying Cuſtoms to an Arabian Prince, who took that place from the Portugals.

Maſcate is a City ſituate juſt by the Sea-ſide, over againſt three Rocks that make the Entry into the Harbour very difficult, and at the foot of a Mountain upon which the Portugals have three or four Forts. It is obſerved that Maſcate, Ormus, and Balſara, are the three places in the Eaſt where the heat is moſt inſupportable. Formerly only the Hollanders and Engliſh underſtood this Courſe of Navigation; but ſome years after the Armenians, Mahometans, Indians, and Banians, have built them Veſſels. But it is not ſo ſafe to Embark in them, for they neither underſtand the Sea ſo well, nor are they ſo good Pilots.

The Veſſels that Sail to Suratt, which is the only Part in the Empire of the Great Mogul, Sail within ſight of Diu, and the Point of St. John, and come to an Anchor afterwards in the Road of Couali, which is not above four Leagues from Suratt, and two from the Mouth of the River toward the North. They tranſport their Wares from one place to another, either by Waggons, or in Boats. For great Veſſels cannot get into the River of Suratt till they have unladen, by reaſon of the Sands that choak it up. The Hollanders return as ſoon as they have landed their Wares at Couali, and ſo do the Engliſh, it not being permitted to either to enter into the River. But ſome years ſince, the King has given the Engliſh a place to Winter in, during the rainy Seaſons.

Suratt is a City of an indifferent bigneſs, defended by a pitiful Fortreſs, by the foot whereof you muſt paſs, whether you go by Land or by Water. It has four Towers at the four Corners, and in regard there are no Platforms upon the Walls, Guns are planted upon wooden Scaffolds. The Governor of the Fort only commands the Soldiers in the Fort, but has no power in the City, which has a particular Governour to receive the King's Cuſtoms, and other Revenues through the Extent of his Province.

The Walls of the Town are only of Earth, and the generality of the Houſes like Barns, being built of Reeds, plaiſtered with Cow-dung, to cover the void ſpaces, and to hinder them without from diſcerning between the Reeds what is done within. In all Suratt there be but nine or ten Houſes which are well built: whereof the Cha-bander, or chief of the Merchants, has two or three. The reſt belong to the Mahumetan Merchants; nor are thoſe, wherein the Engliſh and Hollanders dwell, leſs beautiful; every Preſident, and every Commander, being careful to repair them; which they put upon the account of their Companies. However, they do but hire thoſe Houſes; the King not ſuffering any Frank to have an Houſe of his own, for fear he ſhould make a Fortreſs of it. The Capuchin Friars have built them a very convenient Convent, according to the Model of our European Houſes, and a fair Church; for the building of which, I furniſh'd them with good part of the Money. But the Purchaſe was made in the Name of a Maronite Merchant of Aleppo, whoſe name was Chelebi, of whom I have ſpoken in my Perſian Relations.

CHAP.

CHAP. II.

Of the Customs, Money, Exchange, Weights and Measures of the INDIANS.

TO avoid Repetitions, which cannot be shunn'd in the Course of long Travels; it behoves me to let the Reader understand what belongs to the Custom-house, Money, Exchange, Weights and Measures of the Indians.

When your Commodities are unladen at Suratt, you must carry them to the Custom-house adjoyning to the Fort. They are very severe, and very exact in searching the People. Particular Merchants pay from four to five per Cent. at the Custom-house for all sorts of Ware. But for the English and Holland-Company, they pay less: But I believe if they did but cast up what it costs them in Deputations and Presents which they are oblig'd every year to send to the Court, they would not pay much less for their Wares, then particular Merchants.

Gold and Silver pay two in the hundred, and when it is brought into the Custom-house, the Master of the Mint comes and takes it, and Coins it into the Money of the Countrey. They agree with him upon the day wherein he will undertake to return the new Pieces: And for so many days as he makes them stay after that, he pays them Interest, according to the proportion of the Silver which he receives. The Indians are very subtil and crafty in matters of Money and Payments; three or four years after the Silver is coin'd, it loses half per Cent. and goes at the same rate as old Silver; for, say they, it is impossible but that it should lose in passing through so many hands. You may carry all sorts of Silver into the Dominions of the Great Mogul. For in all the Frontier Cities there is a Mint, where it is purified to the highest perfection, as is all the Gold and Silver in India, by the Kings Command, and coin'd into Money. Silver in Bars, or old Plate, which is bought without paying for the fashion, is the Silver by which you shall lose least: For as for coin'd Silver, there is no avoiding the loss of the Coinage. All their bargains are made, with a condition to pay in coin'd Silver within the present year. And if you make payment in old Silver, you must resolve to lose according to the time since it was first Coin'd. In all places far remote from Cities, where the vulgar People have no great knowledg in Silver: and where there are no Changers, they will not receive a piece of Silver, without putting it into the fire, to try whether it be good or no; And this is the common practice at all Ferries and Passages over Rivers. In regard their Boats are only made of Osier, covered over with an Ox-hide, and by consequence are very light; they keep them in the Woods, and will not take them upon their shoulders, till they have received their Money.

As for their Gold, the Merchants have so many cunning tricks to hide it, that it seldom comes to the knowledg of the Customers. They do all they can to shift off paying the Custom, and that, so much the rather, because they do not run so much hazard as at the Custom-house of Europe. For in the Indian Custom-houses, if a man be caught in the fraud, he is quitted by paying double; ten in the hundred, instead of five: the King comparing the venture of the Merchant to a game at Hazard, where he plays quit or double. The King had granted to the English Captains, that they should not be searched when they came a-shore. But one day one of the English Captains going to Tata, one of the greatest Cities in India, a little above the Mouth of the River Indus, as he was going to pass the River, he was stop'd by the Officers of the Custom-house, who search'd and riff'd him, whatever he could alledge to the contrary. They found Gold about him, of which he had already carried off several quantities, at several times, that he had gone from his Ship to the City; but they quitted him, upon paying the usual Custom. The English-man, vex'd at such an affront, resolv'd to revenge himself; which he did after a very pleasant manner. He caus'd a sucking-pig to be roasted, and putting it together with the dripping, and sawce, in a China-platter, covered with a linnen-cloath, he gave it a Slave to bring along after him to the City; imagining what would fall out. As it pass'd before the Custom-house, while the Governors or the Cha-bander, and the Mint-Masters were sitting in the Divan, they fail'd not to stop him; and as the Slave went forward with the Plate cover'd, they told his Master that he must come into the Custom-house, and that they must see what he carried. The more the English-man cry'd, that the Slave carried nothing that paid any Duties, the less he was believ'd; so that after a long debate he took the Plate from his Slave, and carried it himself into the Divan; the Governour and the Cha-bander, gravely ask'd him, why he would not be obedient to the Laws? Upon which the English-man, replying in a great heat, that he carried nothing which paid any duty, threw the Pigg among them with such a fury, that the Sawce and Pigg flew all upon their Garments. Now in regard that Swines-flesh is an abomination to the Mahometans, who believe every thing defil'd that touches it; they were forc'd to change their Clothes, take down the Tapestry of the Divan, to pull down the Divan it self, and build another, not daring to say any thing to the English-man; for the Cha-bander, and Mint-Master are very observant to the Company, by whom they reap a great deal of profit. As for what concerns the Heads of the Companies, as well English, as Dutch, and their Associates, they have so great a respect for them, that they never search them at all, when they come a-shore; though they will not stick to conceal their Gold, like particular Merchants, and to carry it about them. The Trade of Tata, formerly very great, begins now to decay, because the Mouth of the River grows more dangerous, and full of shallows every day more than other, the Sand-hills having almost choak'd it up.

The English finding they had learn'd the trick of rifling their Cloaths, studi'd out other little ways and contrivances to conceal their Gold: And the fashion of wearing Perriwigs being newly come out of Europe, they hid their Jacobus's, Rose-Nobles, and Ducats in the Net of their Perriwigs, every time they came a-shore.

There was a Merchant that had a mind to convey some Boxes of Coral into Surat, without the knowledge of the Customers. He Swam then into the Town, some days before the Ship was unladen, when it might be done securely before the Customers had any suspition of any thing. But the Merchant repented him afterwards, the Commodity being spoyl'd. For the Water of Surat River being always thick and muddy, there clung to the Coral, which had lain a long time in the Water, a slime like a white crust or skin, which was difficult to be got off; so that after the Coral was polish'd, he lost by it above twelve per Cent.

I come now to the Money which goes for currant through the whole extent of the Great Mogul's Dominions; and to all the sorts of Gold and Silver, which is carri'd thither in Ingots to make profit thereof.

In the first place you must observe that it is very profitable to buy Gold and Silver which has been wrought, to melt it into Ingots, and to refine it to the highest purity: For being refin'd, you pay not for the Portage of the Alloy, which was mix'd with it before: And carrying the Gold and Silver in Wedges, you pay neither to the Prince nor to the Mint what they exact for Coinage. If you carry coin'd Gold, the best Pieces are Jacobus's, Rose-Nobles, Albertus's, and other ancient Pieces, as well of Portugal, as of other Countries, and all sorts of Gold that have been coin'd in former Ages. For by all those old Pieces the Merchant is sure to gain. You may also reckon for good Gold, and which is proper to be carri'd thither, all the Ducats of Germany, as well those coin'd by the several Princes, as by the Imperial Towns, together with the Ducats of Poland, Hungary, Swedeland and Danemark; and indeed all sorts of Ducats are taken to be of the same goodness. The Venetian Ducats of Gold formerly pass'd for the best, and were worth four or five of our Sous, more than any others; but about a dozen years ago they seem to have been alter'd, not going now for any more than the rest. There are also Ducats which the Grand Seignior Coins at Cairo, and those of Sally, and Morocco: But these three sorts are not so good as the others, and are not worth so much as they by four Sous of our Money.

Over all the Empire of the Great Mogul, all the Gold and Silver is weigh'd with Weights, which they call Tolla; which weigh nine Deneers, and eight grains of our Weights. When they have any quantity of Gold and Silver to sell, the Indians use yellow Copper-Weights, with the King's mark, to avoid cousenage. And with these Weights they weigh all the Gold and Silver at once, provided it amount not to above a hundred Tolla's. For the Changers have no other weights, but from one Tolla to a hundred; and a hundred Tolla's come to 38 Ounces, 21 Deneers, and 8 Grains. As for the Gold and Silver which is not coin'd, if there be much, they essay it; and having put it to the Touch, they bid to the utmost value to out-vye one another.

In regard there are some Merchants that have above forty or fifty thousand Ducats at a time, the Indians weigh them with a weight which is just the weight of a hundred Ducats, which is also mark'd with the Kings Mark; and if the hundred Ducats weigh less than the weights, they put in so many little stones till the Scales are even; and after all is weigh'd, they make good to the Changer the weight of those little stones. But before they weigh these Gold-Coins, whether they be Ducats or other Pieces, they put the whole quantity into a Charcoal-fire, till they be red-hot; and then quench the Fire with water, and take them out again. This they do to find out them which are false, and to melt off the Wax and Gum, which is cunningly dropt upon them to make them weigh the more. But because there are some Pieces so artfully hollow'd and stopt up again, that you cannot perceive it, though they have been in the fire, the Changers take the Pieces, and bend them; by which they know whether they be good or no; and those which they suspect they cut in pieces. After they have viewed them all, they refine those which they do not take to be good, and pay for so much as proves to be good, as for good Ducats. All this Gold they Coin into that sort of Money which they call Roupies of Gold; except those Ducats, which are stamp'd only upon one side, which they sell to the Merchants that come from Tartary, and other Northern Parts, as from the Kingdoms of Boutan, Asen, and other remote parts. With these Ducats the Women of those Countries chiefly adorn themselves, hanging them upon their Head-attire, and fixing them upon their foreheads. As for the other Ducats, that have no figures, they are not so much as enquir'd after by the Northern Merchants.

As for all the other Pieces of Gold, there are great quantities of them Sold to the Goldsmiths, to the Gold-wyar-drawers, and in general to all that work in Gold. For if they could put their Metal unmade into Roupies, they would never Coin; which they can only do at the Coronation of their Kings, to throw Silver Roupies among the People; or to sell them to the Governours of the Provinces, and other Grandees of the Court, who then want great quantities of them to present to the new King at his first coming to his Throne. For they have not always Jewels or other things rich enough to present him, as well at that time, as at another Festival, of which I shall speak in due place, when they weigh the King every year. At such times I say, they are very glad of Gold Roupies; as also to present to such Favourites at the Court, by whose interest they hope to gain higher Commands, and more considerable Governments.

In one of my Travels, I found by experience the vertue of these Roupies of Gold. Cha-jehan, Father of Orang-zeb who now Reigns, had given to one of the Lords of his Court, the Government of the Province of Tata, whereof Symas is the Metropolis. Now though the very first year of his Government, there were very great complaints made against him, by reason of the Tyranny which he exercised over his People, and his great extortions, the King suffered him to continue four years, and then recalled him. All the People of Tata were overjoy'd, believing the King had called him away, only to put him to death; but it fell out quite otherwise; for the King caress'd him, and gave him the Government of Halabas, more considerable than that which he had quitted. This kind reception, which he had at the Kings hands, proceeded from this, that before he came to Agra, he had sent before him a present of 50000 Roupies of Gold, and about 20000 Roupies of Gold more to Begum-Saheb, who had then the whole Power in her hands; as also to other Ladies and Lords at the Court, to support his Reputation. All the Courtiers are very desirous to have a great quantity of Gold; because it lies in a little room, and then because they covet, as a great Honour, to leave vast Sums behind them, to their Wives and Children, of which the King must not know. For as I shall tell you in another place, when any great Lord dies, the King is Heir to all his Estate; his Wife having no more then his Jewels.

But to return to our Roupies of Gold; you must take notice, that they are not so currant among the Merchants. For in regard one of them is not worth above fourteen Roupies, which make one and twenty Livres of our Money, at thirty Sous the Roupie, and that there are few of these Roupies of Gold to be had, but in the Houses of Great Men; when it falls out that they make any payment, they will put them at a Roupie of Silver, or at least at a fourth part of a Roupie more than it is worth, which will never turn to the Merchants profit. Cha-Est-Kan the King's Uncle, to whom I had sold a parcel of Goods at 96000 Roupies, when he came to pay me, ask'd me what Money I would be content to take, whether Gold or Silver. Before I could return him an answer, he added, that if I would leave it to him, I should take Gold Roupies: Nor did he give me this advice, but because he believ'd it would turn to his advantage: I told him I would be rul'd by him; thereupon he caus'd his Servants to tell me out so many Roupies in Gold, as made up the just Sum which was due: But he would force me to take the Roupie in Gold for fourteen Roupies and an half in Silver, though among the Merchants they went but for fourteen. I was not ignorant of it; but I thought it best to receive my Money according to the Prince's humour, in hopes he might make me amends another time, either for the whole, or part of what I might lose. I let him alone two days, after which I went to him again, and told him I had tried to put off his Roupies at the price I had received them; so that in the payment of 96000 Roupies, I had lost 3428 and one 16*th*. the Roupie of Gold which he forc'd me to to take at fourteen Roupies and an half of Silver, being worth but fourteen. Thereupou he fell into a passion, and told me he would see as many Lashes bestow'd upon the Changer, or Holland-Broker, whose fault soever it were; that he would teach them to understand Money; that they were old Roupies, and were worth more by a sixteenth part of a Silver Roupie, than the Roupies which were coin'd at that time. In regard I knew the humour of the Asiatic Princes, with whom there is no contesting, I let him say what he pleas'd; but when he came to himself, and began to put on a smiling look, I desir'd him that he would be pleas'd to let me return the Summ which I had received, the next day; or else that he would be plea'sd to pay me what was wanting, and that I would take a Roupie at 14 and one 16*th*. since he assur'd me they were worth so much. The Prince for a while gave me a scurvy look, not so much as speaking one word. At length he ask'd me, whether I had still the Pearl, which he had refus'd to buy. I told him I had, and immediately pull'd it out of my Bosome, and gave it him. The Pearl was large, and of a good Water, but ill-shap'd; which was the reason he refus'd it before. When I had given it to him, well, said he, let us talk no more of what is past; how much will you have, in a word, for this Pearl? I ask'd him seven thousand Roupies, and indeed rather than I would have carri'd it into France, I would have taken three. If I give thee, said he, seven thousand Roupies for this Pearl, I shall make thee amends for the loss thou complain'st of in the first bargain. Come to Morrow, and I will give thee five thousand Roupies, and that's very fair: Thou shalt have also a Calaat and an Horse. I made my obeysance to him, and desir'd him to give me an Horse that should be young, and fit for service, because I had a great journey to take. The next day he sent me a Robe, a Cloak, two Girdles, and a Cap; which is all the Apparel that the Princes are wont to give to those to whom they intend any Honour. The Cloak and Robe was of Satin purfled with Gold; the two Girdles strip'd with Gold and Silver; the Cap was of Calicut, dy'd into a Flame-colour, with stripes of Gold: The Horse had no Saddle, but was covered with a green Velvet foot-cloath, edg'd about with a small Silver-fringe. The Bridle was very strait, with Silver-studs in some places. I believe the Horse had never been Back'd; for so soon as I brought him to the Holland-House, where I then lodg'd, a young man got upon his Back; but he was no sooner on, but the Horse flung and pranc'd at that rate, that having kick'd down an Hutt that stood in the Court, he had like to have kill'd the Hollander. Finding that such a Resty-Horse was not for my turn, I sent him back to Cha-Est-Kan, and relating the Story to him, I told him I did not believe that he desir'd I should return into my Countrey to bring bring him back ſome rarities which I had promis'd him, as he made me believe he did. All the while I talk'd, he laugh'd, and afterwards ſent for the Horſe which his Father in his life time us'd to ride upon. It was a tall Perſian Horſe, that had formerly coſt five thouſand Crowns, but was then twenty eight years old. They brought him bridl'd and ſaddl'd, and the Prince would needs have me get up in his preſence. He had one of the moſt ſtately walks that ever I knew in a Horſe: and when I alighted, well, ſaid he, art thou ſatisfied? I dare ſay, that Horſe will never give thee a fall. I thank'd him, and at the ſame time took my leave of him; and the next day, before my departure, he ſent me a great Basket of Apples. It was one of the ſix that Chajehan had ſent him, as they came from the Kingdom of Kachemir; there was in the Basket alſo a great Perſian Melon: All this might be worth a hundred Roupies, which I preſented to the Holland Commanders Wife. As for the Horſe I rode him to Golconda, where I ſold him for five hundred Roupies, as old as he was, being a good luſty Beaſt.

To return to our diſcourſe of Money, I will add this to what I have ſaid already, that you muſt never carry Louis's, of Gold to the Indies, nor Spaniſh nor Italian Piſtols, nor any other ſort of Money coin'd within theſe few years; for there is great loſs by it; for the Indians refine all, and count only upon the refinings. Laſtly, every one ſtrives to ſteal the cuſtom of their Gold; and when the Merchant has got the knack of concealing it, he may gain five or ſix of our Sous in every Ducat.

I come now to the ſorts of Silver Money; which you muſt diſtinguiſh into money of the Country, and Forreign Money: And firſt of the Forreign Coins.

The Forreign Silver Coins which are carried into the Indies, are the Rix-dollars of Germany, and the Reals of Spain. The firſt are brought by the Merchants that come from Poland, from the Leſſer Tartary, and the Borders of Muſcovia. The others by thoſe that come from Conſtantinople, Smyrna, and Aleppo, and the greateſt part by the Armenians, who ſell their Silk into Europe. All theſe merchants endeavour to convey their Silver through Perſia without being diſcovered; for if the Cuſtomers find it out, they will be forced to carry their Silver to the Mint-Maſters to be coined into Abaſſi's, which is the Kings Coin; theſe Abaſſi's being carried into India, are again coined into Roupies, whereby the Merchant loſes ten and a quarter per Cent. as well by reaſon of the coinage, as by paying the Kings duties in Perſia.

To let you underſtand in a few words, how they came to loſe this ten and a quarter per Cent. from Perſia to the Indies, and ſometimes more, according to the nature of the Reals, which they uſually carry into Perſia; you muſt call to mind, what I have already ſaid concerning the Money and Exchanges of Perſia, in the firſt Volume. I obſerv'd, that a Real in Perſia goes for 23 Chaez, which make three Abaſſi's, and a quarter; and that ſometimes, when Silver is ſcarce, they will give a Chaez and a half for one. That the Abaſſi is worth four Chaez, and the Toman fifty Abaſſi's, or two hundred Chaez. If you carry ſix Tomans and a half to the Indies, you have for every Toman twenty nine Roupies and a half; and conſequently for ſix Tomans and a half, a hundred and ninety-one Roupies and a quarter. If you carry to the Indies Reals of Seville, for a hundred you ſhall have from 213 to 215 Roupies. If you carry Mexican Reals, for a hundred you ſhall have no more than 212. So that when for a hundred Reals you have but two hundred and twelve Roupies, you gain ten Reals and a quarter, in an hundred Reals; but by the Sevillian Reals you profit eleven per Cent.

There are three or four ſorts of Spaniſh Reals, and they give for a hundred according to their goodneſs, from 218 to 214 and 215 Roupies. The beſt of all are thoſe of Sevil for when they are full weight, they will give for a hundred, 213 Roupies; and ſometimes 215, according as Silver is either ſcarce or plentiful.

The Real of Spain ought to weigh three Drams, ſeven Grains and a half more than two Roupies. But the Silver of the Roupies is much better. For the Roupy is in weight eleven Deneers and fourteen Grains; but the Sevil Real,

Real, like our white Crown, is but just eleven Deneers. The Maxican Real goes at ten Deneers and twenty-one Grains. For the Spanish Real, that weighs seventy-three Vals, you have four Mamoudi's and a half, and one Mamoudi is worth twenty Pecha's; but they must be very good, and as I have said already, seventy-three Vals in weight: eighty-one Vals making an Ounce, one Val coming to seven Deneers.

For the Rixdollars of Germany, in regard they are heavier than the Reals, they will give you for an hundred, as high as an hundred and sixteen Roupies. Where you are to take notice, that in giving for an hundred Reals, or an hundred Rixdollars, two hundred and fifteen, or two hundred and sixteen Roupies, it seems that every Roupy ought to be worth less than thirty Sous. But if the Merchant count the Portage of the Silver, and the Customs, he will find that every Roupy will stand him in more. But that the Merchant may make his profit, he must take notice, that all the Reals of Mexico, and those of Sevil, are in weight one and twenty Deneers and eight Grains, that is, five hundred and twelve Grains; and for those that are no better then our white Crown, they are to be in weight one and twenty Deneers and three Grains, which makes five hundred and nine Grains. All Dollars and Reals are weigh'd, a hundred at a time, and when they are wanting in weight, they add little stones, as when they weigh Gold, according to what I shall tell you by and by.

We come now to the Money of the Country. The Indian Money is the Silver Roupy, the Half, Quarter, Eighteenth and Sixteenth part. The weight of the Roupy is nine Deneers and one Grain; the value of the Silver is eleven Deneers and fourteen Grains. They have also another sort of Silver Money, which they call Mamoudi's, but this goes no-where but in Surat, and in the Province of Guzerat.

The Indians have also a sort of small Copper Money, which is call'd Pecha; which is worth about two of our Liards, a Liard being the fourth part of a Sous. There is also the Half Pecha, Two Pecha's, and Four Pecha's. According to the custom of the Province where you Travel, you have for a Roupy of Silver more or less of these Pecha's. In my last Travels, a Roupy went at Surat for nine and forty Pecha's. But the time was, when it was worth fifty, and another time, when it went but for six and forty. At Agra and Gehanabat, the Roupy was valued at fifty-five and fifty-six Pecha's. And the reason is, because the nearer you go to the Copper Mines, the more Pecha's you have for a Roupy. As for the Mamoudi, it is always valued at forty Pecha's.

There are two other sorts of small Money in the Dominions of the Great Mogull, which are little bitter Almonds and Shells. These little bitter Almonds, which are brought out of Persia, are only made use of in the Province of Guzeratt; as I have observed in the first part of my Relations. They grow in dry and barren places amongst the Rocks, and the Tree, that bears them, is almost like our Bastard Spanish-Broom. They call these Almonds Baden: Nor is there any Coloquintida so bitter. They give for a Pecha sometimes thirty five, and sometimes forty.

Their other small Money are the little Shells which they call Cori; the sides whereof turn circularly inward: Nor are they to be found in any part of the World, but in the Maldives Islands. They are the greatest part of the Revenue of the King of that Island. For they are transported into all the Territories of the Great Mogull; into the Kingdoms of Visapour and Golconda; and into the Islands of America to serve instead of Money. Near the Sea they give 80 for a Pecha. But the further you go from the Sea, the less you have; so that at Agra, they will not give you above 50 or 55 for a Pecha. As to what remains according to the Accompt of the Indians, 100000 Roupies make a Lekke.

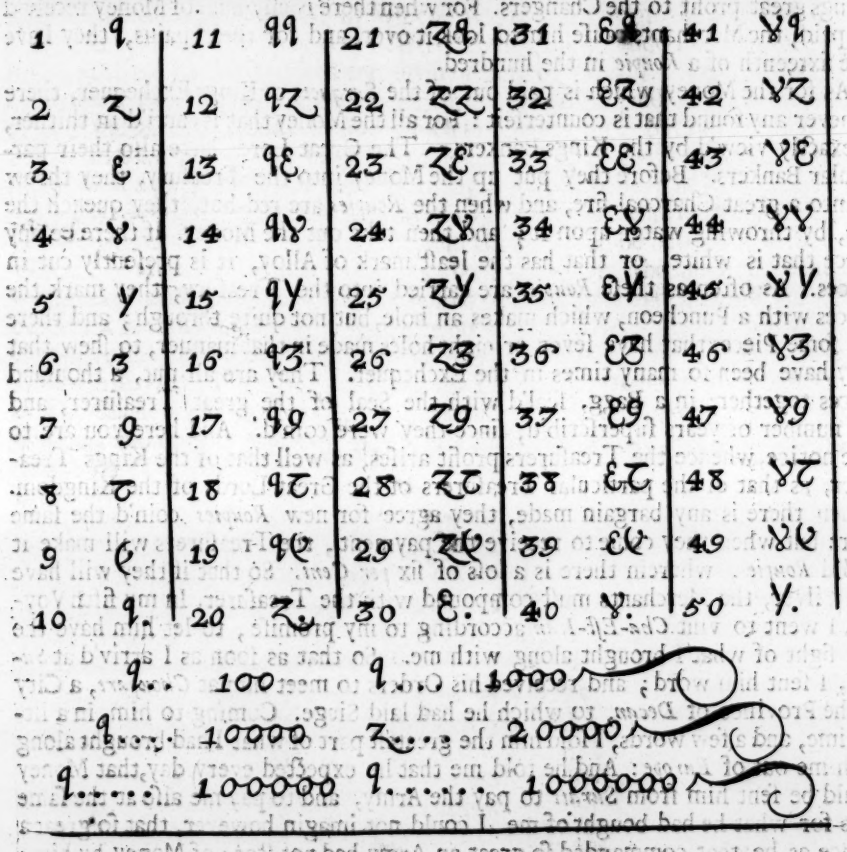
100000 Lekks make a Kraur.
100000 Kraur's make a Padan.
100000 Padan's make a Ril.

In the Indies, the Village must be very small, where there does not reside a Banker, whom they call Cheraff; whose business it is to remit Money and Bills of Exchange.

Over all the Empire of the Great Mogull and in other parts of India the Idolaters, though they differ in their languages, make use of these sort of Cifers



Exchange. In regard that these Bankers hold a Correspondence with the Governours of the Province, they raise as they please themselves, the Roupie for the Pecha's, and the Pecha's for the Shells. All the Jews that deal in Money and Exchange in the Empire of the Grand Seignior, are accounted a most subtil sort of People. But in the Indies they would be scarce thought fit to be Apprentices to these Bankers. They have one very bad custom in making of Payments: And I have already observ'd it, in reference to their Roupies of Gold. When they make any Payment in that sort of Money, they tell ye, 'twas a great while ago that any Silver Roupie was coin'd; that they are worth less than those which are new, or but lately coin'd; for that by passing through many hands they wear away, and become lighter. And therefore when you make any bargain, you must always agree to be paid in Roupies Cha-jenni, that is, in new Silver; otherwise, they will pay pay you in Roupies coin'd ſome fifteen or twenty years ago, and upward; whereby you will loſe four in the hundred. For they will have one fourth, or at leaſt one eighth per Cent. allow'd for thoſe that were coin'd but two years before: So that the poor People that cannot read the year wherein the Roupies were coin'd, are ſubject to be cheated; for they will always abate a Pecha or a half a Pecha upon a Roupie, or three or four Cori's upon a Pecha.

As for counterfeit Silver, there is very little amongſt them. If you receive one falſe Roupie in a Bagg from any particular Perſon, 'tis better to cut it to pieces, and loſe it, than to ſpeak of it; for if it ſhould come to be known, there might be danger in it. For you are commanded by the Kings Law to return the Bagg where you received it; and to return it from one to another, till you can find out the Counterfeiter; who if he be apprehended, is only ſentenc'd to loſe his hand. If the Counterfeiter cannot be found, and that it be thought that he who paid the Money is not guilty, he is acquitted upon ſome ſmall amercement. This brings great profit to the Changers. For when there is any Sum of Money receiv'd or paid, the Merchants cauſe him to look it over, and for their pains, they have one ſixteenth of a Roupie in the hundred.

As for the Money which is paid out of the Sarquet, or Kings Exchequer, there is never any found that is counterfeit: For all the Money that is carri'd in thither, is exactly view'd by the Kings Bankers. The Great Lords have alſo their particular Bankers. Before they put up the Money into the Treaſury, they throw it into a great Charcoal-fire, and when the Roupies are red-hot, they quench the fire, by throwing water upon it; and then take out the Money. If there be any Piece that is white, or that has the leaſt mark of Alloy, it is preſently cut in pieces. As often as theſe Roupies are carried into the Treaſury, they mark the Pieces with a Puncheon, which makes an hole, but not quite through; and there are ſome Pieces that have ſeven or eight holes made in that manner, to ſhew that they have been ſo many times in the Exchequer. They are all put, a thouſand Pieces together, in a Bagg, ſeal'd with the Seal of the great Treaſurer, and the number of years ſuperſcrib'd, ſince they were coin'd. And here you are to take notice, whence the Treaſurers profit ariſes, as well that of the Kings Treaſurer, as that of the particular Treaſurers of the Great Lords of the Kingdom. When there is any bargain made, they agree for new Roupies coin'd the ſame year: but when they come to receive the payment, the Treaſurers will make it in old Roupies, wherein there is a loſs of ſix per Cent. So that if they will have new Silver, the Merchants muſt compound with the Treaſurer. In my fifth Voyage, I went to viſit Cha-Eſt-Kan according to my promiſe, to let him have the firſt ſight of what I brought along with me. So that as ſoon as I arriv'd at Suratt, I ſent him word; and received his Orders to meet him at Choupart, a City in the Province of Decan, to which he had laid Siege. Coming to him, in a little time, and a few words, I ſold him the greateſt part of what I had brought along with me out of Europe: And he told me that he expected every day, that Money ſhould be ſent him from Surat to pay the Army, and to pay me alſo at the ſame time for what he had bought of me. I could not imagin however, that ſo great a Prince as he, that commanded ſo great an Army, had not ſtore of Money by him; but rather conjectur'd, that he had an intention to make me ſome abatement, upon thoſe Pieces which he would put upon me in payment, as he had ſerv'd me before. It fell out, as I foreſaw. But for Proviſions for my ſelf, my men, and my Horſes, he took ſuch order, that there was great plenty brought me, night and morning, and for the moſt part he ſent for me my ſelf, to his own Table. Ten or twelve days thus paſt away, and not a word of the Money that I expected: So that being reſolv'd to take my leave of him, I went to his Tent. He appear'd to be ſomewhat ſurpriz'd, and looking upon me with a frowning brow: wherefore will you be gone, ſaid he, before you are paid? or who d'you think, ſhall pay you afterwards, if you go away before you receive your Money? Upon theſe words, with a countenance as ſtern as his, my King, replied I, will ſee me paid. For his goodneſs is ſuch, that he cauſes all his Subjects to be paid, that have not receiv'd ſatisfaction for ſuch Goods as they ſell in Forreign Countries. And what courſe will he take, anſwer'd he in a great choler: with two or three ſtout Men of War, ſaid I, which he will ſend either to the Port of Surat, or towards the Coaſts to wait wait for the Ships that come from Mocca. He ſeemed to be netled at the reply, but not daring to give any more way to his choler, he ordered his Treaſurer immediately to give me a Letter of Exchange to Aurengabad. I was the more glad of that, becauſe it was a place through which I was to paſs in my way to Golcanda; beſides that, it would ſpare me the carriage and the hazards of my Money. The next day I had my Bill of Exchange, and took leave of the Prince, who was nothing diſpleaſed, but told me, that if I return'd to the Indies, I ſhould not fail to come and ſee him, which I did in my ſixth and laſt Voyage. When I came to Suratt, he was at Bengala, where I ſold him all the reſt of my Goods that I could not put off either to the King of Perſia, or great Mogul.

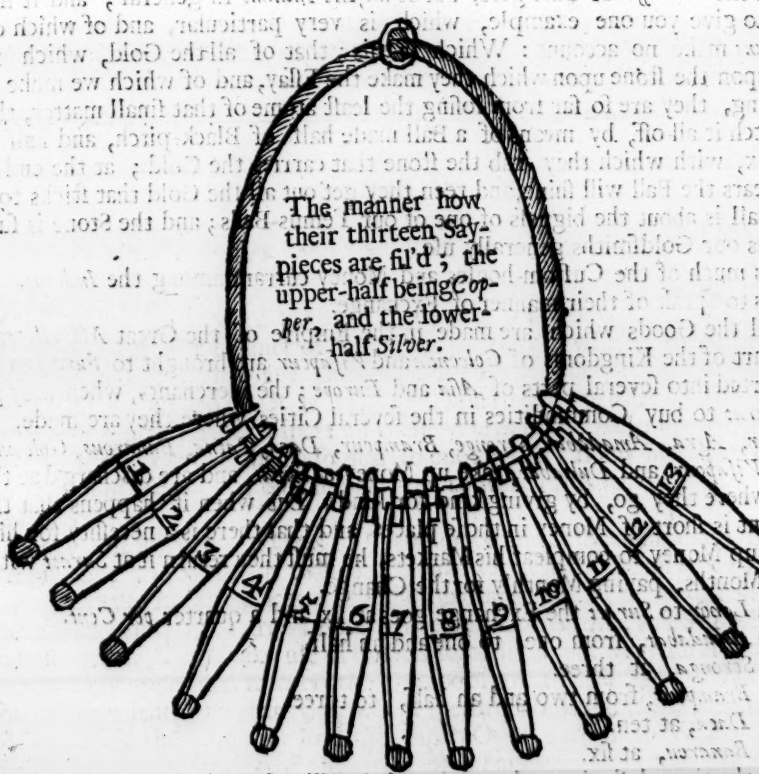
But to return to the payment of my Money, I was no ſooner arrived at Aurengabat, but I went to find the great Treaſurer; who no ſooner ſaw me, but he told me, he knew wherefore I came; that he had received Letters of advice three days before, and that he had already taken the Money out of the Treaſury to pay me. When he had brought me all the Baggs, I cauſed my Banker to open them, who ſaw them to be Roupies, by which I was to loſe two in the hundred. Upon that I thank'd the Treaſurer very heartily, telling him, I underſtood no ſuch dealing, and that I would ſend and complain of him to Cha-Eſt-Kam; and declare to him that he ſhould either give order that I ſhould be paid in new Silver, or elſe let me have my Goods again, which I preſently did. But not receiving an anſwer ſo ſoon as I knew I might have done, I went to the Treaſurer, and told him, I would go my ſelf, and fetch away my Goods. I believe he had received order what to do; for ſeeing I was reſolved to go; he told me he was very unwilling I ſhould put my ſelf to ſo much trouble, and that it would be better for us to agree among our ſelves. After many conteſts about the two in the hundred, which he would have made me loſe, I was contented to abate one, and had loſt the other, had I not happily met with a Banker who wanted Silver, and had a Bill of Exchange to pay at Golconda; ſo that he was glad to make uſe of mine, and gave me a Bill to be paid at Golconda, being my full Summ, at fifteen days ſight.

The Changers to try their Silver, make uſe of thirteen little pieces, one half Copper, and the other Silver, which are their Sayes.



The manner how their thirteen Say-pieces are fil'd; the upper-half being Copper, and the lower-half Silver.

These thirteen pieces differing all in goodness, they never make use of them, but when any question arises concerning a small quantity of Silver, or if any wrought Silver. For they refine all their great quantities. All that kind of Silver is brought by the weight which they call Tolla, which weighs nine Deneers, and eight Grains, or 32 Val's; 81 Val's, making an Ounce: So that an hundred Tolla's making 38 Ounces, 21 Deneers, and 8 Grains.

See here the differences of the thirteen Goodnesses of Silver.

THe first, which is the lowest goodness, they take at fifteen Pecha's to the Molla, which makes of our Money nine Sous, two Deneers.

The second, at eighteen Pecha's, which make ten Sous two Deneers.

The third, at ten Pecha's, which make twelve Sous, six Deneers.

The fourth, at thirteen Pecha's, which make fourteen Sous, six Deneers.

The fifth, at sixteen Pecha's, which make fifteen Sous, ten Deneers.

The sixth, at nineteen Pecha's, which make seventeen Sous, six Deneers.

The seventh, at thirty-three Pecha's, which make nineteen Sous, two Deneers.

The eighth, at thirty-five Pecha's, which make twenty Sous, ten Deneers.

The ninth, at thirty-eight Pecha's, which make twenty-two Sous, six Deneers.

The tenth at forty Pecha's, which make twenty-four Sous, ten Deneers.

The eleventh, at forty-three Pecha's, which make twenty-five Sous, ten Deneers.

The twelfth, at forty-six Pecha's, which make twenty-seven Sous, six Deneers.

The thirteenth, at forty-nine Pecha's, which make nineteen Sous, two Deneers.

Here it will not be amiss to give you an hint, how far the cunning extends, not only of the Cheraffs or Changers, but of all the Indians in general; and it shall suffice to give you one example, which is very particular, and of which our Europeans make no account: Which is this; that of all the Gold, which remains upon the stone upon which they make the Essay, and of which we make no reckoning, they are so far from losing the least atome of that small matter, that they fetch it all off, by means of a Ball made half of Black-pitch, and half of Soft-wax, with which they rub the stone that carries the Gold; at the end of some years the Ball will shine, and then they get out all the Gold that sticks to it This Ball is about the bigness of one of our Tennis-Balls; and the Stone is such a one as our Goldsmiths generally use.

Thus much of the Custom-houses and Money current among the Indians. It remains to speak of their manner of Exchange.

As all the Goods which are made in the Empire of the Great Mogull, and some part of the Kingdoms of Golconda and Visapour are brought to Surat to be transported into several parts of Asia and Europe; the Merchants, when they go from Surat to buy Commodities in the several Cities where they are made, as at Lahor, Agra, Amadabat, Seronge, Brampour, Daca, Patna, Banarous, Golconda Decan, Visapour, and Dulabar, take up Money at Surat, and are discharg'd at the places where they go, by giving kind for kind. But when it happens that the Merchant is short of Money in those places, and that there is a necessity for him to take up Money to compleat his Markets, he must then return it at Surat within two Months, paying Monthly for the Change.

From Lahor to Surat the Exchange goes at six and a quarter per Cent.

From Amadabat, from one, to one and an half.

From Seronge, at three.

From Brampour, from two and an half, to three.

From Daca, at ten.

From Banarou, at six.

From the three last places they make their Bills of Exchange only to Agra; and and at Agra they make others for Suratt, the whole at the same price as I have set down.

From Golconda, from four to five.

And for Goa the same.

From Decan at three.

From Visapour at three.

From Dultabat, from one to one and an half.

Some years the Exchange rises from one to two per Cent. by reason of certain Raja's or petty Vassal Princes that disturb Trade, every one pretending that the Mechandizes ought to pass through his Countrey, and pay Toll. There are two particularly between Agra and Amadabatt, the one called the Raja of Antivar, and the other the Raja of Bergam, who very much molest the Merchants for this very cause. But you may avoid passing through the Territories of these Princes, taking another road from Agra to Suratt, thorough Seronge and Brampour. But they are fertil Lands, divided with several Rivers, without Bridges or Boats, and it is impossible to go that way, till two Months after the rains are fallen. Which is the reason that those Merchants who must be at Suratt when the season permits them to take the Sea, are forc'd to pass through the Territories of these two Raja's, because they can pass that way at all times, even in the time that the rains fall, which only knit and harden the Sand.

Nor are you to wonder that the Exchange runs so high; for they that trust out their Money, run the hazard, by obligation, of losing their Money, if the Merchants should be robb'd.

When you come to Suratt to Embarque, there is Money enough. For it is the greatest Trade of the Grandees of the Indies to venture their Money by Sea from thence for Ormus, Balsara, and Mocca; nay even as far as Bantam, Achen, and the Philippine Islands. For Mocca and Balsara, the change runs from 22 to 24 per Cent. And to Ormus, from 16 to 20. And to the other places which I have nam ed, the change runs proportionable to the distance.

I have but one word to say of their Weights and Measures; I have given you in the Margin the fifth part of an Ell of Agra, and the fourth part of an Ell of Amadabat and Suratt. As for their Weights, the Men is generally 69 Pound, and the Pound 16 Ounces. But the Men which they weigh their Indigo withal, is but 53 Pound. At Suratt they talk of a Serre, which is one and three fourths of a Pound, and the Pound is 16 Ounces.

CHAP. III.

Of their Carriages, and the manner of Travelling in India.

BEfore you set forward upon the road, it will be convenient to speak of their Carriages and manner of travelling in India, which, in my opinion, is more commodious than any thing that has been invented for ease in France or Italy. Quite otherwise it is in Persia, where they neither make use of Asses, Mules, or Horses, but transport all their Wares to the Indies upon Oxen, or in Wains, their Countries being so near to one another. If any Merchant carries an Horse out of Persia, 'tis only for shew, or to walk in his hand, or to sell to some Indian Prince.

They will lay upon an Oxes back 300, or 350 pound weight, and it is no wonderful thing to see ten or twelve thousand Oxen at a time all laden with Rice, Corn and Salt, in such places where they exchange those Commodities: Carrying Corn where only Rice grows, Rice where only Corn grows, and Salt where there is none at all. They make use of Camels sometimes, but very rarely, they being particularly appointed to carry the luggage of great Persons. When the season requires hast, and that they would speedily conveigh their Merchandize to Suratt to ship them off, they load them upon Oxen, and not in Wains. And in regard that the Territories of the Great Mogul are very well manur'd, the Fields are fenc'd with very good Ditches; and to every Field there belongs a Pond to preſerve the water. This is this great inconvenience for Travellers; that when they meet with theſe numerous Caravans in ſtreight places, they are forc'd to ſtay two or three days till they are all paſt by. They that drive theſe Oxen, follow no other Calling as long as they live, nor do they dwell in houſes; yet they carry their Wives and Children along with them. There are ſome among them that have an hundred Oxen of their own, others more or leſs; and they have always one, who is their Chief, that takes as much ſtate as a Prince, and has his Chain of Pearl hanging about his neck. When the Caravan that carries the Corn, and that which carries the Salt happen to meet, rather than yield the road, they frequently enter into very bloody Diſputes. The Great Mogull conſidering one day that theſe quarrels were very prejudicial to Trade, and the tranſportation of neceſſary Proviſions from place to place, ſent for the two Chiefs of the Caravan, and after he had exhorted them, for the common good and their own intereſt, to live quietly together, and not to quarrel and fight when they met, gave to each of them a Leck, or an hundred thouſand Roupies, and a Chain of Pearl.

That the Reader may the better underſtand the manner of Travelling in the Indies, he is to take notice, that among the Idolaters of that Country there are four Tribes, which are called Manari's, each of which may conſiſt of an hundred thouſand Souls. Theſe people live always in Tents, and live only upon the tranſporting of Merchandize from Countrey to Countrey. The firſt of theſe Tribes carry nothing but Corn. the ſecond Rice, the third Pulſe, and the fourth Salt, which they fetch from Suratt, and all along from as far as Cape-Camorin. Theſe Tribes are alſo diſtinguiſhed in this manner: Their Prieſts, of whom I ſhall ſpeak in another place, mark the foreheads of the firſt, with a red-Gum, about the bredth of a Crown; and then they draw a ſtreak all the length of his noſe, ſticking grains of Wheat upon it, ſometimes ten, and ſometimes twelve. Thoſe of the ſecond Tribe are mark'd with yellow-Gum in the ſame place, with grains of Rice. Thoſe of the third are mark'd with a grey-Gum, down to the ſhoulders, and grains of Millet. Thoſe of the fourth Tribe carry tied about their necks a Bagg, with a great lump of Salt in it, weighing ſometimes eight or ten pounds, (for the heavier it is, the more they glory in carrying it;) and with this Bagg they thump their ſtomacks, as a ſign of repentance every morning before they ſay their Prayers. They have all in general a little line or twiſt, like a Scarf, about their necks, at the end whereof hangs a little Silver-box, like a Relique-box, wherein they encloſe a little ſuperſtitious writing which their Prieſts give them; they tie them alſo about their Oxen and other Cattel, which are bred in their Herds, for which they have a particular affection, and love them as tenderly as children, eſpecially if they have no children of their own. Their Women wear only a piece of Calicut white or painted, ſome ſix or five times doubled from their waſts downward. From their waſts upward they cut their fleſh into ſeveral forms of Flowers, as they do that apply Cupping-glaſſes, which they paint in various colours with the juice of Grapes, that their skin ſeems to be all made of Flowers.

Every morning, while the men load the Beaſts, and that the Women fold up the Tents, the Prieſts that follow them, ſet up in the moſt convenient place of the Plain where they lodg'd a certain Idol in the form of a Serpent in wreaths, upon a Perch ſix or ſeven foot high; to which they come all in files to worſhip, their Women going three times about. After the Ceremony is over, the Prieſts take care of the Idol, and load it upon an Ox particularly appointed for that purpoſe.

The Caravan of Waggons ſeldom exceeds the number of an hundred or two hundred at moſt. Every Waggon is drawn by ten or twelve Oxen; and attended by four Souldiers, which the Perſon that ows the Merchandize is oblig'd to pay. Two of them march upon each ſide of the Waggon, over which there are two Ropes thrown a-croſs, the ends whereof they hold in their hands, to the end, that if the Waggon come to leane on one ſide in ill-way, the two Souldiers on the other ſide may keep it from over-turning by pulling the Ropes with all their ſtrength.

All the Waggons that come to Suratt, either from Agra, or any other parts of the Empire, and which return through Agra, or Janabatt, are bound to carry back back the Lime that comes from Barocha, which, after it is temper'd, and laid on, becomes as hard as Marble.

I come now to the manner of travelling in India, to which purpoſe they make uſe of Oxen inſtead of Horſes, and there are ſome, whoſe pace is as eaſy as the amble of our Hackneys. But you muſt take a care, when you either buy or hire an Ox to ride upon, that the horns be not a bove a foot in length. For if they be longer, when the flies begin to ſting, he will chafe, and toſs back his horns, and ſtrike them into the ſtomack of the Rider, as oftentimes it has hapned. Theſe Oxen are rid like our Horſes, and inſtead of Snaffles or Bitts, they have only a Rope drawn through the muſcly part of the muzzle or noſtrils. In firm ground where there are no ſtones, they never ſhoe their Oxen; but only in rough places, where not only the ſtones, but the heat will waſt and chop the hoof. Whereas in Europe we tie our Oxen by the horns, the Indians only put a thick truſs upon their necks, that keeps faſt a Coller of Leather four fingers broad, which they have nothing to do but to put about their necks when they faſten them to the Waggon.

They uſe alſo for Travel little Coaches, but very light, that will hold two perſons; but generally they ride alone for more eaſe, carrying only their neceſſary Cloak-Bags along with them; with a ſmall Veſſel of Wine, and a ſmall quantity of Proviſions, for which there is a proper place under the Coach, where they tye the two Oxen. Theſe Coaches have their Curtains and Seats like ours, yet are not hung: But in my laſt Travels I caus'd one to be made after our manner; and the two Oxen that drew it, coſt me near upon ſix-hundred Roupies. Nor is the Reader to wonder at the price; for there are ſome of theſe Oxen that are very ſtrong, and that will travel upon the trot twelve or fifteen leagues a-day for ſixty days together. When they have gone half the days journey, they give them two or three Balls, as big as one of our two-penny-loaves, of Wheat kneaded up with butter and black-ſugar. The hire of a Coach comes to a Roupie a-day more or leſs. From Suratt to Agra is forty days journey, and you pay for the whole journey from forty to forty-five Roupies. From Suratt to Golconda, being almoſt the ſame diſtance, the ſame price is obſerved; and by the ſame proportion you may travel over all the Indies.

They who have more to ſpend, for their own eaſe make uſe of a Pallanquin, wherein they travel very commodiouſly. This is a ſort of little Couch ſix or ſeven foot long, and three broad, with baliſters round about it. A ſort of Cane, call'd Bambouc, which they bend like an Arch, ſuſtains the covering of the Pallanquin, which is either of Satin or Cloath of Gold; and when the Sun lies upon one ſide, a Slave that goes by the ſide, takes care to pull down the covering. Another Slave carries at the end of a long ſtick a kind of Target of Oſier, covered over with ſome gentile ſtuff, to preſerve the perſon that is in the Pallanquin from the heat of the Sun, when he turns and lies upon his face. The two ends of the Bambouc are faſtned on both ſides to the body of the Pallanquin between two ſticks join'd together like a Saltir or St. Andrews-croſs, every one of thoſe two ſticks being five or ſix foot long. There are ſome of theſe Bambouc's that coſt two hundred Crowns; I my ſelf have paid an hundred and twenty. Three men for the moſt part apply themſelves to each of theſe two ends to carry the Pallanquin upon their ſhoulders; ſome on the right, and ſome on the left, and they go ſwifter than our Sedan-men, and with a much more eaſy pace, as being that which they practice from their youth. You give to every one for all things not above four Roupies a Month; but it ſtands you in above five if the journey be long, and exceed ſixty days labour.

Whether it be in a Coach, or Pallanquin, he that will travel honourably in the Indies, muſt take along with him twenty or thirty armed men, with Bows and Arrows ſome, others with Muſquets; and they have the ſame rate with thoſe that carry the Pallanquin. Sometimes for more magnificence they carry a Banner, as the Engliſh and Hollanders do, for the honour of their Companies. Theſe Souldiers are not only for ſhew, but they watch for your defence, keeping Centinels, and relieving one another, and are very ſtudious to give content. For you muſt know, that in the Towns where you take them into ſervice, they have a Chieftain, that is reſponſible for their fidelity, who for his good word has two Roupies a-piece of every one.

In

In the great Villages there is generally a Mahumetan that commands, of whom you may buy Mutton, Pullets, or Pidgeons. But where there live none but Banians, there is nothing but Flower, Rice, Herbs and Milk-meats to be had.

The great heats in India enforcing the Travellers, that are not accuſtomed to them, to travel by night, and reſt in the day-time; when they come into any fortified Towns, they muſt be gone before Sun-ſet, if they intend to travel that night. For night coming on, and the Gates being ſhut, the Commander of the place, who is to anſwer for all the Robberies that are committed within his Juriſdiction, will let no perſon ſtir forth, telling them that it is the King's order, to which he muſt be obedient. When I came to any of thoſe Towns, I brought my Proviſions, and went out again in good time, and ſtaid in the Field under ſome Tree, in the freſh air, till it was time to ſet forward.

They meaſure the diſtances of places in India by Gos, and Coſtes. A Gos is about four of our common leagues, and a Coſte is one league. It is now time to travel from Surat to Agra, and Janabat, and to obſerve what is moſt remarkable upon the Road.

CHAP. IV.

The Road from Surat to Agra, through Brampour and Seronge.

I Am no leſs well acquainted with all the principal Roads that lead to the chief Cities in India, than thoſe of Turkey and Perſia; for in ſix times that I have travell'd from Paris to Iſpahan, I have gone twice for one from Iſpahan to Agra, and many other places of the Great Mogul's Empire. But it would be tireſome to the Reader to carry him more than once the ſame way, on purpoſe to make a relation of every particular journey, and the accidents that accompany them: And therefore let it ſuffice to give an exact deſcription of the Roads, without particularizing the diſtinct times that I went.

There are but two Roads from Surat to Agra, one through Brampour and Seronge, the other through Amadabat. The firſt ſhall be the Subject of this Chapter.

From Surat to Barnoly, coſtes 14

Barnoly is a great Borough-Town, where you are to ford a great River; and this firſt days journey you croſs a mixt Countrey, part Wood, through Fields of Wheat and Rice.

From Barnoly to Bahor, coſtes 10

Bahor is alſo a large Village upon a Lake, about a league in compaſs. Upon the ſide whereof is to be ſeen a good ſubſtantial Fortreſs; though there be no uſe made of it. Three quarters of a league on this ſide the Village you ford a ſmall River, though not without great difficulty, by reaſon of the Rocks and Stones that hazard the over-turning of the Coach. This ſecond days journey you travel almoſt altogether through Woods

From Balor to Kerkoa, or as it is call'd at this day, Carvanſera de la Begum, coſtes 5

This Carvanſera or Inn is very large and commodious; being built out of Charity by Begum-ſaheb the Daughter of Cha-jehan. For formerly the journey from Balor to Navapoura was too great: And this place being upon the Frontiers of thoſe Raja's that ſometimes will not acknowledge the Great Mogul, whoſe Vaſſals they are, there was no Caravan that paſt by which was not abuſed; beſides that it is a wooddy-Country. Between Carvanſera and Navapoura you ford a River; as alſo another very neer to Navapoura.

From Kerkoa to Navapoura, coſtes 75

Navapoura is a great Town full of Weavers; but Rice is the greateſt Commodity of that place. There runs a River through the Country, which makes it very fruitful, and waters the Rice, that requires moiſture. All the Rice which grows in this Country has one peculiar quality, that makes it more particularly eſteem'd esteem'd. The grain of it is less by one half, than the grain of the common Rice; and when it is boil'd no snow is whiter; but besides all that, it smells of Musk; and all the Grandees of the Indians eat no other. When they would make an acceptable Present to any one in Persia, they send him a sack of this Rice. This River which passes by Kerkoa and those other places I have mention'd, empties it self into the River of Surat.

At Tallener you are to pass the River, which runs to Baroche; where it is very large, and empties it self into the Golf of Cambaya.

At Badelpoura it is, where the loaded Waggons pay the duties of Brampour; but the Waggons that carry nothing but Passengers pay nothing.

From Badelpoura to Brampour, costes. 5

Brampour is a great City, very much ruin'd, the Houses being for the most part thatch'd with straw. There is also a great Castle in the midst of the City, where the Governour lies; the Government of this Province is a very considerable command; and is only conferr'd upon the Son or Unckle of the King. And Aureng-zeb, the present King, was a long time Governour of this Province in the Reign of his Father. But since they came to understand the strength of the Province of Bengala, which formerly bore the Title of a Kingdom, that Province is now the most considerable in all the Mogul's Countrey. There is a great Trade in this City, and as well in Brampore, as over all the Province, there is made a prodigious quantity of Calicuts very clear and white, which are transported into Persia, Turkey and Muscovia, Poland, Arabia, to Grand Cairo, and other places. There are some which are painted with several colours, with flowers, of which the Women make Veils and Scarfs; the same Calicuts serve for Coverlets of Beds, and for Handkerchiefs. There is another sort of Linnen which they never dye, with a stripe or two of Gold or Silver quite through the piece, and at each end from the breadth of one inch to twelve or fifteen, in some more, in some less, they fix a tissue of Gold, Silver, and Silk, intermix'd with Flowers, whereof there is no wrong-side, both sides being as fair the one as the other. If these pieces, which they carry into Poland, where they have a vast utterance, want at each end three or four inches at the least of Gold or Silver; or if that Gold or Silver become tarnish'd in being carried by Sea from Surat to Ormus, and from Trebizan to Mangala, or any other parts upon the Black-Sea, the Merchant shall have much ado to put them off without great loss. He must take care that his goods be packt up in good Bales, that no wet may get in; which for so long a Voyage requires great care and trouble. Some of these Linnens are made purposely for Swathbands or Shashes, and those pieces are call'd Ornis. They contain from 15 to 20 Ells; and cost from an hundred to an hundred and fifty Roupies, the least, not being under ten or twelve ells. Those that are not above two ells long are worn by the Ladies of Quality for Veils and Scarfs, of which there is a vast quantity vended in Persia and Turkey. They make at Brampour also other sorts of Cotten-Linnen; for indeed there is no Province in all the Indies which more abounds in Cotton.

When you leave the City of Brampoure, you must pass another River, besides that which I have mention'd already. There is no Bridge, and therefore when the water is low, you ford it; when the rains fall, there are Boats attending.

From Surat to Brampour it is 132 Costes; and these Costes are very short in the Indies; for you may travel one of them in a Coach in less than an hour.

I remember a strange tumult at Brampoure, in the year 1641, when I returned from Agra to Surat; the cause whereof was thus, in short: The Governour of the Province, who was the King's Nephew by the Mother's-side, had among his Pages a young Boy that was very beautiful, and of a very good Family, who had a Brother in the City that liv'd as a Dervich; and for whom all the Town had a very great veneration. One day the Governour, being alone in his Chamber, did all that lay in his power, by vertue of Gifts and Careſſes to have had the uſe of his Body; but the Boy deteſting his abominable purpoſe, made his eſcape from him, and came and told his Brother. The Dervich, without deliberating what Counſel he had to give his younger Brother, gave him a Sword, ſuch a one as he might eaſily hide under his Garment; and told him, that if the Governour urg'd him any more, that he ſhould make a ſhew of complying with him, but that when he went about to do the fact, he ſhould be ſure to run him into the Guts. The Governour, who knew nothing of what the Page had reveal'd to his Brother, ceas'd not every day to court him to conſent to his infamous luſt; and being one day alone with him in a ſmall Apartment of a Banquetting-Houſe, at the lower end of his Garden, he ſent for his Page to fan him, and to keep off the Flies, after the faſhion of the Countrey; for it was about noon, when every one goes to ſleep. Then did the Governour begin again to preſs the young Page; and finding that he made no reſiſtance, he thought he ſhould ſuddenly accompliſh his deſign. But the Page ſeeing him ready to commit the act, ſtab'd him three times into the Belly, before he could open his mouth to cry out for help. That done, the Page went out of the Palace, without any diſturbance in his countenance; ſo that the Guards believ'd that the Governour had ſent him out upon ſome errand. The Dervich underſtanding by his Brother what had paſs'd, to ſave him from the fury of the people, and to diſcover the Infamy of the Governour, caus'd the reſt of the Dervichs his Companions, to take the Banners of Mahomet, that were planted round the Moſquee; and at the ſame time with loud cries encourag'd all the reſt of the Dervichs, Faquirs, and others that were good Mahometans, to follow him. In leſs than an hours time he had got together an infinite multitude of the Rabble, and the Dervich marching at the head of them, they made directly to the Palace, crying out with all their might, Let us dye for Mahomet, or let us have that infamous perſon deliver'd up into our hands, to the end the Dogs may eat him after his death, not being worthy to be enterr'd among the Muſſelmen. The Guard of the Palace was not in a condition to reſiſt ſo great a Multitude, ſo that they muſt have been forced to have yeilded to their fury, had not the Deroga of the Town, and ſome five or ſix Lords, found a way to make themſelves to be heard, and to appeaſe them, by repreſenting to them, that they ought to have ſome reſpect to the Nephew of the King; by that means obliging them to retire. That night the Body of the Governour was ſent to Agra, with his Haram; and Chu-jehan, who then reign'd, being inform'd of the accident, was not much troubl'd, becauſe he is Heir to all the goods of his Subjects; and at the ſame time he beſtow'd upon the Page a ſmall Government in the Province of Bengala.

From Brampour to Piombi-ſera, coſtes

Before we go any farther, you muſt take notice, that where-ever you meet with the word Sera, it ſignifies a great Incloſure of Walls and Hedges, within which are about fifty or ſixty Huts, cover'd over with Straw. There are ſome men and women that there put to ſale Flower, Rice, Butter, and Herbs, and make it their buſineſs to bake Bread and boil Rice. If there be any Mahumetan in that place, he will go to the City, and buy a little piece of Mutton, or a Fowl; and thoſe that ſell Victuals to the Travellers, always cleanſe the Hut which they take up, and put into it a little Bed with girths, to lay a Mattreſs or Quilt upon, which the Travellers carry along with them.

Seronge is a great City, the moſt part of the Inhabitants whereof are Banian Merchants, and Handicraft-trades-men from Father to Son, which is the reaſon that there are in this City ſeveral Houſes of Stone and Brick. There is alſo a great Trade for all ſorts of painted Calicuts, which are called Chites, which is the cloathing of all the meaner ſort of people both in Perſia and Turkey: Of which in other Countreys alſo they make uſe, for Coverlets for Beds, and Table-napkins. They make the ſame ſort of Calicuts in other Countreys as well as at Seronge, but the colours are not ſo lively; beſides, that they wear out with often waſhing. Whereas thoſe that are made at Seronge, the more you waſh them, the fairer the colours ſhew. There runs a River by the City, the water whereof has that vertue, that it gives that beauty and livelineſs to the colours. And all the while the rains fall, the Workmen will make theſe prints upon their Cottons, according to the Patterns which the Forreign Merchants give them; for when the waters are ceas'd, the water is the thicker; and the oftener they dip their Calicuts, the better the colours hold.

There is alſo made at Seronge another ſort of Calicut, which is ſo fine, that when a man puts it on, his skin ſhall appear through it, as if he were naked. The Merchants are not permitted to tranſport it. For the Governour ſends it all to the Seraglio of the Great Mogul, and to the principal Lords of the Court. Of this, the Sultaneſſes, and great Noblemen's Wives make them Shifts and Garments in hot-weather: And the King and the Lords take great pleaſure to behold them in thoſe Shifts, and to ſee them Dance with nothing elſe upon their Bodies.

From Brampore to Seronge is an hundred and one coſtes, which are longer than thoſe from Surat to Brampore; for the Coach is a full hour, and ſometimes five quarters, going one of theſe coſtes. In theſe hundred leagues of the Countrey you travel whole days journeys along by moſt fertil Fields of Corn and Rice, being lovely Champaign, where you meet with very little Wood; and from Seronge to Agra, the Countrey is much of the ſame nature: And becauſe the Villages lye thick together, your journey is the more pleaſant; beſides, that you may reſt when you pleaſe.

Callabas is a great Town, which was formerly the Reſidence of a Raja, who paid Tribute to the Great Mogul. But when Orang-zeb came to the Crown, he not only cut off his, but a great number of the heads of his Subjects. There are two Towers near the Town, upon the high-way, and round about the Towers are ſeveral holes, like windows; and in every hole, two foot diſtant one from another, there is fix'd a man's head. In my laſt Travels in the year 1665, it had not been long ſince that Execution had been done; for then all the Heads were whole, and caus'd a very ill ſmell:

From Callabas to Akmate, coſtes 2
From Akmate to Collaſar, coſtes 9

Collaſar is a little Town, all the Inhabitants whereof are Idolaters. As I paſt through it upon my laſt Travels, there were brought to it eight Pieces of Artillery, the one carrying 48 pound-Bullet, the reſt 36. Every Piece was drawn by 24 Yoke of Oxen. A very ſtrong Elephant follow'd the Artillery, and when they came to any bad-way, where the Oxen were at a ſtand, they brought up the Elephant, who heav'd the Cannon forward with his Trunk. Without the Town, all along the high-way, there grows a vaſt number of great Trees, which they call Mangues; and in many places near the Trees are to be ſeen little Pagods, with every one an Idol at the door. The Elephant paſſing by one of the Pagods, before which I was lodg'd, at the door whereof there ſtood three Idols about five foot high; ſo ſoon as he came near one, he took it up in his trunk, and broke it in two pieces; the next he took, he threw it up ſo high, and ſo far, that he broke it in four pieces; and carried away the head of the third along with him. Some thought that the Governour of the Elephant had taught him what to do, and made ſigns to him, which however I did not obſerve; nevertheleſs the Banians were very much offended, though they durſt not ſay any thing; for there was a Guard of above two thouſand men that convoy'd the Artillery, all Souldiers of the King, and Mahometans, beſides Franguis, or Franks, Engliſh and Hollanders that were Cannoneers. The King ſent this Artillery to his Army in Decan, being at Wars with the Raja Seva-gi, who the year before had plunder'd Surat; of whom I ſhall have occaſion to ſpeak in another place.

From Dongry to Gate, coſtes 3

Gate is a ſtrait paſſage of the Mountains, a quarter of a League in length, the deſcent whereof leads from Surat to Agra. At the entery thereof you ſee the ruins of two or three Caſtles, and the Road is ſo narrow, that two Waggons can hardly go a breſt. They that come from the South to go to Agra, as from Surat, Goa, Viſapore, Golconda, Maſtipatan, and other places, cannot avoid theſe ſtreights, there being no other Road but this, eſpecially if you take the Road from Amadabat. Formerly there was a Gate at each end of the ſtreight, and at that end which is next to Agra, there are five or ſix Shops of Banians, that ſell Flower, Butter, Rice, Herbs and Pulſe. In my laſt Travels I ſtaid at one of theſe Shops, to tarry for the Coaches and Waggons, all the Paſſengers alighting at the foot of the Streights. Not far off there is a great Magazin full of ſacks of Rice and Corn; and behind every ſack lay a Serpent thirteen or fourteen foot long, and proportionable in bigneſs. A Woman that went to fetch Corn out of one of thoſe ſacks, was bitten by one of thoſe Serpents, and perceiving her ſelf wounded, ran out of the Magazin, crying out Ram, Ram, that is, O God, O God; whereupon ſeveral Banians, men and women came running to her relief, and bound her arm very hard above the wound, thinking to ſtop the venom from running any higher. But all in vain, for immediately her face ſwell'd and turn'd black, and ſhe dy'd in leſs than an hour. The Ragipou's, who are the beſt Souldiers among the Indians, and are all Idolaters, came in juſt as the woman was expiring, and about four of them entring with their Skains, and Half-pikes in their hands into the Magaziu, kill'd the Serpent. The people of the Village took and threw it without the Town, and immediately there came a great number of Birds of prey, which lighting upon the Carrion, devour'd it in leſs than an hours time. The Parents of the woman took her body, carri'd it to the River, waſh'd it, and then burnt it. I was forc'd to ſtay two days at that place, becauſe there was a River to paſs, which inſtead of falling, ſwell'd at that time, by reaſon of the rains that fell for three or four days together: So that I was conſtrain'd to go half a league lower before I could croſs it. They always endeavour'd to ford this River; for otherwiſe they muſt be compell'd to unload the Wgagon into the Boats; and alſo to carry the Goods in their arms for above half a league, which is worſe way than can be imagin'd. The people get their livings by the Paſſengers, from whom they extort as much as they can, there being none but they that know the ways: Otherwiſe it would be an eaſy thing to make a Bridge, there being no want either of Wood or Stone near at hand. For the paſſage is nothing but thorough Rocks, that lie between the Mountain and the River; ſo that the waters when they ſwell, overflow all the Road, in-ſo-much that no-body can paſs it, but they who are very well acquainted with it.

From Gate to Nader, coſtes 4

Nader is a great City upon the deſcent of a Mountain, at the top whereof is a kind of Fortreſs; all the Mountain being encompaſt with walls. The greateſt part of the Houſes, as in all other Cities of India, are thatch'd with ſtraw, one Story high; but the Rich-men's Houſes, are two Stories, and terraſs'd. Round about the City are ſeveral great ponds to be ſeen, which were formerly encompaſt with hewn-ſtone, but now are not at all look'd after: yet there are very fair Monuments about them. The ſame River which we paſt the day before, and which we repaſs four or five Coſtes on this ſide Nader, encompaſſes three parts of the City and Mountain, like a Peninſula, and after a long winding-courſe which it takes, falls at length into Ganges. At Nader they make a great quantity of quilted-Coverlets, ſome white, others embroidered with Flowers of Gold, Silk and Satin.

From Nader to Barqui-ſera, coſtes 9

From Barqui-ſera to Trie, coſtes 3

From Trie to Goualeor, coſtes 6

Goualeor is a great City ill-built, like all the reſt, after the manner of the Indians; it is built all along the ſide of a Mountain that lies upon the Weſt-ſide of it; and which at the top is encompaſt with Walls and Towers. There are in this Encloſure ſeveral Ponds made by the rains; and what they ſow there is ſufficient to keep the Garriſon: For which reaſon it is eſteem'd one of the beſt in the Indies. Upon the deſcent of the Hill, which looks towards the North-eaſt, Cha-jean built an Houſe of Pleaſure; from whence there is a Proſpect over all the City, and indeed it may ſerve for a Garriſon. Below the Houſe are to be ſeen ſeveral Idols cut out of the Rock, repreſenting the ſhapes of their Gods: And among the reſt, there is one of an extraordinary heighth.

Since the Mahometan Kings became Maſters of this Countrey, this Fortreſs of Goualeor is the place where they ſecure Princes and great Noblemen. Cha-jehan coming to the Empire by foul-play, caus'd all the Princes and Lords whom he miſtruſted, to be ſeiz'd one after another, and ſent them to the Fortreſs of Goualeor; but he ſuffer'd them all to live, and enjoy their Eſtates. Aureng-zeb his Son acts quite otherwiſe; For when he ſends any great Lord to this place, at the end of nine or ten days he orders him to be poiſon'd; and this he does that the people may not exclaim againſt him for a bloody Prince. So ſoon as he had in his clutches Prince Morat-Bakche his youngeſt Brother, whom he engaged to take Arms againſt his Father Cha-jehan; and who being Governor of the Province of Guzerat, took upon him the Title of King, he ſent him to this Fortreſs, where he dy'd. They have made him a moſt magnificent Monument in the City in a Moſquee, which they built on Purpoſe, with a great Piazza before it all ſurrounded with Vaults and Shops over them. For it is the cuſtom of the Indians, when they rear any publick building, to make a great Piazza before it, where they keep their Markets, with a Foundation for the Poor, to whom they give Alms every day, as being to pray to God for him that rais'd the Fabrick.

Not far from this Bridg it is, that they view the Merchants Goods, that when they come to Agra they may not be deceiv'd of their duties. But more particularly to ſee whether among the Casks of Fruits pickl'd in Vinegar, in pots of Glaſs, there be no flasks of Wine.

CHAP. V.

The Road from Surat to Agra through Amadabat.

FRom Surat to Baroche, coſtes 22
All the Countrey between theſe two Cities is full of Corn, Rice, Millet, and Sugar-Canes. Before you enter into Baroche, you muſt Ferry over the River which runs to Cambaya, and falls into the Golf that carries the ſame name.

Baroche is a great City, to which there belongs a Fortreſs, of which there is no uſe made at this time. But the City has been always very famous, by reaſon of the River, which has a particular quality to whiten their Cottons; which are brought thither from all parts of the Great Mogul's Territories, where they have not that convenience. In this place are made a great quantity of Baffa's, or long and large pieces of Cotton. Theſe Cottons are very fair, and cloſe woven; and the price of theſe pieces is from four to an hundred Roupies. You muſt pay Cuſtom at Baroche for all Goods that are brought in and carri'd out. The Engliſh have a very fair Houſe in the City; and I remember once, that coming thither one day in my return from Surat to Agra with the Preſident of the Engliſh, preſently the Mountebanks came about him, and ask'd him if he would ſee any of their tricks. The firſt thing they did was to light a great fire, and to heat certain Iron-chains red-hot, and wind them about their bodies, making as if they felt a great deal of pain, but in truth receiving no harm at all. Then they thruſt a piece of a ſtick into the ground, and ask'd the Company what Fruit they would have. One told them, he would have Mengues; then one of the Mountebanks hiding himſelf in the middle of a Sheet, ſtoopt to the ground five or ſix times one after another. I was ſo curious to go up ſtairs, and look out of a window, to ſee if I could ſpy what the Mountebank did; and perceived, that after he had cut himſelf under the armpits with a Razor, he rubb'd the ſtick with his Blood. After the two firſt times that he rais'd himſelf, the ſtick ſeem'd to the very eye to grow. The third time there ſprung out branches with young buds. The fourth time the Tree was covered with leaves; and the fifth time it bore flowers. The Preſident of the Engliſh had then his Miniſter with him, having brought him from Amadabat to Chriſten the Commander of the Hollander's Child, to which he had promiſed to be Godfather. The Engliſh Miniſter Proteſted that he could not give his conſent that any Chriſtian ſhould be a ſpectator of ſuch deluſions. So that as ſoon as he ſaw that thoſe Mountebanks had of a dry-ſtick, in leſs then half an hour, made a Tree four or five foot high, that bare leaves and flowers as in the Spring-time; he went about to break it, proteſting he would not give the Communion to any perſon that ſhould ſtay any longer to ſee thoſe things. Thereupon the Preſident was forc'd to diſmiſs the Mountebanks, who wander about the Countrey with their Wives and Children juſt like Gipſies; and having given them to the value of ten or twelve Crowns, they went away very well contented.

They that are curious to ſee Cambaya, never go out of their way above five or ſix Coſtes, or thereabout. For when you are at Baroche, inſtead of going to Broudra, you may go directly forward to Cambaya, from thence afterwards to Amadabat. But whether it be for buſineſs, or out of curioſity, the latter Road is never to be taken; not only becauſe it is the longeſt way, but becauſe of the danger in croſſing the mouth of the Golf.

Cambaya is a great City at the bottom of the Golf that bears its name. Here it is that they ſhape thoſe fair Agats, that come from the Indies, into Cups, Hafts of Knives, Beads, and other ſorts of Workmanſhip. In the parts adjacent to the City, they alſo make Indigo of the ſame nature of that of

Sar-

Sarqueſs; and it was famous for traffick at the time when the Portugueſes flouriſh'd in India. There are to be ſeen at this day, in the Quarter next the Sea, very fair Houſes, which they had built, with very rich Furniture, after the Portugal manner; but now they are uninhabited, and fall to decay every day more and more. There were then ſuch good Orders obſerv'd in Cambaya, that two hours after day was ſhut in, every Street was lock't up with two Gates, which are ſtill to be ſeen; and ſtill they continue to lock up the principal Streets, as alſo the Streets that lead into the Town. One of the chief reaſons why the Town has loſt the greateſt part of its Trade is, becauſe that formerly the Sea run cloſe up to Cambaya, ſo that little Veſſels eaſily anchor'd by it; but afterwards the Sea daily loſt in that part, ſo that a ſmall Ship could not ride within five or ſix Leagues of the City.

There are a great number of Peacocks in the Indies, eſpecially in the Territories of Baroche, Cambaya, and Broudra. The fleſh of the young ones is white and well-taſted like ours, and you ſhall ſee vaſt numbers of them all day in the Fields, for at night they rooſt upon the Trees. 'Tis a hard matter to come near them in the day, for as ſoon as they perceive themſelves hunted, they fly away as ſwift as a Partridg among the Buſhes; ſo that it is impoſſible for any man to follow them without tearing his Cloaths all to rags; therefore are they only to be taken in the night time, to which purpoſe they have this invention. They approach the Tree with a kind of a Banner, upon which there is a Peacock painted to the life on both ſides; at the top of the ſtick are faſtn'd two lighted Candles, the brightneſs whereof amazing the Peacock, cauſes him to ſtretch out his Neck toward the end of the ſtick, to which there is a Rope ty'd with a ſliding knot, which he that holds the Banner draws, when he finds that the Peacock has put his Neck into it. But you muſt have a care of killing either Bird or any other Animal in the Territories, of which the idolatrous Rajah's are Maſters; which is nothing dangerous to do in thoſe parts of the Indies, where the Governors are Mahometans, and give liberty to Fowl or Hunt. It happen'd one time that a rich Perſian Merchant, paſſing through the Territories of the Raja of Dantivar, ſhot a Peacock upon the road, and kill'd it, either out of raſhneſs, or ignorance of the Cuſtoms of the Country. The Bannians incens'd at the attempt, which is accounted among them a moſt abominable ſacriledg, ſeiz'd upon the Merchant, and all his Money to the value of 300000. Roupies, and tying him to a Tree, whipt him in ſo terrible a manner for three days together, that the Man dy'd.

From Cambaya you go to a little Village diſtant ſome three Coſtes, where there is a Pagod, to which all the Indian Curtiſans come to make their Offerings. This Pagod is full of a great number of naked Images, among the reſt, there is a large Figure of one that ſeems to reſemble Apollo, with his privy parts all uncover'd. When the old Curtiſans have got together a good ſum of Money in their youth, they buy young Slaves, whom they teach to Daunce, and ſing wanton Songs, and inſtruct in all the myſteries of their infamous Art. And when theſe young Girls are eleven or twelve years old, their Miſtreſſes ſend them to this Pagod, believing it will bring them good fortune, to offer and ſurrender up themſelves to this Idol.

From this Pagod to Chiidabad you have ſix Coſtes. This is one of the faireſt Houſes of the great Mogul, with a wide Encloſure, wherein he has vaſt Gardens, and large Ponds, with all the pleaſures and curioſity whereof the Genius of the Indians is capable.

From Chiidabad to Amadabad you have but five Coſtes; and ſo I return to Baroche, and the common Road.

From Baroche to Broudra, Coſtes 22

Broudra is a great City ſtanding in a fertil Soil, wherein there is a vaſt Trade for Calicuts.

Amadabat is one of the greateſt Cities in India; and where there is a mighty Trade for Silk-Stuffs, Hangings of Gold and Silver, and others mix'd with Silk; for Salipeter, Sugar, Ginger candid and raw; Tamarins, Mirobolans; and flat

Indigo,

Indigo, which is made at a great Town, not far from Amadabat, called Sarqueſs. There was in that place a Pagod, which the Mahumetan's have pull'd down, and built a Moſquee in the place. Before you enter into it, you muſt croſs three large Courts pav'd with Marble, and encompaſt with Galleries; nor muſt you enter into the third Court till you have pull'd off your ſhooes. The inſide of the Moſquee is adorn'd with Moſaick-work, the greateſt part whereof is of Agats of divers colours, which they fetch from the Mountains of Cambaya, not above two days journey off. There are ſeveral Sepulchres of the ancient Idolatrous Kings, that look like little Chappels, of Moſaick-work, built upon a Vault that is under the Sepulchre. There runs a River from Amadabat toward the North-weſt, which during the rainy-ſeaſons that continue three or four Months together, is very wide and rapid, and does much miſchief every year. It is ſo with all the other Rivers in India; and after the rains are fallen, you muſt ſtay ſix weeks or two months before you can ford Amadabat-River, where there is no Bridg. There are two or three Boats; but they are of no uſe, when the ſtream is ſo ſwift; ſo that you muſt ſtay till the waters are fall'n. But the people of the Countrey will not ſtay ſo long; for to croſs from one River to another, they only make uſe of Goat-skins, which they blow up and fill with wind, and then tye them between their ſtomacks and their bellies. Thus the poor men and women ſwim croſs this River, and when they would carry their children along with them, they put them in certain round pots of Earth, the mouth whereof is four fingers wide, and drive the Pots before them. This puts me in mind of a Paſſage, when I was at Amadabat in the year 1642, which is too remarkable to be omitted.

A Countrey-man and a Countrey-woman one day paſt the River as I have related, and having a child about two years old, they put it into one of theſe Pots, ſo that there was nothing but the head appear'd. Being about the middle of the River, they met with a little bank of Sand, where there lay an huge Tree, which the ſtream had carry'd thither; whereupon the Father ſhov'd the Pot toward that part, to reſt himſelf awhile. When he came near the Tree, the trunk whereof lay ſomewhat above the water, a Serpent leapt out from among the roots, into the Pot where the Infant was. The Father and the Mother frighted at the accident, and having almoſt loſt their ſenſes, let the Pot go a-drift where the ſtream carri'd it, and lay almoſt dead themſelves at the bottom of the Tree. About two leagues lower, a Banian and his Wife with a little Infant, were waſhing themſelves in the River before they went to eat. They deſcry'd the Pot a-far-off, with the half of the Infant's-head that appear'd above the hole. The Banian immediately ſwims to the relief of the child, and having ſtopp'd the Pot, drives it to the ſhoar. The Mother follow'd by her own, comes preſently to take the other child out of the Pot, at what time the Serpent that had done no harm to the other child, ſhoots out of the Pot, and winding about hers, ſtings it, and infuſes its venom into the Infant, ſo that it dy'd immediately. However, the accident being ſo extraordinary, did not trouble theſe poor people; who rather believ'd it to have happen'd by the ſecret diſpoſal of their Deity, who had taken from them one child, to give them another for it, with which opinion they preſently comforted themſelves. Some time after, the report of this accident coming to the ears of the firſt Country-man, he comes to the Banian to tell him how the miſchance had happen'd, and to demand his child of him; the other Indian affirming that the child was his, and that his God had ſent it him, in the place of that which was dead. To be ſhort, the buſineſs made ſo loud a noiſe, that it was at length brought before the King, who order'd, that the child ſhould be reſtor'd to the Father.

At the ſame time there happen'd another very pleaſant accident in the ſame City of Amadabat. The Wife of a rich Merchant Banian, nam'd Saintidas, never having had a child, and manifeſting her eager deſire to have one, a ſervant of the Houſe took her a-ſide one day, and told her, that if ſhe would but eat that which he would give her, ſhe ſhould be with child. The woman deſirous to know what ſhe was to eat, the ſervant told her it was a little fiſh, and that ſhe ſhould eat but three or four. Now the Religion of the Banians forbidding them to eat any thing that has life, ſhe could not at firſt reſolve to yield to his propoſal; but the ſervant having promiſed her that he would ſo order the matter, that ſhe ſhould not know whether it were fiſh or no that ſhe eat, ſhe reſolv'd to try his receit, and went the next night to lie with her Husband, according to the inſtruction which ſhe had received from the Servant. Some time after, the woman perceiving that ſhe was big, her Husband happen'd to die, and the kindred of the deceaſed would have his Eſtate. The Widow oppoſed them, and told them that it behov'd them to ſtay, till they ſaw whether the Child ſhe went withal, would live or no. Her kindred were ſurpriz'd to hear ſuch news that they ſo little expected, and tax'd her for one that either ly'd or jeſted with them; knowing that the woman had liv'd fifteen or ſixteen years with her Husband, yet never had been with Child. Seeing therefore that her kindred ſtill tormented her, ſhe went and threw her ſelf at the Governour's feet, to whom ſhe related all that had paſt; who thereupon order'd that the kindred ſhould ſtay till the woman was deliver'd. Some days after ſhe had lain-in, the kindred of the deceas'd Merchant, who were Perſons of Credit, and gap'd after ſo fair an inheritance, affirm'd that the child was not Legitimate, and that ſhe had it not by her Husband. The Governour, to underſtand the truth of the matter, calls for the Phyſicians; who concluded, that the Infant ſhould be carried to the Bath, ſaying, that if the Receit which the Mother had made uſe of, were real, the ſweat of the Child would ſmell of Fiſh; which was done accordingly, and the Experiment prov'd true. Thereupon the Governour order'd that the Child ſhould have the Eſtate, the Merchant being ſo proud to be his Father: But the kindred, troubl'd that ſuch a fat Morſel had eſcap'd their mouths, appeal'd to the King. Upon their relation of the ſtory, the King wrote to the Governour to ſend him the Mother and the Infant, to the end the Experiment might be made in his preſence: which having the ſame ſucceſs as before, the kindred ſurceas'd their claim, and the Eſtate remain'd to the Mother and the Infant.

I remember alſo another pleaſant Story which was related to me at Amadabat, where I have been ten or twelve times. A Merchant with whom I often dealt, and who was very well belov'd by Cha-Eſt-Kan, Governour of the Province, and the King's Uncle, had the reputation never to have told a lye. Cha-Eſt-Kan, after the three years of his Government were expir'd, according to the cuſtom of the Great Mogul, and that Aureng-zeb, the King's Son was come into his place, retir'd to Agra, where the Court then was. One day, diſcourſing with the King, he told him, that he had ſeen many rare things in the Government, with which his Majeſty had honour'd him, but that one thing above all the reſt had aſtoniſh'd him, to have met with a Rich Merchant that had never told a lye, and yet he was above threeſcore and ten years of age. The King ſurpriz'd at a thing ſo extraordinary, ſignified to Cha-Eſt-Kan, his deſire to ſee the perſon, and commanded him to ſend for him to Agra, which he did. The Old-Man was very much troubl'd, as well in regard of the length of the way, it being a journey of 25 or 30 days, as for that he was to make a Preſent to the King. In ſhort, he provided one, eſteem'd at fourty-thouſand Roupies, to carry Betle in, enchas'd with Diamonds, Rubies, and Emraulds. When he had made his obeyſance to the King, and given him his Preſent, the King ask'd him only what was his name, to whom he replyed, that he was call'd the man that had never told a lye. Then the King ask'd him who was his Father? Sir, ſaid he, I cannot tell; his Majeſty ſatisfi'd with an anſwer, ſtopt there, and unwilling to trouble him any farther, commanded an Elephant to be given him, which is a very great Honour, and ten thouſand Roupies to bear his charges home.

The Banians have a great Veneration for Apes, and there are ſome which they breed up in their Pagods to worſhip. There are three or four Houſes in Amadabat which they make uſe of for Hoſpitals for Cowes, Oxen, Apes, and other ſick or maim'd Beaſts; and they carry all they can find thither to preſerve them. This is alſo very remarkable, that every Tueſday and Friday, all the Apes in the places adjoyning to Amadabat, of their own accord come to the City, and get upon the tops of their Houſes, where they lye, during the exceſſive heats. And therefore upon thoſe days the People never fail to ſet ready in their Terraſſes, Rice, Millet, Sugar-Canes in their ſeaſons, and other ſuch-like things. For if the Apes did not find their proviſion when they came, they would break the Tiles where-with the reſt of the Houſe is cover'd, and do a great deal of miſchief.

chief. And you muſt here take notice alſo, that the Ape never eats any thing which he does not very well like the ſcent of before-hand; and before he ſwallows any-thing, he lays up his Magazin againſt future hunger; filling his bags with proviſion, which he keeps till next day.

I have ſaid, that the Banians have a particular Veneration for the Ape; of which I will give you one Example, among many, that I could bring. Being one day at Amadabat, at the Houſe belonging to the Hollanders, a young man of that Nation newly arriv'd to ſerve in the Factory, not knowing the cuſtom of the Countrey, and ſeeing a great Ape upon a Tree in the Court, would needs ſhew a piece of activity, or rather a trick of youth, to kill the Ape with a ſmall Gun. I was at the Table then with the Dutch-Commander; and we no ſooner heard the blow, but we heard as ſoon a loud noiſe of Banians, that wait upon the Holland-Company, who came to complain bitterly of him that had kill'd the Ape. They would all have been gone; ſo that the Commander had much ado, and made many excuſes before he could appeaſe them, and oblige them to ſtay.

In the Neighbourhood about Amadabat, there are a great number of Apes. And this is obſervable, that where there are a great number of thoſe Animals, there are very few Crows. For as ſoon as they have built their Neſts and laid their Eggs, the Apes get upon the Trees and throw their Eggs to the Ground. One day returning from Agra, and departing out of Amadabat with the Engliſh Preſident, who came hither about ſome buſineſs, and was returning to Surat, we paſs'd through a little Forreſt of Trees, call'd Mangues, ſome four or five Leagues from Amadabat; there we ſaw a vaſt number of great Monkeys, male and female, and many of their females holding their young ones in their Arms. We had each of us our Coach, and the Engliſh Preſident cauſing his to ſtop, told me he had an excellent and very neat Harquebuſs, that was preſented him by the Governor of Daman, and knowing I could aim well, he deſir'd me to try it, at one of thoſe Apes. One of my Servants, who was born in the Country, making me a ſign not to venture, I endeavoured to diſſwade the Preſident from his deſign; but it was impoſſible; ſo that I took the Harquebuſs, and kill'd a female Monkey, who lay ſtretch'd out upon the Boughs, letting her little ones fall to the ground. But it fell out as my Servant had forewarn'd me. For immediately all the Monkeys that were upon the Trees, to the number of ſixty, came down in a great fury, to have leap'd into the Preſidents Coach, where they would ſoon have ſtrangled him, had we not prevented them by cloſing the Shutters, and had we not had a great number of Servants, that with much ado kept them off. And though they came not to my Coach, yet I was very much afraid of my ſelf; for they purſued the Preſident's Coach above a League, and they were ſtout luſty Monkeys.

Chirpour is a very good City, ſo called by reaſon of the great Trade for painted-Calicuts, which are called Chites: Near which, ſome four or five-hundred paces toward the South, there runs a ſmall River. Arriving at Chirpour in one of my Voyages, I pitch'd my Tent under two or three Trees at the end of a wide-place neer the Town. A little while after I ſaw four or five Lions appear, which were brought to be tam'd; which they told me took them up five or ſix months; and their way to do it, is this: They tye the Lions at twelve paces diſtance one from another by the hinder-legs, with a Rope faſten'd to a great woodden-ſtake ſet deep in the ground, with another cord about the neck, which the Maſter holds in his hand. Theſe ſtakes are planted in the ſame Line, and in another Parallel they ſtretch out another Cord as long as the ſpace, which the bodies of the Lions ſo diſpos'd of, as I have deſcrib'd, take up. The two Cords which hold the Lion ty'd by the two hinder-feet, give him liberty to ſpring out as far as that long Cord; which is a mark to thoſe that ſtand to provoke and incenſe the Lions, by throwing ſtones and pieces of wood at them, not to venture any farther: The people run to ſee the fight, and when the Lion, provok'd, gives a ſpring towards the Cord, the Maſter holds holds another in his hand, ty'd about his neck, that pulls him back. Thus they accuſtom the Lion by degrees to be familiar with the people, and at my coming to Chiapour, I ſaw this Divertiſement without ſtirring out of my Coach.

The next day I had another, meeting with a knot of Faquirs, or Mahometan Dervichs. I counted fifty-ſeven, among whom, he that was the Chief or Superior, had been Grand Eſquire to Cha-jehan-guir, having left the Court, when Sultan Boulaki, his youngeſt Son, was ſtrangl'd by Order of Cha-jehan; there were four others, who next to the Superior, were chief of the Company, who had been alſo great Lords in the ſame Cha-jehan's Court. All the Cloaths thoſe five Dervichs had, were only four ells of Orange-colour-Calicut to hide what modeſty will have hid before and behind, and every one of them a Tygers-skin over their ſhoulders ty'd together under their chins. They had led before them eight fair Horſes-ſaddl'd and bridl'd; three whereof had Bridles of Gold, and Saddles cover'd with Plates of Gold, and the other five had Bridles of Silver cover'd with Plates of Silver, and a Leopard's-skin upon every one. The other Dervichs had only a Cord for their Girdle, to which was faſten'd a piece of Calicut only to cover their private parts. Their hair was ty'd in wreaths round about their heads after the manner of a Turbant. They were all well-arm'd, the moſt part with Bows and Arrows, ſome with Muskets, and others with Half-pikes, with another ſort of weapon which we have not in Europe; that is to ſay, a ſharp piece of Iron like the ſide of a Platter without a bottom, which they wind eight or ten times about their necks, and carry like a Calves Chaldron. They draw out theſe Iron-Circles as they intend to make uſe of them; and they will throw them with ſuch a force againſt a man, that they ſhall fly as ſwift as an Arrow, and go very neer to cut a man in two in the middle. They had every one, beſides all this, an Hunting-Horn, which they wind, making a prodigious noiſe when they come to any place, and when they go away; together with a Grater or Raſp, being an Iron-Inſtrument, made like a Trowel. This is an Inſtrument which the Indians carry generally about them when they travel, to ſcrape and make clean the places where they intend to reſt; and ſome of them, when they have ſcrap'd all the duſt together into an heap, make uſe of it inſtead of a Mattreſs or Pillow to lie eaſily upon. There were ſome of them that were arm'd with long Tucks; which they had bought either of the Engliſh or Portugals. Their Luggage conſiſted of four great Cheſts full of Perſian and Arabian Books, and ſome Kitchen-houſhold-ſtuff: They had alſo ten or twelve Oxen to carry their ſick. When the Dervichs came to the place where I lay with my Coach, having about fifty perſons with me, as well of the people of the Countrey, as of my own ſervants; the Chief or Superior of the Troop ſeeing me ſo well-attended, enquir'd what Aga that was; and deſir'd me to let him have that place which I had taken up, as being the moſt convenient in all that place, for him and his Dervichs to lodg. When they told me the quality of the Chief, and the four Dervichs that attended him, I was willing to be civil, and to yield to their requeſt; and thereupon I left them the place free. After they had well-water'd the place, and laid the duſt, they lighted two fires, as if it had been in the froſt and ſnow for the five principal Dervichs, who ſate and chaf'd themſelves before and behind. That very evening, after they had ſupp'd the Governour of the Town came to complement the principal Dervichs, and during their ſtay, ſent them Rice and other things, which they are accuſtom'd to eat. When they come to any place, the Superior ſends ſome of his Crew a begging into the Towns and Villages, and what Alms they get, is preſently diſtributed equally among them; every one of them taking care to boil his own Rice. What is over and above they give to the Poor in the evening; for they reſerve nothing till next day.

Bargant is in the Territories of a Raja, to whom you pay duties. In one of my journeys to Agra, paſſing through Bargant, I did not ſee the Raja, but only his Lieutenant, who was very civil to me, and made me a Preſent of Rice, Butter, and Fruit in ſeaſon. To make him amends, I gave him three Shaſhes of Gold and Silk, four Handkerchiefs of painted Linnen, and two Bottles, the one full of Aquavitæ, and the other full of Spaniſh-Wine. At my departure he ſent a Convoy of twenty Horſe four or five leagues along with me.

One evening being about to lodg upon the Frontiers of the Territories of the Raja of Bargant, my people came to me and told me, that if we took the Road through Bargant, we ſhould go neer to have all our throats cut, for that the Raja of that place liv'd altogether upon Robbery. So that unleſs I hir'd an hundred more of the Country-people, there was no likelihood of eſcaping thoſe Free-booters. At firſt I argu'd with them, and tax'd their Cowardice, but fearing to pay for my raſhneſs afterwards, I ſent them to hire fifty more, for three days only, that we croſs'd the Raja's Country: for which they ask'd me every one four Roupies, which is as much as you give them for a whole Month. The next day as I was about to ſet forward, my Guard came and told me they would leave me, and that they would not venture their lives, deſiring me not to write to Agra to their Captain, who was reſponſible for them, that they had left me againſt my will. Three of my ſervants alſo did as they did, ſo that I had no body left with me, but a man that lead an Horſe in his hand, my Coachman, and three other ſervants, and ſo I ſet forward under the protection of God. About a league from the place which I had left, I perceived ſome part of my Convoy following me. Thereupon I ſtopt my Coach to ſtay for them, and when they came neer, I bid them advance if they intended to go along with me. But ſeeing them fearful, and unreſolv'd, I bid them go about their buſineſs, telling them I had no need of ſuch Cowards as they were. About a league from thence I diſcover'd upon the brow of an Hill about fifty Horſe, four of which came riding up to me; when I perceived them, I alighted out of my Coach, and having with me ſome thirteen Spit-fires, I gave to every one of my men an Harquebuſs. The Horſe-men approaching, I kept my Coach between them and me, and had my Gun ready cockt, in caſe they ſhould aſſail me. But they made me a ſign, that I ſhould fear nothing; only that the Prince was a-Hunting, and had ſent to know what Strangers paſt through his Territories: I made anſwer, that I was the ſame Franguy that had paſt by five or ſix weeks before. By good luck, the very ſame Lieutenant to whom I had made the Preſent of Aquavitæ and Spaniſh-Wine, follow'd thoſe four Horſemen. And after he had teſtify'd how glad he was to ſee me, he ask'd me if I had any Wine; I told him I never travell'd without that: For indeed the Engliſh and Hollanders had preſented me with ſeveral Bottles at Agra. So ſoon as the Lieutenant was return'd to the Raja, the Raja himſelf came to me, and told me I was welcome; and bid me reſt my ſelf in a ſhady-place which he pointed to, about a league and an half from the place where we were. In the evening he came, and we ſtaid together two days to make merry; the Raja bringing alone with him certain Morrice-dancers, without which the Perſians and Indians can never think themſelves heartily merry. At my departure the Raja lent me 200 Horſe, to convoy me to the Frontiers of his Territories, for three days together; for which I only gave them three or four pound of Tobacco. When I came to Amadabat, the people would hardly believe that I had had ſo kind a reception from a Prince, that was noted for abuſing ſtrangers that paſt through his Countrey.

This spoil was done by the order of the Begum, in revenge of the Affront which the Inhabitants of Mirda had put upon her, who had not waited on her, and made her a Present as they ought to have done.

CHAP. VI.

The Road from Ispahan to Agra, through Candahar.

I Have made an exact description of some part of the Road, and brought the Reader as far as Candahar; it remains, that I carry him from Candahar to Agra; to which there are but two ways to go, either through Caboul, or through Multan. The latter way is the shorter by ten days journey. But the Caravan never goes that way. For from Candahar to Multan you travel almost all the way through Desarts; and sometimes you travel three or four days without meeting any water. So that the most ordinary and beaten Road, is through Caboul. Now from Candahar to Caboul, is twenty-four days journey; from Caboul to Lahor, twenty-two; from Lahor to Dehly, or Gehanabat, eighteen; from Dehly to Agra, six; which with the sixty days journey from Ispahan to Farat, and the twenty from Furat to Candahar, makes in all from Ispahan to Agra, an hundred and fifty days journey. But the Merchants that are in haste, take Horses, three or four together in a company, and ride the whole journey in sixty, or sixty-five days at most.

Multan is a City where there is made a vast quantity of Linnen Calicuts, which was all transported to Tuta, before the Sands had stop'd up the mouth of the River; but since that, it is carry'd all to Agra, and from Agra to Surat, as is the greatest part of the Merchandize which is made at Lahor. But in regard carriage is so dear, very few Merchants traffick either to Multan or at Lahor; and many of the Workmen have also deserted those places, so that the Kings Revenues are very much diminished in those Provinces. Multan is the place whither all the Banians come, that trade into Persia, where they follow the same Trade as the Jews, and out-do them in Usury. They have a particular Law among them, which permits them to eat Fowl upon certain days in the year; and not to have more than one Wife among two or three Brothers, the eldest whereof is accounted the Father of the Children. This City also breeds abundance of Dancers, of both Sexes, that spread themselves all over Persia.

I come now to the Road from Candahar to Agra, through Caboul and Lahor.

In all these forty Costes of way, there are but three pitiful Villages; where sometimes, though very rarely, you have Bread and Barley for your Horses; but the surest way is to carry provision along with you. In the Months of July and August, there blows a hot Wind in those parts, that takes away a mans breath, and kills him upon the place; being of the same nature with those Winds, of which I have spoken in my Persian Relations, that blow at certain seasons near Babylon and Moussul.

Caboul is a large City, very well fortified; and is the place where those of Usbek come every year to sell their Horses. They reckon, that there are bought and sold, every year, above sixty thousand. They bring also out of Persia, great numbers of Sheep, and other Cattel; it being the general Concourse of Persians, Tartarians, and Indians. There is also Wine to be had; but Provisions go off at a very good rate.

Before I go any farther, I must take notice of one thing in particular, concerning the people call'd Augans, who inhabit from Candahar to Caboul, toward the Mountains of Balch, a sturdy sort of people, and great Robbers in the night-time. It is the custom of the Indians to cleanse and scrape their tongues every morning with a crooked piece of a root, which causes them to void a great quantity of Flegm and Rhume, and provokes vomiting. Now though those people that inhabit the Frontiers of Persia and India practise the same thing; nevertheless they vomit very little in the morning, but when they come to eat, as soon as they have swallowed two or three bits, their lungs begin to swell, and they are constrain'd to go forth and vomit; after which, they return again to their Victuals with a very good appetite. Should they not do so, they would not live above thirty years; and besides, they would be troubl'd with the Dropsie.

Lahor is the Metropolis of a Kingdom, built upon one of the five Rivers that deſcend from the Mountains of the North to ſwell the River Indus; and give the name of Peniab to all the Region which they water. This River at this time flows not within a league of the Town, being ſubject to change its Channel, and many times does very great miſchief to the adjoyning Fields, through the rapid deluges which it makes. The City is large, and extends it ſelf above a league in length. But the greateſt part of the Houſes, which are higher than thoſe of Agra and Deli, fall to ruine, by reaſon of the exceſſive rains that have overflowed a great number of them. The King's Palace is an indifferent fair one, and is not, as formerly it was, upon the River, which is fall'n off above a quarter of a league from it. There is Wine to be had at Lahor.

I muſt obſerve by the by, that after you have paſt Lahor, and the Kingdom of Kakemir, that lies upon it toward the North, none of their Women have any hair upon any part of their bodies, and the Men but very little upon their chins.

Before you go any farther, you are to take notice that all the way from Lahor to Dehly, and from Dehly to Agra, is a continual walk ſet on both ſides with fair Trees; an object moſt pleaſing to the ſight: But in ſome places the Trees are decay'd, and there is no care taken to Plant others in their ſtead.

Dehly is a great City near the River Gemma, which runs from the North to the South, afterwards from the Weſt to the Eaſt; and after it has paſt by Agra and Kadione, empties it ſelf into the Ganges. After Cha-jehan had built the new City of Gehanabad, which is call'd by his own Name; and where he choſe rather to keep his Court, than at Agra, becauſe the Climate is more temperate. Dehly is almoſt come to ruine, and indeed is nothing but an heap of Rubbiſh; there being no other Houſes remaining but only for poor people. The Streets are narrow, and the Houſes of Bambouc, as over all the reſt of the Indies. Neither are there above three or four Lords of the Court that reſide at Dehly, where they ſet up their Tents in great Encloſures, and in the ſame manner lodg'd the Reverend Jeſuit that was at Court.

Gehanabad, as well as Dehly, is a great City; and there is nothing but a ſingle Wall that make the ſeparation. All the Houſes of particular men conſiſt of great Encloſures, in the midſt whereof is the place for Lodgings. The greateſt part of the Lords do not live in the City, but have their Houſes without, for the conveniency of the water. As you enter into Gehanabad from Dehly, you meet with a long and broad Street, on each ſide whereof are Vaults, where the Merchants keep ſhops, being only plat-form'd at the top. This ſtreet ends in the great Piazza before the King's Houſe; and there is another very fair and large Street, that runs toward another Gate of the ſame Palace, in which live the great Merchants that keep no Shops.

The King's Palace takes up above half a league circuit: The Walls are of fair cut-Stone with Battlements. The Moats are full of water, pav'd with Free-ſtone. The great Gate of the Palace has nothing in it of magnificence; no more than the firſt Court, into which the great Lords may enter upon their Elephants.

Having

Having paſt that Court, you enter into another long and large paſſage, with fair Portico's on both ſides. Under which are ſeveral little Chambers, where part of the Horſe-Guard lies. Theſe Portico's are rais'd ſome two foot above the ground, and the Horſes which are ti'd without, feed upon the ſteps. In ſome places there are great Gates that lead to ſeveral Apartments; as to the Womens Lodgings, and to the Seat of Juſtice. In the midſt of the paſſage runs a Cut full of water, leaving a fair Walk on each ſide, where, at equal diſtances, are little Baſons or Fountains.

This long Paſſage carries you into a great Court, where the Omra's, that is to ſay, the great Lords of the Kingdom, ſuch as the Baſha's in Turkey, and the Kan's in Perſia, keep Guard in Perſon. They have low Lodgings round about the Court, and their Horſes are ti'd to their doors.

From this ſecond Court you paſs into a third, through a great Portal; on one ſide whereof there is a little Hall, rais'd ſome two or three ſteps high from the ground. This is the Wardrobe where the Royal Garments are kept; and from whence the King ſends for the Calaat, or a whole Habit for a man, when he would honour any Stranger or any one of his own Subjects. A little farther, under the ſame Portal, is the place where the Drums, Trumpets, and Hautboys are laid up; which they ſound and beat a little before the King enters into his Judgment-Seat, to give notice to the Omrah's; and they make the ſame noiſe when the King is ready to riſe. Entring into the third Court, you ſee the Divan before you, where the King gives Audience. This is a great Hall rais'd ſome four-foot-high above the ſuperficies of the Court, with three ſides open. Thirty-two Pillars ſuſtain as many Arches; and theſe Columns are about four-foot-ſquare, with Pedeſtals and Mouldings. When Cha-jehan firſt began to build this Hall, he intended to have enrich'd it, and inlaid it all over with thoſe Stones that ſeem to be naturally painted, like thoſe in the Great Duke of Tuſcany's Chappel. But having made a trial upon two or three Pillars, about two or three-foot-high, he found that there would not be Stones enough, of that ſort, in the World to finiſh the work; beſides the vaſtneſs of the Sum it would come to. So that he left off his deſign, contenting himſelf with a Painting of ſeveral flowers.

In the middle of this Hall, next to the ſide which looks toward the Court, there is a Throne erected upon a kind of Theater, where the King gives Audience, and pronounces Judgment. The Throne is a little Bed with four Columns, about the bigneſs of one of our Field-beds, with a Canopy, Backpiece, Boulſter and Counterpoint, all embroider'd with Diamonds. Beſides all this, when the King comes to ſit upon the Throne, they throw over the Bed a Coverlet of Cloath of Gold, or ſome other richly-embroider'd Silk; and he aſcends by three little ſteps, two-foot-broad. On one ſide of the Bed is erected an Umbrello upon a Staff, as long as an Half-Pike. Upon one of the Pillars of the Throne hangs one of the King's Weapons; upon another his Buckler; upon another his Scimetar; and then his Bow and Quiver of Arrows, and other things of the ſame nature.

Below the Throne there is a place, ſome twenty-foot-ſquare, encompaſt with Baluſters which at ſome times are cover'd with Plates of Silver, at other times with Plates of Gold. At the four Corners of this ſmall encloſure ſit the four Secretaries of State, who as well in Civil as Criminal Cauſes, do the duty of advocates. Many Lords ſtand about this Baluſtrade; and there is alſo the Muſick plac'd, that plays all the while the King is in the Divan. This Muſick is ſo ſweet and ſoft, that it never takes off the mind from the ſeriouſneſs of buſineſs at that time manag'd. The King being ſat upon his Throne, ſome great Lords ſtand by him; generally it is ſome one of his own Children. Between eleven a Clock and Noon, the Nahab, who is the chief Miniſter of State, like the Grand Vizier in Turkey, makes a report to the King of what has paſt in the Chamber where he Preſides, which is at the Entry of the firſt Court; and when he has done ſpeaking, the King riſes. For you muſt take notice, that from the time that the King is ſate upon his Throne, till he riſes, no perſon whatſoever is permitted to ſtir out of the Palace; and yet I can ſay that the King diſpenc'd with my performance of this Law ſo generally obſerv'd by all the Court. The occaſion whereof was thus in ſhort.

Being

Being one day going out of the Palace, while the King was ſitting in the Divan, upon ſome urgent buſineſs that would admit of no delay, the Captain of the Guards held me by the arm, and told me I ſhould go no farther; I conteſted and argued the Caſe with him for ſome time, but finding his uſuage to be very boiſterous, I lifted up my Cane, and had certainly ſtrook him in my paſſion, had not two or three of the Guards that ſaw all the paſſages, held my hand. Happily for me at that time, the Nahab, who was then the King's Uncle, came by, and being informed of the ground of our quarrel; order'd the Captain of the Guards to let me go. After that he made a report to the King how the matter ſtood; and toward evening the Nahab ſent me one of his Servants to tell me, it was his Majeſty's pleaſure, that I might come in or go out of the Palace, though he were ſitting in the Divan, as I pleas'd my ſelf; for which I went the next day, and return'd thanks to the Nahab.

Toward the middle of the ſame Court there is a ſmall Channel ſome five or ſix inches broad, where while the King is ſitting upon the Seat of Juſtice, they that have buſineſs are to ſtand. Further it is not lawful for them to go, till they are call'd; and Embaſſadours themſelves are not exempted from this cuſtom. When an Embaſſadour, comes as far as this Channel, the Maſter of the Ceremonies calls out toward the Divan where the King is ſitting, that ſuch an Embaſſadour craves Audience of his Majeſty. Then one of the Secretaries of State declares it to the King; who oftentimes makes as if he did not hear: But ſome time after lifting up his eyes, he caſts them upon the Embaſſadour, making him a ſign by the ſame Secretary, that he may approach.

From the Hall of the Divan, turning to the left, you walk upon a Terraſs, where you diſcover the River. Over this Terraſs the King paſſes into a little Chamber, from whence he goes into his Haram. In this little Chamber it was that I had my firſt Audience of his Majeſty; as I ſhall relate in another place.

Upon the left-hand of the Court where the Divan is built, ſtands a little Moſquee neatly built; the Cupola whereof is cover'd with Lead perfectly guilded. Here the King goes to hear Prayers every day, except it be Fridays, when he is to go to the great Moſquee, which is a very fair one, and plac'd upon an high Platform, rais'd higher than the Houſes of the City, and there is a noble aſcent to it. That day that the King goes to the Moſquee, they place huge rails of wood round about the ſteps, as well to keep off the Elephants, as out of reſpect to the Moſquee.

The right ſide of the Court is taken up with Portico's, that make a long Gallery, rais'd from the ground about half a foot; and theſe are the King's Stables into which you have many doors to enter. They are alſo full of ſtately Horſes, the worſt whereof ſtands the King in three-thouſand Crowns; and there are ſome that coſt him ten-thouſand. At the door of every one of theſe Stables hangs a kind of Mat made of Bambouc, that cleaves like our Oſiers. But whereas we bind our Oſier-twigs with the ſame Oſier, they bind their Bambouc's with wreath'd-Silk, which is delicate work, but very tedious. Theſe Mats are to hinder the Flies from tormenting the Horſes; there being two Grooms to an Horſe, one of which is ſtill employ'd in fanning the Beaſt. There are alſo Mats ſpread before the Portico's, and before the Stable-door; which they ſpread or take away as occaſion requires. And the Floor of the Gallery is cover'd with fair Carpets, which is taken away in the evening, and the Horſes Litter ſtrow'd in the ſame place. Which litter is nothing but the Horſe-dung dri'd in the Sun, and then ſqueez'd a little flat. The Horſes that are brought into India either out of Perſia, Arabia, or the Country of Uſbech, change their food: For in India they never give them Hay nor Oats. Every Horſe in the morning having for his proportion three loaves made of Meal, Wheat, and Butter, as big as one of our ſix-penny-loaves. 'Tis an hard matter to bring them to this diet at firſt; it being ſometimes three or four Months before they can do it. The Groom is forc'd to hold their tongue in one hand, and to thruſt down the bread with the other. When Sugar-Canes or Millet are in ſeaſon, they give them that diet about noon; and in the evening, two hours before Sun-ſet they give them a meaſure of Garden-Chiches which the Groom ſqueezes between two ſtones, and mixes with water ter. This is inſtead of Barley and Oats. As for the King's other Stables, where he has alſo very fine Horſes, they are ſcurvy places, ill-built, which deſerve not to be mention'd.

The Gemene is a fair River that bears good big Boats, which running to Agra loſes its name, falling into Ganges at Hallabas. The King has ſeveral ſmall Brigantines at Gehanabad upon the River, to take his pleaſure in; and they are very curiouſly trimm'd after the manner of the Countrey.

This Pagod is call'd Matura, and it was formerly in far greater veneration than it is at this day. The reaſon is, becauſe the Gemene ran then juſt at the very foot of the Pagod; wherein the Banians, as well thoſe of the Countrey, as thoſe that came from remote parts in Pilgrimage, had the convenience to waſh themſelves before they went to their Devotions; and when they had perform'd them, to waſh again before they eat; which they are not to do ere they have waſh'd; believing alſo that if they waſh in running-water, their ſins will be the more eaſily defac'd. But ſome years ſince the River, changing its courſe more to the Northward, comes not within a good league of the Pagod, which is the reaſon that the Pilgrims have deſerted it.

Agra lies in 27 deg. 31 min. of Lat. and in a Sandy-ſoil, which cauſes extremity of heat. It is the biggeſt City in India, and formerly the Reſidence of their Kings. The Houſes of great Perſons are fair, and well built; but the Houſes of the meaner-ſort are as plain, as in all the other Cities of India. They are built a good diſtance one from another, and hid by the height of their Walls, to keep their Women from being ſeen: So that it may be eaſily conjectur'd that their Cities are nothing ſo pleaſant as ours in Europe. Add to this, that Agra being encompaſt round with the Sands, the heats are there very exceſſive, which conſtrain'd Cha-jehan to remove from thence, and to keep his Court at Gehanabad.

All that is remarkable in Agra is the King's Palace; and ſome Monuments as well near the City, as in the parts about it. The Palace of the King is a vaſt piece of ground encompaſt with a double-wall, which is terraſs'd in ſome parts, and in thoſe parts are built certain Lodgings for ſome of the Officers of the Court: The Gemene runs before the Palace; but between the Wall and the River there is a large ſpace of ground, where the King cauſes his Elephants to fight. This Field is on purpoſe near the water, becauſe that the Elephant which gets the victory, being in a fury, they could not bring him to himſelf, did they not drive him into the River: to which end they are forc'd to have recourſe to Policy, by tying Squibs and Crackers to the end of an Half-Pike, and then giving fire to them to fright him into the water: for when he is in but two or three foot-deep, he is preſently appeas'd.

There is a wide Piazza upon one ſide of the City before the Palace, and the firſt Gate, wherein there is nothing of magnificence, is guarded by a few Souldiers. Before the King removed his Court from Agra to Gehanabad, when he went into the Countrey for ſome time, he gave to ſome one of his greateſt Omrah's, who was his Confident, the Guard of his Palace, where his Treaſure lay; and and till the return of the King he never ſtirr'd out of the Gate, where he lodg'd, neither by night nor day. At ſuch a time that it was, that I was permitted to ſee the Palace of Agra. The King being departed for Gehanabad, whither all the Court followed him, together with the Women, the Government of the Palace was given to one that was a great Friend of the Hollanders, and indeed to all the Franguis. Menheir Velant, chief of the Holland Factory at Agra, ſo ſoon as the King was departed, went to viſit the Lord, and to preſent him according to cuſtom. The Preſent was worth about 6000 Crowns, and conſiſted in Spices, Cabinets of Japan, and fine Holland-Cloath. He deſir'd me to go along with him when he went to Compliment the Governour. But the Lord being offended that he had put himſelf to ſo much charge, forc'd him to carry the Preſent back again, taking only one Japan-Cane, of ſix that were in the Preſent, telling him he would have no more, out of the kindneſs which he had for the Franguiz. Nay, he would not ſo much as take the Gold-head and Ferula, but caus'd them to be taken off. The Complements being over, the Governour ask'd Menheir Velant, wherein he might ſerve him: whereupon he deſiring the favour, than ſince the Court was gone, he might ſee the inſide of the Palace, the Governour granted his requeſt, and order'd ſix men to attend him.

The firſt Gate where the Governor of the Palace lies, is a long blind Arch, which leads you into a large Court all environ'd with Portico's; like our Piazza in Covent-Garden. The Gallery in front is larger and higher than any of the reſt, ſuſtain'd by three ranks of Pillars, and under thoſe Galleries on the other ſide of the Court which are narrower and lower, are little Chambers for the Souldiers of the Guard. In the midſt of the large Gallery, is a Nich in the Wall, into which the King deſcends out of his Haram by a private pair of Stairs, and when he is in, he ſeems to be in a kind of a Tomb. He has no Guards with him then, for he has no reaſon to be afraid of any thing; there being no way to come at him. In the heat of the day he keeps himſelf there only with one Eunuch, but more often with one of his Children, to fan him. The Great Lords of the Court ſtay below in the Gallery under the Nich all the while.

At the farther end of this Court is another Gate that leads into a ſecond Court encompaſt with Galleries, underneath which, are little Chambers for ſome Officers of the Palace. The ſecond Court carries you into a third, which is the King's Quarter. Cha-jehan had reſolv'd to cover with Silver all the Arch of a Gallery upon the right-hand. And a french-man, Auſtin de Bordeaux by name, was to have done the work: but the King not finding any one in his whole Kingdom ſo capable as the French-man was to treat with the Portugals at Goa about ſome important affair he had at this time; the deſign was laid aſide: For they being afraid of Auſtin's Parts, poiſon'd him upon his return to Cochin. This Gallery is painted with branch'd-work of Gold and Azure, and the lower-part is hung with Tapeſtry. There are ſeveral doors under the Gallery that lead into little ſquare-Chambers; of which we ſaw two or three open'd, and they told us all the reſt were ſuch. The other three ſides of the Court lie all open, there being nothing but a ſingle Wall, no higher than for a man to lean over. On the ſide that looks toward the River there is a Divan, or a kind of out-jutting Balcony, where the King ſits to ſee his Brigantines, or to behold his Elephants fight. Before the Divan is a Gallery, that ſerves for a Portico; which Cha-jehan had a deſign to have adorn'd all over with a kind of Lattice-work of Emrauſds and Rubies that ſhould have repreſented to the life Grapes when they are green, and when they begin to grow red. But this deſign which made ſuch a noiſe in the World, and requir'd more Riches, than all the World could afford to perfect, remains unfiniſh'd; there being only three Stocks of a Vine in Gold, with their leaves, as the reſt ought to have been; and enamel'd in their natural colours, with Emralds, Rubies and Granates wrought into the faſhion of Grapes. In the middle of the Court ſtands a great Fat to bath in, 40 foot in Diameter, cut out of one entire grey-ſtone, with ſteps wrought out of the ſame ſtone within and without.

As for the Monuments which are in and about Agra, they are very fair ones, for there is ſcarce an Eunuch belonging to the King's Haram, that is not very ambitious of leaving a fair Monument behind him. Indeed, when they have heap'd together great Sums, they would fain be going to Mecca, and making rich Preſents to Mahomet. But the Great Mogul, unwilling to let his Money go out of his Country, will ſeldom permit them leave to undertake that Pilgrimage: and therefore not knowing what to do with their Money, they employ a great part thereof in Monuments to perpetuate their Memories.

Of all the Monuments that are to be ſeen at Agra, that of the Wife of Cha-jehan is the moſt magnificent; ſhe caus'd it to be ſet up on purpoſe near the Taſimacan, to which all Strangers muſt come, that they ſhould admire it. The Taſimacan is a great Bazar, or Market-place, compos'd of ſix great Courts, all encompaſſed with Portico's; under which there are Warehouſes for Merchants; and where there is a prodigious quantity of Calicuts vended. The Monument of this Degum, or Sultaneſs, ſtands on the Eaſt-ſide of the City, upon the River ſide, in a great place encloſed with Walls, upon which there runs a little Gallery, as upon the Walls of many Cities in Europe. This place is a kind of Garden with Compartiments, like our Garden-plots; but whereas our Walks are made with Gravel, here the Walks are black and white Marble. You enter into this place through a large Portal; and preſently upon the left hand you eſpy a fair Gallery, that looks towards Mecca; wherein there are three or four Niches, wherein the Mufti comes at certain hours to pray. A little beyond the middle of the place, toward the Water, are three great Platforms, one rais'd above another, with four Towers at the four Corners of each, and Stairs within, upon the top whereof they call the people before the time of their prayer. On the top there is a Cupola, little leſs magnificent than that of Val de Grace in Paris; it is cover'd within and without with black marble, the middle being of Brick. Under this Cupola is an empty Tomb; for the Begum is interr'd under the Arch of the loweſt Platform. The ſame change of Ceremonies which is obſerv'd under ground, is obſerv'd above. For they change the Tapeſtries, Candles, and other Ornaments at ſeveral times, and there are always Mollah's attending to pray. I ſaw the beginning and compleating of this great work, that coſt two and twenty years labour, and twenty thouſand men always at work; ſo that you cannot conceive but that the Expence muſt be exceſſive. Cha-jehan had begun to raiſe his own Monument on the other ſide of the River; but the Wars with his Son, broke off that deſign, nor did Aurengxeb, now reigning, ever take any care to finiſh it. There is an Eunuch who commands two thouſand men, that is entruſted to guard not only the Sepulcher of the Begum, but alſo the Taſimacan.

On another ſide of the City, appears the Sepulcher of King Akabar. And as for the Sepulchers of the Eunuchs, they have only one Platform, with four little Chambers at the four Corners. When you come to Agra from Dehly, you meet a great Bezar; near to which there is a Garden, where King Jehanguire, Father of Cha-jehan, lies interr'd. Over the Garden Gate you ſee the Tomb it ſelf, beſet with Portraitures, cover'd with a black Hearſe-Cloath, or Pall, with Torches of white Wax, and two Jeſuits attending at each end. There are ſome who wonder, that Cha-jehan againſt the practice of the Mahumetans, who abhor Images, did permit of carving; but the reaſon conjectur'd at is, that it is done upon the conſideration that his Father and himſelf learnt from the Jeſuites certain principles of Mathematicks and Aſtrology. Though he had not the ſame kindneſs for them at another time; for going one day to viſit an Armenian, that lay ſick, whoſe name was Corgia, whom he lov'd very well and had honor'd with ſeveral Employments, at what time the Jeſuites, who liv'd next to the Armenians houſe, rang their Bell; the ſound thereof ſo diſpleas'd the King, as being a diſturbance to the ſick perſon, that in a great fury he commanded the Bell to be taken away, and hung about his Elephants neck. Some few days after, the King ſeeing his Elephant with that great Bell about his neck, fearing ſo great a weight might injure his Elephant, caus'd the Bell to be carried to the Couteval, which is a kind of a rail'd place, where a Provoſt ſits as a Judg, and decides differences among the people of that Quarter, where it has hung ever ſince. This Armenian had been brought up with Cha-jehan; and in regard he was an excellent Wit, and an excellent Poet, he was very much in the Kings favour, who had confer'd upon him many fair Commands, though he could never either by threats or promiſes win him to turn Mahometan.

he

CHAP. VIII.

The Road from Agra to Patna, and Daca, Cities in the Province of Bengala, and of the Quarrel which the Author had with Cha-Eſt-Kan, the King's Uncle.

I Departed from Agra toward Bengala the 25*th* of November 1665, and that day I reach'd no farther than a very bad Inn, diſtant from Agra, coſtes 3

The 26*th* I came to Beruzabad, coſtes 9

This is a little City where, at my return, I received eight thouſand Roupies, being the remainder of the Money which Giafer-Kan ow'd me for Wares that he had bought at Janabat.

The 27*th* to Serael Morlides, coſtes 9

The 28*th* to Serail Eſtanja, coſtes 14

The 29*th* to Serail Haii-mal, coſtes 12

The 30*th*. to Serail Sekandera, coſtes 13

The 1*ſt* of December to Sanqual, coſtes 14

I met that day 110 Waggons, every Waggon drawn by ſix Oxen, & in every Waggon 50000 Roupies. This is the Revenue of the Province of Bengala, with all charges defraid, and the Governor's Purſe well-fill'd, comes to 5500000 Roupies. A league beyond Sanqual, you muſt paſs a River call'd Saingour, which runs into Gemine, not above half a league diſtant from it. You paſs over this River of Saingour upon a Stone-bridg, and when you come from toward Bengala to go to Seronge or Surat, if you have a mind to ſhorten your journey ten days, you muſt leave Agra-Road, and come to this Bridg, and ſo Ferry over Gemine in a Boat. But generally Agra-Road is taken, becauſe the other way you muſt travel five or ſix days together upon the ſtones; and alſo for that you are to paſs through the Territories of certain Raja's, where you are in danger of being robb'd.

The ſecond day I came to an Inn call'd Cherourabad, coſtes 12

When you are got about half the way, you paſs through Gianabad, a little City, near to which, about a quarter of a League on this ſide, croſſing a Field of Millet, I ſaw a Rhinoceros feeding upon Millet-Canes, which a little Boy of nine or ten years old gave him to eat. When I came near the Boy, he gave me ſome Millet to give the Rhinoceros; who immediately came to me, opening his chops three or four times; I put the Millet into his mouth, and when he had ſwallow'd it, he ſtill open'd his mouth for more.

The 3*d* I came to Serrail Chajeada, coſtes 10

The 4*th* to Serrail Atakan, coſtes 13

The 5*th* to Aureng-Abad, coſtes 9

Formerly this Village had another name; but being the place where Aurengzeb gave Battel to his Brother Sultan Sujah, who was Governor of all the Province of Bengala; Aureng-zeb, in Memory of the Victory he had won, gave it his own name, and built there a very fair Houſe, with a Garden, and a little Moſquee.

The 6*th* to Alinchan, coſtes 9

Two leagues on this ſide Alinchan, you meet the River Ganges. Monſieur Bernier the King's Phyſitian, and another perſon whoſe name was Rachepot, with whom I travell'd, were amaz'd to ſee, that a River had made ſuch a noiſe in the World, was no broader than the River Seine before the Louvre; believing before, that it had been as wide as the Danaw above Belgrade. There is alſo ſo little water in it from March to June or July, when the rains fall, that it will not bear a ſmall Boat. When we came to Ganges, we drank every one of us a Glaſs of Wine, mixing ſome of the River-water with it; which caus'd a griping in our bellies: But our Servants that drank it alone, were worſe tormented than we. The Hollanders, who have an Houſe upon the Bank of Ganges, never drink the water of this River, until they have boil'd it. But for the natural Inhabitants of the Countrey, they are ſo accuſtom'd to it from their youth, that the King and the Court drink no other. You ſhall ſee a vaſt number of Camels every day, whoſe buſineſs only it is to fetch water from the Ganges.

The 7th, I came to Halabas, coſtes 8

Halabas is a great City, built upon a point of Land where Ganges and Gemine meet. There is a fair Caſtle of hew'n Stone, with a double Moat; where the Governour reſides. He is one of the greateſt Lords in India; and being very ſickly, he has always about him ten Perſian Phyſicians. He had alſo in his ſervice, Claudius Maille of Bourges, who practiſes Chyrurgery and Phyſick both together. This was he that adviſ'd us not to drink of Ganges Water, which would put us into a looſeneſs; but rather to drink Well-water. The chief of theſe Perſian Phyſicians, whom this Governour hires with his Money, one day threw his Wife from the top of a Battlement to the ground; prompted to that act of cruelty, by ſome jealouſies he had entertain'd. He thought the fall had kill'd her, but ſhe had only a Rib or two bruis'd; whereupon the Kindred of the Woman came and demanded juſtice, at the feet of the Governour. The Governor ſending for the Phyſician, commanded him to be gone, reſolving to retain him no longer in his ſervice. The Phyſician obey'd, and putting his maim'd Wife in a Pallanquin, he ſet forward upon the Road with all his Family. But he was not gone above three or four days journey from the City, when the Governour finding himſelf worſe than he was wont to be, ſent to recall him; which the Phyſician perceiving, ſtab'd his Wife, his four Children, and thirteen female Slaves, and return'd again to the Governour, who ſaid not a word to him, but entertain'd him again into his ſervice.

The eighth, day I croſs'd the River in a large Boat, having ſtay'd from morning till noon upon the bank-ſide, expecting Monſieur Maille, to bring me a Paſsport from the Governour. For there ſtands a Derega, upon each ſide of the River, who will not ſuffer any perſon to paſs without leave; and he takes notice what ſort of Goods are tranſported; there being due from every Waggon four Roupies, and from every Coach one; not accounting the charge of the Boat, which you muſt pay beſide. The ſame day I went to Sadoul-ſerail, coſtes 16

The ninth, to Yakedel--ſera, coſtes 10

The tenth, to Bouraki-ſera, coſtes 10

The eleventh, to Banarou, coſtes 10

Banarou is a large City, and handſomly built; the moſt part of the Houſes being either of Brick or Stone and higher than in any other Cities of India; but the inconveniency is, that the Streets are very narrow. There are many Inns in the Town; among the reſt, one very large, and very handſomely built In the middle of the Court are two Galleries, where are to be ſold Calicuts, Silks, and other ſorts of Merchandiſe. The greateſt part of the Sellers, are the Workmen themſelves; ſo that the Merchants buy at the firſt hand. Theſe Workmen, before they expoſe any thing to ſale, muſt go to him that has the ſtamp, to have the King's Seal ſet upon their Linnen and Silks; otherwiſe they would be fin'd, and lambaſted with a good Cudgel. This City is ſcituated upon the North ſide of Ganges, that runs by the Walls, and into which there falls alſo another River, ſome two leagues upward toward the Weſt. In Banarou ſtands one of the Idolaters principal Pagods, whereof I ſhall ſpeak in my ſecond Book, when I come to treat of the Religion of the Banians.

About five hundred paces from the City Northward, there is a Moſquee, where are to be ſeen many Mahometan Sepulchers; whereof ſome are very curious pieces of Architecture. The faireſt are every one in the middle of a Garden encloſed with Walls, wherein there are Holes ſome half a foot ſquare, through which Paſſengers may have a ſight of the Tomb within. The moſt conſiderable of all is as it were four ſquare Pedeſtal, every ſquare whereof is forty paces wide. In the midſt of this Platform riſes a Column thirty-two or thirty-five foot high, all of a piece, which three men can hardly embrace.

The

The Stone is of a grey colour, and ſo hard that I could not ſcrape it with my Knife. As it is Pyramidical, there is a great Bowl at the top, which is encompaſs'd at the upper end with huge Grains of Wheat. All the fronts of the Tomb are full of figures of Animals cut in the Stone; and it has been higher above ground than now it ſeems to be, for ſeveral old men, that look'd to ſome of the Sepulchers, aſſur'd me, that within theſe fifty years it had ſunk above thirty foot into the Earth. They tell you moreover, that it is the Sepulcher of one of the Kings of Boutan who was interr'd here after he had left his own Countrey to conquer this Kingdom, out of which he was driven by the Succeſſors of Tamerlane. The Kingdom of Boutan is the place from whence they fetch Musk, and I will give you a deſcription of it in my third Book.

I ſtay'd at Banarou the 12*th* and 13*th*; and during thoſe two days it rain'd continually, but not ſo as to ſtop my journey; ſo that the evening of the thirteenth day I croſs'd the Ganges, with the Governours Paſs-port. Before you go into the Boat, they ſearch the Travellers baggage; wearing Apparel however pays nothing of Cuſtome, but only Merchandiſe.

The 13*th*, I went to Baterpour, coſtes 2
The 14*th*, to Satraguy-ſera, coſtes 8
The 15*th*, to Moniarky-ſera, coſtes 9

The ſame day in the morning, after I had travel'd two Leagues, I croſs'd a River call'd Carnaſarſou; and three Leagues from thence I croſs'd another, which they call Saode-ſou; both which I foarded.

The 16*th*, to Gourmabad, coſtes 8

This is a Town upon a River call'd Goudera-ſou, which is croſs'd over a Stone-Bridg.

The 17*th*, to Saſeron, coſtes 4

Saſeron is a City at the foot of certain Mountains, near to which there is a great Lake. In the middle whereof there is a ſmall Iſland, with a fair Moſquee built upon it; wherein is to be ſeen, the Sepulcher of a Nabab or Favourite, call'd Selim-Kan; who built it when he was Governour of the Province. There is a fair Bridg to croſs over into the Iſland, pav'd and lin'd with large free-Stone. Upon one ſide of the Lake is a great Garden, in the middle whereof is another fair Sepulcher of the Sun of the ſame Nabab, Selim-Kan, who ſucceeded his Father in the Government of the Province. If you would go to the Mine of Soulmelpour, whereof I ſhall ſpeak in the laſt Book of theſe Relations you muſt leave the great Road to Patna, and bend to the South through Exberbourgh, and the famous Fortreſs of Rhodes, of which I ſhall treat in the ſame place.

The 18*th*, I ferry'd in a Boat over the River, Sonſou, which deſcends from the Southern Mountains; after you have croſs'd it, the Merchandiſe pays, a certain Toll.

The ſame day I travel'd on to Daoud-Nagarſera, where there is a fair Tomb, coſtes. 9
The 19*th*, to Halva-ſera, coſtes 10
The 20*th*, to Aga-ſera, coſtes 9

In the morning I met a hundred and thirty Elephants, great and ſmall, which they were leading to Dehli to the great Mogul.

The one and twentieth, to Patna, coſtes 10

Patna is one of the greateſt Cities of India, upon the Bank of Ganges, toward the Weſt; not being leſs than two Leagues in length. But the Houſes are no fairer than in the greateſt part of the other Cities of India; being cover'd with Bamboue, or Straw. The Holland Company have a Houſe there, by reaſon of their Trade in Saltpeter, which they refine at a great Town call'd Chonpar, which is alſo ſcituated upon Ganges, ten Leagues above Patna.

Coming to Patna, we met the Hollanders, in the Street returning from Chonpar, who ſtop'd our Coaches to ſalute us. We did not part, till we had emptied two Bottles of Schiras Wine in the open Street; which is not taken notice of in that Country, where people meet with an entire freedom without any Ceremony.

I ſtay'd eight days at Patna, during which time there fell out an accident, which which will let the Reader understand, that Sodomy does not go altogether unpunish'd among the Mahumetans. A Mimbachi, who commanded a thousand Foot, went about to abuse a young Boy in his service; and who had several times resisted his attempts; complaining also to the Governour, and telling him withall, that if his Master persisted to urge him any more, he would certainly kill him. At length the Captain took his opportunity, at a House which he had in the Country, and forc'd the Boy. The Boy o'rewhelm'd with grief and rage, took his opportunity also to revenge himself; and being one day hunting with his Master, about a quarter of a League from any of his other Servants, he got behind him, and cleft his head with his Hanger. After he had done, he rode full speed to the City, crying out all the way, that he had kill'd his Master for such a reason; and went immediately to the Governours Lodging; who sent him to prison; but he let him out at the end of six months; and notwithstanding all the endeavours which the Captains Kindred us'd to have had him put to death, the Governour durst not condemn him, for fear of the people, who affirm'd that the Boy had done well.

I parted from Patna in a Boat for Daca, the nine and twentieth of January, between eleven and twelve at noon; and had the River been deep, as it uses to be after the Rains, I had taken Boat at Hallabas, or at least at Banaroa.

The same day I came to lye at Sera-Beconcour, costes 15

Five Leagues on this side Beconcour, you meet with a River call'd Pomponsou, which comes from the South, and falls into Ganges.

The thirtieth to Sera-d' Erija, costes 17

The one and thirtieth, after we had travel'd four Leagues, or thereabout, we met with the River Kaoa, which comes from the South. Three Leagues lower, you meet with another River call'd Chanon, which comes from the North. Four Leagues farther, you discover the River Erguga, which runs from the South; and at length, six Leagues beyond, the River Aquera, falling from the same part of the World; all which four Rivers lose their Names in the Ganges. All that day I saw great Mountains toward the South, distant from Ganges sometimes ten, and sometimes fifteen Leagues, till at length I came to lodg in Monger-City, costes 18

The first day of January, 1666, after I had gone by Water two hours, I saw the Gandet fall into the Ganges, flowing from the North. This is a great River, that carries Boats.

That evening I lay at Zangira, costes 8

But in regard of the winding of Ganges all that days journey, I might well reckon them by Water two and twenty Leagues.

The second day, from between six in the morning till eleven, I saw three Rivers that threw themselves into Ganges; all three descending from the North.

The first is call'd Ronova, the second Tae, the third Chanan.

I came to lye at Baquelpour, costes 18

The third, after four hours upon the Ganges, I met the River Katare, which comes from the North; and lay at a Village call'd Pongangel, at the foot of certain Mountains that descend to Ganges it self, costes 13

The fourth, an hours rowing beyond Pongangel, I met a great River, call'd Mart-Nadi, coming from the South; and I lay at Rage-Mehale, costes 6

Rage-Mehale, is a City upon the right hand of Ganges; and if you go by Land, you shall find the high-way, for a League or two, pav'd with Brick to the Town. Formerly the Governors of Bengala resided here; it being an excellent Country for hunting, besides that it was a place of great Trade. But now the River having taken another course, above a good half League from the City, as well for that reason, as to keep in awe the King of Aracan, and several Portugueſe Banditi, who are retir'd to the mouths of Ganges, and made excursions even as far as Daca it self; both the Governour and the Merchants have remov'd themselves to Daca, which is at present a large City, and a Town of great Trade.

The sixth, being arriv'd at a considerable Town, call'd Donapour, six Leagues from Rage-Mehale I parted with Monsieur Bernier, who was going to Casenbasar, and and thence to Ogouli by land; for when the River is low, there is no going by Water, by reaſon of a great Bank of Sand that lies before a City call'd Santiqui.

I lay that night at Toutipour, diſtant from Rage-mehale, coſtes 12

I ſaw there at Sun-riſing a great number of Crocodiles lying upon the Sand.

The ſeventh, I came to Acerat, coſtes 25

From Acerat to Daca, it is counted by Land forty-five Leagues. All that day I ſaw ſuch a vaſt number of Crocodiles, that I had a great deſire to ſhoot at one, to try whether the vulgar report were true, that a Musket-ſhot would not pierce their skin. The bullet hit him in the jaw, and made the blood guſh out; however it would not ſtay in the place, but plung'd into the River.

The eight, I ſaw again a great number lying upon the bank of the River, and made two ſhot at two with three bullets at a time. As ſoon as they were wounded, they turn'd themſelves upon their backs, opening their throats, and di'd upon the ſpot.

That day I came to lie at Douloudia, coſtes 17

The Crows were here the cauſe that we found a very fair Fiſh, which the Fiſhermen had hid among the Oſiers by the ſide of the River; for when our Water-men ſaw the Crows in great numbers hovering, and making an hideous noiſe about the Oſiers, they preſently conjectur'd that there was ſomething more than ordinary: and they made ſo diligent a ſearch, that at length they found an excellent diſh of meat.

The ninth two hours after noon, we met with a River call'd Chativor, that runs from the North, and we lay at Dampour, coſtes 16

The tenth, we lay by the River-ſide in a place remote from Houſes, and we travell'd that day, coſtes 15

The eleventh, toward evening, being come to that part where Ganges divides it ſelf into three Arms, whereof one runs to Daca; we lay at a large Town, upon the entry of the great Channel, which Town is call'd Jatrapour, coſtes 20

They that have no luggage, may make a ſhort-cut from Jatrapour to Daca, and ſave much ground, by reaſon of the many windings of the River.

The twelfth, about noon, we paſt by a large Village call'd Bagamara, and came to lie at Kaſiata, another great Town, coſtes 11

The thirteenth, about noon we met with a River, two leagues from Daca, call'd Laquia, which runs from the North-Eaſt. Juſt againſt the Point where the two Rivers join, there ſtands a Fortreſs of each ſide, with ſeveral pieces of Cannon. Half a league lower, appears another River call'd Pagalu, upon which there is a fair Bridg of Brick, which Mirza-Mola caus'd to be built. This River comes from the North-Eaſt; and half a league upward appears another River call'd Cadamtali, that runs from the North, over which there is a nother Bridg of Brick. On both ſides of the River are ſeveral Towers, as it were inchas'd with ſeveral heads of men, executed for robbing upon the high way.

About evening we came to Daca, having travell'd by water that day, coſtes 9

Daca is a great Town, that extends it ſelf only in length; every one coveting to have an Houſe by the Ganges-ſide. The length of this Town is above two leagues. And indeed from the laſt Brick-Bridge which I mention'd to Daca, there is but one continued row of Houſes ſeparated one from the other; inhabited for the moſt part by Carpenters, that build Galleys and other ſmall Veſſels. Theſe Houſes are properly no more than paltry Huts built up with Bambouc's, and daub'd over with fat Earth. Thoſe of Daca are not much better built: The Governours Palace is a place enclos'd with high Walls, in the midſt whereof is a pitiful Houſe, built only of Wood. He generally lodges in Tents, which he cauſes to be ſet up in a great Court of that Encloſure. The Hollanders finding that their Goods were not ſafe in the ordinary Houſes of Daca, have built them a very fair Houſe; and the Engliſh have another, which is reaſonably handſom. The Church of the Auſtin-Friers is all of Brick, and is a very comely Pile.

When I travell'd laſt to Daca, the Nabab Cha-Eſt-Kan, who was then the Governor of Bengala, was at War with the King of Arakan, whoſe Naval-Force conſiſts generally of 200 Galeaſſes, attended by ſeveral other ſmaller Veſſels. Theſe Galeaſſes run through the Gulf of Bengala, and enter into the mouth of Ganges, the the Sea flowing up higher then Daca. Cha-Est-Kan, Uncle to King Aurengzeb, the preſent Mogul, and the beſt Head-piece that ever was in all his Territories, found out a way to corrupt ſeveral of the King of Aracan's Captains, ſo that of a ſudden forty Galeaſſes, commanded by Portugals, came and join'd themſelves with him. To engage more firmly all this new multitude to his ſervice, he gave a larger pay to all the Portugal-Officers, and to the Souldiers proportionably: But thoſe of the Country had no more than their ordinary pay doubl'd. 'Tis an incredible thing to ſee how ſwiftly theſe Galeaſſes cut their way in the water. Some are ſo long that they carry fifty Oars of a ſide; but they have but two men to an Oare: There are ſome very curiouſly painted, and upon which there is no coſt of Gold and Azure ſpar'd. The Hollanders have ſome of their own to tranſport their Goods; and ſometimes they are forc'd to hire others, whereby many people get a good livelihood.

The next day after my arrival at Daca, which was the 14*th* of January, I went to wait upon the Nabab; and preſented him with a Garment of Cloath of Gold, lac'd with a Gold-needle-work Lace of Point of Spain; with a Scarf of Gold and Silver, of the ſame Point; and a very fair Emrald-Jewel. Toward evening, being return'd to the Hollander's Houſe, where I lodg'd, the Nabab ſent me Granates, China-Oranges, two Perſian-Melons, and three ſorts of Pears.

The fifteenth, I ſhewed him my Goods, and preſented the Prince with a Watch, in a Gold-Enamell'd-Caſe; with a pair of little Piſtols inlaid with Silver, and a very fair Proſpective-Glaſs. What I gave to the Father and the Son, a young Lord, about ten years old, ſtood me in above five thouſand Livres.

The ſixteenth, I treated with him about the Prizes of my Goods: and at length I went to his Steward to take my Letter of Exchange to be paid at Caſen-Bazar. Not but that he would have paid me my Mony at Daca; but the Hollanders, who underſtood things better than I did, told me it was very dangerous to carry Mony to Caſen-Bazar, whither there was no going, but over the Ganges by water, the way by land being full of Bogs and Fens. And to go by water is no leſs dangerous, by reaſon that the Boats which they uſe, are very apt to tip over upon the leaſt ſtorm: And when the Mariners perceive that you carry Money along with you, 'tis an eaſy thing for them to overſet the Boat, and afterwards to come and take up the Money that lies but at the bottom of the River.

The twentieth, I took leave of the Nabab, who deſir'd me to come and ſee him again, and caus'd a Paſs to be deliver'd me, wherein he gave me the title of one of the Gentlemen of his houſe, which he had done before, when he was Governor of Amadabat, when I went to him, to the Army, in the Province of Decan, into which the Raja-ſeva-gi was enter'd, as I ſhall relate in another place. By vertue of theſe Paſſes I could travel over all the Countries of the great Mogul, as being one of his Houſhould.

The one and twentieth, the Hollanders made a great Feaſt for my ſake; to which they invited the Engliſh, and ſome Portugueſe's, together with the Auſtin-Friers of the ſame Nation.

The two and twentieth, I made a Viſit to the Engliſh, whoſe Preſident then was Mr. Prat.

From the twenty-third to the twenty-ninth, I brought up Goods, to the value of 11000 Roupies; and after I had embark'd them, I took my leave.

The twenty-ninth, in the evening, I departed from Daca, the Hollanders bearing me company for two leagues, with their little Barques Arm'd: Nor did we ſpare the Spaniſh-Wine all that time. Having been upon the River from the twenty-ninth of January to the eleventh of February, I left my Goods and Servants at the Barque at Acerat; where I took a Boat that carri'd me to a great Village call'd Mirdapour.

The next day I hir'd an Horſe for my ſelf, but not finding another for my Luggage, I was forc'd to hire two Women, who carri'd it for me. That evening I arriv'd at Caſen-Baſar, where I was welcom'd by Menheir Arnold Van Wachttendonk, Director of all the Holland-Factories in Bengala, who invited me to lie at his Houſe.

The fourteenth, Menheir Wachttendonk return'd to Ouguely, where is the General Factory. The ſame day one of my Servants brought me word that my People and Goods, which I had left behinde in the Barque, had been in very great danger, by reaſon of the high Winds that had blown for two days together.

The fifteenth, the Hollanders lent me a Pallekis, to go to Madeſou-baſarki. This was a great Town three Leagues from Caſen-baſar, where lay Cha-Eſt-Kan's Receiver General, to whom I preſented my Bill of Exchange. He told me it was very good, and that he would willingly have paid me, had he not receiv'd order the night before, not to pay me, in caſe he had not paid me already. He did not tell me the reaſon that mov'd Cha-Eſt-Kan to act in that manner; ſo that I went home to my Lodging infinitely ſurpriz'd at his proceeding.

The ſixteenth, I wrote to the Nahab, to know the reaſon why he had forbad his Receiver General to pay me.

The ſeventeenth in the evening, I took water for Ougueli, in a Bark of fourteen Oars, which the Hollanders lent me; and that night and the next I lay upon the River.

The ninteenth toward evening, I paſs'd by a large Town call'd Nandi, farther than which the Sea does not flow. Here the Wind blew ſo fiercely, and the water grew ſo rough, that we were forc'd to ſtay three or four hours, and ly by the ſhore.

The twentieth, I arriv'd at Ougueli, where I ſtay'd till the ſecond of March. During which time the Hollanders bid me very welcome, and made it their buſineſs to ſhew me all the divertiſements which the Country was capable to afford. We went ſeveral times in Pleaſure-Boats upon the River, and we had a Banquet of all the Delicacies that the Gardens of Europe could have afforded us. Salads of all ſorts, Colewarts, Aſparagus, Peaſe, but our chiefeſt Diſh was Japon Beans; the Hollanders being very curious to have all ſorts of Pulſe and Herbs in their Gardens, though they could never get Artichokes to grow in that Country.

The ſecond of March I left Ougueli, and the fifth arriv'd at Caſenbaſar.

The next day I went to Madeſou-Barſaki, to know whether the Nahab had ſent any other orders to his Receiver. For I told you a little before, that I wrote upon the place to Cha-Eſt-Kan, to complain of his proceedings, and to know the reaſon why my Bill of Exchange was not paid. The Director of the Holland Factories writ a Letter alſo in my behalf, which I encloſed, wherein he repreſented to the Nahab, that I was too well known to him, as having been formerly with him at Amadabat, in the Army in Decan, and other places, do deſerve ſuch hard uſuage. That he ought to conſider, that I being the only perſon that brought the chiefeſt rarities of Europe to the Indies, it was not the way to make me eager of returning any more, as he himſelf had invited me to do, to ſend me away in a diſcontent. Beſides, that the credit of my report would diſcourage others from coming to the Indies, fearing the ſame uſuage as I had receiv'd. Neither mine nor the Directors Letter produc'd that effect which we expected. Nor was I much better ſatisfi'd with the new order which the Nahab ſent to his Receiver; which was to pay me, abating twenty thouſand Roupies of the ſum which we had agreed upon; and if I would not take the remainder, that I might come and fetch my goods again.

This ill dealing of the Nahab, proceeded from a ſcurvy trick that was play'd me by three Canary-birds at the Great Mogul's Court. The ſtory whereof was thus in ſhort.

Aurengzeb, that now reigns, at the inſtigation of two Perſians and a Banian, has brought up a cuſtom very much to the diſadvantage of Merchants, that come out of Europe, and other parts, to ſell Jewels at Court. For whether they come into India either by Land or Sea, the Governour of the place where they firſt arrive, has order to ſend them to the King, together with their goods, whether they will or no. As the Governour of Surat dealt by me, in the year 1665, ſending me to Dehli, or Jehanabad, where the King was. There were then attending upon his Majeſty, two Perſians and a Banian, who are entruſted to view and examine all the Jewels which are to be ſold to the King. One of thoſe Perſians is call'd Nahab-Akel-Kan, that is, the Prince of the Spirit; who keeps all the Kings Jewels. The name of the other is Mirza-Mouſon, whoſe buſineſs is to rate every ſtone. The Banian, whoſe name is Nalikan, is to ſee whether the Stones be falſe or not, or whether they have any defect. Theſe three men have obtain'd a Licence from the King, to view, before ever he does, whatever forreign Merchants ſhall bring to Court, and to preſent their goods to him themſelves. And though they are under an Oath not to take any thing from the Merchants, yet they extort whatever they can get from them, though it be their ruine. When they ſee any thing that is lovely, and likely to bring great profit, they would perſwade you to ſell it to them for leſs by half than the King is worth; and if you refuſe to let them have it, when they are in the Kings preſence, they will ſet a price upon it at half the value; knowing that Aurengzeb is not very covetous of Jewels, loving his Money far better. Upon the Kings Feſtival-day, of which I ſhall ſpeak in another place, all the Princes and Nobility of the Court preſent him with moſt magnificent gifts. And when they cannot meet with Jewels, they ſend him Roupies of Gold, which the King likes far better than Stones; though Jewels are the more honourable preſent. Therefore when this Feſtival draws nigh, he iſſues out of his Treaſury, a great quantity of Diamonds, Rubies, Emraulds, and Pearls, which he who is entruſted to prize the Stones, delivers to ſeveral Merchents to ſell to the Nobility, who are bound to preſent the King; by which means the King gets the Money and his Jewels again.

There is alſo another thing very diſadvantageous to a Merchant Jeweller, which is, that when the King has ſeen the Stones, no Prince nor Nobleman that knows of it, will ever buy them. Beſides, while theſe three perſons, who are entruſted to view the Jewels, are conſidering and examining them at their Lodgings, ſeveral Banians reſort thither, who are expert, ſome in Diamonds, ſome in Rubies, ſome in Emraulds, and others in Pearls, who write down the weight, goodneſs, cleanneſs, and colour of every piece. So that when a Merchant goes afterwards to any Prince or Governour of any Province, theſe people ſend them a note of what he has, and the price, which they ſet down at half the value. For in trade theſe Banians are a thouſand times worſe than the Jews; more expert in all ſorts of cunning tricks, and more maliciouſly miſchievous in their revenge. Now you ſhall hear what a trick theſe unworthy people ſerv'd me.

When I arriv'd at Gehanabad, one of them came to my Lodging, and told me, he had order from the King to ſee what I had brought, before I expos'd my goods in the Kings preſence. They would have rather that the King had not been at Gehanabad, for they would have then endeavour'd to have bought them themſelves, to gain thereby, by ſelling them again to the King, or the Nobility upon occaſion; which they could never perſwade me to. The next day they came to ſee me all three, one after another; and they would needs have of me, amongſt other things, a Jewel of nine great Pearls, in the faſhion of a Pear, the biggeſt whereof weigh'd thirty Carats, and the leaſt ſixteen; together with another ſingle Pearl like a Pear, of fifty-five Carats. As for the Jewel, the King took it; but for the ſingle Pearl, they finding that whatever they could ſay, I would not be wrought upon to ſell them any bargains, ſo order'd it, that before I had ſhew'd my Jewels to the King, Giafer-Kan the Kings Unckle ſaw, and kept it, telling me he would give me as good a price as the King; and deſir'd me not to ſpeak of it, for indeed he had a deſign to make a preſent to the King.

When the King had made choice of ſuch of my Jewels as he pleas'd, Giafer-Kan bought of me ſeveral pieces, and at the ſame time agreed with me for the great Pearl. Some days after he paid me, according as we had agreed, except for the Pearl, upon which he would have abated me ten thouſand Roupies. For the two Perſians and the Banian had malitiouſly inform'd him, that at my firſt arrival, they could have bought the Pearl for eight or ten thouſand Roupies leſs than I had valu'd it to him; which was abſolutely falſe. Thereupon Giafer-Kan telling me, that if I would not take his Money, I might have my Jewel again; I took him at his word, aſſuring him, he ſhould never ſee it again as long as he liv'd. And I was as good as my word. And indeed that which made me the more reſolute was, that I was reſolv'd to carry ſomeſomething which was conſiderable to Cha-Eſt-Kan; for could I have had my liberty upon my arrival at Surat to have gone to him, I would never have ſeen the King at Gehanabad; about which I had a very great quarrel with the Governour of Surat. For when I came to viſit him, he told me preſently, that the caſe was alter'd from what it had been ſince my laſt being there, for that the King was reſolv'd to have the firſt view of all Curioſities imported into his Kingdom. I was above four Months contending in vain with the Governour; but nothing would ſerve; I muſt go to the King, and for fear I ſhould take another Road, he ſent fifteen Horſemen along with me as far as Shalaour.

When I went for Bengala, theſe Overſeers of the Jewels, out of meer ſpite, and, it may be, ſet on by Giafar-Kan, to be reveng'd of me for denying to let him have my Jewel, writ to Cha-Eſt-Kan, that I intended to ſhew him certain Jewels, among the reſt a very fair Pearl, which I had ſold to Giafer-Kan; but that he had given it me again, becauſe he underſtood that I would have made him pay for it, ten thouſand Roupies more than it was worth. They wrote alſo the particular proportion of all the other Stones which I carry'd. And upon this falſe and malicious advice it was, that Cha-Eſt-Kan, who receiv'd not this information till he had deliver'd me my Bill of Exchange, would abate me for my whole parcel, twenty thouſand Roupies, which he reduc'd at length to ten thouſand; and well I had it too.

Since I told you before, what a Preſent I gave to Cha-Eſt-Kam; I think it not amiſs to tell you, what I gave the King, to Nahab Giafer-Kan, to the Eunuch of the Grand Begum, Aurengzeb's Siſter, the Great Treaſurer, and the Porters of the Treaſury. For you muſt take notice, that whoever he be, that craves Audience of the King, they ask him in the firſt place, where the Preſent is which he intends for the King; and examine whether it be fitting to preſent to his Majeſty. For no man muſt come into his preſence empty handed, though it be an honour dearly purchas'd. Coming then to Gehanabad, I went to make my obeiſance to the King; and this is the Preſent which I made him.

In the firſt place, a Buckler of Braſs highly emboſs'd, and very richly guilt, the coſt of the Guilding alone amounting to two hundred Ducats of Gold, or eighteen hundred Livres; the value of the whole piece coming to four thouſand three hundred ſeventy eight Livres. In the middle thereof was the ſtory of Curtius, who threw himſelf and his Horſe into the Barathrum, when the Earth gap'd, near Rome. Round the outermoſt Circle of the Buckler, was repreſented the ſiege of Rochel. It was wrought by one of the beſt Workmen in France, by the order of the Cardinal Richlieu. All the great Lords that were about Aurengzeb at that time, were charm'd at the beauty of the Workmanſhip, and told him, he could not do better, than to put it upon the great Elephant, which carry'd the Standard before his Majeſty when he march'd into the Field.

I preſented him alſo with a Battle-Axe of Chryſtal of the Rock, the ſides whereof were ſet with Rubies and Emraulds, enchas'd in Gold in the body of the Chryſtal, which coſt three thouſand one hundred and nineteen Livres.

Moreover, I preſented him with a Saddle after the Turky faſhion, embroider'd with little Rubies, Pearls, and Diamonds, which coſt two thouſand eight hundred and ninety-two Livres.

I preſented him alſo with another Saddle and Foot-cloath, embroider'd with Gold and Silver, to the value of one thouſand ſeven hundred and thirty Livres. The whole Preſent amounting to twelve thouſand one hundred and nineteen Livres.

The Preſent which I made to Giafar-Kan, the Great Mogul's Unkle, was a Table, with other nineteen pieces to make a Cabinet, all natural Stones, of divers colours, repreſenting the ſhapes of ſeveral Birds and Flowers. The work was made at Florence, and coſt two thouſand one hundred and fifty Livres.

A perfect Ruby Ring, which coſt one thouſand and three hundred Livres.

To the great Treaſurer, I preſented a Watch in a Gold Caſe, ſet with ſmall Emraulds, at ſeven hundred and twenty Livres.

To the Porters of the Kings Treaſury, and thoſe that deliver out the Money out of the Treaſury, two hundred Roupies, at three hundred Livres.

To the Eunuch of the Great Begum, Siſter to Aurengzeb, a Watch in a painted Caſe, which coſt two hundred and ſixty Livres.

All theſe Preſents which I made, as well to the Great Mogul, as to Cha-Eſt-Kan, Giafer-Kan, his Majeſties Uncles; as alſo the Great Treaſurer, to the Stewards of the Houſes of the Kan's, and thoſe that brought me twice the Calaat, or Habit of Honour from the King, and as many times from the Begum his Siſter, and once from Giafar Kan; all theſe Preſents, I ſay, came to twenty-three thouſand one hundred fourſcore and ſeven Livres. So true it is, that they who have any buſineſs to do at the Court of the great Princes, as well in Turky as in Perſia and in the Indies, muſt not pretend to do any thing in reference to their affairs, till they have their Preſents, and thoſe very conſiderable, ready. Beſides, that his Purſe muſt be continually open to divers Officers of meaner reputation, who may be able to ſerve him. I did not mention in my firſt Volume the Preſent which I made to him that brought me the Calaat from the King of Perſia, to whom I gave two hundred Crowns.

CHAP. IX.

The Road from Surat to Golconda.

I Have made ſeveral journeys to Golconda, and have taken ſeveral Roads; ſometimes by Sea embarking from Ormus for Maliſpata; ſometimes ſetting out from Agra, but moſt often from Surat, which is the chiefeſt landing-place of Indolſtan. But in this Chapter I will only ſpeak of the common Road from Surat to Golconda; wherein I comprehend that of Agra; which Road comes in at Dultabat, as I ſhall afterwards relate, making mention only of two journeys which I made in 1645, and 1652, for fear of tiring the Reader.

I departed from Surat in the year 1645, upon the nineteenth of January, and came to lye at Cambari, coſtes 3

Dultabat is one of the beſt Fortreſſes in the Kingdoms of the Great Mogul, upon a Mountain every way ſteep; the only way to it being ſo narrow, that but one Horſe, or one Camel can go at a time. This City is at the foot of the Mountain, very well wall'd. And this place of ſuch importance, which the Mogul's loſt, when the Kings of Golconda and Viſapour revolted from them, was retaken in the Reign of Jehan-guire, by a ſubtle ſtratagem. Sultan Courom, who was afterwards call'd Cha-jehan, commanded in Decan the Army of the King his Father; and Aſt-Kan, Father in Law to Cha-Eſt-Kan, who was one of the Generals, gave the Prince ſome ſort of language which ſo highly offended him, that immediately ſending for one of his Papouche's, or Shoo's, he caus'd him to have ſix blows given him upon the Bonnet; which among the Indians is the higheſt higheſt indignity can be put upon a man, after which he is no more to appear in the Prince's preſence. This was done by conſent between the Prince and the General, to deceive the World, more eſpecially any Spies which the King of Viſapour might have in the Prince's Army. The report of Aſt-Kan's diſgrace was immediately ſpread abroad: and he himſelf flying for Sanctuary to the King of Viſapour, who had not cunning enough to diſcern the impoſture, was welcom'd by the ſame King, and aſſur'd of his protection. Aſt-Kan ſeeing himſelf ſo well receiv'd, begg'd leave of the King, that he might retire with ten or twelve of his Women, and as many of his Servants, into the Fortreſs of Dultabat, which was granted. He enter'd the Town with eight or ten Camels, the two Cajava's or Litters on each ſide of the Camel being cloſe ſhut, to keep the Women from being ſeen. But inſtead of Women, he had put into every Cajava two Souldiers, all bold and reſolv'd men, as were alſo every one of the ſuppos'd Eunuchs that led the Camels: ſo that he had no great difficulty to cut the Garriſon in pieces, not being upon their guard; and to make himſelf Maſter of the place, which has been ever ſince under the Power of the Great Mogul. There are in the place a great number of excellent Pieces of Cannon, and the Cannoniers are generally Engliſh or Hollanders. True it is, that there is one little Mountain higher than the Fortreſs; but there is hardly any way to it, but through the ſame Fortreſs. There was a Dutch Engineer, who after he had ſerv'd the King fifteen or ſixteen years, deſir'd leave to be gone, and the Holland-Company it ſelf, that had recommended him to the Service, did all they could to obtain it; but they could never procure it; becauſe he was an excellent Cannonier, and very skilful in makeing Fire-works. The Raja Jeſſeing, who is the moſt Potent of all the Idolatrous Princes of India, and who was moſt powerfully Inſtrumental to put the Crown upon Aureng-zeb's Head, was ſent as Generaliſſimo of the Army of this King, againſt the Raja Seva-gi; and paſſing by the Fortreſs of Dultabat, this Dutch-Cannonier went to wait upon him, all the Cannoniers of the Army being Franguis, as well as he. The Hollander laying hold of this opportunity, told the Raja, that if he would procure him a Licence to depart, he would ſhew him a way to get up Cannon, and to mount them upon that Mountain which commanded the Fortreſs: for they had already wall'd it about, and put Souldiers upon it to keep it ſecure. The Raja pleas'd with his propoſal, aſſur'd him that he would procure him the King's Licence, if he perform'd what he had propos'd. Thereupon the Hollander undertaking and accompliſhing his deſign, the Raja was as good as his word, and obtain'd of the King to diſmiſs the Dutch-Cannonier: who came to Surat when I was there, about the beginning of the year 1667; whence he embark'd for Holland.

From Dultabat to Aureng-abat, coſtes 4

Aureng-abat was formerly but a Village, till Aureng-zeb made it a City, though it be not wall'd. It grew to be thus enlarg'd, as well by reaſon of a Lake two leagues about, upon which the Village is built, as for the Memorys-ſake of his firſt Wife, who is dead, by whom he had his Children. She is Interr'd toward the end of the Lake, upon the Weſt-ſide, where the King has built a Moſquee, with a ſtately Monument, and a fair Inn. The Moſquee and the Monument were rear'd at a great expence, being cover'd with white-Marble, which is brought from Lahor by Waggon; being a journey of four Months. Going one time from Surat to Golconda, I met five days journey from Aureng-abat, more than three hundred Waggons laden with this Marble, the leaſt wherof was drawn by twelve Oxen.

The twelfth, to Birgam.

The thirteenth, to Omberat.

The fourteenth, to Enneque-Tenque, a ſtrong Fortreſs, that bears the name of two Indian Princeſſes. It ſtands upon a Mountain ſteep every way; there being but one aſcent to it upon the Eaſt-ſide. Within the encloſed compaſs of the Walls there is a large Pond, and Ground enough to ſow for the maintenance of five or ſix-hundred men. But the King keeps no Garriſon therein, ſo that it falls to ruine.

The one and twentieth, to Patris.

The two and twentieth, to Bargan.

The three and twentieth, to Palam.

The four and twentieth, to Candear, a large Fortreſs, but upon one ſide commanded by an high Mountain.

The five and twentieth, to Gargan.

The ſix and twentieth, to Nagooni.

The ſeven and twentieth, to Indove.

The eight and twentieth, to Indelvai.

The nine and twentieth, to Regivali. Between theſe two laſt places there is a little River which ſeparates the Territories of the Great Mogul, from the Dominions of the King of Golconda.

The thirtieth, to Maſapkipet.

The one and thirtieth, to Mirel-mola-kipet.

To go from Agra to Golconda, you muſt go to Brampour, according to the Road already deſcrib'd from Brampour to Dultabat, which is five or ſix days journeys off; and from Dultabat to thoſe other places before ſet down.

You may alſo take another Road to go from Surat to Golconda; that is to ſay, through Goa and Viſapour; as I ſhall inform you in the particular relation of my journey to Goa. I come now to what is moſt worthy of obſervation in the Kingdom of Golconda: And to relate what happen'd in the laſt Wars the King maintain'd againſt his Neighbours, during the time that I have known the Indies.

CHAP.

CHAP. X.

Of the Kingdom of Golconda, and the Wars which it has maintain'd for ſome few years laſt paſt.

THE whole Kingdom of Golconda, take it in general, is a good Country, abounding in Corn, Rice, Cattel, Sheep, Poultry, and other neceſſaries for human life. In regard there are great ſtore of Lakes in it, there is alſo great ſtore of Fiſh. Above all the reſt, there is a ſort of Smelt, that has but one bone in the middle, which is moſt delicious food. Nature has contributed more than Art, toward the making theſe Lakes, whereof the Country is full; which are generally in places ſomewhat rais'd, ſo that you need do no more than make a little Dam upon the plain-ſide to keep in the water. Theſe Dams or Banks are ſometimes half a league long: and after the rainy ſeaſons are over, they open the Sluces from time to time to let out the water into the adjacent Fields, where it is receiv'd by divers little Channels to water particular grounds.

Bagnager is the name of the Metropolis of this Kingdom; but vulgarly it is call'd Golconda, from the name of a Fortreſs, not above two leagues diſtant from it, where the King keeps his Court. This Fortreſs is about two leagues in circuit, and by conſequence requires a numerous Guard. It is as it were a Town where the King keeps his Treaſure: having left Bagnagar, ever ſince it was ſack'd by the Army, which Aureng-zeb brought againſt it.

Bagnagar is then the City, which they vulgarly call Golconda; and it was founded by the great Grandfather of the preſent King; upon the importunity of one of his Wives, whom he paſſionately lov'd, whoſe name was Nagar. Before that, it was only a place of Pleaſure, where the King had very fair Gardens, till at length his Wife continually repreſenting to him the delicacies of the ſituation for the building a City and a Palace, by reaſon of the River; he laid the foundations, and order'd that it ſhould bear the name of his Wife, calling it, Bag-Nagar, that is to ſay, the Garden of Nagar. This City lies in ſeventeen degrees of Elevation, wanting two minutes. The Country round about is a flat Country, only neer the City are ſeveral Rocks, as you ſee about Fontain-Bleau. A great River waſhes the Walls of the City upon the South-weſt-ſide, which, neer to Maſlipatan, falls into the Gulf of Bengala. At Bagnagar you croſs this River over a Bridg no leſs beautiful than Pont-Neuf at Paris. The City is little leſs than Orleans, well-built, and full of Windows. There are many fair large Streets, but not being well-pav'd, they are duſty, as are all the Cities of Perſia and India, which is very offenſive in the Summer.

Before you come to the Bridg, you muſt paſs through a large Suburb, call'd Erengabad, about a league in length; where live all the Merchants, the Brokers, Handicraft-Trades, and in general, all the meaner ſort of people; The City being inhabited only by perſons of Quality, Officers of the King's Houſe, Miniſters of Juſtice, and Officers of the Army. From ten or eleven in the forenoon, till four or five in the evening, the Merchants, Brokers, and Workmen come into the City to trade with the Forreign Merchants; after which time they return to their own Houſes. In the are Suburb two or three fair Moſquees, which ſerve for Inns for the Forreigners, beſides ſeveral Pagods in the Neighbouring-parts. Through the ſame Suburb lies the way to the Fortreſs of Golconda.

So ſoon as you are over the Bridg, you enter into a large Street, that leads you to the King's Palace. On the right-hand are the Houſes of ſome Lords of the Court; and four or five Inns two Stories-high: wherein there are fair Halls and large Chambers to let in the freſh Air. At the end of this Street there is a large Piazza; upon which ſtands one of the ſides of the Palace; in the middle whereof there is a Balcony, wherein the King comes to ſit, when he pleaſes to give Audience to the People. The great Gate of the Palace ſtands not upon this Piazza, but upon another very neer adjoyning; and you enter firſt into a large

Court

Court ſurrounded with Portico's, under which lies the King's Guards. Out of this Court you paſs into another, built after the ſame form, encompaſt with ſeveral fair Apartments, the Roofs whereof are terraſs'd. Upon which, as upon thoſe where the Elephants are kept, there are very fair Gardens, wherein there grow Trees of that bigneſs, that it is a thing of great wonder, how thoſe Arches ſhould bear ſo vaſt a burthen.

About fifty years ſince, they began to build a magnificent Pagod in the City; which would have been the faireſt in all India, had it been finiſh'd. The Stones are to be admir'd for their bigneſs: And that wherein the Nich is made, which is on that ſide where they ſay their Prayers, is an entire Rock, of ſuch a prodigious bulk, that it was five years before five or ſix-hunder'd men, continually employ'd, could hew it out of its place. They were forc'd alſo to rowl it along upon an Engine with Wheels, upon which they brought it to the Pagod; and ſeveral affirm'd to me, that there were fourteen-hunder'd Oxen to draw it. I will tell you hereafter the reaſon it remains imperfect: For had it been finiſh'd, in all reaſon it had excell'd all the boldeſt Structures of Aſia.

On the other ſide of the City, as you go to Maſlipatan, there are two great Lakes, being each about a league in compaſs, wherein there ride ſeveral Pinks richly adorn'd for the King's Pleaſure; and upon the Banks are ſeveral fair Houſes that belong to the Principal Lords of the Court.

Upon three ſides of the City ſtands a very fair Moſquee, wherein are the Tombs of the Kings of Golconda: and about four in the afternoon there is a Dole of Bread and Pilau to all the Poor that come. If you would ſee any thing that is rare, you muſt go to view theſe Tombs upon a Feſtival-day. For then from morning till night they are hung with rich Tapeſtry.

As for the Government and Policy which is obſerv'd in this City: In the firſt place, when a ſtranger comes to the Gates, they ſearch him exactly, to ſee if he have any Salt or Tobacco about him; for thoſe Commodities bring the King his greateſt Revenue. Sometimes a Stranger ſhall wait a day or two, before he ſhall have leave to enter. For a Souldier firſt gives notice to the officer that commands the Guard, and then he ſends to the Deroga, to know what he ſhall do. Now, becauſe it many times happens that the Deroga is buſy, or gone to take a walk out of the City, or elſe for that ſometimes the Souldier himſelf pretends he cannot find the Deroga, only, to create himſelf more errands, to get the more Money; a Stranger is forc'd to endure all this delay, ſometimes, as I have ſaid before, for a day or two.

When the King ſits to do Juſtice, I obſerve that he comes into the Balcone that looks into the Piazza, and all that have buſineſs ſtand below, juſt againſt the place where the King ſits. Between the People and the Walls of the Palace are fix'd in the ground three rows of Poles, about the length of an Half-Pike, to the ends whereof they tye certain ropes a-croſs one upon another. Nor is any perſon whatſoever permitted to paſs beyond thoſe bounds, unleſs he be call'd. This Bar, which is never ſet up, but when the King ſits in Judgment, runs along the whole bredth of the Piazza; and juſt againſt the Balcone there is a Bar to open, to let in thoſe that are call'd. Then two men, that each of them hold a Cord by the end, extended all the bredth of the paſſage, have nothing to do but to let fall the Cord, for any perſon that is call'd to ſtep over it. A Secretary of State ſits below under the Balcone, to receive all Petitions; and when he has five or ſix together, he puts them in a Bag, and then an Eunuch, who ſtands in the Balcone neer the King, lets down a ſtring, to which the Bag being ty'd, he draws it up, and preſents it to his Majeſty.

Every Munday the chiefeſt of the Nobility mount the Guard, every one in their turn, and are never reliev'd till at the eight days end. There are ſome of theſe Lords that have five or ſix thouſand men under their command; and they lye encamp'd in their Tents round about the City. When they mount the Guard, every one goes from his own Habitation to the Rendevouz; but when they are reliev'd, they march in good order over the Bridg, thence through the long Street into the Piazza, where they draw up before the Balcone. In the firſt place, march ten or twelve Elephants, more or leſs, according to the quality of the Captain of the Guard. There are ſome of theſe

Elephants

Elephants that carry Cages, which in ſome ſort reſemble the Body of a little Coach; there are others that have but one man to guide them, and another in the Cage who carries a Banner.

After the Elephants, follow the Camels by two and two, ſometimes to the number of thirty or forty. Every Camel carries a kind of Packſaddle, upon which is faſten'd a little Culverine, which a certain Engineer, clad in a skin from head to foot, and ſitting upon the Crupper of the Camel, with a lighted Match in his hand, dextrouſly manages from one ſide to another before the Balcone, where the King ſits.

After them come the Coaches, attended by the Domeſtick Servants of the Commander: Next to them follow the lead-Horſes, and then the Lord appears, to whom all this Equipage belongs, attended by ten or twelve Curtiſans, that ſtay for him at the end of the Bridg, and skip and dance before him to the Piazza. Behind him the Cavalry and infantry march in good order: which being a ſhew, wherein there was much of delight and ſtate, all the while I ſtaid at Bagnabar, which was about four Months, I had the divertiſement to ſee them out of my Lodging in the great Street every week as they march'd by.

The Souldiers wear no other Clothes than only three or four ells of Calicut, with which they cover half their Bodies behind and before. They wear their hair very long, and tie it up in a knot upon the top of the crown, like the women, who have no other Headgear than only a piece of Linnen with three corners, one that comes to the middle of the head, and the other two, which they tie under their chins. The Souldiers do not wear Hangers or Scimitars like the Perſians; but broad Swords like the Switzers, as well for a thruſt, as a blow, which they hang in a Girdle. The Barrels of their Muskets are ſtronger than ours, and much neater; for their Iron is better, and not ſo ſubject to break. Their Cavalry carry Bows and Arrows, a Buckler and a Battel-Ax, an Headpiece and a Jacket of Mail, that hangs down from the Head-piece over their Shoulders.

There are ſo great a number of common Women as well in the City as in the Suburbs, and in the Fortreſs, which is like another City, that there are generally above twenty thouſand ſet down in the Deroga's Book; without which licence, it is not lawful for any Woman to profeſs the Trade. They pay no tribute to the King; only they are oblig'd to come, a certain number of them, with their Governeſs, and their Muſick every Friday, and preſent themſelves before the Balcone. If the King be there, they dance before him. if he intend not to come, an Eunuch comes into the Balcone, and makes them a ſign to retire. In the cool of the evening they ſtand at the doors of their Houſes, which are for the moſt part little Huts, and when night comes, they ſet up a Candle or a lighted Lamp for a Signal: Then it is alſo that they open all the Shops where they ſell Tari; which is a certain drink made of the juice of a Tree, and is as Sweet as our new Wines. They fetch it ſome five or ſix league off, upon Horſes, that carry two earthen-Bottles of each ſide, and trot at a great rate; of which there come every day to the City above five or ſix hunder'd. This King has a conſiderable Revenue by the Impoſt which he lays upon this Tari. And for that reaſon he permits ſo many common Women, in regard it is for their ſake that ſo much Tari is conſum'd; thoſe that ſell it, for that cauſe, keeping their Shops by thoſe Houſes.

Theſe ſort of Women are ſo nimble and active, that when the preſent King went to ſee Maſulipatan, nine of them undertook to repreſent the figure of an Elephant; four making the four feet, four the body, and one the trunk; upon which the King, ſitting in a kind of Throne, made his entry into the City.

All the Men and Women of Golconda are well proportion'd, and of comely ſtatures; and fair enough in their countenances; only the Country-people are a little more ſwart.

The preſent King of Golconda bears the Name of Abdoul-Coutou-Sha; and I will tell the Reader in a few words, from whence he drew his Original. In the Reign of Axbar King of India, the Father of Jehan-Guir, the Territories of the Great Moguls did not extend farther Southward then Narbider; ſo that the River which runs by it, and which coming from the South, empties it ſelf into Ganges, ſeparated their Dominions from the Territories of the Raja of Narſingue, that ſtretch'd as far as Cape-Comorin, the other Raja's being only his Subjects and depending upon him. This Raja and his Succeſſors have been always at Wars with them that ſucceeded to Tamerlane or Temur-leng in India; and their Power was ſo great, that the laſt Raja, who was at War with Akbar, brought into the Field four Armies under as many Generals. The moſt conſiderable of his Armies lay in thoſe Provinces, which at this day are call'd the Kingdom of Golconda; the ſecond was quarter'd in the Provinces of Viſapour, the third in the Province of Dulrabat, and the fourth in the Territories of Brampour. The Raja of Narſingue dying without Children, the four Generals divided among themſelves the Countries which they poſſeſs'd with their Army, and took upon them the title of Kings, the one of Golconda, the other of Viſapour, the other of Brampour, and the fourth of Dulrabat. Though the Raja were an Idolater, nevertheleſs his four Generals were Muhumetans; and he of Golconda was of the Sect of Haly, deſcended from an Ancient Family of the Turcomans, which inhabit the Country of Hamadan in Perſia. This General, as I have ſaid, was more conſiderable than any of the reſt, and ſome few days after the death of the Raja, they won a famous Victory from the Mogul; ſo that he could not hinder them from aſſuming their ſeveral Sovereignties. But after that, Jehan-Guir, the Son of Akbar, conquer'd again the Kingdom of Brampour, Cha-jehan the Son of Jehan-Guir recover'd the Kingdom of Dulrabat, and Aureng-zeb the Son of Cha-jehan recover'd ſome part of the Kingdom of Viſapour. As for the King of Golconda, neither Cha-jehan, nor Aureng-zeb diſturb'd him, but let him reſt in peace, upon condition that he ſhould pay to the Mogul an annual tribute of 200000 Pagods. At preſent the greateſt Raja on this ſide Ganges is the Raja of Velou, whoſe Territories extend to Cape-Comorin, and who ſucceeded to ſome part of the Territories of the Raja of Narſingue: But in regard there is no Trade in his Country, and by conſequence no concourſe of ſtrangers, there is little notice taken of him. The preſent King of Golconda has no Sons, but three Daughters, who are all married.

The eldeſt Eſpous'd one of the Kinſmen of the Grand-Chek of Mecca. Nor muſt we forget ſome paſſages that fell out before this Marriage. The Chek coming to Golconda in the habit of a Faquir, for ſome Months lodg'd without the Gate of the Palace, diſdaining to give any anſwer to ſeveral Courtiers, that demanded what his buſineſs was. At length the thing being made known to the King, he ſent his chief Phyſitian, who ſpoke good Arabick, to know of the Chek what he had to requeſt, and the reaſon of his coming. The Phyſitian, and ſome other Lords of the Court that diſcours'd him alſo, finding him to be a perſon of great Wit and Learning, brought him to the King, who was very well ſatisfi'd with his aſpect and his preſence. But at length the Chek declaring to him, that he came to Eſpouſe the Princeſs; that propoſal very much ſurpriz'd the Prince, and was look'd upon by the greateſt part of the Court, as made by a perſon not well in his wits. At firſt the King only laugh'd at him. But when he found him obſtinately perſevering in his demand, in-ſo-much that he threatn'd the Countrey with ſome ſtrange Calamity, if the Princeſs were not given to him in Marriage, he was committed to Priſon, where he lay a long time. At length the King thinking it more to the purpoſe to ſend him back into his own Countrey, caus'd him to be ſhip'd away at Maſlipatan, in a Veſſel that carri'd Goods and Pilgrims to Mocca, whence they travel by land to Mecca. About two years after the ſame Chek return'd again to Golconda, and order'd his affairs ſo well, that he Eſpous'd the Princeſs, and won an high reputation in the Kingdom, which he governs at this day, and is very Potent. He it was that kept the King from ſurrendring the Fortreſs of Golconda, whither he was retir'd, when Aureng-zeb and his Son took Bagnabar, as I ſhall tell you by and by, threatning to kill him, if he would not reſolve to hold it out, and not deliver the keys to the enemy. This bold action was the reaſon which made the King love him ever afterwards; and that he takes his counſel in all weighty affairs, not as he is the King's Son-in-Law, but as he is a great Miniſter of State, and the chiefeſt perſon, next the King, in all the Court. He it was that has put a ſtop to the finiſhing the great Pagod in Bagnagar, having threaten'd the whole Kingdom with ſome great Calamity, if they went forward with the work. This Prince is a paſſionate Lover of all thoſe that profeſs the Mathematicks, and underſtands them as well. For which reaſon, though he be a Maa Mahumetan, he is a great Favourer of all the Christians, who are vers'd in that Science, as he has particularly testifi'd to Father Ephraim, a Capuchin, passing through Golconda for Pegu, whither he was sent by his Superiors. He did all he could to oblige him to stay in the Country, and offer'd to build him a House and a Church at his own expences; telling him, he should neither want employment, nor Hearers, in regard there were several Portugueſe Christians, and several Armenians that came thither to trade. But Father Ephraim having a particular Order to go to Pegu, could not accept of his Offer; yet when he went to take his leave of the Check, he presented him with a Calaat, the most noble that was in his Wardrobe; being the whole habit; the Cap, the Cabay or large Vest, the Arcalou or short Cassock, two pair of Drawers, two Shirts, and two Scarfs, which they wear about their necks, and over their heads to keep off the heat of the Sun. The Friar was surpriz'd at the present, and gave the Check to understand, that it was not proper for him to wear it: however the Check would force him to take it, telling him he might accommodate some of his Friends with it. Two months after Father Ephraim bestow'd the same Present upon me, being at Surat; for which I return'd him thanks.

The Check seeing he could not detain the Father, and unwilling he should go a-foot from Golconda to Maslipatan, oblig'd him to take an Oxe, with two Men to lead it; and because he could not perswade him to take also thirty Pagods, which he presented the Father withall, he commanded the two men, when they came to Maslipatan, to leave the Oxe and the thirty Pagods with him, which they did very punctually; for otherwise at their return to Golconda, they had forfeited their lives. I will finish the History of Father Ephraim, when I come to the description of Goa, which is the principal place that the Portugals have in the Indies.

The second Daughter of the King of Golconda was married to Sultan Mahumad, the eldest Son of Aurengzeb; the occasion whereof was this: Mirgimola, Generalissimo of the King of Golconda's Army, and who had been very serviceable to his Master, to settle the Crown upon his head, according to the custom, left with the King as a mark of his fidelity, both his Wife and Children in Hostage; for he was sent to reduce certain Raja's in Bengala, that were in Rebellion. He had several Daughters, but only one Son, who had a great train, and made a great noise at Court. The reputation and riches which Mirgimola had gain'd, rais'd him up several Enemies, who endeavour'd in his absence to ruine him, and to put him out of the Kings favour. They pretended that the great power of Mirgimola was very much to be suspected; that all his designs tended to dethrone him, and to settle the Kingdom of Golconda upon his own Son; that it behov'd him not to stay till the remedy were past cure, but to rid himself of an Enemy, so much the more to be fear'd, the closer he kept his intentions; and that the shortest and best way was to poyson him. The King being easily perswaded, gave them leave and authority to act as they pleas'd for his security; but having miss'd of their design for three or four times together, Mirgimola's Son began to smell the plot; and immediately gave advice thereof to his Father. It is not known what instructions he receiv'd from his Father; but so soon as he had his answer, he went to the King, and spoke boldly to him, taxing him with the services which his Father had done him, and that without his assistance he had never come to the Crown. The young Lord, naturally of a fiery disposition, kept on this discourse, so displeasing to the King, till at length his Majesty flung away; and the Lords that were present, fell upon the young man, and basely misus'd him. At the same time also he was arrested and committed to prison, together with his Mother and Sisters. Which action, as it made a great noise at Court, coming to Mirgimola's ears, so incens'd him, that having an Army under his command, and being belov'd by the Soldiers, he resolv'd to make use of the advantages he had, to revenge himself for the injury done him. He was then not far from Bengala, being sent, as I said before, to reduce certain Raja's to obedience, whose Territories lye upon the Ganges; and Sultan-Sujah, Cha-jehan's second Son, being then Governour of Bengala, the General thought it his best way to address himself to him; as being the next Prince, with whom he might join his Forces against the King of Golconda, whom he look'd upon now no more as his Maſter, but as one of his moſt inveterate Enemies. Thereupon he wrote to the Prince to this effect: That if he would join with him, he would give him an opportunity to poſſeſs himſelf of the whole Kingdom of Golconda; and that he ſhould not neglect ſo fair an opportunity to enlarge the Dominions of the Great Mogul, the ſucceſſion whereof might as well concern him, as any of the reſt of his Brothers. But the anſwer which Sultan-Sujah ſent him, was contrary to his expectation; who told him, that he could not tell how to truſt a perſon, who as he went about to betray his King, might more eaſily be drawn to betray a Foreign Prince, whom he had inveigl'd only for the ſake of his Revenge; and that therefore he ſhould not rely upon him. Upon Sultan-Sujah's refuſal, Mirgimola wrote to Aurengzeb, who was then in his Government of Brampoure, who being not ſo nice as his Brother, accepted of the propoſal that was made him. Thus while Mirgimola advanc'd with his Troops toward Bagnabar, Aurengzeb haſten's toward Decan, and both Armies being join'd, they came to the Gates of Bagnabar before the King was in a poſture to receive them. He had only time to retreat into his Fortreſs of Golconda, to which Aurengzeb, after he had rifl'd the City of Bagnabar, and plunder'd the Palace, lay'd a cloſe Siege. The King ſeeing himſelf thus vigorouſly preſs'd, ſent away to Mirgimola his Wife and Children very honourably. For there is vertue and generoſity in the Indians, as well as in the Europeans; of which I will give you an illuſtrious Example in the perſon of the King of Golconda. Some days after the Enemy had beſieg'd the Fortreſs, a Canoneer eſpying Aurengzeb upon his Elephant, riding about to view the Fortifications of the Caſtle, told the King, being then upon the Baſtion, that if he pleas'd he would fetch off Aurengzeb with a Canon-ſhot; and at the ſame time was about to give fire; but the King holding his hand, told him he perceiv'd it well enough, but that it behov'd Kings to be better Husbands of the Lives of Princes. The Canoneer obey'd the King, and inſtead of ſhooting at Aurengzeb, he took off the Head of the General of his Army, who was a little before him; which put a ſtop to the Aſſault they were about to have giv'n, the Army being in a confuſion upon his death. Abdul-jaber-Beg, General of the King of Golconda's Army, lying not far from the Camp, with a flying Army of four thouſand Horſe, underſtanding the diſorder of the Enemy by reaſon of the loſs of their General, laid hold of ſo favourable an opportunity, gave them a deſperate charge in that confuſion, and putting them to the rout, perſu'd them till night, for four or five Leagues. Some few days before the General's death, the King of Golconda finding that his proviſions fail'd him in the Fortreſs, was about to have deliver'd the Keys; but as I ſaid before, Mirza-Mahomed, his Son-in-Law, ſnatch'd them out of his hand, and threatned to kill him, if he perſever'd in that reſolution. Which was the reaſon, that the King who lov'd him not before, had ever after the greateſt affection imaginable for him as long as he liv'd.

Aurengzeb being thus conſtrain'd to raiſe his Siege, ſtay'd ſome days to rally his Troops; and having receiv'd a recruit of freſh men, return'd again to the Siege, with new reſolutions. But Mirgimola, who had ſtill ſome kindneſs for the King remaining in his breaſt, would not permit Aurengzeb to uſe the utmoſt extremity, but by his wit and good management gain'd a ſuſpenſion of Arms.

Cha-jehan, the Father of Aurengzeb, had formerly had great kindneſſes ſhew'n him by the King of Golconda, to whom he fled after he had loſt the Battel, together with his eldeſt Brother, which he fought againſt Jehan-guir his Father, with whom he made War. The eldeſt Son was taken, and Jehanguir caus'd his eyes to be put out; but Cha-jehan being more wary, fled, and was entertain'd by the King of Golconda, with whom he enter'd into a particular and ſtrict friendſhip; Cha-jehan making an Oath to his Benefactor, that he would never wage War againſt him upon any occaſion whatever. Mirgimola therefore knowing that it would be no difficult thing to bring two Kings, that were Friends, to an accommodation, wrought underhand with both, toward the concluſion of a Peace. And he ſo brought his buſineſs about, that the King of Golconda writ a Letter firſt to Cha-jehan, wherein he ſubmiſſively requeſted him to be an Arbitrator between Aurengzeb and him, promiſing to ſubmit wholly to him, and to ſign ſuch Articles as he ſhould propoſe. By the ſame policy of Mirgimola, Cha-jehan was advis'd, in anſwer to the King of Golconda's Letter to propoſe a Match between his ſecond Daughter and Sultan Mahomed, the Son of Aurengzeb, upon condition that after the death of the King her Father, the Son-in-Law ſhould inherit the Kingdom of Golconda. This propoſition being accepted, the Peace was concluded, and the Nuptials celebrated with an extraordinary Magnificence. As for Mirgimola, he quitted the ſervice of the King of Golconda, and went with Aurengzeb to Brampour. Soon after Cha-jehan made him his Prime Miniſter of State, and Generaliſſimo of his Armies; and he it was that ſo potently aſſiſted Aurengzeb to get the Crown, by the defeat of Sultan-Sujah. For Mirgimola was a perſon of great wit, and no leſs underſtanding in Military than in State affairs. I had occaſion to ſpeak with him ſeveral times; and I have no leſs admir'd his juſtice, than his diſpatch to all people that had to do with him; while he gave out ſeveral Orders, and ſign'd ſeveral Diſpatches at the ſame time, as if he had but one entire buſineſs in hand.

The other Princeſs of Golconda was promis'd to Sultan Sejed, another Chek of Mecca; and the Match went on ſo fairly, that the day was appointed for the celebration of the Nuptials; but Abdoul-Jaber-Beg, General of the Army, with ſix other Lords, went to the King to divert him from his intention; and they brought it ſo to paſs, that the Match was broken off, and the Princeſs was given in Marriage to Mirza-Abdoul-Coſing, the Kings Couſin; by whom ſhe has two Sons, which have wholly annull'd the Pretenſions of Aurengzeb's Son; whoſe Father now keeps him in Priſon, in the Fort of Gavaleor, for having taken his Uncle Sultan Sujah's part againſt him. The Princeſs had been given before to Mirza-Abdoul-Coſing, but for his debauchery, which render'd him little regarded by the King. But ſince his marriage he is very much reclaim'd.

Now the King of Golconda does not ſtand in ſo much fear of the Moguls; for in imitation of them, he keeps his Money in his own Country, and has already hoarded up a Treaſury ſufficient to maintain his Wars. Beſides, he is altogether addicted to the Sect of Haly, ſo that he will not wear a Bonnet, like the other Mahumetans, becauſe they ſay Haly wore none; but another ſort of attire for the head. Which is the reaſon that the Perſians, that come into India to ſeek their fortune, apply themſelves rather to the King of Golconda then to the Great Mogul. Such is the condition of the King of Viſapour alſo, whom the Queen, Siſter to the King of Golconda, takes care to educate in the Sect of Haly, which invites great numbers of Perſians into her Service.

CHAP. XI.

The Road from Golconda to Maſlipatan, al. Maſalipatan.

FRom Maſlipatan they count it an hundred coſtes or leagues, taking the right way. But if you go by the Diamond-Mine, which in the Perſian Language is call'd Coulour, in the Indian, Gani; they reckon it an hundred and twelve leagues: and this is the Road which I generally took.

From Golconda to Tenara, coſtes 4

Tenara is a ſweet place, where there are four very fair Houſes, to every one of which belongs a large Garden. One of the four ſtanding upon the left hand along the High-way, is much more beautiful then any of the other three. It is built of Free-ſtone two ſtories high, wherein there are ſeveral fair Galleries, Halls, Parlors, and lodging-Chambers. Before the front of the Houſe is a large four-ſquare Piazza, little inferior to the Place Royale in Paris. Upon every one of the other three fronts there is a great Portal, on each ſide whereof there is a fair Platform rais'd from the earth above four or five-foot-high, and well-Arch'd, where Travellers of Quality are lodg'd. On the top of each Portal there is a ſtrong Baluſter, luſter, and a little Chamber for the Ladies. When Perſons of Quality care not to be in their Houſes, they ſet up Tents in their Gardens; and you muſt take notice that there is no dwelling for any perſon but only in the three Houſes; for the fourth, which is the faireſt, belongs only to the Queen. When ſhe is not there however, any body may ſee it, and take a walk in the Garden, which is a very lovely place, and well-ſtor'd with water. The whole Piazza is encompaſt with ſeveral Chambers for the lodging of poor Travellers; who every day toward the evening have an Alms beſtow'd upon them, of Rice, or Pulſe, which they boil ready to their hands. But for the Idolaters that eat nothing which is provided by other hands, they give them flower to make Bread, and a little Butter. For when their Bread is bak'd like a broad thin Cake, they dip it in the melted-Butter.

The greateſt part of the way from Lakabaron to Coulour, eſpecially when you come near to Coulour, is very rocky; ſo that I was forc'd in ſome places to take my Coach off the Carriages, which was preſently done. If you meet with any good Earth between thoſe Rocks, there you ſhall find Caſſia-Trees, that bear the beſt Caſſia, and the moſt laxative in all India. Which I found by its working with my men that eat of it by the way.

There runs a great River by the Town of Coulour, which falls into the Gulf of Bengala near Maſlipatan.

Maſlipatan is a great City, the Houſes whereof are only of Wood, built at a diſtance from one another. The place it ſelf, which ſtands by the Sea, is famous for nothing but the Road for Ships which belongs to it, which is the beſt in the Gulf of Bengala; and from hence they ſet Sail for Pegu, for Siam, for Aracan, for Bengala, for Cochinchine, for Mecca, and for Ormus, alſo for the Iſlands of Madagaſcar, Sumatra and the Maniſſe's.

You muſt take notice, that from Golconda to Maſlipatan, there is no travelling by Waggons, by reaſon of the high Mountains, Lakes and Rivers that make the Road very ſtreight and impaſſable. 'Tis a very difficult thing to carry a little Coach thither; for I was forc'd to have my own taken off the Carriages, and ſo to have it lifted out of the bad way. The Road is every jot as bad between Golconda and Cape-Comorin; a Waggon being hardly ſo much as made mention of all the way; for that there is no other way to travel, or for the carriage of Goods, than with Horſes and Oxen. But inſtead of Coaches, they have the convenience of Pallekie's, wherein you are carried with more ſpeed and more eaſe than in any part of India.

The Road from Surat to Goa, and from Goa to Golconda through Viſapour.

YOU may go from Surat to Goa, partly by Land, and partly by Sea. But the Road being very bad by Land, generally Travellers go by Sea, and hiring an Almadier, which is a Barque with Oars, they go by the Shoar to Goa: though ſometimes the Malavares or Indian Pirats are very much to be fear'd all along thoſe Coaſts, as I ſhall tell you in due place.

The way from Surat to Goa, is not reckon'd by Coſtes, but by Gos, one of which makes four of our common Leagues.

The great danger which you run along the Coaſt, is the hazard of falling into the hands of the Malavares, who are violent Mahumetans, and very cruel to the Chriſtians. I ſaw a bare-foot Carmelite-Friar who had been taken by thoſe Pirats. This Friar, to get his ranſom the ſooner, they put to that kind of torture, that his right-arm was ſhorter by one half then his left, and ſo it was with one leg. The Captains do not give above ſix Crowns to every Souldier for the whole ſix months that they are uſually out at Sea: Then the Souldiers may return home, and if their Captains will have them ſtay longer, they muſt allow 'em more pay. They ſeldom venture out above 20 or 25 leagues at Sea, which is no great hazard of the Veſſel. But ſometimes the Portugueſe's ſnap them, and then they either hang 'em up preſently, or throw 'em over-board. Theſe Malavares carry ſometimes 200, ſometimes 250 men, and they ſail together in Squadrons of ten or fifteen Barques to attack a great Veſſel, not caring a ruſh for the great Guns. They come board and board ſo ſuddenly, and caſt ſuch a quantity of Pots of Artificial Fire upon the deck, that if there be not ſpeedy remedy appli'd, they will preſently do a world of miſchief. Generally our Seamen, knowing the cuſtom of theſe Pirats, when they come within ken, preſently ſhut up the Scuttles, and fill the deck with water, to hinder the Fire-Pots from doing execution.

An Engliſh Captain, whoſe name was Mr. Clark, coming from Bantam to Surat, not far from Cochin, met a Squadron of theſe Malavares, conſiſting of 25 or 30 of theſe Barques. Who came board and board, and vigorouſly attack'd him. The Captain ſeeing he could not withſtand their firſt Fury, put fire to ſome Barrels of Powder, and blowing up the deck, blew a great number of the Pirats into the Sea. Nevertheleſs, the reſt were nothing diſcourag'd, but boarded the Ship a ſecond time. The Engliſh Captain ſeeing there was no help, put his men into two Shallops, and ſtaying behind in his Cabin, where the Pirats could not enter ſo ſuddenly, he ſet fire to a Train which he had laid, that reach'd to all the reſt of the Powder, and at the ſame time leaping into the Sea, was taken up by his own men. In the mean time the Ship being all a-fire, the Pyrats leapt into the Sea alſo. But for all this, the two Shallops, wherein there were about forty Engliſh, were taken by the reſt of the Malavares, that were Freſh-men; and I was then at breakfaſt with the Engliſh Preſident, Mr. Fremelin, when he receiv'd a Letter from Captain Clark, that he was a Slave to Samorin, who is the moſt conſiderable King all along the Pirats Coaſt. The Prince would not leave the Engliſh in the hands of thoſe Scoundrels, knowing that they would have been in great danger of their lives, by reaſon that above twelve-hunder'd Women had loſt their Husbands, in the two times that the ſhip had been fir'd. However the King found found a means to appeaſe them, promiſing to each of them that had loſt their Husbands two Piaſters, every Piaſter being four ſhillings apiece, which came to above two thouſand four hundred Crowns, beſides four thouſand, which were to be paid for the Ranſom of the Captain and the other Sea-men, immediately the Preſident ſent the Money, and I ſaw them at their return, ſome in health, others in violent Feavers. The Malavares are a People ſo ſuperſtitious, that they never touch any thing that is foul or ſoyl'd, with their Right Hands, but only with the Left, the Nails of which Fingers they let grow, and uſe inſtead of Combs, for they wear their Hair long like the Women, tying it about their Heads in wreaths, and binding it with a Linnen cloath with three corners.

Since I have mention'd Daman, I will tell you in a few words how that City was beſieg'd by Aureng-Zeb the preſent Great Mogul. Some are of opinion that Elephants do great matters in War; which may be ſometimes true, but not always; for very often inſtead of doing miſchief to the Enemy, they turn upon thoſe that lead them, and rout their own party as Aureng-Zeb found by experience, at the Siege of this City. He was twenty days before Daman, and reſolv'd at length to Storm it upon a Sunday, believing that the Chriſtians were like the Jews and would not defend it upon that day. He that commanded the Place was an old Souldier, who had ſerv'd in France, and had three Sons with him. In the Town were eight hundred Gentlemen, and other ſtout Souldiers, who came from all parts to ſignalize their valour at that Siege. For though the Mogul had in his Army above forty thouſand men, he could not hinder relief from being put into Daman by Sea, in regard that he wanted Ships. The Sunday that the Prince intended to Storm, the Governour of Daman, as had been order'd at the Councel of War, caus'd Maſs to be ſaid preſently after Midnight, and then made a Sally with all his Cavalry and ſome part of his Infantry, who were to fall on upon that quarter which was guarded by two hundred Elephants. Among thoſe Elephants they flung a great number of Fire-works which ſo affrighted them in the dark of the Night, that knowing not whither they went, nor being to be rul'd by their Governours, they turn'd upon the Beſiegers with ſo much fury, that in leſs than two or three hours half the Army of Aureng-Zeb was cut in pieces, and in three days the Siege was rais'd; nor would the Prince after that, have any more to do with the Chriſtians.

I made two Voyages to Goa, the one at the beginning of the year 1641. the ſecond at the beginning of the year 1648. The firſt time I ſtay'd but five days, and return'd by Land to Surat. From Goa I went to Bicholly, which is upon the main Land, thence to Viſapour, thence to Golconda, thence to Aureng-abat, and ſo to Surat. I could have gone to Surat without paſſing through Golconda, but my buſineſs led me that way.

From Goa to Viſapour, coſtes. 85

Which takes up generally eight days journey.

From Viſapour to Golconda, coſtes. 100

Which I travel'd in nine days.

From Golconda to Aureng-abat, the Stages are not ſo well order'd, being ſometimes ſixteen, ſometimes twenty five, ſometimes twenty Leagues aſunder.

From Aureng-abat to Surat takes up ſometimes twelve, ſometimes fifteen, ſometimes ſixteen days journey.

Viſapour is a great ſcambling City, wherein there is nothing remarkable, neither as to the publick Edifices, nor as to Trade. The Kings Palace is a vaſt one but ill built; and the acceſs to it is very dangerous, in regard there are abundance of Crocodiles that lie in the Water which encompaſs it. The King of Viſapour has three good ports in his Dominions, Rejapour, Daboult, and Cra-paten. The laſt is the beſt of all, where the Sea beats upon the foot of the Mountain, and you have fourteen or fifteen Fathom Water near the Land. Upon the top of the Mountain there is a Fort, with a Spring of Water in it. Crapaten is not above five days journey from Goa to the North. And Rabaque, where the King of Viſapour ſels his Pepper, is as far diſtant from it to the Eaſt. The King of Viſapour and the King of Golconda have been formerly tributary to the Great Mogul: but now they are abſolute of themſelves.

This

This Kingdom was for some time disquieted by the revolt of Nair-seva-gi, Captain of the King of Visapour's Guards; after which the young Seva-gi his Son conceiv'd so deadly a hatred against the King, that he made himself the head of certain Banditi, and as he was both wise and liberal, he got together so many Horse and Foot, as made a Compleat Army; the Souldiers flocking to him from all parts, for the reputation of his Liberality. And he was just about to have led them to action, when the King of Visapour happen'd to dye without Children, so that with little or no trouble he got possession of one part of the Coast of Malavar; taking Retapour, Rasgar, Crapaten, Daboul, and other places. They report that upon his demolishing the fortifications of Rasgar, he found vast Treasures, which help'd him to pay his Souldiers, who were always well paid. Some years before the death of the King, the Queen perceiving no probability of having any Children, adopted a little Boy, upon whom she bestow'd all her affections, and caused him to be brought up in the Doctrine of Haly's Sect. The King upon his Death-bed caus'd this Adopted Son to be Proclaim'd King; but Seva-gi having a numerous Army continu'd the War, and much disturb'd the Regency of the Queen. At length he made the first propositions for Peace; which was concluded upon conditions, that he should quietly enjoy the Territories which he had subdu'd; that he should become Tributary to the King, and pay him the half of all his Revenue. The young King being thus fix'd in his Throne, the Queen Regent went in Pilgrimage to Mecca; and I was at Ispahan, when she pass'd through the Town in her return home.

When I made my second Voyage to Goa, I embark'd in a Dutch Vessel call'd the Maestricht, which carry'd me to Mingrela, where I landed the eleventh day of January, 1648.

Mingrela is a large Town, extended half a League in length upon the Sea, in the Territories of Visapour. It is one of the best Roads in all India, where the Hollanders take in fresh Provisions every time they sail to block up Goa, as also when they are bound upon Trade for many other parts of India. For at Mingrela there is both excellent Water, and excellent Rice. This Town is also very famous for Cardamoms, which the Eastern people esteem the best of Spices, not being to be had in any other Country; which makes that sort of Commodity very scarce and very dear. There is also made great store of course Calecuts, that are spent in the Country; besides great quantities of course Matting, that serves to pack up goods. So that both in respect of Trade, as also for the furnishing their ships with fresh Provisions, the Hollanders have a Factory in the Town. For, as I said before, not only all Vessels that come from Batavia, from Japon, from Bengala, Ceylan, and other places, and those that are bound for Surat, the Red Sea, Ormus, Balsara, &c. both going and coming, come to an Anchor in the Road of Mingrela, but also while the Hollanders are at Wars with the Portugals, and lye before the Bar of Goa, where they have usually eight or ten Sail, they send their small Barks to Mingrela for Provisions. For the Hollanders lye eight months in a year before the mouth of the Port of Goa so that there can nothing pass in to Goa by Sea all that time. You must also take notice, that the Bar of Goa is also stopt up some part of the year by the Sands which the South and West-winds that precede the great Rains, cast up; so that there is not above a foot, or a foot and half Water for very small Boats. But when the great Rains come, the Water swells and carrying away the Sands, opens a passage for the great Vessels.

CHAP. XIII.

Observations upon the present State of the City of Goa.

GOA lies in 15 Degrees, 32 minutes of Latitude, in an Island six or seven leagues about, upon the River of Mandova, ten leagues from the mouth of the River. The Island abounds in Corn and Rice, and bears several sorts of Fruit, as Manga's, Anana's, Adam's-Figs, and Coco's. But most certainly a Pippin is far beyond all those fruits. All those that have seen Europe and Asia, agree with me, that the Port of Goa, the Port of Constantinople, and the Port of Toulon, are three of the fairest Ports of all our vast Continent. The City is very large, and the Walls are of good Stone. The Houses are for the most part very magnificently built, especially the Vice-Roy's Palace. There are in it a great number of Apartments, and in one part of the Rooms and Chambers, which are very large hang several Pictures, wherein are severally painted by themselves, the Ships that come from Lisbon to Goa, with those that are bound from Goa to Lisbon, with the name of the Vessel, the Captain, and the number of Guns which the Ship carries. If the City were not so closely environ'd with Hills, it would doubtless be better inhabited, and the air would be much more wholsom. But these Mountains keep off the cool winds, which is the reason that the heats are very excessive. Beef and Pork is the ordinary diet of the Inhabitants of Goa. They have good store of Poultry, and some few Pidgons; but though Goa be very neer the Sea, Fish is very scarce. They have abundance of all sorts of Sweet-meats, and feed upon them very much.

Before the Hollanders had brought down the power of the Portugals in India there was nothing to be seen at Goa, but Magnificence and Riches: but the Dutch having every where got their Trade out of their hands, they have lost their springs of Gold and Silver, and are fallen from their former splendor. In my first Voyage to Goa I met with people of fashion, that had above two-thousand Crowns Revenue; at my second Voyage the same persons came privately to me in the evening, to beg an Alms; yet abating nothing, for all that of their inherent pride and haughtiness: Nay, their Women will come in Palleki's to the door, and stay while a Boy, that attends them, has brought you a Complement from his Mistress. Then usually you send them what you please, or carry it your self, if you have a curiosity to see their faces; which rarely can be done, because they cover themselves with a veil from head to foot. Moreover, if you go your self to present them your Charity, they will give you a little note, containing a recommendation of some religious Person, who signifies what substantial persons they have been, and how they came to fall to decay. Sometimes, if the person be handsom, she is desir'd to walk in; and to take a Collation, which lasts most commonly till the next day. Had not the Portugals so many Fortresses to keep upon the Land; or had, they not, out of their contempt of the Hollander neglected their affairs, they could never have been reduc'd to so low a condition.

The Portugueses have no sooner made the Cape of Good-Hope, but they are all Fidalgues or Gentlemen; and add the Title of Dom to the single name of Pedro or Jeronimo, which they receiv'd at their Baptism: From whence they are call'd the Fidalgues or Gentlemen of the Cape of Good-Hope. As they change their Names, they also change their Nature; for it may be truly said, that the Indian-Portugals are the most revengeful persons and the most jealous of their Wives of any persons in the World. And when the least suspition creeps into their noddles, they rid themselves of them either by Poison or Dagger. If they have an enemy, they never pardon him; but if he be a person of that courage that they dare not grapple with him, their persons have attending upo them a sort of black Slaves, that if they command them to kill any one, the Slaves will do it with a blind obedience; which they do either with a Dagger, or a Pistol, or else by knocking the party on the head with a club, which they always carry, about the length of an Half-Pike. If it happen that they stay too long before they can meet with an opportunity portunity ere they can diſpatch their miſchief; and that they cannot conveniently meet the perſon to be murther'd, in the Fields or in the City, they are no ſuch Saints, but they will kill him at the very Alter, while he is at his devotions; of which I ſaw two fatal preſidents, the one at Goa, the other at Daman. At Daman three or four of theſe black Slaves perceiving ſome perſons whom they were to murther, at Maſs in the Church, diſcharg'd their Muſquets at them through the windows, never conſidering what other miſchief they might do to any other perſons, againſt whom they had no quarrel or deſign. The ſame thing happen'd at Goa, where ſeven men were kill'd cloſe by the Alter, and the Prieſt that ſaid Maſs was dangerouſly wounded at the ſame time. Nor do their Courts of Juſtice take any cognizance of theſe crimes, for generally the guilty perſons are the chiefeſt of the Countrey. As for their Suits of Law, there is no end of them, for they are manag'd by the Canarins, who are Natives of the Countrey, whoſe buſineſs it is to follow the Law; the moſt ſubtil and crafty ſort of people in the World.

To return to the ancient Power of the Portugals in India, moſt certain it is, that if the Hollanders had never come among them, you ſhould not have ſeen a bit of Iron in any Portugal Merchant's Houſe; but all Gold or Silver; for they needed no more than to make three or four Voyages to Japan, the Philippin, or Molucca Iſlands, or to China to enrich themſelves; gaining at their return above five or ſix for one one upon rich Merchandizes. The very Souldiers as well as the Captains and Governors enrich'd themſelves by Trade. There was not any perſon, unleſs it be the Governor, who was not a Trader; or if he does Trade, it is in another man's name, for he has Revenue enough without it. Formerly it was one of the fineſt employments of the World to be Vice-Roy of Goa: and there are but few Monarchs, that have Governments at their diſpoſal, which are equal in value to ſome of thoſe which depend upon this Vice-Roy. The chief Command is that of Mozambique for three years. In thoſe three years the Governor gets above four or five hunder'd-thouſand Crowns, and ſometimes more, if in all that time they receive no loſſes from the Cafres. Theſe Cafres are people that bring Gold for the Commodities which they carry away; and if any one of them happen to dye, going or coming, whatever you truſted them withall is loſt without redemption. The Governour of Mozambique trades alſo with the Negro's that inhabit all along the Coaſt of Melinda; and they ordinarily pay for the goods they buy, either in Elephants Teeth, or Ambergreeſe. When I was laſt in Goa, the Governour of Mozambique, who return'd to Goa after he had been three years in his Command, had by him only in Ambergreeſe, two hundred thouſand Crowns, not reckoning his Gold, and his Elephants Teeth, which amounted to a far larger ſum.

The ſecond Government was that of Malaca, by reaſon of the Cuſtom which was there to be paid. For it is a Streight through which all Veſſels that are bound from Goa, for Japon, China, Cochinchina, Java, Macaſſar, the Phillippin Iſlands, and many other places, muſt of neceſſity paſs. They may ſail another way by the Iſland of Sumatra, toward the Weſt, and ſo through the Streight of Sonde, or elſe leave the Iſland of Java to the North; but when the Ships return to Goa, they muſt ſhew a diſcharge from the Cuſtom-Houſe of Malaca, which obliges them to go that way.

The third Government is that of Ormus, by reaſon of the great Trade which is there, and the Cuſtom which all Ships are to pay that are bound in and out of the Perſian Golf. The Governour of Ormus exacted great Tolls from thoſe that went to the Iſland of Bakren to fiſh for Pearls, for if they did not take a Licence from him, he would ſink their Veſſels. The Perſians at preſent exact this Cuſtom from the Engliſh, who have a ſmall ſhare in that Trade, as I have related in my Perſian Voyages. But though they are ſevere enough to the Merchants, their Cuſtoms amount to nothing neer ſo much as what the Portugueſes made of it. The Hollanders are in the ſame condition at Malaca, not receiving hardly ſufficient to pay their Garriſon which they keep there.

The fourth Government is that of Moſcate, the revenue whereof was very great. For all Veſſels that are bound from India, from the Perſian Golf, from the Red Sea, and from the Coaſt of Melinda, muſt come under the Point of Muſcate, where they generally take in freſh Water. If there be any Ships that would not come to an Anchor there, the Governour ſent for his Cuſtom, which was four in the hundred; and if they refus'd, the Governour had his Galeaſſes ready to ſink them.

The fifth Government was that of the ſland of Ceyland, to which belong'd all thoſe places which the Portugals had, as well upon the Coaſt of Malavar the Golf of Bengala, and other parts of India; the worſt of which employments was worth ten thouſand Crowns per ann.

Beſides theſe five great Governments, which were at the diſpoſal of the Vice-Roy, he had abundance of other Offices in his Gift, as well in Goa, as in other parts of India. The very day that he makes his Entry into Goa, the Captain of his Guards gets above four thouſand Crowns. The three Offices of Engineer Major, Viſitor of the Forts, and chief Maſter of the Ordinance, yielded every year twenty thouſand Pardo's; every Pardo being worth twenty-ſeven Sous of our Money. The Portugueſes were then all very rich; the Nobility by reaſon of their Governments and Commands, the Merchants by their Trade, till the Engliſh and Hollanders cut them ſhort. When they had Ormus, they would not let any Merchant paſs by Sea into India; ſo that they were forc'd to go by Land through Candahar. Then, when the Turky, Perſian, Arabian, Muſcovits, Polonian, and other Merchants arriv'd at Bander-Abaſſy, they join'd together, and deputed four of the moſt experienc'd perſons among them, to view all the ſorts of Commodities, and to underſtand their quality and price. After they have made their report, they agree upon their price, and fetch away thier goods, which are diſtributed to every one proportionably according to the number of Merchants. It is alſo the cuſtom of all Aſia, that there is nothing ſold, but a Broker has a hand in the Bargain. They make good the Money to thoſe that have ſold, and receive it from them that buy; and there are ſome ſorts of Commodities upon which there is due to them for Brokage, ſometimes one in the Hundred, ſometime one and a half, and two.

At that time the Portugueſes made great profit, without any loſs. For the Vice-Roy took care to preſeve them againſt the Pyrats. Who aſſoon as the Rains are over, and that it was ſeaſonably to put to Sea, always ſent a ſufficient convoy to guard the Merchants twenty-five or thirty Leagues to Sea, the Malvares not daring to ſtir above fifteen or twenty. The Captains of the Galiots, and the Soldiers drive a ſmall Trade alſo in their Voyages, and in regard they pay no cuſtom, they gain enough to maintain themſelves handſomely all the time they lye in Garriſon, which is during the Rains. There was alſo care taken for the advancement of the Soldiery; for every Soldier that came from Portugal, after nine years ſervice, had ſome Command either by Sea or Land beſtow'd upon him; and if he would not accept of it, they gave him leave to Trade as a Merchant. So that if there happen'd to be any perſon of underſtanding among them, he could not fail, to raiſe his fortune, having all the credit he could deſire. For there were people enough that being glad to let out their Money, would venture with him at Cent. per Cent. upon his return. If the Veſſel be loſt, they that lend their Money, loſe either their Money or their goods; but if the Ship come ſafe home, of one they make three or four.

The Natives of the Country, call'd Canarins, are not permitted to bear any Offices among the Portugueſes, but only in reference to the Law, that is to ſay, either as Advocates, or Sollicitors, or Scriveners; for they keep them very much under. If one of theſe Canarins or Blacks, happen to ſtrike a White or European, there is no pardon for him, but he muſt have his hand cut off. As well the Spaniards as Portugueſes, make uſe of them as Receivers, and to follow their buſines. And in the Manilia's, or Philippin Iſlands, there are ſome of theſe Blacks ſo rich, that many of them have offer'd twenty thouſand Croiſats to the Vice-Roy, for liberty to wear Hoſe and Shoo's, which they are not permitted to wear. Some of theſe Blacks have thirty Slaves attending upon them, very richly habited; but only they go barefoot. And had the Portugals permitted them to ſet out Ships of their own, and to have choſen Captains and other Officers at their own pleaſure, the Portugueſes would not have made ſuch large, at leaſt not ſo eaſie Conqueſts in the Indies. Theſe Blacks are very couragious and good Soldiers, and ſeveral of the Religious Orders have aſſur'd me, that they will learn more in ſix months in one of their Colledges, than the Portugal Children in a year, whatever Science you put them to; which is the reaſon that the Portugals keep them ſo low. The natural Inhabitants of the Country about Goa, are Idolaters, and worſhip ſeveral ſorts of Idols, which they ſay are the Reſemblance of ſeveral that have done good works, to whom they ought to give praiſe by adorning their Portraitures. There are many of theſe Idolaters who worſhip Apes. And therefore in the Iſland of Salſete, there was a Pagod, where the Idolaters kept in a Cheſt, like a Tomb, the Bones and Nails of an Ape, which they ſaid had been mighty ſerviceable to their Anceſtors, by bringing news and intelligence to them, when any hoſtile Princes proſecuted them; for which purpoſe they would ſometimes ſwim through the very Sea it ſelf. The Indians come from ſeveral parts in proceſſion, and make offerings to this Pagod. But the Clergy of Goa, eſpecially the Inquiſitors, caus'd the Tomb one day to be taken away, and brought it to Goa, where it remain'd a good while, by reaſon of the difference which it made between the Eccleſiaſticks and the people. For the Idolaters offering a great ſum of Money to have their Reliques again, the people were willing to have reſtor'd them; ſaying, that the Money would do well upon any occaſion of War, or elſe to relieve the poor. But the Clergy were of a contrary opinion, and maintain'd that ſuch a piece of Idolatry was not to be endur'd upon any account whatſoever. At length the Arch-Biſhop and the Inquiſitors, by their own Authority, took away the Tomb, and ſending it in a Veſſel twenty Leagues out to Sea, caus'd it to be thrown to the bottom of the Ocean. They thought to have burn'd it, but the Idolaters would have rak'd up the Aſhes again, which would have been but a new food to their Superſtition.

There are in Goa abundance of Clergy-men; for beſides the Arch-Biſhop and his Clergy, there are Dominicans, Auſtin-Friars, Franciſcans, Bareſoot Carmelites, Jeſuits, and Capuchins, with two Religious Houſes, whereof the Auſtin-Fryars are Directors or Governours. The religious Carmelites, that came laſt, are the beſt ſeated; for though they are ſomewhat at a diſtance from the heart of the City, yet they have the advantage of a fine Air, and the moſt healthy ſituation in all Goa. It ſtands upon a riſing ground, free to the refreſhment of the Wind; and it is very well built, with two Galleries one over the other The Auſtin-Fryars, who were the firſt that came to Goa, were indifferently well ſeated, at the foot of a little riſing ground, their Church alſo ſtanding upon a riſing ground with a fair Piazza before it; but when they had built their Habitation, the Jeſuits deſir'd them to ſell that riſing ground, which was then a void place, under pretence of making a Garden in it for the recreation of their Scholars. But after they had purchas'd it, they built a moſt ſtately Colledge upon the ſame ground, which quite ſtops and choaks up the Auſtin-Friars Covent, ſo that they have no Air at all. There happen'd ſeveral Conteſts about this buſineſs, but at length the Jeſuits got the better. The Jeſuits at Goa, are known by the name of Pauliſts; by reaſon that their great Church is dedicated to St. Paul. Nor do they wear Hats or Corner-Caps, as in Europe, but only a certain Bonnet, reſembling the Skull of a Hat without the Brims; ſomewhat like the Bonnets which the Grand Siegnors Slaves wear; of which I have given you a deſcription in my relation of Seraglio. They have five Houſes in Goa, the Colledg of St. Paul, the Seminary, the Profeſſors Houſe, the Noviciate, and the Good Jeſus. The paintings in this Houſe are admirable pieces of Workmanſhip. In the year 1663 the Colledge was burnt by an accident which happen'd in the night, ſo that it coſt them near ſixty thouſand Crowns to rebuild it.

The Hoſpital of Goa was formerly the moſt famous in all India. For in regard the Revenues thereof are very great, the ſick perſons were very carefully look'd after. But ſince the change of the Governours, there is but very bad accommodation; and ſeveral of the Europeans that have been put in, have never come forth again, but in their Coffins. However, they have lately found out a way to ſave ſome by frequent Blood-letting. They let Blood ſometimes as occasion requires, thirty or forty times, even as often as any ill-blood comes forth; as they did by me one time that I was at Surat. Butter and flesh is very dangerous to them that are sick, and many times cost them their lives. Formerly they made several sorts of well-tasted diet for those that recovered: Now they serve the Patient only with young Beef-broth, and a dish of Rice. Usually the poorer sort that recover their health, complain of drowth, and call for water. But they that look after them, being only Blacks, or Mongrels, a sort of covetous and pittiless people, will not give them a drop, unless they put mony in their hands; and to colour their wickedness, they give it them by stealth, pretending what they do to be against the Physitian's order. As for Sweet-meats and Preserves, there is no want of them; but they are not a diet which contributes overmuch to the restoring of decay'd strength, especially in those hot Countreys where the body requires rather cooling and refreshing nourishment.

I have forgot one thing in reference to their more frequent blood-lettings than among us Europeans. Which is, that to bring their colour again, and to restore them to perfect health, they order the Patient to drink for twelve days together three glasses of Cow's Urine; one in the morning, another at noon, and another at night. But in regard it is a very nauseous sort of drink, the Patient swallows as little as he can, how desirous soever he may be of his health. They learnt this remedy from the Idolaters of the Country; and whether the Patient will take it or no, they never let him stir out of the Hospital, till the twelve days are expir'd wherein he ought to drink it.

CHAP. XIV.

What the Author did, during his stay at Goa, the last time he went thither in the year 1648.

TWO days before I departed from Mingrela for Goa, I wrote to Monsieur St. Amant, who was Engineer, to send me a Man of War, for fear of the Malvares which are upon the Coast, which he immediately did. I parted from Mingrela the 20*th* of January 1648, and arriv'd at Goa the 25*th*. And in regard it was late, I staid till the next morning before I went to visit the Vice-Roy, Don Philip de Mascaregnas, who had formerly been Governor of Ceylan. He made me very welcome, and during the two months that I tarri'd at Goa, he sent to me a Gentleman five or six times, who brought me still to the Powder-House, which was without the City, where he often us'd to be. For he took great delight in levelling Guns, wherein he ask'd my advice, esteeming very much a Pistol very curiously and richly inlaid, which I presented him at my arrival. This Pistol the French-Consul at Aleppo gave me, the fellow of it being unhappily lost: for else the Pair had been presented by the French-Nation to the Basha, who might then have boasted himself the Master of the fairest and best-made pair of Pistols in all Asia. The Vice-Roy admits no person whatever, no not his Children to sit at his Table. But there is a little partition in the Dining-room, where there is a Cloath laid for the Principal Officers, as is usual in the Courts of the German-Princes. The next day I went to wait upon the Arch-Bishop, and the next day after I design'd to have visited the Inquisitor; but I understood by one of his Gentlemen that he was busy, writing into Portugal; there being two Ships ready to weigh Anchor, that only staid for his dispatches. After the Ships were set sail, he sent the same Gentleman to tell me that he expected me at the Inquisition-House, about two or three in the afternoon. I fail'd not to go thither at the time prefix'd: when I came, a Page brought me into a large Hall, where after I had walk'd a quarter of an hour, an Officer came and carri'd me into the Chamber where the Inquisitor was. After I had past through two Galleries, and some Chambers, I enter'd into a little Chamber where the Inquisitor sat at the end of a great Table like a Billiard-Table, which, as well as the Chairs and Stools in the Chamber, was cover'd with green Cloath, such as is carri'd out of England. He told me I was welcome, and after a Complement or two, he ask'd me what Religion I was of? I answer'd him, of the Protestant Religion. He ask'd me then, if my Father and Mother were of the same Religion; and after I had satisfi'd him that they were so; He told me again I was welcome, calling out at the same time for some other persons to enter. Thereupon, the Hangings being held up, there came in ten or twelve persons out of another room hard-by. The first of the Train were two Austin-Friars, follow'd by two Dominicans, two barefoot-Carmelites, and some other of the Clergy; whom the Inquisitor told who I was, and assur'd them I had brought no prohibited Books; for indeed, knowing their orders, I had left my Bible at Mingrelia. We discours'd about two hours of several things, but particularly of my Travels; the whole Company testifying their desire to hear me make some repetitions. Three days after the Inquisitor sent for me to dine with him at a fair House, about half a league from the City, which belongs to the Bare-foot Carmelites. It is one of the loveliest Structures in all the Indies; and I will tell you in short how the Carmelites came by it. There was a Gentleman in Goa, whose Father and Grandfather had got great Estates by Merchandizing; and he it was that had built this House, which might well have past for a most noble Palace. He had no mind to Marry, but being altogether addicted to his devotions, he very much frequented the Austin-Friars, to whom he shew'd himself so affectionate, that he made his Will, wherein he gave them all his Estate, provided they would bury him on the right-side of the High-Altar where he intended a sumptuous Monument. Now according to the common report, this Gentleman was a Leaper, which some jealous persons endeavour'd to make the World believe, seeing he had given away all his Estate to the Austin-Friars. Thereupon they told him that the ground on the right-hand of the High-Alter was a place only fit for a Vice-Roy; and that a leaprous person was not to be laid there: which was the opinion of the generality of the people, and of a good part of the Austin-Friars themselves. Thereupon some of the Fathers of the Covent coming to speak with the Gentleman, on purpose to perswade him to choose some other place in the Church, he was so offended at the proposal, that he never went more to the Austin-Friars, but always went to perform his devotions among the Carmelites, who receiv'd him with open arms, and accepted the conditions which the other had refus'd. Nor did he live long after he had interested himself with that Order; so that the Carmelites having magnificently buri'd him, enjoy'd all his Estate, with this same House, where we were splendidly entertain'd with Musick all the time of Dinner.

I staid at Goa from the twenty-first of January till the eleventh of March, departing thence that very day in the evening, after I had taken leave of the Vice-Roy. I begg'd leave also of the Vice-Roy for a French-Gentlemen, whose name was Belloy, to go along with me: which was granted me; but through the imprudence of that Gentleman, who did not tell me the reason of his coming to Goa, he had like to have been taken from me again, and it was an even-lay, that we had not been both carri'd to the Inquisition. This Gentleman had left the place of his Nativity to travel over Holland, where having run himself in debt, and finding no person that would lend him any Money, he resolv'd to go for India. Thereupon he listed himself as a private Souldier upon the accompt of the Holland-Company; and came to Batavia at the same time that the Hollanders made War against the Portuguezes in Ceylan. Being arriv'd, they sent him away among the recruits which were sent into that Island; and the Holland-General seeing such a reinforcement of stout men commanded by a French-Captain, whose name was St. Amant, a person of great courage and experience; he resolv'd to besiege Negombe, a considerable Fort in the Island of Ceylan. They made two assaults wherein the French-men behav'd themselves valiantly, especially St. Amant, and John de Rose, who were both wounded. The General of the Dutch, seeing them to be two such men of courage, made a promise that if Negombe were taken, one of them two should be Governor. The place was taken, and the General kept his word with St. Amant: but the News being carri'd to Batavia, a young Gentleman of kin to the General, and but newly arriv'd out of Holland, obtain'd to be Governour of Negombe, to the prejudice of St. Amant, and came with an order order from the Council at Batavia to diſplace him. St. Amant incens'd at ſuch ill-uſage, inveigles to his Party a matter of fifteen or twenty, moſt part French Souldiers, among whom were Monſieur Belloy, Mareſts, and John de Roſe, and revolts to the Portugueſes. The Portugals encourag'd by the reinforcement of ſuch a ſtout, though ſmall number of men, ſtorm'd Negombe again, and took it at the ſecond aſſault. At that time was Don Philip de Maſcaregnas Governor of Ceylan, and all the places belonging to it, under the juriſdiction of the Portugal. He liv'd alſo at the City of Colombo; and then it was, that having receiv'd Letters from Goa that the Vice-Roy was dead, and that the Council and all the Nobility deſir'd him to come and ſucceed in his place, he reſolv'd to ſee St. Amant and his Companions before his departure, to the end he might beſtow upon them ſome proper reward. So ſoon as he ſaw them, he was reſolv'd to take them along with him to Goa. Whether it were that he thought he might have better opportunities to advance them there; or that he thought it convenient to have ſtout men about him, by reaſon of the Malavares who lay in wait for him with forty Veſſels, whereas he had but twenty-two. But they were no ſooner come to make Cape-Comorin, when the winds roſe, and ſuch a Tempeſt follow'd, that the Veſſels were diſpers'd, and many of them unfortunately caſt away. They that were in Don Philip's Veſſel did all they could to get to the ſhoar, but ſeeing they could not, and that the Ship was ready to ſplit, St. Amant and his Six other Companions threw themſelves into the Sea with cords and pieces of planks, and ſo beſtirr'd themſelves, that they made a ſhift not only to ſave themſelves, but Don Philip alſo. Hereupon Don Philip coming to Goa, after he had made his entrance, gave to St. Amant the Command of Grand Maſter of the Artillery, and Superintendent General over all the Forts which the Portugueſes had in India. He marri'd him alſo to a young Virgin, with whom he had twenty-thouſand Crowns, whoſe Father was an Engliſh-man, who had quitted the Company, and marri'd a Natural Daughter of one of the Vice-Roy's of Goa. As for John de Roſe, he deſir'd leave of the Vice-Roy to return to Colombo, where, by his favour, he marri'd a young Widow, half Native, half Portugueze, by whom he had a fair fortune. Mareſts the Vice-Roy made Captain of his Guards, the moſt conſiderable Command in all his Court, being oblig'd to Mareſts for his life, who was the perſon that bore him upon his ſhoulders to ſave him from drowning. Du Belloy deſir'd leave that he might go to Macao, which was granted him. For he underſtood that the greateſt part of the Portugal-Gentry, retir'd to that place, after they had got Eſtates by Merchandizing; that they were very courteous to ſtrangers, and withal extremely addicted to play, which was Du Belloy's chief delight. He liv'd two years at Macao, very much to his content; for when he wanted Money, the Gentry lent it him freely. One day he had won above ſix-thouſand Crowns, but going to play again, he was ſo unfortunate as to loſe it all, beſides a good ſum of Money which his friends had lent him. Being thus at a loſs, and finding that no-body would lend him any more Money, he began to ſwear againſt a Picture that hung in the room, which was the Portraiture of ſome Papiſtical Saint; ſaying in his paſſion that it was an uſual thing with them that plaid, that if they ſaw a Saint Picture hang in their ſight, it made them loſe; and that if that Picture had not been there he had certainly won. Immediately the Inquiſitor was inform'd of this, (for in every City in India under the Juriſdiction of the Portugueſes there is one. However his power is limited; having no other authority than to ſeize the perſon of him that ſays or acts any thing againſt their Religion, to hear the Witneſſes, and to ſend the Offender with the examinations to Goa in the firſt ſhip which is bound thither: where the inquiſitor-General has an abſolute Power either to abſolve him, or to put him to death.) Thereupon Du Belloy was put a-board a ſmall Veſſel of ten or twelve Guns loaded with Irons: with a ſtrict charge to the Captain to keep him ſafe, and ſome threats that he ſhould be anſwerable for him if he eſcap'd. But ſo ſoon as the Ship was out at Sea, the Captain, who was of a noble diſpoſition, and knew Du Belloy to be of a good Family, took off his Irons, and made him ſit at his own Table; giving him alſo Linnen, and other convenient Apparel neceſſary for the Voyage, which was to continue forty days. They put into Goa the nineteenth of February 1649; and the Ship was no ſooner come into Harbour, but St. Amant came a-board by the Governor's order, as well

to receive his Letters, as to hear what news in China. But his ſurprize was very great, to ſee Belloy in that condition, and that the Captain would not let him go, before he had ſurrender'd him up into the hands of the Inquiſitor. Nevertheleſs, in regard that St. Amant was a perſon of great credit, he obtain'd of the Captain, that Belloy ſhould go along with him into the City. As for Belloy he immediately and for the nonce ſhifted himſelf into his old Cloaths, which were all to tatters and full of Vermin; and St. Amant, who knew there was no dallying with the Inquiſition, took that ſeaſon to preſent him to the Inquiſitor; who ſeeing a Gentleman in ſuch a ſad condition, had ſome compaſſion upon him, and allow'd him the whole City for his Priſon; on condition he ſhould ſurrender his body, upon demand, when he underſtood what was inform'd againſt him. In the interim St. Amant brings Du Belloy to my Lodging juſt as I was going to viſit the Arch-Biſhop of Mira, whom I formerly knew at Conſtantinople, when he was Prior of the Franciſcans at Galata. I deſir'd them to ſtay a while and to dine with me, which they did; after which I proffer'd my Houſe and Table to Du Belloy, who liv'd with me; and for whom I alſo bought two new Suits of Apparel, and Linnen convenient. However, all the while that I ſtay'd at Goa, which was ten or twelve days, I could not perſwade the Sieur Du Belloy to put on thoſe new Cloaths, not knowing the reaſon, though he promis'd me every day. But being upon my departure, I told him I was going to take leave of the Vice-Roy; whereupon he deſir'd me to procure leave for him alſo; which I did. We departed toward evening in the ſame Veſſel wherein I came, and about midnight the Sieur Belloy began to ſhift himſelf, and when he had done he threw his old raggs into the Sea, ſwearing againſt the Inquiſition like a mad man; I underſtanding nothing all this while of the buſineſs. When I heard him ſwear in that manner, I told him we were not yet out of the Portugals hands; neither were he and I with five or ſix Servants, able to defend our ſelves againſt forty Sea-men that belong'd to the Ship. I ask'd him then, why he ſwore ſo heartily againſt the Inquiſition; he reply'd, that he would tell me all the circumſtances of the Story; which he did, when we came to Mingrela, which was about eight a Clock in the morning. When we landed we met certain Hollanders with the Commander, who were eating Oyſters and drinking Sack upon the Shoar. Immediately they ask'd me who that perſon was with me. I told them it was a Gentleman who attending the French Ambaſſador into Portugal, had taken Shipping there for India, together with four or five more whom he had left at Goa; but that neither the ſcituation of the place, nor the humour of the Portugals pleaſing him, he had deſir'd my aſſiſtance in his return for Europe. Three or four days after, I bought him an Oxe to carry him to Surat; and I gave him a Servant to aſſiſt him, together with a Letter to Father Zenon, a Capuchin, wherein I deſir'd him to ſpeak to my Broker to pay him ten Crowns a month for his ſubſiſtence, and to deſire of the Engliſh Preſident to embark him for Europe with the firſt opportunity. But it fell out contrary to my Intentions; for Father Zenon carri'd him back again along with him to Goa, where he had ſome buſineſs to do for Father Ephraim his Companion; of whom I ſhall ſpeak in the next Chapter. Father Zenon without doubt believ'd, that Du Belloy making his appearance to the Inquiſition, and deſiring his pardon might have eaſily obtain'd it. 'Tis very true he did obtain it, but it was after he had been two years in the Inquiſition, from which he was not diſcharg'd but with a ſulphur'd Shirt, with a St. Andrews Croſs upon his Stomack. There was with him another Gentleman, call'd Lewis de Bar upon the Seine, who was us'd in the ſame manner; and they always put them to accompany thoſe who were put to death. The Sieur Du Belloy did very ill to return to Goa, and worſe to appear afterwards again at Mingrela, where the Hollanders, who underſtanding he had formerly revolted out of their ſervice, by the intelligence they receiv'd from their Commander at Surat, ſeiz'd his perſon, and ſent him away in a Ship that was going for Batavia. They pretended that they ſent him to the General of the Company, to do with him as he ſhould think fitting. But I am in part aſſur'd, that as ſoon as the Veſſel was out at Sea, they put the poor Gentleman into a Sack, and threw him into the Sea. This was the end of the Sieur Du Belloy.

As for Sieur des Mareſts, he was a Gentleman, born in the Dauphinate, near to Loriol, who having kill'd his adverſary in a Duel, fled into Poland, where he ſo far ſignaliz'd himſelf, that he won the eſteem and affection of the General of the Polonian Army. At that time the Grand Seignior kept in the priſon of the Seven Towers at Conſtantinople, two Noble Polonians; whereupon the Polonian General obſerving the courage and addreſs of this Des Mareſts, who was a daring Fellow, and a good Engineer beſides, made a propoſal to him, to go to Conſtantinople, and to endeavour, if he could by any means in the world, to ſet thoſe princes at liberty. Des Mareſts willingly accepted the employment, and without doubt he had ſucceeded in his deſign, had he not been diſcovered by ſome Turks, who accus'd him for having been too circumſpect in viewing the ſeven Towers, ſeeing him with a Chalk Pencil in his hand, ready to take the draught thereof, which ſeem'd to tend to no good deſign. This had been enough to have ruin'd the Gentleman, had not Monſieur de Ceſy, the French Ambaſſadour ſtiff'd the further examination of the buſineſs by ſome Preſent; which in Turky is the moſt ſovereign remedy upon all accidents of danger; telling the Viſier, that he was only a French Gentleman that travel'd for his pleaſure, and one that was going for Perſia with the firſt opportunity. However it was not Mareſts deſign at that time to go very far, for he intended to have return'd into Poland, ſo ſoon as he had us'd his utmoſt indeavours to ſet the Princes at liberty; but for his own ſafety it behov'd him to give it out that he was gone to Perſia; and at length he was conſtrain'd to go thither indeed. As for the Grand Seignior, he had reſolv'd never to ſet the two Noblemen at liberty. But at length they were ſo fortunate as to gain the love of a young Turk, who was the Son of the Captain of the Seven Towers; with whom the Father uſually truſted the Keys to open and ſhut the Gates of the Priſon. The night appointed for their flight, he made as if he had ſhut ſome doors, the Padlocks whereof he left all open. But he durſt not do ſo by the two firſt Gates, near one of which the Captain with a ſtrong Guard lay, for fear of being diſcover'd. The young man, who had entirely devoted himſelf to ſerve the Princes, having foreſeen this difficulty before, had bethought himſelf of Rope-Ladders to get over the two Walls; to which purpoſe it was neceſſary to have a correſpondence within and without. Finding therefore that becauſe the utmoſt of ſeverity was not us'd toward thoſe Princes, they had the liberty to receive ſeveral Diſhes of Meat from the French Ambaſſadours Kitchin, the Clerk of the Kitchin was made of the plot, who thereupon ſent them in ſeveral Cords in Paſties, whereof they made Ladders. The buſineſs ſucceeded ſo well, that the eſcape was made, and the young Turk fled with the Polonian Lords into Poland, where he turn'd Chriſtian, and receiv'd ample rewards both in Employments and Money. The ſame gratitude proportionably was obſerved toward thoſe who had contributed toward the liberty of the Princes, who amply acknowledg'd the ſervices which they had receiv'd from every one of them.

In the mean time the Sieur Des Mareſts arrives at Iſpahan, and addreſſing himſelf to the Capuchin Fryars, they brought him to my Lodging, where he had the freedom of my Table, and a Chamber. He ſtaid ſome time at Iſpahan, during which he got acquainted with the Engliſh and Hollanders, who had a great eſteem for him, finding him to be a perſon of merit. But it happen'd one day, that his curioſity putting him upon a bold attempt, had like to have been the ruine of him and all the Franks in Iſpahan. Hard by the Inn where we lodg'd there was a large Bath, where the men and women by turns take their times to come and bath themſelves; and where the Queen of Viſapour, during her ſtay at Iſpahan, as ſhe return'd home to Mecca, delighted to go and prattle with the French mens wives. The Sieur Des Mareſts having a paſſionate deſire to ſee what the women did, ſatisfi'd his curioſity, by means of a cranny in the Arch of the Vault, which he had obſerved when he went thither; for having found out a way without ſide to get up to that Arch, through a blind hole that was next to the Inn where he lay, the Arch being flat, as I have deſcrib'd them in my relations of Perſia, and the Seraglio, he laid himſelf upon his belly, and ſaw throtgh the cranny what he ſo much long'd to behold. He was at this ſport ſome ten or twelve times; and not being able to contain himſelf, he told me one day what he had done. I bid him have a care of going there any more, for fear of ruining himself and all the French men in that City. But he contrary to my advice went thither two or three times after that, till at length he was discover'd by one of the women of the Bath that took care of the Linnen, and dry them without, upon Perches as high as the top of the Arch, to which they get up by a little Ladder. The woman seeing a man lying all along upon his belly, seiz'd upon his Hat, and began to cry out. But Mareſts, to get himself out of the mire, and to hinder the woman from making more noise, put two Tomans, into her hand. When he return'd to the Inn, I perceiv'd him to look as if he had been scar'd, and conjecturing that some ill accident had befall'n him, I press'd him to confess what was the matter. He was loath at first, but at length he confess'd how he had been discover'd by a woman, and how he had stop'd her mouth with money. Thereupon I told him, that there was a necessity for him to fly, for that the danger was far greater than he imagin'd. The Dutch President also, to whom I thought it convenient to tell what had pass'd, was of the same opinion; upon which we gave him a Mule, and as much money as was necessary for him, ordering him to go to Bander, and thence by Sea to Surat. I gave him a Letter of Recommendation to the English President, who was my Friend; whom I also desir'd to let him have two hundred Crowns, if he had occasion for them. I wrote very much in his commendation; and mention'd the proffer which the Dutch President at Ispahan had made him, to send him with Letters to the General, who would not fail to employ him according to his merit. For indeed at that time that the Hollanders had War with the Portugueſes in Ceylan, any person of wit, and courage, like the Sieur Des Mareſts, was very acceptable to them. Which made them very earnest with him, to take an employment among them; and to that end, they caress'd him, and presented him very nobly during his stay at Ispahan. But he told them, that not being of their Religion, he was unwilling to serve them against the Portugueſes; which was the only reason that hinder'd him from accepting the offers which I had made him. These particulars I wrote in his behalf to the English President at Surat; so that the Sieur Des Mareſts being desirous to go to Goa to serve the Portugals, the President wrote in his behalf to the Vice-Roy, by whom he was very much belov'd, relating to him, besides, what the Hollanders had proffer'd him, that his recommendation might be the more acceptable. Thereupon the Vice-Roy made him very welcome; and upon the Sieur Mareſts desire to be employ'd in Ceylan in the Portugal Army, he sent him away with the first opportunity, with Letters of Recommendation to Don Philip de Maſcaregnas, who was then Governour of Ceylan, and all those places that belong'd to it under the jurisdiction of the Portugueſes. It happen'd three days after, that they lost Nagombe, and when they retook it, the Sieur Mareſts was one of those that receiv'd most wounds, and won most honour in the Assaults. He it was that afterwards was most instrumental in saving Don Philip from being drown'd; so that when Don Philip came to be Vice-Roy of Goa, he could not think he deserv'd a less reward than the Command of his Guards; in which employment he dy'd within three or four Months. He was very much lamented by the Vice-Roy, by whom he was entirely belov'd. But he left his Estate to a Priest, with whom he had contracted a particular friendship; upon condition that he should only pay me two hundred and fifty Crowns that I had lent him; which however I had much ado to get out of the Priest's Clutches.

While I stay'd at Goa, I was told a pretty story concerning a Caravel, or Portugal Vessel, which arriv'd there but a little before, and came from Lisbon. When she was about to make the Cape of good Hope, there happen'd such a violent Tempest, as lasted five or six hours, and put the Marriners to such a nonplus, that they knew not were they were. At length they fell into a Bay, where they saw several Inhabitants; and as soon as they came to an Anchor, they beheld the shore cover'd with men, women, and children, that testify'd a strange amazement to see white people, and such kind of people as the Caravel. The mischief was, that they could not understand one another, but by signs. But after the Portugals had giv'n those Cafres Tobacco, Bisket, and Water, the next day the people brought them a great quantity of young Ostriches, and other

Fowl that seem'd to resemble large Geese, but so fat, that they had very little lean. The Feathers of those Birds were very lovely, and those upon the Belley proper for Beds. One of the Portugueses Mariners told me a large Cushion full with those Feathers, and related to me what had happen'd to them in that Bay, where they stay'd seven and twenty days. They gave those Cafres one thing or other every foot, as Knives, Axes, false Coral, and false Pearls, out of hopes to have discover'd some Trade, and particularly whether they had any Gold; for they observ'd that some of them wore pieces of Gold in their Ears; some beaten thin upon one side, and others like the Nails of a Lock. They brought two of the people to Goa; and I saw one of them that wore several of those pieces of Gold in several parts of each Ear. The Mariner told me, that there were some of their women that wore of those pieces of Gold under their Chins, and in their Nostrils. Eight or nine days after the Portugals arriv'd in that Bay, those Cafres brought them little pieces of Ambergreese, some Gold, but very little; some Elephants teeth, but very small, some Ostriches, and other Birds, some Venison; but for Fish there was abundance. The Portugals endeavour'd all they could by signs to know where they found the Ambergreese, for it was very good. The Vice-Roy shew'd me a piece that weigh'd not above half an Ounce, but he assur'd me withall that he had never seen so good. They also labour'd to discover where they had the Gold. After the Elephants teeth they made no great enquiry seeing a great number of Elephants that came to drink at a River that threw it self into the Bay. At length after they had stay'd three weeks, the Portugals finding it impossible for them to discover any thing more, because they understood not one another, resolv'd to set sail with the first wind. And because they had always some of these Cafres aboard in regard they were very liberal of their Tobacco, Bisket, and strong Water, they thought good to bring two of them along in the Vessel; in hopes that they might learn the Portugueſe Language, or that there might some Child be found out that might understand what they said. The Mariners told me, that when they set sail, after the Cafres saw that they they had carri'd two of their people away, who perhaps were no inconsiderable persons, they tore their Hair, struck their Breasts, as if they had been frantick, and set up a most horrible yelling and howling. When they were brought to Goa, they could never be brougut to learn any thing of the Portugal Language. So that they could get out of them nothing of that further discovery at which they aim'd, of a Country from whence they only brought away two pound of Gold, three pound of Ambergreese, and thirty-five or forty Elephants teeth. One of the Cafres liv'd but six months, the other fifteen; but both languish'd and pin'd to death for grief to be so trapann'd.

From Goa I pass'd to Mingrela, where there fell out an accident not to be forgotten. An Idolater dying, and the Fire being ready prepar'd for the burning of the Body, his Wife who had no Children, by the permission of the Governour, came to the Fire, and stood among the Priests and her Kindred, to be burnt with the Body of her deceas'd Husband. As they were taking three turns, according to custom, about the place where the Fire was kindl'd, there fell of a sudden so violent a Shower, that the Priests willing to get out of the rain, thrust the Woman all along into the Fire. But the Shower was so vehement, and endur'd so long a while, that the Fire was quench'd, and the Woman was not burn'd. About midnight she arose, and went and knock'd at the door of one of her Kinsmens Houses, where Father Zenon and many Hollanders saw her, looking so gastly and grimly, that it was enough to have scar'd them; however the pain that she endur'd did not so far terrifie her, but that three days after accompany'd by her Kindred, she went and was burn'd according to her first intention.

The Story of Father Ephraim, and how he was put into the Inquisition at Goa by a Surprisal.

THE Chek, who had marri'd the Eldest of the Princesses of Golconda, not being able to perswade Father Ephraim to stay at Bagnabar, where he promis'd to build him an House and a Church, gave him an Ox and two men to carry him to Masulipatan, where he staid to embark for Pegu, according to the order of his Superiors. But finding no Vessel ready to set sail, the English drew him to Madrespatan, where they have a Fort call'd St. George, and a general Factory for every thing that concerns the Countreys of Golconda, Pegu and Bengala. They over-perswaded him that he might reap a fairer Harvest in this place, than in any other part of the Indies; to which end they presently built him a very neat House, and a Church. But in the conclusion, the English sought not so much the interest of Father Ephraim, as their own. For Madrespatan is but half a league from St. Thomas, a Sea-Town upon the Coast of Cormandel, indifferently well-built, as formerly belonging to the Portugals. In that place there was a very great Trade, especially for Calicuts, and a very great number of Merchants and Workmen liv'd there, the greatest part whereof desir'd to inhabit at Madrespatan with the English, but that there was no place for them to exercise their Religion in that place. But when the English had built a Church, and perswaded Father Ephraim to stay, many of the Portugueses quitted St. Thomas, by reason of the frequent Preaching of Father Ephraim, and his great care as well of the Natives, as of the Portugals. Father Ephraim was born at Auxerre, the Brother of Monsieur Chatean de Boys, Councellor of the Parliament of Paris; who was very happy in learning Languages, so that in a little time he spoke English and Portuguez perfectly well. But now the Clergy of St. Thomas-Church seeing Father Ephraim in so high a reputation, and that he drew the greatest part of their Congregation to Madrespatan, were so enrag'd against him that they resolv'd to ruine him. And thus they laid their plot. The English and Portuguezes being neer-neighbours, could not choose but have several quarrels one among another, and still Father Ephraim was appli'd to for the composing their differences. Now one day it happen'd, that the Portuguezes quarrell'd on purpose with some English Mariners that were in St. Thomas-Road, and the English came by the worst. The English President resolving to have satisfaction for the injury, a War broke out between the two Nations: which had ruin'd all the Trade of that Country, had not the Merchants on both sides been very diligent to bring things to an accommodation: not knowing any thing of the wicked contrivance of particular persons against Father Ephraim. But all the interposition of the Merchants avail'd nothing: the Friar must be concern'd in the affair, he must be the Mediator to act between party and party, which he readily accepted. But he was no sooner enter'd into St. Thomas, but he was seiz'd by ten or twelve Officers of the Inquisition, who shipp'd him away in a Frigat that was bound at the same time for Goa. They fetter'd and manacl'd him, and kept him two and twenty days at Sea, before they would let him once put his foot a-shore: though the best part of the Mariners lay a-shoar every night. When they came to Goa, they staid till night before they would land Father Ephraim, to carry him to the Inquisition-House. For they were afraid, lest if they should land him in the day, the people should know of it, and rise in the rescue of a person, who was in an high veneration over all India. The news was presently spread abroad in all parts, that Father Ephraim was in the Inquisition, which very much amaz'd all the French-men. But he that was most surpriz'd, and most troubl'd at it was Friar Zenon, the Capuchin, who had been formerlyly Father Ephraim's Companion; who after he had consulted his friends, resolv'd to go to Goa, though he were put into the Inquisition himself. For when a man is once shut up there, if any one have the boldness to speak to the Inquisitor, or to any of his Councel in his behalf, he is presently put into the Inquisition also alſo, and accounted a greater Offender than the other. Neither the Arch Biſhop nor the Vice-Roy themſelves dare interpoſe; though they are the only two perſons over whom the Inquiſition has no power. For if they do any thing to offend them, they preſently write to the Inquiſitor and his Council in Portugal, and as the King and the Inquiſitor-General commands, they either proceed againſt, or ſend thoſe two great perſons into Portugal.

Notwithſtanding all theſe conſiderations, Father Zenon, taking along with him the Sieur de la Boulay, a decaid Gentleman, goes to Goa; where, when he arriv'd, he was viſited by ſome friends, who adviſe him to have a care not to open his mouth in the behalf of Father Ephraim, unleſs he intended to bear him company in the Inquiſition. Father Zenon ſeeing he could do nothing at Goa, adviſ'd the Sieur de Boulay to return to Surat: and goes himſelf directly to Madreſpatan, more particularly to inform himſelf concerning the reaſon of Father Ephraim's being ſent away. But when he underſtood how he had been betrait at St. Thomas, he reſolv'd to have ſatisfaction, and without acquainting the Engliſh Preſident, communicates his deſign to the Captain that commanded in the Fort: Who being incens'd, as were all the Souldiers, at the injury done Father Ephraim, not only approv'd, but alſo promis'd Father Zenon to aſſiſt him in his deſign. Thereupon the Father ſets his ſpies; and underſtanding by them, that the Governor of St. Thomas went every Saturday-morning, early to a Chappel upon a Mountain, half a league from the City, dedicated to the Virgin-Mary, he cauſes three Iron-Bars to be fix'd in the window of a little Chamber in the Covent with two good locks to the door, and as many padlocks. And having ſo done, he goes to the Governor of the Fort, who was an Iriſh-man, and a very ſtout perſon; who with thirty Souldiers, and Father Zenon, iſſu'd out of the Fort about midnight, and hid themſelves till day near the Chappel, in a part of the Mountain, where they could not be diſcover'd. The Governor of St. Thomas came exactly, according to his cuſtom, a little after Sun-riſing; and as ſoon as ever he alighted from his Pallequin, was immediately ſurpriz'd by the Ambuſcade, and carri'd to Maſulipatan, into the Chamber in the Covent which the Friar had provided for him. The Governor thus ſurpriz'd, made great proteſtations againſt Father Zenon, and threaten'd him with what the King would do when he ſhould come to hear what he had practis'd againſt the Governor of one of his Garriſons. To which Father Zenon ſaid no more, but only that he believ'd that he was better us'd at Madreſpatan, than Father Ephraim was us'd at the Inquiſition at Goa, whither he had ſent him: That if he would obtain liberty for Father Ephraim to return, he would leave him in the ſame place where they had ſeiz'd his perſon, with as much Juſtice, as he had to ſend Father Ephraim to Goa. Many people came to the Engliſh Preſident, deſiring him to uſe his authority for the Governor's liberty. But his anſwer was, that the Governor was not in his juriſdiction, neither could he compel Father Zenon to releaſe him, who had been one of the Authors of the injury which had been done his Companion. So that he contented himſelf only to deſire of Father Zenon that his Priſoner might dine at his Table in the Fort, promiſing him to return him when he ſhould require his body; a requeſt which he eaſily obtain'd, but could not ſo eaſily keep his word. For the Drummer of the Garriſon being a French-man, with a Merchant of Marſeilles, call'd Roboli, then in the Fort, two days after came to the Governor, and promis'd him, for a good reward, to procure his eſcape. The agreement being made, the Drummer in the morning beat the Reveille ſooner than he was wont to do, and lowder, while Roboli and the Governor let themſelves down at a corner of a Baſtion that was not very high; and were preſently as nimbly follow'd by the Drummer; ſo that Madreſpatan and St. Thomas being but half a league aſunder, they were all three in the Town before their eſcape was known. The whole City greatly rejoyc'd at the return of their Governor, and immediately diſpatch'd away a Barque to Goa to carry the news. The Drummer alſo and the Merchant ſet ſail at the ſame time, and when they came to Goa with Letters of recommendation in their behalf, there was no Houſe or Covent which did not make them Preſents: The Vice-Roy alſo himſelf careſs'd them extremely, and took them into his own Ship to have carri'd them into Portugal along with him; but both he and the two French-men dy'd at Sea.

Never

Never did any Vice-Roy depart from Goa ſo rich as Don Philippo de Maſcaregnas; for he had a great parcel of Diamonds, all large ſtones, from ten Carats to forty. He ſhew'd me two when I was at Goa, one whereof weigh'd 57 Carats, the other 67 and an half; clean Stones, of an excellent water, and cut after the Indian manner. The report was that the Vice-Roy was poiſon'd in the Ship, and that it was a juſt puniſhment of Heaven, for that he had poiſon'd ſeveral others, eſpecially when he was Governor of Ceylan. He had always moſt exquiſite poiſons by him, to make uſe of when his revenge requir'd it: for which reaſon, having rais'd himſelf many enemies, one morning he was found hung in Effigie in Goa; when I was there in the year 1648.

In the mean time, the Impriſonment of Father Ephraim made a great noiſe in Europe; Monſieur de Chaſteau des Bois, his Brother complain'd to the Portugal Embaſſadour, who preſently wrote to the King his Maſter to ſend a poſitive command by the firſt Ships, that Father Ephraim ſhould be diſcharg'd. The Pope alſo wrote, declaring that he would excommunicate all the Clergy of Goa, if they did not ſet him at liberty. But all this ſignify'd nothing. So that Father Ephraim was beholding for his liberty to none but the King of Golconda, who had a love for him, and would have had him have ſtaid at Bagnagar. For the King was then at Wars with the Raja of Carnatica, and his Army lay round about St. Thomas's. Hearing therefore what a baſe trick the Portuguezes had plaid with Father Ephraim, he ſent orders to his General Mirgimola to lay ſiege to the Town, and put all to Fire and Sword, unleſs the Governor would make him a firm promiſe that Father Ephraim ſhould be ſet at liberty in two months. A Copy of this Order was ſent to the Governor, which ſo alarm'd the Town, that they diſpatch'd away Barque after Barque to preſs the Vice-Roy to uſe his endeavours for the releaſe of Father Ephraim. Thereupon he was releas'd; but though the door were ſet open, he would not ſtir, till all the Religious Perſons in Goa came in proceſſion to fetch him out. When he was at liberty he ſpent 15 days in the Covent of the Capuchins. I have heard Father Ephraim ſay ſeveral times, that nothing troubl'd him ſo much all the while of his impriſonment, as to ſee the ignorance of the Inquiſitor and his Council, when they put him any queſtion: and that he did not believe that any one of them had ever read the Scripture. They laid him in the ſame Chamber, with a Malteſe, who never ſpake two words without a deſperate oath; and took Tobacco all day, and a good part of the night, which was very offenſive to Father Ephraim.

When the Inquiſitors ſeize upon any perſon, they ſearch him preſently; and as for his Goods and wearing-Apparel, it is ſet down in an Inventory, to be return'd him again in caſe he be acquitted; but if he have any Gold, Silver, or Jewels, that is never ſet down; but is carri'd to the Inquiſitor to defray the expences of the Proceſs. They ſearch'd the Reverend Father Ephraim, but found nothing in his Cloak-pockets, unleſs it were a Comb, an Inkhorn, and two or three Handkerchiefs. But forgetting to ſearch the little Pockets which the Capuchins carry in their ſleeves toward their armpits, they left him four or five black-lead pens. Theſe Pencils did him a great kindneſs. For the Malteſe calling for ſuch a deal of Tobacco, which is always cut and ti'd up in white-paper, for the profit of the ſeller, who weighs both Tobacco and Paper together: theſe Papers Father Ephraim kept very charily, and with his pencil wrote therein whatever he had ſtudi'd at any time: though he loſt the ſight of one of his eyes, through the darkneſs of the Chamber, which had but one window, half a foot ſquare, and barr'd with iron. They would never ſo much as lend him a Book, or let him have an end of Candle; but us'd him as bad as a certain Miſcreant that had been twice let out already with his Shirt ſulphur'd, and at St. Andrews-Croſs upon his ſtomach, in company with thoſe that are lead to the Gallows, and was then come in again.

Father Ephraim having ſtaid 15 days in the Covent of the Capuchins to recover his ſtrength after 20 months impriſonment, return'd for Madreſpatan, and paſſing through Golconda, went to return his humble thanks to the King of Golconda and his Son-in-law, who had ſo highly intereſs'd themſelves for his liberty. The King importun'd him again to ſtay at Bagnagar, but ſeeing him reſolv'd to return to his Covent at Madreſpatan, they gave him as before, an Oxe, two Servants, and Money for his journey.

The Road from Goa to Masulipatan through Cochin, here described in the story of the taking of that City by the Hollanders.

AFter the Dutch had dispossess'd the Portugals of whatever they had in Ceylan, they cast their eyes upon Cochin, in the Territories whereof grows the Bastard Cinnamon, which hinder'd the utterance of Ceylan Cinnamon. For the Merchants seeing that the Hollanders kept up their Cinnamon so dear, bought up that of Cochin, which they had very cheap, and that coming into request, was transported to Gomron, and distributed there among the Merchants that came from Persia from Tartary, from Moscovia, from Georgia, Mingrelia, and all the places from the black Sea. It was also carried away in great quantities by the Merchants of Balsara and Bagdat, who furnish Arabia; as also by the Merchants of Mesopotamia, Anatolia, Constantinople, Romania, Hungary, and Poland. For in all those Countries, they use it either whole or beaten in most of their meats, to heighten the taste thereof.

The Army which was commanded out of Batavia for the Siege of Cochin, landed at a place call'd Belli-Porto; where the Hollanders had a Fort made of Palm-Trees. It is near to Cranganor, a small City which the Hollanders took the year before; not being able to take Cochin then, though they had made some attempts upon it. So soon as the Army landed, they march'd within Cannon-shot of the City, there being a River between them and the City. That part where the Hollanders encamp'd, is call'd Belle-Epine, where after they had fortifi'd themselves, as well as the Nature of the place would permit, they rais'd some Batteries, which could not much annoy the City, by reason of the distance. They lay there till they had recruits of more men; for they had but three Ships full, though he that commanded them were one of the bravest Captains of his time. Some few days after, the Governour of Amboyna arriv'd with two Ships more, and afterwards a Dutch Captain brought a great number of Chinglas, who are the Natives of the Island of Ceylan. For the Forces of the Hollanders would not be so considerable as they are, did they not make use of the Natives of the Country to fill up the Companies which they bring out of Europe. The Natives of Ceylan, are good for digging Trenches, and raising Batteries, but for a Storm they signifie little. Those of Amboyna are good Soldiers, four hundred of which were left at Belle-Epine. The Body of the Army took Shipping again, and landed near to Cochin, not far from a Church dedicated to St. Andrew; where the Portugals, with certain Malavares, seem'd to have stay'd ashore for the Hollanders coming: But seeing the Enemy to land with so much resolution, they only gave them one Volly and retreated. In their March the Hollanders descry'd certain Companies of Portugueses near the Sea-shore, others somewhat farther up in the Land, in a Church call'd St. Johns. Thereupon they sent out some Horsemen to discover their number; but the Portugals still retreated, after they had set fire to the Church. Thereupon the Hollanders made their approaches to the Town; and after they had besieg'd it for some time, a French Soldier, who was under their pay, seeing a Pannier ty'd at the end of a Cord, hanging over one of the Bastions, ventur'd notwithstanding all the Bullets that flew about his Ears, to see what was in it. But he was strangely surpriz'd, to find nothing but a languishing Infant, which the Mother had hung there, that she might not see it perish for hunger. The Soldier mov'd to compassion, took the Infant and gave it such as he had to eat; at which the Dutch General was so incens'd, saying that the Soldier should have let the Infant perish, that he call'd a Council of War, where he would have had the Soldier run the Gauntlet, which was very cruel; but the Council moderating the sentence, condemn'd him only to the Strappado.

The same day ten Soldiers out of every Company were commanded to go to one of the Houses of the King of Cochin; but they found no body there, having having plunder'd it the year before. At which time the Hollanders flew four Kings of the Country, and six hundred Blacks; nor did there escape but only one ancient Queen, who was taken alive by a common Soldier, call'd Vieu Rex, whom the Commander of the Army made a Captain immediately, for his reward. They left one Company in that House; but the Queen stay'd there but six days, for they gave her into the custody of Samarin, one of the most potent of the petty Kings upon that Coast, to whom the Hollanders had promis'd to give the City of Cranganor, if they took Cochin, provided he would be faithful to them.

Six weeks pass'd ere any thing considerable was done; but then the Hollanders, storming the Town by night, were repuls'd, and lost abundance of men, slain and taken Prisoners, through the Governour of Cranganors fault, who commanded them, and was drunk when the assault was made. Two months after, the General of the Hollanders resolv'd to make another assault in the same place; and because he would not want men, he sent for those that lay upon the side of Belle-epine. But by misfortune the Frigat struck upon the Sands, and splitting, abundance of the Soldiers were drown'd. They that could swim, got to land near Cochin, not finding any other place convenient, and were all taken Prisoners by the Portugals, being not above ten in all, Soldiers and Mariners. The General however would not give over the assault, but causing the Sea-men to land, he arm'd some with half-Pikes, others with Swords, to others he gave hand-Granadoes, and about ten a Clock in the morning he began the assault, with four Companies, consisting each of a hundred and fifty men. The Hollanders lost abundance of men in this last assault, and so did the Portugueses, for they defended themselves stoutly, being seconded by two hundred Soldiers, who were all Dutch-men, tho they sided with the Portugueses, because their Countrymen had abated them six months and a half pay for the loss of Touan. Without the assistance of these Soldiers, the City had never held out two months, there being among them one of the best Dutch Engineers of his time, who had left his Countrymen by reason of their ill usage of him.

At length the Hollanders having enter'd the Town toward evening, on Calivete side, and being Masters of the chief Bulwark, the Portugals came to a Capitulation, and the City was surrender'd. The Portugals by their Articles march'd out of Cochin with their Arms and Baggage; but when they came out of the City where the Hollanders were drawn up in Battalia, they were all forc'd to quit their Arms, and to lay them at the Generals feet; except the Officers, who kept their Swords. The General had promis'd the Soldiers the Pillage of the Town, but not being able to keep his word, for several plausible reasons which he told, he promis'd them six months pay, which in a few days after was reduc'd to eight Roupies a man. Samarin also demanded of him the City of Cranganor, according to his promise; which the General made good; but he caus'd all the Fortifications to be slighted first, and left Samarin nothing but the bare Walls. For being of a very mean Extraction, he was naturally as cruel and barbarous in his disposition. One time the Souldiers being so put to it for four days together, that they could get no food for money, two of them had somewhere taken a Cow and kill'd her; for which the General, when he came to know of it, caus'd one of them to be hang'd immediately, and had order'd the other to have run the Gauntlet, had not King Perca interceded for him.

King Perca, was a petty King of that Countrey, with whom the General was then in Treaty; and the Treaty being at length concluded, the General muster'd all his Land and Sea-men, to the number of about six thousand men. A few days after, he sent some Companies to besiege the City of Cunanor, which surrender'd without any resistence. When they return'd, the General caus'd a Crown to be made for the new King of Cochin, the other being expell'd his Countrey. And upon the day which he had appointed for this most solemn Coronation, the General sat upon a kind of a Throne, at the foot whereof, a Malavare or Pirat, being led thither between three Captains of each side, fell upon his knees to receive the Crown from the Generals hand, and to do homage for a petty Kingdom, that is to say, the little City of Cochin and its Territories, which were very ſmall. The King and the King-maker were both alike. For no doubt it could not but be a pleaſant ſight, to ſee a Hollander, that had been only the Cook of a Ship, crowning a miſerable Pirat with thoſe hands that had oft'ner handled a Ladle than a Sword.

In the mean time the Ships that carried the Inhabitants of Cochin to Goa, return'd laden with the ſpoils of thoſe diſtreſſed people; for contrary to the Articles of Capitulation, the Hollanders were no ſooner out at Sea, but they took from thoſe poor Creatures whatever they had, rifling both men and women, without any regard to ſex or modeſty.

The General being return'd into Batavia, they ſent a Governour to Cochin, who to make the place the ſtronger, demoliſh'd a great part of the City. But this Governour us'd the greateſt rigor imaginable, even toward the Souldiers; he ſhut them up in the City as if they had been in a Priſon; nor could they drink either Wine, or Sury, or Strong-water, by reaſon of the great Impoſts which he laid upon them. (Sury is a drink which flows from the Palm-trees.) So that when the Portugueſes kept Cochin, men might live better for five or ſix Sous, than under the Hollander for ten. This Governour was ſo ſevere, that he would baniſh a man for the ſmalleſt fault in the world, to the Iſland of Ceylan, to a place where they made Brick, ſometimes for five or or ſix years, ſometimes as long as the party liv'd. For it is oftentimes obſerv'd, that when any one is baniſh'd thither, though the ſentence be only for a term of years, yet the Exile never obtains his freedom afterwards.

CHAP. XVII.

The Paſſage by Sea from Ormus to Maſſipatan.

I Departed from Gomron to Maſſipatan the eleventh of May, 1652, and went aboard a great Veſſel of the King of Golconda's, which is bound every year from Perſia, laden with fine Calicuts, Chites, or Calicuts painted with a Pencil, which makes them much more beautiful and dearer than thoſe which are printed. The Holland Company are wont to allow to thoſe Veſſels which belong to any of the Kings or Princes of India, a Pilot, and two or three Gunners; neither the Indians nor Perſians being expert in Navigation. In the Veſſel where I was aboard there were but ſix Dutch Mariners at moſt, but above a hundred Natives. We ſailed out of the Perſian Golf, with a pleaſing and favorable Gale; but we had not ſail'd very far before we found the Sea very rough, and the Winds at South-Weſt, ſo violent, though full in our Stern, that we were not able to carry out more than one ſmall Sail. The next day, and for ſome days after, the Wind grew more violent, and the Sea more boiſt'rous; ſo that being in the ſixteenth Degree, which is the elevation of Goa, the Rain, the Thunder, and Lightning, render'd the Tempeſt the more terrible; inſomuch that we could not carry out any other than our top-ſail, and that half furl'd. We paſs'd by the Maldives Iſlands, but were not able to diſcern them, beſides that the Ship had taken in very much water in the Hold. For the Ship had lain five months in the Road of Gomron, where if the Mariners are not very careful to waſh the Planks that lye out of the water, they will be apt to gape, which cauſes the Ship to leak when ſhe is loaden. For which reaſon the Hollanders waſh the outſide of their Ships morning and evening. We had in our Veſſel five and fifty Horſes, which the King of Perſia had ſent as a Preſent to the King of Golconda; and about a hundred Merchants, Perſians and Armenians together, who were Traders to India. One whole day and night together there roſe a croſs Wind, ſo violent, that the Water rowl'd in from Stern to Stern, and the miſchief was, that our Pumps were nought. By good fortune there was a Merchant that had two Bails of Ruſſia Leather, beſides four or five Sadlers that knew how to ſow the Skins, who were very ſerviceable as well to the whole Ship as to themſelves. For they made great Buckets of the Skins, four Skins to a Bucket, which being let down from the Maſts with Pullies, through certain great Holes which were cut in the Deck, drew up a vaſt quantity of Water. The ſame day the violence of the Tempeſt continuing, there fell three Thunderbolts into the Ship. The firſt fell upon the Boltſprit, and ſplit it quite in two; and running along upon the Deck, kill'd three men. The ſecond fell two hours after, and kill'd two men, ſhooting along as the other did from Head to Stern. The third follow'd preſently after, the Maſter, the Maſters Mate, and my ſelf ſtanding together near the main Maſt. At what time the Cook coming to ask the Maſter whether he ſhould take up the Victuals, the Thunderbolt took him in the lower part of his Belly, made a little hole, and took off all the Hair as clean as they dreſs a Pig with hot water and Roſin, without doing him any more harm. Only when they came to anoint the little hole with Oil of Cocos he roar'd out through the ſharpneſs of the pain which he endur'd.

to

The twenty-fourth of June in the morning, we diſcover'd Land; and making toward it, we found our ſelves before Ponte de Gielle, the firſt Town in the Iſland of Ceylan, which the Hollanders had taken from the Portugals. From thence to the Road of Maſulipatan we had very good weather; where we arriv'd the ſecond of July, an hour or two after Sun-ſet. There I went aſhore, and was moſt civilly treated by the Dutch Preſident, and Merchants, as alſo by the Engliſh.

The eighteenth and nineteenth of June, the Sieur Du Jardin and I, bought us two Palleki's, and ſix Oxen to carry our ſelves, our Servants, and our Luggage. Our deſign was to have gone directly to Golconda, there to have ſold the King a parcel of long Pearls, the leaſt whereof weigh'd thirty-four Carats, and the biggeſt thirty-five, with ſome other Jewels, the moſt part whereof were Emraulds. But the Hollanders aſſuring us, that our journey would be to no purpoſe, in regard the King would buy nothing that was rare, or of a high price, till Mirgimola, his General and prime Miniſter of State, had view'd the Commodity; underſtanding therefore, that he was then at the Siege of Gandicot, in the Province of Carnatica, we reſolv'd to go thither to him.

CHAP. XVIII.

The Road from Maſulipatan to Gandicot, a City and Garriſon in the Province of Carnatica. And of the dealings which the Author had with Mirgimola, who commanded the King of Golconda's Army. With a diſcourſe at large concerning Elephants.

WE ſet forth from Maſulipatan the twentieth of June, about five of the Clock in the Evening.

The next day, being the one and twentieth, we travell'd three Leagues, and lay at a Village call'd Nilmol.

The two and twentieth, we travell'd ſix Leagues, to Wonhir, another Village; croſſing the River upon a floating Bridg, before we came thither.

The three and twentieth, after we had travel'd ſix hours, we came to Patemet, a pitiful Village, where we were conſtrain'd to lye three days by reaſon of the Rains.

The twenty-ſeventh, we came to a great Town, call'd Bezouart; not being able to travel above a League and a half, becauſe the Road was overflow'd. There we were forc'd to ſtay four days, for the Rains had ſo ſwell'd the River which we were to croſs, that the Ferryman could not govern his Boat againſt the violence of the Stream. There we alſo left the Horſes which the King of Perſia ſent to the King of Golconda; which by that time were reduc'd to fifty.

While we ſtay'd at Bezoüari, we went to ſee ſeveral Pagods, of which the Country is full; there being more than in any other part of India; for unleſs it be the Governours of Towns, and ſome of their Domeſticks, all the reſt of the Inhabitants are Idolaters. The Pagod belonging to the Town of Bezoüari, is a very large one, but not clos'd with Walls; it conſiſts of fifty-two Pillars twenty foot high, that uphold a flat roof of Free-ſtone; they are adorn'd with ſeveral emboſs'd Figures of ugly Devils, and ſeveral ſorts of Creatures. Some of thoſe Devils are made with four Holes, others with many Legs and many Tails, others lolling out their Tongues, and others in ſeveral other ridiculous poſtures. The ſame Figures are cut in the Stone of the Roof, and between the Pillars ſtand the Statues of their Gods upon Peeſtals. The Pagod is built in the midſt of a Court, of a greater length than breadth, encompaſs'd with Walls, which are adorn'd within and without, with the ſame Figures as the Pagod; and a Gallery upheld by ſixty-ſix Pillars, runs round the Wall, after the manner of a Cloyſter. You enter into this Court through a wide Portal, upon which are two Niches, one above another, the firſt upheld by twelve, the other by eight Pillars. At the bottom of the Pillars of the Pagod, are certain old Indian Characters, of which the Prieſts of thoſe Idolaters themſelves can hardly tell the meaning.

We went to ſee another Pagod, built upon a Hill, to which there is an aſcent of a hundred and ninety-three ſteps, every one a foot high. The Pagod is four-ſquare, with a Cupola at the top; and has the ſame emboſs'd Figures, as the Pagod of Bezoüari, round about the Walls. In the middle there is an Idol ſitting croſs-leg'd, after the manner of the Country; and in that ſitting poſture it is about four foot high; upon the Head it has a Triple Crown, from which four Horns extend themſelves; and it has the face of a man, turn'd toward the Eaſt. The Pilgrims that come out of devotion to theſe Pagods, when they enter, claſp their hands together, and rear them up to their foreheads; then they advance toward the Idol, tolling their two hands ſo claſpt together, and crying out ſeveral times Ram, Ram, that is to ſay, God, God. When they come near, they ring a little Bell that hangs upon the Idol it ſelf, after they have beſmear'd the Face, and ſeveral parts of the Body, with ſeveral ſorts of Painting. Some there are that bring along with them Viols of Oil, with which they anoint the Idol; and beſides, they make an Offering to it of Sugar, Oil, and other things proper to be eaten; the richer ſort alſo adding pieces of Silver. There are ſixty Prieſts that belong to the Idol, and maintain themſelves, their Wives and Children upon the Offerings brought to the Idol. But to the end the Pilgrims may believe the Idol takes them, the Prieſts let them lye two days, and the third day in the evening they take them away. When any Pilgrim goes to a Pagod, to be cur'd of any diſtemper, he brings the Figure of the Member affected made either in Gold, Silver, or Copper, according to his quality, which he offers to his god; and then falls a ſinging, as all the reſt do, after they have offer'd. Before the Gate of the Pagod, there is a flat Roof, upheld by ſixteen Pillars, and right againſt it, is another upheld by eight; which ſerves for the Prieſts Kitchin. On the South-ſide there is a large Platform cut in the Mountain, where there is a pleaſing ſhade of many fair Trees, and ſeveral Wells digg'd in the ground. Pilgrims come far and near to this Pagod; and if they be poor, the Prieſts relive them with what they receive from the rich, that come there out of devotion. The great Feaſt of this Pagod is in the month of October, at which time there is a great concourſe of people from all parts. While we were there, there was a Woman that had not ſtirr'd out of the Pagod for three days together; and her prayer to the Idol was, ſince ſhe had loſt her Husband, to know what ſhe ſhould do to bring up her Children. Thereupon asking one of the Prieſts, wherefore ſhe had no anſwer, or whether ſhe was to have any anſwer or no; he told me, that ſhe muſt wait the pleaſure of their God, and that then he would give her an anſwer to what ſhe expected. Upon this I miſtruſted ſome cheat, and to diſcover it, I reſolv'd to go into the Pagod when all the Prieſts were abſent at Dinner, there being only one that ſtood at the Gate, whom I ſent to fetch me ſome water at a Fountain two or three Musket-ſhot from the place. During that time time I went in, and the Woman hearing me, redoubled her cries; for there being no light in the Pagod, but what comes in at the door, it is very dark. I felt my way to the Idol, and by the glimmering light observ'd an hole behind the Idol. I could not do this so quickly, but that the Priest return'd before I had done, He curst me for prophaning his Temple, as he call'd it. But we became suddenly very good friends by the mediation of two Roupies which I put into his hands, whereupon he presently presented me with some of his Betle.

The one and thirtieth, we departed from Bezouart, and past the River which runs to the Mine of Gani or Coulour. It was then neer half a league brodd, by reason of the great Rains which had fall'n continually for eight or nine days together. After we had travell'd three leagues on the other side of the River we came to a great Pagod built upon a large Platform, with an ascent of 15 or 20 steps. Within it stood the Figure of a Cow, all of very black Marble: and a number of deformed Idols four or five foot high; some having many heads, others many hands and legs: and the most ugly are most ador'd, and receive most Offerings.

A quarter of a league from this Pagod is a large Town; but we travell'd three leagues farther, and came to lie at another Town, call'd Kah-Kali, neer to which there is a small Pagod, wherein there stand five or six Idols of Marble very well made.

The first of August we came to a great City call'd Cudevir, with a double Moat, pav'd at the bottom with Free-stone. The way to this Town is clos'd on each side with strong Walls, and at such and such distances are built certain round Towers of little or no defence. This City toward the East stretches out to a Mountain about a league in compass, and surrounded with Walls. At the distance of every 150 paces, there is as it were an half-Moon, and within the Walls are three Fortresses.

The second, we travell'd six leagues, and lay at a Village call'd Copenour.

The third day, after we had travell'd eight leagues, we came to Adamgigt, a very fair Town, where there is a very large Pagod, with abundance of Chambers which were built for the Priests; but are now gone to ruine. There are also in the Pagod certain Idols, but very much maim'd, which the People however very superstitiously adore.

The fourth, we travell'd eight leagues, and came to lie at the Town of Nosdrepar. Half a league on this side there is a great River; but at that time it had but little water in it; by reason of the drowth.

The fifth, after eight leagues journey we lay at Condecour.

The sixth, we travell'd seven hours, and lay at a Village call'd Dakije.

The seventh, after three leagues journey we came to Nelour, where there are many Pagods, and having cross'd a great River, a quarter of a league farther, we travell'd six leagues, and came to Gandarin.

The eighth, after a journey of eight hours we lay at Sereplé, a small Village.

The ninth, we travell'd nine leagues, and lay at a good Town call'd Ponter.

The tenth, we travell'd eleven hours, and lay at Senepgond, another good Town.

The eleventh, we went no farther than Palicat, which is but four leagues from Senepgond; and of those four leagues we travell'd above one in the Sea, up to the Saddles of our Horses in water. There is another way, but it is the farther about by two or three leagues. Palicat is a Fort that belongs to the Hollanders that live upon the Coast of Coromandel; and where they have their chief Factory, where lives also the chief Intendent over all the rest that are in the Territories of the King of Golconda. There are usually within the Fort 200 Souldiers, or thereabouts, besides several Merchants that live there upon the account of Trade; and several others, who having serv'd the Company according to their agreement, retire to that place. There also dwell some of the Natives of the Country; so that Palicat is now as it were a little Town. Between the Town and the Castle there is a large distance of ground, lest the Fort should be annoid by shot from the Town. The Bastions are well-stor'd with good Guns: And the Sea comes up to the very Wall of it; but there is no Haven, only a Road. We staid in the Town till the next day in the evening, where we obſerv'd, that when the Inhabitants fetch their water to drink, they ſtay till the Sea is quite out, and then digging holes in the Sand as neer the Sea as they can, they meet with freſh-water.

Town

The twelfth, we departed from Calicut, and the next morning about ten of the clock we came to Madreſpatan, otherwiſe call'd Fort St. George, which belongs to the Engliſh, having travell'd not above ſeven or eight leagues that day. We lay at the Covent of Capuchins, at what time Father Ephraim, and Father Zenon were both there.

The fifteenth, we went to St. Thomas's Town, to ſee the Auſtin-Friars, and the Jeſuits Church, in the firſt whereof is an Iron-lance, wherewith they ſay that St. Thomas was Martyr'd.

The two and twentieth, in the morning we departed from Madreſpatan, and after a journey of five leagues we arriv'd at a large Town call'd Serravaron.

The three and twentieth, after 7 leagues travel, we came to Oudecot, the whole days journey being over a flat ſandy Countrey. On each ſide there are only Copſes of Bambo's that grow very high. Some of theſe Copſes are ſo thick, that it is impoſſible for a man to get into them; but they are peſter'd with prodigious numbers of Apes: Thoſe that breed in the Copſes upon one ſide of the way, are enemies to them that are bred on the other ſide; ſo that they dare not croſs from one ſide to the other, but they are in danger of being immediately ſtrangl'd. Here we had good ſport by ſetting the Apes together by the ears; which is done after this manner. This part of the Country, at every leagues end, is clos'd up with Gates and Barricado's where there is a good Guard kept, and where all Paſſengers are examin'd whither they go, and whence they come; ſo that men may ſafely travel there with their Money in their hands. In ſeveral parts of this Road there is Rice to be ſold; and they that would ſee the ſport, cauſe five or ſix Baskets of Rice to be ſet in the Road, ſome forty or fifty paces one from the other, and cloſe by every Basket they lay five or ſix battoons about two-foot-long, and two inches about; then they retire and hide themſelves: preſently they ſhall ſee the Apes on both ſides of the way deſcend from the tops of the Bambou's, and advance toward the Baskets which are full of Rice: They are about half an hour ſhewing their teeth one at the other before they come near the Baskets; ſometimes they advance, then retreat again, being loath to encounter. At length the female-Baboons, who are moſt couragious than the males, eſpecially thoſe that have young ones, which they carry in their arms, as woman do their Children, venture to approach the Basket, and as they are about to put in their heads to eat, the males on the other ſide advance to hinder them. Immediately the other party comes forward, and thus the feud being kindled on both ſides, they take up the Battoons that lie by the Baskets, and thraſh one another in good earneſt. The weakeſt are conſtrain'd to flie into the wood with their pates broken, and their limbs maim'd; while the Maſters of the Field glut themſelves with Rice. Though it may be, when their bellies are full, they will ſuffer ſome of the female-party to come and pertake with them.

The four and twentieth, we travell'd nine leagues, all the way being like the Road the day before, as far as Naraveron.

The five and twentieth, after a journey of eight hours, through a Countrey of the ſame nature, meeting at every two or three leagues end with Gates and Guards, we came in the evening to Gazel.

The ſix and twentieth, we travell'd nine leagues, and came to lie at Courva, where there was nothing to be found neither for Man nor Beaſt, ſo that our Cattel were forc'd to be contented with a little Graſs, which was cut on purpoſe for them. Courva is only a celebrated Pagod; by which, at our arrival, we ſaw ſeveral bands of Souldiers paſs by, ſome with Half-pikes, ſome with Muskets, and ſome with Clubs, who were going to joyn with one of the principal Commanders of Mirgimola's Army, who was encamp'd upon a riſing-ground not far from Courva; the place being pleaſant and cool, by reaſon of the great number of Trees and Fountains that grace it. When we underſtood the Captain was ſo neer, we went to wait upon him, and found him ſitting in his Tent with many Lords of the Country all Idolaters. After we had preſented him with a pair of Pocket-

Piſtols

Piſtols inlaid with Silver, he demanded of us what had brought us into that Countrey; but when we told him that we came to attend Mirgimola, Generaliſſimo of the King of Golconda's Army, about buſineſs, he was infinitely kind to us: However, underſtanding that he took us for Hollanders, we told him we were not Hollanders, but French-men. Thereupon, not underſtanding what Nation we were, he fell into a long diſcourſe with us about the Government of our Countrey, and the Grandeur of our King. Six or ſeven days before, they had taken five or ſix Elephants, three whereof had eſcap'd, having kill'd ten or twelve of the Natives who aſſiſted in the Chace; in purſuit whereof the General was preparing; and becauſe we could not ſtay to ſee the ſport, we were contented to inform our ſelves of the manner of hunting that vaſt Animal; which is thus. They cut out ſeveral Alleys or Walks in the Wood, which they dig full of great deep holes, and cover with Hurdles ſtrow'd over with a little earth. Then the Hunters hooping and hollowing, and beating up Drums, with Pikes that have Wild-fire ti'd to the end of them, force the Elephant into thoſe Walks, where he tumbles into the holes, not being able to riſe again. Then they fetch Ropes and Chains: and ſome they bring under their bellies, others they wind about their legs and trunk, and when they think they have ſufficiently hamper'd the Beaſt, they have certain Engines ready, wherewithal to draw him up. Nevertheleſs, of five, three eſcap'd, notwithſtanding the cords and chains about their bodies and their legs. The people told us one thing which ſeem'd very wonderful; which was, that theſe Elephants having been once deceiv'd, and having eſcap'd the ſnare, are very miſtruſtful ever after; and when they get into the Wood again, they break off a great bough from one of the Trees with their trunk, with which they examine every ſtep they go, before they ſet down their feet, to try whether there be any hole or no in their way. So that the Hunters that told us the Story, ſeem'd to be out of hopes of ever taking thoſe three Elephants which had eſcap'd. Had we been aſſur'd that we might have been eye-witneſſes of this miraculous precaution of the Elephant, we would have ſtaid three or four days, what-ever urgent buſineſs we had had. The Captain himſelf was a kind of a Brigadeer, that commanded three or four-thouſand men, who were quarter'd half a league round the Countrey.

The ſeven and twentieth, after two hours travel, we came to a great Village, where we ſaw the two Elephants which had been ſo lately taken. Every one of the two wild Elephants was plac'd between two tame ones. Round about the wild Elephants ſtood ſix men, with every one an Half-pike in their hands, and a lighted-Torch faſten'd at the end of the Pike, who talk'd to the Beaſts, giving them meat, and crying out in their language, Take it, eat it. The food which they gave them was a little bottle of Hey, ſome pieces of brown-Sucre, and Rice boil'd in water, with ſome few corns of Pepper. If the wild Elephants refus'd to do as they were bidden, the men made ſigns to the tame Elephants to beat them, which they did, banging the refractory Elephant upon the head and forehead with their trunks; and if he offer'd to make any reſiſtence, the other Elephant thwackt him on the other ſide; ſo that the poor Elephant, not knowing what to do, was conſtrain'd to learn obedience.

Being thus fall'n into the Story of Elephants, I will add ſome other obſervations, which I have made upon the nature of thoſe Animals. Though the Elephant never meddles with the female, after he is once taken, yet he is ſometimes ſeiz'd with a kind of luſtful rage. One day that Shah-jehan was an Hunting upon one of his Elephants, with one of his Sons that ſat by him to fan him, the Elephant became ſo furious by reaſon of his luſt, that the Governor who was by no means able to maſter him, declar'd to the King, that to allay the fury of the Elephant, who would elſe doubtleſs bruiſe him to pieces among the Trees, there was no way, but for one of the three to forfeit his life: and that he would willingly ſacrifice his for the ſafety of the King and the Prince his Son. Only he deſir'd his Majeſty to take care of three ſmall Children which he muſt leave behind him. Having ſo ſaid, he threw himſelf under the Elephant's-feet, who had no ſooner taken him in his trunk and ſqueez'd him to pieces with his feet, but he grew as quiet and peaceable as before. The King, as an acknowledgment for ſo famous a deliverance, gave to the poor two-hunder'd-thouſand Roupies, and highly advanc'd every one of the Sons of him that had ſo generouſly laid down his life for the ſafety of his Sovereign.

I obſerv'd alſo, that though the Elephant's skin be very hard while he is alive; yet when he is dead, it is juſt like melted-glue.

Elephants are brought from ſeveral parts of India; as from the Iſland of Ceylan, where they are very ſmall; but the moſt couragious of all: from the Iſle of Sumatra; from the Kingdom of Cochin; from the Kingdom of Siam; and from the Frontiers of the Kingdom of Boutam neer the Great-Tartarie. They are brought alſo from the Coaſt of Melinda, Eaſtward of Affrica: where they are in very great numbers, according to the report of a Portugueze-Captain, made at Goa, who came from thence to make ſome complaint againſt the Governor of Mozambique. He told me that he had ſeen all along that Coaſt ſeveral Parks that were empal'd with nothing but Elephants-teeth, the leaſt of which Parks is above a league about: He added farther, that the Blacks of the Country hunt their Elephants, and eat the Fleſh. But they are oblig'd to give the tusks of every one they kill to the Lord of the place. When they intend to take their Elephants in the Iſland of Ceylan, they make a long lane, clos'd in on both ſides, ſo that the Elephant can neither run to the right nor to the left: this lane is broad at the firſt, but grows narrower and narrower, till there is no more room left at the farther-end than for the female-Elephant to lie down, which muſt be one that is covetous of the male at the ſame time. Though ſhe be tame, yet ſhe is bound with good Ropes and Cords, and by her cries will call the male-Elephant, who preſently runs through the lane towards her. Now when the Elephant comes where the lane grows narrow, they that lie hid for that purpoſe, immediately barricado up the lane behind, and when he comes neer the female, there is another Barricado ſet up that ſtops him from going any farther. When he is thus between the Barricado's, they ſo entangle his legs and trunk with ropes and cords, that he is ſoon taken, having no way to help himſelf. The ſame way they uſe for the moſt part in the Kingdoms of Siam, and Pegu, only that the Natives there mount the female-Elephant, and go to find out the male in the Forreſts. And when they have met with his haunt, they tye the female to the moſt convenient place they can find, and then they fix their ſnares for the Elephant, who in a ſhort time haſtens toward the female, hot for Generation, where her cries call him.

This is obſervable of the female-Elephant, that when ſhe begins to be hot, ſhe gathers together a great heap of herbs and weeds, and makes her ſelf a kind of bed ſome four or five-foot-high from the ground, where contrary to the cuſtom of all other creatures, ſhe lies upon her back, in expectation of the male, whom ſhe calls to her by a peculiar cry.

This is alſo particular to the Elephants in the Iſle of Ceylan, that only the firſt Elephant which the female produces, has any tusks. And it is alſo obſervable, that the Ivory which comes from Acheu when it is wrought, has this peculiar quality with it, that it never grows yellow, like that which comes out of the Continent, and from the Eaſt-Indies, which makes it more eſteem'd, and dearer than any other.

When the Merchants bring Elephants to any place to ſell, 'tis a pleaſant ſight to ſee them go along. For in regard there are generally old and young together, when the old ones are gone by, the children will be running after the little ones to play with them, and give them ſomething or other to eat. While the young Elephants, which are very wanton, are buſily taking what is offer'd them, the children leap upon their backs: but when the young Elephants that lately ſtopt for the love of the Victuals perceiving their Dams, a great way before, double their pace, and playing with their trunks, throw the children off their backs to the ground, yet without doing them any harm.

Notwithſtanding all the enquiry I have made, I could never find exactly how long an Elephant will live. Nor can all the Governors and keepers of thoſe creatures tell you more, than ſuch an Elephant has been in the poſſeſſion of their Father, their Grandfather, and great Grandfather. And by that computation, I found that they had liv'd ſome of them ſix-ſcore, or an hunder'd and thirty years.

The

The greateſt part of thoſe that have made Relations of India, boldly affirm that the Great Mogul keeps three or four-thouſand Elephants. But being my ſelf at Jehanabad, where the King at preſent reſides, he that was chief Maſter of the Elephants, aſſur'd me that the King had not above five-hunder'd Elephants, which were call'd Elephants of the Houſe, made uſe of only to carry the Women, their Tents, and Luggage; but that for the Wars, he only kept fourſcore, or fourſcore and ten at moſt. The nobleſt of the latter ſort is always reſerv'd for the King's Eldeſt Son, the allowance for his food and other neceſſaries being 500 Roupies a month, which comes to 750 Livres. There are ſome that are not allow'd above 50, others 40, others, 30, and ſome but 20 Roupies. But thoſe Elephants that are allow'd an hunder'd, two-hunder'd, three-hunder'd or four-hunder'd Roupies a-month, have belonging to them certain Horſe-men that live upon the ſame pay, and two or three young fellows to fan them during the heat of the weather. All theſe Elephants are not always kept in the City: the greateſt part being led out every morning into the fields, or among the thickets, where they feed upon the branches of Trees, Sucre-canes, and Millet, to the great detriment of the poor Country man. But not a little to the profit of their Keepers; for the leſs they eat at home, the more they gain into their own purſes.

The twenty-ſeventh of Auguſt, we travell'd ſix leagues, and lay at a great Town call'd Ragia-peta.

The twenty-eighth, after eight leagues journey we came to Ondecour.

The twenty-ninth, after nine hours travel we arriv'd at Outemeda, where there is one of the greateſt Pagods in all India. It is all built of large Free-ſtone, and it has three Towers, where there ſtand ſeveral deform'd figures of Emboſs'd-work. It is encompaſt with many little Chambers for the Prieſts Lodgings: five-hunder'd paces beyond there is a wide Lake, upon the banks whereof are built ſeveral Pagods eight or ten-foot-ſquare; and in every one an Idol repreſenting the ſhape of ſome Devil, with a Brameré, who takes care that no ſtranger that is not of their ſuperſtition, ſhall come to waſh, or take any water out of the Lake. If any ſtranger deſires any water, they bring it in earthen-pots: and if by chance their pot touches the ſtranger's Veſſel, they break it immediately. They told me alſo that if any ſtranger, not of their ſuperſtition, ſhould happen by accident to waſh in that Lake, they muſt be forc'd to drain the lake of all the water that was in at that time. As for their alms, they are very charitable; for there paſſes by no perſon in neceſſity, or that begs of them, but they give them to eat and drink of ſuch as they have. There are ſeveral Women that ſit upon the Road, whereof ſome of them always keep fire for Travellers to light their Tobacco by. Nay, they will give a Pipe to ſome that have none at all. Others boil Rice with Quicheri, which is a grain ſomewhat like our Hemp-ſeed. Others boil Beans with their Rice, becauſe the water wherein they are boil'd never puts thoſe that are over-hot into a pleuriſy. There are Women that have vow'd to perform theſe acts of Charity to ſtrangers for ſeven or eight years, ſome for more, ſome for leſs, according to their convenience. And to every Traveller they give ſome of their Beans, and Rice-water, and an handful of Rice to eat. There are other Women upon the high-way, and in the fields, looking behind their Horſes, their Oxen, and their Cows, who have made vows never to eat but what they find indigeſted in the dung of thoſe Beaſts. Now in regard there is neither Barly nor Oats in that Countrey, they give their Cattle certain great crooked Peaſe, which they bruiſe before between two Mill-ſtones: and then lay them in ſteep for half an hour; for they are a very ſolid ſubſtance, and hard to be digeſted. They give their Cattel theſe Peaſe every evening; and in the morning they feed them with two pound of dark-brown-Sugar, like Wax, kneaded together with as much Meal, and one-pound of Butter, whereof the Oſtlers or Grooms make little round Balls which they thruſt down their throats; for otherwiſe they would never eat them. Afterwards they waſh their mouths, that are all over clamm'd, eſpecially their teeth, which makes them have ſuch an averſion againſt that ſort of food. All the day long they pull up the graſs and weeds, by the roots, and give their Cattel, being very careful of letting them eat any of the earth.

The thirty'th, we travell'd eight leagues, and lay at a place call'd Goulupalé.

The one and thirty'th,after we had travell'd nine hours, we ſtopt at Gogeron.

The firſt of September we travell'd but ſix leagues, and came to lie at Gandicot. It was but eight days before, that the Nahab had taken that City,after a Siege of three months. Nor had it been taken without the aſſiſtance of certain French-men,who had forſaken the ſervice of the Dutch-Company,by reaſon of ill-uſage. They had alſo ſeveral Engliſh and Dutch-Cannoneers, with two or three Italians, which mainly forwarded the ſurrender of that place.

Gandicot is one of the ſtrongeſt Cities in the Kingdom of Carnatica. It is ſituated upon the point of an high Mountain; there being but one aſcent to it, not above twenty or five and twenty-foot-broad at moſt; in ſome places not above ſeven or eight-foot-wide. On the right-hand of the way, which is cut out of the Mountain, there is a moſt hideous precipice; at the bottom whereof runs a vaſt River. Upon the top of the Mountain there is a ſmall plain, but a quarter of a league broad, and about half a league long. This is all ſow'd with Rice and Millet,and water'd with many little Springs. The top of the plain on the South-ſide,where the City is built, is encompaſt with precipices, two Rivers running at the bottom, which form the point. So that there is but one Gate to enter into the City from the plain-ſide; and that too fortifi'd with three good walls of Free-ſtone,with Moats pav'd at the bottom with Free-ſtone; ſo that the beſieg'd had but only one quarter of the City to defend, containing about five hunder'd paces. They had but two Iron-Guns, the one carrying twelve-pound-Ball, the other eight. The one was planted upon the Gate, the other upon a point of a kind of a Baſtion. So that until the Nahab had found the way to mount his Cannon upon a very high place neer the City, he loſt a great number of men by ſeveral ſallies which the Beſieg'd made. The Raja that was within, was eſteem'd one of the braveſt and moſt experienc'd Captains that ever were amongſt the Idolaters: whereupon,the Nahab finding that the place was not to be taken,unleſs he could get up his Cannon to the top of that ſteep aſcent, ſent for all the French-men that were in the King's ſervice,promiſing to every one four months extraordinary pay, if they could find a way to mount his Cannon up to the top of ſuch a place; wherein they had the good-hap to be very ſucceſful. For they mounted four pieces of Cannon, and were ſo proſperous,as to hit the great Gun that was planted upon the Gate, and render it unſerviceable. At length, when they had beaten down good part of the Wall of the City,the Beſieged came to capitulate, and march'd out of the Town upon good Articles. The day we arriv'd, all the Army was encamp'd at the foot of the Mountain, in a plain, through which there ran a very fair River; where the Nahab muſter'd his Cavalry, and found them in a very good condition. An Engliſh-Cannoneer and an Italian ſeeing Monſieur Jardin and my ſelf paſs by, gueſs'd us to be Frangui's; and becauſe it was late,accoſted us very civilly,and oblig'd us to ſtay with them all night. By them we underſtood that there was in the City a French-Engineer, whoſe name was Claudius Maille of Bourges, and that he was employ'd by the Nahab to caſt ſome pieces of Cannon which the Nahab intended to leave in the City.

The next day we went into the City, and found out Maille's Lodging, having been acquainted with him at Batavia; who informing the Nahab of our arrival, he preſently ſent us Proviſion for our ſelves and our beaſts.

The third day we went to wait upon the Nahab,who had pitch'd his Tents upon that part of the plain neer the place where the way is cut out of the Rock. We inform'd him of the cauſe of our coming, telling him that we had ſome Commodities that were rare, and worth the King's buying; but that we were unwilling to ſhew them to the King till he had ſeen them; believing it our duty to render him that reſpect. The Nahab was very well-pleas'd with our Complement; and after he had caus'd us to be preſented with Betlé, we took our leaves of him, and return'd to our Lodgings, whither he ſent to us two Bottles of Wine,one of Sack,and the other of Sehiras,which is a rare thing in that Countrey.

The fourth day we waited upon him again, and carried along with us ſome Pearles of an extraordinary weight,beauty and bigneſs; the leaſt whereof weigh'd twenty four Caratts. After he had vewd them and ſhew'd them to ſome of the Lords that were about him,he ask'd the price, which when we had ſet him, he return'd us our Jewels and told us he would conſider of it.

The

The tenth day he ſent for us in the morning, and after he had caus'd us to ſit down by him, he ſent for five ſmall Bags full of Diamonds, every Bag containing a good handful. They were looſe Stones, of a very black Water, and very ſmall; none of them exceeding a Carat, or a Carat and a half; but otherwiſe very clean. There were ſome few that might weigh two Carats. After the Nahab had ſhew'n us all, he ask'd us whether they would ſell in our Country. We made anſwer, that they might have been for ſale in our Country, provided they had not been of a black Water; for that in Europe we never eſteem'd any Diamonds, but ſuch as were clean and white, having but a ſmall eſteem for any others. It ſeems, that when he firſt undertook the Conqueſt of this Kingdom for the King of Golconda, they inform'd him that there were Diamond Mines in it. Whereupon he ſent twelve thouſand men to dig there; who in a whole years time could find no more than thoſe five ſmall Bags full. Whereupon the Nahab perceiving that they could find none but brown Stones, of a Water enclining much more to black than white, thought it but loſs of time, and ſo ſent all the people back to their Husbandry.

The eleventh, the French Canoneers came all to the Nahabs Tent, complaining that he had not paid them the four months pay which he had promis'd them; threatning him, that if he did not diſcharge it, they would leave him; to which the Nahab promis'd to give them ſatisfaction the next day.

The twelfth, the Canoneers not failing to give him another viſit, the Nahab paid them three months, and promis'd to pay them the fourth before the month were out; but ſo ſoon as they had receiv'd their Money, they fell a feaſting one another, ſo that the Dancing Wenches carried away the greateſt part of their Coin.

The thirteenth, the Nahab went out to ſee the Guns which Maille had undertaken to caſt. For which purpoſe he had ſent for Braſs from all parts, and got together a great number of Idols which the Soldiers had pillag'd out of the Pagods as they march'd along. Now you muſt know, that in Gandicot there was one Pagod, ſaid to be the faireſt in all India, wherein there were ſeveral Idols, ſome of Gold, and others of Silver; amongſt the reſt there were ſix of Braſs, three ſitting upon their Heels, and three upon their Feet, ten foot high. Theſe Idols were made uſe of among the reſt. But when Maille alſo had provided all things ready, he could not make thoſe ſix Idols run, that were taken out of the great Pagod of Gandicot, though he melted all the reſt. He try'd ſeveral ways, but it was impoſſible for him to do it, whatever expence the Nahab was at; nay though the Nahab threaten'd to hang the Prieſts for having inchanted thoſe Idols. And thus Maille could never make any more than only one ſingle piece, and that ſplit upon trial; ſo that he was forc'd to leave the work unfiniſh'd, and ſoon after left the Nahabs ſervice.

The fourteenth, we went to take our leaves of the Nahab, and to know what he had further to ſay to us, concerning the Commodities we had then ſhew'n him. But then he told us, he was buſie at preſent about the examination of certain Offenders which were brought before him. For it is the cuſtom of that Country, never to put a man in Priſon; but as ſoon as the Offender is taken, he is examin'd, and ſentence is pronounc'd upon him, according to his crime, which is immediately executed; or if the party taken, be found innocent, he is as ſoon acquitted. And let the controverſie be of what nature it will, it is preſently decided.

The fifteenth in the morning, we went to wait upon him again, and were immediately admitted into his Tent, where he ſat with his two Secretaries by him. The Nahab was ſitting according to the cuſtom of the Country, bare-foot, like one of our Taylors, with a great number of Papers ſticking between his Toes, and others between the Fingers of his left hand, which Papers he drew ſometimes from between his Toes, ſometimes from between his Fingers, & order'd what anſwers ſhould be given to every one. After his Secretaries had wrote the anſwers, he caus'd them to read them, and then took the Letters and ſeal'd them himſelf; giving ſome to Foot Meſſengers, others to Horſemen. For you muſt know, that all thoſe Letters which are ſent by Foot-Poſts all over India, go with more ſpeed than thoſe which are carried by Horſemen. The reaſon is, becauſe at the end of every two Leagues there are little Huts, where there are men always ready, who are engag'd to run away immediately; so that when one of these men that carries the Letters, comes to one of these Huts, he throws the Letters into the Hut, and then he that is appointed, runs with them to the next Stage. They look upon it as an ill Omen, to give the Letters into the Messengers hands; but they must be thrown at his feet, and he must gather them up. It is to be observ'd also, that the high ways in most parts of India, are like Walks of Trees; and that where there are no Trees, at every five hundred paces distance there are set up little Heaps of Stones, which the Inhabitants of the next Villages are bound to white-wash from time to time, to the end those Letter-Carriers may not miss their ways in dark and Rainy nights. While we stay'd with the Nabab, certain Officers came to tell him, that they had brought certain Offenders to the door of his Tent. He was above half an hour before he return'd them any answer, writing on, and giving instructions to his Secretaries; but by and by, all of a sudden he commanded the Offenders to be brought in, and after he had examin'd them, and made them confess the crime of which they stood accus'd, he was above an hour before he said a word, still writing on, and employing his Secretaries. In the mean while several of the Officers of the Army came to tender their respects to him in a very submissive manner, all whom he answer'd only with a nod. There was one of the Offenders which were brought before him, had broken into a House, and had kill'd the Mother and three Children. He was condemned upon the spot to have his Hands and Feet cut off, and to be cast out into the high way, there to end his days in misery. Another had rob'd upon the Highway; for which the Nabab order'd his Belly to be ript up, and himself to be cast upon the Dunghill. I know not what crimes the other two had committed, but their heads were both cut off. When we perceiv'd him at a little leisure, we ask'd him whether he had any other Commands, to lay upon us, and whether he thought our Commodities fitting to be shew'n to the King. He answer'd, that we might go to Golconda, and that he would write to his Son in our behalf, and that his Letter would be there sooner than we. And in order to our journey, he order'd us sixteen Horsemen to convoy us, and to provide us necessaries upon the Road, till we came to a River, thirteen Leagues from Gandicot, which no persons are to pass, unless they have the Nababs Passport, to keep the Soldiers from running from their Colours.

CHAP. XIX.

The Road from Gandicot to Golconda.

THE sixteenth in the morning, we set out of Gandicot, accompanied with the greatest part of the Canoneers, who brought us the first days journey upon our way; and that day having travel'd seven Leagues, we came to lye at Cotepali.

The seventeenth, the Canoneers took their leaves of us; and we kept on our journey with our Horsemen; and having travel'd six Leagues, we lay at a Village call'd Coreen, on the other side of the River, which is very broad. So soon as we had cross'd it, the Horsemen took their leaves of us; and though we made them a present of Roupies, to buy them Tobacco and Betle, yet we could not perswade them to take it. Their Ferry-Boats wherewith they cross the River, are like broad bottom'd Wicker Flaskets, cover'd without with Oxe's Hides; at the bottom whereof they lay certain Faggots, over which they spread a piece of old Tapestry, to keep the Wares and Merchandise from the wet. As for their Coaches and Waggons, they fasten them between two Boats, by the Wheels and the Pole; the Horses swimming all the while, one man whipping them on behind, while another in the Boat holds them up by the Head-Stall.

Stall. As for the Oxen that carry the Luggage, as ſoon as ever they come to the River ſide, and that they have unladed them, they only drive them into the River, and they will ſwim over of themſelves. There are four men that ſtand upright at the four Corners of the Boat, and row it along with broad pieces of Wood, made like Shovels. If they do not all ſtrike their ſtroaks together, but that any of the four miſſes, the Boat will turn round two or three times; and the ſtream carries it a great way lower than where they intended to land.

The eighteenth, after five hours travel we arriv'd at Morimal.

The nineteenth, we travel'd nine Leagues, and lay at Santeſela.

The twentieth, we travell'd nine Leagues more, and lay at Goremeda.

The one and twentieth, after ſix hours travel, we ſpent the night at Kaman, a Frontier Town in the Kingdom of Golconda, till the Conqueſt of Carnatica by Mirgimola.

The two and twentieth, we travel'd ſeven Leagues, and came to lye at Emelipata. When we were about half the way, we met above four thouſand perſons, men and women; and above twenty Palleki's, in every one whereof was an Idol. They were adorn'd with Coverings of Sattin, purfled with Gold, and Velvets with Gold and Silver Fringe. Some of theſe Palleki's were born by four men; others by eight, and ſome by twelve, according as the Idols were in bigneſs and weight. On each ſide of the Pallekie, walk'd a man, with a large Fan in his hand, five Foot in compaſs, made of Oſtriches and Peacocks Feathers, of various colours. The handle of the Fan was five or ſix foot long, laid all over with Gold and Silver, about the thickneſs of a French Crown. Every one was officious to carry one of thoſe Fans, to keep the Flies from the Idols Face. There was another Fan, which was carried cloſe by the Idol, ſomewhat larger than the Former, without a handle, and was born juſt like a Target. It was adorn'd with Feathers of ſeveral colours, and little Bells of Gold and Silver, round about the Edges. He that carried it went always near the Idol upon the ſame ſide, to ſhade the Idol; for to have ſhut the Curtains would have been too hot. Ever and anon, he that carried that ſort of Fan, brandiſh'd it in the air, to make the Bells ring; which they preſum'd to be a kind of Paſtime to the Idol. All theſe people with their Idols came from Brampour, and the adjacent parts, and were going to viſit their great Ram, that is to ſay, their chief God, who ſtands in a Pagod in the Territories of the King of Carnatica. They had been about thirty days upon the Road, and were to travel fourteen or fifteen more, before they came to this Pagod. One of my Servants, who was a Native of Brampour, and of the ſame Superſtition, beg'd me to give him leave to bear his gods Company, telling me withall, that he had made a vow long ſince to go this Pilgrimage. I was conſtrain'd to let him go. For had I not given him leave, I knew he would have taken it, by reaſon he had much acquaintance and kindred among the Rabble. About two months after, he return'd again to us to Surat, and becauſe he had faithfully ſerv'd Monſieur Jardin and my ſelf, we made no ſcruple to take him again. Asking him ſome queſtions about his Pilgrimage, he related to me this following paſſage: ſix days after he left me, all the Pilgrims had made an account to go and lye at ſuch a village, to which before they came they were to croſs a River, that has but little Water in Summer, ſo that it is eaſily fordable. But when it rains in India, the Water falls with ſuch a force, that it ſeems to be a perpendicular deluge; and in leſs than an hour or two a ſmall River ſhall ſwell three or four foot high. The Rains having overtaken thoſe Pilgrims, the River was ſwell'd in that manner, that it was impoſſible to paſs it that day. Now becauſe it is not neceſſary for Travellers in India to carry proviſions, eſpecially for the Idolaters, who never eat any thing that ever had life; in regard that in the leaſt village you may meet with abundance of Rice, Meal, Butter, Milk Meats, Lentils, and other Pulſe, beſides Sugar, and Sweet-Meats, dry and moiſt. The people were very much ſurpriz'd, having no victuals, when they came and ſaw the River ſwell'd. In ſhort, they had nothing to give their Children to eat; which caus'd great lamentations among them. In this extremity the chiefeſt of their Prieſts ſat himſelf down in the midſt of them, and covering himſelf with a ſheet, began to cry out that.

they who would have any Victuals ſhould come to him; when they came, he ask'd every one what they would have, whether Rice, or Meal, and for how many perſons; and then lifting up the corner of the ſheet, with a great Ladle he diſtributed to every one that which they ask'd for; ſo that the whole multitude of four thouſand Souls was fully ſatisfi'd. My Servant did not only tell me this ſtory, but going ſeveral times afterwards to Brampour, where I was known to the chief men in the City, I enquir'd of ſeveral, who ſwore to me by their Ram, Ram, that it was truth. Though I am not bound to believe it.

The twenty-third, we arriv'd at Doupar, after we had travel'd eight leagues, and croſs'd ſeveral Torrents.

The twenty-fourth, we travel'd eight leagues, and came to Tripante; where there is a great Pagod upon a Hill, to which there is a circular aſcent of Free-ſtone every way; the leaſt Stone being ten foot long, and three broad: and there are ſeveral Figures of Damons in the Pagod. Amongſt the reſt, there is the Statue of Venus, ſtanding upright, with ſeveral laſcivious Figures about her; all which Figures are of one piece of Marble; but the Sculpture is very ordinary.

The twenty-fifth, we travel'd eight leagues, and came to Mamli.

The twenty-ſixth, we travel'd eight leagues more, and came to lye at Machelis.

The twenty-ſeventh, we travel'd not above three leagues, being to croſs a wide River in Boats like Panniers; which uſually takes up half the day; for when you come to the River ſide, there is neither Pannier nor any thing elſe to croſs it. There was only one man, with whom we bargain'd for our paſſage; who to try whether our money be good or no, made a great fire and threw it into the flame, as he does to all others that paſs that way. If among the Roupies which he receives, he meets with any one that turns a little black, you muſt give him another, which he preſently heats red hot; when he finds his Money to be good, he calls to his Companions to fetch the Manequin or Flasket-Boat, which lay hid before in ſome other part of the River. For theſe ſort of people are ſo cunning, that if they deſcry any Paſſengers afar off, they will row their Manequin to the other ſide, becauſe they will not be conſtrain'd to carry any perſon over without Money. But the Money being paid, the man that receives it; calls his Companions together, who take the Boat upon their Shoulders, and when they have launch'd it into the River, they fetch their Paſſengers and goods from the other ſide.

The twenty-eighth, having travel'd five leagues, we came to a place call'd Dabir-Pinta.

The twenty-ninth, after twelve hours travel, we came to lye at Holcora.

The thirtieth, we travell'd eight leagues, and came to ſpend our night at Peridera.

The firſt of October, after we had travel'd ten leagues, we came to lye at Atenara. This is a Houſe of Pleaſure, which the preſent King's Mother caus'd to be built. There are many Chambers in a great Piazza belonging to it, for the convenience of Travellers.

You muſt take notice, that in all the Countries where we travel'd as well in the Kingdom of Carnatica, as the Kingdoms of Golconda and Viſapour, there are no Phyſicians, but ſuch as attend Kings and Princes. As for the common people, after the Rains are fall'n, and that it is time to gather Herbs, you ſhall ſee every morning the good women of the Towns going into the Fields, to gather ſuch Simples which they know to be proper for ſuch Diſeaſes as reign in the Family. 'Tis very true, that in great Cities there may be one or two men that have ſome common Receipts, who go every morning, and ſit in ſome known places, to give their Remedies to ſuch as enquire for them, whether they be Potions or Plaiſters. Firſt they feel their Pulſes, and then giving them ſome remedy, for which they do not demand the value of ſix pence; they alſo at the ſame time mutter certain words between their teeth.

The ſecond of October, we had but four leagues to travel before we came to Golconda. We went immediately to the Lodging of a young Dutch Chirurgion, belonging to the King, whom the Sieur Chereur, Envoy from Batavia, had had left at Golconda upon the King's earneſt entreaty. The King was always very much troubl'd with the head-ach: For which reaſon the Phyſitians had order'd that he ſhould be let blood in four places under the tongue; but there was no perſon that would undertake to do it: for the Natives of the Country underſtand nothing of Chirurgery. Now before that Peter de Lan, for that was the Dutch-Chirurgion's name, was entertain'd in the King's ſervice, he was ask'd whether he could let blood? To which he anſwer'd, that there was nothing ſo eaſy in Chirurgery. Some few days after the King ſent for him, and gave him to underſtand that he was reſolv'd to be let blood the next day in four parts under the tongue, as the Phyſitians had order'd, but he ſhould take a care of not drawing away above eight ounces. De Lan returning the next day to Court, was lead into a Chamber by three Eunuchs, and four Old-women, who carri'd him to a Bath, and after they had undreſt him, and waſh'd him, eſpecially his hands; they anointed him with Aromatick-drugs, and inſtead of his own European-Clothes, they brought him a Robe according to the faſhion of the Countrey. After that, they brought him before the King; where he found four little Porringers of Gold, which the Phyſitians, who were preſent, had weigh'd. In ſhort, he let the King blood under the tongue in four parts, and perform'd his buſineſs ſo well, that when the blood came to be weigh'd, it weigh'd but bare eight ounces. The King was ſo ſatisfi'd with the Operation, that he gave the Chirurgion three-hunder'd Pagods, which comes to almoſt ſeven-hunder'd Crowns. The Young-Queen and the Queen-Mother underſtanding what he had done, were reſolv'd to be let-blood too. But I believe it was rather out of a curioſity to ſee the Chirurgion, than out of any neceſſity which they had to be let-blood. For he was a handſom young-man; and perhaps they had never ſeen a ſtranger neer at hand, for at a diſtence, it is no improbable thing, in regard the Women are ſhut up in ſuch places where they may ſee, but not be ſeen. Upon this, de Lan was carri'd into a Chamber where the ſame Old-women that he had waited on him before he let the King blood, ſtript up his arm, and waſh'd it, but more eſpecially his hands; which when they were dry, they rubb'd again with ſweet-Oils as before. That being done, a Curtain was drawn, and the Queen ſtretching out her arm through a hole, was let-blood; as was the Queen-Mother afterwards in the ſame manner. The Queen gave him fifty Pagods, and the Queen-Mother thirty, with ſome pieces of Cloath of Gold.

Two days after we went to wait upon the Nahab's Son, but were told we could not ſpeak with him that day; the next day receiving the ſame anſwer, we were advertiz'd upon enquiry, that we might wait long enough in that manner; that he was a young Lord that never ſtirr'd from the King; or that if he did leave the Court, it was only to keep his Miſſes company in his own Haram. The young Chirurgion ſeeing us ſo delaid, offer'd to ſpeak to the King's firſt Phyſitian, who was alſo of the King's Council, and who had teſtify'd a great affection toward the Batavian-Envoy, and for de Lan himſelf; for which reaſon he thought he might embrace an opportunity to do him a kindneſs. In ſhort, de Lan had no ſooner ſpoke to him, but he ſent for us, and having, after much civilty ſhewn us, inform'd himſelf of the cauſe of our coming, he deſir'd us to ſhew him our Pearls, which we did the next day. After he had view'd them, he made us ſeal them up again in our own bags: for all that is preſented to the King muſt be ſeal'd with the Merchants-Seal; and when the King has had a ſight of the Commodity, it is ſeal'd up with his own Seal, to prevent any fraud. Thereupon we left the Pearls, ſo ſeald up, in his hands, who promis'd to ſhew them to the King, and to give us a good account of the truſt we had put into his hands.

The next day about nine of the Clock before noon we went to the River to ſee how they waſh the King's and the Great Noble-men's Elephants. The Elephant goes up to the belly in the water, and lying down upon one ſide, with his trunk he throws the water ſeveral times upon that ſide which lies out of the water; and when he has ſoak'd himſelf ſufficiently, the Maſter comes with a kind of a Pumice-ſtone, and rubbing the Elephant's-skin, cleanſes it from all the filth that clings to it. Here ſome believe, that when this creature is once laid down, it cannot riſe of its ſelf; which is contrary to what I have ſeen. For when the Master has well-cleans'd the one side, he commands the Elephant to turn the other, which the beast immediately does; and when both sides are well-wash'd, he comes out of the River, and stays a-while upright upon the bank-side to dry himself. Then comes the Master with a pot full of some red or yellow colour, and streaks the best in the forehead, about the eyes, upon the breast, and all behind, rubbing him afterwards with Oil of Coco's to strengthen the nerves; and some when all is done, he fastens a gilt-Plate upon their foreheads.

The fifteenth, the chief Phistian sent for us, and return'd us our bags again, seal'd with the King's Signet, wherewith his Majesty had seal'd them after he had look'd upon them. He demanded the price; which we told him. Whereupon, an Eunuch that stood by him, and wrote down every thing, wondring at the high-price of the Pearls, told us that we took the King of Golconda's Courtiers for persons that have neither knowledg nor judgment; and that he saw every day things of greater value brought to the King. I briskly retorted upon the Eunuch, that he was better skill'd in the price of a young Slave, than the value of a Jewel; and so saying, we put up our Pearls; and return'd to our Lodging. The next day we set out from Golconda for Surat, in which Road there is nothing considerable but what I have already describ'd, only this is to be remember'd, that we were not gone above five days journey from Golconda, but the King, who had not heard in two days after we were gone, what I had retorted upon the Eunuch, sent four or five Horse-men after us with Orders, if they overtook us, to bring us back: but in regard we were got one days journey into the Territories of the Mogul before one of the Horse-men overtook us, (for the rest staid upon the Frontiers of the two Kingdoms;) I, that knew the humour of the Countrey very well, made answer for my self and Companion, that at that time our business would not permit us; and that therefore we begg'd in most humble manner his Majesty's pardon; and afterwards I made my Companion allow my reasons.

Being arriv'd at Surat, Monsieur de Jardin dy'd of an overflowing of choler. And I made a full account to have gone to Agra to Sha-jehan who then reign'd. But at the same instant the Nahab, Sha-Est-Kan, the King's Brother-in-Law, and Governor of the Province of Guzerat, sent one of the principal Officers of his House to me from Amadabat, to tell me he undrestood I had some extraordinary Jewels to sell; for which reason he would be glad to see me, and that he would pay me as much for them as the King should do. I receiv'd this Message while Sieur de Jardin lay sick, and the ninth day after his death I got to Amadabat, and spake with the Nahab. Now in regard he was a man that understood Jewels perfectly well, we presently came to an agreement: so that we had no dispute together, but about the quality of the Coin to be paid. He allow'd me two sorts to choose, Roupies of Gold, or Roupies of Silver: but the Prince seeming to intimate to me that he should not be well-pleas'd to let such a Sum in Silver to be seen to go out of his House, he wish'd I would rather accept my payment in Roupies of Gold, that made not such a great heap. I consented to his desire; and he shew'd me very fair Gold, and many Roupies, that had not seen the Sun in a long time. But in regard the price currant of a Roupy of Gold, is not above fourteen Roupies of Silver, and for that he would have had me taken my Roupies at fourteen and a half, or at least for fourteen and a quarter, it had like to have spoil'd our bargain; for I gave him to understand, that in so large a sum, it would not quit cost to lose a fourth part in every Roupy of Gold. At length to please him, I was forc'd to take the Gold at fourteen Roupies of Silver and an eighth part. Thus a Prince otherwise magnificent and generous, yet in matter of buying and selling, woulds needs approve himself to be a good Husband. While I stay'd at Amadabat, he sent me every day to my Lodging four Silver Plates of Pilaw, and other excellent Dyet; and one day that the King had sent him as many Apples as ten or twelve men could carry, he sent me as many as for their rarity at Amadabat, were worth three or four hundred Roupies. Besides all this, he gave me a compleat Habit of Honour, with a Sword and a Cangiar, worth a thousand Roupies; and resolving also to give me a Horse, he ask'd me what kind

kind of one I would have. I told him, ſince he was pleas'd to give me my choice, that I rather deſir'd a young lively Horſe, rather than an old one. Thereupon he ſent me one that was ſo given to bounding and prancing, that he threw a young Hollander out of the Saddle; but upon my deſire to have him chang'd, he ſent me another, which I ſold afterwards for four hundred Roupies.

From Amadabat I return'd to Surat; from Surat I travel'd again to Golconda, and thence to the Mine to buy Diamonds. From whence returning back for Surat, I reſolv'd for Perſia.

CHAP. XX.

My return from Surat to Ormus.

BEing upon my return to Surat from the Diamond Mine, I underſtood that the War was proclaim'd between the Engliſh and the Hollanders, and the latter would ſend no more Ships into Perſia. The Engliſh alſo gave out the ſame reſolutions; for indeed they had ſent four Ships into Perſia, which they expected back every hour. While I was thus in fear of ſtaying long in a place where I had no buſineſs, there arriv'd at Surat five great Dutch Ships from Batavia; three of which being rather Men of War, than Merchant-Men, were order'd to be unladen with all ſpeed, with an intention to look out for the four Engliſh Veſſels that were expected out of Perſia. The other two were appointed to follow two or three days after, being in that time to take in proviſions for the whole Fleet.

In one of thoſe two Veſſels I embark'd, and ſetting ſayl the eighth of January, we came before Din the twelfth, where we overtook the other three Ships. There it was debated at a Council of War, what courſe to ſteer to meet the Engliſh; and it was reſolv'd, that we ſhould ſteer away for Scindi, where we arriv'd the twentieth of the ſame month, and ſtay'd there till the twenty-eighth, and then ſetting ſail with a fair wind, we landed at Gomron the ſeventh of March.

TRAVELS IN INDIA.

The Second Book.

Containing an Hiſtorical and Political Deſcription of the Empire of the Great Mogul.

CHAP. I.

A Relation of the laſt Wars of Indolſtan; which gives an inſight into the preſent Eſtate of the Empire and Court of the Moguls.

I Have written this Hiſtory in ſuch manner, as I knew things to be tranſacted, during my ſtay in the Country; leaving it to the Reader to make his own reflections as he pleaſes; it being ſufficient for me to make a faithful deſcription of the Potent Empire of the Moguls, according to the Obſervations I have taken upon the place.

This great and vaſt Empire, which contains the greateſt part of Indolſtan, and which extends from the Mountains on this ſide the River Indus, to the Mountains on the other ſide of Ganges; borders Eaſtward upon the Kingdoms of Aracan, Tipra, and Aſia. Toward the Weſt upon Perſia, and the Usbeg Tartars. Southward upon the Kingdoms of Golconda and Viſapour. Northward it runs up as far as the Mountain Caucaſus. North-Eaſtward the Kingdom of Bantam, whence comes our Musk, parts it. North-Weſtward it borders upon the Country of Chegathay, or the Usbegs.

They are call'd Moguls, that is, white of complexion; for the laſt Conquerors of the Indies where Whites; the Natives being all Brown, or Olive-colour.

Aureng-zeb, the preſent Emperor, is the eleventh in a direct line, of the Deſcendants from the great Temur-Leng, commonly call'd Tamerlane; the extent and renown of whoſe Conqueſts, from China to Poland, has exceeded all the actions of the greateſt Captains of the former Ages. His Succeſſors compleated the Conqueſt of all India between the two Rivers, with the deſtruction of ſeveral Kings. So that Aureng-zeb has at this time under his Dominion, the Territories of Gouzerat, Decan-Dehly, Multan, Lahor, Kaſhemire, Bengala, and many other Territories; not to mention ſeveral Raja's, or petty Kings, who pay him Tribute, and are his Vaſſals. The Succeſſion of the Kings of India is as follows:

1. Termur-Leng, that is to ſay, the Lame, becauſe one of his Legs was ſhorter than the other, lies buried at Samarchand, in the Country of Chegathay, or the Usbeg Tartars, being the place of his Nativity.

2. Miran-

2. Miram-Cha, the Son of Temurleng.
3. Sultan Mahomet, the Son of Miram-Cha.
4. Sultan Abouſaid-Mirza, the Son of Mahomet.
5. Hameth-Sheck, the Son of Sultan Abouſaid.
6. Sultan Babur, that is, the Valiant Prince, the firſt Mogul that was of greateſt power in India. He dy'd in the year 1532.
7. Homajon, that is, the Happy, the Son of Sultan Babur, dyed in the year 1552.
8. Abdul Feta Gelal-Eddin Mahomet, commonly call'd Akabar, that is, the Great, reign'd fifty four years, and dyed in the year 1605.
9. Sultan Selim, otherwiſe call'd Jehan-guir Patſha, that is, the Victorious Emperor of the World, ſucceeded Akabar his Father, and dy'd 1627. He had four Sons, the eldeſt nam'd Sultan Koſrou, the ſecond Sultan Kourom, the third Sultan Perviz, the fourth Cha-Daniel.
10. Sultan Kourom, the ſecond of the four, ſucceeded Jehan-guir his Father; and was acknowledg'd by all the Nobility, at the Caſtle of Agra, by the Name of Cha-Bedin Mahomed, but he would be call'd Cha-jehan, that is, King of the World.
11. Aureng-zeb, that is, the Ornament of the Throne, is the preſent Monarch.

The following Figure ſhews you what ſorts of pieces the Kings cauſe to be thrown among the people when they come to the Throne. They repreſent the Arms or Signets of the Kings which I have nam'd. The biggeſt, in the middle, was Cha-jehan's, the tenth King. Theſe pieces are moſt of them Silver; there being very few of Gold. And as for Aureng-zeb, he never coin'd any particular pieces to throw away at his Coronation.

The Great Mogul is without all queſtion the richeſt and moſt potent Monarch of Aſia; the Territories which he poſſeſſes, being his own Hereditary Poſſeſſion; and being abſolute Maſter of all the Territories whence he receives his Revenues. For in the Territories of this Prince, the great Lords are but the Royal Receivers, who give an account of the King's Revenues to the Governours of the Provinces, and they to the chief Treaſurers and Controllers of the Exchequer.

CHAP. II.

Of the Sickneſs and ſuppos'd Death of Cha-jehan, King of India, and the Rebellion of the Princes his Sons.

THis great King had reign'd above forty years, not ſo much as a King over his Subjects, but rather as a Father over his Family and Children. Inſomuch, that during his Reign there was ſuch a ſtrictneſs in the Civil Government, and particularly for the ſecurity of the High-ways, that there was never any occaſion to put any man to death for Robbery. In his declining years he fanci'd a young Lady of an extraordinary Beauty, that was not above thirteen years of age; and becauſe the ſtrength of nature would not permit him to ſatisfie his paſſion, he took certain provocatives, which were ſo hot, that he fell thereupon into a diſtemper that had almoſt kill'd him. This oblig'd him to ſhut himſelf up in his Haram, together with his Women, for two or three months; during which time he appear'd very rarely to the people, and that at a great diſtance too, which made them believe he was dead. For they are oblig'd by Cuſtom to ſhew themſelves to the people three times in a week, or in fifteen days at moſt.

Cha-Jehan had ſix Children, four Sons and two Daughters. The Name of the eldeſt was Dara-Cha, the ſecond was call'd Sultan Sujah, the third Aureng-zeb, and the fourth Morad-Bakche. The eldeſt of his two Daughters was call'd Begum-Saheb, and the name of the ſecond was Rauchenara Begum.

Cha-jehan lov'd all his four Sons alike, and had made them Governours or Vice-Roys of four of his principal Provinces or Kingdoms. Dara-Cha, who was the eldeſt, ſtay'd with his Father in Dehly, and had the Government of the Kingdom of Sandi, into which he put a Deputy. Sultan Sujah had for his ſhare the Government of Bengala. Aureng-zeb was Vice-Roy of the Kingdom of Decan; and Morad-Bakche of the Kingdom of Guzerat. But though Cha-jehan endeavour'd to give equal content to his four Sons, their Ambition was not ſatisfi'd with this diviſion, but ruin'd all the good deſigns which ſo kind a Father had lay'd to preſerve peace among his Children.

Cha-jehan being thus ſick, and retir'd into the Womens quarter, without ſhewing himſelf for many days; the report ran that he was dead, and that Dara-Cha conceal'd his death, to gain time to provide for himſelf, and to ſecure the Empire. True it is, that the King believing he ſhould dye, commanded Dara-Cha to call together all the Omrahs or Lords, and to ſeat himſelf upon the Throne, which belong'd to him, as the eldeſt of his Brothers. He alſo teſtifi'd the deſire he had to ſee him quietly ſettled in the peaceable poſſeſſion of the Empire. And this intention of his was look'd upon as the more juſt, in regard the other three Brothers had been for ſome time obſerv'd to have leſs reſpect for their Father, than Dara-Cha. Dara-Cha, who honour'd and reſpected the King with a real tenderneſs, made anſwer to the King, that he deſir'd of Heaven nothing more than the preſervation of his Majeſties life, and that ſo long as Heaven ſhould continue that preſervation, he ſhould take it to be a greater honour to continue himſelf a Subject, than to aſcend the Throne. And indeed he was never abſent from his Father, that he might be the better able to ſerve him in his ſickneſs; and becauſe he would be preſent upon all occaſions, ſions, he lay by his Fathers Bed-ſide, upon a Tapeſtry ſpread upon the ground.

During the falſe report of the death of Cha-jehan, his three other Sons immediately rebell'd, every one laying claim to their Fathers Crown. Morat-Bakche the youngeſt, who had the Government of Guzerat, ſent away Forces immediately to beſiege Surat, the moſt conſiderable Port, and moſt frequented of any other all over India. The City made no reſiſtance, for the Walls are very weak, and broken down in ſeveral places. But they defended the Citadel, where the Treaſure was, very ſtoutly; though the young Ambitious Prince did all he could to make himſelf Maſter of it. Chabas-Kan, one of his Eunuchs, who was General of his Army, an induſtrious and active perſon, and who carri'd on the Siege with all the experience of an old Captain; when he ſaw he could not carry the Caſtle by main force, caus'd it to be undermin'd in two places, by the aſſiſtance of an European Engineer, which took effect; ſo that upon the twenty-ninth of December, 1659, he threw down a good part of the Walls, and fill'd up the Moat; which very much terrifi'd the beſieg'd. But they preſently recover'd their courage, and though they were but a ſmall number, they defended themſelves for above forty days, to the great Dammage and ſlaughter of Morat-Bakche's Army. Chabas-Kan, provok'd at ſuch a vigorous reſiſtance, fought for all the Wives and Children, Parents and Kindred of the Canoneers that were within the Caſtle, to place them at the head of his men, when they made their approaches. He alſo ſent one of the Brothers of the Governour of the place, to offer him advantageous conditions. But the Governor, being a very loyal perſon, and uncertain of the Kings death, rejected all his offers. The Eunuch perceiving the Reſolution of the Governour, threaten'd the beſieged to kill all their Wives and Children, Parents and Kindred, if they did not ſurrender the place the next day. But neither did any of thoſe conſiderations prevail, till at length the breach being made wider, and the number of defandants decreaſing, the Governor ſurrender'd upon honourably conditions; which were punctually perform'd by Chabas-Kan, who ſeiz'd upon all the Treaſure, and carried it to Amadabat; where Morat-Bakche was buſily employ'd in ſqueezing the people to get Money.

The news of the taking Surat being brought to this Prince, he preſently provided himſelf a Throne, and ſitting upon it on the day which was appointed for the Ceremony, he caus'd himſelf to be declared King, not only of Guzerat, but of all the Dominions of Cha-jehan his Father. At the ſame time he alſo coin'd Money, and ſent Governors into all the Cities. But his tottering Throne, not being well fix'd, fell ſoon to the Ground; and the youngeſt of all the Brothers, for having uſurp'd a Scepter that no ways appertain'd to him, was confin'd to a ſevere impriſonment. Prince Dara-Cha fain would have reliev'd Surat; but it was impoſſible. For beſides that he was buſied in the aſſiſtance of his Father the King, his ſecond Brother Sultan-Sujah, more powerful than Morat-Bakche, found him far more work to do. He was already advanc'd into the Kingdom of Lahor, having abſolutely reduc'd the Kingdom of Bengala. All that Dara-Cha could do, was to ſend Soliman Checour his eldeſt Son, with an Army againſt Sultan Sujah. The young Prince having defeated his Uncle, and driven him back into Bengala, the Frontiers whereof he ſecur'd with good Garriſons return'd to Dara-Cha his Father. In the mean time Morat-Bakche, acknowledg'd for King in the Kingdom of Guzerat, bends all his Force and Counſels to make himſelf Emperor of the Indies, to deſtroy his Brothers, and to fix his Throne either in Agra or Jehanabat Whiles theſe things paſs'd, Aureng-zeb as ambitious, but more crafty than his Brothers, lets them alone to kindle the firſt Fires; and conceals his own deſigns, which afterwards appear'd ſo much to the damage of the reſt. At firſt he feign'd to lay no claim to the Empire, but liv'd a private life, like a Dervich, or Religious Hermit. And the better to act his part, he declar'd to his younger Brother Morat-Bakche, whom he ſaw to be ſo ambitious, how willing he ſhould be to aſſiſt him in his deſigns; telling him, that becauſe he merited the Empire by his Valour, he would aid him with his Money and his Forces to overthrow Dara-Cha, who only ſtood in his way. The young Prince, blinded with the hopes of his good Fortune, eaſily belive'd Aureng-zeb. And

ſo joining Forces together, he advances towards Agra, to make himſelf Maſter of that City. Dara-Cha marches to meet them; but the Battel was as imprudently mannag'd by him, as fortunately fought by his Brothers. For Dara-Cha, confiding too much in the principal Officers of his Army, againſt the advice of his General, who was his chief Miniſter of State, and faithful to him; thought himſelf ſure of the Victory, by falling on before his Brothers had time to repoſe themſelves. The firſt onſet was very rude and bloody, where Morat-Bakche, full of fire and courage, fighting like a Lyon, was ſhot with five Arrows into the body. The Victory leaning to Dara-Cha, Aureng-zeb retreated; but ſoon turn'd head again, when he ſaw thoſe Traytors advancing to his aid, who were in the Army of Dara-Cha, and who had treacherouſly deſerted him, after he had loſt his beſt Officers and his General. With this aſſiſtance Aureng-zeb renews the fight againſt Dara-Cha; who ſeeing himſelf betray'd, and unable to maintain the fight with the ſmall number of men which he had left, retreats to Agra, where the King his Father was, who began to mend. The King adviſ'd his Son to retire to the Fortreſs of Debly, and to carry the Treaſure that was in Agra with him; which he did without delay. Thus the Victory fell intirely to Aureng-zeb and Morat-Bakche, who before the end of the Battel, being weaken'd with the loſs of blood, was forc'd to retire to his Tent, to have his wounds dreſt. Now it was an eaſie thing for Aureng-zeb to gain thoſe Traytors, as well by reaſon of the vaſt Treaſures which he had, as alſo for that the Indians are very inconſtant, and want generoſity. Beſides, the Commanders are generally Fugitive Perſians, perſons of little worth, who are altogether for them that give moſt. Cha-Eſt-Kan, who was Uncle to theſe four Princes, whoſe Mother was the King's Siſter, went over to Aureng-zeb with the greateſt part of the principal Commanders that had adher'd to Dara-Cha, and Morat-Bakche, and had forſaken their Maſters. Morat-Bakche then began to ſee his Error in having truſted Aureng-zeb, who ſeeing himſelf favour'd by Fortune, loſt no time to accompliſh his ends. Thereupon Morat-Bakche ſends to his Brother for the half of the Treaſure that he had ſeiz'd, that he might retire to Guzerat. But Aureng-zeb for anſwer aſſur'd him, that he had no other deſign than to advance him to the Throne, to which purpoſe he deſir'd to confer with him by word of Mouth. Morat-Bakche in order to that, finding himſelf indifferently well recover'd of his wounds, goes to viſit his Brother, who kindly welcom'd him, extoll'd his courage, and told him he deſerv'd the beſt Empire of the world. The young Prince was charm'd by the melody of ſuch ſweet language, while his Eunuch, Shabas-Kan, did all he could to make him ſenſible of the ſnares that were laid for him. But when Morat-Bakche ſhould have taken the Eunuchs advice, it was too late; for Aureng-zeb had already laid his plot to deſtroy him. He invites Morat-Bakche to a Feaſt; and the more the one excuſes himſelf, the more the other preſſes him to come. The young Prince perceiving he would take no denial, reſolv'd to go, for fear of diſcovering the miſtruſt he had, although he verily believ'd that that day would be the laſt of his life, and that ſome deadly poyſon was brew'd for him. However, he was deceiv'd in that particular, for Aureng-zeb not aiming at his life then, contented himſelf only to deprive him of his liberty, and ſo inſtead of advancing him to the Throne, ſent him away, to be ſafely kept in the Caſtle of Gavaleor.

CHAP. III.

Of the Impriſonment of Cha-jehan, and how he was puniſh'd by Aureng-zeb his third Son, for the injuſtice he had done Prince Boulaki his Nephew, the Grandchild of Gehan-guir, to whom, as to the Son of the Eldeſt Son, the Empire of the Moguls belong'd.

GEhan-guir, King of India, Son of Achbar, and Grandchild to Houmajon, reign'd very peaceably during the ſpace of twenty-three years, equally belov'd both by his Subjects and Neighbours. But his life ſeem'd too long to his two Sons, who were both ambitious to reign. The eldeſt rais'd a powerful Army near Lahor, with an intention to have ſurpriz'd his Father, and to have poſſeſs'd himſelf of the Throne by force. The King incens'd at the inſolence of his Son, reſolv'd to chaſtiſe him; meets him with a conſiderable Army, deſeats him, and takes him Priſoner, with many of the moſt conſiderable Nobility that adher'd to him. After which, out of a natural affection to his Children, he ſav'd his life, but put out his Eyes. And when he was blind he always kept him about his perſon, with an intention to have prefer'd his eldeſt Son Boulaki to the Crown, whoſe Father had already many Sons, but all very young. But Sultan Courom, his ſecond Son, believing it his right to be prefer'd before a Nephew, reſolv'd to leave no ſtone unturn'd to remove him from his hopes, and to ſettle himſelf in poſſeſſion before the death of his Father. However he conceal'd his intentions from him, appearing outwardly very obedient to his Father, who always kept about him the Children of his eldeſt Son. By that ſubmiſſion he more eaſily brought about his deſigns; for having by that means gain'd the good will of his Father, he obtain'd leave to carry along with him the blind Prince, his eldeſt Brother, to his Government of the Kingdom Decan. He laid before his Father, that it would be far better to remove from his ſight, an object that could not chuſe but be ſo afflicting to him; and that the prince himſelf, being blind, would ſpend the reſt of his days more comfortably in Decan, where he might be more retir'd. The King not penetrating into his deſign, readily conſented to his requeſt. Who when he had that Poor Prince in his Clutches, made him away with that ſecreſie which was not to be diſcover'd; and under the moſt plauſible pretence imaginable, to conceal him from the eyes of men.

After the death of the blind Prince, Sultan Courom took upon him the name of Cha-jehan, that is, King of the World; and to uphold his Title, he rais'd an Army to finiſh what his Brother had begun, which was to dethrone his Father, and to take poſſeſſion of the Empire. The King incens'd as well at the death of his Son, as at the attempt againſt his own perſon, ſent a conſiderable Army to chaſtiſe Courom for ſo bold an Enterprize. But the rebellious Prince finding himſelf to weak too ſtand his Fathers force, quitted the Kingdom of Decan, and with certain Vagabonds that follow'd him, wander'd from place to place, till he came to Bangala, where he rais'd an Army with an intention to give the King Battle. To which purpoſe, paſſing the Ganges, he marches directly toward the Kingdom of Lahor; whom the King in perſon met, with an Army much more numerous and ſtronger than his. But Gehan-guir being old, and wearied with the troubles that his Sons had put him to, dy'd by the way, leaving Cha-jehan at liberty to purſue his own deſigns. However before he expir'd, the good King had time to recommend his Grandchild Boulaki to Aſouf-Kan, his Generaliſſimo and prime Miniſter of State, who was Protector of the Empire. He commanded alſo all the Officers of the Army to acknowledg him for King, as being the lawful Heir; declaring Sultan Komrom a Rebel, and incapable of the Succeſſion. Moreover he made Aſouf-Kan to ſwear in particular, that he would never ſuffer Boulaki to be put to death, which way ſoever affairs went; which Aſouf-Kan ſware upon his Thigh; and as religiouſly obſerv'd as to the Article of not put-putting him to death; but not as to that of helping him to the Crown, which he design'd for Cha-jehan, who had married his eldeſt Daughter, the Mother of four Princes, and two Princeſſes.

The news of the Kings death being known at Court, caus'd a general lamentation. And preſently all the Grandees of the Kingdom ſet themſelves to execute the Kings Will and Teſtament, acknowledging Sultan Boulaki for Emperor, who was very young. That Prince had two Couſin-Germans, who were both of them by the Kings conſent turn'd Chriſtians, and made publick profeſſion thereof. Thoſe two young Princes, being very apprehenſive, perceiv'd that Aſouf-Kan, Father-in-Law to Cha-jehan, and Father of Cha-Eſt-Kan, had no good intentions toward the young King, and gave him notice of it; which coſt them their lives, and the King the loſs of his Dominions. For the young King, having no more wit than was agreeable to his age, openly declar'd to Aſouf-Kan what his Couſins had reveal'd to him in private, and ask'd the General whether it were true, that he had a deſign to ſet up his Uncle againſt him or no. Aſouf-Kan immediately accus'd the Reporters of falſity and impudence, and proteſted his fidelity to his King, and vow'd, to ſpend the laſt drop of his blood to preſerve him in the poſſeſſion of the Empire. However ſeeing his Conſpiracy diſcover'd, he reſolv'd to prevent the puniſhment; to which end having got the two Princes into his poſſeſſion, he put them both to death. But before that, in regard of his power in the Army and in the Empire, he had already brought over to Cha-jehans party the greateſt part of the Commanders and Lords of the Court; and the better to play his game, and deceive the young King, he rais'd a report that Cha-jehan was dead; and becauſe he had deſir'd to be buried near his Father Gehan-guir, the body was to be brought to Agra. This Stratagem being cunningly manag'd, Aſouf-Kan himſelf gave advice of the feign'd death to the King; telling the King withall, that it would be but a common civility for him to go and meet the Corps when it came within a League or two of the City, being an Honour due to a Prince of the Blood of the Moguls. All this while Cha-jehan kept himſelf incognito, till coming within ſight of the Army that lay about Agra, he caus'd himſelf to be put into a Coffin, wherein there was only a hole left for him to breath at. This Coffin being carri'd under a moving Tent, all the principal Officers who were of the plot with Aſouf-Kan, came to perform the uſual Ceremonies of State to the Body of the deceas'd Prince, while the young King was upon the way to meet the body. But then Aſouf-Kan finding it ſeaſonably to execute his deſign, caus'd the Coffin to be open'd, and Cha-jehan riſing up, and ſhewing himſelf to the eyes of all the Army, was ſaluted Emperor by all the Generals and other principal Officers, who had their Cue ready; ſo that the name of Cha-jehan running in a moment from one mans mouth to another, the Acclamation became publick, and the Empire was ſetled upon him. The young King hearing the news by the way, was ſo ſurpriz'd, that he thought of nothing but how to ſave himſelf by flight, being upon a ſudden forſaken by all his followers. And Cha-jehan not believing it any way neceſſary to purſue him, ſuffer'd him to wander a long time in India like a Fakir. At length he retir'd into Perſia, where he was magnificently receiv'd by Cha-Sefi, who allow'd him a penſion fit for ſo great a Prince, which he ſtill enjoys.

Cha-jehan having thus uſurp'd the Crown, the better to ſecure himſelf, and to ſtifle all Factions that might ariſe during the life of the lawful Prince, whom he had ſo unjuſtly deſpoil'd of his right, by degrees put to death all thoſe that had ſhew'n any kindneſs to his Nephew. So that the firſt part of his Reign was noted for many acts of cruelty, that blemiſh'd his Reputation. No leſs unfortunate was the end of his Reign. For as he had unjuſtly depriv'd the lawful Heir, of the Empire which belong'd to him; he was himſelf, while he yet liv'd, depriv'd of his Crown by Aureng-zeb his own Son, who kept him Priſoner in the Fortreſs of Agra.

For after Dara-Cha had loſt the Battel againſt his two Brothers, Aureng-zeb and Morat-Bakche in the Plain of Samonguir, and was treacherouſly abandoned by the principal Officers of the Army, he retir'd into the Kingdom of Lahor, with all the Treaſure which the confuſion of his affairs would ſuffer him to get together. And the King to reſiſt the violence of his victorious Sons, ſhut himſelf up in the Caſtle of Agra, to the end he might not be ſurpriz'd, but have time and leiſure to obſerve how far the inſolence of his Children would tranſport them. As for Aurengzeb, who had Morat Bakche ſafe enough, he enters Agra, feigning to believe a report that Chajehan was dead, that he might have liberty to get into the Fortreſs, where he ſaid one of the Omra's would make it out. The more he reported the death of Cha-jehan, the more did the King endeavour to let the people know he was alive. But finding both Power and Fortune had taken Aureng-zeb's party; and being alſo in great neceſſity for want of water, he ſent Fazel-Kan, grand Maſter of his Houſhold, to aſſure his Son that he was alive; and withal to tell him that it was the King's command, that he ſhould retire to his vice-Roy-ſhip in Decan, without putting him to any more vexation, and that upon his obedience, he would forgive whatever had paſt. Aurengzeb, firm in his reſolution, return'd for anſwer to Fazel-Kan, that he was certain that the King, his Father was dead, and that upon that account he had only taken Arms to ſecure the Crown to himſelf, which he thought he deſerv'd, as well as the reſt of his Brothers. That if his Father were living, he had too great a reſpect for him to undertake the leaſt enterprize that ſhould diſpleaſe him; and therefore that he might be certain he was not dead, he deſir'd to ſee him, and to kiſs his feet; and having ſo done, he would retire to his Government, and punctually obey his Commands. Fazel-Kan return'd this anſwer to the King, who declared that he ſhould be glad to ſee his Son, and ſent back Fazel-Kan, to tell him he ſhould be welcome. But Aureng-zeb more cunning than Cha-jehan, aſſur'd Fazel-Kan that he would not ſet his foot in the Caſtle, till the Garriſon that was in it ſhould be ſent away to make room for his men. For the Prince was afraid, and not without reaſon, if he ſhould adventure into a Fortreſs where he was not abſolute Maſter himſelf, leſt they ſhould ſeize his perſon, of which the King being apprehenſive, conſented to his propoſal, not being able to do better at that time. Thereupon the Garriſon which belong'd to Cha-jehan was ſent out of the Caſtle, and another of Aureng-zeb's enter'd, commanded by Sultan Mahomet the eldeſt of his Sons, to whom he gave order to ſecure his Father's perſon. When they were thus got in, and his Father ſafe, he delaid ſeeing his Father from day to day, waiting (as he gave out for excuſe) a kind opportunity for the enterview; and pretending his Aſtrologers did not preſently think it ſeaſonable, he retir'd into the Countrey, to a Houſe about two or three leagues from Agra, which very much diſpleaſed the people, who waited every day for the fortunate hour, from which they expected a concluſion of their miſeries by the Father and Son's diſcourſe together. But Aureng-zeb, who was in no great haſt to ſee his Father, took up another reſolution, which was to ſeize upon all his Fathers treaſure, which Dara-Sha had not time to carry away. He alſo ſhut up in the ſame Fortreſs Begum-Saheb his Siſter, to keep the King company, by whom ſhe was entirely belov'd: and took into his own hands all the wealth ſhe had got, by her Father's liberality.

Cha-jehan enrag'd to ſee himſelf us'd in that manner by his own Son, made an attempt to eſcape, and kill'd ſome of the Guards that oppos'd him; which caus'd Aureng-zeb more ſtrictly to confine him. In the mean time it was a wonderful thing to ſee that not one of the Servants of ſo great a King ſo much as offer'd to help him; that all his Subjects ſhould forſake him, and turn their eyes upon the riſing Sun; acknowledging only Aureng-zeb for King, while they ſeem'd to have forgotten Cha-jehan, though ſtill alive. Thus this great Monarch ſadly ended his days in Priſon, and dy'd in the Fortreſs of Agra in the year 1666 the laſt time that I was in India.

During his reign he had begun to build the City of Jehanabad, though he had not quite finiſh'd it, and therefore he deſir'd to ſee it once more before he dy'd; but Aureng-zeb would not give him leave, unleſs he would be content to go and come back by water, or elſe to be confin'd to the Caſtle of Jehanabad, as he was at Agra, which refuſal of his Son did ſo torment him, that it haſten'd his end. Which as ſoon as Aureng-zeb heard of, he came to Agra, and ſeiz'd upon all the Jewels, which he had not taken from his Father while he liv'd. Begum-Saheb had alſo a quantity of Jewels, which he had not taken from her when he put her into the Caſtle. But now, becauſe ſhe had formerly taken her Father's part, he found out a way to deprive her of them after a very plauſible manner; making a ſhew of beſtowing very great Honours and Careſſes upon his Siſter, and taking her along with him to Jehanabad. But in a ſhort time after we heard the news of her death; which prov'd, and all people ſuſpected her to have been poiſon'd.

CHAP. IV.

Of the Flight of Dara-cha to the Kingdoms of Scindi and Guzerat: Of the ſecond Battel which he fought againſt Aureng-zeb: His being taken Priſoner, and death.

Dara-cha having carri'd along with him the beſt part of the Gold and Silver which was in the Fortreſs of Agra by his Father's advice, and being got into the Kingdom of Lahor, was in good hopes to have rais'd an Army in a ſhort time to have ſtopt the proceedings of his Brother. His moſt faithful Servants and Friends had always accompani'd him in his misfortune. And as for his Eldeſt Son, Soliman Shekour, he went, with the Raja Roup, into the Territories of that Raja's own demeans, to levy men; carrying along with him five-millions of Roupies, which make of our Money ſeven-millions and 500000 Livres. But that great Sum opening the Raja Roup's eyes, he moſt treacherouſly and infamouſly ſeiz'd upon it; whereupon Soliman Chekour, fearing he ſhould proceed farther, and make ſome attempt upon his perſon, fled in all haſt into the Kingdom of Sireneguer, under the protection of the Raja Nakti-Rani, who more foully and baſely deliver'd him up ſometime after to Aureng-zeb.

Dara-cha having notice of the Raja Roup's treaſon, and ſeeing all his friends had forſook him, and were revolted to Aureng-zeb, quitted Lahor, and retir'd into the Kingdom of Scindi. Before he left the Fortreſs, he ſent all the Gold, Silver, Jewels and Wealth that was in the Fort, away by water to Baker, a Fort in the midſt of the River Indus. To guard all that Wealth, he left an Eunuch, and ſix-thouſand men, with all proviſions neceſſary for a Siege; after that he went to Scindi, where he left ſeveral great pieces of Cannon. Then he march'd through the Territories of the Raja of Kachnagana, who made him mountainous promiſes to no effect; then he came into the Kingdom of Guzerat, where the people receiv'd him as their lawful King and Heir to Cha-jehan. He ſent his Orders to all the Cities, and particularly to Surat, where he appointed a Governor; but the Governor of the Fortreſs, who was left there by Morat-Bakche, refus'd to ſubmit to Dara-cha, ſo that he was forc'd to let him alone.

In the mean time Dara-cha receiv'd news at Amadabat, that Jeſſomſeing, one of the moſt potent Raja's in all India, was fall'n off from Aureng-zeb. The ſame Raja alſo ſolicits him to advance with his Army. Dara-cha confiding in his words, follow'd his Counſel, and march'd to Emir, which was the place of Rendevouz appointed. But Raja Jeſſomſeing being regain'd by the perſwaſions of Raja Jeſſeing, more potant than himſelf, to favour Aureng-zeb, never met according to his promiſe; nor did he come till the laſt puſh; and then only with a deſign to betray the poor Prince. Thus the two Brothers meeting, they came to a Battel which laſted three dayes; but in the heat of all the Fight, Jeſſomſeing ſhewing an apparent treachery, went over to Aureng-zeb; upon which Dara-cha's Souldiers immediately fled. Dara-cha having thus loſt all his hopes, and finding Fortune contrary to all his expectations, fled away likewiſe with his Wives, ſome of his Children, and his moſt faithful Servants, in an equipage that drew compaſſion. But coming to Amadabat, the Governor having declar'd for Aureng-zeb, deni'd him entrance. Thereupon he diſcamp'd in the middle of the night, and took the road for Scindi.

He arriv'd at Scindi, with an intention to paſs into Perſia, where Cha-Abas the Second expected him with a magnificent Retinue, and a reſolution to have aſſiſted him him with Men and Money. But not daring to truſt himſelf by Sea; as he paſs'd through the Countrey of the Patanes, in the way to Candahar, he was unworthily betraid by one of the Lords of the Countrey, call'd Gion-Kan; who had been an Officer under the King his Father, and who having been condemn'd for his crimes by the mouth of his Father, and ready to be thrown under the Elephant's-feet, had been pardon'd at the interceſſion of Dara-cha. For an addition to his affliction, before he came to Gion-Kan's Houſe, he receiv'd the news of the death of that particular Wife which he lov'd moſt entirely, and which had always accompani'd him in his misfortunes. He underſtood that ſhe dy'd through heat and drowth, not being able to get a drop of water in the Countrey to refreſh her thirſt. The Prince was ſo mov'd at the news, that he fell down, like one that had been ſtruck quite dead; and when he came to himſelf, he tore his clothes in the exceſs of his grief: an ancient cuſtom ſtill continu'd in the Eaſt. He had always ſhew'd himſelf inſenſible upon all other occaſions of misfortune, but this fatal ſtroke ſo deeply pierc'd him, that he would receive no conſolation from his friends. After this, he clad himſelf according to his misfortune; and inſtead of a Turbant, he only put about his head a piece of coarſe Calicut. In this miſerable equipage he enter'd into the Houſe of the Traytor Gion-Kan, where being laid down to reſt himſelf upon a Field-bed, a new ſubject of ſorrow awak'd him. For Gion-Kan having a deſign to ſeize Sepper-Shekour, Dara-cha's ſecond Son, the young Prince, though but a Youth, made a bold reſiſtance, and with his Bow and Arrows laid three men upon the ground; but not being able to reſiſt a multitude, he was at length taken. Dara-cha waken'd with the noiſe, ſaw before his eyes his Son, whom they were leading toward him, with his hands ty'd behind him. Then the miſerable Father of the young Prince, no longer ~~mis~~doubting the horrid treaſon of Gion-Kan, could not refrain from letting fall in his paſſion thoſe expreſſions. Finiſh, ſaid he, ingrateful and infamous Villain as thou art, finiſh the work thou haſt begun; we are become Victims to bad fortune, and Aureng-zeb's unjuſt Ambition. But remember that I only deſerve death for having ſav'd thy life: for never Prince of the Royal Blood had his hands ty'd behind him before. Gion-Kan in ſome meaſure mov'd at theſe words, caus'd the little Prince to be unbound, and only ſet guards upon Dara-cha and his Son. At the ſame time he alſo ſent expreſſes to Raja Jeſſomſeing, and to Abdulla-Kan, to give them advice that he had ſeiz'd upon Dara-cha and his Train. Thereupon they made haſt to ſhare in the ſpoils of that poor Prince. But they could not be ſo ſwift, but that Gion-Kan had ſeiz'd upon all that Dara-cha had of moſt precious in the World; uſing as inhumanly both his Wives and his Children. The Raja and Abdulla being arriv'd, provided Elephants for the Prince, his Son, and his Wives, and carri'd them away immediately to Jehanabat; the people crowded to behold them, every one being deſirous to ſee the Prince whom they ſo earneſtly deſir'd to have had for their King. Aureng-zeb caus'd them to be ſhewn in all the Streets and Market-places of Jehanabat, that no man might queſtion hereafter their being taken; and as if he had glori'd in his treachery toward his Brother, he preſently condemn'd and ſent him away to the Caſtle of Aſſer. But of all that crowded to behold, not one would ſtir to aſſiſt or ſuccour their lawful Prince. Only ſome few generous Souldiers who had ſerv'd him, and had receiv'd ſome kindneſſes from him, ſeeing themſelves not able to deliver their Prince, yet deſirous to ſhew him ſome proofs of their acknowledgment, fell with all their fury upon the Traitor Gion-Kan, who though he were reſcu'd from them at that time, yet ſoon after met with the reward due to his crime; for he was kill'd as he was croſſing a Wood in his return home.

In the mean time Aureng-zeb, like a good Polititian, and an extraordinary Diſſembler, gave it out, that it was by no order of his that Dara-cha was ſeiz'd; only he deſir'd him to retire out of the Kingdom, which he refuſing to do, Gion-Kan, unknown to him, had unworthily ſeiz'd his perſon; and without reſpect to the Royal-Blood, had ſhamefully ty'd the hands of the young Sepper-Shekour behind him: which being a crime and an indignity done to his Majeſty, had been puniſh'd by the death of Gion-Kan and his accomplices. But this was only publiſh'd to abuſe the people; for had it been true, Aureng-zeb would never have given order to have his brother's head cut off.

For Dara-Cha being ſent from Jehanabat with a Guard to the place of his impriſonment; when he came to a fair place where he thought to repoſe himſelf, they dreſs'd up the Tent where he was to leave his Head. After he had eaten, Seif-Kan came and brought him the ſentence of his Death. Dara-Cha ſeeing him enter, told him he was very welcome, and that he was glad to ſee one of his moſt faithful Servants. Seif-Kan made anſwer, that indeed he had formerly been one of his Servants, but that now he was the Slave of Aureng-zeb, who had commanded him to bring him his Head. Muſt I dye then? ſaid Dara-Cha. 'Tis the Kings command, reply'd Seif-Kan, and I am entruſted to execute it. Sepper-Chekour, who lay in an anti-Chamber of the Tent, waking upon this conteſt, would have ſeiz'd upon certain Weapons which had been taken from him, with an intention to have aſſiſted his Father; but he was prevented by thoſe that accompany'd Seif-Kan. Dara-Cha would have made ſome reſiſtance himſelf, but ſeeing it was in vain, he only deſir'd time for his devotions, which was granted him. In the mean time Sepper-Chekour was taken from him; and while they held him in a ſtory, a Slave took off Dara-Cha's Head, which was carried to Aureng-zeb by Seif-Kan. This bloody Tragedy being thus acted, Sepper-Chekour was ſent to the Caſtle Gonaleor, to keep his Uncle Morat-Bakche company. As for the Wives and Daughters of Dara-Cha, they were allotted an Apartment in Aureng-zeb's Haram.

CHAP. V.

How Aureng-zeb caus'd himſelf to be declar'd King; and of the Flight of Sultan-Sujah.

AS it is the cuſtom at the performance of that Ceremony, for the new King to ſeat himſelf upon the Throne; there was not much time requir'd to prepare one, in regard that Cha-jehan before his Impriſonment had finiſh'd that which the Great Tamerlane had begun; which was the richeſt and moſt magnificent that ever was ſeen. But as the Grand Cadi of the Empire, and Chief of the Law was to Proclaim the new King, Aureng-zeb found himſelf oppos'd by him. For the Cadi told him, that the Law of Mahomet and the Law of Nature equally forbad him to declare him King, while his Father liv'd; beſides, that he had put his elder Brother to death, to whom the Empire belong'd after the death of Cha-jehan their Father. This ſtout reſiſtance of the Cadi did not a little perplex Aureng-zeb; and therefore that he might not ſeem to appear irreligious, he call'd all the Doctors of the Law together, to whom he repreſented the incapacity of his Father to govern, through Age and many infirmities, that troubled him; as for Dara-Cha his Brother, he had put him to death becauſe he was a ſlighter of the Law, drank Wine, and favour'd Infidels. Thoſe reaſons, intermix'd with threats, caus'd his Council of Conſcience to conclude, that he deſerv'd the Empire, and ought to be proclaim'd King; though the Cadi obſtinately perſiſted in his firſt reſolution. There was no other Remedy therefore, but to remove him from his Employment, as a diſturber of the publick Peace, and to chuſe another for the Honour of the Law, and the Good of the Kingdom. The perſon who was elected by the Council was ſoon confirm'd by Aureng-zeb; in acknowledgment whereof, he proclaim'd him King the twentieth of October, 1660. This Proclamation being made in the Moſquee, Aureng-zeb ſeated himſelf upon the Throne, and receiv'd the Homages of all the Grandees of the Kingdom.

However, Aureng-zeb did not think his throne faſt enough, nor himſelf ſecure in the Empire, ſo long as Sultan Sujah was raiſing a powerful Army in Bengala to releaſe his Father. Thereupon he ſent a conſiderable Force againſt him, under the Command of Sultan Mahomed his eldeſt Son; to whom he appointed for his Lieutenant the Emir-Jemla, one of the greateſt Captains that ever came out of Perſia into India. His great Conduct and Courage had render'd him a perſon to be reverenc'd by all poſterity, had he been faithful to the the Princes whom he ſerv'd. But firſt he betray'd the King of Golconda, under whom he advanc'd his Fortune; and next to him Cha-jehan; under whoſe protection he roſe ſo high, that there was not a Nobleman in all India more powerful or richer than he. Otherwiſe he is both belov'd and fear'd by the Soldiers, and perfectly underſtands the Art of War, according to the cuſtom of the Country. The two Armies engaging ſeveral times, the Victory ſometimes on the one ſide, and ſometimes on the other; ſo that Sultan Mahomed finding it likely to be a tedious War, aſſiſted by the Counſels of his Lieutenant, reſolv'd to add policy to ſtrength. Thereupon he treats underhand with the Officers of his Uncle's Army, makes them magnificent promiſes, and ſo earneſtly ſolicites them to come over to Aureng-zeb's party, whom he call'd the Pillar and Protector of Mahomet's Law, that he gain'd the principal, to whom he ſent conſiderable Preſents, to confirm them in their reſolutions. This was a mortal blow to Sultan-Sujah, againſt which he could not provide. For they that adhear'd to him being a mercenary generation, that ſerves whoever gives moſt, finding they had little more to expect from a Prince whoſe Exchequer was empty, reſolv'd to drive a Trade with Aureng-zeb, who was Maſter of all the Treaſure in the Kingdom. And thus did Aureng-zeb debauch the Army of his Brother, who in the laſt Battel, ſeeing himſelf abondon'd by all his Soldiers, was forc'd to ſave himſelf by flight, with his Wives and Children. The Traytors aſham'd of their treachery, did not ſo ſmartly purſue the unfortunate Prince as they might have done, but preſently fell to plund'ring his Tents and Baggage; which Emir-Jemla, ſuffer'd them to do, in recompence of their Treaſon. Sultan-Sujah in the mean time croſſing the Ganges with his Retinue, retir'd ſome time afterwards into the Kingdom of Arakan, upon the Confines of Bengala, where we ſhall leave him for a time.

CHAP. VI.

Of the Impriſonment of Sultan-Mahomed, Aureng-zeb's eldeſt ſon; and of Sultan Soliman Chekour, eldeſt ſon of Dara-Cha.

THough Aureng-zeb were eſteem'd a very great Politician, and were ſo indeed, yet he fail'd in his Politicks, to truſt his Son with ſuch a powerful Army, under the Conduct of a Captain who had already betray'd two Maſters. However at length he began to be jealous, leſt Heaven ſhould inſpire his own Son to revenge the crimes which he had committed. And upon this, receiving intelligence, that Sultan Mahomed began to be very penſive and melancholy, he then abſolutely believ'd that his Son was practiſing miſchief againſt him; for the better diſcovery whereof, he wrote to Emir-Jemla. But the Letter unhappily miſcarrying, was taken by Sultan Mahomed's Guards, and giv'n to the young Prince; who being a perſon of a quick apprehenſion, conceal'd the buſineſs from Emir-Jemla; and fearing leſt he ſhould receive other Orders more preciſe to take away his life, he reſolv'd to paſs the Ganges and throw himſelf upon his Uncle Sultan-Sujah; from whom he expected more mercy than from his Father. With this reſolution he feign'd to go a fiſhing, and paſſing the Ganges, with ſeveral Officers that adher'd to him, he went directly to Sultan Sujah's Camp, which lay on the other ſide of the River; the Sultan having rais'd a conſiderable Force in the Kingdom of Arakan. Sultan Mahomed coming into his Uncles preſence, threw himſelf at his feet, begging his pardon for having taken Arms againſt him, as being forc'd thereto by his Father. Now though Sultan Sujah had reaſon enough to believe, that Mahomed's coming into his Camp, was only a trick of his Father, to ſend his Son as a Spy to diſcover his condition; yet being a vertuous and generous Prince, and ſeeing his Nephew proſtrate at his feet, he could not but raiſe him up; after which, embracing him, he aſſur'd him of his Protection againſt Aureng-zeb. Some days after, theſe two Princes made an attempt, and paſſing Ganges, and fetching a compaſs thought to have ſurpriz'd the Enemies Army, who dreamt not of their coming. They made a vigorous onſet, and kill'd a great number of men. But when they found the whole Army had taken the Alarum, they contented themſelves with the miſchief they had done, and repaſs'd the Ganges, for fear of being ſurrounded by number.

two

Emir-Jemla had already given intelligence to Aureng-zeb of the Flight of his Son; which ſenſibly griev'd the Father, though he durſt not ſhew his anger, for fear of incenſing the Emir to betray him, as he had betray'd his Father. Thereupon he cunningly wrote to him, that he rely'd altogether upon his prudence and policy to retrieve his Son to his duty, that he was young, and that what he had done, was only out of his heat of youth, and the inconſtancy incident to his years. The confidence which Aureng-zeb ſeem'd to put in Emir-Jemla incited the General to uſe all his endeavours to get Mahomed out of Sultan Sujah's hands. Thereupon he gave the young Prince to underſtand his Fathers good intentions toward him, and that he was ready to receive him with open Arms, ſo that he would but make good uſe of his Reſidence with Sultan Sujah, which he might pretend was done for the advantage to his Father, and for which his Father would have rather cauſe to extol his Prudence and affection than otherwiſe. The young Prince eaſily ſuffer'd himſelf to be perſwaded, and the ſame way he went to his Uncle's, the ſame way he return'd to his Fathers Camp; where Emir-Jemla receiv'd him honourably, and with all the demonſtrations of joy. He adviſ'd him alſo, to tell his Father when he ſaw him, that he did not go over to Sultan Sujah, but only with a deſign to obſerve what Forces he had, and the Diſcipline of his Army; and that he intended to have ſpeedily return'd, and to have given him an account of what he had done for his ſervice. Preſently Orders came from Aureng-zeb, that his Son ſhould be ſent to him; ſo that Mahomed, whether by conſtraint, or willingly, ſet forward for Jehanabat, attended by the Guards which Emir-Jemla, had appointed. The King having notice of his arrival, his Majeſty order'd him a Lodging without the Palace, and would not permit him to kiſs his hands; pretending he was not well.

All this while Soliman Chekour, after he had been betray'd by the Raja Roup, had continu'd under the protection of Nacti-Rani in the Province of Serenaguer. This Prince, as ſtout as he was unfortunate, was conſtrain'd to lead a Savage life among the Mountains, for fear of falling into the hands of Aureng-zeb, nor could he with all his Forces do him any harm in that place. Beſide Nacti-Rani had aſſur'd him with an Oath, accompany'd with all the Ceremonies that could make it ſolemn, and invioable; that he would rather loſe his Territories, then that Aureng-zeb ſhould do the leaſt violence to that protection which he afforded him. This was done upon the Banks of a River, which paſſes through his Country, where he waſh'd his body, in token of the purity of his Soul; and being thus purify'd in the Water, he made his proteſtations to Soliman-Chekour, never to forſake him, taking his Gods to Witneſs of the ſincerity of his intentions. Upon this, Soliman-Chekour never took any farther care, but every day went to divertiſe himſelf with hunting. While he gives up himſelf to his pleaſure, Aureng-zeb marches his Army toward the Mountains, thinking to force Nacti-Rani to ſurrender Soliman-Chekour into his power. But the Raja with a thouſand men being able to defend the Avenues of his Country againſt a hundred thouſand, Aureng-zeb finding he could do no good, that way, has recourſe to policy. He undertakes at firſt to treat with the Raja, but in vain, for the Raja would not violate his Oath; and his Prieſts aſſur'd him beſides, that Aureng-zeb ſhould er'e long be depos'd, and that Soliman Chekour ſhould Reign in his room.

Aureng-zeb thus prevented, reſolves to make another kind of War upon him. Thereupon he forbids all commerce between his and the Raja's Subjects; which was very prejudicial to the latter. This caus'd the people to murmur at the protection which he had given to Soliman-Chekour, and at length they publickly cry'd out, that it was to the prejudice of the Publick. Their Prieſts alſo, thus alarm'd, began to doubt the truth of their Oracles, and to think it convenient to put another interpretation upon them. But the main thing was, that the Raja Jeſſomſeing who had betraid Dara-Cha, wrote privately to Nacti-Rani, that it was for the ſafety of his Perſon and Dominions, to ſubmit to Aureng-zeb; and to ſurrender his kinſman up into his hands. This advice of Jeſſomſeing put him to a very great plunge; dreading on the one ſide the breach of his oath; on the other, the revolt of his people. Uncertain what courſe to take, he conſults the Bramins, who gave their opinions that it was his duty rather to preſerve his People and his Laws, which would be both deſtroid, ſhould they fall into the hands of Aureng-zeb, than to keep his Faith with a Prince from whom he could never expect any advantage. Theſe conſultations being kept private from Soliman Chekour, his ruine was concluded upon, while he thought himſelf moſt ſecure. Thereupon Nacti-Rani, with a Salvo, as he thought, to his Honour and his Conſcience, return'd for anſwer to Jeſſomſeing, that he could not conſent to betray the Prince; but that Aureng-zeb might take his opportunity to ſeize his perſon, yet preſerve his reputation too: in regard that Soliman Chekour was wont to go a Hunting upon certain Mountains in his Countrey with a ſmall retinue, and that it would be an eaſy thing for him to ſend a number of Souldiers ſufficient to apprehend him.

So ſoon as Jeſſomſeing had receiv'd this anſwer, he gave order to his Son to ſee the buſineſs effected as the plot was laid. So that Soliman Chekour one day going a Hunting to the uſual place, was ſnapt by a ſtrong party that lay in Ambuſcade. The Prince preſently apprehended the treaſon, and defended himſelf with the aſſiſtance of his Attendants, who were all ſlain; he himſelf ſlew nine, but at length over-number'd, was taken and carri'd to Jehanabat. When he came into Aureng-zeb's preſence, the King ask'd him how he did? As well as a Priſoner of yours can do, ſaid he, who expects no better uſage from you, than his Father receiv'd before. The King bid him not be afraid, that he had no deſign to put him to death, but only to ſecure his perſon. Aureng-zeb after that, demanding of him what was become of all the Treaſure which he had carri'd away, the Prince made anſwer that he had ſpent a great part in raiſing Souldiers againſt him to have ruin'd him, if it had been his good fortune: That a good part was in the hands of Raja Roup, whoſe avarice and perfidiouſneſs was ſufficiently known. And that Nacti-Rani had got the remainder to deliver him to his enemies, to the prejudice of his word and honour. Aureng-zeb was ſurpriz'd and touch'd at the boldneſs of his Nephew; but ambition ſhutting his eyes, and ſtifling all thoughts of juſtice, which the juſt remorce of Conſcience might excite within him, he gave order that Sultan Mahomet his Son, and Soliman Chekour his Nephew ſhould both be committed to the Fort of Goualeor to keep Morat-Bak-che company, which was done the 30*th* of Jan. 1661.

Sultan Sujah, who was yet alive, but ſtill miſerably, was the laſt thorn in Aureng-zeb's foot; and the perſon that drew it out for him, and rid him of his laſt pain, was the King of Arakan, whither the unfortunate Prince was at length forc'd to retire. Who finding all his hopes to be loſt, began to think of a Pilgrimage to Mecca, and from thence to go into Perſia, and implore a Sanctuary under the protection of that Prince. To this purpoſe he thought he might obtain a Veſſel from the King of Arakan, or the King of Pegu, to carry him to Mecca: but he was ignorant that neither of thoſe Kings had any Veſſels, that would live in the main Ocean. So that he was conſtrain'd to ſtay with the King of Arakan, an Idolater, whoſe Daughter he deſir'd in Marriage, which the King granted, and by whom he had a Son. But that which ought to have been the greateſt occaſion of friendſhip between the Son-in-law and the Father-in-law, was the greateſt reaſon of their hatred and falling-out. For ſome Lords of the Country, who began to be jealous of Sultan Sujah, buzz'd the King of Arakan in the ear, as if he had an intention by vertue of his Marriage, to diſpoſſeſs him of his Throne, and to leave it to his own Son. The Pagan King eaſily believ'd what they ſaid. Nor were theſe ſupitions ill-grounded; for Sultan Sujah having good ſtore of Gold and Jewels, eaſily corrupted ſeveral Mahumetans that liv'd in the Kingdom of Arakan, and with thoſe and about two-hunder'd men more that had follow'd him after the rout of his Army, he undertook a moſt bold enterprize, which was yet a mark rather of deſpair than courage. He appointed a day to thoſe of his party to force the Palace, and after they had put all the Royal Family to the Sword, to proclaim him King of Arakan. But this Plot being diſcover'd the day it ſhould have been executed, Sultan Sujah, and Sultan Bangue, his Son, had no other way to ſave themſelves, but by flight into the Kingdom of Pegu. But their way lying over Mountains almoſt impaſſable, and through thick Forreſts full of Tigers and Lions, and being alſo cloſely purſu'd, their flight avail'd them little or nothing. Sultan Bangue however being behind, to keep the Purſuers in play while his Father and his Family gain'd ground, ſtoutly defended himſelf againſt the firſt Aſſailants, but at length being overpower'd by number, he was taken together with his two little Brothers, his Mother and his Siſters; who were all put in Priſon, where they were very ill-us'd. But ſome time after, the King having a deſire to marry the eldeſt Siſter of Sultan Bangue, they had a little more liberty allow'd them. However they enjoy'd it not long, for the young Prince being of a turbulent and ambitious ſpirit, plotted new treaſons againſt the King, which being diſcover'd, the King immediately caus'd the whole Family to be put to death, not ſparing the young Princeſs his Wife, though ſhe were big with Child.

As for Sultan Sujah, who was formoſt among thoſe that fled, it is more generally thought that either he was ſlain by the Souldiers who were ſent to apprehend him, or that he was torn in pieces by the Tigers and Lions; of which thoſe Forreſts are full.

CHAP. VII.

Of the beginning of Aureng-zeb's Reign, and the Death of Cha-jehan his Father.

SOme days before he aſcended the Throne, he ſent to his Father to ſend him ſome of his Jewels, to the end he might appear before his people with the ſame magnificence as his Predeceſſors had done. Cha-jehan taking this requeſt of his Sons for an affront put upon him in Priſon, fell into ſuch a rage that he continu'd mad for ſome dayes, and had like to have dy'd upon it. In the exceſs of his vexation he call'd ſeveral times for a Morter and a Peſtle, threatning to beat all his Jewels to powder before his Son ſhould have them. But Begum-Saheb, his eldeſt Daughter, never forſook him, throwing her ſelf at his feet, and by vertue of that criminal power which ſhe had over him, as being both his Daughter and his Wife, kept him from uſing that extremity; more out of a deſign to preſerve the Jewels for her ſelf, than for her Brother, to whom ſhe had always been a mortal enemy. For this reaſon, when Aureng-zeb aſcended the Throne, he had no more than one Jewel upon his Bonnet: This Bonnet cannot be call'd a Crown; and by conſequence neither can the Ceremony be call'd a Coronation.

At the time that Aureng-zeb took poſſeſſion of the Throne, he would not eat any wheaten-bread, nor meat, nor fiſh, but fed upon barley-bread, herbs and ſweet-meats, which was a kind of Penance that he impoſs'd upon himſelf for ſo many crimes.

When Aureng-zeb was ſettled in the Empire, ſeveral Embaſſadors came to Jehanabat to congratulate him, on the behalf of the Kings their Maſters, as from the King of the Usbeck Tartars, the Seriff of Mecca, the Prince of Balſara, and the Kings of Arabia Felix, and Ethiopia. The Hollanders alſo ſent Menheir Adrican, chief of their Factory in Surat, who was kindly receiv'd, and firſt diſpatch'd. For 'tis a piece of State, to keep the Embaſſadors a good while at Court before they have Audience. All theſe Embaſſadors preſented Aureng-zeb with the rarities of their Countrey; who to get himſelf a good name in Aſia, ſent them away very well ſatisfi'd.

Some months before the death of Cha-jehan Aureng-zeb ſent an Embaſſador into Perſia, who was magnificently receiv'd. For a month together he was nothing but feaſted and careſs'd with all manner of divertiſements. The day that he was to make his Preſent from the Great Mogul, the King of Perſia ſate upon his Throne in a moſt magnificent habit; and having receiv'd the Embaſſador's Preſent, he preſently divided it in contempt among the Officers of his Houſe; only keeping for himſelf a Diamond that weigh'd ſixty Carats. Some few days after he call'd for the Embaſſador, and after ſome diſcourſe, he ask'd him if he were of the Sect of the Turks? To which the Embaſſador returning an anſwer, and letting ſome words fall againſt Haly, the King ask'd him what his name was. ? He reply'd that Chajehan had given him the Name of Baubec-kan, that is, Lord of a free heart; and had honour'd him with one of the chief employments at Court. Then th'art a Villain, reply'd the King of Perſia, with an angry countenance, to deſert thy Sovereign in his neceſſity, having receiv'd ſo many favours from him, and to ſerve a Tyrant, that keeps his Father in Priſon, and has maſſacr'd all his Brothers. How dares he, purſu'd the King, take upon him the arrogant Title of Alem-guir Aureng-ſha, or King of all the World, who never conquer'd any thing, but poſſeſſes all he has by treachery and parricide? Haſt thou been one of thoſe that counſell'd him to ſhed ſo much blood, to be the Executioner of his Brothers, and to keep his Father in Priſon? Thou art not worthy to wear a Beard; and with that immediately caus'd it to be ſhav'd off; which is the greateſt indignity that can be put upon a man in that Countrey. Shortly after he commanded the Embaſſador to return home, ſending along with him for a Preſent to Aureng-zeb, an hunder'd and fifty beautiful Horſes, with a great quantity of Gold and Silver-Carpets, Cloath of Gold, rich Shaſhes, and other Stuffs, to a vaſt value. When Baubec-kan was come back to Agra, where the King was then, Aureng-zeb incens'd at the affront which the the Sophi of Perſia had giv'n him in the perſon of his Embaſſador, he took the Horſes and ſent ſome of them into the great Piazza, others to the corners of the Streets, cauſing it to be proclaim'd that the followers of Haly could not ride thoſe Horſes without being Nigis, that is to ſay, unclean, as coming from a King that did not obey the true Law. After that he caus'd the Horſes to be kill'd, and all the reſt of the Preſent to be burnt; uttering many reproachful words againſt the King of Perſia, with whom he was mortally offended.

At length Cha-jehan happ'ning to dye toward the end of the year 1666. Aureng-zeb found himſelf rid of an object that every hour reproach'd his Tyranny; and began to injoy himſelf with more delight. Soon after he receiv'd his Siſter Begum-Saheb into favour, reſtoring to her all her Governments, and giving her the Name of Cha-Begum, that is to ſay, Princeſs Queen. The truth is, ſhe is a Woman of Prodigious parts, and able to govern the whole Empire. And had her Father and Brothers taken her counſel at the beginning of the War, Aureng-zeb had never been King. As for Rauchenara Begum his Siſter, ſhe had always taken his ſide, and when ſhe heard he had taken Arms, ſhe ſent him all the Gold and Silver ſhe could procure. In recompence whereof he promis'd her, when he came to be King, to give her the Title of Cha-Begum, and that ſhe ſhould ſit upon a Throne: in all which he was as good as his word; and they continu'd very loving together till I was laſt at Genanabat: but then they were not ſo good friends, upon this occaſion. The Princeſs having cunningly ſtoll'n into her Apartment a handſom young fellow, could not ſo privately let him out again after ſhe had quite tir'd him; but the King was advertiz'd thereof. Thereupon the Princeſs to prevent the ſhame and reproach, ran to the King in a great pretended fright and told him that there was a man got into the Haram, even to her very Chamber, and that his intention was certainly either to have kill'd or robb'd her: that ſuch a thing was never ſeen; that it concern'd the ſafety of his Royal Perſon, and that he would do well to puniſh ſeverely the Eunuchs that kept guard that night. Preſently the King ran in perſon with a great number of Eunuchs, ſo that the poor young man had no way to eſcape but by leaping out of a window into the River that runs by the Palace-walls; whereupon a world of people ran out to ſeize him; the King commanding them to do him no harm, but to carry him to the Officer of Juſtice. However he has not been heard of ever ſince that time.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Preparations againſt the Feaſt of the Great Mogul, when he is wheigh'd ſolemnly every year. Of the richneſs of his Thrones, and the Magnificence of his Court.

THis great Feaſt begins the fifth of November, and laſts five days. They uſually weigh the King at the time of his Birth; and if he weighs more than he did the year before, there is great rejoicing. When he is weigh'd he ſeats himſelf upon the richeſt of his Thrones; and then all the Grandees of the Kingdom come to congratulate and preſent him. The Ladies of the Court ſend him their Preſents alſo, as likewiſe do the Governours of Provinces, and others in great Employments. The Preſents conſiſts of Jewels, Tiſſues, Carpetts and other Stuffs; beſides Camels, Elephants, Horſes, and indeed any thing that is rare and of value. 'Tis ſaid he receives that day thirty Millions of Livres.

They begin to prepare for this Feaſt the ſeventh of September, about two Months before it begins. The firſt thing they do, is to cover the two great Courts overhead, from the middle of each Court to the Hall, which is open upon three ſides. The Pavilions that cover theſe two void places, are of Purple Velvet, Embroider'd with Gold, and ſo weighty, that the Poſts which ſuſtain them are as big as the Maſt of a Ship; ſome thirty, ſome forty foot high. There are thirty-eight of theſe Poſts to uphold the Tent in the firſt Court; and thoſe next the Hall, are plated with Gold as thick as a Ducket. The reſt are plated with Silver of the ſame thickneſs. The Cords are of Cotton of divers colours; ſome of them as big as a good Cable.

The firſt Court is ſurrounded with Portico's and little Chambers, where the Omrahs keep Guard. For every eight days the Omrahs relieve the Guard; and during thoſe eight days, the Omrah who is upon the Guard, has a Diſh of Meat out of the Kings Kitchin. When he ſees it coming afar off, he makes three obeyſances, laying his hand three times upon the Ground, and three times upon his Head, crying out at the ſame time, God preſerve the Kings health, give him long Life and Victory over his Enemies. They take it for a great Honour to Guard the King; and when they go upon the Guard, they put on all their moſt ſumptuous Apparel; and their Horſes, Camels, and Elephants are all richly adorn'd. Some of the Camels carry a ſmall Piece of Ordnance, with a man behind to ſhoot it off. The meaneſt of theſe Omrahs commands a thouſand Horſe; but if he be a Prince of the Blood, he commands ſix thouſand.

The Great Mogul has ſeven Thrones, ſome ſet all over with Diamonds; others with Rubies, Emraulds, and Pearls.

The largeſt Throne, which is ſet up in the Hall of the firſt Court, is in form like one of our Field-Beds, ſix foot long, and four broad. The Cuſhion at the back is round like a Bolſter; the Cuſhions on the ſides are flat.

I counted about a hundred and eight pale Rubies in Collets, about this Throne, the leaſt whereof weigh'd a hundred Carats; but there are ſome that weigh two hundred. Emraulds I counted about a hundred and ſixty, that weigh'd ſome threeſcore, ſome thirty Carats.

The under-part of the Canopy is all embroider'd with Pearls and Diamonds, with a Fringe of Pearls round about. Upon the top of the Canopy, which is made like an Arch with four Panes, ſtands a Peacock, with his Tail ſpread, conſiſting all of Saphirs, and other proper colour'd Stones; the Body is of beaten Gold, enchas'd with ſeveral Jewels; and a great Ruby upon his breaſt, at which hangs a Pearl, that weighs fifty Carats. On each ſide of the Peacock ſtand two Noſe-gays, as high as the Bird, conſiſting of ſeveral ſorts of Flowers, all of beaten Gold enamel'd. When the King ſeats himſelf upon the Throne, there is a tranſparent Jewel, with a Diamond Appendant, of eighty or ninety Carats, encompaſs'd with Rubies and Emraulds, ſo hung that it is always in his Eye.

Eye. The twelve Pillars alſo that uphold the Canopy, are ſet with rows of fair Pearl, round, and of an excellent Water, that weigh from ſix to ten Carats a piece. At the diſtance of four feet, upon each ſide of the Throne, are plac'd two Paraſols, or Umbrello's, the handles whereof are about eight foot high, cover'd with Diamonds; the Paraſols themſelves are of crimſon Velvet, embroider'd and fring'd with Pearls.

This is the famous Throne which Tamerlane began, and Cha-jehan finiſh'd; which is really reported to have coſt a hundred and ſixty Millions, and five hundred-thouſand Livres of our Money.

Behind this ſtately and magnificent Throne there is another leſs, in the form of a Tub, where the King bathes himſelf; it is an Oval, ſeven foot long, and five broad. The outſide whereof ſhines all over with Diamonds and Pearls; but there is no Canopy over it.

Coming into the firſt Court, on the right hand, you ſee a particular Tent, where during all the Feaſt, the Morice-Dancers are appointed to make ſport, while the King ſits upon his Trone. On the left hand is another Tent, appointed from the Principal Officers of the Army and Houſhold.

In the ſame Court, while the King ſits upon his Throne, are to be ſeen thirty Horſes, fifteen upon one ſide, and fifteen upon the other, lead by two men. Their Bridles are very ſhort, but for the moſt part enrich'd with Diamonds, Rubies, Emraulds, and Pearls, the bits whereof are of pure Gold. Every Horſe wears between his Ears a rich Plume of Feathers, with a little Cuſhion upon his Back, ty'd on with a Surcingle, both being embroider'd with Gold; and about his Neck hung ſome fair Jewel, which was either a Diamond, a Ruby, or an Emrauld. The worſt of thoſe Horſes coſt three thouſand, ſome five thouſand Crowns; and ſome there were, that were never bought under ten thouſand. The young Prince, who was between ſeven and eight years old, rode upon a Horſe no higher than a good big Greyhound, but very well ſhap'd.

About an hour after the King has been ſitting upon his Throne, ſeven ſtout Elephants bred up for War, are brought out. One of thoſe Elephants has his Seat fix'd upon his back, if the King ſhould have a mind to ride out. The others are cover'd with Cloaths richly embroider'd, with Chains of Gold and Silver about their Necks; and there are four that carry the Kings Standard upon their Cruppers, faſten'd to a Half-Pike, which a man ſeated on purpoſe cloſe by, holds upright with his hand. Theſe Elephants are brought within fifty paces of the Throne, and when they come before the King, they make their obeyſances to him, laying their Trunks to the ground, and then lifting them up above their Heads three times; every time he makes a great cry, and then turning his back to the King, one of the Leaders turns up the Cloath, that the King may ſee he is in good caſe. There belongs alſo to every one a Cord, which is put round his body, to ſhew how much he is grown ſince the laſt year. The firſt of theſe Elephants, which the King moſt eſteems, is a great furious Creature, that has five hundred Roupies allow'd him every month. He is fed with good Victuals, and a great quantity of Sucre, and they give him Aqua-vitæ to drink. When the King rides forth upon his Elephant, the Omrahs follow on Horſeback. And when he rides on Horſeback, the Omrahs follow him on foot.

After the King has ſeen his Elephants, he riſes up, and goes into his Haram through a little oval door behind the Throne.

The five other Thrones are ſet up in another magnificent Hall in another Court, all cover'd over with Diamonds, without any colour'd Stone.

When the King has ſtaid about half an hour, he comes out again, attended by three or four Eunuchs, and ſeats himſelf in the other Hall, upon the middle-moſt of the five Thrones, where the Omrahs come, as long as the five days of the Feſtival laſt, and make their Preſents to him.

CHAP. IX.

Some other Obſervations upon the Court of the Great Mogul.

AFter Aureng-zeb had ſetled himſelf in the Empire, which he uſurp'd from his Father and his Brothers, he impos'd upon himſelf a very ſevere penance, eating nothing but Pulſe and Sweet-meats, which has made him very meagre and lean. All the time the Comet laſted in the year 1665, which appear'd very great in the Indies, where I then was, Aureng-zeb drank nothing but Water, and eat nothing but Bread made of Millet; which ſo impair'd his health, that it had like to have coſt him his life. Beſides, he always lay upon the ground, only with a Tigers Skin under him; ſince which time he has never been perfectly well.

I ſaw him drink three ſeveral times, while he ſat upon his Throne; to which purpoſe he had brought him a large Cup of Cryſtal of the Rock, round and all of a piece, with a Gold Cover, enrich'd with Diamonds, Rubies, and Emraulds, the foot thereof being of the ſame. But no perſons ſee the King eat, only his Wives and his Eunuchs. And it is but very rarely that he goes to Dine or Sup with any of his Subjects. When I was laſt in India, Giafer-Kan, who was his Grand Viſier, and his Uncle by marriage of his Wife, invited the King to ſee a new Palace which he was building, who went accordingly, and it was the greateſt Honour his Majeſty could do him; in retaliation whereof, Giafer-Kan, and his Wife preſented him with Jewels, Elephants, Camels, Horſes, and other things, to the value of a Million and fifty thouſand Livres of our Money. For Giafer-Kan's Wife is the moſt magnificent and liberal Woman in all India, and ſpends more her ſelf than all the Kings Wives and Daughters, which makes her Husband in debt, though he be almoſt Lord of all the Empire.

When the King is carried in his Palleki to the Moſquee, one of his Sons follows him, a Horſeback, and all his Omrahs and officers of his Houſhold come behind him a foot. Thoſe that are Mahumetans ſtay for him at the top of the aſcent to the Moſquee, and when he is ready to come out, they march before him to the Gate of his Palace. Eight Elephants always go before the King, to every one of which belong two men; one to lead the Elephant, and the other, who ſits upon his back, carries a Standard fix'd to a Half-Pike. The other four carry Seats or Thrones upon their backs, the one ſquare, the other round; one cover'd, the other inclos'd with Glaſs of ſeveral faſhions. When the King goes abroad, he has uſually five or ſix hundred men to attend him for his Guard, arm'd every one with a kind of an Half-Pike. To the heads of their Pikes they tye two Squibs croſs-wiſe, about a foot long, and as big as a mans Arm, which will carry the Half-Pike five hundred paces. The King is alſo attended by three or four hundred Muſquateers; but they are very Cowards, and hardly know how to ſhoot off their pieces. He has alſo a certain number of Cavalry, which are Soldiers much alike. A hundred Europeans might well beat a thouſand Indians; but they would hardly accuſtom themſelves to live ſuch ſober lives. For as well the Horſe as the Infantry will live upon Meal kneaded with Water and brown Sugar; but in the evening, when they have convenience, they make Quichery, which is Rice boil'd in Water and Salt, with a Grain, ſo call'd. When they eat it, they ſtir it with the ends of their Fingers in melted Butter, which is the uſual food of the Soldiers and poor people. Beſide, the heat would kill our Souldiers, who would never be able to endure the Sun all the day long, as the Indians do. By the way, give me leave to tell you, that the Country people have no other cloathing than a piece of Linnen to hide their ſecret parts, being miſerable poor; for if their Governours know they have any thing about them, they ſeize it either as their right, or by force. There are ſome Provinces in India that lye waſte, the Natives being forc'd to fly, by reaſon of the cruelty of their Governours. Under the pretence of being Mahumetans they perſecute the poor Idolaters beyond all measure; and if any one of them embrace Mahumetism, 'tis only because they would not work any longer. For they turn Souldiers or Faquirs, who are a sort of people that profess a renunciation of the World, and live upon Alms, but are indeed very Rascals. They reckon that there are in India 800000 of these Mahumetan Faquirs, and twelve hunder'd-thousand Idolaters.

Once in fifteen days the King goes a Hunting, mounted upon his Elephant, and so continues during the chase. All the Game he takes is brought within Musket-shot of his Elephants. Which consists generally of Lions, Tigers, Harts, and wild-Goats. For they will not meddle with Boars, as being Mahumetans. When he returns home, he puts himself into his Palleki, and goes in the same order, and with the same Guard, as when he returns from the Mosquee, saving that when he goes a Hunting, he is attended with three or four-hunder'd Horsemen, that ride without any discipline in the World.

As for the Princesses, as well the Wives, Daughters and Sisters of the King, they never stir out of the Palace, unless it be to spend a few days in the Countrey for their pleasure. Some of them go abroad, but very rarely, to visit some great Noble-mens Wives, as the Wife of Giafer-Kan, who is the King's Aunt. But that is only by particular leave of the King. And then it is not the custom as in Persia, where the Ladies make their visits only by night, and with a great number of Eunuchs, who clear the Streets of all people they meet. For in the Mogul's Court, they usually go out about nine in the morning, with only three or four Eunuchs, and ten or twelve Slaves, which are instead of Maids of Honour.

The Princesses are carri'd in Palleki's cover'd over with Embroider'd Tapestry, and a litttle Coach to hold one single person that follows the Palleki, drawn by two men, the wheels not being above a foot in diameter. The reason why they carry that Coach along with them, is, because that when the Princesses arrive at the House where they intend to alight, the men that carry the Palliki, not being permitted to go any farther than the first Gate, they then take their Coaches, and are drawn by their female-Slaves to the Womens Apartment. I have also observ'd, that in all the Houses of great Noble-men, the Womens Apartment is at the farther end of all. So that you must cross two or three great Courts, and a Garden or two, before you can come at it.

When the Princesses are married to any of the Court-Grandees, they become absolute Mistresses of their Husbands; so that if they study not to please them, and do not as they would have them, in regard of their free access to the King they over-rule the King many times to their prejudice, even to the turning them out of their Employments.

As it is a custom that the first-born always is Heir to the Throne, though he be the Son of a Slave, so soon as the Princesses of the King's Haram perceive that there is any one among them big with Child, they use all the artifices imaginable to make them miscarry. Insomuch that being at Patna in the year 1666, Cha-Est-Kan's Chirurgeon assur'd me, that the Wife of Cha-Est-Kan had procur'd the miscarrying of eight Women, because she would suffer no other Womens Children but her own.

CHAP. X.

Of the Commodities which are brought as well out of the Dominions of the Great Mogul, as out of the Kingdoms of Golconda and Viſapour, and other neighbouring Territories.

IT will be neceſſary for the Reader to take notice what I have already ſaid concerning the weights and Meaſures in uſe among the Indians, where I ſpoke concerning the Mines, and the Serre. Now for the Cobit.

The Cobit is a meaſure for all Commodities that are meaſur'd by the Ell, of which there are ſeveral ſorts, as in Europe there are ſeveral ſorts of Ells. The Cobit is divided into 24 Taſots: and in regard the greateſt part of the Commodities of India are utter'd at Surat, I have giv'n you a deſcription in the margin of the fourth part of a Surat-Cobit, divided into ſix Taſots.

Of their Silk.

Kaſembaſar, a Village in the Kingdom of Bengala, ſends abroad every year two and twenty-thouſand Bales of Silk; every Bale weighing a hunder'd pound. The two and twenty Bales make two millions and two-hunder'd-thouſand pound, at ſixteen ounces to the pound. The Hollanders uſually carry away ſix or ſeven-thouſand Bales, and would carry away more, did not the Merchants of Tartary, and the Mogul's Empire oppoſe them: for they buy up as much as the Hollander; the reſt the Natives keep to make their Stuffs. This Silk is all brought into the Kingdom of Guzerat, the greateſt part whereof comes to Amadabat, and to Surat, where it is wrought up.

In the firſt place they make Carpets of Silk and Gold, others of Silk and Silver, others all of Silk: For the Worſted Carpets are made at Vettapour, ſome twelve leagues from Agra.

In the ſecond place they make Satins with ſtreaks of Gold and Silver; others plain; with Taffata's after the ſame faſhion.

In the third place they make Paroles, which are a ſort of Silk-ſtuff very thin, but painted with all ſorts of Flowers, the manufacture whereof is at Amadabat. They coſt from eight Roupies to forty the piece. This is a Commodity wherein The Dutch will not ſuffer any one of the Hollanders to trade in particular: for they tranſport it to the Philippine-Iſlands, to the Illands of Borneo, Java, Sumatra, and other neighbouring Illands.

The raw-Silk of Kaſembaſar is yellowiſh, as are all the raw-Silks that come from Perſia and Sicily; but the Natives of Kaſembaſar have a way to whiten it, with a Lye made of the Aſhes of a Tree which they call Adam's Fig-tree; which makes it as white as the Paleſtine-Silk. The Hollanders ſend away all their Merchandize which they fetch out of Bengala, by water, through a great Canal that runs from Kaſembaſar into Ganges, for fifteen leagues together; from whence it is as far by water down the Ganges to Ouguely, where they laid their Ships.

Of the Calicuts: and firſt of the painted Calicuts, call'd Chites.

Chites or Painted Calicuts, which they call Calmendar, that is to ſay, done with a Pencil, are made in the Kingdom of Golconda; and particularly about Maſlipatan. But there is made ſo little, that though a man ſhould employ all the Workmen that underſtand the art of weaving Calicuts, he would hardly find enough to make three Bales.

The Chites which are made in the Empire of the Great Mogul are all Printed; and nothing ſo beautiful, neither for the figures nor the fineneſs of the Linnen. Thoſe which are made at Lahor, are the coarſeſt, and conſequently the cheapeſt of all. They are ſold by Corges, every Corge conſiſting of twenty pieces, which coſt from 16 to 30 Roupies.

The

The Chites which are made at Seronge, are ſold from 20 to 50 Roupies the Corge, or thereabouts.

Theſe Chites ſerve for Coverlets for Beds, for Sofra's or Table-cloaths after the Countrey-faſhion, Pillowbears, Handkerchiefs, but more eſpecially for Waſtcoats as well for men as women in Perſia.

The fine Calicut-Chites are made at Brampour; and are us'd for handkerchiefs by thoſe that ſnuff Tobacco.

The women alſo, over all Aſia, make Veils of theſe Calicuts, to wear over their heads, and about their ſhoulders, which Veils are call'd Ormis.

The Baſta's or Calicuts painted red, blue, and black, are carr'id white to Agra, and Amadabat, in regard thoſe Cities are neareſt to the places where the Indigo is made that is us'd in colouring. They coſt from two Roupies to 30 or 40 a-piece, according to the fineneſs and the quantity of Gold at the ends, and ſometimes upon the ſides. The Indians have a way to dip ſome of theſe Calicuts in a certain water that makes them look like Water'd-Chamlets, which adds alſo to the price.

That ſort which is ſold for two Roupies, and ſo onward till ye come to twelve, is tranſported to the Coaſt of Melinda, and it is the greateſt Trade the Governour of Mozambique drives, who ſells them to the Cafres, that vend them again among the Abyſſins, and into the Kingdom of Saba: for thoſe people not underſtanding the uſe of Soap, need no more but only to waſh theſe Calicuts in water. That ſort which is valu'd from 12 Roupies upward, is tranſported to the Philippine-Iſlands, the Illands of Borneo, Java, Sumatra, and other adjacent places. Where the women wear no other clothes, than a ſingle piece of this Calicut. One part whereof, without cutting it, ſerves for a Petticoat; the other they wind about their ſtomachs and their heads.

White Calicuts.

WHite Calicuts come partly from Agra, and about Lahor, part from Bengala: ſome from Brouda, Baroche, Renonſari, and other places. They are brought out of the Loom to Renonſari, and Baroche, where they are whiten'd by reaſon of the convenience of their Meadows, and the great ſtore of Limons, that grow thereabouts. For the Calicuts are never ſo white as they ſhould be, till they are dipt in Limon-water.

The Calicuts that come from Agra, Lahor, and Bengala, are ſold by the Corge, and they are of ſeveral prices, from ſeventeen Roupies to three or four-hunder'd, as the Merchant will have them wov'n.

The Calicuts that come from Renonſari, and Baroche, are one and twenty cubits long, new out of the Loom; but in the whitening they ſhrunk to twenty cubits.

Thoſe of Brouda twenty cubits from the Loom, and ſhrink in the whitening to nineteen and a half.

All the Calicuts or Baſta's that come from theſe three Cities, are of two ſorts: for ſome are broad, ſome are narrow. The narrow are thoſe I have already mention'd, the prices whereof are various, from two Mamoudi's to ſix.

The broad Baſta's are a cubit, and one third part wide; the whole piece twenty cubits long. The uſual price of them is from five Mamoudi's to twelve: but a Merchant being upon the place, may cauſe them to be made much more large and fine, till they are worth five-hunder'd Mamoudi's a-piece. I ſaw two pieces ſold for a thouſand Mamoudi's.

The Engliſh bought one, and the Hollanders another, each piece containing eight and twenty cubits.

Mahamed Alibeg returning into Perſia out of India, where he had been Embaſſador, preſented Cha-Sef the ſecond with a Coco-nut, about the bigneſs of an Auſtrich-egg, all beſet with Pearls: and when it was open'd there was taken out of it a Turbant that had ſixty cubits of Calicut in length to make it, the Cloath being ſo fine, that you could hardly feel it in your hand. For they will ſpin their thread ſo fine, that the eye can hardly diſcern it, or at leaſt it ſeems to be but a Cob-web.

Twiſted

Twisted-Cotton.

COtton twisted and untwisted comes from the Provinces of Brampour and Guzerat. Untwisted Cotton is never transported into Europe, being too cumbersome, and of little value; only they send it to Ormus, Balsara, and sometimes to the Philippine-Islands, and the Islands of Sinde. As for the twisted Cottons, the English and Hollanders transport a good quantity, not of the finest, but of that sort which is priz'd from fifteen to fifty Mamoudi's: It serves for wicks for Candles, for Packsaddles, and for the ground of Silk-stuffs.

Indigo.

INdigo comes from several parts of the great Mogul's Empire; and according to the diversity of the places it differs in quality, and consequently in price. In the first place, it comes from the Territories of Biana, Indoua, and Corsa, a day or two's journey from Agra: which is esteem'd the best of all. It is made also eight days journey from Surat, in a Village call'd Sarquess, two leagues distance from Amadabat. Here the flat Indigo is made. There is also Indigo little inferior in goodness and price, which comes from the King of Golconda's Territories. The Mein of Surat, which contains 42 Serre's, or 34 and a half of our pounds, is valu'd from 15 to 20 Roupies. They make as good as this at Baroche. That which is made up about Agra is made up in half Balls, and is the most sought for in all India. It is sold by the Mein, which in those places contains 60 Serres, or 51 and three quarters of our pounds. The usual price is from 36 to 40 Roupies. There grows also Indico some 36 leagues from Brampour, about a great Village call'd Raout, and round about the neighbouring Towns in the road to Surat: of which the Natives usually make above a hunder'd-thousand Roupies.

There comes Indigo also from Bengala, which the Holland-Company transports for Maslipatan. But they buy this Indigo, and that of Brampour and Amadabat, cheaper by twenty four in the hunder'd, than that of Agra.

Indigo is made of an Herb which they sow every year after the rains are over: which when it is grown up, is very like our Hemp. They cut it three times a year; first when it is about two or three foot high; and they cut it within half a foot of the ground; the first cutting far exceeds the two latter. The second cutting is worse than the first by ten or twelve in the hunder'd, and the third worse than the second by twelve in the hunder'd. The difference is found by breaking a piece of the Paste, and observing the colour. The colour of that Indigo which is made of the first cutting, is a violet-blue, but more brisk and lively than the two others: and that which is made of the second is more lively than the third.

When they have cut the Herb, they throw it unto Pits which they make with Lime, which becomes so hard, that you would judg it to be one intire piece of Marble. They are generally fourscore or a hunder'd paces in circuit; and being half full of water, they fill them quite up with the Herb. Then they bruise and jumble it in the water till the leaf, for the stalk is worth nothing, become like a kind of thick mud. This being done, they let it settle for some days; and when the settling is all at the bottom, and the water clear above, they let out all the water. When the water is as drain'd out, they fill several baskets wit hthis slime, and in a plain Field you shall see several men at work, every one at his own basket, making up little pieces of Indigo flat at the bottom, at the top sharp like an egg. Though at Amadabat they make their pieces quite flat like a small cake. Here you are to take particular notice, that the Merchants, because they would not pay custom for an unnecessary weight, before they transport their Indigo out of Asia into Europe, are very careful to cause it to be sifted, to seperate the dust from it; which they sell afterwards to the Natives of the Countrey to dye their Calicuts. They that sift this Indigo must be careful to keep a Linnen-cloath before their faces, and that their nostrils be well-stopt, leaving only two littles holes for their eyes. Besides, they must every half hour be sure to drink milk, which is a great preservative against the piercing quality of the dust. Yet notwithstanding ſtanding all this caution, they that have ſifted Indigo for nine or ten days, ſhall ſpit nothing but blew for a good while together. Once I laid an Egg in the morning among the ſifters, and when I came to break it in the evening it was all blew within.

As they take the Paſte out of the Baskets with their Fingers dipt in Oil, and make it into Lumps, or Cakes they lay them in the Sun to dry. Which is the reaſon that when the Merchants buy Indigo, they burn ſome pieces of it, to try whether there be any duſt among it. For the Natives who take the Paſte out of the Baskets to make it into Lumps, lay it in the Sand, which mixes with the Paſte, and fouls it. But when the Merchants burn it, the Indigo turns to Aſhes, and the Sand remains. The Governours do what they can to make the Natives leave their Knavery; but notwithſtanding all their care, there will be ſome deceit.

Salt-Peter.

GReat ſtore of Salt-Peter comes from Agra and Patna; but the refin'd coſts three times more than that which is not. The Hollanders have ſet up a Ware-Houſe fourteen Leagues above Patna, and when their Salt-Peter is refin'd, they tranſport it by Water by Ogueli. A Mein of refin'd Salt-Peter is worth ſeven Mamoudi's.

Spice.

CArdamom, Ginger, Pepper, Nutmegs, Nutmeg-Flowers, Cloves and Cinnamon, are all the different ſorts of Spices known to us. I put Cardamom, and Ginger in the firſt place becauſe that Cardamom grows in the Territories of Viſapour, and Ginger in the Dominions of the Great Mogul. And as for other Spices, they are brought from other Forreign parts to Surat, which is the grand Mart.

Cardamom is the moſt excellent of all other Spices, but it is very ſcarce; and in regard there is no great ſtore in the place where it grows, it is only made uſe of in Aſia, at the Tables of great Princes. Five hundred pound of Cardamoms, are priz'd from a hundred to a hundred and ten Reals.

Ginger is brought in great quantities from Amadabat, where there grows more than in any other part of Aſia; and it is hardly to be imagin'd how much there is tranſported candied into Foreign parts.

Pepper is of two ſorts. There is a ſort which is very ſmall, another ſort much bigger; both which ſorts are diſtinguiſh'd into ſmall and great Pepper. The larger ſort comes from the Coaſt of Malavare; and Tuticorin and Calicut are the Cities where it is brought up. Some of this Pepper comes from the Territories of the King of Viſapour, being vended at Rejapour, a little City in that Kingdom. The Hollanders that purchaſe it of the Malavares, do not give Money for it, but ſeveral ſorts of Commodities in Exchange; as Cotton, Opium, Vermillion, and Quickſilver; and this is the Pepper which is brought into Europe. As for the little Pepper that comes from Bantam, Aſchen, and ſome other parts toward the Eaſt, there is none of it carried out of Aſia, where it is ſpent in vaſt quantities, eſpecially among the Mahumetans. For there are double the Grains of ſmall Pepper in one pound, to what there are of the great Pepper; beſides that the great Pepper is hotter in the mouth.

The little Pepper that comes to Surat, has been ſold ſome years for thirteen or fourteen Mamoudi's the Mein; and ſo much I have ſeen the Engliſh give for it, to tranſport it to Ormus, Baſſara, and the Red Sea. As for the great Pepper which the Hollanders fetch from the Coaſt of Malavare, five hundred pound in truck brings them in not above thirty-eight Reals; but by the Commodities which they give in Barter, they gain Cent. per Cent.

The Nutmeg, the Nutmeg-Flow'r, the Clove, and Cinnamon, are the only Spices which the Hollanders have in their own hands. The three firſt come from the Molucca Iſlands; the fourth, which is Cinnamon, from the Iſland of Ceylan.

'Tis obſervable of the Nutmeg, that the Tree which bears it is never planted, which has been confirm'd to me by ſeveral perſons that have liv'd ſeveral years in the Countrey. They related to me, that the Nutmeg being ripe, ſeveral Birds come from the Iſlands toward the South, and devour it whole, but are forc'd to throw it up again before it be digeſted. The Nutmeg then beſmear'd with a viſcous matter, falling to the ground takes root, and produces a Tree, which would never thrive were it planted. This puts me in mind of making one obſervation upon the Birds of Paradiſe. Theſe Birds being very greedy after Nutmegs, come in flights to gorge themſelves with the pleaſing Spice, at the ſeaſon, like Felfares in Vintage time; but the ſtrength of the Nutmeg ſo intoxicates them, that they fall dead drunk to the Earth, where the Emets in a ſhort time eat off their Legs. Hence it comes, that the Birds of Paradiſe are ſaid to have no Feet; which is not true however, for I have ſeen three or four that had Feet; and a French Merchant ſent one from Aleppo as a Preſent to Lewis the Thirteenth that had Feet; of which the King made great account, as being a very lovely Fowl.

But notwithſtanding all the Hollanders Projects, you may buy Cloves at Macaſſar without purchaſing them of the Hollander; in regard the Iſlanders buy them of the Dutch Captains and Soldiers, which the Hollanders have in thoſe places where the Cloves grow, giving them in exchange Rice, and other neceſſaries for the ſupport of life, without which they would ſtarve, being very ſadly provided for.

When the Natives of Macaſſar are thus furniſh'd of Cloves, they barter them in Exchange for ſuch Commodities as are brought them; ſometines they give Tortoiſe-Shells in exchange, and Gold Duſt; by which the Merchant gains ſix or ſeven in the hundred, being better than the Money of the Iſland, though it be Gold, by reaſon the King ofttimes enhances the value of it. The places where Cloves grow, are Amboyna, Ellias, Seram, and Bouro.

The Iſlands of Banda alſo, in number ſix, viz. Nero, Lontour, Poulcay, Roſeguin, and Grenapuis, bear Nutmegs, in great abundance. The Iſland of Grenapuis is about ſix Leagues in compaſs, and ends in a ſharp point, where there is a continual fire burning out of the Earth. The Iſland of Damme, where there grows great ſtore of Nutmegs, and very big, was diſcover'd in the year 1647, by Abel Taſman, a Dutch Commander.

The price of Cloves and Nutmegs, as I have known them ſold to the Hollanders at Surat, was as follows.

The Mein of Surat contains forty Serres, which make thirty-four of our Pounds, at ſixteen Ounces to the Pound.

A Mein of Cloves was ſold for a hundred and there Mamoudi's and a half.

A Mein of Mace was ſold for a hundred and fifty-ſeven Mamoudi's and a half.

Nutmegs for fifty-ſix Mamoudi's and a half.

Cinnamon comes at Preſent from the Iſland of Ceylon. The Tree that bears it is very much like the Willow, and has three Barks. They never take off but the firſt and ſecond, which is accounted the beſt. They never meddle with the third, for ſhould the Knife enter that, the Tree would dye. So that it is an art to take off the Cinnamon, which they learn from their youth. The Cinnamon Spice is much dearer to the Hollanders than people think; for the King of Ceylan, otherwiſe call'd King of Candy, from the name of his principal City, being a ſworn Enemy to the Hollanders, ſends his Forces with an intention to ſurprize them, when they gather their Cinnamon; ſo that they are forc'd to bring ſeven or eight hundred men together to defend as many more that are at work. Which great expence of theirs very much enhances the price of the Cinnamon. There grows upon the Cinnamon Tree a certain fruit like an Olive, though not to be eaten. This the Portugals were wont to put into a Caldron of Water, together with the tops of the Branches, and boil'd it till the Water was all conſum'd. When it was cold, the upper part became a Paſte like white Wax; of which they made Tapers to ſet up in their Churches, for no ſooner were the Tapers lighted, but all the Church was perfum'd. Formerly the Portugals brought Cinnamon out of other Countries, belonging to the Raja's about Cochin.

Cochin. But the Hollanders have deſtroyed all thoſe places, ſo that the Cinnamon is now in their hands. When the Portugals had that Coaſt, the Engliſh bought their Cinnamon of them, and uſually paid for it by the Mein fifty Mamoudi's.

Drugs that are brought to Surat, and brought from other Countries, with the price of every one by the Mein.

Salt Armoniack, according to the uſual price, coſts by the Mein twenty Mamoudi's.

Borax, comes unrefin'd from Amadabat, as does Salt Armoniack, and coſts by the Mein thirty-five Mamoudi's.

Gum-Lack, ſeven Mamoudi's and a half.

Gum-Lack waſh'd, ten Mamoudi's.

Gum-Lack in ſticks of Wax, forty Mamoudi's.

There are ſome of theſe Sticks that coſt fifty or ſixty Mamoudi's the Mein, and more when they mix Musk in the Gum.

Saffron of Surat, which is good for nothing but for colouring, four Mamoudi's and a half.

Cumin White, eight Mamoudi's.

Cumin Black, three Mamoudi's.

Arlet ſmall, three Mamoudi's.

Frankincenſe, that comes from the Coaſt of Arabia, three Mamoudi's.

Myrrh, that which is good, call'd Mirra Giler, thirty Mamoudi's.

Myrrh Bolti, which comes from Arabia, fifteen Mamoudi's.

Caſſia, two Mamoudi's.

Sugar Candy, eighteen Mamoudi's.

Aſutinat, a ſort of Grain, very hot, one Mamoudi.

Anniſe-Seed Groſs, three Mamoudi's and a half.

Anniſe-Seed ſmall and hot, one Mamoudi and a half.

Oupelote, a Root, fourteen Mamoudi's.

Cointre, five Mamoudi's.

Auzerout, from Perſia, a hundred and twenty Mamoudi's.

Aloes Succotrine, from Arabia, twenty eight Mamoudi's.

Licorice, four Mamoudi's.

Lignum Aloes, in great pieces, two hundred Mamoudi's.

Lignum Aloes, in ſmall pieces, four hundred Mamoudi's.

Vez-Cabouli, a certain Root, twelve Mamoudi's.

There is a ſort of Lignum Aloes very Gummy, which comes to, by the Mein, four thouſand Mamoudi's.

Gum-Lake for the moſt part comes from Pegu; yet there is ſome alſo brought from Bengala, where it is very dear, by reaſon the Natives fetch that lively Scarlet colour out of it, with which they paint their Calicuts. Nevertheleſs, the Hollanders buy it, and carry it into Perſia for the ſame uſe of painting. That which remains after the colour is drawn off, is only fit to make ſealing Wax. That which comes from Pegu is not ſo dear, though as good for other Countries. The difference is only this, that it is not ſo clean in Pegu, where the Piſmires foul it, as in Bengala, where it grows in a healthy place, full of Shrubs, where thoſe Animals cannot ſo well come at it. The Inhabitants of Pegu never make any uſe of it in painting, being a dull ſort of people, that are in nothing at all induſtrious.

The women of Surat get their livings by cleanſing the Lake after the Scarlet colour is drawn from it. After that they give it what colour they pleaſe, and make it up into Sticks for ſealing Wax. The Engliſh and Holland Company carry away every year a hundred and fifty Cheſts. The price is about ten Sous the pound.

Powder'd Sugar is brought in great quantities out of the Kingdom of Bengala; it cauſes alſo a very great Trade at Ougeli, Patna, Daca, and other places. I have been told it for a very great certainty, by ſeveral ancient people in Bengala, that Sugar being kept thirty years becomes abſolute poiſon, and that there is no Venome more dangerous, or that ſooner works its effect. Loaf-Sugar is alſo made at Amadabat, where they are perfectly skill'd in refining it; for which reaſon it is call'd Sugar Royal. The Sugar-Loaves uſually weigh from eight to ten pound.

Opium is brought from Brampour, a Town of good Trade between Agra and Surat. The Hollanders buy great quantities, which they truck for their Pepper.

Tobacco alſo grows in abundance round about Brampour; ſometimes there has been ſo much that the Natives have let vaſt quantities rot upon the ground, for want of gathering.

Coffee grows neither in Perſia nor in India, where it is in no requeſt; but the Hollanders drive a great Trade in it, tranſporting it from Ormus into Perſia as far as Great Tartary, from Balſara into Caldea, Arabia, Meſopotamia, and other Provinces of Turky. It was firſt found out by a Hermite, whoſe name was Scheck-Siadeli, about twenty years ago, before which time it was never heard of in any Author either ancient or modern.

Deceits in Silk Wares.

Plain Silk Wares may be alter'd in length, bredth, and quality. The quality ſhews it ſelf when they are of an even thread, when the weight is equal, and when there is no Cotton thread in the Weft.

The Indians not having the art of guilding ſilver, put into their ſtrip'd Wares threads of pure Gold, ſo that you muſt count the quantity of Gold threads to ſee whether the Silk have its due number. And this alſo you muſt obſerve in your Silks wov'n with Silver. As for Taffata's, your are only to mind whether the pieces be all of a fineneſs, and to ſee by unfolding ſome of them, that there be nothing within to augment the weight, and then weighing all the pieces by themſelves, to ſee that they all agree.

The colours of thoſe Carpetts which are made in India, do not laſt ſo long as the colour of thoſe which are made in Perſia; but for the Workmanſhip it is very lovely. The eye of the Broaker is to judg of the largeneſs, beauty, and fineneſs of thoſe Carpetts which are wrought with Gold and Silver, and whether they be fine and rich. But whether they be Carpetts, or other Stuffs mix'd with Gold and Silver, it behoves the Buyer to pull out ſome of the Gold and Silver Threads, to ſee whether they be of the right value or no.

Deceits in the White Calicuts.

The deceits uſually put upon Calicuts, are in fineneſs length, and breadth. Every Bale may contain two hundred pieces; among which they will juggle in five or ſix or ten, leſs fine, or leſs white, ſhorter and narrower than according to the ſcantling of the Bale, which cannot be found out but by examining them piece by piece. The fineneſs is diſcern'd by the eye, the length and breadth by the meaſure. But the Indians practiſe a more cunning way, which is to count the number of threads which ought to be in the breadth, according to the fineneſs of the ſcantling. When the number fails, it is either more tranſparent, more narrow, or more courſe. The difference is ſometimes ſo difficult to be perceiv'd, that there is no way to find it out but by counting the threads. And yet this difference in a great quantity comes to a great deal. For it is nothing to couſen a Crown or two Crowns, in a piece that comes but to fifteen or twenty Crowns. Thoſe that whiten theſe Calicuts, to ſave charges of a few Limons, will knock the Calicuts exceſſively upon a Stone, which does fine Calicuts a great injury, and loars the price.

As for their Calicuts dy'd blew or black, you muſt take care that the Workmen do not knock them after they are folded, to make them look ſleek; for many times when they come to be unfolded, you ſhall find holes in the creaſes.

As for your painted and printed Calicuts, which are painted and printed as they come out of the Loom, the Merchant muſt take care that what he beſpeaks be finiſh'd before the end of the Rains, for the thicker the Water is where where they are wash'd, the more lively will the printed and painted colours appear. It is easy to distinguish between the printed and the painted Calicuts; and between the neatness of the work: but for the fineness and other qualities, they are not so easily discern'd; and therefore the Broaker must be more careful.

Cheats in Cotton.

THE cheat in the weight is twofold. The first, by laying them in a moist place; and thrusting in the middle of every Skain something to add to the weight. The second, in not giving good weight when the Broaker receives it from the Workman, or Merchant that delivers it.

There is but one cheat in the quality, that is by putting three or four Skains, of a coarser Commodity than that which is uppermost, into one Mein. Which in a great quantity mounts high; for there are some Cottons that are worth an hunder'd Crowns the Men. These two cheats being often us'd by the Holland-Company, there is no way but to weigh your Commodity in the presence of the Dutch-Commander, and his Councel, and to examine every Mein, Skain by Skain. When this is done, they who are order'd to be at this examination, are oblig'd to fix to every Bale a ticket of the weight and quality: for if there be a faileur, they who fix the ticket are engag'd to make good what is wanting.

Deceits in Indigo.

I Have told you, that when the Work-men have made up the Indigo-Paste into lumps, with their fingers dipt in Oil, they lay them in the Sun a drying. Now those that have a design to cheat the Merchants, dry them in the sand, to the end that the sand sticking to the Indigo, should encrease the weight. Sometimes they lay up their Paste in moist places, which makes it give, and consequently renders it more heavy. But if the Governour of the place discovers the cheat, he makes them severely pay for it: and the best way of discovery is to burn som pieces of Indigo, for the sand will remain.

Indian Broakers.

THE Brockers are as it were the Masters of the Indian Families; for they have all Goods at their disposal. The Work-men choose the most aged and most experienc'd, who are to endeavor equal advantages for the whole Tribe they undertake for. Every evening that they return from their business, and that, according to the custom of the Indians, who make no Suppers, they have eaten some little piece of Sweet-meat, and drank a glass of water, the eldest of the Tribe meet at the Broaker's House, who gives them an account of what he has done that day, and then they consult what he is to do next. Above all things, they caution him to look to his hits, and to cheat, rather than be cheated.

CHAP.

CHAP. XI.

Of Diamonds, and the Mines and Rivers where they are found; and first of the Author's journey to the Mine of Raolconda.

THE Diamond is the moſt precious of all Stones, and it was in that ſort of Commodity wherein I moſt dealt. And therefore to acquire a perfect experience, I went to all the Mines; and to one of the Rivers where they are found. To which purpoſe I travell'd to four Mines; of which I will give you a deſcription; and of one of the Rivers where I have alſo been.

The firſt of theſe Mines, where I was, is in the Territories of the King of Viſapour, in the Province of Carnatica; and the place is call'd Raolconda, five days journey from Golconda, and eight or nine from Viſapour. This Mine was diſcover'd not above two-hunder'd years ago, as I was Inform'd by thoſe of the Country.

Round about the place where the Diamonds are found, the ground is ſandy, full of Rocks, much reſembling the parts near Fountain-Bleau. There are in the Rocks ſeveral veins, ſome half a finger, ſome a whole finger-wide: And the Miners make uſe of Irons with hooks at the end, with which they pick out the earth or Sand, which they put into tubs, and among that earth, they find the Diamonds. But becauſe theſe veins do not run always ſtreight, but ſometimes down, ſometimes upward, the Miners are conſtrain'd to break the Rock, following always the traia of the veins. When they have open'd all the veins, and taken out all the ſand, then they waſh it two or three times over to look for the Diamonds. In this Mine it is that they find the cleaneſt Stones, and of the whiteſt water. But the miſchief is, that to fetch the ſand out of the Rock, they are forc'd to ſtrike ſuch terrible blows with a great Iron-leaver, that they ſlaw the Diamond, and make it look like Cryſtal. Which is the reaſon there are found ſo many ſoft Stones in this Diamond-Mine, though they make a great ſhew. If the Stone be clean, they only give it a turn or two upon the wheel, not caring to ſhape it, for fear of loſing the weight. If there be any flaws, or any points, or any black or red ſpecks in it, they cut all the Stone into Foſſets; or if there be only a little flaw, they work it under the ridg of one of the Foſſets, to hide the defect. Now becauſe a Merchant deſires rather to have a black ſpeck than a red one; 'tis but burning the Stone, and the ſpeck becomes black. This trick at length I underſtood ſo well, that when I ſaw any Stones in them that came from the Mine made into Foſſets, eſpecially very ſmall ones, I was certain there was either ſome ſpeck or ſome flaw in the Stone.

There are ſeveral Diamond-Cutters at this Mine, but none of them have above one Mill, which is of Steel. They never cut but one Stone at a time upon each Mill, caſting water continually upon the Mill, to find out the grain of the Stone; which being found they pour on Oil, (not ſparing for powder of Diamonds though it be very dear,) to make the Stone ſlide the faſter; and they lay on more weight than we do. I have ſeen them lay upon one Stone an hunder'd and fifty pound of Lead. I muſt confeſs it was a great Stone, which weigh'd an hunder'd and three Carats, after it was cut; and the Mill was like ours, only the great Wheel was turn'd by four Negros. The Indians are not of the ſame opinion that we are; for they do not believe that the weight gives any luſter to the Stones. If theirs be not ſubject to take their luſter, 'tis becauſe there is always a Boy that ſtands with a thin woodden-ſlice in his hand, and waters the Wheel continually with Oil and Powder of Diamonds. Beſides, their Wheel does not go ſo faſt as ours, becauſe the Woodden-wheel that turns the Steel-wheel, is not above three foot in Diameter.

They cannot give that lively poliſhment to Stones, as we give to ours in Europe; and I believe the reaſon to be, becauſe their Wheel does not run ſo flat as ours. For in regard it is of Steel, to rub it upon the Emeril, as muſt be done every four and twenty hours, the Tree muſt be taken off, which can never be put on again again ſo as to run ſo flat as it did. Had they the invention of Iron-mills, upon which they never uſe Emeril, but only the File, becauſe their is no neceſſity to take off the Tree to file the Mill, they might poliſh their Stones better than they do. I have told you they muſt eithe rub the Mill with Emeril, or file it every four and twenty hours. For when the Stone has run for ſome time, that part of the Mill becomes as ſmooth and bright as glaſs: ſo that if you do not rough it again either with Emeril or the File, the powder will not ſtay; whereas if the powder ſtay, there is more work done in an hour than otherwiſe in two.

Though a Diamond be naturally very hard, having a kind of a knot, as you ſee in wood, the Indian Lapidaries will cut the Stone, which our European Lapidaries find great difficulty to do, and uſually will not undertake to perform; which makes the Indians require ſomething more for the faſhion.

As for the Government of the Mines, they trade very freely, and very faithfully. They pay two per cent. to the King for all that they buy: beſides that, he has alſo a duty from the Merchants for leave to dig. The Merchant after he has made ſearch with the Miners, who know all the places where the Diamonds grow, chooſes out a place about two-hunder'd paces in compaſs, where they ſet at work ſometimes fifty, ſometimes an hunder'd Miners, as they are in haſt of work. And from the day that they begin to work, to the day that they end, the Merchants pay to the King two Pagods a-day; and four when they employ an hunder'd men.

Theſe poor people never get above three Pagods all the year long, though they underſtand their buſineſs extremely well; ſo that their wages being ſo ſmall, they make no ſcruple, when they can handſomely, to hide a Stone for their own profit; and in regard they are quite naked, only for a rag about their privities, ſometimes they are ſo dextrous, as to ſwallow the Stone. The chief of the Merchants who employ theſe Miners ſhew'd me one of them, that had cozen'd him of a Stone, and had put it into the corner of his eye, but he took it from the fellow ſo ſoon as he had diſcover'd the cheat. To prevent this cozenage, there are twelve or fifteen in fifty, who are engag'd to the Merchant, that he ſhall have no injury done him, nor any theſts committed. If by accident they meet with a Stone that weighs 14 or 16 Carats, they preſently carry it to the Maſter of the work, who gives him in recompence the Sarpo, which is a piece of Calicut to make him a Bonnet, to the value of 25 Sous, together with half a Pagod in Silver, or elſe a whole Pagod, when he gives him neither Rice nor Sugar.

The Merchants that come to trade at the Mines keep their Lodgings; and every morning about ten or eleven a clock, after they have din'd, the Maſters of the Miners bring their Diamonds to ſhew them. If the Stones are large, or that there be ſo many as amount from two-thouſand to ſixteen-thouſand Crowns, they will leave them with the ſtrange Merchant ſeven or eight days, for the Merchants to conſider. When the Merchant has ſeen the Stones, it becomes him to agree upon the price in a ſhort time. Otherwiſe the party that owes the Stones, takes them away again, and you ſhall never ſee the ſame Stones again, unleſs mix'd with others. When the bargain is concluded, the Purchaſer gives a Bill of Exchange upon the Banker. If you have agreed to pay him in four dayes, and make him ſtay longer, you muſt pay him down one and an half in the hunder'd for a months intereſt. Moſt commonly when they know the Merchant to be ſufficient, they will chooſe to take a Bill of Exchange for Agra, for Golconda, or Viſapour, but more eſpecially for Surat, as being the moſt frequented Port in all India, where they may furniſh themſelves with all Commodities which they want.

'Tis very pleaſant to ſee the young children of the Merchants and other people of the Countrey, from the age of ten to fifteen or ſixteen years, who ſeat themſelves upon a Tree, that lies in the void place of the Town: Every one of them has his Diamond-weights in a little Bag hanging at one ſide, on the other his Purſe, with five or ſix-hunder'd Pagods in Gold in it. There they ſit expecting when any perſon will come to ſell them ſome Diamonds. If any perſon brings them a Stone, they put it into the hands of the eldeſt Boy among them, who is as it were their chief; who looks upon it, and after that gives it to him that is next him; by which means it goes from hand to hand, till it return to him again, none of the reſt ſpeaking one word. After that he demands the price, to buy it if poſſible; but but if he buy it to dear, 'tis upon his own account. In the evening the Children compute what they have laid out, then they look upon their Stones, and seperate them according to their water, their weight, and clearness. Then they bring them to the great Merchants, who have generally great parcels to match: and the profit is divided among the children equally; only the chief among them has a fourth in the hunder'd more than the rest. As young as they are, they so well understand the price of Stones, that if one of them have bought any purchase, and is willing to lose one half in the hunder'd, the other shall give him his Money. They shall hardly bring you a parcel of Stones, above a dozen, wherein there is not some flaw or other defect.

When I came to the Mine, I went to wait upon the Governour, who told me I was welcome; and because he made no question but that I had brought Gold with me, (for they talk of nothing under Gold at the Mines,) he bid me only lay it in my Chamber, and he would undertake it should be safe. Thereupon he presented me with four servants to watch my Gold day and night, and to follow my orders, bidding me withal fear nothing, but eat, drink, and sleep, and take care of my health; but withal he told me I must be careful of not cheating the King. Thereupon I fell to buying, and found profit enough, above twenty in the hunder'd cheaper than at Golconda.

I have one thing to observe, which is more than ordinarily curious, concerning the manner how the Indians, as well as Mahumetans as Idolaters, drive their bargains. Every thing is done with great silence, and without any talking on either side. The buyer and the seller sit one before another like two Taylors, and the one of the two opening his Girdle, the seller takes the right-hand of the purchaser, and covers his own hand and that with his Girdle: under which, in the presence of many Merchants that meet together in the same Hall, the bargain is secretly driven without the knowledg of any person. For then the purchaser nor seller speak neither with their mouths nor eyes, but only with the hand, as thus. When the seller takes the purchaser by the whole hand, that signifies a thousand, and as often as he squeezes it, he means so many thousand Pagods or Roupies, according to the Money in question. If he takes but half to the knuckle of the middle-finger, that's as much as to say fifty: The small end of the finger to the first knuckle signifies ten. When he grasps five fingers, it signifies five-hunder'd, if but one finger, one-hunder'd. This is the mystery which the Indians use in driving their bargains. And many times it happens, that it the same place, where there are several people, one and the same parcel shall be sold seven or eight times over, and no person know that it was sold in that manner every time.

As for the weight of the Stones, no person can be deceiv'd in them, unless he purchase them in hugger-mugger. For if they are publickly bought, there is a person on purpose paid by the King, without any benefit from particular persons, whose place it is to weigh the Diamonds; and when he has spoken the weight, the buyer and seller are satisfi'd in his words, as not being a person any way oblig'd to favour any person.

Having dispatch'd all my business at the Mine, the Governour appointed me six Horse-men to convoy me through the Territories under his Government, which extends to a River that separates the Kingdom of Visapour from that of Golconda. 'Tis a very difficult thing to cross that River, it being deep, broad and rapid; besides that, there are no Boats. But they ferry over Men, Carriages, Oxen and Coaches upon a round Vessel, ten or twelve foot in Diameter, made of Osier-twigs, like our Flaskets, and cover'd without with Ox-hides; as I have already related. They might easily use Boats, or make a Bridg; but the King of Golconda will not suffer either, because the River parts the two Kingdoms. Every evening the Ferry-men on both sides are bound to carry to two Governours on each side the River, an exact account of the Persons, Carriages and Merchandizes which they ferri'd over that day.

Coming to Golconda, I found that the person whom I had left in trust with my Chamber, was dead: but that which I observ'd most remarkable, was, that I found the door seal'd with two Seals, one being the Cadi's or chief Justice's, the other the Sha-Bander's, or Provost of the Merchants. An Officer of Justice, together with the Servants I had left behind, watch'd the Chamber night and day. This Officer hearing of my arrival, went and gave notice to the Cadi and Sha-Bander, who ſent for me. The Cadi preſently ask'd me, if the Money I had left in the Chamber where the perſon dy'd were mine, and how I could prove it. I told him I had no better proofs than the Letters of Exchange which I had brought to the Banker that paid it by my order to the perſon deceas'd; to whom I had alſo giv'n farther order, that if the Banker paid me in Silver, he ſhould change the ſum into Gold. Thereupon the Bankers were ſent for, who affirming the payments accordingly, the Cadi ſent his Deputy to op'n the Chamber door; nor would he leave me, till I had counted over my Money, and had aſſur'd him it was right. After that I return'd to the Cadi and the Sha-Bander, and ſignifi'd as much to them; and having paid them ſome Fees which they demanded. to the value of four Crowns and a half of our Money, I return'd them my thanks for their care. This I relate to ſhew the juſtice of the Country.

Officer

CHAP. XII.

The Authors Journey to the other Mines; and how they find the Diamonds there.

SEven days journey from Golconda Eaſtward there is another Diamond Mine, call'd in the language of the Country Gani, in the Perſian tongue Coulour. It is near a great Town, by which the ſame River runs, which I croſs'd coming from the other Mine; and a League and a half from the Town is a high Mountain in the form of a Half-Moon; the ſpace between the Town an the Mountain is a Plain where they dig and find Diamonds. The nearer they dig to the Mountain, the larger Stones they find; but at the top they find nothing at all.

It is not above a hundred years ſince this Mine was found out by a Countryman, who digging in a piece of ground to ſow Millet, found therein a pointed Stone that weigh'd above twenty five Carats; he not knowing what the Stone was, but ſeeing it gliſter, carry'd it to Golconda, where as it happen'd well for him, he met with one that traded in Diamonds. The Merchant informing himſelf of the place where the Stone was found, admir'd to ſee a Jewel of that bigneſs, not having ſeen any one before that weigh'd above ten or twelve Carats. However his report made a great noiſe in the Country; inſomuch that the Mony'd men in the Town ſet themſelves to work, and cauſing the ground to be ſearch'd, they found, and ſtill do find bigger Stones, and in greater quantity than in any other Mine. For they found a great number of Stones from ten to forty Carats, and ſometimes bigger; among the reſt that large Stone that weigh'd nine hundred Carats, which Mirgimola preſented to Aureng-zeb.

But though this Mine of Coulour be ſo conſiderable for the quantity of great Stones which are there found, yet the miſchief is, the Stones are not clean; the Waters having ſomething of the quality of the Earth where they are found. If the Ground be merſhy, the Water enclines to black; if it be red, there is a redneſs in the Water; in other places the Stones appear ſomewhat greeniſh, in others yellowiſh; ſuch a diverſity of Soils there is between the Town and the Mountain. Upon the moſt part of theſe Stones after they are cut, there appears a kind of greaſie moiſture, which muſt be as often wip'd off.

As for the Water of the Stones, it is remarkable, that whereas in Europe we make uſe of day-light to examine the rough Stones, and to judg of their Water, and the ſpecks that are found therein, the Indians do all that in the night-time, ſetting up a Lamp with a large Wick, in a hole which they make in the Wall, about a foot ſquare; by the light whereof they judg of the Water and clearneſs of the Stone, which they hold between their Fingers. The Water which they call celeſtial is the worſt of all, and it is impoſſible to diſcern it ſo long as the Stone is rough. The moſt infallible way to find out that Water, is to carry the Stone under a Tree thick of Boughs, for by the verdure of that ſhade you may eaſily diſcern whether the Water be blewiſh or no.

The firſt time I was at the Mine, there were above ſixty thouſand perſons at work, men, woman, and children; the men being employ'd to dig, the women, and Children to carry the Earth.

After the Miners have pitch'd upon the place where they intend to work, they level another place cloſe by, of the ſame extent, or elſe a little bigger, which they encloſe with a Wall about two foot high. In the bottom of that little Wall, at the diſtance of every two foot, they make ſmall holes to let in the water; which they ſtop up afterwards, till they come to drain out the water again. The place being thus prepar'd, the people that are to work meet all together, men, women, and children, with the Workmaſter in the Company of his Friends and Relations. Then he brings along with him ſome little Image of the God that they adore; which being plac'd upright upon the ground, they all proſtrate themſelves three times before it, while their Prieſt ſays a certain prayer. The prayer being ended, he marks the forehead of every one with a kind of Glue, made of Saffron and Gum, to ſuch a compaſs as will hold ſeven or eight Grains of Rice, which he ſticks upon it; then having waſh'd their bodies with water, which every one brings in his pot, they rank themſelves in order to eat what the Workmaſter preſents them, before they go to work, to encourage them both to labour and be faithful. This Feaſt conſiſts of nothing elſe but every one his Plate of Rice, diſtributed by the Bramin; for an Idolater may eat any thing from the hands of one of their Prieſts. The Plates are made of the Leaves of a certain Tree, not much unlike our Walnut-tree Leaves. Beſides this, every one has a quarter of a pound of Butter, melted in a ſmall Copper pot with ſome Sugar.

When their Feaſt is over, the men fall to digging, the women and children to carry Earth to the place prepar'd in that mannner as I have already deſcrib'd, They dig ten, twelve, and ſometimes fourteen foot deep; but when they come to any water they leave off. All the Earth being carry'd into the place beforemention'd, the men, women, and children with Pitchers throw the water which is in the drains upon the Earth, letting it ſoak for two or three days, according to the hardneſs of it, till it come to be a kind of Batter; then they open the holes in the Wall to let out the water, and throw on more water ſtill, till all the mud be waſh'd away, and nothing left but the Sand. After that they dry it in the Sun; and then they winnow the Sand in little Winnows, as we winnow our Corn. The ſmall duſt flies away, the great remains, which they pour out again upon the ground.

The Earth being thus winnow'd, they ſpread with a kind of Rake, as thin as they poſſibly can; then with a wooden Inſtrument, like a Paviers Rammer, about half a foot wide at the bottom, they pound the Earth from one end to the other, two or three times over. After that they winnow it again then; and ſpreading it at one end of the Van, for fear of loſing any of the Earth, they look for the Diamond.

Formerly they were wont to pound the Earth with Flint-ſtones, inſtead of wooden Rammers; which made great flaws in the Diamonds, and is therefore now left off.

Heretofore they made no ſcruple to buy thoſe Diamonds that had a green outſide; for being cut, they prov'd very white, and of an excellent water.

Since they have been more nice; for there was a Mine diſcover'd between Coulour and Raolconda, which the King caus'd to be ſhut up again, by reaſon of ſome cheats that were us'd there; for they found therein that ſort of Stones which had this green outſide, fair and tranſparent, and which appear'd more fair than the others; but when they came to the Mill they crumbl'd to pieces.

CHAP. XIII.

A Continuation of the Authors Travels to the Diamond Mines.

I come to the third Mine, which is the moſt ancient of all, in the Kingdom of Bengala. You may give it the name of Soumelpour, which is the name of the Town next to the place where the Diamonds are found; or rather Gouel, which is the name of the River in the Sand whereof they ſeek for the Stones. The Territories through which this River runs, belong to a Raja, who was anciently tributary to the Great Mogul, but revolted in the time of the Wars between Sha-jehan and Gehan-guir his Father. So ſoon as Sha-jehan came to the Empire, he ſent to demand his Tribute of this Raja, as well for the time paſt, as to come; who finding that his Revenues were not ſufficient to pay him, quitted his Country, and retir'd into the Mountains with his Subjects. Upon his refuſal, Sha-jehan believing he would ſtand it out, ſent a great Army againſt him, perſwading himſelf that he ſhould find great ſtore of Diamonds in his Country. But he found neither Diamonds, nor People, nor Victuals, the Raja having burnt all the Corn which his Subjects could not carry away; ſo that the greateſt part of Sha-jehans Army periſh'd for hunger. At length the Raja return'd into his Country, upon condition to pay the Mogul ſome ſlight Tribute.

The Way from Agra to this Mine.

From Agra to Halabas, coſtes 130
From Halabas to Banarous, coſtes 33
From Agra to Saſaron, coſtes 4
From Agra to Saſeron you travel Eaſtward; but from Saſeron to the Mine you muſt wind to the South, coming firſt to a great Town, coſtes 21
This Town belongs to the Raja I have ſpoke of. From thence you go to a Fortreſs call'd Rodas, coſtes 4
This is one of the ſtrongeſt places in all Aſia, ſeated upon a Mountain fortifi'd with ſix Baſtions, and twenty-ſeven pieces of Cannon, with three Moats full of Water, wherein there are good Fiſh. There is but one way to come to the top of the Mountain, where there is a Plain half a League in compaſs, wherein they ſow Corn and Rice. There is above twenty Springs that water that Plain; but all the reſt of that Mountain from top to bottom is nothing but a ſteep Precipice cover'd with over-grown Woods. The Raja's formerly us'd to live in this Fort with a Garriſon of ſeven or eight hundred men. But the Great Mogul has it now; having taken that Fort by the policy of the famous Mirgimola, which all the Kings of India could never take before. The Raja left three Sons, who betray'd one another; the eldeſt was poiſon'd, the ſecond went and ſerv'd the Great Mogul, who gave him the command of four thouſand Horſe; the third poſſeſſes his Fathers Territories, paying the Mogul a ſmall Tribute.
From the Fortreſs of Rodas to Soumelpour, coſtes 30
Soumelpour is a great Town, the Houſes whereof are built of Earth, and cover'd only with Branches of Coco-trees. All theſe thirty Leagues you travel through Woods, which is a very dangerous paſſage, as being very much peſter'd with Robbers. The Raja lives half a League from the Town, in Tents ſet upon a fair riſing ground, at the foot whereof runs the Gouel, deſcending from the Southern Mountains, and falling into Ganges.
In this River they find the Diamonds. For after the great Rains are over, which is uſually in December, they ſtay all January till the River be clear; by reaſon that by that time in ſome places it is not above two foot deep, and in ſeveral places the Sand lies above the water. About the end of January, or the beginning of February, there flock together out of the great Town, and ſome others adjoining, above eight thouſand perſons, men, women and children, that are able to work. They that are skilful know by the ſand whether there be any Diamonds or no, when they find among the ſand little Stones like to thoſe which we call Thunder-Stones. They begin to make ſearch in the River from the Town of Soumelpour to the very Mountains from whence the River falls, for fifty Leagues together.

Where they believe there are Diamonds, they encompaſs the place with Stakes, Faggots, and Earth, as when they go about to make the Arch of a Bridg to drain all the water out of that place. Then they dig out all the Sand for two foot deep, which is all carried and ſpread upon a great place for that purpoſe prepar'd upon the ſide of the River; encompaſs'd with a little Wall about a foot and half high. When they have fill'd this place with as much Sand as they think convenient, they throw water upon it, waſh it, and ſift it; doing in other things as they do at the Mines which I have already deſcrib'd.

From this River come all thoſe fair Points which are call'd natural Points, but a great Stone is ſeldom found here. The reaſon why none of theſe Stones have been ſeen in Europe, is becauſe of the Wars, that have hinder'd the people from working.

Beſides the Diamond Mine which I have ſpoken of in the Province of Carnatica, which Mirgimola caus'd to be ſet up, by reaſon of the yellowneſs of the Diamonds, and the foulneſs of the Stones; there is in the Iſland of Borneo, the largeſt Iſland in the World, another River call'd Succadan, in the Sand whereof they find Diamonds as hard as any in the other Mines. The principal reaſon that diſſwaded me from going to the Iſland of Borneo was, becauſe I underſtood that the Queen of the Iſland would not permit any Strangers to carry away any of thoſe Diamonds out of the Iſland. Thoſe few that are exported, being carry'd out by ſtealth, and privately ſold at Batavia. I ſay the Queen, and not the King, becauſe in that Iſland the Women have the Soveraign Command, and not the Men. For the people are ſo curious to have a lawful Heir upon the Throne, that the Husband not being certain that the Children which he has by his Wife are his own; but the Wife being always certain that the Children which ſhe bears are hers, they rather chooſe to be govern'd by a Woman, to whom they give the Title of Queen; her Husband being only her Subject, and having no power but what ſhe permits him.

CHAP. XIV.

Of the diverſity of Weights us'd at the Diamond Mines. Of the Pieces of Gold and Silver there Current; and the Rule which they obſerve to know the Price of Diamonds.

AT the Mine of Raolconda they weigh by Mangelins, a Mangelin being one Carat and three quarters, that is ſeven Grains.

At the Mine of Gani or Coulour they uſe the ſame weights.

At the Mine of Soumelpour in Bengala, they weigh by Rati's, and the Rati is ſeven eighths of a Carat, or three Grains and a half. They uſe the ſame Weights over all the Empire of the Mogul.

In the Kingdoms of Golconda and Viſapour, they make uſe of Mangelins; but a Mangelin in thoſe parts is not above one Carat and three eighths. The Portugals in Goa make uſe of the ſame Weights in Goa; but a Mangelin there is not above five Grains.

As for the Money in uſe: Firſt, in Bengala, in the Territories of the Raja before mention'd, in regard they lye enclos'd within the Dominions of the Great Mogul, they make their payments in Roupies.

At

At the two Mines about Raolconda in the Kingdom of Viſapour, the payments are made in new Pagods, which the King coins in his own Name, as being independent from the Great Mogul. The new Pagod is not always at the ſame value; for it is ſometimes worth three Roupies and a half, ſometimes more, and ſometimes leſs; being advanc'd and brought down according to the courſe of Trade, and the correſpondence of the Bankers with the Princes and Governors.

At the Mine of Colour or Gani, which belongs to the Kingdom of Golconda, they make their payments in new Pagods, which are equal in value to the King of Viſapour's. But ſometimes you are forc'd to give four in the hunder'd more, by reaſon they are better Gold, and beſides, they will take no others at the Mine. Theſe Pagods are coin'd by the Engliſh and Hollanders, who, whether willingly or by force, are privileg'd by the King to coin them in their Forts: And thoſe of the Hollanders coſt one or two per cent. more than the Engliſh, by reaſon they are better Gold, and for that the Miners chooſe them before the other. But in regard the Merchants are prepoſſeſs'd that the Miners are a rude and ſavage ſort of people, and that the ways are dangerous, they ſtay at Golconda, where the Workmaſters keep correſpondence with them, and ſend them their Jewels. There they pay in old Pagods coin'd many ages ago by ſeveral Princes that Reign'd in India before the Mahumetans got footing therein. Thoſe old Pagods are worth four Roupies and a half, that is to ſay, a Roupy more than the new: not that there is any more Gold in them, or that they weigh any more. Only the Bankers, to oblige the King, not to bring down the price, pay him annually a very great ſum, by reaſon they get very much by it. For the Merchants receive none of thoſe Pagods without a Changer to examin them, ſome being all defac'd, others low-metal others wanting weight: ſo that if one of theſe Bankers were not preſent at the receipt, the Merchant would be a greater loſer, ſometimes one, ſometimes five, ſometimes ſix i'th' hunder'd: for which they alſo pay them one quarter in the hunder'd for their pains. When the Miners are paid, they alſo receive their Money in the preſence of Bankers, who tells them which is good, and which is bad; and has for that alſo one quarter i'th' hunder'd. In the payment of a thouſand or two-thouſand Pagods, the Banker, for his fee, puts them into a bag, and ſeals it with his Seal; and when the Merchant pays for his Diamonds, he brings the Seller to the Banker, who finding his bag entire, aſſures the party that all is right and good within; and ſo there is no more trouble.

As for the Roupies, they take indifferently, as well the Great Mogul's as the King of Golconda's: by reaſon that thoſe which that King coins, are to be coin'd, by Articles, with the Great Mogul's ſtamp.

'Tis an idle thing to believe that vulgar error, that it is enough to carry Spices, Tobacco, Looking-glaſſes, and ſuch trifles to truck for Diamonds at the Indian Mines: For I can aſſure ye, theſe people will not only have Gold, but Gold of the beſt ſort too.

As for the roads to the Mines, ſome fabulous modern relations have render'd them very dangerous, and fill'd them full of Lions, Tigers, and cruel People; but I found them not only free from thoſe wild creatures, but alſo the People very loving and courteous.

From Golconda to Raolconda, which is the principal Mine, the road is as follows: the road being meaſur'd by Gos, is four French-leagues.

From Golconda to Canapour, one Gos.
From Canapour to Parquel, two Gos and a half.
From Parquel to Cakenol, one Gos.
From Cakenol to Canol-Candanor, three Gos.
From Canol-Candanor to Setapour, one Gos.
From Setapour to the River, two Gos.
That River is the bound between the Kingdoms of Golconda and Viſapour.
From the River to Alpour, three quarters of a Gos.
From Alpour to Canal, three quarters of a Gos.
From Canal to Raolconda, two Gos and a half.

Thus from Golconda to the Mine, they reckon it ſeventeen Goſs, or 68 French-Leagues.

From Golconda to the Mine of Coulour or Gani, is reckon'd thirteen Gos and three quarters, or 55 French-leagues.

From

From Golconda to Almaſpinda, three Gos and a half.
From Almaſpinda to Kaper, two Gos.
From Kaper to Montecour, two Gos and a half.
From Montecour to Naglepar, two Gos.
From Naglepar to Eligada, one Gos and a half.
From Eligada to Sarvaron, one Gos.
From Sarvaron to Mellaſeron, one Gos.
From Mellaſeron to Ponocour, two Gos and a quarter.
At Ponocour you only croſs the River to Coulour.

CHAP. XV.

The Rule to know the juſt price and value of a Diamond of what weight ſoever, from three to a hunder'd, and upwards; a ſecret known to very few people in Europe.

I Make no mention of Diamonds of three Carats, the price thereof being ſufficiently known.

Firſt then, as to others above that weight, you muſt know how much the Diamond weighs, and ſee if it be perfect; if it be a thick Stone, well-ſquar'd, and have all its corners, if the water be white and lively, without ſpecks and flaws. If it be a Stone cut in Facets, which we call a Roſe-Diamond, you muſt take notice whether the form be round or oval, whether it be of a fair breadth, and not of Stones clapt together; whether it be of a good water, and without ſpecks or flaws.

Such a Stone weighing one Carat, is worth 150 Livres or more. Now to know how much a Stone of the ſame perfection, weighing 12 Carats, is worth.

Multiply 12 by 12, it makes 144. Then multiply 144 by 150, which is the price of a Stone of one Carat, it comes to 21600 Livres.

As for Example.

12
144
150
7200
144

To know the price of imperfect Diamonds, you muſt obſerve the ſame rule, grounded upon the price of a Stone of one Carat.

You have a Diamond of fifteen Carats ſhewn ye, neither of a good water, nor good form, and full of ſpecks and flaws beſides: ſuch a Diamond cannot be worth above 60, or 80, or 100 Livres at moſt, according to the goodneſs of the Stone. Multiply therefore the weight of the Diamond of 15 Carats by 15: then multiply the product, which is 125, by the value of the Stone of one Carat, which we will grant to be 80 Livres, the product whereof is 10000 Livres, the price of a Diamond of 15 Carats.

The

15
15

15

125

10000 livres.

By that it is eaſie to diſcover the difference between a perfect and an imperfect Stone. For if that Stone of 15 Carats were perfect, the ſecond multiplicatiou ſhould be wrought by 150, which is the price of a perfect Stone of one Carat: and then the Diamond would come not to 10000 Livres, but to 33750 Livres, that is 23750 Livres more than an imperfect Diamond of the ſame weight.

By this rule obſerve the price of two the greateſt Diamonds of the World for Cut-ſtones, the one in Aſia, belonging to the Great Mogul; the other in Europe, in the poſſeſſion of the Duke of Tuſcany.

The Great Mogul's Diamond weighs 279 and 9 16th Carats. It is of a perfect good water, of a good ſhape, with only a little flaw in the edg of the cutting be low, which goes round about the Stone. Without that flaw, the firſt Carat were worth 160 Livres, but for that reaſon I reckon it not at above 150; and ſo by the rule it comes to 11723278 Livres, 14 Sous, and three Liards. Did the Diamond weigh no more than 279 Carats, it would not be worth above 11676150 Livres, ſo that the nine 16ths comes to 47128 Livres, 14 Sous, and three Liards.

The Great Duke of Tuſcany's Diamond weighs 139 Carats, clean and well-ſhap'd, cut in facets every way: but in regard the water enclines ſomewhat toward the colour of Citron, I do not value the firſt Carat above 135 Livres; ſo that by the rule the Diamond ought to be worth 2608335 Livres.

A Diamond by the Miners is call'd Iri, which the Turks, Perſians and Arabians call Almas.

CHAP. XVI.

Of Colour'd Stones, and the Places where they are found.

THere are but two places in all the Eaſt where Colour'd-Stones are found, within the Kingdom of Pegu, and the Iſland of Ceylan. The firſt is a Mountain twelve days journey, or there-abouts, from Siren, toward the North-eaſt; the name whereof is Capelan. In this Mine are found great quantities of Rubies and Eſpinels, or Mothers of Rubies, yellow Topazes, blew and white Saphirs, Jacinths, Amethyſts, and other Stones of different colours. Among theſe Stones which are hard, they find other Stones of various colours, that are very ſoft, which they call Bacan in the language of the Country, but are of little or no eſteem.

Siren is the name of the City where the King of Pegu reſides; and Ava is the Port of his Kingdom. From Ava to Siren you go by water in great flat-bottom'd-Barks, which is a voyage of ſixty days. There is no going by land, by reaſon the Woods are full of Lions, Tigers, and Elephants. It is one of the pooreſt Countreys in the World, where there is no Commodity but Rubies; the whole Revenue whereof amounts not to above a hunder'd-thouſand Crowns. Among all the Stones that are there found, you ſhall hardly ſee one of three or four Carats rats that is absolutely clean, by reason that the King strictly enjoyns his Subjects not to export them out of his Dominions; besides that, he keeps to himself all the clean Stones that are found. So that I have got very considerably in my Travels, by carrying Rubies out of Europe into Asia. Which makes me very much suspect the relation of Vincent le Blanc, who reports that he saw in the King's Palace, Rubies as big as eggs.

All Rubies are sold by weights, which are call'd Ratis; that is, three grains and a half, or seven 8*ths* of a Carat: and the payments are made in old Pagods.

A Ruby weighing one Ratis, has been sold for Pagods	20
A Ruby of 2 Ratis and one 8*th*, Pagods	85
A Ruby of 3 Ratis and one 4*th*, Pagods	185
A Ruby of 4 Ratis and five 8*ths*, Pagods	450
A Ruby of 5 Ratis, Pagods	525
A Ruby of 6 Ratis and a half, Pagods	920

If a Ruby exceed six Ratis, and be a perfect Stone, there is no value to be set upon it.

The Natives of the Country call all Colour'd-Stones Rubies, distinguishing them only by the colour. Saphirs they call Blue-Rubies, Amethysts they call Violet-Rubies, Topazes Yellow-Rubies; and so of other Stones.

The other place where Rubies are found, is a River in the Island of Ceylan, which descends from certain high Mountains in the middle of the Island; which swells very high when the rains fall; but when the waters are low, the people make it their business to search among the Sands for Rubies, Saphirs and Topazes. All the Stones that are found in this River, are generally fairer and clearer than those of Pegu.

I forgot to tell you that there are some Rubies, but more Balleis-Rubies, and an abundance of Bastard-Rubies, Saphirs and Topazes found in the Mountains that run along from Pegu to the Kingdom of Camboya.

Colour'd-Stones are also found in some parts of Europe, as in Bohemia and Hungary. In Hungary there is a Mine where they find certain Flints of different bigness, some as big as eggs, some as big as a man's fist, which being broken, contain a Ruby within as hard and as clean as those of Pegu.

In Hungary there is a Mine of Opals, which Stone is no-where else to be found in the World but there.

The Turquoise is no-where to be found but in Persia. Where there are two Mines. The one is called the Old-Rock, three days journey from Mechet, toward the North-west, near a great Town which goes by the name of Michabourg. The other which is call'd the New-Rock is five days journey off. Those of the New-Rock are of a Paler blue enclining to white, and less esteem'd, so that you may have a great many for a little Money. Some years since the King of Persia commanded that no Turquoises should be digg'd out of the Old-Rock, but only for himself; making use of those Turquoises instead of enamelling, to adorn Hilts of Swords, Knives and Daggers; of which the Persians are altogether ignorant.

As for Emraulds, it is a vulgar error to say they come originally from the East. And therefore when Jewellers and Gold-smiths, to prefer a deep-colour'd Emrauld enclining to black, tell ye, it is an Oriental Emrauld, they speak that which is not true. I confess I could never discover in what part of our Continent those Stones are found. But sure I am, that the Eastern-part of the World never produc'd any of those Stones, neither in the Continent, nor in the Islands. True it is, that since the discovery of America some of those Stones have been often brought rough from Peru to the Philippine-Islands, whence they have been transported into Europe; but this is not enough to make them Oriental. Besides that, at this time they send them into Spain through the North-Sea.

CHAP. XVII.

Of Pearles, and the Places where they Fiſh for them.

IN the firſt place, there is a Fiſhery for Pearls in the Perſian Gulf, round about the Iſland of Bakren. It belongs to the King of Perſia, and there is a ſtrong Fort in it, Garriſon'd with three hundred men. The Water which the people drink in that Iſland, and all along the Coaſt of Perſia, is brackiſh and ill-taſted, ſo that only the Natives of the Country can drink it. Freſh water coſts Strangers very dear; for the people fetch it ſometimes one League, ſometimes two Leagues from the Iſland, from the bottom of the Sea, being let down by a Rope, with a Bottle or two ty'd about their waſtes, which they fill, and ſtop it well; and then giving the Rope a twitch, are hall'd up again by their Companions.

Every one that fiſhes pays to the King of Perſia five Abaſſis, whether he get any thing or no. The Merchant alſo pays the King ſome ſmall matter for every thouſand Oyſters.

The ſecond Fiſhery for Perals is right againſt Bakren upon the Coaſt of Arabia the happy, near the City of Catifa, which together with all the Country about it, is under the Juriſdiction of an Arabian Prince. The Pearls that are fiſh'd in theſe places are ſold to the Indians, who are not ſo nice as we; for they give a good price for all, as well the uneven as the round ones. Over all Aſia they chuſe the yellow Water enclining to white; for they ſay thoſe Pearls that encline ſomewhat to a Gold colour, are more brisk, and never change colour; but that the white ones will change in thirty-years time, through the very heat of the weather and the ſweat of the perſon that wears them, turning the ſcandalouſly yellow.

There is a wondrous Pearl in the poſſeſſion of an Arabian Prince, that took Maſcate from the Portugals. He then call'd himſelf Imenhect Prince of Maſcaté; being known before only by the name of Aceph Ben-Ali Prince of Norennaé. It is but a ſmall Province, but it is the beſt of all in the Happy Arabia. Therein grow all things neceſſary for the life of man; particularly, delicate fruits, but more eſpecially moſt excellent Grapes, which would make moſt incomparable Wine. This Prince has the moſt wonderful Pearl in the world, not ſo much for its bigneſs, for it weighs not above twelve Carats and one ſixteenth, not for its perfect roundneſs, but becauſe it is ſo clear and ſo tranſparent that you may almoſt ſee through it. The Great Mogul offer'd him by a Banian forty thouſand Crowns for his Pearl, but he would not accept it. By which you ſee, that it is more profitable to carry Jewels that are rare out of Europe into Aſia, than to bring them out of Aſia into Europe; unleſs it be to Japan or China, where Jewels are little eſteem'd.

There is another Fiſhery for Pearles in the Sea that beats againſt the Walls of a great Town call'd Manar, in the Iſland of Ceylan. For their roundneſs and their Water, they are the faireſt that are found in any other Fiſhery; but they rarely weigh above three or four Carats.

There are excellent Pearls, and of a very good water, and large, which are found upon the Coaſt of Japan; but there are few fiſh'd for, in regard Jewels are of no eſteem among the Natives.

There are other Fiſheries, in the Weſt Indies; in the firſt place all along the Iſland of Cubagna, three Leagues in compaſs, lying ten Degrees and a half of Northern Latidue, a hundred and ſixty Leagues from Samo Domingo. The Pearls are ſmall, ſeldom weighing above five Carats.

The ſecond Fiſhery is in the Iſland of Manguerita, or the Iſland of Pearles, a League from Cubagna, but much bigger. This Fiſhery is not the moſt plentiful, but it is the moſt eſteem'd of all thoſe in the Weſt Indies, by reaſon the Pearles are of moſt excellent water, and very large. I ſold one Pear-faſhion'd to Sha-Eſi-Kan, the Great Moguls Uncle, that weigh'd fifty-five Carats.

The third Fishery is at Camogete, near the Continent.

The fourth at Rio de la Hacha, all along the same Coast.

The fifth and last, at St. Martha's, sixty Leagues from Rio de la Hacha. All these three Fisheries produce very weighty Pearls; but they are generally ill-shap'd, and of a water enclining to the colour of Lead.

As for Scotch Pearl, and those that are found in the Rivers of Bavaria, tho a Neck-lace of them may be worth a thousand Crowns, yet they are not to be compar'd with the Eastern and West Indian Pearls.

Some years since there was a Fishery discover'd in a certain place upon the Coast of Japan, and I have seen some which the Hollanders have brought thence. They are of a very good water, and large, but very uneven.

Take this observation along with you, touching the difference of their waters; some being very white, others inclining to yellow, others to black, others to a leaden colour. As for the last, there are no such but only in America, which proceeds from the nature of the Earth at the bottom of the Water, which is generally more ouzy than in the East. I once met with six Pearls in the return of a Cargo from the West Indies that were perfectly round, but black like jet, which weigh'd one with another twelve Carats. I carried them into the East Indies to put them off, but could meet with no Chapman to buy them. As for those that incline to yellow, it proceeds from hence, that the Fishermen selling the Oysters to the Merchants in heaps, while they stay fourteen or fifteen days till the Oysters lose their water, the Oysters wast and begin to smell, for which reason the Pearl grows yellow by infection, which appears to be a truth, in regard that where the Oysters preserve their liquor the Pearls are white. Now the reason why they stay till the Oysters open of themselves, is because that if they should force them open, they might perhaps injure and cut the Pearl. In short, the Eastern people are much of our humour in matter of whiteness, for they love the whitest Pearls and the blackest Diamonds; the whitest bread, and the fairest women.

CHAP. XVIII.

How the Pearls are bred in the Oysters; how they Fish for them, and at what time.

SOme ancient Writers have vulgarly reported, that Pearls are produc'd by the Dew of Heaven, and that there is but one in an Oyster; but experience teaches the contrary. For the Oyster never stirs from the bottom of the Sea, where the Dew can never come, which is many times twelve fathoms deep; besides, that it is as often observ'd, that there are six or seven Pearls in one Oyster; and I have had in my hands an Oyster, wherein there were above ten beginning to breed. 'Tis very true, that they are not always of the same bigness; for they grow in an Oyster after the same manner as Eggs in the Belly of a Pullet. But I cannot say there are Pearls in all, for you may open many Oysters and find none.

'Tis no advantage to them that fish for Pearls; for if the poor people could find any other employment, they would never stick to such a one as meerly keeps them alive. But the Land is so barren, that you may travel twenty Leagues before you meet with one blade of Grass; and the people are so miserably poor, that they feed upon nothing but Dates and Salt-fish.

They fish in the Eastern Seas twice a year; the first time in March and April, the second time in August and September; and they keep their Fairs in June and November. However they do not fish every year; for they that fish, will know beforehand whether it will turn to account or no. Now to the end they may not be deceiv'd, they send to the places where they are wont to fish, seven or eight Barks, who bring back each of them about a thousand Oysters, which which they open, and if they find not in every thouſand Oyſters to the value of five Fano's of Pearl, which amounts to half a Crown of our Money, 'tis a ſign that the Fiſhing will not turn to account, in regard the poor people would not be able to defray their charge. For partly for a ſtock to ſet out, and partly for victuals while they are abroad, they are forc'd to borrow Money at three or four in the hundred a month. So that unleſs a thouſand Oyſters yield them five Fano's of Pearls, they do not fiſh that year. As for the Merchants, they muſt buy their Oyſters at hap-hazard, and be content with what they find in them. If they meet with great Pearls, they account themſelves happy; which they ſeldom do at the Fiſhery of Manar, thoſe Pearls being fit for little elſe but to be ſold by the Ounce, to powder. Sometimes a thouſand Oyſters amounts to ſeven Fano's, and the whole Fiſhery to a hundred thouſand Piaſters. The Hollanders take of every Diver eight Piaſters, in regard they always attend the Fiſhery with two or three ſmall Men of War, to defend them from the Malavares Pyrats.

The more Rain falls in the year, the more profitable the Fiſhery happens to be. They fiſh in twelve fathom water, five or ſix Leagues off at Sea, ſometimes two hundred and fifty Barks together, among which there is not above one or two Divers at moſt.

There is a Cord ty'd under the Arms of them that dive, one end whereof is held by them that are in the Bark. There is alſo a great ſtone of eighteen or twenty pound ty'd to the great Toe of him that dives; the end of the Rope that faſtens it being alſo held by them in the Veſſel. The Diver has beſide a Sack made like a Net, the mouth whereof is kept open with a Hoop. Thus provided, he plunges into the Sea, the weight of the ſtone preſently ſinking him; when he is at the bottom, he ſlips off the ſtone, and the Bark puts off. Then the Diver goes to filling his Sack, as long as he can keep his breath; which when he can do no longer, he gives the Rope a twitch, and is preſently hall'd up again. Thoſe of Manar are better Fiſhers, and ſtay longer in the water than thoſe of Bakren and Catifa; for they neither put Pincers upon their Noſes, nor Cotton in their Ears, as they do in the Perſian Gulf.

After the Diver is draw'n up, he ſtays half a quarter of an hour to take breath, and then dives again, for ten or twelve hours together. As for the Oyſters themſelves, they throw'em away, as being ill-taſted and unſavoury.

To conclude the diſcourſe of Pearls, you are to take notice, that in Europe they ſell them by the Carat weight, which is four Grains. In Perſia they ſell them by the Abas, and one Abas is an eighteenth leſs than our Carat. In the Dominions of the Mogul, the Kings of Viſapour and Golconda weigh them by the Ratis, and one Ratis is alſo an eighteenth leſs than our Carat.

Goa was formerly the greateſt place of the World for the trade of jewels and Pearls. You muſt know therefore, that in Goa, and in all other places which the Portugals had in the Indies, they us'd a particular weight to ſell their Pearls by, which they call Chego's; the proportion whereof to Carats appears in the following Table.

Observations upon the faireſt and largeſt Diamonds and Rubies which the Author has ſeen in Europe and Aſia, repreſented according to the Figures in the Plates; as alſo upon thoſe which the Author ſold to the King upon his laſt return from the Indies; with the Figure of a large Topaz, and the faireſt Pearls in the World.

Numb. 1.

THis Diamond belongs to the Great Mogul, being cut into the ſame form; and it weighs 319 Ratis and an half, which make 279 and nine 16*ths* of our Carats; when it was rough, it weigh'd 907 Ratis, which make 793 Carats.

Numb. 2.

Is the figure of a Diamond belonging to the Great Duke of Tuſcany. It weighs 139 Carats and an half: the fault of it is, that the water enclines ſomewhat to a Citron-colour.

Numb. 3.

Is a Stone that weighs 176 and one 8*th* Mangelins, which makes 242 Carats and five 16*ths*. A Mangelin coming to one and three 8*ths* of our Carats. Being at Golconda I ſaw this Stone; and it was the biggeſt that ever I ſaw in my life in a Merchant's-hands. It was valu'd at 500000 Roupies, or 750000 Livres of our Money: I offer'd 400000 Roupies, but could not have it.

Numb. 4.

Is the figure of a Diamond which I bought at Amadabat; and it weigh'd 178 Ratis, or 157 Carats and a quarter.

Numb. 5.

Is the figure of the fore-mention'd Diamond, after it was cut on both sides; there remaining 94 Carats and a half; the water being perfect. The flat-side where there were two flaws below, was as thin as a sheet of brown-paper. When the stone was cut, I caus'd all that thin side to be taken off, with one part of the end above, where there remains one little speck of a flaw.

Numb. 6.

Is another Diamond which I bought at the Mine of Coulour. It is fair and clean, and weighs 36 Mangelins, or 63 and 3 8*ths* of our Carats.

Numb. 7. and 8.

Are two pieces of a Stone that was cut in two, which being entire, weigh'd 93 Mangelins and a half, or 104 Carats. Though it were of a good water, it seem'd so foul in the middle, that, in regard it was large, and held at a high price, there was ne're a Banian would venture upon it. At length an Hollander bought it, and cutting it in two, found in the middle of it, eight Carats of filth like a rotten-weed. The small piece happen'd to be clean, excepting a little flaw hardly to be perceiv'd, but for the other, wherein there are so many other cross flaws, there was no way but to make seven or eight pieces of it. The Hollander ran a great risco in cutting it a-sunder; for it was very great luck that it had not broke into a hunder'd pieces. Yet for all that it did not turn to account; so that it is in vain for another to buy that which a Banian refuses.

CHAP. XX.

The Forms of twenty Rubies which the Author sold to the King upon his last return from the Indies. The first part of the Plate shews the weight, extent, and thickness of every Stone.

Numb. 1.

IS the Figure of a Ruby that belongs to the King of Persia. It is in shape and bigness like an Egg, boar'd through in the middle, deep colour'd, fair and clean, except one flaw in the side. They will not tell you what it cost, nor let you know what it weighs; only it appears by the Register that it has been several years in the Kings Treasury.

Numb. 2.

Is the Figure of a Balleis Ruby; sold for such to Giafer-Kan, the Great Mogul's Uncle, who paid 950000 Roupies, 1425000 Livres for it. But an old Indian Jeweller affirming afterwards, that it was no Balleis Ruby, that it was not worth above 500 Roupies, and that Giafer-Kan was cheated; and his opinion being confirm'd by Shahjehan, the most skilful in Jewels of any person in the Empire Aurang-zeb compell'd the Merchant to take it again, and to restore the Money back.

Num. 3, and 4.

Is the Figure of a Ruby belonging to the King of Visapour. Numb. 4, is the height of the Stone above the Gold. And Numb. 3, is the roundness of the Beazil.

Beazil. It weighs fourteen Mangelins, or seventeen Carats and a half; a Visapour Mangelin being but five Grains. It cost the King 14200 new Pagods, or 74550 Livres.

Numb. 5.

Is the Figure of a Ruby that a Banian shew'd me at Banarous; it weighs 58 Rati's, or 30 Carats and 3 quarters; being of the second rank in beauty. In shape it is like a Plump Almond, bor'd through at the end. I offer'd 40000 Roupies, or 60000 Livres for it; but the Merchant demanded 55000 Roupies.

Numb. 6.

Is the Figure of a great Topaz belonging to the Great Mogul; nor did I see him wear any other but that, all the while I was in India. This Topaz weighs 181 Rati's and half a quarter, or 157 Carats and three quarters. It was bought at Goa for the Great Mogul, and cost 181000 Roupies, or 271500 Livres of our Money.

Numb. 7, 8, 9.

Are the Figures of three several Rubies belonging to the King of France.

Numb. 1.

Is the Figure of a Pearl which the King of Persia bought at the Fishery of Catifa in Arabia. It cost him 32000 Tomans, or 1400000 Livres of our Money, at forty-six Livres and six Deneers to a Toman. It is the fairest and most perfect Pearl that ever was yet found to this hour, having no defect.

Numb. 2.

Is the Figure of the biggest Pearl that ever I saw in the Court of the Great Mogul. It hangs about the artificial Peacocks neck that adorns his great Throne.

Numb. 3.

Is the Figure of a Pearl that I sold to Cha-Est-Kan; the Water is somewhat faint, but it is the biggest Pearl that was ever carried out of Europe into Asia.

Numb. 4.

Is a great perfect Pearl, as well for its Water as for its form, which is like an Olive. It is in the midst of a Chain of Emraulds and Rubies, which the Great Mogul wears; which being put on, the Pearl dangles at the lower part of his Breast.

Numb. 5.

Is a Pearl perfectly round, the biggest I ever saw, and belongs to the Great Mogul. The like could never be found; for which reason the Great Mogul lays it up very charily, and never uses it. For if it could be match'd, both would make a Pair of Pendants for the Ears, set between Rubies or Emraulds, according to the custom of the Country; there being no person of any quality that does not wear a Pearl between two colour'd Stones in his Ear.

CHAP. XXI.

Of Coral, and Yellow Amber, and the places where it is found.

CORal, but little valu'd in Europe, is highly eſteem'd in all the three other parts of the World; and there are three places where they fiſh for it upon the Coaſt of Sardigna. That of Arguerrel is the faireſt of all. The ſecond place is call'd Boza; and the third is neer the Iſland of St. Peter. There are two other places upon the Coaſt of France, the one neer the Baſtion of France; the other at Tabarque. There is alſo another Fiſhery upon the Coaſt of Sicily, neer Trepano, but the Coral is ſmall, and ill-colour'd. There is another upon the Coaſt of Catalogna, neer Cape de Quiers; where the Coral is large, and of an excellent colour, but the branches are ſhort. There is a ninth Fiſhery in the Iſland of Majorque, much like that neer the Iſland of Corſica. And theſe are all the places in the Mediterranean-Sea, where they fiſh for Coral; for there is none at all in the Ocean.

Becauſe that Coral grows under the hollow Rocks where the Sea is deep, the Fiſhers fix two ſpars of wood a-croſs, faſtening a great piece of Lead in the middle to make it ſink: after that they wind careleſly about the ſpar good ſtore of tufted Hemp, and faſten the wood to two Cords, one end whereof hangs at the Poop, the other at the Prow of the Veſſel. Then letting go the wood with the ſtream or current by the ſides of the Rock, the Hemp twiſts it ſelf among the Coral, ſo that ſometimes they ſtand in need of five or ſix Boats to pull up the wood again: and if one of the Cables ſhould chance to break with the ſtreſs, all the Rowers are in danger to be loſt. While they tear up the Coral thus by force, there tumbles as much into the Sea as they fetch up: and the bottom of the Sea being generally very ouzy, the Coral will be eaten as our fruits are eaten by the worms; ſo that the ſooner they get it out of the mud, the leſs it will be waſted.

This puts me in mind of one thing that I ſaw at Marſeilles in a Shop where they dealt in Coral. It was a great piece of Coral, as big about as a man's fiſt, which becauſe it was a little worm-eaten, was cut in two pieces. When it was ſo cut, there was a worm that ſtirr'd, and had life, and liv'd for ſome months after, being again put into the hole. For among ſome branches of Coral there engenders a kind of ſpongy-matter, like our honey-combs, where theſe worms lye like bees.

Some think that Coral is ſoft in the Sea, though in truth it be hard. But this indeed is as true, that in certain months of the year you may ſqueze out of the end of a branch a kind of milky-ſubſtance; and this perhaps may be a kind of ſeed, which falling upon any thing that it firſt meets with in the Sea (as if it light upon a dead Skull, the blade of a Sword, or a Pomgranate) produces another branch of Coral. And I have ſeen a Pomgranate, and had it in my hand, that had fallen into the Sea, about which the Coral had twin'd at leaſt half a foot high.

They fiſh for Coral from the beginning of April to the end of July; to which purpoſe there are employ'd above 200 Veſſels, ſome years more, and ſome years leſs. They are built all along the River of Genoa, being very ſwift. Their ſails are very large for more ſwiftneſs, ſo that there are no Gallies can reach them. There are ſeven men and a boy to every Barque. They never fiſh above forty miles from the Land, where they think there are Rocks, for fear of the Pyrats, from which they make all the Sail they can when they ſee them, and eaſily ſcape them through the nimbleneſs of their Veſſels.

I have one obſervation to make concerning Coral, in reſpect of the Eaſtern-people. The Japponners make little account of Jewels or Pearls; valuing nothing ſo much as a good grain of Coral, wherewith they pull the ſtring that ſhuts their Purſes, ſuch as we had formerly in England. So that they ſtrive who ſhall have the faireſt grain of Coral hanging at the end of the Silk-ſtring that draws their Purſes. For this reaſon a piece of Coral as big as an egg, fair and clean without any flaw, will produce what any man will ask in reaſon for it. The Portugueſes have have assur'd me they would sometimes give 20000 Crowns for such a piece. And no wonder they will give so much Money for a piece of Coral, who despising all other Jewels and Pearls, care for nothing but that which is in no esteem any where else. They set a great value upon the Skin of a certain Fish which is rougher than a Seal-skin. Upon the back of the Fish there are 8 little holes, and sometimes eight, somewhat elevated, with another in the middle; in the form of a Rose. They make Scabberds for Swords of the Skin; and the more those holes grow in the form of a Rose, the higher value they put upon them; having giv'n ten-thousand Crowns for a Skin. To conclude the discourse of Coral, you must know that the meaner sort of people use it for Bracelets and Neck-laces, all over Asia, especially toward the Northern Territories of the great Mogul; and all along the Mountains as you go to the Kingdom of Assen and Boutan.

Yellow-Amber is only found upon the Coast of Prussia in the Baltick-Sea, where the Sea throws it upon the Sand when such and such winds blow. The Elector of Brandenburgh, who is Sovereign of that Coast, farms it out for 20000 Crowns a year, and sometimes 22000. And the Farmers keep guards on both sides of the shoar, in regard the Sea casts it up sometimes upon one side, and sometimes upon the other, to prevent the stealing of it.

Amber is nothing but a certain congelation made in the Sea, like a certain Gum; for you shall find in several pieces, Flies, Gnats, and other insects congeal'd therein. I saw seven or eight Flies so congeal'd in one piece.

In China, when any great Lord makes a Feast, it is for his Grandeur and Magnificence to cause three or four several sorts of Perfuming-pots to be set upon the Table, and to throw into every one of them a vast quantity of Amber; for the more it burns, and the bigger the pieces are, the more magnificent is the Entertainment accounted. The reason of this custom is, because they adore the fire; and besides, that the Amber casts forth a scent pleasing to the Chineses, there is a kind of Oil in it, that flames after a more unusual manner than other materials of fire. This waste of Amber makes it the best Commodity that could be imported into China, if the Trade were free for Strangers. At present the Hollanders have engross'd all this Trade to themselves, and the Chineses come all to Batavia to buy it.

As for Amber-grise; there is no person in the World that knows either what it is, or where, or how it is produc'd. But the fairest probability is, that it must be only in the Eastern-Sea: though some parcels have been found upon the Coast of England, and in some other parts of Europe. The greatest quantity is found upon the Coast of Melinda, but more especially in the mouth of a River call'd Rio de Sena. The Governor of Mozambique gets in the three years of his Government above 300000 Pardo's of Amber-grise, every Pardo containing 27 Sous of our Money. Sometimes they meet with very large and very considerable pieces. In the year 1627 a Portugal setting Sail from Goa to the Manilles, after he had past the Streight of Malacca, was by tempest driv'n near an unknown Island, where they came to an Anchor. Several of the Ship's-Company venturing a-shore, met with a River; and going to bath themselves in it, one of them found a great piece of Amber-grise that weigh'd thirty-three pounds; but falling together by the ears about their shares, the Captain, to reconcile them, told them 'twas pitty to deface it, in regard it was a Present fit for the King; and therefore advis'd them to present it to the Vice-Roy, who would no doubt reward them for their pains. By that means the Captain got the parcel out of their Clutches, and presenting it to the Vice-Roy, got a reward for himself; and the Party that found it: but the rest had nothing at all.

In the year 1646 or 1647, a Middleburgher of good quality found a piece of forty-two pounds upon the Coast of the Island of St. Maurice, where he commanded for the Holland-Company, East of the Island of St. Lawrence, and sent it to Batavia: but there being a mark, as if some piece of it were broken off, the Zelander, was accus'd to have taken half, and turn'd out of his Command, whatever he could say to justify himself.

CHAP. XXII.

Of Musk and Bezoar; and ſome other Medicinal Stones.

THE beſt ſort, and the greateſt quantity of Musk, comes from the Kingdom of Bontan, from whence they bring it to Patna, the chief City of Bengala, to truck it away for other Commodities. All the Musk that is ſold in Perſia comes from thence. And the Musk-Merchants had rather deal with you for Coral and Yellow-Amber, than for Gold or Silver; in regard the other is more in eſteem among the Natives where they live. I was ſo curious as to bring the Skin of one to Paris, of which I caus'd the figure to be cut.

After they have kill'd the creature, they cut off the bladder that grows under the belly as big as an egg, nearer to the genital parts than to the navil. Then they take out the Musk that is in the bladder, which at that time looks like clotted-blood. When the natives would adulterate their Musk, they ſtuff the bladder with the liver and blood of the Animal ſlic'd together, after they have taken out as much of the right Musk as they think convenient. This mixture in two or three years time produces certain Animals in the bladder that eat the good Musk; ſo that when you come to open it, there is a great waſt. Others, ſo ſoon as they have cut off the bladder, and taken out as much of the Musk, as that the deceit may not be too palpable, fill up the Veſſel with little ſtones to make it weight. The Merchants are leſs diſpleas'd at this deceit than the former, by reaſon that they do not find the Musk to be eaten. But the deceit is harder to be diſcover'd, when they make little Purſes of the skin of the belly of the Beaſt, which they ſow up with ſtrings of the ſame skin, which are like the true bladders; and then fill thoſe Purſes with what they have taken out of the right bladders, and the other fraudulent mixture which they deſign to put among it. True it is, that ſhould they tye up the bladder as ſoon as they cut it off, without giving it air or time to loſe its force, the ſtrength of the perfume would cauſe the blood to guſh out of the noſe, ſo that it muſt be qualifi'd to render it acceptable, or rather leſs hurtful to the brain. The ſcent of the Beaſt which I carri'd to Paris, was ſo ſtrong, that I could not keep it in my Chamber; for it made all peoples heads ake that came neer it. At length my Servants laid it in a Garret, and cut off the bladder, and yet the ſcent remain'd very ſtrong. This creature is not to be found in 65 degrees, but in 60 there are vaſt numbers, the Countrey being all over cover'd with Forreſts. True it is, that in the months of February and March, after theſe creatures have endur'd a ſharp hunger, by reaſon of the great Snows that fall where they breed, ten or twelve foot deep, they will come to 44 or 45 degrees to fill themſelves with Corn and new Rice. And then it is that the Natives lay gins and ſnares for them to catch them as they go back: ſhooting ſome with Bows, and knocking others o'the head. Some have aſſur'd me that they are ſo lean and faint with hunger at that time, that you may almoſt take them running. There muſt be ſurely a prodigious number of theſe creatures, none of them having above one bladder no bigger then a Hen's-egg, which will not yield above half an ounce of Musk: and ſometimes three or four will not afford an ounce; and yet what a world of Musk is bought up?

The King of Boutan fearing that the cheats and adulterations of Musk would ſpoil the Musk-Trade, order'd that none of the Bladders ſhould be ſow'd up, but that they ſhould be all brought to Bontan, and there, after due inſpection, be ſeal'd up with his Seal. Yet notwithſtanding all the warineſs and care of the King, they will ſometimes cunningly open them, and put in little pieces of Lead to augment the weight. In one Voyage to Patna I bought 7673 bladders, that weigh'd 2557 ounces and an half; and 452 ounces out of the bladder.

Bezoar comes from a Province of the Kingdom of Golconda toward the North-eaſt. It is found among the ordure in the paunch of a wild-Goat that browzes upon a certain Tree, the name whereof I have forgot. This ſhrub bears little buds, round about which, and the tops of the boughs, the Bezoar engenders in the maw of the Goat. It is ſhap'd according to the form of the buds or tops of the branches which the Goats eat: which is the reaſon there are ſo many ſhapes of Bezoar-Stones. The Natives, by feeling the belly of the Goat, know how many Stones ſhe has within, and ſell the Goat according to the quantity. This they will find out by ſliding their hands under their bellies, and then ſhaking both ſides of the paunch; for the Stones will fall into the middle, where they may eaſily count them all by their feeling.

The rarity of Bezoar is in the bigneſs; though the ſmall Bezoar has the ſame vertue as that which is larger. But there is more deceit in the large Bezoar; for the Natives have got a trick to add to the bigneſs of the Stone, with a certain Paſte compos'd of Gum, and ſomething elſe of the colour of Bezoar. And they are ſo cunning too, to ſhape it juſt like natural Bezoar. The cheat is found out two ways; the firſt is by weighing the Bezoar, and then ſteeping it in warm water; if neither the water change colour, nor the Bezoar loſe any thing of its weight, the Stone is right. The other way is to thruſt a red-hot Bodkin of Iron into the Stone; if the Bodkin enters, and cauſes it to fry, there is a mixture. Bezoar is dearer according to the bigneſs of the Stones, advancing in price like Diamonds. For if five or ſix Bezoars weigh an ounce, an ounce will be worth fifteen or eighteen Franks; but if it be a Stone of one ounce, that very ounce is well worth 100 Franks. I have ſold one of four ounces and a half for 2000 Livres.

I have been very curious to inform my ſelf of all things that concern'd the nature of Bezoar; but could never learn in what part of the body of the Goat it was to be found. One time among the reſt, having oblig'd ſeveral Native Merchants by putting off for them a great quantity of Bezoar; upon my requeſt, though it be death without mercy to tranſport any of theſe Goats out of the Countrey, they brought me ſix Goats by ſtealth to my lodging. When I ask'd the price of them, I was ſurpriz'd, when they told me one was worth but three Roupies; that the two other were worth four Roupies; and the three others four and three quarters a piece. I ask'd them why ſome were more worth than others; but I found afterwards that the firſt had but one Bezoar, that the reſt had two, or three, or four. The ſix Goats had in all ſeventeen Bezoars in them, and a half one, as big as the half of a Hazel-nut. The inſide was like the ſoft ordure of the Goat, the Bezoar lying among the dung, which is in the belly of the Goat. Some aver'd that they grew right againſt the liver, others right againſt the heart, but I could never find out the truth.

As well in the Eaſt, as Weſt, there are a great quantity of Bezoars that breed in the ſame manner in Cows; of which there have been ſome that have weigh'd ſeventeen or eighteen ounces; For there was ſuch a one that was giv'n to the Great Duke of Tuſcany. But thoſe Bezoars are little eſteem'd, ſix grains of the other Bezoar working more powerfully than thirty of this.

As for the Bezoar which breeds in Apes, as ſome belive, it is ſo ſtrong, that two grains work as effectually as ſix of Goat's-Bezoar: but it is very ſcarce, as being only found in thoſe Apes that breed in the Iſland of Macaſſar. This ſort of Bezoar is round, whereas the other is of ſeveral faſhions, as I ſaid before. As the Apes Bezoar is ſtronger, and ſcarcer than the Goats, ſo it is dearer, and more ſought after; a piece as big as a nut, being ſometimes worth a hunder'd Crowns. The Portugals make great account of this Bezoar, ſtanding always upon their guard for fear of being poiſon'd.

There is another Stone in great eſteem, that is call'd the Porcupine's-Stone, which that creature is ſaid to carry in its head, and is more precious than Bezoar againſt poiſon. If it be ſteep'd in water a quarter of an hour, the water becomes ſo bitter, that nothing can be more bitter. There is alſo a Stone ſometimes found in the belly of that creature of the ſame nature; and as good as that which comes from the head; nevertheleſs with this difference, that being ſteep'd in water, it loſes nothing of its weight nor bulk, as the other does. I have bought in my time three of thoſe Stones. One of them coſt me 500 Crowns, and I exchang'd it to advantage. I paid four-hunder'd Crowns for the other, which I kept, the other was ſold me for 200 Crowns, which I preſented to a friend.

There

There is the Serpent-Stone not to be forgot, about the bigneſs of a double; and ſome are almoſt oval, thick in the middle, and thin about the ſides. The Indians report that it is bred in the head of certain Serpents. But I rather take it to be a Story of the Idoloter's Prieſts, and that the Stone is rather a compoſition of certain Drugs. Whatever it be, it is of excellent vertue to drive any venom out of thoſe that are bit by venomous creatures. If the perſon bit be not much wounded, the place muſt be incis'd; and the Stone being appli'd thereto, will not fall off till it has drawn all the poiſon to it. To cleanſe it, you muſt ſteep it in Womans-milk, or for want of that, in Cows-milk; after the Stone has lain ten or twelve hours, the milk will turn to the colour of an Apoſtemated matter. The Arch-Biſhop of Goa carrying me to his Cabinet of Rarities, ſhew'd me one of theſe Stones: and after he had aſſur'd me of the rare qualities it had, gave it me. Once as he croſs'd a Merſh in the Iſland of Salſete, where Goa ſtands, one of the men that carr'd his Pallequis, being half naked, was bit by a Serpent, and heal'd at the ſame time. I bought ſeveral; but there are none but the Bramines that ſell them, which makes me believe that they compound them. There are two ways to try whether the Serpent-Stone be true or falſe. The firſt is, by putting the Stone in your mouth, for then it will give a leap, and fix to the Palate. The other is, by putting it in a glaſs full of water; for if the Stone be true, the water will fall a boyling, and riſe in little bubbles up to the top of the Glaſs.

There is another Stone, which is call'd the Stephen's-Stone with the hood. This is a kind of Serpent that has a kind of a hood hanging down behind the head, as it is repreſented in the Figure. And it is behind this hood that the Stone is found, many times as big as Pullet's-egg. There are ſome Serpents both in Aſia and America of a monſtrous bigneſs, 25 foot long; as was that, the skin whereof is kept in Batavia, which had ſwallow'd a Maid of 18 years of age. Theſe Stones are not found in any of thoſe Serpents that are not at leaſt two foot long. This Stone being rubb'd againſt another Stone, yields another ſlime, which being drank in water by the perſon that has the poiſon in his body, powerfuly drives it out. Theſe Serpents are no-where to be found but upon the Coaſts of Melinde; but for the Stones you may buy them of the Portugueze Mariners and Souldiers that come from Mozambique.

CHAP. XXIII.

Of the Places where they find their Gold both in Asia and America.

Japon, which consists of several Islands Eastward of China, bending to the North, some people believing that Niphon, which is the biggest, is in a maner join'd to the firm Land; is that Region of all Asia that yields the greatest quantity of Gold: Though others believe no more is found in the Island of Formosa, and carri'd thence to Japon. But as long as the Hollanders have had the Island, they could never yet tell what is the Trade of that Coast, whence they belive the Gold comes.

There comes also Gold from China, which the Chinese exchange for the Silver which is brought them. For price for price, they love Silver better than Gold; because they have no Silver-Mines. Yet it is the coarsest metal of all the Asiatick Gold.

The Island of Celebes or Macassar produces Gold also, which is drawn out of the Rivers, where it rowls among the Sand.

In the Island of Achen or Sumatra, after the rainy season, when the Torrents are wasted, they find veins of Gold in the Flints, which the waters wash down from the Mountains that lye toward the North-east. Upon the West-side of the Island, when the Hollanders come to lade their Pepper, the Natives bring them great store of Gold, but very coarse metal, if not worse than that of China.

Toward the Thibet, which is the ancient Caucasus, in the Territories of a Raja, beyond the Kingdom of Chachemir, there are three Mountains close one by another one of which produces excellent Gold, the other Granats, and the third Lapis-Lazuli.

There is Gold also comes from the Kingdom of Tipra, but it is coarse, almost as bad as that of China; and these are all the places in Asia that produce Gold. I shall now say something of the Gold of Africa, and the places where it is found in greatest quantities.

I observe by the way, that the Vice-Roy of Mozambique has under his Command the Governors of Sofala and Chepon-Goura. The first of these two Governments lies upon the River Sene, sixty leagues from the Mouth of the River; and the other ten leagues higher. From the Mouth of the River to those very places on each side of the River, great numbers of Negro's inhabit, which are all commanded by one Portugueze. The Portugueses have been Masters of this Countrey for many years, where they take upon them like Lords, and make War one upon another for the slightest occasions in the World; some of them having under them five-thousand Cafres, which are their Slaves. The Governor of Mozambique furnishes them with Calicuts, and all other necessary Commodities which they want, which he sells them at his own rates. When he enters upon his Government he carries with him great quantities of all sorts of Commodities, especially Calicuts dy'd black. His Correspondents also in Goa send him every year two Vessels, which he sends to Sofala, Chepon-Goura, and even as far as the City of Monomotopa, the chief City of a Kingdom of the same name, otherwise call'd Vonvebaran, distant from Chepon-Goura fifty leagues, or there-abouts. He that commands all that Countrey, assumes the name of Emperor of Monomotopa, extending his Dominions as far as the Confines of Prester John's Countrey. From this Country of Monomotopa it is, that the most pure and finest Gold of all Africa comes: where they dig it with ease out of the earth, not being put to labour above two or three foot deep. In some places of that Countrey which are not inhabited by reason of the scarcity of water, the people find great pieces of Gold, of several forms and weights, upon the surface of the earth; some of which weigh an ounce. One I have by me that weighs an ounce and a half, or there-abouts. Being at Surat, I went to visit the Emballadour of the King of the Abyssins. He shew'd us the Present which his Master had sent to the Great Mogul, consisting of fourteen stately Horses, the remainder of 30, the rest dying by the way; and a great number of Slaves of both Sexes. But what was most remarkable, was a natural Tree, all of Gold, two foot and four inches high, and six inches about in the ſtock. It had ten or twelve branches, ſome whereof ſhot out half a foot in length, and an inch about; others much ſmaller. In ſome parts of the great branches appear'd certain bunches that reſembl'd buds. The roots of the Tree, which were alſo natural, were thick and ſhort; the longeſt not exceeding four or five inches.

The Natives of Monomotopa knowing the time of the year that the Commodities arrive, come to Sofala and Chepon-Goura to furniſh themſelves. Thither alſo come the Cafres of other Provinces and Kingdoms for the ſame purpoſe. Whereupon the Governors of thoſe places ſell them what they want, truſting them till the next year, when they oblige themſelves to bring their Gold, which they are very punctual to do, for elſe there could be no Trade between them. The Natives of Monomotopa never live long, by reaſon of the badneſs of the waters in the Countrey: For at the age of five and twenty years they begin to be dropſical; ſo that it is a great wonder if any among them live above forty years. The Province where the River Sene has its head, is call'd Monkaran, and is under the Juriſdiction of a certain King, beginning a hunder'd leagues, or there-abouts, above Chapon-Goura. The people of that Country find great ſtore of duſt-Gold in the Rivers that fall into the Sene; but it is much coarſer than the other, though they bring it to Chepon-Goura and Sofala. The Countrey is very healthy, and the people live as long as they do in Europe. Some years there are Cafres that come from beyond the Province of Monkaran, even as far as the Cape of good Hope. The Portuguez have enquir'd after their Countrey, and the name; but they can tell no more, only that it is call'd Sabia, commanded by a King; and that they are four months generally travelling to Sofala. The Gold which they bring is very fine, and in pieces like that of Monomotopa, which they ſay they find in the high Mountains, digging only ten or twelve foot in the ground. They alſo bring great quantities of Elephants-teeth; wherewith, by their report, the Countrey does ſo abound, that you may ſee them in herds in the fields; and that all the Paliſado's of their Fortreſſes, and the Pales of their Parks, are made of Elephants-teeth. Their uſual Diet is Elephants-fleſh; which four Cafres will kill with their Agagayes, or a ſort of Half-pikes. The water of their Countrey is very bad, which is the reaſon that their thighs are ſwell'd, and it is a wonder to ſee any one of them free.

Beyond Sofala there is a Countrey commanded by a King, who is call'd the King of Beroé. In ſome parts of his Countrey there grows a Root about an inch thick, and of a yellow colour. It heals all ſorts of Fevers, cauſing the Patient to vomit. But becauſe it grows very ſcarce, the King ſtrictly forbids his Subjects to export it. The taſt of it is very bitter upon the tongue.

As for Silver-Mines, there are none in all Aſia but only in Japon; but ſome years ſince, at Delegora, Sangora, Bordelon and Bata, have been diſcover'd plentiful Mines of Tin, to the great damage of the Engliſh, there being now enough in Aſia of their own beſides.

CHAP. XXIV.

The Relation of a Notable piece of Treachery, whereby the Author was abus'd when he Embark'd at Gomrom for Surat.

IN the Month of April 1665, being ready to depart from Gomrom for Surat, in a Veſſel that belong'd to a Holland-Broaker, commanded by a Holland-Captain, the Engliſh Agent gave me a Packet of Letters to deliver to the Preſident at Surat. The Packet was large, containing not only the Companies-Letters, but ſeveral private Letters to particular perſons at Surat and other parts of India. This Packet I receiv'd in the preſence of one Caſembrot, a Hollander, who inform'd another Dutch-man, whoſe name was Wanwuck, of it: Thereupon they preſently contriv'd contriv'd a design to seize this Packet, upon the report that ran of the rupture between England and Holland. Casembrot having seen the bigness of the Packet, gives Wanwuck a discription of it, and so both together they contrive another of the same form and bigness as neer as they could. When I came a-board, I took the English Packet, and lock'd it up in my Bouccha, which is the sort of Cloak-bag that is us'd in that Countrey, and laid it behind my Bolster. There were two Shallops sent a-board us, wherein there were sixty bags of Silver, containing some fifty, some a hunder'd Tomans a piece. These bags they unladed very leisurely to gain time, watching when I would be gone to bed. But when they saw that I did not go to rest, the Dutch consulted together, and agreed to let fall a bag of Tomans into the Sea, and so came all a-board, sending away a Shallop to Gomron for a Diver. When I found that the Vessel would not set Sail till two or three hours after day-light, I went to rest, my Bouccha lying in the same place, half out, and half with in-side of my Bolster. But when my Servants were gone, and I alone and a-sleep in the Cabin, they cunningly stole my Bouccha, took out the English Packet, and left the other which they had counterfeited, in the place; being only so many Letters of blanck-paper. Coming to Surat the sixth of May following, I gave the Packet, as I thought, which I had receiv'd from the English Agent at Gomron, to two Capuchin-Friers to deliver to the President at Surat. But when the President came to open the Packet before several of the Company, there was nothing but white-paper made up in the form of Letters; which when I heard, too much to my sorrow, I understood the villanous trick that Van-Wuck had put upon me. I wrote a smart Letter of complaint to the Dutch-General in Batavia, but finding no redress, was forc'd to undergo the hard censure of the English, who would not permit me to justify my self. However, as it is rare to see treachery go unpunish'd, the Complotters all dy'd miserably. Van-Wuck fell into a violent Fever, and being charg'd with the theft; thinking to defend himself with an equivocation, that if he took the Cloak-bag, he wish'd he might dye without speaking a word, in three days ended his life just in the same manner, and at the same time that he had imprecated upon himself. Bozan his Lieutenant, after a great debauch, going to sleep upon the Terrass of the Cabin, where he lay for coolness, (there being no balisters,) rolling and tumbling in his sleep, fell down, and the next day was found dead in the Sea.

The Captain, four or five days after his arrival at Surat, being met in the Street by a Mahometan, who was jealous of his Wife, and being mistak'n by him for one among several Franks, that had parted him, and kept him from correcting his Wife some few days before, was stabb'd by him in three or four places with a Dagger, and kill'd him out right. And this was the end of those treacherous people.

TRAVELS IN INDIA.

The Third Book.

CHAP. I.

Of the particular Religion of the Mahometans in the East Indies.

THE diversity of Opinions among the Maahometans, does not consist in the different Expositions which they put upon the Alcoran; but in the contrariety of Belief which they receiv'd by Tradition from the first Successors of Mahomet. From thence there sprung two Sects, directly opposite: The one, which is call'd the Sect of the Sonnnis, follow'd by the Turks; and the other of the Chiais, which is adher'd to by the Persians. I will not enlarge my self upon these two Sects, that divide all Mahumetism; it being my design, only to tell you how the condition of that false Religion stands in the Empire of the Great Mogul, and in the Kingdoms of Golconda and Visapour.

When Mahumetism was first brought into the Indies, there was an excess of pride, but no devotion among the Christians; and the Idolaters were an effeminate people, able to make little resistence; so that it was easie for the Mahumetans to subdue both the one and the other by force of Arms, which they did so advantageously, that many, as well Christians as Idolaters, embrac'd the Mahumetan Religion.

The Great Mogul, with all his Court, follows the Sect of the Sonnnis; the King of Golconda, that of the Chiais. In the King of Visapour's Territories the Sonnnis and Chiais are mingl'd together; which may be said also of the Court of the Great Mogul, in regard of the great numbers of Persians that flock thither to serve in his Armies. True it is, that though they abhor the Sonnnis, yet they adhere to the Religion of the Prince; holding it lawful for the preservation of their Estates to conceal their belief. As for what concerns the Kingdom of Golconda, Koutoub-Cha, the present King, very zealously maintains the Law of the Chiais; in regard the Grandees of his Court are almost all Persians.

Aureng-zeb testifies above all things an extraordinary devotion for the Sect of the Sonnnis; of which he is so zealous an observer, that he surpasses all his Predecessors in outward profession; which was the Cloak under which he usurp'd the Crown. When he took possession of his Throne, he gave it out that he did it only out of a design to cause the Law of Mahomet to be more strictly observ'd, which had been very much neglected in the Reign of Shajehan his Father, and Gehan-guir his Grandfather; and to shew himself more zealous to the Law, he turn'd Faquir or Dervich, that is, poor Volunteer; and under under that falſe pretence of Piety he cunningly made way to the Empire. And indeed though he has a great many Perſians under his pay, yet he will not permit them to keep holy the day conſecrated to the memory of Hoſen and Heſſin, the two ſons of Ali, who were put to death by the Sounnis; beſides that they, to pleaſe him, are willing enough to conform.

CHAP. II.

Of the Faquirs, or poor Mahometan Volunteers in the Eaſt Indies.

THey reckon that there are in the Indies eight hundred thouſand Faquirs, and twelve hunder'd thouſand Idolaters; which is a prodigious Number. They are all of them Vagabonds, and lazy Drones, that dazle the eyes of the people with a falſe zeal, and make them believe that whatever comes out of their mouths is an Oracle.

There are ſeveral ſorts of Mahometan Faquirs. The one ſort go almoſt naked like the Idolatrous Faquirs, having no certain abode in the world, but giving themſelves up to all manner of uncleanneſs. There are others whoſe Garments are of ſo many different pieces and colours, that a man can hardly tell of what they are made. Theſe Garments reach down to the half Leg, and hide the rags that are underneath. They go generally in Troops; and have their Superiour of the Gang, who is known by his Garment, which is generally poorer, and conſiſts of more patches than the other. Beſides, that he draws after him a great Iron Chain, which is ty'd to his Leg, and is about two Ells long, and proportionably thick. When he ſays his prayers, he does it with a loud voice, and rattling his Chain all the while, which is accompany'd with an affected gravity, that draws the Veneration of the people. In the mean time the people prepare Dinner for him and his company, in the place where he takes up his ſtand, which is uſually in ſome ſtreet or publick place. There he cauſes his Diſciples to ſpread certain Carpets, where he ſets himſelf down to give audience to the people. On the other ſide, the Diſciples go about publiſhing through the Country the vertues of their Maſter, and the favours he receives from God, who reveals his moſt important ſecrets to him, and gives him power to relieve perſons in affliction by his counſel. The people, who give credit to him, and believe him to be a holy man, approach him with a great devotion, and when they come near him, they pull off their Shoes, and proſtrate themſelves to kiſs his feet. Then the Faquir, to ſhew his humility reaches out his hand to kiſs; that done, he cauſes them that come to conſult him, to ſit down by him, and hears every one apart. They boaſt themſelves to have a prophetick Spirit; and above all to teach barren women a way how to have Children, and to be belov'd by whom they pleaſe.

There are ſome of theſe Faquirs who have above two hundred Diſciples, or more, which they aſſemble together by the ſound of a Horn, or the Beat of a Drum. When they travel, they have their Standard, Lances, and other Weapons which they pitch in the ground, near to their Maſter, when he repoſes in any place.

The third ſort of Eaſt Indian Faquirs, are thoſe that being born of poor Parents, and deſirous to underſtand the Law, to the end they may become Moulla's or Doctors, retire to the Moſquees, where they live upon the Alms which is given them. They employ all their time in reading the Alcoran, which they get by heart; and if they can but add to that ſtudy the knowledg of ſome natural things, and an exemplary life withall, they come to be chief of the Moſquees, and to the dignity of Moullahs, and Judges of the Law. Thoſe Faquirs have their Wives; and ſome, out of their great zeal to imitate Mahomet, have three or four; thinking they do God great ſervice in begetting many Children to be followers of their Laws.

CHAP. III

Of the Religion of the Gentiles, or Idolatrous Indians.

THe Idolaters among the Indians are ſo numerous, that they are reckon'd to be five or ſix for one Mahometan. It ſeems a wonderful thing, that ſuch a prodigious multitude of men ſhould be cow'd by a handful, and bow ſo eaſily under the yoak of the Mahometan Princes. But that wonder well may ceaſe, when we conſider that thoſe Idolaters are not in union among themſelves; for Superſtition has introduc'd ſuch a diverſity of Opinions and Cuſtoms, that they can never agree one with another. An Idolater will not eat Bread nor drink Water in the Houſe of any one that is not of his Caſte; though it be more noble, and much more ſuperior to his own. Yet they all eat and drink in the Bramins Houſes, which are open to all the world. A Caſte among the Idolaters, is very near the ſame thing which was anciently call'd a Tribe among the Jews. And though it be vulgarly believ'd, that there are ſeventy-two Caſtes, yet I have been inform'd by ſome of their moſt ingenuous Prieſts, that they may all be reduc'd into four Principal ones, from whence all the reſt drew their Original.

The firſt Caſte is that of the Bramins, who are the Succeſſors of the ancient Brachmans, or Indian Philoſophers, that ſtudy'd Aſtrology. You may alſo meet with ſome of their Ancient Books, in reading whereof the Bramins ſpend all their time; and are ſo vers'd in their obſervations, that they never fail a minute in the Eclipſes of the Sun and Moon. And to preſerve this knowledg among themſelves they have a kind of Univerſity, in a City which is call'd Benarez, where they make all their exerciſes in Aſtrology, and where they have Doctors that expound their Law, which they very ſtrictly obſerve. But in regard they are ſo great a number, and cannot all come to ſtudy at that Univerſity, they are all very ignorant, and conſequently very ſuperſtitious; thoſe that go for the moſt refin'd Wits, being the greateſt Sorcerers.

The ſecond Caſte is that of the Raſpoutes or Ketris, that is to ſay, Warriors and warlike people. Theſe are the only Idolatrous Indians that have any courage to ſignalize themſelves in War. All the Raja's that I have ſo often mention'd, are of this Caſte. Theſe are ſo many petty Kings, whom their diſunion has render'd Tributary to the Great Mogul. But in regard that the greateſt part of them are in his ſervice, they are highly recompenc'd by the large Salaries they receive for the ſmall Tribute which they pay. Theſe Raja's, and the Raſpoutes their Subjects, are the chiefeſt ſupport of the Dominions of the Great Mogul; for indeeed the Raja's Jeſſeing and Jeſſomſeing were thoſe that lifted up Aurengzeb to the Throne. But you muſt take notice, that all of this ſecond Caſte are not Warriors; for they are the Raſpoutes only that go to War, and are all Horſemen. But for the Ketris, they are degenerated from their Anceſtors, and of Soldiers are become Merchants.

The third Caſte is that of the Bannians, who are altogether addicted to Trade; of whom ſome are Sheraffs or Bankers, others Broakers, employ'd between Merchant and Merchant for buying and ſelling. Thoſe of this Caſte are ſo ſubtil and nimble in Trade, that as I have ſaid before, the Jews may be their Prentices. They accuſtom their Children betimes to fly Idleneſs. And inſtead of ſuffering them to loſe their time in playing in the Streets, as we generally do, they teach them Arithmetick; which they are ſo perfect at, that without making uſe either of Pen or Ink, or Counters, but only of their memories, they will in a moment caſt up the moſt difficult account that can be imagin'd. They always live with their Fathers, who inſtruct them in Trade, and do nothing but what they ſhew them. If any man in the heat of paſſion chafe at 'em, they hear him patiently without making any reply, and parting coldly from him, will not ſee him again in three or four days, when they think his paſſion may be over. They never eat any thing that has life; nay they would rather dye, than kill the ſmalleſt Animal or Vermin that crawls; being in that point above all things the moſt zealous Obſervers of the Law. They never fight, nor go to War; neither will they eat or drink in the Houſe of a Raſpoute, becauſe they kill the Victuals they eat, all but Cows, which they never touch.

The fourth Caſte is that of the Charados or Soudras, who go to War as well as the Raſpoutes, but with this difference, that the Raſpoutes ſerve on Horſeback, and the Charados on foot. Both of them take it for an Honour to dye in Battel; and let him be Horſe or Foot, that Soldier is accounted infamous that retreats in Fight; 'tis an eternal blot in his Family. Upon which ſubject I will tell you a ſtory. A Soldier who was paſſionately in love with his Wife, and reciprocally belov'd by her, had fled from the fight, not ſo much out of any fear of death, as out of a conſideration of the grief which it would occaſion to his Wife, ſhould he leave her a Widow. When ſhe knew the reaſon of his flight, as ſoon as he came to the door, ſhe ſhut it againſt him, and order'd him to be told, that ſhe could never acknowledg that man for a Husband, who had preferr'd the Love of a Woman before his Honour; that ſhe did not deſire to ſee him any more, as being a ſtain to the Reputation of her Family; and that ſhe would endeavour to teach her Children to have more courage than their Father. The Wife continuing firm to her reſolution, the Husband to regain his Honour and her affection, return'd to the Army, where he ſo behav'd himſelf, that he became famous; and having highly made amends for his Cowardiſe, the door of his Houſe was again ſet open, and his Wife receiv'd him with her former kindneſs.

The reſt of the Natives, that are not reckon'd in the number of theſe Caſtes, are call'd Pauzecour. Theſe are ſuch as employ themſelves in Handicraft Trades; among which there is no other diſtinction, but according to the Trades which they follow from Father to Son. So that a Taylor cannot prefer his Son, but only in his own Calling, though he be never ſo rich; nor marry either a Son or Daughter, but to one of his own Craft. By the ſame rule, when a Taylor dies, all thoſe of his own Trade accompany the corps to the place where it is burnt: and the ſame practiſe is obſerv'd in all other Trades.

Among the particular Caſtes, there is one that goes by the name of Alecors, whoſe employment is only to clean Houſes; for which every Family pays him ſomething once a month, according to their proportion and quality. If a perſon of quality in the Indies keeps fifty Servants, let him be Mahometan or Idolater, there isnot one of them will take a Beſome in his hand to ſweep the Houſe; for he would think himſelf affronted, it being one of the greateſt ſcorns you can put upon an Indian, to call him Alacor. Beſides, every one of thoſe Servants knows his buſineſs; whether it be to carry the pot of Water to drink by the way, or to give his Maſter his Pipe of Tobacco when he calls for it; ſo that if the Maſter ſhould bid one to do that which the other was appointed to do, that Servant would ſtand like a Statue, and never make him any anſwer. But for the Slaves, they are oblig'd to do what ever the Maſter commands them. Theſe Alacors having no other buſineſs but only to make clean the Houſes, eat the ſcraps of all other Caſtes; and ſo without ſcruple feed upon any thing. There are none but thoſe of this Tribe make uſe of Aſſes, to carry away the filth of the Houſes into the Field; for which reaſon none of the reſt of the Indians will ſo much as touch that Animal; which is quite otherwiſe in Perſia, as well for carriage, as to ride upon. Moreover, there are none of the other Indians, except the Alacors that will eat.

CHAP.

CHAP. IV.

Of the Kings and Idolatrous Princes of Asia.

THE chiefeſt of the Idolatrous Kings of Aſia, are the King of Aracan, the King of Pegu, the King of Siam, the King of Cochinchina, and the King of Tuxquin. As for the King of China, we know that he was an Idolater before the Tartars invaded his Dominions. But ſince that, we know not what to report of certainty, in regard that the Tartars who are now Maſters of the Country, are neither Idolaters nor Mahometans, but rather both together. In the Iſlands, the King of Japon, the King of Ceylan, and ſome petty Kings of the Molucca Illands are Idolaters; as are all the Raja's as well in the Empire of the Great Mogul, as in the neighbouring Kingdoms of Viſapour and Golconda. In a word, all the meaner ſort of people, as well in the Territories of the Great Mogul, Kings of Golconda and Viſapour, as in the Iſles of Achan, Java, and Macaſſar, though their Kings are Mahumetans, are all themſelves Idolaters.

Some fifty years ago, one of the Kings of Ceylan became a Chriſtian, and was baptiz'd by the name of John, being call'd before the Emperor Priapender. But as ſoon as he had embrac'd the Chriſtian Faith, the Princes and Prieſts of the Country ſet up another King in his room. He endeavour'd all he could to bring his people to follow his example; to which purpoſe he aſſign'd to the Father Jeſuits, twelve large Villages about Colombo, for the bringing up the youth of the Country in their Colledges; to the end that they being well inſtructed, might inſtruct others. For the King made it plain to the Jeſuits, that it was impoſſible for them ſo well to underſtand the Language of the Country, as to be able to preach to the Natives. Beſides, that they found the ingenuities of the Youth of Ceylan ſo quick and apprehenſive, that they learnt more Latin, Philoſophy, and other Sciences in ſix months, than the Europeans learnt in a year; and that they put ſuch ſubtle Queſtions to their Maſters, as were beyond imagination.

Some years after the King had profeſs'd Chriſtianity, a witty man of the Iſland of Ceylan, and a good natural Philoſopher, whoſe name was Alegamme, Motiar, or the Maſter of the Philoſophers, after he had convers'd with the Jeſuits and other Religious perſons, was inſpir'd to turn Chriſtian. Thereupon he went to the Jeſuits, and told them, that he deſir'd to be a Chriſtian; but withall he was very earneſt to know what Jeſus Chriſt had done, and left in writing. They gave him the new Teſtament, which he ſet himſelf to read with that heed and ſtudy, that in leſs than ſix months there was hardly a paſſage which he could not repeat. After that he again teſtifi'd to the Jeſuits and other Religious perſons, that he had a great deſire to turn Chriſtian, in regard he found their Religion to be ſuch as Jeſus Chriſt had taught; but only he wonder'd that they themſelves did not follow his example. For that he could never find by his reading, that Jeſus Chriſt ever took any money of any body; but that they took all they could get, and never baptiz'd nor buri'd unleſs they were well paid. But though he ſtarted the Queſtion, he was baptiz'd, and afterwards became a ſedulous converter of others.

CHAP. V.

What the Idolaters believe touching a Divinity.

THough the Idolatrous Indians attribute to the Creature, as to Cows, Apes, and ſeveral Monſters, thoſe Divine Honours which are only due to the true Diety; yet they acknowledge one only Infinite God, Almighty, and only Wiſe, the Creator of Heaven and earth, who fills all places with his preſence. They call him in ſome places Permeſſer, in others Peremael, and Weſtnou among the Bramins that inhabit the Coaſt of Cormandel. It may be, becauſe they have heard that the Circle is the moſt perfect of all Figures, therefore it is that they ſay God is of an Oval Figure; for they have in all their Pagods an Oval Flintſtone, which they fetch from Ganges, and worſhip as a God. They are ſo obſtinately wedded to this fooliſh imagination that the wiſeſt among the Bramins will not ſo much as hear any argument to the contrary. So that it is no wonder that a people led by ſuch blind Guides, ſhould fall into ſuch Abyſſes of Idolatry. There is one Tribe ſo ſuperſtitious, in reference to that article, that they carry thoſe Oval Flints about their Necks, and beat them againſt their Breaſts, when they are at their devotions. In this dark and lamentable miſt of ignorance, theſe Idolaters make their Gods to be born like men, and aſſign them Wives, imagining that theirs are the pleaſures of men. Thus they take their Ram for a great Deity, in regard of the Miracles which they believe he wrought while he liv'd upon Earth. Ram was the Son of a potent Raja, who was call'd by the name of Deſeret, and the moſt vertuous of all his Children, which he had by two lawful Wives. He was particular belov'd by his Father, who deſign'd him to be his Succeſſor. But the Mother of Ram being dead, the Raja's other Wife, who had her Husband entirely at her beck, prevail'd with him to exterminate Ram and his Brother Lokeman from his Houſe, and all his Territories; upon whoſe excluſion the Son of that Wife was declar'd the Raja's Succeſſor. As the two Brothers were about to be gone, Ram's Wife Sita, of whom he went to take his leave, and whom the Idolaters worſhip as a Goddeſs, beg'd of him that ſhe might not leave him, having made a reſolution never to forſake him; whereupon they all three went together to ſeek their fortunes. They were not very ſucceſsful at firſt; for as they paſs'd through a Wood, Ram being in purſuit of a Bird, ſtray'd from the Company, and was miſſing a long time; inſomuch that Sita fearing that ſome diſaſter was befall'n him, beſought Lokeman to look after him. He excus'd himſelf at firſt, by reaſon that Ram had oblig'd him never to leave Sita alone, foreſeeing by a Prophetick Spirit what would befall her, ſhould ſhe be left to her ſelf. Nevertheleſs Lokeman being over perſwaded by the prayers of his fair Siſter, went to ſeek for Ram his Brother; but in the mean time Rhevan another of the Idolaters Gods, appear'd to Sita in the ſhape of a Faquir, and beg'd an Alms of her. Now Ram had order'd Sita, that ſhe ſhould not ſtir out of the place where he left her; which Rhevan well knowing, would not receive the Alms which Sita preſented him, unleſs ſhe would remove to another place; which when Sita had done, either out of negligence or forgetfulneſs, Rhevan ſeiz'd upon her, and carry'd her into the thick of the Wood, where his Train ſtay'd for him. Ram at his return miſſing Sita, fell into a ſwoon for grief, but being brought again to himſelf by his Brother Lokeman, they two immediately went together in ſearch of Sita, who was ſo dearly belov'd by her Husband.

When the Bramins repeat this Rape of their Goddeſs, they do it with tears in their eyes, and great demonſtrations of ſorrow; adding upon this ſubject, an infinite company of Fables more ridiculous, to ſhew the great courage of Ram in purſuit of the Raviſher. They employ'd all Creatures living upon the diſcovery; but none of them had the luck to ſucceed, only the Monkey call'd Harman. He croſs'd over the Sea at one Leap, and coming into Rhevans Gardens, found Sita in the extremity of affliction; and very much ſurpriz'd to hear an Ape ſpeak to her in her Husbands behalf. At firſt ſhe would not give any credit to ſuch an Ambaſſador; but the Ape, to ſhew that his Commiſſion was authentick, preſents her with a Ring which her Husband had giv'n her, and that ſhe had left behind her among her Furniture. She could hardly however believe ſo great a Miracle, as that Ram her Husband ſhould make a Beaſt ſpeak, to bring her the news of his health, and to teſtifie as he did the marks of his affection. But the Ape Harman wrought Miracles himſelf, for being taken for a Spy by ſome Rhevans Servants, who therefore would have burnt him, he made uſe of the fire which they had prepar'd to burn him, to ſet Rhevans Palace on fire, which he almoſt conſum'd to the ground, with all the tatters and rags which were ty'd to his tail and his body. When the Ape had thus done, the better to eſcape out of Rhevans hands, he took the ſame way he came, and repaſſing the Sea again at one jump, he came and gave Ram an account of his adventures; and told him in what a ſorrowful condition he had found Sita, who did nothing but mourn by reaſon of her abſence from her Husband. Ram touch'd with his Wives affection, reſolv'd to deliver her out of Rhevans hands, whatever it coſt him; whereupon he rais'd Forces, and being guided by the Ape, at length he came to Rhevans Palace, that ſtill ſmoak'd, the fire had been ſo great; and by reaſon that Rhevans Servants were diſpers'd, Ram had an eaſie opportunity to ſee his belov'd Sita again, whom Rhevan abandon'd wholly to him, flying for fear to the Mountains. Ram and Sita were infinitely overjoy'd at their coming together again, and return'd very great Honours to Harman, who had done him ſo great ſervice.

As for Rhevan, he ſpent all the reſt of his days like a poor Faquir, ſeeing his Country ruin'd by Ram's Troops, who was reſolv'd to be reveng'd for the injury which he had receiv'd; and from this Rhevan it was, from whence that infinite multitude of Faquirs, that ſwarm all over India, firſt took their Original.

CHAP. VI.

Of the Faquirs, or poor Volunteers among the Indians, and of their Pennances.

THE Original of the Faquirs, as I ſaid before, came from that Rhevan, whom Ram diſpoil'd of his Kingdom; at which he conceiv'd ſuch an unſpeakable ſorrow, that he reſolv'd to lead a Vagabond life, and to wander about the world, poor, ſtript of all, and in a manner quite naked. He found enough to follow him in a courſe of life that gives them ſo much liberty. For being worſhip'd as Saints, they have in their hands all opportunities of doing evil.

Theſe Faquirs wander generally in Troops, every one of which has a Superior. And in regard they are quite naked, Winter and Summer lying upon the hard ground, when it is cold, the young Faquirs, and others that are moſt devout, go in the afternoon to ſeek for the dungs of Cows and other Creatures, of which they make their fires. They rarely burn Wood, for fear of killing any living Animal which is wont to breed in it; and therefore the Wood wherewith they burn their dead, is only ſuch as has floated long in the Water, which never breeds in any ſort of living Creature. The young Faquirs having got together a good quantity of dung, mix'd with dry turf, make ſeveral fires, according to the bigneſs of the Company; round about every one of which the Faquirs ſeat themſelves. When they grow ſleepy, they lay themſelves upon the ground, ſpreading the Aſhes abroad which ſerve them for a Mattreſs; without any other Canopy than that of Heaven.

As for the Faquirs that do Pennance, when they are laid down in the ſame poſture as you ſee them in the day time, they kindle a good fire on each ſide of them, for otherwiſe they would not be able to to endure the cold. The rich

Idola-

Idolaters account themſelves happy, and their Houſes to be fill'd with the benedictions of Heaven, when they have any of theſe Faquirs for their Gueſts, which the more auſtere they are, the more they honour: and it is the glory of the Troop to have one among them that does ſome conſiderable act of Penance.

The Crews of Faquirs many time joyn together to go in Pilgrimage to the Principal Pagods, and publick Waſhings, which they uſe upon certain dayes in the year in the River Ganges, whereof they make the chiefeſt account; as alſo in that which ſeparates the Territories of the Portugals of Goa from the Dominions of the King of Viſapour. Some of the moſt auſtere Faquirs live in little pittiful Huts neer their Pagods, where they have once in four and twenty hours ſomething to eat beſtow'd upon them for God's ſake. The Tree whereof I have giv'n the deſcription, is of the ſame ſort as that which grows neer Gomron, which I have deſcrib'd in my Perſian Relations. The Franks call it the Bannians-Tree, becauſe in thoſe places where thoſe Trees grow, the Idolaters always take up their quarters, and dreſs their victuals under them. They have thoſe Trees in great reverence, and oft-times build their Pagods either under or very neer them. That which the Reader ſees here deſcrib'd, grows at Surat; in the trunk whereof, which is hollow, is the figure of a Monſter, repreſenting the face of a deform'd Woman, which they ſay was the firſt Woman, whoſe name was Mamaniva; thither great numbers of Idolaters every day reſort: neer to which there is ſome Bramin or other always appointed to be ready to ſay Prayers, and receive the Alms of Rice, Millet, and other Grains which the charitable beſtow upon them. The Bramin marks the forhead of all, both Men and Woman, that come to pray in the Pagod, with a kind of Vermillion, wherewith he alſo beſmears the Idol; for being thus mark'd, they belive the evil Spirit cannot hurt them, as being then under the protection of their God.

Number 1. is that part where the Bramins paint their Idols; ſuch as Mamaniva, Sita, Madedina, and others; whereof they have a great number.

Numb. 2, is the figure of Mamaniva, which is in the Pagod.

Numb. 3, is another Pagod neer the former. There ſtands a Cow at the door, and within ſtands the figure of their God Ram.

Numb. 4, is another Pagod, into which the Faquirs, that do Penance, often retire.

Numb. 5, is another Pagod dedicated to Ram.

Numb. 6, is a Hut into which a Faquir makes his retirement ſeveral times a year, there being but one hole to let in the light. He ſtays there according to the height of his devotion, ſometimes nine or ten days together, without either eating or drinking; a thing which I could not have believ'd, had I not ſeen it. My curioſity carri'd me to ſee one of thoſe penitents, which the Preſident of the Dutch-Company, who ſet a ſpy to watch night and day whether any body brought him any victuals. But he could not diſcover any relief the Faquir had, all the while ſitting upon his Bum like our Taylors, never changing his poſture above ſeven days together, not being able to hold out any longer, by reaſon the heat and ſtench of the Lamp was ready to ſtifle him. Their other ſorts of Penance out-doing this, might be thought incredible, were there not ſo many thouſand witneſſes thereof.

Numb. 7, is the figure of another Penitentiary, over whoſe head ſeveral years have paſt; and yet he never ſlept day nor night. When he finds himſelf ſleepy, he hangs the weight of the upper part of his body upon a double-rope that is faſten'd to one of the boughs of the Tree; and by the continuance of this poſture, which is very ſtrange and painful, there falls a humour into their legs that ſwells them very much.

Numb. 8, is the figure of two poſtures of two doing Penance; who, as long as they live, carry their arms above their heads in that manner; which cauſes certain Carnoſities to breed in the joynts, that they can never bring them down again. Their hair grows down to their waſts, and their nails are as long as their fingers. Night and Day, Winter and Summer they go always ſtark naked in the ſame poſture, expos'd to the heat and rain, and the ſtinging of the Flies; from which they have not the uſe of their hands to rid themſelves. In other neceſ-neceſſities they have other Faquirs in their company always ready to aſſiſt them.

Numb. 9, is the poſture of another Penitent, who every day for ſeveral hours ſtands upon one foot, holding a chafing-diſh in his hand, into which he pours Incenſe, as an Offering to his God, fixing his eyes all the while upon the Sun.

Num. 10 and 11, are the figures of two other Penitents ſitting with their hands rais'd above their heads in the air.

Numb. 12, is the poſture wherein the Penitents ſleep, without ever reſting their arms; which is certainly one of the greateſt torments the body of man can ſuffer.

Numb. 13, is the poſture of a Penitent, whoſe arms, through weakneſs, hang flagging down upon his ſhoulders, being dry'd up for want of nouriſhment.

There are an infinite number of other Penitents; ſome who in a poſture quite contrary to the motion and frame of nature, keep their eys always turn'd toward the Sun. Others who fix their eyes perpetually upon the ground, never ſo much as ſpeaking one word, or looking any perſon in the face. And indeed there is ſuch an infinte variety of them, that would render the farther diſcourſe of them more tedious

True it is, that I have hid thoſe parts which modeſty will not ſuffer to be expos'd to view. But they both in City and Countrey go all as naked as they came out of their Mothers wombs; and though the Woman approach them to take them by the fingers-ends, and to kiſs thoſe parts which modeſty forbids to name; yet ſhall you not obſerve in them any motion of ſenſuality; rather quite contrary, ſeeing them never to look upon any perſon, but rowling their eyes in a moſt frightful manner, you would belive them in an extaſie.

CHAP. VII.

Of the Idolaters belief touching the eſtate of the Soul after death.

'TIS an Article of the Idolaters Faith, that the Souls of Men departing out of the body, are preſented to God; who according to the lives which they lead, orders them another body to inhabit. So that one and the ſame perſon is born ſeveral times into the World. And that as for the Souls of wicked and vicious perſons, God diſpoſes them into the bodies of contemptable Beaſts, ſuch as Aſſes, Dogs, Cats, and the like; to do Penance for their crimes in thoſe infamous Priſons. But they believe that thoſe Souls that enter into Cows are happy; preſuming that there is a divinity in thoſe creatures. For if a man dye with a Cows-tail in his hand, they ſay it is enough to render him happy in the other World.

The Idolaters believing thus the tranſmigration of the Souls of men into the bodies of other creatures, they abhor to kill any creature whatever, for fear they ſhould be guilty of the death of ſome of their kindred or friends doing Penance in thoſe bodies.

If the Men in their life-time are famous for their vertuous deeds, they hold that their Souls paſs into the bodies of ſome Potent Raja's: where they enjoy the pleaſures of this life in thoſe bodies, as the reward of thoſe good works which they did.

This is the reaſon why the Faquirs put themſelves to ſuch horrible Penances. But becauſe that all are not able to endure ſo much torment in this World, they labour to ſupply the defect of that cruel Penance by good works. And beſides, they charge their Heirs in their Wills to give Alms to the Bramins, to the end that by the powerful effect of their Prayers, their God may aſſign them the body of ſome Noble Perſonage.

In

In January 1661, the Broaker belonging to the Holland Company, whose name was Mondas-Parek, dy'd at Surat. He was a rich Man, and very charitable, giving his Alms very liberally as well to the Christians as to the Idolaters; The Capuchins at Surat living one part of the year upon the Rice, Butter and Pulse which he sent them. This Banian was not sick above four or five days; during all which time, and for eight days more after he was dead, his Brothers distributed nine or ten-thousand Roupies; and in the burning of his body they mix'd Sandal-wood, and Lignum-Aloes, with the ordinary wood, believing that by that means the Soul of their Brother transmigrating into another body, he would come to be some great Lord in another Country. There are some that are such fools that they bury their treasure in their life-time, as it is the usal custome of all the rich Men in the Kingdom of Asen; to the end that if they should be condemn'd to the body of some poor miserable person, they might have wherewithal to supply their necessities. I remember one day that I bought in India an Agate Cup half a foot high; he that sold it me, assur'd me that it had been buried under ground above 40 years, and that he kept it to serve his occasions after death; but that it was to him a thing indifferent whether he buried his Cup or his Money. In my last Voyage I bought of one of these Idolaters sixty-two Diamonds of about six grains a-piece; and while I was wondring to see so fair a parcel, he told me I needed not to wonder; for he had been fifty years getting them together, to serve him after his death, but that having occasion for Money, he was forc'd to part with them. This buried treasure stood the Raja-Seva-Gi in great stead, when he took Arms against the Great Mogul, and the King of Visapour. For that Raja having taken Callian Biondi, a small City in the Kingdom of Visapour, by the advice of the Bramins, who assur'd him he should find great store of treasure buri'd, caus'd the greatest part thereof to be demolish'd; and found so much wealth, as to maintain his Army, which was above thirty-thousand Men. It is impossible to convince these poor Idolaters of their errors; in regard they will hear no reason, but submit themselves altogether to their old forms and customs.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Custom among the Idolaters to burn the Bodies of their Dead.

THE custom of burning the Bodies of the dead is very ancient among the Gentiles; which Ceremony they most commonly perform by the banks of Rivers, where they wash the dead; which is the last purgation of them from their sins. Nay, their superstition is so great sometimes, that they will carry the sick person, death approaching, to the bank of some River or Pond, and put his feet in the water. As nature fails, they dip him deeper and deeper, till at length they hold him expiring up to the chin in the River: to the end that the same time that the Soul departs out of the Body, both Body and Soul may be cleans'd from all defilement; and then plunging the newly dead Body over head and ears, they bring it out, and burn it in the place appointed; which is generally neer some Pagod. There are some persons that make it their business to fetch Wood, and agree what they shall have for their pains. An Idolater being dead, all those of his Caste or Tribe assemble together at the House of the deceas'd, and laying the Body upon a Bier cover'd with clean fine Linnen according to his Quality and Estate, they follow the Bier, which is carri'd by such as are appointed for that purpose to the place where the Body is to be burn'd. As they go along they sing certain Prayers to their God, pronouncing several times the words Ram, Ram, while another going before the Bier, sounds a little Bell, to advertize the living to pray for the dead. The Body being set down by the bank of the River or Pond, they first plunge it into the water, and then they burn it. According to the quality of the deceas'd they also mingle with the ordinary wood Sandal-wood, and other other Sweet-woods. But the Idolaters do not only burn the Bodies of the dead, but the Bodies of the living. They ſcruple to kill a ſerpent, or a louſe, but account it a meritorious thing to burn a living Wife with the body of the deceas'd Husband.

CHAP. X.

How the Wives are burnt in India with the Bodies of their deceas'd Husbands.

IT is alſo an ancient cuſtom among the Indians, that the Husband happening to dye, the Wife can never marry again. So that as ſoon as the Man is dead, the Wife retires to bewail her Husband; ſome days after that, they ſhave off her hair; ſhe lays aſide all the ornaments of her apparel; ſhe takes off from her arms and legs the Bracelets which her Husband put on when he eſpous'd her, in token of her ſubmiſſion, and her being chain'd to him: and all the reſt of her life ſhe lives ſlighted and diſpis'd, and in a worſe condition than a Slave in the very Houſe where ſhe was Miſtreſs before. This unfortunate condition cauſes them to hate life, ſo that they rather chooſe to be buri'd alive with the body of their deceas'd Husbands, then to live in the ſcorn and contempt of the World. Beſides that, the Bramins make them believe, that in dying after that manner, they ſhall revive again with him in another World, with more honour and more advantages than they enjoy'd before. Theſe are the motives that perſwade the Woman to burn with their Husbands; beſides that, the Prieſts flatter them with a hope, that while they are in the midſt of the flames, before they expire, Ram will appear, and reveal wonderful viſions to them; and that after their Souls have tranſmigrated into various Bodies, they ſhall at length obtain a high degree of Honour to eternity.

However, there is no Woman that can burn herſelf with her Husband's body, till ſhe has the leave of the Governor of the place where ſhe inhabits, who being a Mahumetan, and abhorring that execrable cuſtom of Self-murder, is very ſhy to permit them. Beſides, there are none but Widows that have no children, that lye under the reproach that forces them to violent death. For as for the Widows that have children, they are by no means permitted to burn themſelves; but quite the contrary, they are commanded to live for the education of the children. Thoſe Women whom the Governour will not permit to burn themſelves, ſpend the reſt of thir lives in doing Penance, and performing works of Charity. Some make it their buſineſs to ſit upon the Road to boyl certain Pulſe in water, and to give the liquor to Travellers to drink. Others ſit with fire always ready for them to light their Tobacco. Others make vows to eat nothing but the undigeſted grains which they find in Cow-dung.

The Governour finding no perſwaſions will alter the Woman's reſolution, but more eſpecially perceiving by the ſign which his Secretary makes him, that he had receiv'd the Coin, in a ſurly manner gives the Woman leave, bidding the Devil take her and all her kindred.

When they have got this leave, their Muſick begins to ſtrike up, and away they ding to the Houſe of the deceas'd, with Drums beating, and Flutes playing before them; and in that manner they accompany the perſon that is to be burnt, to the place appointed. All the kindred and friends of the Widow that is to dye, come to her, and congratulate her for the happineſs ſhe is to enjoy in the other World: and for the honour which the Caſte ſhe is of receives by her generous reſolution, ſhe dreſſes her ſelf as ſhe were going to be marri'd, and ſhe is conducted in triumph to the place of execution. For the noiſe is loud of Muſical Inſtruments, and Womens Voices, that follow her ſinging Songs in honour of the miſerable creature that is going to dye. The Bramins that accompany her, exhort her to give publick teſtimonies of her conſtancy and courage: and many of our Europeans are of opinion, that to take away the fears of death, which naturally terrifies humanity, the Prieſts do give her a certain Beverage to ſtupify and diſorder the ſenſes, which takes from her all apprehenſion of her preparations for death. 'Tis for the Bramins intereſt that the poor miſerable creatures ſhould continue in their reſolutions; for all their Bracelets as well about their legs as their arms, the Pendents in their ears; their Rings ſometimes of Gold, ſometimes of Silver; (for the poor wear only Copper and Tin,) all theſe belong to the Bramins, who rake for them among the Aſhes when the party is burn'd.

I have ſeen Women burnt after three ſeveral manners, according to the difference of the Countrey. In the Kingdom of Guzerat, as far as Agra and Dehli, they ſet up a little Hut above twelve foot ſquare upon the bank of a Pond or River. 'Tis made of Reeds, and all ſorts of ſmall Wood, with which they mingle certain pots of Oil and other Drugs to make it burn more vehemently. The Woman is plac'd in the middle of the Hut, in a half-lying-down poſture, leaning her head upon a kind of a wooden Bolſter, and reſting her back againſt a Pillar, to which the Bramin tyes her about the middle, for fear ſhe ſhould run away when ſhe feels the fire. In this poſture ſhe holds the body of her deceas'd Husband upon her knees, chewing Betle all the while: and when ſhe has continu'd in this poſture about half an hour, the Bramin goes out, and the woman bids them ſet fire to the Hut; which is immediately done by the Bramins, and the kindred and friends of the Woman; who alſo caſt ſeveral pots of Oil into the fire, to put the Woman the ſooner out of her pain. After the Woman is burnt, the Bramins ſearch the Aſhes for all her Bracelets, Pendants and Rings, whether Gold, Silver, Copper or Tin, which is all free booty to themſelves.

In Bengala they burn the Woman after another faſhion. In that Country a Woman muſt be very poor that does not accompany the Body of her deceas'd Husband to the Ganges to waſh his Body, and to be waſh'd her ſelf before ſhe is burnt. I have ſeen dead Carkaſſes brought to the Ganges above twenty days journey off from the place, and ſmelt 'em to boot; for the ſcent of them has been intollerably noyſom. There was one that came from the Northern Mountains neer the Frontiers of the Kingdom of Bouran, with the body of her Husband carri'd in a Waggon; ſhe travel'd twenty days a-foot, and neither eat nor drank for 15 or 16 days together till ſhe came to the Ganges, where after ſhe had waſh'd the body that ſtank abominably, and had afterwards waſh'd her ſelf, ſhe was burnt with him with an admirable conſtancy. Before the Woman that is to be burnt, goes the Muſick, conſiſting of Drums, Flutes and Hautboys, whom the Woman in her beſt Accoutrements follows, dancing up to the very Funeral-pile, upon which ſhe gets up, and places her ſelf as if ſhe were ſitting up in her Bed; and then they lay a-croſs her the body of her Husband. When that is done, her kindred and friends, ſome bring her a Letter, ſome a piece of Calicut, another pieces of Silver or Copper, and deſire her to deliver them to their Mother, or Brother, or ſome other Kinſman or Friend. When the woman ſees they have all done, ſhe asks the Standers-by three times, if they have nothing more of ſervice to command her; if they make no anſwer, ſhe ties up all ſhe has got in a piece of Taffata, which ſhe puts between her own belly, and the body of her Husband, bidding them to ſet fire to the Pile; which is preſently done by the Bramins and her Kindred. I have obſerv'd, becauſe there is ſcarcity of Wood in Bengala, that when theſe poor Creatures are half griddl'd, they caſt their bodies into the Ganges, where the remains are devour'd by the Crocodiles.

I muſt not forget a wicked cuſtom practis'd by the Idolaters of Bengala. When a Woman is brought to bed, and the Child will not take to the Teat, they carry it out of the Village, and putting it into a Linnen Cloath, which they faſt'n by the four Corners to the Boughs of a Tree, they there leave it from morning till evening. By this means the poor Infant is expos'd to be tormented by the Crows, inſomuch that there are ſome who have their eyes pickt out of their heads: which is the reaſon that in Bengala you ſhall ſee many of theſe Idolaters that have but one eye, and ſome that have loſt both. In the evening they fetch the child away, to try whether he will ſuck the next night; and if he ſtill refuſe the teat, they carry him again to the ſame place next morning; which they do for three days together; after which, if the Infant after that refuſes to ſuck, they believe believe him to be a Devil, and throw him into Ganges, or any the next Pond or River. In the places where the Apes breed, these poor Infants are not so expos'd to the Crows; for where the Ape discovers a Nest of those Birds, he climbs the Tree, and throws the Nest one way and the Eggs another. Sometimes some charitable people among the English, Hollanders, and Portugals, compassionating the misfortune of those Children, will take them away from the Tree, and give them good education.

All along the Coast of Cormandel, when the Women are to be burnt with their Husbands, they make a great hole in the ground nine or ten foot deep, and twenty-five or thirty foot square, into which they throw a great quantity of Wood and Drugs to make the fire burn more fiercely. When the fire is kindled, they set the body of the man upon the brink; and then presently up comes the Woman dancing and chewing Betle; accompany'd by her Friends and Kindred, with Drums beating, and Flutes sounding. Then the Woman takes three turns round the hole, and every time she has gone the round, she kisses her Friends and Kindred. After the third time the Bramins casts the Carcass of her Husband into the flame; and the woman standing with her back to the fire, is push't in by the Bramins also, and tumbles backward. Then her Kindred and Friends cast Oil and other combustile Drugs upon the fire, to make it burn more vehemently, that the Bodies may be the sooner consum'd.

In most places upon the Coast of Cormandel, the Women are not burnt with their deceas'd Husbands, but they are buried alive with them in holes which the Bramins make a foot deeper than the tallness of the man and woman. Usually they chuse a Sandy place; so that when the man and woman are both let down together, all the Company with Baskets of Sand fill up the hole above half a foot higher than the surface of the ground, after which they jump and dance upon it, till they believe the woman to be stiff'd.

When some of the Idolaters upon the Coast of Cormandel are upon the point of death, their Friends do not carry them to the side of a River or Lake to cleanse their Souls, but they carry them to the fattest Cow they can find; and laying the sick party just behind the Cow, they lift up her Tail, and provoke her to piss. If she piss, so that it falls upon the face of the sick party, all the Company are overjoy'd, saying, that his Soul is happy. But if the Cow do not piss, to wash the sick parties face, they burn him with a great deal of sadness. If a Cow be sick, the owner must be careful to lead her to a Pond or River; for should she dye at his House, the Bramins would fine him.

CHAP. X.

Remarkable Storie of Women that have been burnt after their Husband decease.

THE Raja of Velou having lost his City and his life, through the loss of a Battel gain'd against him by the King of Visapour's General, he was extreamly lamented at Court. Eleven of his Wives also were no less concern'd for his death, and resolv'd to be burnt when his Body was burn'd. The General of Visapour's Army understanding their resolution thought at first to divert them, by promising them all kind usage. But finding perswasions, would not prevail, he order'd them to be shut up in a Room. He who had the order, going to put it in execution, the Women in a rage told him, that 'twas to no purpose to keep them Prisoners, for if they might not have leave to do what they had resolv'd, in three hours there would not one of them be alive. The person entrusted, laugh'd at their threats; but the Keeper of those women opening the door at the end of the three hours, found them all ſtretch'd out dead upon the place, without any mark in the world to be ſeen that they had any way haſten'd their own deaths.

Two of the moſt potent Raja's of India came to Agra in the year 1642, to do homage to Sha-jehan, who then reign'd; who not having acquitted themſelves as they ought to have done, in the judgment of the Grand-Maſter of the Kings Houſhold, he told one of the Raja's one day, in the preſence of the King, that they had not done well, to behave themſelves in that manner toward ſo great a Monarch, as was the King his Maſter. The Raja looking upon himſelf to be a great King, and a great Prince, he and his Brother having brought along with them a Train of 15 or 16000 thouſand Horſe, was netl'd at the bold reproof which the Grand Maſter gave him, and drawing out his Dagger, ſlew him upon the place, in the preſence of the King. The Grand Maſter falling at the feet of his own Brother, who ſtood cloſe by him, he was going about to revenge his death, but was prevented by the Raja's Brother, who ſtab'd him, and laid him athwart his Brothers Body. The King, who beheld theſe two murthers one upon the neck of the other, retir'd into his Haram for fear. But preſently the Omrahs and other people fell upon the Raja's, and cut 'em to pieces. The King incens'd at ſuch an attempt committed in his Houſe and in his preſence, commanded the Rajah's bodies to be thrown into the River; which their Troops that they had left about Agra underſtanding, threaten'd to enter the City and pillage it. But rather than hazard the City, the King was adviſ'd to deliver them the Bodies of their Princes. When they were to be burn'd, thirteen Women belonging to the two Raja's Houſes, came dancing and leaping, and preſently got upon the Funeral pile, holding one another by the hands, and being preſently after ſtifl'd with the ſmoak, fell together into the fire. Preſently the Bramins threw great heaps of Wood, pots of Oil, and other combuſtible matter upon them, to diſpatch them the ſooner.

I obſerved a ſtrange paſſage at Patna, being then with the Governour, a young Gentleman of about twenty-four years of age, in his own Houſe. While I was with him, in came a young woman, very handſome, and not above two and twenty years old, who deſir'd leave of the Governour to be burnt with the Body of her deceas'd Husband. The Governour compaſſionating her youth and beauty, endeavour'd to divert her from her reſolution; but finding he could not prevail, with a ſurly countenance, he ask'd her whether ſhe underſtood what the torment of fire was, and whether ſhe had ever burnt her fingers? No, no, anſwer'd ſhe more ſtoutly than before, I do not fear fire, and to let you know as much, ſend for a lighted Torch, hither. The Governour abominating her anſwer, in great paſſion bid her go to the Devil. Some young Lords that were with the Governour, deſir'd him to try the Woman, and to call for a Torch; which with much ado he did, and a lighted Torch was brought. So ſoon as the woman ſaw the lighted Torch coming, ſhe ran to meet it, and held her hand in the flame, not altering her countenance in the leaſt; ſtill ſearing her arm along up to the very elbow, till her fleſh look'd as if it had been broil'd; whereupon the Governour commanded her out of his ſight.

A Bramin coming to Patna, and aſſembling all his Tribe together, told them, that they muſt give him two thouſand Roupies, and twenty-ſeven Ells of Calicut. To which the chief among them made him anſwer, that they were poor, and could not poſſible raiſe ſuch a ſum. However he perſiſted in his demand, poſitively affirming to them, that he would ſtay there without eating or drinking till they brought him the Money and the Cloath. With this reſolution he climb'd a Tree, and ſetting in the fork between the boughs, remain'd there without eating or drinking for ſeveral days. The noiſe of this extravagance coming to the ears of the Hollanders where we lay, we ſet Sentinels to watch whether it were true, that a man could ſit ſo long without victuals, which he did for thirty days together. The one and thirtieth day of ſuch an extraordinary Faſt, the Idolaters fearing to kill one of their Prieſts for want of granting him his demand, club'd together, and brought him his twenty-ſeven Ells of Calicut, and two thouſand Roupies. So ſoon as the Bramin ſaw the Money and the Cloath, he came down from the Tree; and after he had upbraided thoſe of his Tribe for want of Charity, he diſtributed all the Roupies among among the poor, reſerving only five or ſix for himſelf. The Cloth he cut into little pieces, and gave away, keeping only to himſelf enough to cover his own nakedneſs; and having made this diſtribution, he diſappear'd of a ſudden, and no body knew what became of him, though dilligent ſearch was made after him.

When a Chineſe lies at the point of death, all his Kindred and Friends gather about him, and ask him whither he intends to go; they tell him alſo, that if he want any thing, he need but only ask and have, let it be Gold, Silver, or a Woman. When they are dead they perform many Ceremonies at their Funerals, which conſiſts chiefly in artificial fires, wherein the Chineſes are the moſt expert in the world; ſo that he muſt be a very poor man that has no fire-works at his Funeral. Beſides that, they put Money in a little Box, and bury it by the deceas'd; and leave good ſtore of victuals upon the Grave, out of an opinion that they riſe and eat. Which the Souldiers of Batavia obſerving, us'd to fill their Bellies at theſe Graves every time they walk'd their rounds. But when the Chineſes perceiv'd it, they poyſon'd the victuals to ſpoil the Dutchmens feaſting. The Townſmen of Batavia taking the Souldiers part, accus'd the Chineſes for poyſoning ſeveral of the Dutch. But the Chineſes pleaded, that if the Soldiers had over-eat themſelves, or ſurfeited themſelves upon what was left for the dead to eat, 'twas none of their fault; for that they did not leave their victuals for the Souldiers; and beſides that, among all the multitudes which they had buried, they never had heard the leaſt complaint before of any one that ever came by any harm by eating their food. Thus the buſineſs was huſh'd over; nor did the Souldiers dare to pilfer any more.

CHAP. IX.

Of the moſt celebrated Pagods of the Idolaters in India.

THE Indian Idolaters have a great number of Temples, ſmall and great which they call Pagods, where they pray to their Gods, and make their Offerings. But the poor people that live in the Woods and Mountains, and remote from Towns, are contented only with ſome ſtone, whereon they make a rude kind of Noſe, and paint it with ſome Vermillion colour, which ſerves all the whole neighbourhood to worſhip.

The four moſt celebrated Pagods, are Jagrenate, Banarous, Matura, and Tripeti.

Jagrenate is one of the mouths of Ganges, whereupon is built the Great Pagod, where the Arch Bramin, or chief Prieſt among the Idolaters keeps his reſidence. The great Idol that ſtands upon the Altar in the innermoſt part of the Pagod, has two Diamonds for his Eyes, and another that hangs about his neck, the leaſt of thoſe Diamonds weighing about forty Carats. About his Arms he wears Bracelets ſometimes of Pearls, and ſometimes of Rubies; and this magnificent Idol is call'd Reſora. The Revenues of this Pagod are ſufficient to feed fifteen or twenty thouſand Pilgrims every day; which is a number often ſeen there, that Pagod being the greateſt place of devotion in all India. But you muſt take notice, that no Goldſmith is ſuffer'd to enter this Pagod, becauſe that one of them being lock'd in all night long, ſtole a Diamond out of one of the Idols eyes. As he was about to go out, when the Pagod was open'd in the morning, he dy'd at the door; their God, as they affirm, revenging his own ſacriledg. That which renders this Pagod, which is a large building the moſt conſiderable in all India, is, becauſe it is ſituated upon the Ganges; the Idolaters believing that the waters of that River have a particular quality to cleanſe them from their ſins. That which makes it ſo rich (for it maintains above twenty thouſand Cows) is the vaſt Alms that are continually beſtow'd by ſo incredible a multitude as comes from all parts. Which Alms are not ſo much at the diſcretion of the Donor, as at the Will of the chief Prieſt, who before he gives them leave to ſhave and waſh in Ganges, taxes them according to their quality, of which he has information. Thus he collects vaſts ſums, of which he makes little or no profit himſelf; all going to feed the poor, and the repair of the Pagod. The chief Bramin cauſes Victuals to be diſtributed to the Pilgrims every day; as Milk, Rice, Butter and Wheat; but to the poor, who want wherewithall to cook it, they diſtribute their food ready dreſst. In the morning they boil a quantity of Rice in Earth'n pots of different bigneſs; and at the hour when the Pilgrims come for their meat, the chief Bramin orders another Bramin to take a pot of boil'd Rice; this pot he lets fall; and if there be five, the pot breaks into five equal parts, and every one takes his own ſhare. And in the ſame manner he breaks it into more pieces, if there be more perſons, to whom he is to diſtribute the food. Which is a thing very ſtrange and worthy obſervation. They never boil twice in an Earthen pot; but in a Copper pot; nor have they any other Diſhes, than only certain Leaves, which they faſten together, and a certain kind of a Baſon, about a foot in compaſs, wherein they melt their Butter, and ſtir the Rice with the ends of their fingers when they eat. They have alſo a kind of a Shell, wherein they pour their melted Butter, which they will ſwallow down, as we do Sack.

Prieſt,

Now for the deſcription of a particular Idol which ſtands upon the Altar in the Pagod of Jagrenate: It is cover'd from the Shoulders downward with a great Mantle that hangs down upon the Altar. This Mantle is of Tiſſue of Gold or Silver, according to the Solemnities. At firſt it had neither feet nor hands; but after one of their Phropets was taken up into Heaven, while they were lamenting what to do for another, God ſent them an Angel in the likeneſs of that Prophet, to the end they might continue their Veneration toward him. Now while this Angel was buſie in making this Idol, the people grew ſo impatient, that they took him out of the Angels hands, and put him into the Pagod, without hands or feet; but finding that the Idol appear'd in that manner too deform'd, they made him hands and arms of thoſe ſmall Pearls which we call Ounce-Pearls. As for his feet, they are never ſeen, being hid under his Cloak. There is no part op'n but his hands and feet; the head and body being of Sandal-wood; round about the Dnomo, under which this Idol ſtands, being very high, from the bottom to the top, are only Niches fill'd with other Idols; the greateſt part whereof repreſent moſt hideous Monſters, being all of different colours. On each ſide of this Pagod, there ſtands another much leſs, where the Pilgrims make their leſſer Offerings. And ſome that have in ſickneſs, or upon buſineſs made any Vows to any Deity, bring thither the reſemblance thereof in remembrance of the good which they have receiv'd. They rub this Idol every day with ſweet Oils, that make it of a black colour. And at the right hand of this Idol ſits his Siſter, who ſtands upon her feet, and is well clad, being call'd by the name Sorora; upon his left, ſtands his Brother, cloath'd all over alſo, whom they call Balhadar. Before the Idol, ſomewhat toward his left hand, ſtands the Idols Wife upon her feet, all of maſſy Gold, by the name of Remin; whereas the other three, are only of Sandal-wood.

The other two Pagods are appointed for the reſidence of the chief Bramin, and other Bramins that officiate in the great Pagod. All theſe Bramins go with their heads bare, and for the moſt part ſhav'd; having no other Cloathes but only one piece of Calicut, with one half whereof they cover their bodies; the other part ſerves them inſtead of a Scarf. Neer the Pagod ſtands the Tomb of one of their Prophets, whoſe name was Cabir, to whom they give great honour. You are to take notice alſo, that their Idols ſtand upon a kind of Altar encompaſs'd with Iron Bars. For no perſons are to touch them, but only certain Bramins, appointed for that ſervice by the chief Bramin.

Next to that of Jagrenate, the moſt famous Pagod is that of Banarous, being alſo ſeated upon the Ganges, in a City that bears the ſame name. That which is moſt remarkable is, that from the Gate of the Pagod to the River there is a deſcent all of Stone; neer to which are certain Platforms, and ſmall blind Chambers, ſome of the Bramins lodging, others where they dreſs their victuals; victuals; for so soon as the Idolaters have said their Prayers, and made their Offerings, they dress their food, not suffering any person to touch it but themselves, for fear lest any unclean person should come neer it. But above all things, they passionately desire to drink of Ganges water; for as often as they drink it, they are wash'd, as they believe, from all their sins. Great numbers of these Bramins go every day to the cleanest part of the River, where they fill their little round earthen-pots full of water, the mouths whereof are very small, and contain every one of them a Bucket-full. Being thus fill'd they bring them before the great Priest, who covers them with a fine piece of flame-colour'd Calicut, three or four times doubl'd, to which he sets his Seal. The Bramins carry these pots, some six of them ty'd together with six little cords fasten'd to the end of a stick as broad as a lath, shifting their shoulders often; travelling sometimes three or four hunder'd leagues with those precious burthens up into the Countrey. Where they sell it, or present it; but that is only to the rich, from whence they expect great rewards. There are some of the Idolaters, who when they make any great Feast, especially when they marry their children, will drink four or five hunder'd Crowns in this water. They never drink of it till the end of their meals; and then a glass or two according to the liberality of the Master of the Feast. The chief reason why they esteem the water of Ganges so highly, is, because it never putrifies, nor engenders any Vermin; though I know not whether they may be believ'd, considering the great quantity of dead bodies which they fling into the Ganges.

The body of the Pagod of Banarous is made like a Cross, as are all the rest of the Pagods, the four parts whereof are equal. In the midst there is a Cupola rais'd very high, the top whereof is pyramidal; at the end also of every four parts of the Cross there is a Tower, to which there is an ascent on the out-side. Before you come to the top, there are several Balconies and Niches wherein to take the fresh air: and round about are figures of all sorts of creatures, but very Lend work. Under the Duomo, in the middle of the Pagod there is an Altar, like a Table, eight foot long, and six foot broad, with two steps before, that serve for a footstool, which is cover'd sometimes with a rich Tapestry, sometimes with Silk, sometimes with Cloath of Gold or Silver, according to the solemnity of their Festival. Their Altars are cover'd with Cloath of Gold or Silver, or else with some painted Calicuts. Approaching the entry of the Pagod, you see the Altar right before ye, together with the Idols which are upon it. For the Women and Virgins worship without, not being permitted to enter the Pagod, no more than is a certain Tribe which is among them. Among the Idols that stand upon the great Altar, there is one plac'd upright some five or six foot high; but you can see neither arms, nor legs, nor body: nothing appears but the head and neck, all the rest being cover'd down to the Altar with a Robe that spreads it self below. Sometimes you shall see the neck set out with some rich Chain either of Gold, Rubies, Pearls or Emraulds. This Idol was made in honour and likeness of Bainma-don, who was heretofore a very great and holy Personage among them, whose name they oft'n have in their mouths. Upon the right-side of the Altar stands the figure of a Chimera, part Elephant, part Horse, part Mule. It is of massive Gold, and they call it Garou, not suffering any person to approach it but the Bramins. They say it is the resemblance of the Beast which carri'd that holy person when he liv'd upon earth. And that he travell'd long journeys upon his back, to see if the people remain'd in their duty, and whether they did no wrong one to another. Between the great Gate and the great Altar upon the left-hand, there is a little Altar, upon which there stands an Idol of black Marble sitting cross-legg'd, about two foot high. While I was there, a little Boy who was the Son of the High-Priest stood upon the left-side of the Altar, and all the people threw him certain pieces of Taffata, or imbroider'd Calicut, like Handkerchiefs, all which he return'd to the people again after he had wip'd them upon the Idol. Others threw him Bracelets of Coral, others of yellow-Amber, others threw him fruits and flowers; whatever they threw him, he rubb'd it upon the Idol, put it to his lips, and then restor'd it to the people. This Idol is call'd Morli-Ram, that is to say Gods Morli, and was the Brother of him that stands upon the great Altar.

Under

Under the Portal of the Pagod ſits one of the principal Bramins with a great Baſon by him, full of a yellow colour mix'd with water. All theſe poor Idolaters come and preſent themſelves before him, who gives them a mark from between the eyes to the top of the noſe, then upon the arms, and upon the ſtomach; by which marks they know who have waſh'd themſelves in Ganges, and who not. Thoſe that never waſh'd themſelves but in the waters of their own Wells, or have only ſent for it from the River, they do not believe to be perfectly purifi'd, and by conſequence they are not to be mark'd with that colour. By the way take notice, that theſe Idolaters are mark'd with different colours, according to the Tribe they are of. But in the Empire of the Great Mogul, they who are painted with yellow compoſe the biggeſt Tribe, and are the leaſt defil'd. For when they are neceſſitated to the deeds of nature, ſome think it enough to waſh the part defil'd; but they firſt rub the part with a handful of ſand, then they ſcour it with water. After ſo doing, they affirm their bodies to be clean, and that they can eat their food without fear.

Neer to this great Pagod upon the Summer-Weſt, ſtands a kind of a Colledg, which the Raja Jeſſeing, the moſt potent of all the Idolaters in the Mogul's Empire, built for the education of the youth of the better ſort. I ſaw two of the children of that Prince there at School, who had for their Maſters ſeveral Bramins, who trught them to write and read in a language peculiar to the Idolaters Prieſts, and far different from the ſpeech of the common people. Entring into the Court of that Colledg, and caſting my eyes up, I diſcover'd two Galleries that went round the Court, where I ſaw the two Princes ſitting, attended by ſeveral petty Lords and Bramins, who made ſeveral Mathematical Figures upon the ground with chalk. The two Princes ſeeing me, ſent to know who I was; and underſtanding that I was a Frank, they ſent for me up, and ask'd me ſeveral queſtions touching Europe, and particularly touching France. Whereupon there being two Globes in the room which the Hollanders had giv'n the Bramins, I ſhew'd the Princes where France lay upon one of them. After I had taken leave, I ask'd one of the Bramins when I might ſee the Pagod open: he anſwer'd me, the next morning before Sun-riſing. When I came there, I obſerv'd before the door, a Gallery ſupported with Pillars, where there was already a great crowd of men, women and children expecting when the Pagod would be open'd. By and by, the Gallery, and a great part of the Court being full, there came eight Bramins, four of each ſide of the Gate, with every one a Cenſer in his hand, follow'd by a rabble of other Bramins that made a hideous noiſe with Drums and other Inſtruments. The two eldeſt of the Bramins ſing a Song; and then all the people falling into the tune, fall a ſinging and playing, with every one a Peacock's-tail, or ſome other kind of fiable, to drive away the flies, that the Idol may not be annoid when they op'n the Pagod. This fanning, and the Muſick, laſted a good half hour. Then the two principal Bramins made a great noiſe three times with two little Bells, and with a kind of a Mallet knockt at the Pagod-door. Which was preſently open'd by ſix Bramins within, diſcovering, ſome ſix or ſeven paces from the entrance, an Alter with an Idol upon it, which they call Ram, Ram, the Siſter of Morli-Ram. Upon her right-hand ſhe has a child made like a great Cupid, which they call the God La-kemin; and in her left-arm a little Girl, which they call the Goddeſs Sita. So ſoon as the Pagod was open, and that a great Curtain was drawn, the people, who perceiv'd the Idol, fell upon the ground, laying their hands upon their heads, and proſtrating themſelves three times. Then riſing up, they threw great quantities of Noſegays and Garlands to the Prieſts; with which the Bramins touch'd the Idol, and then reſtor'd them again. Before the Alter ſtood a Bramin, who held in his hand a lamp of nine wicks lighted, upon which he caſt Incenſe every foot, and then held it to the Idol. All theſe ceremonies laſted above an hour; after which the people departed, and the Pagod was ſhut. They preſented the Idol with great ſtore of Rice, Meal, Butter, Oil, and Milk-meats, of which the Bramins loſe nothing. Now in regard this Idol is the repreſentation of a Woman, the Women all invoke it, and call her their Patroneſs: which is the reaſon that the place is generally crowded with Women and Maids. The Raja, to have this Idol in the Pagod of his own houſe, and for taking it out of the great Pagod, has expended as well upon the Bramins, as in alms to the poor, above five Lacres of Roupies, or 750000 Livres of our Money.

On

On the other ſide of the Street where the Colledg is built, there ſtands another Pagod, call'd Richourdas, from the name of the Idol, which is within upon the Altar: and ſomewhat lower upon another ſmall Altar ſtands another Idol, which they call Goupaidas, the Brother of Richourdas. You ſee nothing but the face of all theſe Idols, which is either of wood or jet; unleſs it be the Idol of Morly-Ram, which ſtands in the great Pagod ſtark naked. As for the Idol Ram-Kam, which ſtands in the Raja's Pagod, it has two Diamonds inſtead of eyes, which the Prince caus'd to be ſet there, with a Coller of Pearl, and Canopy over his head, ſupported with four Silver-Pillars.

Some eight days journey from Banarous, bending Northward, you enter into a Mountainous Countrey; but which ſometimes op'ns it ſelf into very large plains, ſometimes three or four leagues in length. They are very fertil in Corn, Rice, Wheat, and Pulſe. But that which is the plague and ruine of the people of that Countrey, is the vaſt number of Elephants that breed there, and devour their Harveſt. If a Caravan paſs through any part of that Countrey where there are no Inns, in regard the people are forc'd to lye in the op'n Fields, they have much ado to defend themſelves from the Elephants that will come to take away their proviſions. To skare them, the people make great fires, ſhoot off their Muſkets, hooping and hollowing ever and anon. In this place there is another Pagod, well-built, and very ancient, adorn'd with many figures both within and without, which are only the repreſentations of Maids and Women; ſo that Men are ſeldom known to repair thither for devotion's-ſake; and therefore it is call'd the Womens Pagod. There is an Altar in the middle, as in other Pagods; and upon the Altar an Idol of maſſy Gold, four foot high, repreſenting a Maid ſtanding upright, which they call Ram-Marion. At her right-hand ſtands a Child of maſſy Silver, about two foot high; and they ſay that the Maid liv'd a very holy life, that that Child was brought to her by the Bramins to be inſtructed in her belief, and in the knowledg of well-living: but that after two or three years that the Child had liv'd with her, the Infant grew ſo knowing and ready witted, that all the Raja's of the Countrey long'd for her company; ſo that being ſtoll'n from her one night, ſhe was never ſeen afterwards. Upon the left-hand of this Idol, ſtands another Idol, repreſenting an old Man; who, as they ſay, was the ſervant of Ram-Marion and the Infant: for which reaſon the Bramins do very much reverence this Idol. They never come but once a year in devotion, but they muſt be there upon a prefix'd day, which is the firſt of November, though they never op'n the Pagod till the full of the Moon. During thoſe fifteen days, the Pilgrims, as well Men as Women, faſt from time to time, and waſh themſelves three times a-day, not leaving a hair in any part of their bodies, which they take off with a certain earth.

CHAP. XII.

A Continuation of the deſcription of the principal Pagods of the Indian Idolaters.

NExt to the Pagods of Jngrenate and Banarous, the moſt conſiderable is that of Matura, about eighteen leagues from Agra, upon the way to Dehly. It is one of the moſt ſumptuous Edifices in all India, and the place to which the greateſt number of Pilgrims was wont to reſort: But now there are very few or none; the Idolaters having ſenſibly loſt the reverence which they had for that Pagod, ſince the River of Gemena, that formerly ran by that Pagod, has chang'd its courſe, above half a league from it. For it requires ſo much time to return to the Pagod, after they have waſh'd in the River, that they were many times defil'd again before they could reach it. Though this Pagod ſtand in a bottom, yet you may diſcover it five or ſix leagues before you come at it, the building being very lofty and magnificent. The Stones are of a red colour, which they fetch from a Quarry, neer Agra. They cleave like our Slates, ſome of them being fifteen foot long, and nine or ten foot broad, yet not above ſix fingers thick, eſpecially when you cleave them as you would have them for uſe: They alſo make very fair Pillars. The Fortreſs of Agra, the Walls of Jehanabat, the King's Houſe, the two Moſquees, and ſeveral Noblemens Houſes are all built of this Stone.

The Pagod is built upon a great Platform of an Octogonal Figure, pav'd with Free-ſtone; being adorn'd round about with the figures of all ſorts of creatures, eſpecially Apes. There is an aſcent to it two wayes of fifteen or ſixteen ſteps a-piece, every ſtep being two foot broad, for two perſons to go a-breſt. One of the aſcents leads up to the great Portal of the Pagod, the other behind up to the Chancel. The Pagod does not take up above half the Platform, the other half ſerving for a Piazza before it. The Structure is in the form of a Croſs, like the reſt of the Pagods, in the midſt whereof a great Duomo, with two others of each ſide ſomewhat leſs, advance themſelves above the reſt of the building. The out-ſide of the building from top to bottom is adorn'd with the figures of Rams, Apes and Elephants, and ſeveral ſorts of Monſters. From one foot below every one of theſe Duomo's to the Roof, at ſuch and ſuch ſpaces, are Windows, ſome five, ſome ſix feet high, and to every Window, belongs a Balcone, where four perſons may ſtand. Every Balcone is cover'd with a little Arch, ſupported by four Pillars, others by eight, every two touching one another. Round about the Duomo's are Niches fill'd with the figures of Damons. Some with four arms, ſome with four legs. Some with mens heads upon the bodies of Beaſts, and long tails that hang down to their thighes: There are abundance of Apes; and indeed it is an ugly ſight to behold ſo many deform'd ſpectacles. There is but one great door to the Pagod, upon each ſide whereof there are Pillars and Figures of Men and Monſters. The hinder-part is clos'd with a cloſe Baliſter of Stone-Pillars five or ſix inches in Diameter, into which, as into a kind of Sanctum Sanctorum, none but the Bramins are permitted to enter: but for Money, I got in, and ſaw a ſquare Altar ſome fifteen or ſixten foot from the door cover'd with an old Tiſſue of Gold and Silver, upon which ſtood the great Idol, which they call Ram, Ram. You ſee nothing but his head, which is of a very black Marble, with two Rubies inſtead of eyes. All the body, from the ſhoulders to the feet, is cover'd with a Robe of Purple-Velvet, with ſome ſmall embroidery. There are two other Idols of each ſide of him two foot high, apparrell'd in the ſame manner; only their faces are white, which they call Becchor. There I ſaw a Machine ſixteen foot ſquare, and between twelve and fifteen foot high; cover'd with painted Calicuts, repreſenting the ſhapes of Devils. This Machine running upon four Wheels, they told me, was a moving Altar, upon which they carri'd their great God in Proceſſion to viſit the other Gods, as alſo to the River, whither all the people went upon their great Feſtival.

The fourth Pagod is that of Tripeti, in the Province of Carnatica, toward the Coaſt of Coromandel, and Cape Comorin. I ſaw it as I went to Maſlipatan. It is a Pagod to which there belong a great number of little lodgings for the Bramins: ſo that altogether it ſeems to be a great Town. There are ſeveral Ponds round about it; but their ſuperſtition is ſo great, that no Paſſenger dare take any water out of them, but what the Bramin gives him.

CHAP. XIII.

Of the Pilgrimages of the Idolaters to their Pagods.

ALL the Idolaters under the Dominion of the Great Mogul, and other Princes, both on this ſide and beyond Ganges, at leaſt once in their lives go in Pilgrimage to one of theſe Pagods that I have nam'd; but moſt generally to that of Ingrenate, as being the firſt and moſt conſiderable above all the reſt. The Bramins and rich people go oftner. For ſome go every four years, ſome every ſix, or eight; and putting the Idols of their Pagods upon Pallekies cover'd with Tiſſues, they travel with their Bramins, as it were in proceſſion to the Pagod which they moſt eſteem.

They go not in Pilgrimage, one by one, or two and two, but whole Towns, and many times ſeveral Towns together. The poor that go a great way, are ſupply'd by the rich; who ſpend very freely in ſuch acts of Charity. The rich travel in Pallekies or Chariots, the poor on foot, or upon Oxen; the Wife carrying the Child, and the man the Kitchin Implements.

The Idol which they carry in proceſſion, by way of viſit, and out of reſpect to the great Ram-Ram, lies at length in a rich Palleky, cover'd with Tiſſue of Gold and Silver, fring'd as richly; the Mattreſs and Bolſter being of the ſame ſtuff under the head, feet, and elbows. The Bramins alſo diſtribute Flabels to the moſt conſiderable of the Company, the handles whereof being eight foot long, are plated with Gold and Silver. The Flabel being three foot in Diameter, of the ſame Tiſſue as the Pallekies; round about, it is adorn'd with Peacocks Feathers to gather more wind, and ſometimes with Bells to make a kind of tingling. There are ſix of theſe Flabels uſually employ'd to keep off the Flies from their God; the better ſort taking it by turns, that the honour of waiting upon their God may be more equally ſhar'd.

CHAP. XIV.

Of divers Cuſtoms of the Indian Idolaters.

THE Bramins are well skill'd in Aſtrology; and will exactly foretell to the people the Eclipſes of the Sun and Moon. The ſecond of July 1666, about one a Clock in the afternoon, at Patna in Bengala, there was an Eclipſe of the Sun; at which time it was a prodigious thing to ſee the multitudes of people, men, women, and children, that ran to the River Ganges, to waſh themſelves. But it behoves them to begin to waſh three days before the Eclipſe; all which time they labour day and night in providing all ſorts of Rice Milk, Meats, and Sweatmeats, to throw to the Fiſh and Crocodiles, as ſoon as the Bramins give the word. Whatever Eclipſe it be whether of the Sun or Moon, the Idolaters as ſoon as it appears, break all their Earthen Pots and Diſhes in the houſe, which makes a hideous noiſe altogether.

Every Bramin has his Magick Book, wherein are abundance of Circles and Semicircles, Squares, Triangles, and ſeveral ſorts of Cifers. They alſo make ſeveral Figures upon the ground, and when they find that the good hour is come, they cry aloud to the people to feed the fiſh. Then there enſues a moſt horrible Din of Drums, Bells, and great noiſe of ſounding Mettal, which they twang one againſt another. And as ſoon as the victuals are thrown into the River, the people are to go in and waſh and rub themſelves till the Eclipſe be over. So that in regard the waters were at that time very high, for more than three Leagues above and below the City, and all the breadth of the River, there was nothing to be ſeen but the heads of the people. As for the Bramins, they ſtay aſhore to receive the richer ſort, and thoſe that give moſt; to dry their bodies and to give them dry Linnen to their bellies. Afterwards they cauſe them to ſit down in a Chair, where the moſt liberal of the Idolaters have provided Rice, Pulſe, Milk, Butter, Sugar, Meal, and Wood. Before the Chair the Bramin makes a place very clean about five foot ſquare; then with Cow-dung ſteep'd in a kind of yellow Baſon, he rubs all the place, for fear any Emet ſhould come there to be burnt. For indeed they would never make uſe of Wood if they could help it; and when they do, they are very careful that there be no Worms or Inſects in it. In the place which they have thus cleans'd, they draw ſeveral Figures, as Triangles, Ovals, Half-Ovals, &c. Then upon every Figure they lay a little Cows-dung, with two or three ſmall ſticks of Wood, upon every one of which they lay a ſeveral ſort of Grain; after that pouring Butter, and ſetting fire to each; by the ſmoak which riſes, they judg of the plenty of every ſort of Grain that year.

When the Moon is at the full in March, they keep a ſolemn Feſtival for their Idol, which is in form of a Serpent. This Feſtival continues nine dayes; and when it comes, they do nothing but make Holiday all the while, as well men as beaſts, which they beautifie by making Circles about their eyes with Vermillion, with which they alſo colour the Horns; and if they have a particular kindneſs for the beaſt, they hang them with Leaves of Guilded Tin. Every morning they worſhip the Idol, and the Maids dance about it for an hour, to the noiſe of Fluits and Drums; after which they eat and drink and are merry till the evening, and then they worſhip and dance about their Idol again.

Though the Idolaters never drink any ſtrong drink at other times, yet at this Feſtival they drink Palm-wine, and ſtrong water, which is made of the ſame in remote Villages; for elſe their Mahometan Governour would not ſuffer them to make Wine, nor to ſell any which might be brought out of Perſia.

Their ſtrong Water is thus made: They take a great Earthen pot, well glaz'd within, which they call Martavane; into one of theſe Veſſels, that holds three hundred Paris pints, of Palma-wine, they put in fifty or ſixty pound of brown Sugar unrefin'd, which looks like yellow Wax; with about twenty pound of a great thick bark of a Thorn, not much unlike that which our Leather-dreſſers uſe. This bark ſets the Palma-wine a bubling and working juſt like our new wines, for five or ſix days together, till it becomes of a ſweet Liquor, as ſowre as our Crabs. Then they diſtill it, and according to the taſte they would give, they either put into a Cauldron full, a little Bag of Mace, or three or four handfuls of Anniſe-ſeed. They can make it alſo as ſtrong as they pleaſe.

Being at Agra in the year 1642, an Idolater, whoſe name was Woldas, Broaker to the Hollanders, about ſeventy years of age, receiving news that the chief Bramin at the Pagod of Matura was dead, went to the Hollander and deſir'd him to even all accounts; for ſaid he, the chief Prieſt being dead, it behoves me to dye, that I may ſerve him in the other world. Thereupon having ended his accounts, he took his Coach, with ſome of his Kindred; but having neither eaten nor drank from the time he receiv'd the news, he dy'd by the way; having famiſh'd himſelf for grief.

The Indian Idolaters have a cuſtom, that when any perſon gives a thing, they ſnap their fingers, crying out, Gi-Narami, remember Narami, who was a great Saint among them, for fear the Evil Spirit, ſhould enter into the body of him that gives.

Being at Surat in the year 1653, a Raſpoute being demanded Cuſtom for three or four pieces of Calicut, boldly ask'd the Governour, whether a Souldier that had ſerv'd the King all his life-time, ought to pay Cuſtom for two or three pitiful pieces of Calicut, not worth four or five Roupies; telling him it was only to cloath his Wife and Children. The Governour netl'd at his fawcineſs, call'd him Bethico, or Son of a Whore; adding, that if he were Prince he would make him pay his Cuſtoms. Whereupon the Souldier incens'd at the affront, making as if he felt for Money to pay his dues, bearing up to the Governor, ſtab'd him in the belly, ſo that he dy'd immediately. But the Souldier was preſently cut in pieces by the Governors Servants.

Though

Though the Idolaters are in utter darkneſs as to the knowledg of the true God, however the Law of Nature teaches them Morality in many things. When they are married they are ſeldom falſe to their Wives. Adultery is very rare among them. And as for Sodomy I never heard it mention'd. They marry their Children between ſeven and eight years old, for fear they ſhould fall into that vice; the Ceremonies whereof are theſe: The day before the Nuptials, the Bridegroom, accompany'd by all his Kindred, goes to the Houſe where the Bride lives, with a great pair of Bracelets, two fingers thick, hollow within, and in two pieces, with a hinge in the middle to open them. According to the quality of the Bride thoſe Bracelets are of more or leſs value, ſometimes of Gold, ſometimes of Silver, Tin, or Latten, the pooreſt ſort of all making uſe of Lead. The next day there is a great Feaſt at the Bridegrooms Houſe, whither all the Kindred on both ſides are invited, and about three a Clock in the afternoon the Bride is brought thither. Then the chief of the Bramins that are there, of which there are always ſeveral laying the head of the Bride to the Bridegrooms, pronounces ſeveral words, ſprinkling their heads and bodies all the while with water. Then they bring him upon Plates or Fig-leaves ſeveral ſorts of Meats, Calicuts, and Stuffs; and then the Bramin asks the Bridegroom, whether ſo long as God ſhall make him able, he will let his Wife ſhare with him, and whether he will endeavour to maintain her by his labour. If he ſays yes, they all ſet themſelves down to the Feaſt prepar'd for them, where every one eats by himſelf. If the Bride be rich, and be acquainted among the Nobility, their Weddings are very pompous and expenſive. The Bridegroom is mounted upon an Elephant, and the Bride rides in a Chariot; the whole Company carrying Torches in their hands. They alſo borrow of the Governour and the Nobility of the place, as many Elephants and prancing Horſes as they can get. And they walk ſome part of the night with Fire-works, which they throw about the Streets and Piazza's. But the greateſt expence to thoſe that live three or four hundred Leagues from it, is to get the water of Ganges; for in regard they account that water ſacred, and drink it out of devotion, it muſt be brought them by the Bramins, and in Earthen Veſſels, glaz'd within ſide, which the chief Bramin of Ingrenate fills himſelf with the pureſt Water of the River, and then ſeals up with his own Seal. They never drink this water till the end of the Feaſt, and then they give their gueſts three or more glaſſes apiece. This water coming ſo far, and the chief Bramin demanding a Tribute for every pot, which contains a Pail-full, ſometimes a wedding comes to two or three thouſand Roupies.

The eighth of April, being in a City of Bengala call'd Malde, the Idolaters made a great Feaſt, according to the particular Cuſtom of that place; they all go out of the City, and faſten Iron hooks to the boughs of ſeveral Trees, then come a great number of poor people and hang themſelves, ſome by the ſides, ſome by the brawn of their backs, upon thoſe hooks, till the weight of their body tearing away the fleſh, they fall of themſelves. 'Tis a wonderful thing to ſee that not ſo much as one drop of blood ſhould iſſue, from the wounded fleſh, nor that any of the fleſh ſhould be left upon the hook; beſides, that in two days they are perfectly cur'd by ſuch Plaiſters as their Bramins give them. There are others who at that Feaſt will lye upon a bed of nails, with the points upward, the nails entring a good way into the fleſh; however while theſe people are under this Pennance, their Friends come and preſent them with Money and Linnen. When they have undergone their Penance, they take the preſents and diſtribute them to the poor, without making any farther advantage of them. I ask'd one, why they made that Feaſt, and ſuffer'd thoſe ſevere Penances; who anſwer'd me, that it was in remembrance of the firſt man, whom they call'd Adam, as we do.

In the year 1666, I ſaw another ſort of Penance, as I croſs'd the Ganges; upon the Bank of which River they had prepar'd a clean place, where one of the poor Idolaters was condemn'd to reſt upon the ground, touching it only with his hands and feet; which he was to do ſeveral times a day, and every time to kiſs the earth three times before he roſe up again. He was to riſe up upon his left foot, never touching the ground with his right all the while. And every day for a month together before he either eat or drank he was oblig'd to this posture for fifty times together, and consequently to kiss the ground a hundred and fifty times. He told me that the Bramins had enjoin'd him that Penance because he had suffer'd a Cow to dye in his House, and had not lead her to the water to be wash'd before she dy'd.

When an Idolater has lost any piece of Gold or Silver, or summ of Money either by negligence, or as being stoln from him, he is oblig'd to carry as much as he lost to the great Bramin; for if he does not, and that the other should come to know of it, he is ignominiously cast out of his Tribe, to make him more careful another time.

On the other side the Ganges Northward, toward the Mountains of Naugrocot, there are two or three Raja's, who neither believe God nor the Devil. Their Bramins have a book containing their Belief, full of ridiculous absurdities, whereof the Author whose name is Baudou gives no reason. These Raja's are the Great Moguls Vassals, and pay him Tribute.

To conclude, the Malavares carefully preserve the nails of their left hands and let their hair grow like women's. These nails, which are half a finger long, serve them instead of Combs; and it is with their left hand that they do all their drudgery, never touching their faces, nor what they eat, but with their right hands.

CHAP. XV.

Of the Kingdom of Boutan whence comes the Musk, the good Rhubarb, and some Furs.

THE Kingdom of Boutan is of a large extent; but I could never yet come to a perfect knowledg thereof. I have set down all that I could learn at Patna, whither the Merchants of Boutan come to sell their Musk. The most excellent Rhubarb comes also from the Kingdom of Boutan. From hence is brought also that Seed which is good against the worms, therefore call'd Wormseed; and good store of Furs. As for the Rhubarb, the Merchants run a great hazard which way soever they bring it; for if they take the Northern Road, toward Caboul, the wet spoils it; if the Southern Road, in regard the journey is long, if the Rains happen to fall, there is as much danger that way, so that there is no Commodity requires more care than that.

As for the Musk, during the heats the Merchant loses by it, because it dries and loses its weight. Now in regard this Commodity pays twenty-five in the hundred Custom at Gorrochepour, the last Town belonging to the Great Mogul, next to the Kingdom of Boutan, when the Indian Merchants come to that City, they go to the officer at the Custom-House, and tell him that they are going to Boutan, to buy Musk or Rhubarb, and how much they intend to lay out; all which the Officer registers, with the name of the Merchant. Then the Merchants instead of twenty-five, agree with him for seven or eight in the hundred, and take a Certificate from the Officer or Cadi, that he may not demand any more at their return. If the Officer refuses a handsom composition, then they go another way, over Desarts and Mountains cover'd with Snow, tedious and troublesome, till they come to Caboul, where the Caravans part, some for great Tartary, others for Belch. Here it is that the Merchants coming from Boutan barter their Commodities for Horses, Mules, and Camels; for there is little Money in that Country. Then those Tartars transport their Commodities into Persia, as far as Ardevile and Tauris; which is the reason that some Europeans have thought that Rhubarb and Wormseed came out of Tartary. True it is, that some Rhubarb comes from thence; but not so good as that of Boutan, being sooner corrupted; for Rhubarb will eat out its own heart. The Tartars carry back out of Persia Silks of Small value, which are made in Tauris

and Ardevile, and ſome Engliſh Cloth brought by the Armenians from Conſtantinople and Smyrna. Some of the Merchants that come from Caboul and Boutan go to Candahar, and thence to Iſpahan; whither they carry Coral in Beads, yellow Amber, and Lapis Lazuli Beads, if they can meet with it. The other Merchants that come from the Coaſt of Multan, Lahor, and Agra, bring only Linnons, Indigo, and ſtore of Cornelian and Chriſtal Beads. Thoſe that return through Gorrochepour, and are agreed with the Officer of the Cuſtom-Houſe, carry from Patna and Daca, Coral, yellow Amber, Bracelets of Tortoiſe-ſhells, and other Shells, with great ſtore of round and ſquare thick pieces of Tortois. When I was at Patna, four Armenians who had been before at Boutan, return'd from Dantzick, where they had made certain Figures of yellow Amber, repreſenting the ſhapes of ſeveral Creatures and Monſters, which they were carrying to the King of Boutan, who is an Idolater, as are all his people, to ſet up in his Pagods. For the Armenians for Money will ſell any thing of Idolatry; and they told me beſides, that if they could but have made the Idol which the King of Boutan beſpoke of them, they ſhould have done their buſineſs. Which was to have been a Monſters head, with ſix horns, four ears, four arms, and ſix fingers upon every hand, all of yellow Amber; but they could not find pieces big enough.

The Caravan is three months travelling from Patna, to the Kingdom of Boutan. It ſets out from Patna about the end of December, and eight days after arrives at Gorrochepour.

From Gorrochepour to the foot of the high Mountains, is eight or nine days journey more, during which the Caravan ſuffers very much hardſhip, for the Country is nothing but wild Forreſts, full of wild Elephants. So that the Merchants, inſtead of taking their reſts, are forc'd to watch, keep fires, and ſhoot off their Muskets all the night long. For the Elephant making no noiſe in treading, would elſe be upon the Caravan before they were aware; not that he comes to do any miſchief to the men, but to get what victuals he can find. You may travel from Patna to the foot of thoſe Mountains in Palleki's. But generally they ride upon Oxen, Camels, or Horſes, bred in the Countrey. Thoſe Horſes are generally ſo little, that when a man is upon the back of them, his feet touch the Ground; but they will travel twenty Leagues an end, and never bait, or elſe with a very ſmall one. Some of thoſe Horſes coſt two hundred Crowns; for indeed when you come to croſs, the Mountains, you can make uſe of no other ſort of carriage but them in regard of the narrowneſs and ruggedneſs of the Paſſes; which many times put the Horſes very much to it, as ſtrong and as low as they are.

Five or ſix Leagues beyond Gorrochepour you enter into the Territories of the Raja of Nupal, which extend to the Frontiers of the Kindom of Boutan. This Raja is a Tributary to the great Mogul, and pays him every year an Elephant for his Homage. He reſides in the City of Nupal, from whence he derives his Title; but there is little either Trade or Money in his Country, which is all Woods and Forreſts.

The Caravan being arriv'd at the foot of theſe Mountains which are call'd at this day by the name of Naugrocot, abundance of people come from all parts of the Mountain, the greateſt part whereof are women and maids, who agree with the Merchants to carry them, their Goods and proviſions croſs the Mountains, which is eight days journey more.

The women carry upon each ſhoulder a woollen Roll, to which is faſten'd a large Cuſhion, that hangs down upon their backs, upon which the man ſits. There are three women to carry one man, relieving one another by turns. And for their luggage and proviſions, they lade them upon Goats, that will carry a hundred and fifty pound weight apiece. Thoſe that will ride, are in many places forc'd to have their Horſes hoiſted up with Cords. They never feed them but morning and evening mixing a pound of meal, half a pound of brown Sugar, and half a pound of Butter together, with water ſufficient. In the evening they muſt be contented only with a few flat Peaſon, bruis'd, and ſteep'd half an hour in water. The women that carry the men, get for their ten days travel two Roupies apiece, and as much for every burthen which the Goats carry, and for every Horſe which they lead.

After

After you have paſs'd the Mountains, you may travel to Boutan upon Oxen, Camels, Horſes, or Palleki's, which you pleaſe. The Country, is good, abounding in Rice, Corn, Pulſe, and ſtore of Wine. All the people both men and women are clad in the Summer with a large piece of Fuſtian, or Hempen-Cloath; in the Winter with a thick Cloath, almoſt like Felt. Both men and women wear upon their heads a kinde of Bonnet, much like our drinking Cans, which they adorn with Boars teeth, and with round and ſquare pieces of Tortois-Shells. The richer ſort intermix Coral and Amber Beads, of which their women make them Neck-Laces. The men as well as the woman wear Bracelets upon their left hands only, from the wriſt to the elbow. The woman wear them ſtrait, the men loſe. About their necks they wear a ſilken twiſt, at the end whereof hangs a Bead of yellow Amber or Coral, or a Boars Tooth, which dangles upon their Breaſts. On their left ſides, their Girdles are button'd with Beads of the ſame. Though they be Idolaters, yet they feed upon all ſort of food, except the fleſh of Cows, which they adore as the common Nurſes of all men; they are beſides great lovers of ſtrong water. They obſerve alſo ſome Ceremonies of the Chineſes, burning Amber at the end of their Feaſts, though they do not worſhip fire like the Chineſes. For which reaſon the Merchants of Boutan will give at Patna for a Serre of large pieces of yellow Amber, as big as a Nut, bright and clean, thirty-five and forty Roupies. The Serre of yellow Amber, Muſk, Coral, Ambergreaſe, Rhubarb, and other Drugs, containing nine Ounces to the pound. Saltpeter, Sugar, Rice, Corn, and other Commodities, are alſo ſold by the Serre in Bengala; but the Serre contains ſeventy-two of our Pounds, at ſixteen Ounces to the Pound; and forty Serres make a Mein, or 2824 Pounds of Paris.

To return to yellow Amber a piece of nine ounces is worth in Boutan from 250 to 300 Roupies, according to its colour and beauty. Coral rough, or wrought into Beads, yields profit enough; but they had rather have it rough, to ſhape it as they pleaſe themſelves.

The Women and Maids are generally the Artiſts among them, as to thoſe toys. They alſo make Beads of Cryſtal and Agat. As for the Men, they make Bracelets of Tortoiſe-ſhell, and Sea-ſhells, and poliſh thoſe little pieces of Shells which the Northern people wear in their ears, and in their hair. In Patna and Daca there are above two thouſand perſons that thus employ themſelves, furniſhing the Kingdoms of Boutan, Aſem, Siam, and other Northern and Eaſtern parts of the Mogul's Dominions.

As for Wormſeed, the Herb grows in the Fields, and muſt dye before the Seed can be gather'd; but the miſchief is, that before the Seed is ripe, the wind ſcatters the greateſt part, which makes it ſo ſcearce. When they gather the Seed, they take two little Hampers, and as they go along the Fields, they move their Hampers from the right to the left, and from the left to the right, as if they were mowing the Herb, bowing it at the top, and ſo all the Seed falls into the Hampers.

Rhubarb is a Root which they cut in pieces, and ſtringing them by ten or twelve together, hang them up a drying.

Had the Natives of Boutan as much art in killing the Martin as the Muſcovite, they might vend great ſtore of thoſe rich Furs, conſidering what a number of thoſe Beaſts there are in that Countrey. No ſooner does that creature peep out of his hole, but the Muſcovites, who lye upon the watch, have 'em preſently, either in the noſe or in the eyes; for ſhould they hit 'em in the body, the blood would quite ſpoyl the skin.

The King of Boutan has conſtantly ſeven or eight thouſand Men for his Guard. Their Weapons are for the moſt part Bows and Arrows. Some of them carry Battel-axes, and Bucklers. 'Tis a long time ago ſince they had the firſt uſe of Muskets and Cannons: their Gun-Powder being long, but of an extraordinary force. They aſſur'd me that ſome of their Cannons had Letters and Figures upon them, that were above five hunder'd years old. They dare not ſtir out of the Kingdom without the Governor's particular leave; nor dare they carry a Musket along with them, unleſs their next Kindred will undertake for them that they ſhall bring it back. Otherwiſe I had brought one along with me; for by the characters racters upon the Barrel, it appear'd to have been made above 180 years, It was very thick, the mouth of the bore being like a Tulip, poliſh'd within as bright as a Looking-glaſs. Two thirds of the Barrel were garniſh'd with emboſs'd Wires, with certain Flowers of Gold and Silver inlaid between; and it carri'd a Bullet that weigh'd an ounce. But I could not prevail with the Merchant to ſell it me nor to give me any of his powder.

There are always fifty Elephants kept about the King's Houſe, and twenty-five Camels, with each a Pice of Artillery mounted upon his back, that carries half a pound Ball. Behind the Gun ſits a Cannoneer that manages and levels the Guns as he pleaſes.

There is no King in the World more fear'd and more reſpected by his Subjects then the King of Boutan; being in a manner ador'd by them. When he ſits to do Juſtice, or give Audience, all that appear in his preſence hold their hands cloſe together above their forheads: and at a diſtance from the Throne proſtrate themſelves upon the ground, not daring to lift up their heads. In this humble poſture they make their Petitions to the King; and when they retire, they go backwards till they are quite out of his ſight. One thing they told me for truth, that when the King has done the deeds of nature, they dilligently preſerve the ordure, dry it and powder it, like ſneezing-powder: and then putting it into Boxes, they go every Market-day, and preſent it to the chief Merchants, and rich Farmers, who recompence them for their kindneſs: that thoſe people alſo carry it home, as a great rarity, and when they feaſt their Friends, ſtrew it upon their meat. Two Boutan Merchants ſhew'd me their Boxes, and the Powder that was in them.

The Natives of Boutan are ſtrong and well proportion'd; but their noſes and faces are ſomewhat flat. Their women are ſaid to be bigger and more vigorous than the men; but that they are much more troubled with ſwellings in the throat then the men, few eſcaping that diſeaſe. They know not what war is, having no enemy to fear but the Mogul. But from him they are fenc'd with high, ſteep, craggy, and ſhowey Mountains. Northward there are nothing but vaſt Forreſts and Snow. Eaſt and Weſt nothing but bitter water. And as for the Raja's near them, they are Princes of little force.

There is certainly ſome Silver Mine in the Kingdom of Boutan, for the King coins much Silver, in pieces that are of the value of a Roupy. The pieces are alredy deſcrib'd. However the Boutan Merchants could not tell me where the Mine lay. And as for their Gold, that little they have is brought them from the Eaſt, by the Merchants of thoſe Countries.

In the year 1659, the Duke of Muſcovy's Embaſſadours paſs'd through this Country to the King of China. They were three of the greateſt Noblemen in Muſcovy, and were at firſt very well receiv'd; but when they were brought to kiſs the Kings hands, the cuſtom being to proſtrate themſelves three times to the ground, they refus'd to do it, ſaying that they would complement the King after their manner, and as they approach'd their own Emperor, who was as great and as potent as the Emperor of China. Thereupon, and for that they continu'd in their reſolution, they were diſmiſs'd with their preſents, not being admitted to ſee the King. But had thoſe Ambaſſadors conform'd to the cuſtom of China, without doubt we might have had a beaten rode through Muſcovy and the North part of Great Tartary, and much more Commerce and knowledge of the Country than now we have.

This mentioning the Muſcovites, puts me in mind of a ſtory that ſeveral Muſcovy Merchants averr'd to be true, upon the rode between Tauris and Iſpahan, where I overtook them, of a woman of four ſcore and two years of age, who at thoſe years was brought to bed in one of the Cities of Muſcovy of a Male Child, which was carry'd to the Duke, and by him brought up at the Court.

CHAP. XVI.

Of the Kingdom of Tipra.

MOst people have been of opinion till now, that the Kingdom of Pegu, lies upon the Frontiers of China; and I thought ſo my ſelf, till the Merchants of Tipra undeceiv'd me. I met with three, one at Daca, and two others at Patna. They were men of very few words; whether it were their own particular diſpoſition, or the General habit of the Country. They caſt up their accounts with ſmall Stones likes Agats, as big as a mans nail, upon every one of which was a Cypher. They had every one their weights, like a Stelleer; though the Beam were not of Iron, but of a certain Wood as hard as Brazile; nor was the Ring that holds the weight, and is put thorough the Beam to mark the weight, of Iron, but a ſtrong Silk Rope. And thus they weigh'd from a Dram to ten of our Pounds. If all the Natives of the Kingdom of Tipra, were like the two Merchants which I met at Patna, I dare affirm them to be notable topers; for they never refus'd whatever ſtrong Liquor I gave them, and never left till all was out; and when I told them by my Interpreter that all my Wine was gone, they clapt their hands upon their ſtomachs and ſigh'd. Theſe Merchants travell'd all three through the Kingdom of Arakan, which lies to the South and Weſt of Tipra, having ſome part of Pegu upon the Winter weſt. They told me alſo, that it was about fifteen days journey to croſs through their Country; from whence there is no certain conjecture of the extent to be made, by reaſon of the inequality of the ſtages. They ride upon Oxen and Horſes, which are low, but very hardy. As for the King and the Nobility, they ride in their Pallekies, or upon their Elephants of War. They are no leſs ſubject to Wens under their throats, than thoſe of Boutan; inſomuch that the women have thoſe Wens hanging down to their Nipples; which proceeds from the badneſs of the waters.

There is nothing in Tipra which is fit for ſtrangers. There is a Mine of Gold, but the Gold is very courſe. And there is a ſort of very courſe Silk, which is all the Revenue the King has. He exacts no Subſidies from his Subjects; but only that they, who are not of the prime Nobility, ſhould work ſix days in a year in his Mine, or in his Silk-works. He ſends his Gold and his Silk into China, for which they bring him back Silver, which he coins into pieces to the value of ten Sous. He alſo makes thin pieces of Gold, like to the Aſpers of Turky; of which he has two ſorts, four of the one ſort making a Crown, and twelve of the other.

CHAP. XVII.

Of the Kingdom of Aſem.

IT was never known what the Kingdom of Aſem was, till Mirgimola had ſetl'd Aureng-zeb in the Empire. For he conſidering that he ſhould be no longer valu'd at Court, after the War was at an end, being then General of Aureng-zeb's Army and powerful in the Kingdom where he had great ſtore of Creatures, to preſerve the Authority he had, reſolv'd to undertake the Conqueſt of the Kingdom of Aſem; where he knew he ſhould find little or no reſiſtance, that Kingdom having been at peace above 500 years before. 'Tis thought theſe were the people that formerly invented Guns and Powder; which ſpread it ſelf from Aſem to Pegu, and from Pegu to China, from whence the invention has been attributed to the Chineſes. However certain it is, that Mirgimola brought from thence ſeveral pieces of Canon, which were all Iron Guns, and ſtore of excellent Powder, both made in that Country. The Powder is round and ſmall, like ours, and very ſtrong.

Mirgimola embark'd his Army in one of the mouths of Ganges, and ſailing up one of the Rivers that comes from the Lake Chiamay, to the twenty-ninth or thirtieth Degree, he landed his Army, and came into a Country abounding in all humane neceſſaries, ſtill finding the leſs reſiſtance becauſe the people were ſurpriz'd. Being a Mahumetan, he ſpar'd not the very Pagods, but burn'd and ſack'd all where-ever he came to the thirty-fifth Degree. There he underſtood that the King of Aſem was in the field with a more powerfull Army than he expected, and that he had ſeveral pieces of Canon, and great ſtore of fire-works withall. Thereupon Mirgimola thought it not convenient to march any farther; though the chief reaſon of his return was the drawing on of Winter; which the Indians are ſo ſenſible of, that it is impoſſible to make them ſtir beyond the thirti'th or thirty-fifth Degree, eſpecially to hazard their lives.

Mirgimola therefore turns to the South-weſt, and beſieges a City call'd Azoo, which he took in a ſmall time, and found good plunder therein. In this City of Azoo, are the Tombs of the Kings of Aſem, and of all the Royal Family. For though they are Idolaters, they never burn their dead bodies, but bury them. They believe that the dead go into another world, where they that have liv'd well in this, have plenty of all things; but that they who have been ill livers, ſuffer the want of all things, being in a more eſpecial manner afflicted with hunger and drowth; and that therefore it is good, to bury ſomething with them to ſerve them in their neceſſities. This was the reaſon that Mirgimola found ſo much wealth in the City of Azoo. For many ages, together, ſeveral King had built them Chappels in the great Pagod to be buried in, and in their life times had ſtor'd up in the Vaults of their particular Chappels, great ſums of Gold and Silver, and other moveables of value. Beſides, that when they bury the deceas'd King, they bury with him likewiſe whatever he eſteem'd moſt precious in his life-time, whether it were an Idol of Gold or Silver, or whatever elſe, that being needful in this, might be neceſſary for him in the world to come. But that which ſavours moſt of Barbariſm is, that when he dies, all his beſt beloved Wives, and the principal Officers of his Houſe poyſon themſelves, to be buri'd with him, and to wait upon him in the other world. Beſides this, they bury one Elephant, twelve Camels, ſix Horſes, and a good number of Hounds, believing that all thoſe Creatures riſe again to ſerve their King.

The Kingdom of Aſem is one of the beſt Countries of all Aſia, for it produces all things neceſſary for humane ſubſiſtence, without any need of foreign ſupply. There are in it Mines of Gold, Silver, Steel, Lead, Iron, and great ſtore of Silk, but coarſe. There is a ſort of Silk that is found under the Trees, which is ſpun by a Creature like to our Silk-worms, but rounder, and which lives all the year long under the trees. The Silks which are made of this Silk gliſt'n very much, but they fret preſently. The Country produces alſo great ſtore of Gum-Lake; of which there is two ſorts, one grows under the trees of a red colour, wherewith they paint their Linnen, and Stuffs; and when they have drawn out the red juice, the remaining ſubſtance ſerves to varniſh Cabinets, and to make Wax; being the beſt Lake in Aſia, for thoſe uſes. As for their Gold they never ſuffer it to be tranſported out of the Kingdom, nor do they make any Money of it; but they preſerve it all in Ingots, which paſs in trade among the Inhabitants; but as for the Silver, the King coins it into Money, as is already deſcrib'd.

Though the Country be very plentiful of all things, yet there is no fleſh which they eſteem ſo much as Dogs fleſh; which is the greateſt delicacy at all Feaſts; and is ſold every month in every City of the Kingdom upon their Market-days. There are alſo great ſtore of Vines, and very good Grapes, but they never make any Wine; only they dry the Grapes to make Aqua Vitæ. As for ſalt they have none but what is artificial, which they make two wayes. Firſt they raiſe great heaps of that green Stuff that Swims at the tops of ſtanding waters, which the Ducks and Frogs eat, This they dry and burn; and the aſhes thereof being boil'd in a Cloth in water, become very good Salt. The other way moſt in uſe is to take the leaves of Adams Fig-tree, which they dry and burn; the aſhes whereof make a Salt ſo tart, that it is impoſſible to eat until the tartneſs be tak'n away; which they do by putting the aſhes in water, where they ſtir them ten or twelve hours together; then they ſtrain the ſubſtance through a Linnen Cloth and boil it; as the water boils away, the bottom thick'ns; and when the water is all boil'd away they find at the bottom very good and white Salt.

Of the Aſhes of theſe Fig-leaves they make a Lye, wherewith they waſh their Silk, which makes it as white as Snow; but they have not enough to whiten half the Silk that grows in the Country.

Kemmeroof is the name of the City, where the King of Aſem keeps his Court; twenty-five or thirty days journey from that which was formerly the Capital City, and bore the ſame name. The King requires no Subſidies of his people; but all the Mines in his Kingdom are his own; where for the eaſe of his Subjects, he has none but ſlaves that work; ſo that all the Natives of Aſem live at their eaſe, and every one has his houſe by himſelf, and in the middle of his ground a fountain encompaſs'd with trees and moſt commonly every one an Elephant to carry their Wives; for they have four Wives, and when they marry, they ſay to one, I take the to ſerve me in ſuch a thing; to the other, I appoint the to do ſuch buſineſs; ſo that every one of the wives knows what ſhe has to do in the Houſe. The men and women are generally well complexion'd; only thoſe that live more Southerly are more ſwarthy, and not ſo ſubject to Wens in their throats; neither are they ſo well featur'd, beſides that the women are ſomewhat flat Nos'd. In the Southern parts the people go ſtark naked, only covering their private parts, with a Bonnet like a blew Cap upon their heads, hung about with Swines teeth. They pierce holes in their ears, that you may thruſt your Thumb in where they hang pieces of Gold and Silver. Bracelets alſo of Tortoiſe-ſhells, and Sea-ſhells as long as an egg, which they ſaw into Circles, are in great eſteem among the meaner ſort; as Bracelets of Coral and yellow Amber among thoſe that are rich. When they bury a man, all his Friends and Relations muſt come to the burial; and when they lay the body in the ground, they all take off their Bracelets from their Arms and Legs, and bury them with the Corps.

CHAP. XVIII.

Of the Kingdom of Siam.

THE greateſt part of the Kingdom of Siam lies between the Golf of Siam, and the Golf of Bengala; bordering upon Pegu toward the North, and the Peninſula of Malacca toward the South. The ſhorteſt and neareſt way for the Europeans to go to this Kingdom, is to go to Iſpahan, from Iſpahan, to Ormus, from Ormus to Surat, from Surat to Golconda, from Golconda to Maſlipatan, there to embark for Denouſerin, which is one of the Ports belonging to the Kingdom of Siam. From Denouſerin to the Capital City, which is alſo call'd Siam, is thirty-five days journey, part by Water, part by Land, by Waggon, or upon Elephants. The way, whether by Land or Water, is very troubleſome; for by Land you muſt be always upon your guard for fear of Tigers and Lions; by Water, by reaſon of the many falls of the River, they are forc'd to hoiſe up their Boats with Engines.

All the Country of Siam, is very plentiful in Rice and Fruits; the chiefeſt whereof are Mangos, Durions, and Manguſtans. The Foreſts are full of Harts, Elephants, Tigers, Rhinocero's, and Apes; where there grow alſo large Bambou's in great abundance. Under the knots of theſe Bambou's are Emets neſts as big as a mans head, where every Emet has his apartment by himſelf; but there is but one hole to enter into the neſt. They make their neſts in theſe Canes to preſerve themſelves from the rains which continue four or five months together.

In the night time the Serpents are very buſie. There are ſome two foot long, with two heads; but one of them has no motion.

There is alſo another creature in Siam, like our Salamander, with a forked tail, and very venomous.

The Rivers in this Kingdom are very large; and that which runs by Siam is equally as large as the reſt. The water is very wholeſome; but it is very full of Crocodiles of a monſtrous bigneſs, that devour men if they be not very careful of themſelves. Theſe Rivers overflow their banks while the Sun is in the Southern Tropick; which makes the fields to be very fertil as far as they flow; and it is obſerv'd, that the Rice grows higher or lower, as the floods do more or leſs increaſe.

Siam, the Capital City of the Kingdom, where the King keeps his Court, is wall'd about, being about three of our Leagues in circuit; it is ſituated in an Iſland, the River running quite round it, and might be eaſily brought into every ſtreet in the Town, if the King would but lay out as much Money upno that deſign, as he ſpends in Temples and Idols.

The Siamers have thirty-three Letters in their Alphabet. But they write from the left to the right, as we do, contrary to the cuſtom of Japon, China, Cochinchina, and Tunquin, who write from the right to the left.

All the Natives of this Kingdom are ſlaves, either to the King or the great Lords. The women as well as the men cut their hair; neither are they very rich in their habits. Among their Complements, the chiefeſt is, never to go before a perſon that they reſpect, unleſs they firſt ask leave, which they do by holding up both their hands. Thoſe that are rich have ſeveral Wives.

The Money of the Country is already deſcrib'd.

The King of Siam is one of the richeſt Monarchs in the Eaſt, and ſtiles himſelf King of Heaven and Earth; though he be Tributary to the King of China. He ſeldom ſhews himſelf to his Subjects; and never gives Audience, but to the Principal Favourites of his Court. He truſts to his Miniſters of State, for the management of his affairs, who ſometimes make very bad uſe of their authority. He never ſhews himſelf in publick above twice a year; but then it is with an extraordinary magnificence. The firſt is, when he goes to a certain Pagod within the City, which is guilded round both within and without. There are three Idols between ſix and ſeven foot high, which are all of maſſie.

Gold;

Gold; which he believes he renders propitious to him, by the great ſtore of Alms that he diſtributes among the poor, and the preſents which he makes to the Prieſts. Then he goes attended by all his Court, and puts to open view the richeſt Ornaments he has. One part of his magnificence conſiſts in his train of two hundred Elephants; among which there is one that is white, which the King ſo highly eſteems, that he ſtiles himſelf King of the White Elephant.

The ſecond time the King appears in publick, is when he goes to another Pagod five or ſix Leagues above the Town, up the River. But no perſon muſt enter into this Pagod, unleſs it be the King and his Prieſts. As for the people, ſo ſoon as they ſee the Door op'n, they muſt preſently fall upon their Faces to the Earth. Then the King appears upon the River with two hundred Gallies of a prodigious length; four hundred Rowers belonging to every one of the Gallies; moſt of them being guilded and carv'd very richly. Now in regard this ſecond appearance of the King is in the month of November, when the waters begin to abate, the Prieſts make the people believe that none but the King can ſtop the courſe of the waters, by his Prayers and by his Offerings to this Pagod. and they are ſo vain as to think that the King cuts the waters with his Sabra, or Skain; thereby commanding it to retire back into the Sea.

The King alſo goes, but incognito, to a Pagod in an Iſland where the Hollanders have a Factory. There is at the entry thereof an Idol ſitting croſs-leg'd with one hand upon his knee, and the other arm akimbo. It is above ſixty foot high; and round about this Idol are about three hundred others, of ſeveral ſorts and ſizes. All theſe Idols are guilt. And indeed there are a prodigious number of Pagods in this Country; for every rich Siomer cauſes one to be built in memory of himſelf. Thoſe Pagods have Steeples and Bells, and the Walls within are painted and guilded; but the Windows are ſo narrow that they give but a very dim light. The two Pagods to which the King goes publickly, are adorn'd with ſeveral tall Pyramids, well guilded. And to that in the Hollanders Iſland there belongs a Cloyſter, which is a very neat Structure. In the middle of the Pagod is a fair Chappel, all guilded within ſide; where they find a Lamp, and three Wax Candles continually burning before the Altar, which is all over cover'd with Idols, ſome of Maſſie Gold, others of Copper guilt. In the Pagod in the midſt of the Town, and in one of thoſe to which the King goes once a year, there are above four thouſand Idols; and for that which is ſix Leagues from Siam, it is ſurrounded with Pyramids, whoſe beauty makes the induſtry of that Nation to be admir'd.

When the King appears, all the Doors and Windows of the Houſes muſt be ſhut, and all the people proſtrate themſelves upon the ground, not daring to lift up their eyes. And becauſe no perſon is to be in a higher place than the King, they that are within doors, are bound to keep their loweſt Rooms. When he cuts his hair, one of his Wives performs that office, for he will not ſuffer a Barber to come near him.

This Prince has a Paſſionate kindneſs for his Elephants; which he looks upon as his Favourites, and the Ornaments of his Kingdom. If there be any of them that fall ſick, the Lords of the Court are mighty careful to pleaſe their Sovereign; and if they happ'n to dye, they are buried with the ſame Funeral Pomp as the Nobles of the Kingdom; which are thus perform'd: They ſet up a kind of Mauſoleum, or Tomb of Reeds, cover'd with Paper; in the midſt whereof they lay as much ſweet wood as the body weighs, and after the Prieſts have numb'd certain Orſons, they ſet it a-fire, and burn it to aſhes; which the rich preſerve in Gold or Silver Urns, but the poor ſcatter in the wind. As for offenders, they never burn, but bury them.

'Tis thought that in this Kingdom there are above two hundred Prieſts, which they call Bonzas, which are highly reverenc'd as well at Court as among the people. The King himſelf has ſuch a value for ſome of them, as to humble himſelf before them. This extraordinary reſpect makes them ſo proud, that ſome of them have aſpir'd to the Throne. But when the King diſcovers any ſuch deſign, he puts them to death. And one of them had his head lately ſtruck off for his Ambition.

Theſe Bonzes wear yellow, with a little red Cloth about their Waſts; like a Girdle. Outwardly they are very modeſt, and are never ſeen to be angry. About four in the morning, upon the tolling of their Bells, they riſe to their prayers, which they repeat again toward evening. There are ſome days in the year when they retire from all converſe, with men. Some of them live by Alms; others have Houſes with good Revenues. While they wear the Habit of Bonzes, they muſt not marry; for if they do, they muſt lay their Habit aſide. They are generally very ignorant, not knowing what they believe. Yet they hold the tranſmigration of Souls into ſeveral Bodies. They are forbid to kill any Creature; yet they will make no ſcruple to eat what others kill, or that which dies of it ſelf. They ſay that the God of the Chriſtians and theirs were Brothers; but that theirs was the eldeſt. If you ask them where their God is, they ſay, he vaniſh'd away, and they know not where he is.

The chief ſtrength of the Kingdom is their Infantry, which is indifferent good; the Soldiers are us'd to hardſhip, going all quite naked, except their private parts; all the reſt of their body, looking as if it had been cupt, is carv'd into ſeveral ſhapes of beaſts and flowers. When they have cut their skins, and ſtanch'd the blood, they rub the cut-work with ſuch colours as they think moſt proper. So that afar off you would think they were clad in ſome kind of flower'd Satin or other; for the colours never rub out. Their Weapons are Bows and Arrows, Pike and Musket, and an Azagaya, or Staff between five and ſix foot long, with a long Iron Spike at the end, which they very dextrouſly dart at the Enemy.

In the year 1665, there was at Siam a Neapolitan Jeſuite who was call'd Father Thomas; he caus'd the Town and the Kings Palace to be fortifi'd with very good Bulwarks, according to Art; for which reaſon the King gave him leave to live in the City, where he has a Houſe and a little Church.

CHAP. XIX.

Of the Kingdom of Macaſſar; and the Embaſſadors which the Hollanders ſent into China.

THE Kingdom of Macaſſar, otherwiſe call'd the Iſle of Celebes, begins at the fifteenth Degree of Southern Latitude. The heats are exceſſive all the day; but the nights are temperate enough. And for the Soil, it is very fertile; but the people have not the art of building. The Capital City bears the name of the Kingdom, and is ſituated upon the Sea. The Port is free; for the Veſſels that bring great quantities of goods from the Adjacent Iſlands, pay no Cuſtoms. The Iſlanders have a cuſtom to poyſon their Arrows; and the moſt dangerous poyſon which they uſe, is the juice of certain Trees in the Iſland of Borneo; which they will temper ſo as to work ſwift or ſlow, as they pleaſe. They hold that the King has only the ſecret Receit to take away the force of it; who boaſts that he has the moſt effectual poyſon in the world, which there is no remedy can prevent.

One day an Engliſh man in heat of blood had kill'd one of the Kings of Macaſſars Subjects; and though the King had pardon'd him, yet both Engliſh, Hollanders, and Portugals fearing if the Engliſh man ſhould go unpuniſh'd, leſt the Iſlanders ſhould revenge themſelves upon ſome of them, beſought the King to put him to death; which with much ado being conſented to, the King unwilling to put him to a lingring death, and deſirous to ſhew the effect of his poyſon, reſolv'd to ſhoot the Criminal himſelf; whereupon he took a long Trunk, and ſhot him exactly into the great Toe of the right foot, the place particularly aim'd at. Two Chirurgeons, one an Engliſh man, and the other a Hollander, pro-provided on purpose, immediately cut off the member; but for all that, the poyson had dispers'd it self so speedily, that the English man dy'd at the same time. All the Kings and Princes of the East are very diligent in their enquiry after strong Poysons. And I remember that the chief of the Dutch Factory and I try'd several poyson'd Arrows, with which the King of Achen had presented him, by shooting at Squirrels, who fell down dead, as soon as ever they were touch'd.

The King of Macassar is a Mahometan, and will not suffer his Subjects to embrace Christianity. Yet in the year 1656, the Christians found a way to get leave to build a fair Church in Macassar. But the next year the King caus'd it to be pull'd down, as also that of the Dominican Friars, which the Portugals made use of. The Parish Church, which was under the Government of the secular Priests, stood still, till the Hollanders attack'd Macassar, and compell'd him to turn all the Portugals out of his Dominions. The ill conduct of that Prince was in part the occasion of that war: to which the Hollanders were mov'd, to revenge themselves upon the Portugal Jesuits, who had cross'd their Embassy to China. Besides, that they offer'd great affronts to the Hollanders at Macassar, especially when they trod under foot the Hat of one of the Dutch Envoys, who was sent to treat with the King in behalf of the Company. Thereupon the Hollanders resolv'd to unite their forces with the Bouquises, that were in rebellion against their Soveraign, and to revenge themselves on any rate.

Now as to the business of China, it happen'd thus: Toward the end of the year 1658, the General of Batavia and his Council, sent one of the chief of the Holland Company, with Presents to the King of China; who arriving at Court, labour'd to gain the friendship of the Mandarins, who are the Nobility of the Kingdom. But the Jesuits, who by reason of their long abode in the Country, understood the language, and were acquainted with the Lords of the Court, lest the Holland Company should get footing to the prejudice of the Portugals, represented several things to the Kings Council to the prejudice of the Hollanders; more especially charging them with breach of Faith in all the places where they came. Upon this the Holland Agent was dismiss'd, and departed out of China, without doing any feats. Afterwards coming to understand what a trick the Portugal Jesuits had put upon him, he made report thereof to the General and his Council at Batavia; which so incens'd them, that they resolv'd to be reveng'd. For by the Deputies accounts, the Embassy had cost them above fifty thousand Crowns; for which they consulted how to make the Portugals pay double. Understanding therefore the trade which the Jesuits drove in the Island of Macao, and to the Kingdom of Macassar, whither upon their own account they sent seven Vessels, laden with all sorts of Commodities, as well of India as China; they took their opportunity, and the seventh of June 1660, appear'd with a Fleet of thirty Sail before the Port of Macassar. The King thinking himself oblig'd to make defence against so Potent an Enemy, endeavour'd to sustain the brunt of the Hollander with the Portugal Ships in the Road; but the Hollander dividing their Fleet, part of them fought the Portugal, the other half batter'd the Royal Fortress so furiously, that they carry'd it in a short time. Which so terrifi'd the King that he commanded the Portugals not to fire any more for fear of farther provoking his Enemies. The Prince Patinsaloa, was slain in the fight, which was a great loss to the King of Macassar, who was become formidable to his neighbours by the good Conduct of that Minister. As for the Hollanders, they took, burnt, and sunk all the Portugal Vessels, and sufficiently re-imburs'd themselves for their China Expences.

The thirteenth of June the King of Macassar, whose name was Sumbaco, hung out a white Flag from another Tower, whence he beheld the fight environ'd by his Wives. During the truce, he sent one of the Grandees of his Court to the Dutch Admiral, to desire peace, which was granted, upon condition he should send an Embassador to Batavia, expel the Portugals out of the Island, and not permit his Subjects to have any more to do with them.

Thereupon the King of Macassar, sent eleven of the greatest Lords of his Court, with a train of seven hundred men; the Chief of the Embassy being the Prince of Patinſaloa. The firſt thing they did, was to pay two hundred Loaves of Gold to redeem the Royal Fortreſs again; and then ſubmitting to the Conditions which the Dutch Admiral had propos'd, the General of Batavia ſign'd the Articles, which are punctually obſerv'd. For the Portugals had in all quitted the Country, ſome departing for Siam and Camboya, others for Macon and Goa. Macoa, formerly one of the moſt famous and richeſt Cities of the Orient, was the principal motive that enclin'd the Hollanders to ſend an Embaſſadour into China; for being the beſt ſtation which the Portugals had in all thoſe parts, the Dutch had a deſign to win it wholly. Now, this City, lying in twenty-two Degrees of Northern Latitude, in a ſmall Iſland next to the Province of Kanton, which is a part of China, has very much loſt its former luſter.

But this was not all which the Jeſuits and the Portugal Merchants ſuffer'd. The Chief of the Dutch Factory at Mingrela, which is but eight Leagues from this City, underſtanding the bad ſucceſs of the Dutch in China, had a contrivance by himſelf to be reveng'd. He knew that the Jeſuites of Goa and other places, drove a great trade in rough Diamonds, which they ſent into Europe, or elſe carry'd along with them when they return'd; and that for the more private carrying on of their trade, they were wont to ſend one or two of their Order, that knew the language, in the habit of a Faquir, which conſiſts of a Tygers Skin to cover their back-parts, and a Goats Skin to cover the breaſt, reaching down to the knees. Thereupon the Chief of the Factory of Mingrela taking his opportunity, and having notice that two of the ſuppos'd Faquirs were gone to the Mines, to lay out 400000 Pardo's in Diamonds, gave order to two men, which he had fee'd for the purpoſe, that as ſoon as the Fathers had made their purchaſe, he ſhould give notice to the Officer of the Cuſtom-Houſe at Bicholi.

Bicholi is a great Town upon the Frontiers of thoſe Lands that part the Kingdom of Viſapour from the Territories of the Portugals; there being no other way to paſs the River, which encompaſſes the Iſland where the City of Goa is built.

The Fathers believing that the Cuſtomer knew nothing of their purchaſe, went into the Boat to go over the River; but as ſoon as they were in, they were ſtrictly ſearch'd, and all their Diamonds confiſcated.

To return to the King of Macaſſar; you muſt know, that the Jeſuits once endeavour'd to convert him; and perhaps they might have brought it to paſs, had they not neglected one propoſal which he made them. For at the ſame time that the Jeſuits labour'd to bring him to Chriſtianity, the Mahumetans us'd all their endeavours to oblige him to ſtick to their Law. The King willing to leave his Idolatry, yet not knowing which part to take, commanded the Mahumetans to ſend for two or three of their moſt able Moulla's, or Doctors from Mecca; and the Jeſuits he order'd to ſend him as many of the moſt learn'd among them, that he might be inſtructed in both Religions; which they both promis'd to do. But the Mahometans were more diligent than the Chriſtians, for in eight months they fetch'd from Mecca two learned Moulla's; whereupon the King ſeeing that the Jeſuits ſent no body to him, embrac'd the Mahumetan Law. True it is, that three years after there came two Portugal Jeſuits, but then it was too late.

The King of Macaſſar being thus become a Mahumetan, the Prince his Brother was ſo mad at it, that when the Moſquee, which the King had caus'd to be built, was finiſh'd, he got into it one night, and cauſing the throats of two Pigs to be cut, he all beſmear'd the Walls of the new Moſquee, and the place which was appointed for the Moulla to perform Divine Service with the blood; ſo that the King was forc'd to pull down that, and build Another. After which the Prince with ſome Idolatrous Lords ſtole out of the Iſland, and never ſince appear'd at Court.

CHAP. XX.

The Author purſues his Travels into the Eaſt, and embarks at Mingrela for Batavia. The danger he was in upon the Sea; and his arrival in the Iſland of Ceylan.

I Departed from Mingrela, a great Town in the Kingdom of Viſapour, eight Leagues from Goa, the fourteenth of April, 1648, and embark'd in a Dutch Veſſel bound for Batavia. The Ship had orders to touch at Bokanour, to take in Rice. Whereupon I went aſhore with the Captain, to obtain leave of the King to buy Rice. We found him upon the ſhore, where he had about a dozen Huts ſet up, which were cover'd with Palm-leaves. In his own Hut there was a piece of Perſian Tapeſtry ſpread under him, and there we ſaw five or ſix women, ſome fanning him with Peacocks Feathers, others giving him Betle, others filling him his Pipe of Tobacco. The moſt conſiderable perſons of the Country were in the other Huts; and we counted about two hundred men that were upon the Guard, arm'd only with Bows and Arrows. They had alſo two Elephants among 'em. 'Tis very probable, that his Palace was not far off, and that he only came thither to take the freſh air. There we were preſented with Tari or Palm-wine; but being new, and not boil'd, it caus'd the head-ach in all that drank it, inſomuch that we were two days before we could recover it. I ask'd the reaſon, how the Wine came to do us ſo much prejudice; to which they anſwer'd me, that it was the Planting of Pepper about the Palm-trees, that gave ſuch a ſtrength to the Wine.

We were no ſooner got aboard, but a mighty tempeſt aroſe, wherein the Ship, men, and goods had all like to have been caſt away, being near the ſhore; but at length, the wind changing, we found our ſelves by break of day three or four Leagues at Sea, having loſt all our Anchors; and at length came ſafe to Port in the Haven of Ponte de Galle, the twelfth of May.

I found nothing remarkable in that City; there being nothing but the ruins made by the underminings and Cannon-ſhot, when the Hollanders beſieg'd it, and chas'd the Portugals from thence. The Company allow'd ground to build upon, to them that would inhabit there, and land to till; and had then rais'd two Bulwarks which commanded the Port. If they have finiſh'd the deſign which they undertook, the place cannot but be very conſiderable.

The Hollanders, before they took all the places which the Portugals had in the Iſland of Ceylan, did believe that the trade of this Iſland would have brought them in vaſts ſums, could they but be ſole Maſters of it; and perhaps their Conjectures might have been true, had they not broken their words with the King of Candy, who is the King of the Country; but breaking faith with him, they loſt themſelves in all other places thereabouts.

The Hollanders had made an agreement with the King of Candy, that he ſhould be always ready with twenty thouſand men, to keep the paſſages that hinder the Portugals from bringing any ſuccours from Colombo, Negombe, Manar, or any other places which they poſſeſſed upon the Coaſt. In conſideration whereof the Hollanders, when they had taken Ponte Galle, were to reſtore it to the King of Candy; which they not performing, the King ſent to know why they did not give him poſſeſſion of the Town; to which they return'd anſwer, that they were ready to do it, provided he would defray the expences of the war. But they knew, that if he had had three Kingdoms more, ſuch as his own, he could never have pay'd ſo great a ſum. I muſt confeſs indeed the Country is very poor, for I do not believe that the King ever ſaw fifty thouſand Crowns together in his life; his Trade being all in Cinnamon and Elephants. As for his Cinnamon, he has no profit of it ſince the Portugals coming into the Eaſt Indies. And for his Elephants, he makes but little of them; for they take not above five or ſix in a year; but they are more eſteem'd than any other Country Elephants, as being the moſt courageous in war. One thing I will will tell you hardly to be believ'd, but that which is a certain truth, which is, that when any other King or Raja has one of theſe Elephants of Ceylan, if they bring him among any other breed in any other place whatſoever, ſo ſoon as the other Elephants behold the Ceylan Elephants, by an inſtinct of nature they do him reverence, laying their trunks upon the Ground, and raiſing them up again.

The King of Achen, with whom the Hollanders alſo broke their word, had more opportunity to be reveng'd upon them then the King of Candy. For he deni'd them the tranſportation of Pepper out of his Country, without which their trade was worth little. His Pepper being that which is moſt coveted by the Eaſt. So that they were forc'd to make a compoſition with him. The King of Achens Embaſſadour coming to Batavia, was ſtrangely ſurpriz'd to ſee women ſitting at the Table; but much more, when after a health drank to the Queen of Achen, the General of Batavia commanded his Wife to go and kiſs the Embaſſadour. Nor was the King behind hand with the Dutch Embaſſadour another way; whom the King beholding in a languiſhing diſtemper, ask'd him whether he had never any familiarity with any of the Natives. Yes, replied the Embaſſadour; however I left her to marry in my own Country. Upon that the King commanded three of his Phyſicians to cure him in fifteen days, upon the forfeiture of their lives. Thereupon they gave him a certain potion every morning, and a little Pill at night; and at the end of nine days he took a great Vomit. Every body thought he would have dy'd with the working of it; but at length brought up a ſtopple of courſe hair, as big as a nut; after which he preſently recover'd. At his departure the King gave him a Flint about the bigneſs of a Gooſe Egg, with veins of Gold in it, like the veins of a mans hand, as the Gold grows in that Country.

CHAP. XXI.

The Authors departure from Ceylan, and his arrival at Batavia.

THE twenty-fifth of May we ſet ſail from Ponte Galle. The ſecond of June we paſs'd the Line. The ſixth we ſaw the Iſland call'd Nazaco's. The ſeventeenth we diſcover'd the Coaſt of Sumatra, the eighteenth the Iſland of Ingamina, and the nineteenth the Iſland of Fortune. The twentieth we were in ken of certain little Iſlands, and the Coaſt of Java; among which Iſlands there are three call'd the Iſlands of the Prince. The one and twentieth we diſcover'd Bantam, and the two and twentieth we anchor'd in the Road of Batavia.

There are two Councils in Batavia, the Council of the Fort, where the General preſides, and where all the affairs of the Company are manag'd. The other which is held in a Houſe in the City, and relates to the Civil Government, and decides the petty differences among the Citizens.

All the kindneſs I had ſhew'n me here, was to be proſecuted by the City Council, for being ſuſpected to have bought a parcel of Diamonds for Mounſieur Conſtant, my very good Friend, and Preſident of the Dutch Factory at Gomron; but when they could make nothing of it, they ceas'd their ſuit, aſham'd of what they had done.

CHAP. XXII.

The Author goes to visit the King of Bantam, and relates several Adventures upon that occasion.

BEing so ill treated in Batavia, I resolv'd to visit the King of Bantam; to which purpose I took my own Brother along with me, because he spoke the Language call'd Malaye; which in the East is as universal as Latin among us. Being arriv'd at Bantam in a small Bark, which we hir'd for our selves; we went first and visited the English President, who kindly entertain'd and lodg'd us.

The next day I sent my Brother to the Palace, to know when it would be seasonable for me to come and kiss the King's Hand. When the King saw him (for he was well known to him) he would not suffer him to return, but sent others to fetch me, and to tell me withall, that if I had any rare Jewels, I should do him a kindness to bring them along with me.

When I saw my Brother return'd not with the persons which the King sent, I was almost in the mind not to have gone; remembring how the King of Achen had serv'd the Sieur Renaud. For the French having set up an East India Company, sent away four Vessels, three great ones, and one of eight Guns, for the service of the Country. Their Voyage was the shortest that ever was heard of; arriving at Bantam in less than four months. The King also courteously receiv'd them, and let them have as much Pepper as they desir'd, and cheaper by twenty in the hundred then he sold it to the Hollanders. But the French not coming only for Pepper, sent away their small Ship with the greatest part of their Money to Macassar, to try the Market for Cloves, Nutmegs, and Mace.

The French being so soon dispatch'd at Bantam, had not patience to stay till the return of the small Vessel which they had sent to Macassar; but to pass the time, must needs run over to Batavia, being not above fourteen Leagues off; so that you may be at Batavia from Bantam in a tide with a good wind. When they came to an Anchor, the General of the French Fleet sent to Complement the General of Batavia, who fail'd not to answer his civility, and invited the Admiral ashore. Moreover he sent to those that stay'd aboard, great store of excellent cheer, and a good quantity of Spanish and Rhenish Wine, with particular order to them that carry'd it, to make the French drunk. His order was so well follow'd, that 'twas easie to set the Ships on fire, according to the private instructions which they had. So soon as the flame was discover'd from the Generals window, which overlook'd all the Road, there was a wonderful pretended astonishment among the Dutch. But the French Admiral too truly conjecturing the ground and Authors of the treachery, beholding the company with an undaunted courage; Come, come, cry'd he, lets drink on; they that set the Ships a-fire shall pay for 'em. However the French Ships were all burnt, though the men were all sav'd in Boats which were forthwith sent to their relief. After that, the General of Batavia made them great offers, which they refus'd, and return'd to Batavia, in expectation of their small Vessel. When it return'd, they could find out no better way then to sell Ship and goods, and all to the English, and so share the Money among themselves, every one according to their condition.

But the trick which they put upon the English was far more bloody. The English were the first that found out the danger of sailing from Surat, Masulipatan, or any other distant parts, to Japon without touching by the way. Whereupon they thought it convenient to build a Fort in the Island of Formosa, which not only sav'd the loss of several Vessels, but also brought them in great gain. The Hollanders mad that the English were possess'd of such an advantageous scituation, being the only place in all the Island where Vessels could ride in safety; and finding they could not carry it by force, bethought themthemſelves of a Stratagem; to which purpoſe they ſent away two Ships, wherein they ſtor'd the beſt of their Souldiers, who pretending they had been in a ſtorm in Sea, put into the Harbour of Formoſa, with ſome of their Maſts by the board, their Sails ſcatter'd, and their Seamen ſeemingly ſick. The Engliſh compaſſionating their miſeries, which was only in outward appearance, invited the chief of them to come aſhore to refreſh themſelves; which they were very ready to do, carrying as many men with them as poſſibly they could under pretence of ſickneſs. While the chief of them were at Dinner with the chief of the Engliſh, they all ply'd their Cups; and when the Dutch ſaw the Engliſh had drunk hard enough, taking their opportunity, they pickt a quarrel with the Commander of the Fort, and drawing their Swords, which they had hidden under their Coats for that purpoſe, they eaſily ſurpriz'd and cut all the throats of the Soldiers in the Garriſon; and being thus Maſters of the Fort, they kept it from that time till they were routed out by the Chineſes.

Now for the trick that the King of Achen ſerv'd the Sieur Renaud; he having got a good Eſtate by Jewels, arriv'd at length at Achen, and as it is the cuſtom for the Merchants to ſhew the King what Jewels they have, the King had no ſooner caſt his eye upon four Rings which the Sieur Renaud ſhew'd him, but he bid him fifteen thouſand Crowns for them; but Renaud would not bate of eighteen thouſand. Now becauſe they could not agree, the Sieur Renaud carry'd them away with him, which very much diſpleas'd the King; however he ſent for him the next day. Whereupon Renaud returning to him, the King paid him his eighteen thouſand Crowns; but he was never ſeen after that, and it is thought he was ſecretly murther'd in the Palace.

This ſtory came to my remembrance, when I found my Brother did not come along with thoſe that were ſent to fetch me. However I reſolv'd to go, taking with me 12 or 13000 Roupies worth of Jewels; the greateſt part being in Roſe Diamond Rings, ſome conſiſting of ſeven, ſome of nine, and ſome of eleven Stones; with ſome ſmall Bracelets of Diamonds and Rubies. I found the King with three of his Captains and my Brother ſitting together, after the manner of the Eaſt, with five great Plates of Rice before them of divers colours. For their drink they had Spaniſh Wine, ſtrong waters, and ſeveral ſorts of Sherbets. After I had complemented the King, and preſented him with a Diamond Ring, a blew Saphir Ring, and a little Bracelet of Diamonds, Rubies,, and blew Saphirs, he commanded me to ſit down, and order'd me a glaſs of ſtrong Water to whet my appetite. The glaſs held a quarter of a pint, and therefore I refus'd it, which the King very much wonder'd at; but being told by my Brother, that I never drank any ſtrong Water, he order'd me preſently a glaſs of Sack.

After that he roſe up, and ſeated himſelf in a Chair, the Elbows whereof were gilded. His feet and legs were bare, having a Perſian Carpet of Gold and Silk to tread upon. He was clad with a piece of Calicut, part whereof cover'd his body from his waſte to his knees, the reſt being wound about his back and ſhoulders like a Scarf. Inſtead of Shoes he had a pair of Sandals, that ſtood by the Chair ſide, the ſtraps whereof was embroider'd with Gold and ſmall Pearl. About his head he had a thing like a Handkerchief, with three Corners, bound about his head like a Fillet. His hair alſo, which was very long, was twiſted and ty'd together over his head. Two perſons ſtood behind him with great Fans of long Peacock Feathers, the handles whereof were five or ſix foot in length. Upon his right hand ſtood an old black women, holding in her hand a little Mortar and Peſtle of Gold, to beat his Betlé, in; wherewith he mix'd the Kernel of the Nut of Araqué, and Seed Pearl diſſolv'd. When it was all beaten together, the old woman gave it the King over his Shoulders, who opening his mouth, the old woman fed him as our women feed their Children. For the King had chaw'd ſo much Betlé, and taken ſo much Tobacco, that his teeth were all fall'n out of his head.

The King of Bantam's Palace was never built by any curious Architect. It is a ſquare place, encompaſs'd with a great many Pillars, varniſh'd over with ſeveral ſorts of colours, againſt which the King leans when he ſits down. At the four Corners there are four great Pillars ſet in the earth, at forty foot diſtance the one from the other, lin'd with a Mat made of the Rhind of a certain Tree, ſo thin that it looks like a piece of Linnen, which neither Fleas nor Punies will come near. The roof was cover'd with Coco-Branches. Not far off, under another Roof ſupported with four great Pillars, he had ſixteen Elephants, the nobleſt of all thoſe that are in the Kings ſervice: for he has a far greater number train'd up for war, that are not afraid of wild-fire. For his guard he might have about two thouſand men, that were drawn up in Companies under the ſhade of the next Trees. They are good Soldiers as well by Sea as by Land; great Mahometans, and ſtand not at all in fear of death. His Haram, or the Womens Apartment, was certainly a very ſmall Place. For when he had view'd what I brought him, he ſent for two old women, to whom he gave ſome of the Jewels, to go and ſhew them to his Wives. The two women return'd back through a little pitiful door; the encloſure being nothing but a kind of Wall made up of Earth and Cow-dung mix'd together. Whatever he ſent to the Women, they never return'd any thing again. Which made me believe they would bear a good price; and indeed whatever I ſold to him, I ſold to good profit, and had my Money well paid me. After this we took our leaves; but the King oblig'd us to come next day in the evening, becauſe he had a deſire to ſhew us a Turky Dagger, the Haft whereof, being thin of Diamonds, he had a mind to enrich with more Stones. Coming to the Engliſh Houſe with our Money, they wonder'd that the King had laid out twenty thouſand Roupies, telling me, they believ'd it was the beſt part of his treaſure.

The next day my brother and I went to wait upon him at the appointed hour, and we found him ſitting in the ſame place where he ſate before. There was a Moulla then read to him, who ſeem'd to interpret to him ſomething of the Alcoran in the Arabick Language. The Lecture being ended, they both roſe and went to prayers; which being concluded, the King ſent for the Dagger and the Haft which was of Gold. The top of the Handle was already ſet with Diamonds, and upon the upper part of the croſs Bar was cut in Facets, which could not be leſs worth than fifteeen or ſixteen thouſand Crowns. The King told me, it was preſented to him by the Queen of Borneo, and that it was cut at Goa; but that he put a far higher value upon it than I eſteem'd it to be worth. The Dagger, as well as the Sheath was full of Beazils, or Collets, in very good order; but the King had neither Diamond, Ruby, nor any other Stone to ſet in the Collets; and therefore deſir'd me to help him to ſome that might come at an eaſie rate. I told him it was impoſſible to find Stones that would fit the Beazils; and therefore that it was better, when he had got Stones enough, to fix other Beazils according to the proportion of the Stones. To which purpoſe he was firſt to range all his Stones in Wax; which I ſhew'd him how to do at the ſame time; but that was above his skill. And therefore do what I could to excuſe my ſelf to the contrary, he would needs oblige me to carry the Dagger to Batavia; whereupon I took my leave of the King, and departed.

CHAP. XXIII.

The Authors return to Batavia. His re-visiting the King of Bantam. And a relation of several Extravagancies of certain Faquirs in their return from Mecca.

ABout elev'n a Clock at night, we embark'd for Batavia; for the night winds blowing from the Land, are the only winds to ſerve our turn; ſo that we were at Batavia between ten, and elev'n the next morning. There I ſtay'd twenty days for the King of Bantam's ſake, to make him belive I had ſought for that which I knew was impoſſible to be found. I had nothing to do all the while, for in Batavia there is no other recreation than gaming and drinking, which was none of my buſineſs. At that time the Sieur Cant dy'd, one of the Indian Counſellers, who was ſumptuouſly bury'd for his good ſervices done to the Company; but the people complain'd heavily of the injuſtice which he had done as well to the Souldiers as Mariners.

Having ſtay'd twenty days at Bantam, I reſolv'd to go and return the King of Bantam his Dagger again; for it was impoſſible to meet with ſtones to fit his Beazils. However I took along with me ſome other Stones which he had not ſeen. Coming to Bantam, the King caus'd us to be lodg'd in one of his own Houſes in the City, which was made of Bamboo's. Thither in leſs then a quarter of an hour, the King ſent us ſome Pateches, or ſweet Water-Melons, red within like Scarlet. We had alſo Mongo's, and a certain large Fruit call'd Pompone, red alſo within, the meat of it being ſoft and ſpungy, but of an excellent taſte. Having ſtay'd our ſtomachs, we went to wait upon the King, whom we found in the ſame place, with his old Mortar-bearer, who every foot fed him with Betle with her fingers. There were ſitting about the Hall five or ſix of his Captains, viewing a certain parcel of Fire-works, as Granado's, Rochets, and other divices to run upon the water, which the Chineſes had brought; who are the moſt exquiſite at thoſe ſports of any people in the world. When the King was at leaſure, I return'd him his Dagger, telling him, that Batavia was no place to meet with ſtones; and that ſuch as were to be found, were valu'd at double the price they were worth; and that there was no place where he could fit himſelf, but at Golconda, Goa, or the Diamond Mines. Thereupon the old woman took the Dagger, and carry'd it into his Haram; nor did the King ſpeak one word more about it. After that I ſhew'd him what other ſtones I had brought, a percel whereof I ſold him to good profit; the King ordering us to come the next day for payment.

The next day about ſix a Clock in the morning, my Brother and I, and a Dutch Chirurgion, were going along a narrow way, between a River on the one hand, and the Pales of a great Garden on the other. Behind the Pales a Raſcally Bantamois, had hid himſelf; one of thoſe that was newly come from Mecca, and was upon the deſign Moqua; that is, in their Language, when the Raſcality of the Mahumetans return from Mecca, they preſently take their Cric in their hands, which is a kind of Poniard, the Blade whereof is half poyſon'd; with which they run through the ſtreets, and kill all thoſe which are not of the Mahumetan Law, till they be kill'd themſelves. Theſe Furies think that in ſo doing they do God and Mahomet good ſervice, and ſhall be ſav'd thereby. If any of theſe madmen be kill'd, the Rabble of Mahumetans buries them as Saints, and every one contributes to make a fair Tomb. Sometimes you ſhall have an idle Rogue, in the habit of a Dervich, that will build him a Hut near the Tomb, which he undertakes to look to, and ſtrew with Flowers. And as his alms increaſe, he adds ſome other ornament to it. For the Fairer and better ſet out the Tomb is, the more devoutly it is worſhip'd, and the more Alms it brings in. I remember in theyear 1642, that at Souali, which is the Port of Surat, it happen'd that a Veſſel of the great Moguls return'd from Mecca, with a great number of Faquirs or Dervicheſ. For every year the King ſends two Veſſels to carry and bring back the Pilgrims, who have their paſſage free. And when theſe Veſſels are to go, the Faquirs come from all parts of India to imbark. Theſe Veſſels are lad'n with very good Commodities, which are ſold at Mecca, and the profit is diſtributed among the poor Pilgrims. But the principal is brought back for the next year, amounting to ſix hundred thouſand Roupies at leaſt. 'Tis an ill Market when they do not gain 30 or 40 per Cent. by their Commodities; nay there are ſome that produce Cent. per Cent. beſides, that the principal perſons of the Moguls Haram, and other particular perſons, ſend very large gifts to Mecca.

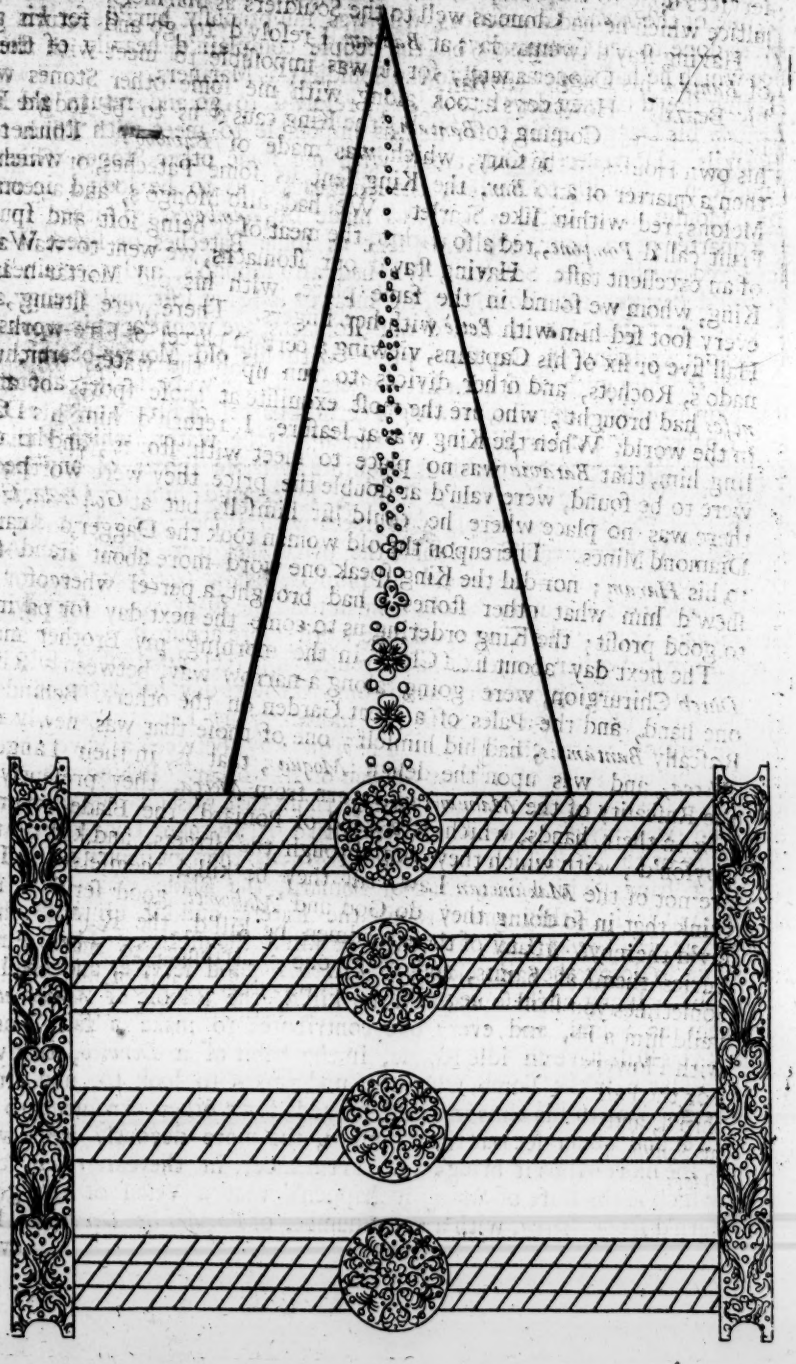
One of theſe Faquirs returning from Mecca in the year 1642, and being landed at Soueli, had no ſooner ſaid his prayers, but he took his Dagger, and ran among ſeveral Dutch Mariners that were unlading goods upon the ſhore, and before they were aware this mad Faquir had wounded ſeventeen of them, of which thirteen dy'd. The Canjare which he had in his hand, was a kind of Dagger, the Blade whereof toward the Handle was three fingers broad; and becauſe it is a very dangerous weapon, I have here given you the Figure of it.



At length the Sentinel that ſtood at the entry of the Tent where the Governour and Merchants were, ſhot him through the body, ſo that he fell down dead. Immediately all the other Faquirs and Mahumetans that were upon the place took up the body and buried it: and at the end of fifteen days they put him up a fair Monument. Every year the Engliſh and Hollanders pull it down; but when they are gone, the Faquirs ſet it up again, and plant Banners over it; nay ſome there are that perform their devotions to it.

But to return to the Bantam Faquir. That Villain lying, as I ſaid, behind the Pales, as my Brother and I, and the Dutch Chirurgion came toward him, all three a-breaſt, thruſt his Pike between the Pales, thinking to have ſtabb'd it into one of our breaſts. The Dutch man being next the River, and ſomewhat before the reſt, the head of his Pike ran into his Breeches; whereupon we both laid hold of the Staff. But my Brother being next the Pales, preſently leap'd over, and ran the Faquir thorough. Whereupon ſeveral Chineſes, and other Idolaters, came and gave my Brother thanks for killing him. After that we waited upon the King, and told him what my Brother had done; who was ſo far from being diſpleas'd, that he gave my Brother a Girdle. For the King and his Governours are glad when thoſe Rogues are ſlain, knowing them to be Deſperado's, not fit to live.

The next day, coming to take my leave of the Engliſh Preſident, he ſhew'd me two ſtrings of Diamonds, and two Services of Silver, which came from England. He would have ſold them all, but I only bought one ~~one~~ of the ſtrings of Diamonds, the other being foul; and for the Silver, I would have bought it, had they coin'd Silver in Batavia, as they were wont to do. Formerly the Hollanders coin'd Reals, Half-Reals, and Quarter-Reals, bearing on the one ſide the ſtamp of a Ship, on the other V, O, C, like a Character, as in the Figure, ſignifying in Dutch, Vor Oft Indian, Compagnie, for the Eaſt Indian Company. Which they did for the Sake of the Chineſes, who loving Silver better than Gold, carri'd away all the Silver that was coin'd at Batavia, at good rates. But at length they left it off, finding ſo few people that made uſe of Silver.

CHAP. XXIV.

Of the War of the Hollanders with the Emperor of Java.

HAving taken my leave of the Engliſh Preſident, I return'd to Batavia; where having little to do, I reſolv'd to give a viſit to the King of Japar, otherwiſe call'd the Emperor of Java. This King was formerly King of all the Iſland, till the King of Bantam, who was only Governour of a Province, rebell'd againſt him; the Hollanders being made by the diviſions of thoſe two Princes. For when the King of Japar beſieg'd Batavia, the King of Bantam reliev'd the Hollanders; and when they were attack'd by the King of Bantam, the King of Japar came to their aſſiſtance. And when thoſe two Kings were together by the ears, the Hollanders always aided the weakeſt.

The King of Japar keeps his Court in a City of the ſame name, diſtant from Batavia ſome thirty Leagues. You may coſt along the ſhore to it by Sea; but the City ſtands above eight Leagues up in the Land. From the City there is a fine Walk to the Sea, where there is a handſom Port, and fairer Houſes than any in the City. And the King would live there if he thought it ſafe.

The day before I departed, I went to take my leave of one of the Indian Counſellors, and telling him that I was going to wait upon the King of Japar, he ſtood amaz'd, in regard the King and the Hollanders were mortal Enemies; of which he gave me this account: The deceas'd King, Father to the King that now reigns, ſince the Hollanders built their Fort of Batavia would never have any peace with them. And though that during the war the Hollanders took ten of his Subjects, for one of theirs, and offer'd ten for one in exchange, yet he would never exchange one upon any condition whatſoever, and charg'd his Son upon his death-bed never to releaſe one. This obſtinacy very much troubl'd the Dutch General, and all the reſt in Batavia, and oblig'd them to conſult upon ways how to right themſelves. Now it is the cuſtom when a Mahometan King dyes, that his ſucceſſor ſends certain great Lords of his Court to Mecca with Preſents, as well to engage them to pray for the Soul of the deceas'd, as alſo to give thanks to God and Mahomet for the coming of a new King to the Throne without any Impediment, and to pray for the bleſſing of Victory over all his Enemies. But the new King and his Council were at a loſs how to accompliſh this Voyage; for firſt the King had none but little Veſſels, that were wont only to ſail along by the ſhore, by reaſon of the inexperience of his Seamen; and in the ſecond place the Dutch were always plying to and fro about the mouths of his Havens, to ſurprize his Subjects if they ſtirr'd forth. For the Mery therefore of his Pilgrims, the King at laſt Concludes upon making an agreement with the Engliſh. For which reaſon he diſpatches away an Envoy to Bantam, to the Engliſh Preſident and his Council, who promis'd to lend him the biggeſt Veſſel and the beſt mounted which the company had in the Indies. In lieu whereof the Engliſh were to pay but half Cuſtoms for ever, for all Commodities exported or imported out of his Country. Which Treaty being ratify'd, the Engliſh furniſh'd him with three ſtout Veſſels, Mann'd and Gunn'd beyond an ordinary rate. Thereupon nine of the principal Lords of the Court, and moſt of the Blood Royal, with a Train of a hundred perſons, embark'd themſelves in the great Veſſel. But all theſe preparations could not be carri'd ſo privately, but that the Dutch had intelligence of it by their Spies. Thereupon the General of the Dutch makes ready three Ships, and lying juſt in the ſtreight of Bantam's mouth, ſo ſoon as the Engliſh came up, (for they had no other way) let fly at them ſo roundly, that the Engliſh fearing leſt their Veſſels would be ſunk, ſtruck Sail; which the Java Lords ſeeing, call'd the Engliſh Traytors, and drawing their poyſon'd Daggers, cry'd a Mocca upon the Engliſh, killing a great number of them before they had time to put themſelves into a poſture of defence. And perhaps there would not one of them have eſcap'd, had not the Hollanders come aboard as they did. Some of the Java Lords, and about twenty of their Attendants, would take no quarter; ſo that the Hollanders were forc'd to fight for't, and at laſt they got the better, with the loſs of ſeven or eight men. The Engliſh Veſſel being carri'd into Batavia, the General very civilly ſent both the Priſoners and the Veſſel home again; withall giving notice to the King, that he was ready to make an exchange of Priſoners with him. But the King would not ſo much as hearken to any ſuch propoſition; returning for anſwer, that though the Hollanders had three times as many of his Subjects he would not releaſe ſo much as one Hollander. So that the poor Dutch were kept ſlaves in Java, and the Javanners dy'd miſerable in Batavia.

As for the Javanners, they are good Souldiers. And it is reported, that while Batavia was beſieg'd by the King of Bantam in the year 1659, a Dutch Souldier lying in Ambuſcade in a Marſh, a Javanner, little dreaming, that any body had been there, came to the ſame place to diſcover the Enemy, and was by the Dutch man thruſt with his Pike into his Body. Upon which the Javanner finding himſelf wounded, did not ſtrive to pull the Pike out of the body, but thruſt himſelf farther upon it, to the end he might come at his Enemy, whom he ſtab'd to the heart, as ſoon as he got within his reach.

CHAP. XXV.

The Author buries his Brother; and is again quarrel'd withall by the General and his Council.

WHile I ſtay'd at Batavia, my Brother dy'd; and it was pretty to conſider what the Dutch made me pay for his Funeral. The firſt expence is for the Fees of thoſe that beg leave for the Corps to be buri'd of whom the more there are, the more honourable the Funeral is eſteem'd, I ſent ſix, and paid them to my wonder for that ſeventy-two Crowns. The fee for the Pall is a right that belongs to the poor, for which I paid two Crowns. There was a Veſſel of Spaniſh Wine drank out, that coſt me two hundred Piaſters. I gave twenty-ſix more for three Weſtphalia Hams, and ſome Neats-tongues, and twenty-two for Bak'd Meats. To the Bearers I gave twenty Crowns, and ſixteen for a place in the Church-yard, for they ask'd me a hundred to bury him in the Church. And all theſe are Fee's demanded. So that my Brothers Funeral coſt me twelve hundred and twenty three Livres of French Money.

Being thus put by the two Voyages which I intended to Japan and Sumatra, I was adviſ'd to lay out my Money in Requenings or Debentures of the Servants of the Holland Company; which they that have no mind to return into their own Country, as being ſettled in the Indies, will ſell at an eaſie rate; inſomuch, that for ſixty or ſeventy you may buy a hundred Paiſters; the Act and Acquittance of the Seller being made and regiſter'd by the Publick Notary. Thereupon I bought of one of the publick Notaries, who had Bills in his hands, to the value of about eleven thouſand Guelders, at fourſcore and two for the hundred. After that, I bought by means of the Advocate of the Treaſury, ſix thouſand Guelders more, at ſeventy-nine for the hundred. But ſome few days after, meeting with the ſame Advocate again, he paſs'd a Complement upon me, and told me, he was very much troubl'd for thoſe that had bought Debentures, in regard that the General and the Council had commanded him to recall all Debentures that had been ſold; for they had conſider'd, how ſad a thing it would be, for the poor men to looſe ſo much of their Salaries. I anſwer'd him, that for my part I was willing to return mine, provided I might have my Money again. About ſix or ſeven hours after, I was ſent for by the General and his Council. When I came there, they ask'd me why I had not return'd the Debentures which I had bought to the Advocate, who had demanded them by their order. I anſwer'd them, that they were at Bantam, whither

I had ſent them in order to my paſſage home; in regard that the Engliſh Preſident had offer'd me a convenience to go along with him. The Council anſwer'd me, that the Dutch Ships were as good as the Engliſh, and very courteouſly aſſur'd me, they would give order for a Cabin to my ſelf in the Vice-Admiral. But withall they told me, I muſt deliver up my Debentures before I ſtirr'd; aſſuring me, that they would give me a Bill to be re-imburs'd my Money by the Company in Holland. I thought it very hard, for I knew not how to truſt 'em; but ſeeing the Merchants, Commanders, and all other perſons clapt up, and their Papers taken from them by force, that had bought Debentures; I thought it the beſt way to deliver mine, and ſtand to their courteſie. I often preſs'd the General and the Council for my Bill, but after many delays the General aſcertain'd me, that my Bill ſhould be in Holland as ſoon as I. Thereupon deſiring the Vice-Admiral and ſome others to be my witneſſes of what the General promis'd, I took my leave of him, very much repenting my going to Batavia.

CHAP. XXVI.

The Author embarks in a Dutch Veſſel, to return into Europe.

THE next day I went aboard the Vice admiral, and the third day after we ſet ſail, and as ſoon as we were out of the Streight, we diſcover'd the Iſlands of the Prince. From thence being in the Altitude of the Coco Iſlands, we beat about two days to diſcover them; but all to no purpoſe, thereupon we made directly for the Cape of good Hope.

The forty-fifth day after our departure from Batavia, our Vice-Admiral neglected to put out his Lights; believing all the Fleet had been before at the Cape; ſo that it happen'd that one of the Fleet being behind, and not carrying any Lights out neither, it being a dark night, fell foul upon us, which put every man to his prayers, all people believing the Veſſel had been loſt; and indeed had ſhe not been a ſound ſtanch Ship (for the Provinces were ſo accounted) ſhe ſhould never have endur'd ſo terrible a ſhock. At length we clear'd our ſelves, by cutting of the Yards of the Maeſtricht, that hung in our Cordage.

The fifty-fifth we came within view of the Cape of good Hope; but were forc'd to keep the Sea, becauſe the waves roll'd ſo that we were not able to come to an Anchor; not that the Wind was extream high, but becauſe the South-wind had blown ſo long that it had forc'd the Water to that part. When the Sea grew calm, we came to an Anchor.

But of all the people that ever I ſaw in all my travels I never ſaw any ſo hideous nor ſo bruitiſh as the Comoukes, of which I had ſpoken in my Perſian Travels; and thoſe of the Cape of good Hope, whom they call Cafres, or Hoſſemotes. When they ſpeak, they make a noiſe with their tongues, like the breaking of wind backward; and though they hardly ſpeak articulately, yet they eaſily underſtand one another. They cover themſelves with the Skins of wild Beaſts, which they kill in the Woods; in Winter wearing the hairy part innermoſt, and in Summer outermoſt. But there are none but the beſt ſort among them who are thus clad; the reſt wear nothing but a naſty rag about their privy parts. The men and the women are lean and ſhort; and when they bring forth a Male-child, the Mothers cut out his right Stone; and preſently give him Water to drink, and Tobacco to eat. They cut out the right Teſticle, becauſe, ſay they, it makes them ſwifter to run. There are ſome of them that will catch a Roe-Buck running. They neither know what belongs to Gold nor Silver; and for Religion, they have none among them.

So ſoon as we caſt Anchor, four women came aboard us, and brought us four young Oſtriches; which were boil'd for ſome ſick people that we had aboard.

board. After that they brought great ſtore of Tortoiſe-ſhells, and Oſtriches Eggs, and other Eggs as big as Gooſe Eggs; which though they had no Yolk, taſted wery well. The Birds that lay theſe Eggs are a ſort of Geeſe, and ſo fat that they are hardly to be eaten, taſting rather like Fiſh than Fleſh. The women ſeeing our Cook throw away the Guts of two or three Fowl which he was dreſſing, took them up, and ſqueezing out the Ordure, eat them as they were; being hugely pleas'd with the Aqua Vitæ which the Captain gave them. Neither men nor women are aſham'd to ſhew their nakedneſs, for indeed they are but a ſort of human Beaſts.

So ſoon as the Ship arrives, they bring their Beeves to the ſhore, with what other Commodities they have, to barter for ſtrong Water and Tobacco, Cryſtal or Agat Beads; or any ſort of old Iron work. If they are not ſatisfi'd with what you offer them, away they fly; and then giving a whiſtle all their Cattel follow 'em; nor ſhall you ever ſee 'em again. Some, when they ſaw 'em fly, would ſhoot and kill their Cattel; but after that for ſome years they would never bring any more. 'Tis a very great convenience for the Veſſels that touch there, to take in freſh Victals; and the Hollanders did well to build a Fort there. It is now a good handſom Town, inhabited by all ſorts, that live with the Hollanders; and all ſorts of Grain, which are brought out of Europe or Aſia and ſow'd there, come to better perfection there then in other parts. The Country lies in thirty-five Degrees, and ſome few Minutes over, ſo that it cannot be ſaid that either the heat or ſcituation of the Climate makes theſe Cafres ſo black. Being deſirous to know the reaſon, and why they ſtunk ſo terribly, I learnt it from a Girl that was bred up in the Fort, who was tak'n from her Mother, as ſoon as ſhe was born, and was white like our women in Europe; ſhe told me, that the reaſon why the Cafres are ſo black is, becauſe they rub themſelves with a Greaſe or Ointment compos'd of ſeveral ſorts of Drugs; wherewith ſhould they not anoint themſelves very often, and as ſoon as they were born, they ſhould become Hydropſical, as the Blacks of Africa, and the Abyſſins are; or like the people of Saba, that never live above forty years, and are always troubl'd with one Leg twice as big as the other. Theſe Cafres, as bruitiſh as they are, have yet ſome knowledge of Simples, which they know to apply to ſeveral Diſeaſes; which the Hollanders have ſeveral times experienc'd. Of nineteen ſick perſons that we had in our Ship, fifteen were committed to the care of theſe Cafres, being troubl'd with Ulcers in their Legs, and old wounds which they had receiv'd in the wars; and in leſs then fifteen days they were all perfectly cur'd. Every one of theſe had two Cafres to look after him; and according to the condition of the wound or Ulcer, they went and fetch'd Simples, which they bruis'd between two Stones, and apply'd to the ſore. As for the other four, they were ſo far gone with the Pox, that they would not truſt the Cafres with them, having been given over at Batavia, and ſo they all dy'd, between the Cape and St. Helens.

In the year 1661, a Gentleman of Britanny being at Batavia, was ſo bit by the Gnats in the night, that his Leg exulcerated preſently in ſuch a manner, as to puzzle all the art and skill of the Chirurgeons in that Town. When he came to the Cape of good Hope, the Captain of the Ship ſending him a ſhore, the Cafres came about him, and after they had beheld him, they told him if he would truſt to them they would cure him. The Captain thereupon committed him to their care, who cur'd him and made him a ſound man in leſs then fifteen days.

When a Ship comes to an Anchor in the Cape, it is the faſhion for him that commands the Ship, to give leave to ſome part of the Mariners and Souldiers to go aſhore to refreſh themſelves. The ſickly have firſt leave by turns, and go to the Town, where they are dyeted and lodg'd for ſeven or eight Sous a day, and are very well us'd.

It is the cuſtom of the Hollanders, when they ſtay here, to ſend out parties of Souldiers upon the diſcovery of the up-land Country, and they that go fartheſt are beſt rewarded. With this deſign a party of Souldiers, under the Command of a Serjant, far advanc'd in the Country; and night coming on, they made a great fire, as well to keep themſelves from the Lions, as to warm themſelves, and ſo lay down to ſleep round about it. Being aſleep, a Lion came and ſeiz'd one of the Souldiers Arms, which the Serjant perceiving, immediately ſhot the Lion with his Carbine; but when he was dead, they had much ado to open the Lions mouth, to get out the Souldiers Arm. Thus it appears a vulgar error, to believe that Lions would not come near the fire. As for the Souldier, the Cafres cur'd his Arm in twelve days. There are in the Fort abundance of Lions and Tigers Skins; among the reſt, there was the Skin of a Horſe which the Cafres had kill'd; it was white, croſs'd with black ſtreaks, ſpotted like a Leopard, without a Tail. Two or three Leagues from the Hollanders Fort, there was a Lion found dead, with four Porcupines Quills in his body, the third part were of had pierc'd his fleſh. So that it was judg'd that the Porcupine had kill'd the Lion. The Skin, with the Quills in it, is kept in the Fort.

A League from the Fort, is a fair Town, that grows bigger and bigger every day. When the Holland Company arrives there with their Ships, if any Souldier or Mariner will live there, they are very glad of it. They have as much ground as they can mannage; where they have all ſorts of Herbs, and Pulſe, and as much Rice, and as many grapes as they can deſire. They have alſo young Oſtridges, Beef, Sea-fiſh, and ſweet water. To catch the Oſtridges, when they pleaſe, they got their Neſts when they were young, and driving a ſtake in the ground, tye the Birds by one Leg to the ſtake, and when they are old enough they come and take them out of the Neſt, from whence it is impoſſible to fly away.

When the Hollanders began to inhabit the Cape, they took a young Girl from her Mother, as ſoon as ſhe was born; ſhe is white, only her Noſe is a little flat. A French man got her with Child, and would have marry'd her; but the Company were ſo far from permitting him, that they took away above a hundred Livres of the Maids wages from her, to puniſh her for the miſdemeanour, which was ſomewhat hard.

There are great numbers of Lions and Tigers, which the Hollanders have a pretty invention to take; they faſten a Carbine to a ſtake, driv'n into the Earth, and lay meat round about the Gun, which meat is faſten'd with a ſtring to the Trigger. So that when the Beaſt ſnatches the meat, the String pulls the Trigger, and the Gun going off, hits the Lion either in the throat or the breaſt.

The Cafres feed upon a Root like our Skerrets, which they roſt and make bread of. Sometimes they grind it into flower, and then it taſts like a Walnut. For their food they eat the ſame Root raw, with raw Fiſh; with the Entrails of Beaſts, out of which they only ſqueeze the ordure. As for the bowels of the wild Beaſts, the women wear them dry'd about their Legs, eſpecially the bowels of thoſe Beaſts which their Husbands kill, which they look upon as a kind of Ornament. They alſo feed upon Tortoiſes, when they have ſo far heated them at the fire, as to make the Shells come off. They are very expert in darting their Azagayas; and thoſe that have none, make uſe of pointed ſticks, which they will lance a great way. With theſe they go down to the Sea-ſide, and as ſoon as ever they ſpy a Fiſh near the top of the water, they will not fail to ſtrike him.

As for their Birds, which are like our Ducks, whoſe Eggs are without any Yolk; they breed in ſuch great quantities, in the Country, that in a Bay about eighteen Miles from the Cape, you may knock them on the head with a ſtick.

The Hollanders once carri'd a young Cafre to the General at Batavia, who bred him carefully up, teaching him to underſtand the Dutch and Portugal Languages perfectly well. At length being deſirous to return into his Country, the General gave him very good Cloaths and good Linnen, hoping that he would have liv'd among the Hollanders, and been ſerviceable to them in the dicovery of the Country; but ſo ſoon as he got home, he flung his Cloaths i' the Sea and return'd wild among his fellow Natives, eating raw fleſh as he did before, and quite forgetting his Benefactors.

When the Cafres go a hunting, they go a great number together, and make ſuch a prodigious howling and yelling, that they fright the very Beaſts themſelves, and in that affright with eaſe deſtroy them; and I have been aſſur'd, that their cries do terrifie the Lions themſelves.

The women are of ſo hot a Conſtitution of Body, that at the times that their monthly monthly cuſtoms are upon 'em, they happen to make water, and that European chances to ſet his feet upon it, it cauſes an immediate Head-ach and Feaver, which many times turns to the Plague.

CHAP. XXVII.

The Holland Fleet arrives at St. Helens. The diſcription of the Iſland.

HAving ſtaid two and twenty dayes at the Cape of good Hope, ſeeing that the Wind was favourable, we weigh'd, and ſteer'd for St. Helens. When we were under Sail, the Mariners cry'd out, they would ſleep till they came into St. Helens Road. For the wind is very conſtant, and carries you in ſixteen or eighteen days to the Road of the Iſland. All the trouble that our Mariners had, was that fourteen days after our departure from the Cape, they were often fort'd to the Top-Maſt head, upon diſcovery of the Iſland; for as ſoon as you diſcover the Iſland, the Pilot muſt take care to ſteer to the Noth-ſide of the Iſland, becauſe there is no caſting Anchor but on that ſide, and that very near the ſhore too; by reaſon of the deepneſs of the water; for if the Anchors come not to take hold, the current of the water and the wind carries the Ship quite out of the Road, which there is no recovering again, becauſe the wind never changes.

So ſoon as the Ships came to an Anchor, part of the Seamen were ſent aſhore to get wild Hogs, of which there are great plenty; and to gather Sorrel, which grows in great abundance; and indeed they not only ſend the Seamen, but all the Pigs, Sheep, Geeſe, Ducks, and Pullets aboard, to feed upon that Sorrel, which purges them in ſuch a manner, that in a few days they became ſo fat, that by that time we came to Holland they were hardly to be eaten. That Sorrel has the ſame operation upon the men, who boiling their wild Swines fleſh, Rice, and Sorrel together, make thereof a kind of Potage ſo excellent, that it keeps their bodies open by an inſenſible purgation.

There are two places upon the Coaſt of St. Helens where Ships may come to an Anchor. But the beſt is that where we lay, by reaſon that ground is very good, and for that the water that falls from the Mountain is the beſt in the Iſland. In this part of the Iſland there is no plain, for the Mountain deſcends to the very ſhore of the Sea.

It is not ſo good anchoring in the other Road; but there is a very handſome plain, where you may ſow or plant whatever you pleaſe. There are great ſtore of Citrons, and ſome Oranges, which the Portugals had formerly planted there. For that Nation has that vertue, that wherever they come, they make the place the better for thoſe that come after them; whereas the Hollanders endeavour to deſtroy all things wherever they ſet footing. I confeſs the Commanders are not of that humour, but the Sea-men and Souldiers, who cry one to another, we ſhall never come hither any more, and out of greedineſs will cut down a whole tree inſtead of gathering the fruit.

Some days after there arriv'd a Portugueze Veſſel from Guiny, full of Slaves, which were bound for the Mines of Peru. Some of the Hollanders that underſtood the language of the Negro's, tol'd 'em how miſerably they would be us'd, and thereupon the next night two hundred and fifty of them threw themſelves into the Sea. And indeed it is a miſerable ſlavery; for ſometimes after they have min'd in ſome places for ſome days together, the Earth being looſe, falls down and kills four or five hunder'd at a time. Beſides, that after they had been mining awhile, their Faces, their Eyes, and their Skins change colour; which proceeds from the vapours that ariſe from thoſe concavities; nor could they ſubſiſt in thoſe places, but for the quantity of ſtrong Water which they give both to the men and women. There are ſome that are made free by their Maſters, who labour however for their living; but between Saturday night and Munday morning they ſpend all their weeks wages in ſtrong Water, which is very dear; ſo that they always live miſerably.

Being ready to depart the Iſland of St. Helens, the Admiral call'd a Council, to advize which way to ſteer. The greateſt part were for ſteering more to the Weſt, then then to the South; because the season for sailing was far spent; and for that if we steer'd for the West Indies, we should find the wind more proper to carry us into Holland. But we had no sooner cross'd the Line, but we found the wind quite contrary to what the Mariners expected; so that we were forc'd to steer to the sixty-forth Degree of Altitude with the Island, and so return by the North into Holland.

CHAP. XXVIII.

The Holland Fleet sets Sail from St. Helens, and prosperously arrives in Holland.

THE next day after the Admiral had call'd a Council, we weigh'd and set Sail about ten a Clock at night. Three days after our departure from St. Helens, the Seamen were call'd very dully to prayers morning and evening; though all the time we staid in the rode, they never minded any such matter; which made me wonder, to find they should be more devout when they were out of danger, than when they were in jeopardy.

After several other days sailing, we discover'd the Coast of Island, and then the Island of Ferella, where we join'd with the Holland Fleet that stay'd for us. Here it is that the Commander in chief calls to account all the Mariners for their misdemeanours during the whole Voyage.

Our Ship was bound for Zealand; but we were forc'd to lye out at Sea seven days before we could get into Flushing, because the Sand had chang'd its place. Coming to an Anchor before Flushing, two of the Company came aboard to welcome us home, and to advise us to lock our Chests, and put our marks upon them; for all Chests are carry'd into the East India House, where when the owners come for them, they are order'd to op'n them, lest they should have any counterband goods therein. Thereupon I set a mark upon my Chests, and went ashore, after I had giv'n a good character of the Captain, and his civility to me all the Voyage, and thence proceed by Land to Middleburgh.

Four days after I came to Middleburgh, I went to fetch my Chests; and finding the two Directors there, one a Zealander, the other of Horn, who came first aboard us; I produc'd my Keys, and offer'd my Chests to be open'd. But the Zealander more civil than the Horner, deliver'd me my Keys again, and taking my word, told me I was free to take away my goods. And indeed I have always observ'd, that the Northern people are always more rude and ungentile than the Southern.

As for the 17500 Florins which the General of Batavia promis'd should be paid me upon my arrival in Holland, I receiv'd so many delays and put off's, that I was at length forc'd to commenced a Suit that lasted above two years; nor could I get a publick Notary either at Amsterdam or the Hague, that would make me out a protest, every one fearing the Directors, who were both Judges and Parties. At length after five years wrangling and jangling, the Director wrote to my Brother at Batavia (for I was then return'd again to the Indies) that if I would accept of 10000 Livres, he might receive it for me; which he did, and was forc'd to give them an acquittance form the whole.

This is the return which I made from the Indies in the year 1649, and the only time that ever I return'd by Sea; having perform'd all the rest of my Travels by Land, not counting my short Voyages through the Mediterranean for any thing. And as for my first Travels, perform'd them all by Land, from Paris through Germany and Hungary, as far as Constantinople; whither I return'd again in the year 1669. From Constantinople I went to Smyrna, thence I sail'd for Ligorn; from Ligorn I travel'd by Land to Genoa, thence to Turin, and so to Paris.

Author's Deſign.

I Queſtion not but that ſeveral Relations of the Grand Seignor's Seraglio have been publiſh'd; but I am to acknowledge withal that I have not had the leiſure to read any one of them. I have travell'd ſix ſeveral times, by Land, into the Eaſt, and by different Roads, during the ſpace of Forty Years; and moſt perſons know, that my Employments were ſuch, as would not allow me much time for the reading of Books. But when my Affairs afforded me any remiſſion, I wholly employ'd thoſe ſpare hours, in the collection of things the moſt worthy to be remark'd, whether the Scene lay in Turkey, or in Perſia, or in the Indies; on this, or the other ſide of the River Ganges, or in the Diamond-Mines, which are in the Territories of divers Princes. While I am buſied in putting into order thoſe Memories, which I conceive my ſelf oblig'd to gratify the Publick withal, I make it a Preſent of this Relation of the Seraglio, attended with ſome Obſervations ſufficiently remarkable, which, haply, will not be unpleaſant.

The Ottoman Court, which makes ſo much noiſe in the World, has not, to my thinking, been yet ſufficiently well known, if I may judge of it, by what I have ſeen thereof my ſelf, and have heard from ſeveral Perſons. I do here communicate a faithful and ample deſcription thereof: which I have extracted, as well out of what I had obſerv'd my ſelf, in the ſeveral Voyages I made to Conſtantinople, as out of the informations I receiv'd from two intelligent Perſons, who had ſpent many years in the Seraglio, in very conſiderable Employments. One of whom was a Sicilian, advanc'd to the Charge of Chaſnadar-bachi, or chief Officer belonging to the Treaſury; and after Five and Fifty years Service in the Seraglio, was, for ſome ſlight miſcarriage committed by him, baniſh'd to a place near Burſa, in Natolia, from whence he made his eſcape into the Indies. The other, a Pariſian-born, named De Vienne, had been one of the Pages of the Treaſury. In his Return from the Jubilee at Rome, in the Year M.DC.L. being aboard a Brigantine bound from Civita Vecchia to Marſeilles, he was taken by the Pyrates of Tripoli, and the Baſſa finding that young Lad well ſhap'd, and looking like one that promis'd much, ſent him, as a Preſent, to the Grand Seignor. He was alſo pack'd away out of the Seraglio, after Fifteen Years Service, only upon this ſcore, that there was ſome diſcovery made, of his holding a ſecret correſpondence with the diſgrac'd Sicilian, who had heretofore ſhewn him much kindneſs, and indeed it was by his credit that the Pariſian was firſt advanc'd to the Chamber of the Treaſury.

From thoſe two men, who were in a fair capacity to make exact Obſervations of things, have I extracted the better part of this Relation. Though they had been forc'd to embrace the erroneous perſwaſion of Mahomet, yet were there ſome Relicks of the good ſentiments of Chriſtianity: And whereas there was not the leaſt hope of recovering the honours, wherein they pride themſelves who are exalted to Charges in the Seraglio, it is not to be imagin'd, that they could have any deſign to diſguiſe things to me. They themſelves thought it a certain pleaſure to deſcend to a greater familiarity of Diſcourſe, and to ſpecifie even the leaſt circumſtances: but I am to diſcover withal, that having had their education amongſt the Turks, and learnt of them, to love Money, it muſt have been ſo much the greater charge to me, to give them content. I have kept them for a conſiderable ſpace of time, at my own charge, and that in ſeveral places, one at Iſpahan in Perſia, and the other in the Indies, where they had made their reſidences, and the Memoires which they ſupply'd me withal were perfectly concordant.

To the Inſtructions, which I made a ſhift to get from thoſe two men, and to what diſcoveries I may have made my ſelf, of the preſent ſtate of the Grand Seignor's Palace, I ſhall add ſome neceſſary Obſervations of the Manners and Cuſtomes of ſeveral Provinces of the Ottoman Empire, ſlightly paſſing over thoſe things, which, in all probability, are generally known. But that the Reader may with greater eaſe comprehend the matters I treat of, and that the diſcourſe may not be interrupted, by the neceſſary explication of the ſeveral names of Charges and Dignities, I have thought it fit, in the firſt place, to give a ſhort Liſt of them, after which ſhall follow another, of the different Species of Money, which are current all over the Turkiſh Empire.

The Origine of the Grandees of the Port.

THey who are advanc'd to Charges, whether it be in the Seraglio, or in the Empire (excepting only the Eunuchs, of whom I ſhall give an account anon) are generally rais'd out of the Children taken in War, or ſent by way of Preſents, by the Baſſa's, or out of the Tributary Children, who, about nine or ten years of Age, are taken out of their Mothers arms, through all the Provinces ſubdu'd by the Ottoman Princes. They are all to be of Chriſtian Parents; and counting only the Slaves taken from the Enemy, we find the Regiſters of the Cuſtom-houſe of Conſtantinople alone, that, of both Sexes, there are brought thither every year near twenty thouſand. The Inhabitants of the leſſer Tartary, who make continual Incurſions into all the Countries, that are in hoſtility againſt the Ottoman Empire, ſend up vaſt numbers of them, and the Grand Seignor having the choice of all thoſe young Children, the beſt ſhap'd, and ſuch as have the moſt promiſing looks, are diſtributed into ſeveral Seraglio's, to be there inſtructed in the Law of Mahomet, and all ſorts of Exerciſes. And afterwards, out of the choice or cullings of theſe laſt is the Seraglio of Conſtantinople repleniſh'd; and they are to be diſtinguiſh'd into two Orders. The firſt and the moſt eminent is that of the Ichoglans, deſign'd for the great Charges and Dignities of the Empire: The ſecond, that of the Azamoglans, employ'd in ſuch Offices as require only ſtrength of body. The Ichoglans are thoſe, in whom, beſides the accompliſhments of the Body, they diſcover alſo a noble Genius, fit for a high Education, and ſuch as may render them capable of ſerving their Prince, ſome time or other.

The ſevere Diſcipline of the Seraglio.

Theſe are accordingly inſtructed with great care, and educated with the obſervance of a moſt ſevere Diſcipline. They paſs through four ſeveral Chambers, called Oda's, which are as it were four Forms, where they learn, in order, whatever is convenient for young perſons, who are to be continually about a great Prince, and are as it were his Pages or Gentlemen. If they commit the leaſt fault, they are ſeverely chaſtis'd; and there is a great ſtock of patience requiſite, for any one to be advanc'd to the fourth Oda, which when they have attain'd, they begin to take a little breath. But the hopes of being exalted to the greateſt Honours, and the moſt eminent Dignities, makes them endure the barbarous treatments of the Eunuchs, who are appointed to be their Maſters, and are very liberal of the Baſtinado to them. I ſhall give an account elſewhere of the manner of their Education, and of thoſe four Oda's, or Chambers, where they learn thoſe things, whereby they are qualifi'd for the Charges, for which the Grand Seignor deſigns them. Though it be appointed by the received Cuſtom of the Empire, that thoſe Children ſhould be all deſcended from Chriſtian Parents, of the beſt extraction, and the beſt ſhap'd that can be found; yet the Capi-Aga, or Grand Maſter of the Seraglio, the Principal of the white Eunuchs, who hath the chief Command over the Ichoglans, ſticks not to admit into their number ſome natural Turks, ſuch as may be recommendable, upon the ſcore of their good qualities and endowments: But that happens very ſeldom, and that not without the particular permiſſion of the Prince, who would rather have all thoſe Children to be Renegado-Chriſtians.

And

And this is the Origine of the Great Persons belonging to the Grand Seignor, and the Port. They are all Slaves, and not having any knowledge of their Parents, or Relations, they wholly apply their Affections to the Service of their Prince, who has been pleas'd to advance them to such high Fortunes.

The Authority of the four Principal Bassa's, of dangerous consequence to the Grand Seignor, and how he can take it off.

The Bassa's therefore are taken out of the Order of the Ichoglans, and the name of Bassa, or Basha, is only a Title of Honour and Dignity, common to all the Grandees of the Port, who are distinguishable, according to the difference of their Charges. The four Principal are these. The Vizir-Azem, or Grand Vizir, the Caimacan, the Bassa of the Sea, and the Aga of the Janizaries. The Authority of these four Bassa's is so great, that sometimes they deprive their Sovereign of the Crown, and bestow it on whom they please; as it has happen'd, in our Age, to two Emperours immediately succeeding one the other, Mustapha and Osman, of whom the later dy'd in Prison, by the infamous hand of a common Executioner. But on the other side, if these Bassa's know not how to take their measures rightly, they lose their heads upon the least miscarriage, the Grand Seignor seizing to himself all their Estates at their death, and taking their Children into the Seraglio. Nay, these last are so far from succeeding their Fathers, either as to wealth or imployments, even though it were the Son of a Grand Vizir, or of a Sister of the Emperour himself, that the highest advancement they are admitted to, is to be made Captains of Gallies; the policy of the Turks not permitting, that in any one House there should be a transference of power from Father to Son, that so they may be prevented from taking any occasions to disturb the State. It may be seen by this account of them, that the fortune of the Bassa's, which for a time seems so splendid, is but a tottering fortune, upon which neither the Son, nor the Father himself, what repute soever he may be in, can make any sure reliance.

Observations upon the Standards.

The Bassa's, who have the denomination of Vizirs, carry three Banners or Standards, at the top of which there is a Horse-tayl fasten'd, put into what colour they please themselves, green only excepted, though they are permitted to paint the Staff, to which the Standard is fasten'd, with that colour. The Origine of this Custom was thus, according to the Story which the Turks relate of it. Having one day given Battel to the Christians, their Standard was taken in the heat of the Engagement, and the General of the Turks perceiving that the loss of the Standard was a discouragement to the Souldiers, who were beginning to take their flight, he with a Cymitar cut off a Horse's tayl, and fasten'd it to the top of a Half Pike, and advanc'd it on high, crying out, Here is the Grand Standard, let him who loves me follow me. Immediately the Turks re-assum'd Courage, and having rally'd, renew'd the Charge, and gain'd the Victory. The Officers who are about the Persons of the Bassa's, have also their Standards, but they are not allow'd to add thereto one of those tayls; and it is to be observ'd, that the Bassa's, who are not Vizirs, can carry but two of them; as the Beys, who are inferiour to the Bassa's, and Governours of lesser Provinces, carry but one of them. When the Grand Seignor goes into the Country, there are seven Stanards carry'd, in regard that according to the Turks, the world is divided into seven parts, or seven Climats whereof the Grand Seignor is Master, if taken according to its breadth, and 'tis for that reason that in their Language, they give him the Title of Master of all Kings. This is grounded upon what Mahomet said, That he, who after his death, should be Master of those Territories, where his Sepulchre were found, should assume the Title of Master or Chief of all the Kings upon Earth. They add, that there are but three Empires, which are, those of Constantinople, Babylon and Trebizond: And 'tis for that reason, that the Grand Seignor wears three plumes of black Heron-tops in his Turbant. Take Notice by the way, that they are only the Herons of Candia which have their tops perfectly black, the Herons of all other Countries having them, either white, or of a mixt Colour. And because there must be a considerable quantity of them to make up a plume, it must accordingly be of a very great value, which possibly has occasion'd its being cut of use in Europe: For as to all the Princes of Asia, they have still a great esteem for the Heron-tops; but they must not have the least defect, and if the points of them be ever so little broken, there is no account made of them, as being things of very little value. By those three Heron-tops upon the Grand Seignor's Turbant, it is known that the Grand Vizier is in the Army; inasmuch as at that time, he wears but two of them, and the thing is worthy our Obſervation. When the Army is to march, the Grand Seignor gives Order for the drawing up thoſe Troops which are at Conſtantinople, and the parts adjacent, and having the Grand Vizir near him, he preſents him to them for their General. The Souldiers, at that time, ſay not a word, nor do they make the ordinary ſalute, till after the Grand Seignor has caus'd one plume of the Heron-tops to be taken out of his Turbant, and to be put upon that of the Grand Vizir; and upon that Ceremony, the whole Army ſalutes him, and acknowledge him for their General, and from that very time are to receive their Pay from him.

Having ſpoken of the Baſſa's in general, it is requiſite I ſhould give ſome Idea of thoſe who are advanc'd to the principal Charges of the Empire, and I ſhall bring into that Liſt, the Grand Vizir, accompany'd by ſix others, who have the quality of Vizirs, the Caimacan, the Baſſa of the Sea, and the Aga of the Janizaries; after whom I ſhall come down to the Beglierbeys, and to the Sangiacbeys, and to the Boſſangi-bachi, who has one of the moſt eminent Charges of the Port.

The Honours and Diſadvantages attending the Charge of Grand Vizir.

The Vizir-Azem, or Grand Vizir, is the Lieutenant-General of the Empire, and of the Armies, the principal Perſon of the Council, and he who, under the Grand Seignor's Orders, has the abſolute diſpoſal of all Affaris, relating to the State, or to the War, having in his cuſtody the Imperial Seal. He is attended by, and has aſſiſtant to him, in the Divan, ſix other Vizirs, whom they call Vizirs of the bench, and who are properly Counſellors of State, but yet ſuch as have not any deliberative voice, and come not into the Divan, but only to be conſulted upon ſome point of Law, wherein they are well skill'd, without intermedling with the government of the State; or concerning themſelves in any Affair, unleſs their advice be requir'd. There are alſo five Beglerbeys, on whom the Grand Seignor beſtows the qualification of Vizirs, and are poſſeſs'd of the greateſt anh wealthieſt Governments of the Empire, to wit, the Baſſa's of Babylon, Cairo, Buda, Natolia and Romania. The three former, who are the three principal, had heretofore the priviledge (excluſively to all the other Baſſa's) of having caried before them (in the ſame manner as the Grand Vizir had) the three Horſe-tayls, of which I have related the Story. But at the preſent, that priviledge extends to the two other Baſſa's of Natolia and Romania, and they are all five equal, as to that point.

I am now to return to the Grand Vizir, who has a magnificent Court, anſwerable to the greatneſs of the Maſter, whom he ſerves, and there are in his houſe above two thouſand Domeſticks. Though he lyes expos'd, as well as the other Baſſa's, to the indignation of the Prince, and forc'd to ſend him his Head, when he requires it; yet does the Grand Seignor, in the Affairs of greateſt importance, and ſuch as concern the State, comply much with the Sentiments of his Grand Vizir, and his Propoſitions in Council are as ſo many definitive Sentences. 'Tis that which renders his Power ſo abſolute, that in all the Empires and Kingdoms of the World, there is not any chief Miniſter of State whoſe Authority can be parallel'd to that of the Grand Vizir. Whoever comes to make him a Viſit, he riſes not out of his Chair, either to give him a reception, or to conduct him out again, unleſs it be the Mufti, who is the principal Perſon relating to the Law (of Mahomet) upon whoſe acceſs, the Grand Seignor himſelf riſes from his Throne. But this particularly worth our obſervation, That as it belongs only to the Grand Vizir, to propoſe all Affairs of importance, ſo does it concern him to be very careful, not to advance any thing that may be diſpleaſing to the Grand Seignor; for if it ſhould ſo happen, he gives immediate Order for the ſtrangling of him, without making him any anſwer at all, upon this Maxime of the Ottoman Court, that there muſt not be any thing propos'd to the Prince, which may give him any cauſe of diſſatisfaction.

A Priviledge particular to the Caimacan.

The Caimacan is the Captain, and Governour of the City of Conſtantinople, Lieutenant to the Grand Vizir, yet ſo as not to have any Authority, but only in his abſence; And then he performs all the functions of that important Charge; he has the abſolute Command and gives Audience to Ambaſſadors. He is not ſubject, as the other Baſſa's are, to that rigorous neceſſity of reſigning his Head; upon this account, that if he does any thing, which may be diſpleaſing to the Grand Seignor, he lays the blame thereof upon the Grand Vizir, from whom he receives his Orders.

The Baſſa of the Sea is the Admiral, and Captain-General of the Naval Forces. The Beys, Governours of the Maritime Provinces, and ſuch as are oblig'd to maintain the Grand Seignor's Galleys in good order, are to obey the Commands they receive from him, and to go to Sea upon the firſt advertiſement they receive to that purpoſe. The

The Janizary-Aga, whom the Turks call Yengeri-Agasi, is the Colonel-General of the Janizaries. The Charge is very considerable, inasmuch as the Turkish Infantry, at this time, does for the most part pass under the name of Janizaries, though such as are really Janizaries, who derive their Institution from Ottoman the First, and their great Priviledges from Amurath the Third, do not at this day amount to a Body of above five and twenty thousand Men. They have excellent Regulations amongst themselves, and are distributed into several Chambers, in the spacious Lodgings, whereof they are possess'd, whether it be at Constantinople, or in other places. The order observ'd there is so excellent in all things, and so exactly maintain'd, that they live more like Religious Persons, than Souldiers; and though they are not forbidden to marry, yet it is very seldom that they do it. The great Priviledges which they enjoy all over the Empire, wherein they are so highly respected, induce abundance of Persons, meerly in order to their exemption from the paying of Taxes, and their being discharg'd from publick Duties, to prevail with the Officers, by Money, to protect them, and make them pass for Janizaries. But they receive no Pay from the Prince, and all their advantage is restrain'd to the enjoyment of those Priviledges, which indeed are great enough. It is by this intermixture of the real Janizaries, with those who are admitted by corruption, that the number of them amounts at this day to above a hundred thousand; and yet not accounting any but such as are effectively Janizaries, their Body has sometimes been so dreadful, as that they have unthron'd the Ottoman Monarchs, and chang'd the whole face of the Empire of a sudden.

The number the real Janizaries.

The Power of their Aga is very great, and there is not any Person can approach the Prince, as he is permitted to do. For he may come into the Grand Seignor's presence, with his arms at absolute liberty, and with a confident deportment, whereas all the other Grandees of the Port, without any exception, even to the Grand Vizir himself, dare not appear before him, otherwise than with their arms cross their bodies, and the hands one upon the other, on the breast, as a mark of a profound submission.

The great Priviledge of the Aga.

The Beglerbeys are, in dignity, next the four first Bassa's, and are as 'twere so many Soveraigns, in the general Governments of the Empire, whereof the Grand Seignor bestows the Command on them. But in regard it is not my design to speak of the Government of Turkey, any further than is requisite for the Subject whereof I treat, there is not any necessity that I should inform the Reader of the number of those Beglerbeys, and it is enough that I have nam'd the five principal ones, of whom I shall have occasion to speak elsewhere. I shall only add here, That those great Bassa's have under them a certain number of Sangiac-Beys, who are Governours of Sangiacs, or particular Provinces, as the Sangiacbey of Salonica, or of Morea.

And whereas there will also be frequently mention'd some others, under the Denominations of Spahis, Zaims and Chiaoux, we must give a short account of those three sorts of Persons.

The Spahis, who make up a Body of about fifteen thousand Men, are a kind of Knights, who would pass for the Gentry or Nobility of the Country, and stand very much upon their Gallantry. They are maintain'd out of the Revenue of the Timars, that is to say, out of the Mannors, or Commanderies, which the Grand Seignor bestows on them, according to the recompence he would make them for their services. Those Timars cannot be taken away from them, unless they be negligent in their duty, which is, that they should be in the Army, when the Grand Vizir is there in person. These are the happiest persons in all the Ottoman Empire, and as it were petty Soveraigns, in he places where they command.

The Zaims differ not much from the Spahis, and, as the other, have the Command and Revenues of certain Lands, or Fiefs, which the Grand Seignor bestows on them. There is a very great number of them over all the Empire, and they look on themselves, as the Lords and Barons of the Country. The Turkish Cavalry consists of the Zaims and the Spahis, and they know what number of Horse they are to bring into Field, according to the Revenue of their Timars.

The Chaoüx, or Chiaoux-Bachi, is the Chief of all the Chaoux of the Empire, whose imployment it is to carry the Prince's Commands, to any part either within his Territories, or without, and to be sent upon Embassies, though indded they are but as so many Messengers, or Expresses. 'Tis ordinarily into their custody that Prisoners of Quality are committed, and they suffer them not to be out of their sight.

And thus you have an account of the principal charges and Dignities of the Empire, all poſſeſs'd by Perſons taken out of the rank of the Ichoglans. I now come to the Officers of the Seraglio, and in regard they are Eunuchs, on whom the Grand Seignor beſtows the moſt eminent Charges, and who, beſides, have the Government of the Ichoglans, I ſhall follow the order of the things, in my placing of them here, before I ſay ought of the ſecond order or rank of tributary Children, or ſuch as are taken in War, who are the Azamoglans.

The prodigious number of Eunuchs all over the Eaſt.

Of the Eunuchs there are alſo two ranks. There are ſome white, who have endur'd only a ſimple caſtration; and there are black ones, who have all cut off, even with the belly. Both ſorts of them are ſevere, humorous and moroſe, and their Treatments are almoſt inſupportable to all thoſe who are under their Charge. There is a prodigious number of them, as well in Conſtantinople, as all over the Empire, and generally all over the Eaſtern parts of the World, where there is hardly a private Perſon, having any thing of abilities, but keeps an Eunuch or two, as Sentinels over his Women. And 'tis this that cauſes ſo great a commerce of Eunuchs in ſeveral parts of Aſia and Africk, and in the ſingle Kingdom of Colconda, where I chanc'd to be in the year 1659. there were put off of them in that very year about two and twenty thouſand. It comes into my mind, that the Grand Mogor's Ambaſſador, in whoſe Country that Barbariſm is not ſuffer'd, but the Eunuchs he makes uſe of are brought out of other places, took me one day aſide, to tell me that he car'd not how ſoon he return'd into his own Country, out of the fear he was in, leſt that Kingdom of Colconda might ſink into the ground, after ſuch cruelties. Moſt of the Fathers and Mothers, who are extreamly poor, and have no love for their Children, and whom they are alſo afraid that they cannot maintain, have no other ſhift, upon the firſt dearth of Proviſions, than to ſell them to certain Merchants, who afterwards have them gelt, and ſometimes make clear work, and cut of all. Some of thoſe who have not any thing leſt, when they would urine, are forc'd to make uſe of a little Cane or Pipe, and to put it to the bottom of the belly. And whereas few eſcape after ſo dangerous an operation, ſuch are accordingly much dearer than the others, and they are ſold in Perſia and Turkey at the raſe of ſix hundred Crowns; when a hundred, or a hundred and fifty, is the price of the ordinary Eunuchs. For the ſupply therefore of all Turkey, all Perſia, all the Indies, and all the Provinces of Africa, it may be eaſily judg'd that there muſt come millions of them from ſeveral places. The Kingdom of Colcunda, in the Peninſula on this ſide Ganges, and the Kingdoms of Aſſan, Boutan, Arachan, and Pegu, on the other ſide of it, afford a prodigious number of them. All theſe Eunuchs are either white, or of duskiſh colour. The black Eunuchs, who are brought out of Africa, much inferiour in point of number, are, as I ſaid, much the dearer. The moſt deformed yield the greateſt price, their extream uglineſs being look'd on as beauty in their kind. A flat Noſe, a frightful Aſpect, a large Mouth, thick Lips, the Teeth black, and ſtanding at a diſtance one from another (for ordinarily the Moors have fair Teeth) are ſo many advantages to the Merchants who ſell them. The Seraglio at Conſtantinople is full of theſe two ſorts of Eunuchs: The black are deſign'd for the cuſtody of the Apartment where the Women are, and ſent to Court by the Baſſa's of Grand-Cairo. The white, who are ſomewhat leſs ſavage, and have been educated with ſome care, are for the Grand Seignor's own Apartment.

Obſervations upon this Subject.

The principal Charges of the Seraglio.

The four principal Eunuchs, who approach the Prince's Perſon, are the Hazodabachi, the Chaſnadarbachi, the Kilargibachi, and the Sarai-Agaſi, who have for their Superiour the Capi-Aga, who has the ſuperintendency of all the Chambers of the Ichoglans. They ordinarily ſucceed one the other, that is to ſay, the Sarai-Agaſi ſucceeds the Kilargibachi; the Kilargibachi ſucceeds the Chaſnadarbachi; and the laſt named ſucceeds the Hazodabachi; and in fine, the Hazodabachi ſucceeds the Capi-Aga, who is always of the longeſt ſtanding in ſervice of the white Eunuchs.

The noble Advantages of the Aga.

The Capi-Aga, or Capou-Agaſi, is as it were the Grand Maſter of the Seraglio, he is the principal in dignity and repute of all the white Eunuchs, and he is always near the Grand Seignor's Perſon, where-ever he is. He is the Perſon who introduces Ambaſſadors to Audience, and all great Affairs paſſing through his hands, e're they come into thoſe of the Prince, his Charge renders him neceſſary to all others, and procures him many rich Preſents. All thoſe perſons alſo who are to make any Preſent to the Grand Seignor, muſt addreſs themſelves to the Capi-Aga, in order to their being preſented ſented to his Highneſs, of which he makes great Advantages. No Man can enter into the Emperour's Apartment, nor get out of it, without his Order; and when the Grand Vizir would ſpeak to him, 'tis the Capi-Aga's place, to take and preſent him to his Highneſs. Whether it be by night or by day, if there happen ſome preſſing Affair, whereof the Vizir would give the Grand Seignor immediate notice in writing, the Capi-Aga receives it from him and brings him the anſwer thereto. He wears his Turbant in the Seraglio, and rides up and down on Horſe-back, by a Priviledge particularly annex'd to his Charge. He accompanies the Grand Seignor even into the Apartment of the Sultaneſſes, but he ſtays at the door, as having no Command in that place. When he leaves the Seraglio, upon his being diſmiſs'd from his Charge, which very ſeldom happens, he cannot be a Baſſa. As to his Table, all is at the Prince's Charge, and he has over and above ten Sultanines a day, which amount to ſixty Livers, French Money. There have been ſome Capi-Aga's who have dy'd worth two millions, all which return'd into the Grand Seignor's Coffers. The chief of the white Eunuchs is attended by four others, who next to him have the principal Charges of the Grand Seignor's Quarter.

The Hazodabachi, is, as it were, the Lord High-Chamberlain, having under his Charge the forty Pages of the Chamber, who ordinarily approach the Grand Seignor's Perſon.

The Serai-Agaſi has the general Superintendency of all the Chambers of the Grand Seignor's Quarter, as to what relates to Embelliſhment, and the neceſſary Reparations. He has a particular inſpection over the Seferli Odaſi, which is the Chamber of the Pages, who are to look after the Grand Seignor's Linnen, and attend him in his Progreſſes. 'Tis incumbent alſo upon him to give Order for their Cloaths, and whatever elſe they ſtand in need of: And his Charge does ſomewhat reſemble that of Captain of the Louver-Caſtle, in France, ſince it is his work generally to make proviſion for whatever may contribute to the decency and well-ordering of that great Palace. He has for his Aſſiſtant, or Lieutenant, the Seraiket-Odaſi, who is alſo an Eunuch, whoſe imployment it is to have the Tapiſtry and Carpets which are ſpread upon the Floors, in the Halls and Lodgings of the Seraglio, chang'd every ſix months.

The Haznadar, or Chaznadar-Bachi, is the chief Intendant of the Treaſury, and has the inſpection of the conduct and deportment of the Pages of that Camber. Which is not to be underſtood of the Treaſury, deſign'd for the exigencies of the State, and the ordinary Pay of the Souldiery, and whereof the Grand Vizir, and the three Teſterdars, or Treaſurers-General have the Keys, and Intendency. But I here ſpeak of, is the place where they keep the Jewels of the Crown, and all the other Rarities, and the wealth gather'd together, from Father to Son, by the Ottoman Princes; which I ſhall endeavour to lay down diſtinctly, before the Reader's proſpect, in my Relation, when I come to open to him both the Treaſuries. However it is to be obſerv'd, that the Chaznadar-bachi has only the honorary title of chief of the Treaſury, nay, that he cannot ſo much as enter into it, ſince that in the Reign of Sultan Amurat, the Pages of the Treaſury having complain'd to the Grand Seignor of the ill conduct of that Eunuch, he, upon their Petition, order'd that the Chaznadar-bachi ſhould no longer have any Command there, and that the Chaznaket-odaſi ſhould for the future exerciſe his Charge, without depriving him of the title thereof. But in regard the Chaznadar-bachi is the better known, and the more pronounceable Name, I ſhall always make uſe of it, inſtead of the other; and we muſt not omit giving you this remark, That when the Chief, or Overſeer of the Treaſury, is remov'd from his Charge, he is made a Baſſa. Upon this counterchanging of theſe two Officers of the Seraglio, it is to be obſerv'd, That, amongſt all the Mahumetan Princes, Turks, Perſians, Indians, and of what Sect ſoever they may be of, what has been order'd and eſtabliſh'd in the Reign of one Prince, is never revok'd by his Succeſſor: And under the ſame Sultan Amurat, the Capou-Agaſi having committed ſome little impertinence, whereat the Grand Seignor took offence, he excluded thenceforwards all the Capou-Agaſi's, who ſhould be remov'd out of the Seraglio, from the priviledge of coming into a capacity to be made Baſſa's. I ſhall not think it much to alledge upon this particular, another example of that Maxime, of which I was an eye-witneſs my ſelf, in the King of Perſia's Court. 'Twas in the Reign of Scach Abas, againſt whom ſome Grandees of the Court had enter'd into a Conſpiracy, and attempted attempted to take away the King's Life, yet with a deſign to have put his Son into the Throne. About Two or Three in the afternoon, when every one in Perſia is retir'd to the Haram, which is the Appartment of the Women, the Conſpirators ſent to the Palaces twenty Men well arm'd, with Order, firſt, to put to the Sword all they ſhould find at the Gates, which ordinarily are guarded only by two or three Men, armed with a maſſy Club, and afterwards to go and murther the King himſelf in the Haram, which would be but poorly defended by black and white Eunuchs, who are poor Souldiers. But the intended blow of the Conſpirators was prevented, and the chief Porter, a Perſon accounted one of the moſt valiant of his time, being in his Station, with two of his Servants, Georgians by Country, that is to ſay, valiant, as all thoſe People are, fell upon the Traitors with his Cuttelas, and beat them back ſo ſmartly, that they thought it the beſt way to run for't. The King having been inform'd of that action, order'd him to be brought into his Preſence, and after he had commended him, made this eſtabliſhment, That the Charge of chief Porter, ſhould ever continue in his Family, from Father to Son. He alſo commanded the Keeper of the Archives, or Records, to inſert that action into the Hiſtory, and wiſh'd that his own Name might be daſh'd out of it, and all that had been done during his Reign, if any of his Succeſſors attempted to change any thing of his Will, and deprive the Houſe of that Faithful Georgian of that Charge.

The Kilargi-bachi is the chief Governour of the Pages of the Kilar, which is the place where they keep all the exquiſite Drinks for the Grand Seignor's own drinking. It is a kind of Cup-bearers Office, and the Kilargi-bachi, a kind of Cup-bearer; and he is alſo made a Baſſa, upon his removal from the Charge of Kilargi-bachi. He is moreover the Chief or all the Akegis, who are the Cooks and Confectioners, ſince no Body can have any entrance into thoſe Offices, but by his Order; and he has under his cuſtody all the Plate, which is for the peculiar ſervice of the Grand Seignor. This Officer has for his Subſtitute the Kilarketodaſi. Now having told you, that, upon the reſignation of his Charge, he is made a Baſſa, it were not amiſs to advertiſe you further, That they who are remov'd out of the Seraglio, in order to their being Baſſa's, ought to have been of the number of the forty Pages of the Chamber, and to have paſs'd through one of theſe ſix Charges, of Chaſnaketodaſi, and of Kilarketodaſi, of whom I have ſpoken already, of Dogangibachi, of the Chokadar, of the Seligdar, and of the Rikabdar, of whom I ſhall diſcourſe anon. Otherwiſe, they can only be Beys, or Zaims, or Spahis, or at moſt, but Capigibachis, by the Grand Seignor's ſingular favour. The caſe is the ſame with the Cugombachi, who is the ſecond Perſon of the Office of the Treaſury, as alſo with the Anakdar-Agaſi, who is the third. If theſe People remove out of the Seraglio, before they are admitted into the number of the Forty Pages of the Chamber, they have only a certain Pay, more or leſs, the higheſt whereof amounts not to above two hundred Aſpers. I proceed to the other Officers of the Seraglio, of whom there will be ſome mention made in my Relation.

The Dogangi-bachi is the Grand Falconer, and his Charge makes him a conſiderable Perſon about the Prince.

The Chokadar is he who carries the Royal Robe,, called the Ciamberluc, the ſame Officer which the French call Portemanteau.

The Rikabdar is he who holds the Stirrup, when the Grand Seignor gets on Horſeback.

The Seligdar is the firſt of the Pages of the Chamber; he carries the Grand Seignor's Sword upon days of Ceremony, and they ordinarily advance to that Charge one of the handſomeſt Pages.

The Hammangibachi is the chief Overſeer of the Bath. When he leaves the Seraglio, as alſo when the Kamachirbachi, who is the chiefeſt of the Pages of Seferli, does ſo; their Pay is an hundered Aſpers a day; and if they are in favour, it may amount to an hundered an fifty. It is to be obſerv'd in the general, that when any one of the Forty Pages of the Chamber is remov'd, the vacancy is ſupply'd ſometimes out of the Treaſury, ſometimes out of the Kilar, and ſometimes out of the Seferli, and in that they take their turns. They always take out the moſt ancient; and they who were next to them come into their places. How that is done, we ſhall take occaſion to explicate more plainly in the Chapter of the Treaſury.

The

The Chiamcibachi is the grand Laundry-man, or the Principal of those, who wash and order the Grand Seignor's Linnen.

The Giritbey is the chief Director of those who are exercis'd in shooting with the Bowe, and casting the Dart. These two Exercises are much practis'd every Friday, in a place of the Seraglio, appointed for that Divertisement. Thus have you, in few words, an account of whatever relates to the principal Charges of the Seraglio, possess'd by those who have pass'd through the Chambers of the Ichoglans.

The Black, or Negro-Eunuchs, of whom I have but a word more to say, additionally to what I have intimated before, are appointed to guard the Appartment of the Women, and they make choice for that Office, of the most deform'd and the most Æsopical, that can be found. They are all cut even with the belly, ever since the time of Solyman the Second, who being one day in the fields, and seeing a Gelding offering to leap a Mare, inferr'd thence, that the Eunuchs, who Kept his Wives, might likewise endeavour to satisfie their passions; for which he bethought himself of a present remedy, by ordering them to have all cut off; and his Successors have since observ'd that Rule. There is a great number of those Negro-Eunuchs, and they have their variety of Chambers, and their Regulations, as the white ones have. I say nothing here of their different Employments, and the Reader will find, in the Chapter concerning the Appartment of the Women, all can be known, that's certain upon that Subject.

The credit and wealth of the Kislar-Agasi, who keeps the Appartment of the Women.

The Kislar-Agasi, or, as others name him, the Kuezer-Agasi which is as much, in our Language, as to say, the Guardian of the Virgins, is the chiefest of all the Negro-Eunuchs, and is of equal authority and credit with the Capi-Aga, who is the Supreme of the white Eunuchs. The former is the Overseer of the Appartmeni of the Women, has the Keys of the Doors in his custody, and has access to the Emperor when he pleases himself. The charge he is possess'd of brings him in Presents from all parts; and there are not any such made to the Sultannesses, by the Bassa's, and other Persons, who stand in need of their favour, in reference to the Sultan, but there comes along with it one to himself, which makes him one of the richest and most considerable Officers, belonging to the Seraglio.

I come now to the Azamoglans, who make the second Order of young Lads, wherewith the Seraglio is repleniſh'd, and out of whose number they take such as are design'd for mean Officers, of whom I shall give you the List.

The Azamoglans as well as the Ichoglans, are, as I said before, Tributary Children, taken away from the Christians or made Captives, by Sea, or Land. They make choice of the handsomest, the best shap'd, and most robust, for the Seraglio, and they have neither wages nor allowances of any profit, unless they be advanc'd to some small Employments. Nor can they attain those, till after many years Services, and what is then allow'd them does not amount to above four Aspers and a half per diem. As for those who are brought up in other places, under the simple denomination of Azamoglans, and are not receiv'd into the Seraglio at Constantinople, their fortune can amount no higher, than to become Zanizaries.

When these young Boys are brought up to Constantinople, the first distribution which is made of them is into the Seraglio's, or Royal Houses of the Grand Seignor: there are some of them left in the City, to be put to Trades, and others are sent to Sea, to serve for seamen, and so gain experience in Navigation, by which means they capacitate themselves for some Employments. But to confine our discourse to the Azamoglans receiv'd into the great Seraglio, they are imploy'd in several Offices, and some of them are made Bostangis, some Capigis, some Atagis, some Halvagis, and some, Baltagis; which terms I shall explicate to the Reader in as few words as I can.

The Bostangis are they who are employ'd in the Gardens of the Seraglio, out of whose number they take out those who are to row in the Grand Seignor's Brigantines, when he has a a mind to divert himself in fishing, or take the air upon the Canal. They who thus serve in the Brigantines, and row on the right hand, may be advanc'd to the charge of Bostangi-Bachi, which is one of the most considerable places of the Seraglio: But they who row on the left hand, are capable only of the mean Employments, wich are bestow'd in the Gardens. If it happen that any one of them break his Oar, by strength of rowing in the Grand Seignor's presence, his Higness immediately orders him a gratuity of fifty Crowns; and there is also a certain distribution made of some Money to the others, as the Grand Seignor takes his diversion in the Brigantine. Their greatest Pay, after they have served some years, is seven Aspers and a half per diem, besides clothing and diet, which they all equally have.

and

Bostangi-bachi one of the noblest Charges of the Port.

The Bostangi-Bachi has the general Intendancy or Over-sight of all the Grand Seignor's Gardens, as well those of Constantinople as those of the neighbouring Villages, and commands above ten thousand Bostangis, who are employ'd in the culture of them. Though he be taken out of the meanest rank of the Azamoglans, yet his power is very great, and his employment one of the noblest and most considerable about the Court. That gives him access to the prince's Person, to whom he may speak familiarly when he carries him by Sea; for he has his Seat at the Helm of the Brigantine, wherein the Grand Seignor is, who most commonly makes use of him, to carry his Orders to some Bassa, when he would have his Head. All the Grandees of the Port stand in Awe of him, and endeavour to gain his Affection by their Presents, because it lies in his power, to do them either good or bad Offices about the Prince, whom he can dispose as he pleases, when he has him abroad upon the Water. For being as 'twere at his Elbow, and having the whip of the Rudder in his hand, with the priviledge of sitting in his Presence, that he may the more easily Govern it, he has then the opportunity to entertain him with Affairs of State, and the Conduct of the Bassa's, and answerable to his Passion or Interest, clearly to Acquaint him how things pass, or turn and disguise them as he pleases. In fine, if he be highly in Favour, he may obtain one of the great Governments, and become Bassa of Buda, Babylon, or Cairo, nay haply Grand Vizier, which is the most eminent Charge of the Empire.

The Capigis are the Porters or Keepers of the Gates of the Seraglio, that is to say, of the first and second Courts; for the third Gate, which gives enterance into the inner Seraglio, is kept by Eunuchs. The Chief of the Capigis is call'd Capigi-bachi, who has under him other Officers, bearing the same Name; and whom the Grand Seignor makes use of, to carry his Orders. The Capi-Aga is above all.

The Attagis are the Cooks of the Seraglio, over whom as well as over the Halvagis, the Kilargi-bachi has full Power. Every Kitchin has its Attagi-bachi, that is to say, its chief Director, or Master-Cook. And the Mombak-Emin is the Intendant or Overseer, who supplies the Kitchens with all that is necessary, taking care also for the Tables of the Ambassadors, according to the Orders he has receiv'd from the Grand Vizir.

The Halvagis are the Confectioners, of whom I shall have occasion to speak more at large elsewhere. They give also the same Name to those who serve the Grandees of the Seraglio, and are permitted to go out of it and into it, when they please.

The Baltagis are a robust sort of People, imploy'd in the carrying of Burthens, as Porters, and Cleavers of Wood are amongst us. Baltagi implies properly a Labouring Man, who makes use of the Wedge.

The Hasteler-Agasi is the Overseer of the Infirmary, who observes what comes in and what goes out, and especially that there be no Wine brought in.

I shall have occasion also, in my Relation, to speak of two others, to wit, the Emirahour-bachi, and the Ekmeggi-bachi, who are two Officers belonging to the Sultan, but have their Habitations out of the Seraglio.

The Emirahour-bachi is the great Gentelman-Usher, who goes before the Grand Seignor, when he appears in publick, and in all Ceremonies.

The Ekmeggi-bachi is the Master-Baker, who has the over-sight, and gives direction for the Baking of all the Bread that is Eaten in the Seraglio. These two Employments are not bestow'd on any of those who have their Abode within the Seraglio, but to Persons who live out of it, but have the Liberty of ingress into it, egress out of it, at any time.

To be short, I shall have occasion to speak of the Caragi-bachi, and of the Cham of the Lesser Tartary, and I have some curious Observations to make upon both of them.

The Oeconomy of the Partizans or Collectors of publick Moneys.

The Caragi-Bachi is the Chief of those who collect the Tributes, and it is of him, as also of the Gemmerou-bachi, or Grand Farmer of the Customs, and of the Bazarcan-bachi, or Chief amongst the Merchants, that the Grand Seignor makes use of to make Advancements when he wants Money, and that there is not any in the publick Treasury, he being unwilling that they should meddle with the Secret Treasury. They must of necessity find it out, and it is no hard matter for them to do, in regard that of all the Tributes, Customs, and other Impositions due to the Grand Seignor, there is not any thing pay'd till the end of the Year, and these Officers oblige Men to the payment thereof, at the begining of it.

no

All sorts of Persons, what Religion soever they are of, except the Mahumetan, are oblig'd to pay the Tribute without any exception, from the time of their settling in the Empire, and having attain'd the sixteenth year of their Age. And this Tribute, or Poll-Money, amounts to five hundred and fifty old Aspers, which neither rise nor fall, but always keep at the same rate of eighty, to a Piastro, which, in the French Mony, and consequently with litle difference in ours, amounts to five Crowns and $\frac{1}{2}$. All other Christians who come into the Empire, upon the score of Trade, or Business, though 'twere but for one day, are forc'd to pay, at the first City where they arrive. The forreign Greeks, such as they from Muscovy or other places, pay three hundred and fifty Aspers; but the Armenians, who come from Persia, Georgia, Mingrelia, and other Countreys, are tax'd but at three hundred. As to the Christians, whom they call Franguis, they pay nothing; and that has given much trouble to the Ambassadors of Europe, especially to the French Ambassador, there being more French that are Inhabitants in Turkey, than there are of any other Nation. And yet though the Turks make their Year to consist but of twelve Moons, ours being near twelve and a half, they make the Tributaries pay but for twelve Moons; yet in requital, and that nothing may be lost, they make them pay that Tribute double, every three and thirtieth year, and are very frugal Husbands for the benifit and advantage of their Master.

There are but two Princes in the World that are known by the Name of Cham, to wit, the Emperour of great Tartary, and the King of the little Tartary, a Vassal to the Ottoman Monarchs. I conceive my self oblig'd, to give the Reader some information of the present condition of the latter. When the Cham of the lesser Tartary enters npon the Government, he comes to take his Oath of Fidelity to the Grand Seignor, and the Turks look upon him no otherwise than as a Governour of a Province, or at most, but as a Vassal-Prince. But those of his own Countrey, the Muscovites, the Poles, the Georgians, the Mingrelians, and the other Nations bordering upon him, treat him as a King, when they write to him. The Grand Seignor uses much Policy towards the Cham, left he should revolt from him, and render himself more powerful than he is, by Alliances with the neighbouring Princes. For it is to be observ'd, That the lesser Tartary, whereof the City Caffa, near the Cimerian Streight, is the metropolis, is not a Countrey subdu'd by the Arms of the Ottomans. The ancient Kings of it did only put themselves under the Grand Seignor's protection who receiv'd them into it, upon condtion, that when the Father dy'd, his Son, or the next of kin, his successor, was not to enter upon the Government, till he had receiv'd the Investiture from the Port, and taken the Oath of Fidelity to the Grand Seignor, obliging himself to come to him upon the first Orders to that purpose. The Grand Seignor promis'd in requital, that he would not establish any other than what were of their Race, to command in the Lesser Tartary. And whereas there are two Branches of that Family, he keeps one of them always banish'd in the Island of Rhodes, while the other Governs. But if, after Fifteen or Twenty Years, there should be any suspition of this latter Family's having a design, to render it self absolute, he sends for the Cham and his Children, when he has any, and sending them to Rhodes, brings thence him who was there exile, and orders him to reign in his turn, for some years. The form of his Oath you will find in the sixth Chapter of my Relation, where I speak of the Hall for Audience, and the manner, in which that Prince is there received.

The policy of the Port, to keep the Cham of the lesser Tartary quiet.

I have only now somewhat to say of the Moufti, the Cadilesquer, and the Cadis and the others relating to the Law, which I shall do in few words. Only let it be here observ'd in the general, That, according to the perswasion of the Turks, the Civil Laws are part of their Religion, and that having been given them by their Prophet, they are deriv'd from God, and require an implicite obedience. 'Tis by this course, that they are kept within their duty, and that they obey the Laws, as much out of a principle of Religion and Conscience, as out of the fear of chastisement; and in that they do not much recede from our Christian Maximes.

The principal Dignities of those who study the Law.

The Mouftis and the Cadis paſs therefore indifferently under the Name of Perſons well skill'd in the Law, as if we ſhould reduce our Divines and our Civil Lawyers into the ſame Claſs, and in civil and criminal Cauſes the Moufti is often conſulted.

The Moufti is the honourary Chief of the Law all over the Empire, and accounted to be the Interpreter of the Alchoran. I ſpeak of the Grand Moufti of Conſtantinople, who is the moſt eſteem'd, and the principal of all. For there are ſeveral others of them in Turkey, over whom he has no more juriſdiction, than he has over the Imans, or Prieſts; every one of them ſubmitting themſelves only to the Magiſtrate, and there being no Eccleſiaſtical Superiority amongſt them. That hinders not but that the Grand Moufti is honour'd by all the reſt, and in great veneration among the Turks. The Grand Seignor never beſtows that Dignity, but upon a Perſon of great abilities, and great integrity; he often conſults him in the Affairs of greateſt importance; he always follows his Directions, and he is the only Perſon in the World, at whoſe approach he riſes up to receive him.

The Cadileſquers follow the Moufti, and are Judges-Advocates of the Militia, the Souldiers having this Priviledge, That they are judg'd only by them; whence they alſo call them, Judges of the Armies. There are but two of them all over the Empire, the Cadileſquer of Romania, and the Cadileſquer of Natolia, who are in higheſt eſteem next to the Moufti, and have their Seats in the Divan, immediately next to the Grand Vizir.

The Mollah, or Moula-Cadis, are the Judges of great Cities, who recive their Commiſſions from the Cadileſquers, to whom there may be an Appeal made from their Sentence, in Civil Concerns only; for as to the Criminal part, the Cauſe is ſoon decided, and the leaſt Judge condemns to death without any Appeal.

The Cadis are under the Mollah, and ought to be well vers'd in the Laws and Cuſtoms of the Countrey. They have alſo under them the Naips, who adminiſter Juſtice in the Villages, and that is done with much expedition, without the help of Proctors, or Advocates.

The Imans, or Emams, are the prieſts of the Turks, and as 'twere the Parſons of their Moſqueys, where they take care that all things be done in order, and at the times appointed.

The Hogias are the Doctors of the Law, and as it were the Regents, and Inſtructors of Youth.

The Sheiks are to them, inſtead of Preachers, and they make publick Exhortations.

The Muezims are they, who cry upon the Towers of the Moſquey, to call the People together at the hour of Prayer; the Turks, not uſing any Bells, nor the Chriſtians, in the Levant.

The Dervis are Religious Men, among the Turks, who live poorly, and indeed the very word ſignifies poor. They are for the moſt part ridiculouſly cloath'd, and all, generally, great Hypocrites.

OF

The Different Species of Gold and Silver-Coins, and the ſmall Money now current in

TURKEY:

TOGETHER WITH THE

HISTORY OF THE TRADE

In Five Sols Pieces (French Money) and the Abolition of it.

THere are but two Species of Gold-Coins current all over the Turkiſh Empire; the one is the proper Countrey Money, the other comes out of Forein Parts. The former is the Scherif, otherwiſe called Sequin, or Sultanine; and that kind of Gold is worth at the preſent ſix Franks, French Money, though heretofore it yielded but five Franks, nay came ſo low as four. What Money current in Turkey.

the Scheriffs come from Egypt, and Cairo is the only City of the Empire, where Gold is coin'd. That Gold is brought out of the Kingdom of the Abyſſines, and this is the manner how it is brought to Cairo. The quantity is not the ſame every year, and when the paſſages are ſhut up, whether by War, or by extraordinary Rains, whereby the Fields are overflown, there comes but little Gold into Egypt, during that time. As ſoon as thoſe obſtructions are takn away, and that there is a freedom of Commerce, you ſhall ſee arriving at Cairo, nay at Alexandria too, ſeveral Abyſſines who bring in, one man, two pounds, another four, every one more or leſs, according to his abilities. Thoſe poor People run a thouſand riſques in their Travels, and 'tis almoſt a miracle, how they bring them to a period. Some of them are of that Country, whence the Queen of Sheba came, and which is now call'd the Kingdom of Sabour. Others come from places at a greater diſtance, and they have ſometimes fifteen days journeys to make, and cannot meet with any waters to drink, but what are corrupt, and deſtructive to health: which I found but too true my ſelf, when I croſs'd the Deſarts of Arabia. If by chance they come to ſome Cottage or Hut, where they have kill'd an Elephant, it is a place for them to feaſt in. This conſider'd, we need not wonder at the ſhort lives of thoſe miſerable People, whoſe Bodies are deſtroy'd in thoſe Voyages, and who for the moſt part do not exceed forty years of Age. The caſe is the ſame with thoſe, who trade with the Portugueſes, on the Coaſts of Melinda and Mozambico, the corrupt waters they are forc'd to drink in their way make them hydropical at five and twenty years of Age, and generally, all the ſeveral peoples of the Kingdom of Sabour, have the right Leg ſwell'd and twice as big as the left, and ſeldom exceed five and thirty years. The Gold brought to Cairo and coin'd there.

'Tis a miraculous thing to ſee the fidelity wherewith thoſe poor Abyſſines demean themſelves in trading, as well thoſe of the Southern parts, who are Chriſtians, as thoſe of the North, who border upon Egypt, and are Mahumetans. For after they have taken the Commodities they like for the Gold they have brought, if the Merchant they deal with will ſupply them with any thing further, to be paid at their return, and upon their own words, he is ſure enough of it, and need not break his ſleep for it. For if it happen that one of thoſe Abyſſines, who is a Debtor, ſhould die by the way, ſome of his Relations or Friends, whom he acquaints with his affairs, brings the Gold at the next return, The ſincerity of the Abyſſines.

for the Commodity which had been taken up; and it could never hitherto be found, that any Merchant could complain, that ever he had loſt ought by any one of them. All that is to be fear'd, is, that they ſhould fall into the hands of their Enemies, who rob, and kill them, and particularly on the South-ſide; there being leſs danger, towards the North.

The forein Coins of Gold in Turkey are the Ducates of Germany, Holland, Hungary, and Venice. They are very much ſought after, and they are chang'd at ſix Livers and a half, and ſometimes at ſix Livers and fifteen Sols; and that is done in order to the ſending of them to the Indies, where they drive a great Trade with them, as I ſhall make it appear in my Relations of the Levant. Sometime ſince, there has been ſome abatement made in the Ducates of Venice, upon a diſcovery of their not being of ſo good an alloy, as thoſe of Germany.

There will be often mention made of Purſes, in that Relation of the Seraglio. A Purſe implies as much as the ſum of five hundred Crowns, and it is of thoſe Purſes that the Grand Seignor makes his ordinary Preſents. But a Purſe of Gold, wherewith he regales his Sultaneſſes, and his peculiar Favourites, amounts to fifteen thouſand Seqnins, or thirty thouſand Crowns. A Kize is alſo a bag of fifteen thouſand Ducates.

In all the Ottoman Empire, there is not any Money of Copper to be ſeen, and the Spiecces current there muſt be either of Silver or Gold. True it is, that there are ſome pieces of Silver taken there, of a very baſe alloy, eſpecially the Roup, which are quarter-Ryals, coin'd in Poland; and with the aſſiſtance of the Jews, the Baſſa's in their ſeveral Governments, conterfeit certain forein Coins, which are all much different from thoſe which they are intended to imitate.

The caſe is the ſame as to Silver-Coins in Turkey, as it is with thoſe of Gold. There are ſome coin'd in the Countrey, as the Aſper, and the Paraſi, which are the leaſt of all. And there are ſome forreign Moneys, as the Spaniſh Ryal, and the Rix-dollar of Germany and Holland.

An Aſper is the leaſt of all the Moneys, which heretofore was worth eight Deniers, French Money, that is about two thirds of the Engliſh Penny, as being of good Silver, and the value ſet upon them was after the rate of 80, for the Crown-piece. But in the more remote Provinces, the Baſſa's and the Jews cauſe ſuch an abundance of counterfeit ones to be made, that at preſent, a Crown-piece will yield one hundred and twenty Aſpers.

A Paraſi is another kind of ſmall Money, which is worth four Aſpers, and coin'd at Cario.

Groche is the Crown, or Spaniſh Ryal, otherwiſe called the Piece of eight.

Kara-Groche is the Rix-dollar of Germany.

Aſclani is the Rix-dollar, mark'd with the Lyon of Holland. After which follow the Pieces of four Ryals, of two Ryals, and of one Ryal; and heretofore the Pieces of five Sols, French Money, wherewith there was a great Trade driven in Turkey: 'Tis a thing not well known to all, and therefore the Hiſtory thereof will haply not be unpleaſant to the Reader.

The Trade driven in the five Sols-pieces.

A certain Merchant of Marſeilles, without any fore-thought deſign, ſent as many Pieces of five Sols, newly come out of the Mint, as amounted to the ſum of two, or three hundred Crowns amongſt ſome other Pieces of Silver-Coins, to buy Silks. The Turks found thoſe little Pieces ſo prety and ſo beautiful, and were at the firſt ſo taken therewith, that they thought them to be the eighth part of a Ryal, and were content to allow a Crown, for every eight of them. The Factor, perceiving it, writ to Marſeilles, whence he receiv'd a very great ſum in that Money, and gain'd very much thereby. If the French could have contented themſelves with that honeſt profit, the commerce of thoſe Pieces, which was quaſh'd by the exceſſive frauds committed in the managment of it, might have continued ſtill, and would have been very advantageous to them. The Turks were unwilling to trade in any other kind of Money, and in the payment of the Armies, to give the Souldiers content, there was a neceſſity of diſperſing them among them. One day, returnig out of Perſia into Turkey, I was perſecuted by ſeveral Women, who would needs have me give them ſome Temins, (ſo they call that kind of Money) and I could not have any thing to eat, for any other Money.

Our French Merchants were gainers at the firſt, after the rate of fifty, per cent. allowing in Turkey but eight of thoſe Pieces for a Crown whereas they had twelve of them them in France for the ſame Piece. But the other European Nations, the Engliſh, the Dutch, and the Italians, envying their happineſs, came to give a check to their deſign, and making their complaints to the Grand Vizir, that miniſter order'd, That, for the future they ſhould allow twelve of thoſe Pieces for the Crown, or that they ſhould not be current any longer, and that whatever ſums thereof were found in the Ships, ſhould be confiſcated.

The French were not at all ſatisfy'd with that; and whereas there was a neceſſity of ſubmitting to the Grand Vizir's Decree, they bethought themſelves of having ſome of thoſe Pieces coin'd, which ſhould not have above four Sols of good Silver, which was a conſiderable advantage, of twenty five upon the hundred. They paſs'd well enough for ſome time, before the Turks had diſcover'd the fraud; they being ſatisfy'd, that the Stamp was fair, and that he Pieces look'd very white: And the Women and Maidens, of the meaner ſort of People, made them contribute to the ornament of their Head-tires, about which they faſten'd thoſe pretty little Pieces, and they came down flaping about their Foreheads, as the wealthier ſort faſten'd Pieces of Gold to theirs.

But the better to compaſs their deſign, the French Merchants were oblig'd to find out other Countreys, where it might be lawful for them to traffick in thoſe Pieces. Their firſt recourſe was to thoſe of Dombes, Orange, and Avignon, and paſſing into Italy, they found work for ſome time for thoſe of Monaco, and Maſſa. But having obſerv'd, that the Turks were more taken with the Pieces which had the impreſſion of a Woman's Head, and thoſe Princes being unwilling to ſuffer them to coin among them any Money of ſo baſe an alloy, or to give it the Stamp of Ja, the Princeſs of Dombes, they caſt their eyes upon ſome Caſtles ſituate within the Territories of the Geneueſes, yet ſubject to the juriſdiction of the Empire, where they obtain'd what they deſir'd, upon conditions not diſadvantageous to the Lords of thoſe places. The Pieces they got coin'd at Orange, where alſo ſought after, and pleas'd the Turks, in regard the Stamp was beautiful, and very clear; but thoſe of the Legat of Avignon were not ſo current, the Effigies thereof not being well done, and the Croſs, hanging at the Neck, diſpleaſing to the Turks. Had they contented themſelves, in that Tade, with twenty five upon the hundred, it might have continu'd and the profit would have been conſiderable: but by little and little, the thing came to ſo great an exceſs, till, at laſt, there was not one penny-worth of good Silver in every piece.

The French, to make them paſs the better, gave eighteen, and ſometimes twenty for a Crown, of which abuſe the great Merchants of Conſtantinople, Aleppo, Smyrna, and other Cities of Trade, made a good hand, they giving but twelve or thirteen for the worth of a Crown, in the payments they made to the petty Merchants of the Provinces of the Empire, for the Merchandizes they brought out of Turkey, there was none of that counterfeit Money diſpers'd, and the Armenians were far enough from burthening themſelves with it, in regard that all the Money, which is carried into Perſia, is preſently convey'd to the Mints, upon the Frontiers, to be melted down, and afterwards coin'd into Abaſſis, whereof they give the Merchant an account, anſwerably to the Standard of his Money, after it has been examin'd; and by that means there can be no fraud committed. The ſame courſe is taken over all the Great Mogol's Empire; and of all the Princes in the World, he cauſes all the Species of Gold and Silver of the beſt Standard to be coin'd without admitting the leaſt alloy.

The jealouſie of the other Merchants.

The Genueſe Merchants perceiving that the French had, at the beginning been fortunate in their Commerce, would needs imitate them in other ſorts of Money, and got two or three hundred thouſand Ducates coin'd which they carried into Turkey. But they had not the ſucceſs they expected, the Gold was ſo counterfeit, that the cheat was immediately diſcover'd, the Conſul, and the Captain of the Veſſel, were in ſome trouble about it, and the perſons concern'd therein, ſav'd what they could of that diſaſter.

The Germans alſo would needs come in for a ſhare, taking another courſe all along the Danow, quite to the mouth of it, from whence they got to Conſtantinople through the Black Sea. With other their Merchandizes, moſt whereof conſiſted in the counterfeit Copper-wares of the City of Nuremberg, things fit enough thoſe Nations, which border upon the Euxine Sea, they carried a quantity of Roups or quarter-Ryals, of the Coinage of Poland, which are pleasant to the Eye, and might have been commodious enough for the Merchants, if the adulteration had been moderate. But the Italians need not be much asham'd, that the Germans should be more successful than they upon that occasion, since that both Nations came short in point of subtilty, to deceive the Turks.

But to return to the French, the first concern'd in this History, to which it is time to put a period. In the heat of their Commerce, and while all things were very well with them, they thought it not enough, to carry away the richest Merchandizes, but they also bought up all sorts of good Money they could meet withal, and brought it into France, to carry on and continue the coinage of their counterfeit pieces. This Trade was carry'd on so far, thro' the whole extent of that vast Empire, and there was so prodigious a quantity of that counterfeit Mony spread abroad, that it was found by the Register-Books of the Farmers of the Customs, that the sum of what had been dispers'd of it amounted to an hundred and fourscore millions of Livers, not accounting what had never come to their knowledge, and what Seamen, and other private Persons might have conceal'd.

The other Merchants and Traders of Europe, who brought none but good Money, having exclaim'd against that disorder, and renew'd their complaints to the Grand Vizir; the Turks at last open'd their eyes, and that principal Minister, having comprehended, that if the thing continu'd, in a short time, instead of Silver, there would be nothing but Copper in the Empire, prohibited the bringing in of any more of those pieces of five Sols, upon pain of confiscation, and great penalties to be inflicted on those, who durst do any thing contrary thereto.

Yet could not that crying of them down, and the Grand Vizier's prohibition make the Souldiers who serv'd in Candia, out of love with those little pieces, the beauty whereof they were so much taken withal. Notwithstanding all the Remonstrances that could be made to them, they would not be paid in any other kind of Money; and some discontented Persons and Mutineers beginning to shew their Teeth, they were forced immediately to send Galleys to Smyrna, and some other Cities of great Commerce, to bring away all that could be found of that sort of money. The incredible quantity of those counterfeit pieces, dispers'd in all the Provinces of the Ottoman Empire, is at last vanish'd, they are grown red, and no longer current.

A mischievous fraud gently punished.

At the First crying down of that counterfeit money, before the news of it could have been brought to foreign Countries, a certain Person named Goulin, engag'd all he had in the world, to make up to the sum of five and twenty thousand Crowns in those Pieces of five Sols, so extremely falsifyd, that there was hardly so much Silver as was requisite to whiten them. He came to Smyrna, where I then was, and where he soon found, that there was no way to put off his counterfit Merchandize. Whereupon he imagin'd, that he might get it off, if he could make a speedy Voyage to Constantinople, where, as he had been assur'd, some Persons took them, even after they had been cry'd down. Being unwilling to hazard all by Sea, he sent away, by Land, four or five thousand Crowns, which were taken away by Thieves, near Bursa, and carry'd the much greater part to Constantinople in a Dutch Vessel, of which he had also sufficient cause to repent him. After he had expos'd it at the Custom-house, for the payment of the Duties, the Chief Officer of the Customs told him, that he might return within two or three days, to take back what belong'd to him; and as soon as the other was gone, he caus'd all to be melted down in his presence. The seperation being made, upon twenty thousand Crowns, which was the sum he had brought thither, there was not the full fourth part of Silver, and the Merchant coming again to the Customer, fell down all along, out of pure fear lest a severe punishment might follow the fraud whereof he was visibly convicted, seeing so much scum of brass on the one side, and so little silver on the other. But the Turks are not so rigorous, as some persons imagine, all was restor'd to him, nay there was no penalty inflected upon him, and they only order'd him to be gone.

The ancient sincerity of the Turks corrupted by the commerce of the Europeans.

Certain it is, that the Europeans, more addicted to subtilty and circumvention, than the Levantines, and for the most part not endeavouring to be sincere in Commerce, have taught the Turks several Cheats, which they were either ignorant of, or did not practise, especially since the Inhabitants of Granada, being driven out of Spain, dispers'd themselves into several Provinces of the Levant. Before that time, time, a man might have rely'd on their integrity and fair dealing. But now, when you treat with them, you muſt ſtand upon your guard; ſo prevalent is the Example of Evil to corrupt mens minds. Nor are we to be aſtoniſh'd at that ancient undiſguized humor of the Turks in their Commerce, ſince we find, that the poor Abyſſines, who come from the lower parts of Ethiopia to Traffick at Cairo, and the Idolaters themſelves in the Indies amongſt themſelves and with Strangers, with a ſtrict obſervance of an inviolable fidelity.

CHAP. I.

Of the extent, and external parts of the Seraglio.

THE PRINCIPAL HEADS.

The Origine of the word Serrail, or Seraglio, common to all the Royal Houſes, as well in Turkey as Perſia. The admirable Situation of the Grand Seraglio at Conſtantinople. Its extent, figure, and externals. The Artillery not kept in good order, and the Gunners not well skill'd. A delightful place of it ſelf; but reſtraint makes it otherwiſe.

THE Grand Seignor's Seraglio, whereof I undertake to give a Deſcription, is the Palace where the Ottomon Princes ordinarily keep their Court. All the Royal Houſes, as well in Turkey, as Perſia, have the ſame Name, which derives it Origine from the word Serrai, which ſignifies a great Noble Houſe, in the Perſian Language. The Grand Seignor has many Seraglio's in the Provinces of his Empire, and the principal of them are thoſe of Burſa, and Adrianople, two Reſidences which that Monarch does ordinarily make uſe of, according to the conjuncture of his Affairs.

The origine of the word Seraglio, common to all the Royal Houſes in Turkey and Perſia.

But to confine our ſelves to Conſtantinople, we find there three Seraglio's, which have all their different Beauties. The old Seraglio is the Palace appointed for the retirement of thoſe Women who have ſerv'd the Predeceſſors of the Prince Regent, and whence they never get out, unleſs it be in order to Marriage. The Grand Seignor goes thither but very ſeldome, and that when he is out of humor, to paſs away ſome days there in ſolitude. The Seraglio of the Hippodrome, ſo called from the Exerciſes done there on Horſe-back, which was built by Ibrahim Baſſa, Son-in-Law, and Favourite to the Emperour Solyman the Second, ſerves now for an Amphitheatre for publick Feſtivals, Exerciſes, Combats, Carouſels, and particularly for the Circumciſion of the Ottomon Princes, which is their greateſt Solemnity. The third is the Grand Seraglio, whereof I make the Relation, and to which that Name is principally attributed, ſo as that there needs not any thing elſe to be added thereto, to diſtinguiſh it from the others. I ſhall have but little to ſay concerning the Structures of it, wherein there is not any thing extraordinary to be obſerv'd, but ſhall rather inſiſt upon what is privately done, in each Apartment of that great Palace.

any

The admirable ſituation of the Seraglio of Conſtantinople.

The Grand Seraglio is a vaſt place incloſ'd, which reaches to that point of Land where the ancient Byzantium was built, upon the Boſphorus of Thrace, and the joyning together of the Ægean Sea and the Euxine, which contribute ſo much to the Beauty and Wealth of Conſtantinople. This great City, let the Wind ſit where it will, does every hour receive ſome refreſhments or other, from one of thoſe Seas; and the Seraglio advancing it ſelf into the Channel, which makes a communication between them, receives the firſt Advantages that may be derived thence.

Its extent, figure, and externals.

That great Incloſure makes a Triangle, one ſide whereof is to the Land-ſide, and reaches to the City, and the two others lye open to the Sea and a River which falls into it. This Triangle is unequal, and if it be divided into eight parts, that ſide towards the Land takes up three of them, and the five others are for the two ſides abutting on the Sea. Its compaſs is about three Italian Miles, or one of our common Leagues. And this Palace is ſurrounded all about with high and ſtrong Walls, flank'd on the Sea-ſide with ſquare Towers, at a conſiderable diſtance one from another; and towards the City, with round Towers, which are at a nearer diſtance one from another, from the great Gate of the Seraglio, which is towards St. Sophia, as far as the Sea where you Embark for Galata. In thoſe Towers, in the Night-time, there are Guards of the Azamoglans, to ſee that no body approaches the Seraglio by Sea or Land; and if occaſion require, they may fire ſome Pieces of Artillery, which ſtand always loaden upon a Quay of five fathom breadth, which is carried quite about the Seraglio.

Upon one of thoſe Towers, about a hundred paces from the great Gate of the Seraglio, as you go down, in order to your paſſage over to Galata, they have wrought a Cloſet, into which the Grand Seignor goes ſometimes to divert himſelf, and to ſee People paſſing to and fro, without being ſeen himſelf. Somewhat lower, and upon the Sea-ſide, there is a ſpacious place cover'd over, under which, as if it were in a little Haven, they keep the Caicks or Brigantines, wherein the Prince takes his divertiſement by Water, when he is pleas'd to do it.

Not far thence, within the incloſure of the Seraglio, are the Habitations of the Boſtangis, who are entruſted with the conduct of the Brigantines; and at a little farther diſtance, in your way to the point of the Seraglio, which is towards Scudaret, ſtands the Quarter of the Boſtanchi-bachi, Overſeer of the Gardens of the Seraglio, and of all the other Gardens belonging to the Grand Seignor.

The Artillery out of order, and the Gunners not well ſkill'd.

Upon the Quay, which as I told you, does ſurround the Walls of the Seraglio, there are forty or fifty pieces of Cannon of different bigneſs, and there are ſome of ſo great a bore, that a man might get into them. Oppoſite thereto, and in the middle of the Channel, there is a Tower built upon a Rock, which the Turks call Quiſler houleſi, or the Tower of the Virgins. It is kept by Boſtangis, and has its Guns levell'd with the Water, which better defend the Streight, than thoſe at the point of the Seraglio, which for the moſt part are without Carriages, and unſerviceable. Beſides, they want good Gunners, and if all that Artillery were well mounted, and manag'd by skilful Perſons, it would better keep in awe, whatever comes out of the Mediterranian, and the Black Sea.

A pleaſant abode, but reſtraint makes it otherwiſe.

We have ſpoken ſufficiently of the external parts, 'tis time we now enter into the Seraglio, and rather conſider what paſſes in every Appartment of it, than the Structures thereof, wherein, as I ſaid, there is not any thing of Magnificence, whatever ſome Perſons might invent, who in my preſence, have made noble Draughts of it, grounded on their own pure Imaginations. I have ſeen as much of the Seraglio, as a Stranger could do, and I have ſeen it ſeveral times, in ſeveral Voyages, having had time enough to conſider the two firſt Courts, the Divan, and the Hall of Audience, but cannot celebrate them much for any great Beauty I could find in them. There is, I muſt confeſs, abundance of Marble and Porphyry in all the Apartments; but on the other ſide, all thoſe Apartments are confuſedly ſhuffled together; there is no regularity at all; moſt of the Rooms have but little light, and all the Ornament of them conſiſts in Rich Tapiſtry

Tapiſtry lay'd all over the Floors thereof, and ſome Cuſhions of Gold and Silver Brokado, ſome whereof are embroider'd with Pearls. But taking things generally, if the Walls and the Towers, which incloſe the Seraglio, look more like a frightful Priſon, than a Royal Palace, the Apartments whereof it conſiſts, have not alſo that Wealth or Pleaſure, for which the Palaces of France and Italy are ſo highly celebrated, and they offer not any thing which may long entertain the ſight of a curious Perſon. All that can make the Seraglio a pleaſant place of Abode, is the advantage of its ſituation, and indeed a Nobler cannot be imagin'd. For it looks towards the Eaſt, and takes up the upper part, and the deſcent of a ſloping Hillock, from St. Sophia, quite to the Channel. The Buildings are upon the moſt eminent places, and have a Proſpect into the Gardens, which run along the deſcent, as alſo into the two Seas which meet at the point of the Seraglio, whence the Grand Seignor may at the ſame time ſee Europe and Aſia, in both which parts of the World, his Territories are very great. But never was any Priſon thought a pleaſant place, and there are few in the Seraglio, who rather would live in a Hut, and have their Liberty, than be continually confin'd in a Palace under ſuch ſevere Diſcipline.

CHAP. II.

Of the firſt Court of the Seraglio, and particularly, of the Infirmary.

THE PRINCIPAL HEADS.

The Regulations of the Infirmary of the Seraglio. The difficulties of getting Wine into it. The ſubtilty of ſome People to be receiv'd into it, tho' they are not Sick. An abominable vice common all over the Eaſt. The fruitleſs endeavours us'd to check the courſe of it. The ſacrilegious action of two Ichoglans. The Wood-piles of the Seraglio. The great advantages of thoſe who have the Charge thereof. The exerciſe of the Girit. The Grand Seignor's Liberalities. The counterfeit Modeſty of the Grandees of the Port.

OF the many Gates which give a Man entrance into the Seraglio, as well on the Sea-ſide, as on the Land-ſide, that towards S. Sophia is the greateſt. That is always open, the others not being ſo, but according to the Grand Seignor's pleaſure. You firſt come to a great Portal, which has not any thing of magnificence, and where you only find certain golden Letters, and about them Feuillages and Compartiments, according to the Arabian way of Painting. That Gate is kept by Fifty Capigis, who have for their Arms, the Firelock, the Dart, and the Cymitar, and gives you entrance into the firſt Court of the Seraglio, which is four hundred Paces in length, and a hundred in breadth, without any Paving.

The Regulations of the Infirmary of the Seraglio.

On the right hand of that first Court, there runs all along a spacious structure, containing several Appartments or Chambers, and serving for an Infirmary to the whole Seraglio. The Gate of it is kept by an Eunuch, who has under him a great many People, employ'd in attending on, and ministring to the sick, whom, answerably to their quality, they dispose into convenient quarters in that house, where they may be better assisted, then in those which their indisposition had oblig'd them to quit. The two principal Physitians, and the two principal Chirurgeons, whom they call Hequinz-bachi, and Geirah-bachi, make their visits there every day, at certain hours. A man cannot imagin a place better order'd and regulated then that is: and the Grand Seignor himself sometimes comes thither in person to take an exact account of the Sick and their condition, as also to enquire whether they are well treated, whether the Physitians visit them often, and whether every Officer of the Infirmary perform the duty incumbent on him. There is seldom any place void in that House, for as soon as one is gone out, another comes in: and though it be design'd only for such as are sick, yet several persons, who are well, are brought thither, under pretence of indisposition, or to enjoy themselves a while, or to weather out some trouble or discontent. They continue there for the space of ten or twelve daies, and are diverted, according to their mode, with a wretched kind of vocal and instrumental Musick, which begins betimes in the morning, and holds on till night. The permission they have there to drink wine, which they never have elswhere, is a greater inducement for their coming in thither than the musick. But that permission, which, they would as 'twere conceale, and which the superstition of the Turks dares not publickly own, is accompany'd by a thousand difficulties. They are not permitted to bring in any wine in the sight of the Eunuch, who stands at the entrance of the place: and if any one should be surpriz'd in the doing of it, his punishment would be to receive three hundred bastinadoes, and a penalty of three hundred Aspers, to be paid to those from whom he had receiv'd them. But if he can cunningly get in with the Wine not having been stopp'd at the Gate, assoon as he is got in, he runs no risque at all, and may drink of it without fear of any chastisement, though 'twere in the presence of the Grand Seignor.

The difficulty of getting wine into the Infirmary.

The small quantity of Wine which can be got in by this way, would signifie but little among so many People, if there were not some other less difficult contrivances to supply them therewith. And this is one of them. The Infirmary adjoins to one side of the Gardens, from which it is separated only by a wall which is not very high; so that the Bostangis, who find that wine goes off at a good rate, and that they who are within the Seraglio know not how to spend their money, do, in the night time, by ropes convey over the wall, so many Borrachoes or Bags of Buck-Skins, full of wine, containing forty or fifty quarts, which some other persons of the Infirmary stand ready to receive. This way brings in abundance of wine, but not without fear of being suppriz'd by the Bostangi-bachi, who goes the rounds every night.

The subtilty of some persons to be receiv'd in, though not sick.

Nor is the drinking of Wine the main inducement which makes those counterfeit sick persons to seek out pretences, to go and pass away some daies in the Infirmary; insomuch that some have the lewd artifice to put themselves into a slight Feaver, which is presently remov'd. A detestable passion, and which is in a manner naturall to them, though it be against nature, makes them study all the imaginable waies to satisfie it. This proves a hard matter for the Ichoglans to do, while they are in their Chambers observ'd and watch'd night and day by severe Overseers, who never pardon them the least misdemeanour.

For though the Grand Seignor be himself subject to the same passion, the very name whereof causes a horror, yet he orders cruel punishments to be inflicted on those who shall presume to imitate him. He does what he can to prevent the mischief, which he would not have countenanc'd by his example, and imposes the prevention of it as a task upon the Eunuchs, a vigilant sort of animals, whose Eyes are alwayes open. But in the Infirmary, all these precautions prove fruitless; the Eunuchs belonging to that place being corrupted partly by presents, partly by treats, or being made drunk with wine, or some other liquors, they bring in thither some young lads, of whom there is great store in the City of Constantinople. The better to over-reach the Eunuchs, they put those young lads into the habits of the Halvagis, and so the cheat succeeds, in regard they are the Attendants on the Officers of the Seraglio, and all the Errands they have to do in the City.

Of

Of these Halvages, there is ordinarily to the number of six hundred, and they have only their cloathing and sustenance allow'd them, without any wages, till such time as they have serv'd thirteen or fourteen years. Their wages begin at the rate of two Aspers per diem and in time may rise to seven Aspers and a half: but they have other contingent Profits, and they know well enough, how to make their advantage of the Employments they are upon. For whereas they only are the Persons who have the freedom of going and comeing in and out of the Seraglio, they set double the price on every thing they buy. But their most considerable gain proceeds from the infamous commerce of those young Lads whom they bring in to their Masters, and whom they cunningly slip into the Infirmary, after they had put them into Habits like their own. They wear a white Cap, which rises up from the Crown of the Head, to a pretty height somewhat to the resemblance of a Sugar-loaf.

The fruitless endeavours us'd to check its course.

The Hasteler-Agasi, or chief Overseer of Infirmary, is inded continually at the Gate with five or six other Eunuchs, and carefully observes whatever goes in, or comes out. But all that vigilance will not do the work; nay though he had a hundred eyes, yet were it impossible for him to discern those young Lads, amidst the great number of those Halvagis and that the rather, for these reasons, that they are frequently chang'd, that some of them are made Janizaries, and that new ones are taken in upon the advancement of the old ones to some other Employments. But if it should happen that the said Superintendent Eunuchs should have any secret information of what's design'd, and seems as if he would make some noise about it, he is presently appeas'd with a silk Vest, or some other Present, and 'tis thence that he derives his greatest advantages. In fine, that brutish Passion is so ordinary amongst the Turks and generally over all the Eastern parts, that notwithstanding all the endeavours that has been us'd to prevent the effects of it, they will hardly ever be able to do it. There happen'd a memorable Example of this in my time. Two Pages of the Chamber, who could not have the convenience of executing their wicked design in the Seraglio, would needs aggravate their crime, by going into the Mosquey to satiate their brutality. After Prayers where ended, they suffer'd all the people to go out, and having so well hid themselves that he who shut the doors could not perceive them, they fell to the doing of an action, whereof the very Idea causes horrour.

Abominable excess over all the East.

The Sacrilegious action of two Pages.

The Wood Pile of the Seraglio.

On the left hand of this first Court, there is a spacious Lodgement, answerable to that of the Infirmary; and that's the habitation of the Azamoglans, persons design'd for the meanest Employments of the Seraglio. Within that Structure there is a spacious Court, where you shall find dispos'd in order, all about, and in the middle so many Wood-piles, which are renew'd every year, and there are brought in thither above forty thousand Cart-loads of wood, every Cart-load being as much as two Oxen can draw. Some part of this wood comes in by the Black Sea, and the rest out of the Mediterranean: and whereas there is a great quantity of it left every year, especially when the Grand Seignor does not winter at Constantinople, that remainder, which must be very considerable, is dispos'd of to the advantage of the principal persons among the Azamoglans. They are cunning enough to take their opportunity, when it is unloaden upon the Port, and computing, as well as they can, how much may go to make up the Piles, they proportionably send, what they think may be spar'd, to the City, and lodge it in the houses, where they are acquainted. Which they may do with so much the more security, in regard that no body minds what they do, and that they perform their duty, when the Piles are compleated in the season during which they are wont to make their Provisions. The wood they thus convert to their own use they are paid for, and the sum rais'd thereby is considerable for Persons of so mean a Quality.

The great profit of such as have the Charge thereof.

The Exercise of the Girit.

On the same side as the Infirmary, and a little lower, (for the Seraglio is a rising ground for a certain space, and then there is an insensible descent on both sides, quite down to the point, whereby it is terminated) you discover the great Portal of the Gardens, which they call Bagge-Karpousi. From that Gate, which overlooks the foresaid descent, and where you are as it were upon an Eminency, you descend into a very noble Place, which the Grand Seignor causes to be always kept neat and even, where the Great Persons of the Court come to do the Exercises of the Girit, or the Dart, which is perform'd most commonly on Fridays, immediately after their comeing out of the Mosquey. There are about two hundred paces from the Portal to that place, and in the Court there may ordinarily be, upon those days above fifteen hundred Persons, yet so as that not any person whatsoever is permitted to go any further, unless he be call'd by the Order of the Girt-Bey, who is the chief Overseer, and Director of that Exercise. They who enter into the Lists, do many times amount to the number of a thousand Persons. If the Grand Seignor himself, who is present at those Exercises, the end whereof proves many times Tragical to those, by whom they are perform'd, has found any particular divertisement therein, especially when there are Limbs lost or broken, he orders every one to receive a Purse, which, as I told you, amount to five hundred Crowns. The distribution of those Presents is greater or lesser, according to his being in a good or bad humor, and sometimes there are distributed at his departure thence, to the number of ten Purses. The Treasurer, who is always attending on him, and has ordinarily brought along with him fifteen or twenty thousand Ryals in Gold or Silver, stands ready, upon a beck to obey his Orders.

The Grand Seignors liberalities.

But this is worth our observation, That when the Prince is ready to bestow his Liberalities, on those who had behav'd themselves valiantly in that exercise, the Grandees of his Court, who had appear'd therein as well as others, purposely shift themselves out of the way, and leave him to make his Presents to other less considerable Persons, as being such as stand more in need of them than they do. This is their custom ordinarily, whether it proceed from Generosity, or from a counterfeit and personated Modesty, it matters not. And after the Grand Seignor is withdrawn, it is lawful for those who are left in the foresaid Court, and are skil'd in the handling of the Dart, to spend the remainder of the day in that exercise. But those, how great soever their performance may be, and what wounds soever they may receive, are not to expect any Presents; There's no Prince to be a spectator of their Gallantry, nor Treasurer, to distribute his Liberalities. They only lay some wagers amongst themselves, and he who gives the fairest blow, wins, and the fairest blow is in the head or face. There is ever and anon an Eye struck out, or a Cheek carried off, and that Solemnity proves very fatal in the end to some of them.

The counterfeit modesty of the Grandees of the Port.

And this is an account of all that is observable in the said first Court, Let us now make our entrance into the second, and observe what is most remarkable in all its Appartments.

CHAP.

CHAP. III.

Of the ſecond Court, wherein are the little Stables, the Kitchins, and the Divan.

THE PRINCIPAL HEADS.

A ſquare and ſpacious Court, and its Embelliſhments. The Janizaries extremely ſprightful, active, and well order'd. The number of the Kitchins. The ordinary diſhes of meat that are ſerv'd up in the Seraglio. The way of ordering the Pilau. A particular way of roaſting in the Levant. The Turks cannot endure the Hare. Conſerves of all ſorts. Several Compoſitions of Sherbet. Receeptacles for all the Waters of the Seraglio. The little Stables. The Quarters of the Eunuchs.

OUT of the firſt Court, into which the Baſſa's and Grandees of the Port, may come on Horſe-back, and where they are oblig'd to alight, if they intend to go any further, there is an entrance into another, through a ſecond Gate, kept, as the former, by fifty Capigis. The ſecond Court, much more noble, and more delightful, then that whereof we gave you the precedent deſcription, is near three hundred paces ſquare, and only the walks, leading to the ſeveral Appartments, are pav'd, the reſt being in Graſs-plots, planted about with Cypreſs, and water'd by Fountains, with rails all about, to hinder people from going upon the graſs. Over the Gate of that Court, may be ſeen theſe words, written in great golden Characters.

La Illahe Illa Alla,

Muhammed Reſoul Alla.

That is to ſay,

There is no other God than God,

Mahomet is ſent by God.

Reſoul ſignifies Sent, which is the greateſt Title given by the Turks to their Prophet.

The Janizaries well order'd.

On both ſides of that Court runs a very noble Gallery, the Pillars whereof are of Marble, all along which the Companies of the Janizaries are drawn up, and diſciplin'd when the Grand Seignor orders them to ſhew their Activity, and to appear well Arm'd, at the Arrival of ſome Ambaſſador, who is to have Audience.

On the right hand, behind the Gallery where the Janizaries are drawn up, on the Divan-days (that is to ſay, upon Council-days) are the Kitchins, and the Offices of the Seraglio, diſtinct one from the other, and every one ſerv'd by its peculiar Officers. Heretofore there were Nine of them, but now that Number is reduc'd to Seven. Every Office or Kitchin, has its chief Director, or Maſter-Cook, and there is a Superintendent above them all, named the Akegi-Bachi, who has the Command over four hundred Cooks.

The chiefeſt of theſe Kitchins, which is for the Grand Seignor himſelf, is called Haſmoutbak.

The number of the Kitchins,

The Second is called Valede-Sultanum-Moutbaki, and is deſign'd for the Sultaneſſes, as for inſtance, the Mother, the Wife, or to ſay better, the Princeſs, for whom the Grand Seignor has the greateſt kindneſs, and who had the Happineſs to bring into the World a Succeſſor to the Empire, as alſo for his Siſters and Daughters.

The third Kitchin, which they call Kiſlr-Agazinum-Moutbaki, is appointed for the Overſeer of the Appartment of the Women, and the other Negro-Eunuchs who are employ'd about the guarding of them.

The fourth is for the Capou-Agaſi, or Grand-Maſter of the Seraglio, who has the greateſt acceſs to the Grand Seignor's Perſon, and whoſe Charge (as I ſaid elſewhere) generally extends over whatever enters into the Palace. And this Kitchin ſerves alſo for the Officers of the Divan.

The fifth is for the Chaſnadar-bachi, or the chief Perſon concern'd about the Treaſury, and for thoſe who are under his Juriſdiction, and obey his Orders.

The ſixth is for the Kilargi-bache, or principal Cup-bearer, and thoſe who have their dependance upon him.

The ſeventh and laſt, is that of the Serai-Agaſſi, and of all the Officers who are under his Charge.

Laſtly, as for the Boſtangis, whoſe work lies in the Gardens, they dreſs their Meat themſelves, and appoint ſome among them to execute that Office; and they provide the Commons for all the reſt. There are alſo ſome of the Boſtangis employ'd in the Offices deſign'd for the Grand Seignor.

The ordinary meats ſerv'd up in the Seraglio.

There enters no Beef into the Kitchins of the Seraglio: but the ordinary conſumption of every day, including all, as well thoſe who eat within, as without, may amount to five hundred Sheep, in which number muſt be comprehended Lambs and Kids; and the greateſt part of thoſe Sheep are brought from the Frontiers of Perſia; which Country excells all others, as to that Creature. According to this proportion of

Mutton

Mutton, may be computed the quantity of Pullets, Chickens, and young Pidgeons, the number whereof is limited, according to the Seasons; as also what may be consum'd in Rice and Butter, for the Pilau, which is accounted the best dish in Turkey, and all over the East. Those Nations who are lovers of Temperance, and do not much study the satisfaction of the Palate, seldome have any other dish: and that not being contemptible, some haply will give me thanks for communicating the ordering of it.

The way of ordering the Pilau.

The Turks, and generally all the Inhabitants of the Eastern Parts, make the Pilau after this manner. According to the quality of the persons who are to be entertain'd, and the quantity which is to be made of it, you take either a piece of Mutton alone, or together with that some Pullets or Pidgeons, which are to be boyl'd in a Pot, till they are half done, or somewhat more. When you think them so far boyl'd then pour out both Meat and Broath into a Basin, and the Pot being wash'd, put it on the Fire again with Butter in it, which they suffer to melt, till such time as it is very hot. Then they chop the meat which had been but half-boyl'd, into little pieces, the Pullets into quarters, and the Pidgeons into halves, and so they cast it into the Butter, they fricass it till it be of a very brown colour. The Rice being well wash'd they put some into the Pot over the meat, as much as they think fitting, and the Broath which had been pour'd into the Basin, they also put it into the Pot Ladle-ful after Ladle-ful, over the Rice, till such time as it stands two fingers breadth above it. Then is the Pot immediately cover'd, there is a clear Fire made under it, and they ever and anon take out some grains of the Rice, to see if it be softned, as also whether it be not requisite to put in some more of the Broath to compleat the stewing of it. For it is not like the Rice brought into our parts, which presently breaks asunder, but their Rice is of such a kind, that it must be fully boyl'd and yet the Grain entire, as well as the whole Pepper wherewith they season it. As soon as it is come to that condition, they cover the Pot with a Cloth three or four times doubled, and set the Pot-lid upon that, and sometime after they make another melting of Butter, till it be very red; to be cast into the holes, which are made in the Rice with the handle of the Ladle, after which they cover it again of a sudden, and so let it stand soaking a while, and then serve it up. It is put into large Dishes with the Meat, handsomly dispos'd upon it, and some part will be white, that is, continu'd in its natural colour, some part yellow, occasion'd by a little mixture of Saffron, and a third part of a Carnation-colour, done by the tincture of the juyce of Pomegranate. Nay, though the meat be as fat as is requisite for the ordering of this Dish, yet to make the Pilau more delicate and palateable to them, they bestow three pound of Butter on six pound of Rice, which makes it so extraordinary fat, that it disgusts, and is nauseous to those who are not accustom'd thereto, and accordingly would rather have the Rice it self simply boyl'd with Water and Salt. There are always two or three Dishes serv'd up after that manner, to the Grandees of the Port, who for the most part, keep open Table, and instead of Flesh they cover them with a great Aumelet or Omelet, made with good Herbs, and about three fingers thick, or with some poach'd Eggs, which are neatly dispos'd about it. A man is never incommodated by this kind of Rice, but the other, which is too fat, is not fit for those who drink Wine, and will not excite in them a desire to Eat of it often.

A particular way of roasting in the Levant.

Since I have given you an account how they order the Pilau, I cannot forbear making you a further discovery of the Turks management of the Kitchin, and telling you how they roast their meat. The greater sort of meat, as Sheep and Lambs are roasted whole in Ovens made in the Floor, wherein they hang them by the heads, and they are taken out thence as it were brown-bak'd and Cook'd well enough, so as to excite Appetite. At the bottom of the Oven there is ordinarily a Basin plac'd, having in it some Rice and fair Water, which receives the dripings of the Beast, the very Tayl it self, which sometimes weighs fifteen or twenty pound, yelding a good quantity thereof, as being in a manner all fat. The Tayls of the Lambs, having not so much fat, are excellent meat, and in a manner as delicate as the Sweet-breads of Veal. These Lambs being thus roasted, are always serv'd up with Rice under them, and for the greater

greater Tables, they ſerve up two of them in a Diſh. So that there is no uſe of Spits in the Turkiſh Kitchins but what is for Poultry or Fowl, which they order ſo untowardly, that when they are brought up to the Table they appear ſo mangled and diſorder'd, that it is no eaſie matter to diſtinguiſh the head from the feet. But it is to be obſerv'd, that the Pilau, and all ſorts of Fleſh-meat, are not ſerv'd up, but only at Supper, about five of the Clock in the Evening; and that in the Morning thoſe of better Quality Eat only Sallets, Herbs, Fruits, and Conſerves; the meaner ſort of People contenting themſelves with meats made of Milk, Melons and Cucumbers, according to the Seaſon.

As for Fiſh, the Turks care not much for it, and though the Seas and Rivers are well repleniſh'd therewith, yet they ſeldom Eat of them. It ſeldome happens alſo, that any Veniſon or Wild-Fowl comes into their houſes, as being a kind of meat they do not any way reliſh, But above all meats they have an averſion for the Hare; which Obſervation I made alſo in the Armenians, who are of a perſwaſion, that the Female of that Creature has its Monthly Courſes regularly, as the Woman hath. It is eaſily perceivable, by what account I have given, that there is no great variety or delicacy in the Turkiſh Entertainments, and that the French and other Europeans, would not think themſelves well treated thereat. But however, their Kitchins are kept very neat, they have all the accommodations requiſite for their way of dreſſing, and whether you conſider the Diſhes and other Veſſels they uſe, or the meat it ſelf, there is as much cleanlineſs as can be expected.

The Turks have an averſion for the Hare.

Conſerves.

The Offices where the Conſerves and Sweet-meats are made (there being ſix or ſeven of them) are above the Kitchins, and ſerv'd by four hundred Halvagis, who were Eſtabliſh'd by Sultan Solyman, a magnificent Prince, who alſo regulated all the Offices and Officers of the Seraglio. They are perpetually at Work in thoſe ſeven Offices, and there they prepare all ſorts of Conſerves, dry and liquid, and ſeveral ſorts of Syrups, as alſo ſeveral kinds of Turchi, which are Fruits preſerv'd in Vinegar and Salt, into which they put a quantity of fragrant Herbs, ſuch as Roſemary, Marjoram and Sage.

Several Compoſitions of Sherbet.

In the ſame Offices they alſo prepare the ordinary drink of the Turks, which they call Sherbet, and it is made ſeveral ways. That which is moſt common in Turkey comes ſomewhat near our Lemonade, but there is very little water in it; 'tis in a manner all juyce of Lemmon, or Citron, having an intermixture of Sugar, Amber, and Musk. They make another ſort of it, which is highly in eſteem, and that is made with the water deſtill'd from the flower of a Plant, which grows in Pools and Rivers, and has the figure of a Horſe-ſhooe. Theſe flowers are yellow, and called Nulouſer. But the Sherbet which they moſt eſteem, and which is drunk by the Grand Seignor himſelf, as alſo by the Baſſa's and other Grandees of the Port, is made of Violets and Sugar, and there is but little juyce of Citron put into it. They make alſo another ſort of drink, which they call Magion, compos'd of ſeveral Drugs, whereby it is made hot: and there is another ſort purpoſely prepar'd for the Grand Seignor himſelf called Muſcavi, of which he takes a Doſe, when he intends to viſit the Sultaneſſes. The principal Perſons about the Court ſend for it ſecretly to the Halvagi-bachi, who does not deny them, as being a great advantage to him, becauſe he is well paid for it. Nor do they want Snow and Ice to cool all thoſe Liquors, and the Turks are much more humerous and delicate in their Drinks, than they are in their Meat.

Receptacles for the Waters of the Seraglio.

At a place ten or twelve Paces diſtant, and oppoſite to theſe Offices is the Receptacle, or Reſervatory, which diſtributes all the Waters of the Seraglio, and they are thence directed to every Quarter, into the places where there is a neceſſity of them. One of the Baltagis has his ſtation there all the day long, to give Water as he is directed. And when the Grand Seignor paſſes from one Quarter to another, the Fountain of that where he is in Perſon, plays continually during his abode there, by a Signal which is given to the Baltagi.

The little Stables.

On the left hand in the ſame Court, and oppoſite to the Kitchins, may be ſeen the Grand Seignor's little Stables, which do not hold above twenty five or thirty choice Horſes, deſig'nd for his Exerciſes with his Favourites, and above the Stables, in great Rooms, they keep the Saddles, Bridles, Houſſes, Trappings, Foot-Cloaths, and Stirrops, which are of ineſtimable value by reaſon of the abundance dance of precious Stones whereby they are enrich'd. There are some Harneſſes which amount to a million of Livers, French Money. The great Stables ſtand all along the Canal, which beats againſt the Walls of the Seraglio. They are always well repleniſh'd, and in good order, and they take care that there be not ſo much as one vacant place therein. In thoſe Stables does the Grand Seignor keep a great number of Horſes of value, to be reſerv'd for the War, or to be us'd in ſome Magnificent Solemnity, that Strangers may ſee the Splendor of his Court.

CHAP. IV.

Of the Hall of the Divan, and the exact Juſtice which the Grand Seignor cauſes to be admitted there.

THE PRINCIPAL HEADS.

The Divan-Hall not very magnificent. The Council-days. Cauſes quickly decided. The cauſes of that expedition of Juſtice in Turkey. The ſubtle Policy of the Ottoman Family. The care which is taken to prevent the revolt of the Janizaries. How the Grand Seignor aſſiſts at the Divan, or Council. The bold action of a Timar-Spahi, who kills a Grand Vizir, and is pardon'd. The noble Genius of Sultan Amurat, and by what Artifices he diſcovered a great breach of Truſt. A kind of Beads us'd by the Turks at their Prayers. A noble Example of a ſevere Act of Juſtice. At what times, and how, the Grand Seignor rids thoſe out of the way whom he ſuſpects. The days on which Ambaſſadors come to the Divan.

THE Hall of the Divan, which belongs to this Second Court, is on the left hand next to the little Stables, as you go towards the Grand Seignor's Quarter. 'Tis a great low Hall, cover'd with Lead, and wainſcotted and gilt in ſome places within, from which it derives a little Ornament. The Floor of it is cover'd with a great Carpet, and there are ſome Benches for the Officers, of whom that Council conſiſts, which the Turks call Divan. There are, as I told you, Galleries of all the ſides of that Court, which makes it look as it were like a Cloiſter; and 'tis under that Gallery which is on the right hand, that the Janizaries have their Station, while the Divan is ſitting. The Divan-Hall not very magnificent.

Council-days. The Council ſits, ordinarily, four days in the week, which days are anſwerable to the Saturday, Sunday, Munday, and Tueſday of the Chriſtians.

Cauſes ſoon decided. Juſtice is there exactly adminiſtred to any one that deſires it, and for what cauſe ſoever it be, ſo, as that the differing Parties have no need either of Proctors or Advocates, Names not known in Turkey, and the Perſons concern'd are to lay open their Caſes themſelves. There is no talk of delays, or putting off from one time to another; People ſhall not languiſh in Expectation, but the buſineſs is decided immediately, what nature ſoever it may be of.

The Reaſon of that Expedition of juſtice. Though this Cuſtom be very commendable, yet can it not be ſo well practis'd amongſt Chriſtians, becauſe they ſtand upon the property of what they have, and that is deriv'd by inheritance from ſome to others, and the litigious partitions of them do many times engage the Proprietors thereof in long Suits of Law. 'Tis quite otherwiſe amongſt the Great Officers of the Port, who are all Slaves, either taken in War, or ſent up, as Preſents, by the Baſſa's, and Governours of Provinces. All their Eſtates, when they die, return to the Grand Seignor, from whom they had receive'd them, ſo that it is a perpetual Circulation, and their Children, as I told you in the begining of this diſcourſe, are brought up to the Seraglio, to be educated there, and that without any hope of ever ſucceeding their Parents, either in their Eſtates, or Employments. The Ottoman Monarchy has always obſerv'd this ſubtle Policy, not to permit that any Family ſhould aggrandize it ſelf, and be powerful from Father to Son: but they bring it down, as ſoon as they have rais'd it up, and timely enough deprive them of the means whereby they might create Factions, to the diſturbance of the State. Thence it comes, that, beſides the Royal Family of the Ottomans, they know not what Gentility, and antiquity of Extraction means; there's no emulation upon that ſcore, Charges and Dignities are beſtow'd anſwerabl to the Merit of the Perſon, without any conſideration of his Extraction. Nay, it ſometimes happens, that the Principal Miniſters of the Empire are the Sons of Cow-keepers, as was one Ruſtan, a Grand Vizir, who made ſo much noiſe under the Reign of Solyman. And ſo, being not any way oblig'd to their Birth, they acknowledge their Fortunes to be the reward of their Education.

But to return to the adminiſtration of Juſtice amongſt the Turks. Thoſe who make the Law their profeſſion, and are look'd upon as the Clergy of Mahomet, leave no place for ſuits at Law; every one knows his priviledges, and what belongs to the function of his Charge, and there ariſe no differences among them, becauſe all things are perfectly well regulated.

In like manner, the people are ignorant what pleading ſignifies. There's no occaſion for publick Notaries, in order to Matrimonial Contracts; There's no great ſums given with a daughter, and the jewels and cloaths which ſhe can get out of her Fathers houſe, are all the portion ſhe brings to her Husband. And this, in few words, is the reaſon that the Turks can put an expeditious end to all their affairs, without giving any toleration to that pettifogging, which, among Chriſtians, proves the ruine of ſo many People.

The Officers, who ſit in the Divan are, firſt, the Grand Vizir, the Lieutenant-General of the whole Empire, who is Preſident of it, and repreſents the Grand Seignor's Perſon; Then the ſix other Vizirs; Then the Cadileſquers of Romania and Natolia, who are the Judges and Intendants of the Armies; Then the three Teſterdars, or Treaſurers-General; Then the Niſſangibacha, the Lord Chancellour; And the Netangi, who is as 'twere the Secretary of State, with ſome Clerks, or Notaries. All theſe Officers come into the Divan-Hall, at four in the Morning, and continue there till Noon, to adminiſter Juſtice. The Chiaoux-bachi has his ſtation at the Gate, with a troop of thoſe that are under his charge, to execute the Grand Vizir's Orders, and has a ſilver-rod in his hand, as a badge of his Authority.

The care taken to prevent the revolt of the Janizaries. On thoſe days that the Divan ſits, the Officers are entertain'd at dinner in the ſame Hall, which is done with much Sobriety, and little Ceremony. All is over and taken away, in half an hours time. The Grand Vizir eats alone, unleſs he call a Baſſa or two, to keep him company. There are carried alſo meſſes of Chourba which is a kind of pottage made with Rice, for the dinners of the Janizaries, who are in their ſtations, under the Galleries. But if it happen that they are in a mutinous humour, and incens'd againſt a Vizir, or againſt the Grand Seignor himſelf, not one of them will put his hand to the Chourba; but they they ſcornfully thruſt back the diſhes, and by that action diſcover their diſcontent.

The Grand Seignor is preſently advertis'd of it, and ſends to them the Capou-Agaſi, Grand Maſter of the Seraglio, to know what their pleaſure is, and what they deſire. Then they depute one of their own Body to go, and ſpeak on the behalf of them all, and that perſon whiſpering the Capou-Agaſi in the Ear, declares to him the occaſion of their diſcontent. That Eunuch preſently carries it to the Grand Seignor; And if they have a peek againſt a Vizir or a Cadileſquer, or ſometimes againſt their Aga, or Colonel, it often happens that to appeaſe thoſe mutineers, the Grand Seignor orders them to be ſtrangled, and ſends them their heads.

How the Grand Seignor is preſent at the Divan.

Sunday and Tueſday are the principal days of the Divan, and then it is properly a Council of State, and of publick affairs. The Grand Seignor moſt commonly aſſiſts at it, but is not ſeen; and that keeps in awe as well the Grand Vizir, as the other Officers. He can come thither from his own Appartment, through a cloſe Gallery, and ſeat himſelf at a window, which locks into the Divan-Hall, and has always a velvet Curtain before it, which he draws when he pleaſes, and eſpecially when he perceives that they have not done Juſtice. I ſhall produce here, an example, famous enough as to that particular, which happen'd in the Reign of Sultan Achmet, the Father of Amurath and one of the juſteſt Princes, that ever the Ottoman Empire had.

The bold action of a Timer-Spahi, who kills a Grand Viſir, and is pardon'd.

The Reader is to call to mind, what I ſaid at the beginning concerning the Timar-Spahi, on whom they beſtow, during their lives, the Government and revenue of ſome Town, according as they have deſerv'd by their Services. The Saphi, whoſe ſtory I am going to relate, had a Timar, between Aleppo and Damas, which might bring him in a revenue of fifteen hundred Crowns. The Grand Vizir, either out of ſome averſion to the Spahi, or upon ſome falſe reports which had been made of him, and which he had been too forward to believe, without taking an exact information of things, took away from him the Timar, whereof he was poſſeſs'd, and beſtow'd it on one of his own Creatures.

The Spahi, finding himſelf ſo unjuſtly diſpoſſeſs'd comes to Conſtantinople, enters into the Divan, and preſents a Petition to the Grand Vizir, wherein he remonſtrates to him his long Services, and how he never was chargeable with any negligence of his duty. The Grand Vizir having read it, tears it in his preſence, which was to ſignifie as much, as that he would not anſwer it, and that there was nothing for for the Spahi to hope for. The Petitioner withdrew, without ſaying any thing: but ſome days afterwards, he returns to the Divan, and preſents a ſecond Petition, which the Grand Vizir likewiſe tears, as he had done the former, without making any anſwer thereto. Upon this ſecond injury, the Spahi, full of fury, and juſtly exaſperated, draws his Poniard, falls upon the Vizir, and kills him.

The Grand Seignor, who was then at the Window, having obſerved that action, draws the Curtain, and with a loud voice commanded that no hurt ſhould be offer'd to the perſon who had done it. He thereupon orders the Spahi to approach, and ask'd him the Reaſon of his having demean'd himſelf with ſo much violence. The other much aſham'd, humbly makes anſwer, but with reſolution enough, That he could not forbear doing what he had done, upon the ſight of ſo great a piece of injuſtice: and thereupon preſenting to him the Petition, which had been torn to pieces, the Grand Seignor caus'd it to be read, and patiently hearkend to the juſt complaints which it contain'd. Having fully examin'd the Affair, his Highneſs commended the Spahi for the Action he had done, uſing the word Aferim, which is as much as to ſay, 'Tis well done, and which is ordinary in that Language, when they approve a thing; and thereupon, there was an additional Liberality made by the Grand Seignor to the Command which he gave, that he ſhould be re-eſtabliſhed in his Timar. He thereupon took occaſion to ſpeak to the other Vizirs, and to tell them, That that Example ſhould teach them to do juſt things, and not to ſuffer themſelves to be ſo blinded by favour, as not to obſerve Equity. The violent action of the Spahi is certainly not to be approv'd, though the injuſtice of the Vizir was manifeſt, but the procedure of the Grand Seignor, cannot be look'd on otherwiſe then as moſt commendable, and a great Model of perfect Equity.

I ſhall not think it much, to produce here a ſecond Example of the exact Juſtice, which the Grand Seignor would have adminiſtred to the People: and in this Example there is ſomething that is ſignally remarkeable. A great Stone-Morter, which may be ſeen at the Gate of the Divan, ſerves for a Monumental confirmation of this Story; and whereas it is accompany'd by many circumſtances worthy our obſervation, I think my ſelf oblig'd not to conceal them from the Reader.

How Sultan Amurate diſcover'd a ſecret breach of truſt.

In the Reign of Sultan Amurat, a certain private Perſon finding himſelf without Wife or Children, reſolv'd to undertake the Pilgrimage of Mecha. Before his departure, he conceiv'd, that he could not better diſpoſe what he left behind him that was moſt valuable, then by putting it into the hands of a Hoggia, a Doctor of the Law. He thereupon left in his cuſtody certain Jewels, in a little bag, intreating him to keep them till he return'd, and declaring him his Heir, in caſe he dy'd in his Pilgrimage. It was the Pilgrim's fortune to return ſafely from Mecha, and making no queſtion but to get what he had entruſted the Hoggia withal, calls for what he had depoſited in his hands. The other makes him a very cold anſwer, telling him, That he knew not what he meant, leaving him very much ſurpriz'd at ſo unexpected an account of his concerns. The Pilgrim, ſmothering his diſcontent, and reflecting, that the thing had been done without witneſſes, did nothing for ſome days; but afterwards, he preſents a Petition to the Grand Vizir, and acquaints him how all things had paſs'd between him and the Doctor. The Grand Vizir perceiving there was a great nicety in that affair, and that the Doctor might eaſily deny a thing which had been tranſacted without witneſſes, bid the Pilgrim have patience a while, and that he would give the Grand Seignor an account of it; which he accordingly did.

The Grand Seignor Commands the Vizir to be very circumſpect in the management of that Affair, as being very deſireous to ſift out the truth of it, and orders him to ſend for the Doctor, to make proteſtations of friendſhip to him, and to put him in hopes of being imployd of things in great importance. Some days paſs on, while the Grand Vizir minds what Game he had to play. At length, he ſends for the Doctor, he commends his ingenuity, and his Conduct; and ſo putting him into very fair hopes, he promiſes him to prevail ſo far with the Grand Seignor, as that he ſhould have the honour to kiſs his hands, ſince it was not juſt, that ſo tranſcendent a Wit as he ſhould be any longer unknown to his Highneſs. The Doctor overjov'd at that diſcourſe, thought himſelf the happieſt man in the World, eſpecially when he ſaw, that the Grand Vizir had made him his Hougia, which is as much as to ſay, his Almoner. The Vizir proceeds, and according to the ſecret Orders he had received from the Grand Seignor, gives the Doctor another Employment, which was, that he ſhould bring him in Report of all the Criminall Affairs which could be preſented. The Grand Seignor, upon the Report a of the Hougia, ask'd him his advice, and what puniſhment the guilty Perſon deſerv'd for the Crime whereof he was convinc'd, the execution being to be done according to the judgment which the Doctor had paſs'd, whom he made his ordinary Reader, and would have near his Perſon.

Five or ſix months paſs on in this manner, ere there could be any diſcovery made of the falſify'd Truſt. And it is to be obſerv'd, That the Pilgrim had given the Grand Seignor an exact Inventory of all the ſeveral things, which he had put into the little Bag. Among other things, there was particular mention made of a Tesbuch of fine Coral. This Tesbuch is a kind of Chappler, or Sring of Beads, conſiſting of ninty and nine beads, upon each of which, the Turks repeat certain words taken out of ſome ſentences of the Alcoran. That Chaplet is divided into three parts, from thirty three, to thirty three beads, by a little ſtring, which ſeparates them: and at the end there hang'd a long piece of Corral, next to which there was another round bead, of the ſame material, of an extraordinary bigneſs.

The more Puritanical ſort of Turks have their Beads in their hands when they are upon viſits, and eſpecially when they approach great Perſons, and that very thing made the firſt diſcovery of the Hogia's theft, and breach of truſt. One day, coming into the Seraglio with his Coral-beads in his hand, the Grand Seignor, before whom he perſented himſelf, caſting his eyes upon them, and perſently imagining, that it might well be the Pilgrim's Tusbuch, according to the deſcription he had had given it in the Catalogue of what things were left in the little Bagg, told the Doctor, that he had a great rarity there. The other immediately approaches him, and intreats his Highneſs with all ſubmiſſion to accept of it. The Grand Seignor takes it, and making ſome diſcoveries how acceptable that Preſent was to him, does by that prudent diſſimulation, cauſe a joy in him, whoſe Chaſtiſement he was then contriving.

But that ſingle indicium the Grand Seignor does not think enough, but he will have other diſcoveries; and knowing that among other things that were in the Bag, there was a Ring, the Work of an Excellent and Ancient Maſter, famous for that ſort of Rings which the Turks wear on the Thumb, when they ſhoot with the Long-bowe, he expects a ſecond occaſion, in order to a fuller diſcovery of the Cheat, and the more abſolute conviction of the Doctor.

'Twas not many days ere that happen'd, by the contrivance of the Emperour himſelf, who calling for one of his Pages, one well skill'd in Archery, went to the place of the Girit, where he alſo call'd for a Bowe, there being not any Perſon in the whole Empire but was inferiour to him, as to ſtrength and dexterity in the Exerciſes of the Bowe and the Dart. When he came to bend the Bowe, he complain'd that the Ring hurt his Thumb, preſuming that the Doctor, who ſtood near him, and had already preſented him with the Coral-Beads, would alſo make him a proffer of the Ring, which he had of the Pilgrims. Is it poſſible ſays the Grand Seignor, that there is not at this time any Maſter living, who can make a Ring any thing like ſuch a one, whom he nam'd? The Doctor whoſe apprehenſion was not ſo good, as to ſee that this Trap was laid for his deſtruction, and thinking to inſinuate himſelf more and more into the Grand Seignor's Favour, told him, That by good Fortune he had a Ring of that very Maſter's Work, which he had kept a long time, and that if his Highneſs would be pleas'd to Accept of it, he would bring it thither, which he preſently did.

Aſſon as the Grand Seignor was return'd to his own Quarter, he ſent for the Grand Vizier, and the Pilgrim, who came into his preſence, and he had in his hand the Chaplet of Corral, which he made as if he were repeating, to try whether the Pilgrim would know it again. The other having well obſerv'd it, addreſs'd himſelf to the Emperour, ſaying, If it ſhall pleaſe your Highneſs to permit me to open my mouth, I dare affirm, that the Chaplet, you have in your hands, is very like that which I have in my little Bag of Jewels, and poſſible I ſhall not be miſtaken, if I ſay it is the very ſame. Whereupon the Grand Seignor commands him to come nearer, and putting the Chaplet, and the Ring into his hands, the Pilgrim affirms, upon his Life, that they are the very ſame things, which he had left in the cuſtody of the Doctor. He coming the next Morning, according to his cuſtom to make a Report of ſome Criminal Cauſe to the Grand Seignor, that Prince, who was a perſon of great Ingenuity and Apprehenſion, propoſes to him a Caſe ſomewhat of the ſame nature with that between him and the Pilgrim, and ask'd him what Puniſhment ſuch a Crime deſerv'd. The unfortunate man, blinded by a good fortune wherein he thought himſelf well eſtabliſh'd, and what was paſt being clearly got out of his remembrance, pronounc'd Sentence againſt himſelf, and anſwers the Grand Seignor, That ſuch a Perſon, deſerv'd to be pounded alive in a Mortar.

Upon that Sentence, the Emperour cau'd him to be immediately ſecur'd, and having order'd all his Cheſts to be brought into the Seraglio, by the Baltagis, whom he ſent to his Lodgings, pulls out of his Pocket the Chaplet of Coral and the Ring, which a Pilgrim of Mecha had entruſted him with the cuſtody of. He afterwards ſhews him the Note or Schedule of all the other Pieces, and commanding him to open his Cheſts, the Jewels were there found, which that unhappy man, convinc'd of his Guilt, and trembling for Fear, deliver'd up into the hands of the Grand Seignor. The Pilgrim was call'd, who preſently knew his Bag and his Jewels; and the Doctor by an open Confeſſion, acknowledg'd his Crime, and Perfidiouſneſs.

The next day, the Emperour order'd the Divan to be Aſſembled, at which he commanded that all the Grandees about Conſtantinople ſhould be preſent, to render the Judgement the more ſolemn. He firſt commanded, that whatever belong'd to the Pilgrim ſhould be reſtor'd to him, together with ſome additional recompence:

pence: and his next command was, That the Doctor ſhould be puniſh'd, according to his own Sentence. To that end, order was given, that a Stone ſhould be made hollow, after the form of a Mortar, into which he was thrown ſtark naked, and pounded alive by the common Executioners. And that is the ſame Stone-Mortar which I have often ſeen near the Gate of the Divan, and is left there for a Memorial of ſo admirable and ſo ſolemn a Judgment. And this was the period of a Hiſtory, whereof all the circumſtances are remarkable, and which is not one of the leaſt Monuments of the Wiſdom of the Emperour Amurat. That Prince, inſtead of uſing his abſolute power at the firſt overture of ſuch an Affair, thought it fitter, by a perſpicacity of mind and prudence, patiently to expect remote occaſions, that he might thence deduce evident proofs of a conceal'd Crime: and his intention was to raiſe the Doctor to great dignities, if he had found him innocent; and to puniſh him ſeverely, as he did, upon the diſcovery of his guilt.

At What time, how, the Grand Seignor rids out of the way, thoſe, whom he ſuſpects.

I told you at the beginning of this Chapter, that of the four days of the Week, appointed for the ſitting of the Divan, thoſe which are anſwerable to our Sunday and Tueſday, are the principal, as being thoſe on which the Affairs of greateſt importance are debated. They call thoſe two days Arzghiunz, in regard, that after the Grand Viſir, the ſix other Viſirs, and the two Cadileſqners, who aſſiſt at the Divan, have adminiſtred Juſtice, they go all together to kiſs the Grand Seignor's hands. If any one of thoſe Nine Judges have ought to ſay to him, he is permitted on thoſe days, to ſpeak to him freely: and it is ordinarily upon thoſe days alſo, that the Grand Seignor takes his time, if he has a mind to take off any one. He then orders the Boſtangi-Bachi to be ready, with ſome of thoſe who attend him, to execute his will; and having declar'd to him who they are, whom he would have ſtrangled, the order is no ſooner given, but that either at their arrival, or at their departure, it is punctually obey'd. True it is, that he does not demean himſelf ſo, but when he is afraid of ſome popular ſedition, in caſe he ſhould ſend to puniſh them in their own Houſes, where they might make ſome reſiſtance. But within the Seraglio, and in ſight of the Janizaries, who are in their ſtations near the Divan, the unfortunate Perſon, whom they would have to be ſtrangled, has no more to do than to bow down his Head, and to ſtretch out his Neck, without thinking of any reſiſtance, which would be to no purpoſe. In the Eleventh Chapter I ſhall give an Account at large, how they proceed to that Execution.

The days on which Ambaſſadors come to the Divan.

A little beyond the Hall of the Divan, you come to another Hall, rais'd up after the manner of a Balcony, where the Ambaſſadors are ſeated, when they aſſiſt at the Divan, and that they do, once in three months, and upon the days that the Janizaries receive their Pay. There is Notice ſent them to be there, out of a vain oſtentation, that they may ſee, what abundance of money goes out of the Treaſury. Between theſe two Halls there is a Gate, which leads to the Quarter of the Baltagis. Thoſe are a ſort of ſtrong and robuſt People, employ'd, as I told you, in carrying of Wood all about the Seraglio, and other mean and painful Offices. As to the wood, which is burnt in the Appartments of the Women, they diſburthen themſelves of it at the Door, where the Negro-Eunuchs take it up, and carry it into the Baths and other Rooms, into which they only are permitted to go. And this is all that is conſiderable in that ſecond Court. Let us now enter further into the Seraglio, and ſee how things are manag'd there.

CHAP.

CHAP. V.

Of the inner part of the Seraglio in general, and particularly, of the Quarter of the Eunuchs, and the Ichoglans.

THE PRINCIPAL HEADS.

The Ichoglans Educated under a ſevere Diſcipline. The great Officers of the Port taken out of the ſame School. The miſerable condition of the Children of the Baſſa's. The great Authority of the Capi-Aga. The Claſſes, through which the young Lads of the Seraglio are to paſs. The quarters of the four principal Eunuchs.

THE inner Seraglio is that part of the great Palace of the Ottoman Emperours, which, from the Second Court, whereof we have given a deſcription, extends to the point, at which place the Gardens are terminated, and which comprehends in general, the Grand Seignors Quarter, and the Quarter of the Sultaneſſes. But in regard the former is diſtinguiſh'd into ſeveral Appartments, appointed for the Habitations of the Officers, who ordinarily approach the Grand Seignor's Perſon, and are his moſt neceſſary attendants, I will conduct the Reader from one to another, and give a diſtinct relation of every one of them. In this Chapter, I ſhall treat only of thoſe Appartments which are taken up by the Eunuchs, and the Ichoglans, who are under their Diſcipline.

The Ichoglans kept under a ſevere diſcipline.

At the begining of this diſcourſe, I made mention of the four principal Eunuchs, who have others ſubſtitute to them, to obſerve the actions of thoſe young Lads, who are committed to their charge, and to inſtruct them, as well in the Mahumetan Religion, as in the Exerciſes of the Body, and particularly, as to what relates to the Grand Seignor's Service. The Quarter as well of the Eunuchs, as the Ichoglans ſtands next to the Divan-Hall, and begins to make part of the third Court, all along which it reaches on the left hand. It is divided into ſeveral Appartments, and among others, there are four, which they call Oda's, that is to ſay, Chambers, into which are diſtributed ſix hundred Ichoglans, according to the orders of the Capi-Aga; who, with the other principal Eunuchs, judges of every ones capacity. 'Tis the Capi-Aga alſo, who orders their paſſing out of one Oda into another, as we remove our Scholars from a ſixth form to a fifth; and the caſe is the ſame in their Oda's as in our Forms, or Claſſes, this firſt of the four Oda's, the ſeverities whereof they muſt weather out as well as they can, being the laſt in point of dignity. When he makes his general Viſitation, upon which follows the foreſaid promotion, he turns out of the Seraglio, all thoſe whom he thinks uncapable of doing their Prince good Service, and that ſuch as betray their diſguſt of ſo auſtere a life; and then they are put out of all hopes of ever entring into the Seraglio any more, and cannot pretend to any other Fortune, then that of Spahis, with a ſmall pay. The advantages of capacitating themſelves for the moſt eminent Charges of the Court and the Empire, makes thoſe who remain behind to take the greater courage, and accordingly they patiently ſuffer, for the ſpace of many years, the harſh and unmerciful treatments of the Eunuchs, whom, upon all occaſions, they always find very liberal of the Baſtinado.

They

The wretched condition of the Baſſa's Children.

They are thoſe Ichoglans, whom we may alſo call the Grand Seignor's Pages who are advanc'd to the dignity of Baſſa's, Beys, Capigi-bachis, Haznadar-bachis, and the other great Officers of the Port. But they are particularly cull'd out of the number of the Tributary Children, who are taken away from the Chriſtians, or taken in War, by Sea or Land. For, as to the Beiczades, or Children of Baſſa's, whom they bring up in the Seraglio, you are to remember what I have already ſaid, that they can never aſcend higher, than to the Charges of Beys, or Captains of Galleys.

When any one of theſe Ichoglans is deſirous to remove out of the Seraglio, or if any one of the white Eunuchs has the ſame deſire, he preſents a Petition to the Capi-Aga, who carries it to the Grand Seignor, he receives his diſmiſſion, and is alalow'd certain Pay, proportionabl to the continuance and quality of his Services. But there are others, whom the ſame Capi-Aga turns out of the Seraglio againſt their wills, and that after they had weather'd out the firſt years, which are the moſt inſupportable. And that is done ſometimes upon this ſcore, that the Capi-Aga having had ſome conteſt with any one of thoſe Ichoglans, while they where Camarades in the time of their youth, and fearing leaſt he ſhould come one day to traverſe his deſigns, he employs all his credit and intereſt, to remove him out of the Seraglio, but withal procuring him a Recompence and Salary, according to the number of years he has ſerv'd.

The Claſſes through which the Lads brought into the Seraglio are to paſs.

The firſt of the four Chambers, into which the Ichoglans are diſtrubuted, has the greateſt number of them, becauſe they are yet very young, and as it were Novices, under the firſt Perula and it is called the Couchouk-Oda, that is to ſay, the little Chamber, though it be the largeſt of them all, in regard it is the loweſt in point of Dignity. There they are taught to read and write, and are initiated in the firſt grounds of the Mahumetan Law. And after they have ſpent ſix years in that Chamber, they are remov'd into the ſecond, which they call Quilar-Oda, wherein being grown more robuſt, they are inſtructed in the Exerciſes of the Body, in ſhooting with the Bowe, uſing the Lance and other divertiſements of that kind. They are more perfected in the ſpeaking of the Turkiſh Language, whereto they alſo add the Arabian, and the Perſian, which they ſhall have occaſion to uſe, in the Governments whereto they may be ſent.

There are four years ſpent in this ſecond Chamber, out of which they are again removed into the third, which they call Chaſnadar-Oda, or the Chamber of the Treaſury. In this Chamber they begin to do the Grand Seignor ſome Service, and to be imploy'd in the Wardrobe, and the Baths, and there they are alſo taught to Ride, and to perfect themſelves in the Exerciſes ſuitable to that Station, wherein they ordinarily ſpend four years. Each of theſe three forementioned Chambers has a white Eunuch for its Chief Overſeer. The Serai-Agaſi has the Direction of the firſt; the Quilargi-bachi Commands in the ſecond; and the Chaſnadar-bachi is the Governour of the third.

I ſhall have occaſion to ſpeak more at large of the two laſt, when I come to the Chapters of the Cup-bearers Office, and the Treaſury; and therefore I ſhall only add here, concerning all the three in general, that the Ichoglans, who are inſtructed therein, have not any Commerce with thoſe of the fourth Chamber, of whom I ſhall give an account by and by, nor with any other Perſon out of the Seraglio, or in the other Courts, but with the particular permiſſion of the Capi-Aga, and in the preſence of an Eunuch, who hears all that is ſaid: That they cannot converſe amongſt themſelves but at certain regulated hours; and that converſation muſt be manag'd with a great obſervance of Modeſty, as there is an exact Obedience remarkable in all their deportments: And laſtly, that they are all clad in ordinary Cloth, even to the Beicſtades, that is, the Sons of Viziers and Baſſa's who are dead, while thoſe of the fourth Chamber wear Cloth of Gold and Silver, becauſe they come into the Grand Seignor's preſence, and often approach his Perſon. I ſhall give you an account anon of their Dormitories, that is, the places where they take their repoſe, as alſo of the Functions of the Oda-bachi and the Deſtergi-Aga, who act according to the Orders they receive from the four Eunuchs.

The fourth Chamber, which is the Prince's Chamber, is called Haz-Oda, and I ſhall ſpeak of it when I come to treat of the Cup-bearers Office, and the Grand Grand Seignor's ſecret Apartment. Here, the Ichoglans, who have endur'd hardſhip ſo many years in the three firſt Chambers, begin to take breath, and to be allow'd more Liberty. They are permitted to converſe with all Perſons within the Seraglio, and they have the advantage of frequent approaches to the Prince's Perſon, to whom they make themſelves known, and from whom they ever and anon receive favours.

The Quarters of the Four principal Eunuchs.

Under the Gate of the third Court, where a certain number of Eunuchs are upon the Guard Night and Day, there is a paſſage on the left hand which leads into a little Gallery, out of which there is an entrance into the Appartment of the Capon-Agaſi; and when the Gate is open, it hides that paſſage, into which a man cannot enter but with ſome difficulty.

A little further, and on the right hand of the Hall of Audience, ſtands the Appartment of the Serai-Agaſi, who is to take care for the keeping of the Seraglio clean and in good order; and a little further yet, near a little Moſque, where the Ichoglans of the three firſt Chambers go to their Devotions, lies the Quarter of the Seferlis, who are an hundred and fifty of the Ichoglans, or thereabouts, particularly appointed for the waſhing of the Grand Seignor's Linnen. When he goes into the Countrey, the moſt Antient among them are of his Retinue; and there muſt be comprehended in that Number, ſuch as play on Timbrels, and the other Inſtrumental Muſicians, who have the ſame appointments with the reſt.

Let us now enter into the Hall of Audience, which is a Quarter as 'twere independent from others, and where the Grand Seignor receives Foreign Ambaſſadors.

CHAP. VI.

Of the Hall wherein the Grand Seignor gives Audience to Forein Ambaſſadors, and the manner how they are receiv'd.

THE PRINCIPAL HEADS.

The deſcription of the Hall of Audience. The Grand Seignor's Throne. The manner how Ambaſſadors are receiv'd. Remarks upon the number of Veſtments which the Grand Seignor orders to be beſtow'd on the Ambaſſadors of Chriſtian Princes. The form of the Oath of Allegiance, which the Cham of the Leſſer Tartary comes to take at the ſame place.

The Hall of Audience deſcribed.

THE third Court of the Seraglio, wherein we now are, is far from being ſo regular, as the precedent, and the Structures within ſufficiently diſcover, that the Perſons by whom it was built, minded not the obſervance of any Order in the doing of it. When you are at the Gate of this Court, you have juſt oppoſite to you a little Appartment, not adjoyning to the others, at the entrance of which you find, on both ſides, a Fountain iſſuing out of a Wall, the Water whereof is receiv'd into two Baſins or Ciſterns: And 'tis in this Appartment that the Hall of Audience ſtands. 'Tis an arched Structure noble enough in its kind, ſuſtain'd by Marble Pillars, and there is yet to be ſeen in the midſt of it, a ſmall ſpout of Water, which falls into a Baſin. This Hall is open of all ſides, and at the lower end, oppoſite to the Gate, they place the Grand Seignor's Throne.

The Grand Seignor's Throne.

This Throne, which is rich enough is in the manner of an Altar, and it is brought into that Hall only upon thoſe days, whereon the Grand Seignor is willing to give Audience to Ambaſſadors, and when the new Cham of the Leſſer Tartary, whom he has choſen to govern there, comes to receive the Inveſtiture of his Kingdom, and to take the accuſtomed Oath. The back-ſide of the Throne, is ſet againſt a partition erected for that purpoſe, which is not above half a foot higher than it, and 'tis that keeps in the cuſhions which are behind the Grand Seignor.

There are in the Treaſury-Chamber eight ſeveral very ſumptuous Coverings purpoſely made to cover the aforeſaid Throne: and they are ſo large, that they reach down to the ground on three ſides of it, that is to ſay, before, on the right hand, and on the left: for as to the back-part, it is, as I told you, faſtn'd to the partition. The moſt Magnificent of all thoſe Coverings is of a black Velvet, with an Embroydry of great Pearls, whereof ſome are long, and others round, and in the form of Buttons. There is another of white Velvet, ſet out with an Embroydery of Rubies and Emeralds, moſt whereof are ſet in Beazils, or Collets, the better to keep them in. There is a third, of a Violet-colour'd Velvet, embroyder'd with Turqueſes and Pearls. The three others, which are next in eſteem to theſe, are alſo of Velvets of different Colours, with a rich Embroydery of Gold. And the two laſt are of a Gold-Brokado, which have alſo their particular Beauty and ſumptuouſneſs. The Throne is adorn'd with one of theſe coverings, according to the Grand Seignor's reſpect to the Sovereign, whoſe Embaſſy he receives; and he levels his own Magnificence to that of the Prince whom he would honour.

The manner of receiving the Ambaſſadors,

And this is the manner how the Ambaſſadors are received into the Hall. For as to the Order, and Ceremonies of their march from the Hôtel, or great Houſe of Perra, to the Port of Conſtantinople, and from the Port, to the Seraglio, no queſtion but there have been Relations enough made already. After the Ambaſſador has din'd in the Hall of the Divan, with the Grand Viſir, who there expected him, while his Retinue are entertain'd under the Gallery, upon ſome old Carpets of Leather, which they ſpread upon the ground, and upon which there are a few Diſhes of Meat ſet, he receives the Veſts or Garments, which the Grand Seignor ſends him, as well for his own Perſon, as for thoſe who Accompany him, and they put them on immediately, over all the Cloaths they have about them, as they would do a Morning-Gown.

In this Equipage the Ambaſſador is conducted to the Hall of Audience, by the Capi-Aga, the Grand Maſter of the Ceremonies, who is aſſiſted by ſeveral Eunuchs: and when he is at the Door, two Viſirs ſtand ready to receive him, and they go on each ſide of him, till he comes to the place, where he is to bowe, and to kiſs the Grand Seignor's Garment. From the very Gate of the Court, kept by the Eunuchs, quite to that of the Hall, they walk all along upon Carpets of Silk; and the Floor of the Hall, though all paved with Marble, is alſo covered with another Carpet of Gold, the Workmanſhip whereof ſomewhat reſembles that of our ordinary Straw-Mats, and much about the ſame thickneſs.

The Grand Seignor demeans himſelf with a great deal of gravity, while he is in his Throne; and behind the little Wall or Partition, againſt which it is ſet, you ſee, ſtanding in order, the Kisler-Agaſi, who is a Negro-Eunuch, and chief Overſeer of the Appartment of the Women; the Seligdar-Aga, who carries the Grand Seignor's Sword; the Chokadar-Aga, who carries the Royal Robe, an Officer whom in France they call Porte-Manteau; the Riquabdar, who holds the Stirrup, when the Prince gets on Horſe-back; and the Hazadabachi, chief of the Chamber, which Office would be equivalent in France, to that of the Grand Maſter of the Wardrobe.

All

All these fore-mentioned Officers do all deport themselves with a great appearance of modesty, having their Arms cross their Breasts: And as to the Capi-Aga, the Introductor to the Ambassadors, and Grand Master of the Seraglio, he stands in the midst of the Hall, and in the same posture of humility. On the left side of the Throne, there is a kind of a low Seat, cover'd with red Velvet, with a Gold-fringe, on which the Ambassadors go and sit down, after they have kiss'd the Grand Seignor's Robe, till such time as those of their Retinue, who have had Vests, the number whereof is limited, have perform'd the same Ceremony. In the mean time, all the Bassa's are standing, in the presence of their Prince; nay, the Cham of the Lesser Tartary is not excepted out of that Law, when he comes to do homage. All this action is perform'd in great silence, and the Grand Seignor making no answer at all at that time, leaves it to the Grand Vizir, to make some short Complement, in order to the dismission of the Ambassador, who withdraws with a profound reverence, without uncovering his head, or turning his back, till he be out of the Hall.

The Ministers of Christian Princes and States who ordinarily reside at the Port, are the Ambassadors of England, France, and Venice, and the Resident of the States General, who have all their respective Habitations in Pera. When there comes thither any Ambassador or Resident, from the Emperor, or from Poland, or Muscovy, they oblige them to take up their abodes at Constantinople, that they may be the more assur'd of their persons.

Remarks on the number of Vests, which the Grand Seignor orders to be given the Ambassadors of Christian Princes

The Grand Seignor distinguishes the Quality of those Princes and States, and the esteem he has for them, by the number of Vests which he orders to be bestow'd on their Ambassadors when they come to Audience. The Ambassador of France has four and twenty allowed him; the Ambassador of England, sixteen; the Ambassador or Agent of Venice receives twelve, and the Dutch Ambassador as many.

When Monsieur de Marcheville was Ambassador in Turkey, from his most Christian Majesty of France, I had the honour to be one of those who accompanyed him to the Seraglio, where after Dinner with the Vizirs, in the Divan-Hall, while his Retinue were treated under the Gallery, the Vests were brought according to the custome. The Ambassador coming to distribute them to those whom he had a mind to favour, and take along with him to the Audience, he was much surprized, to find that he had got but sixteen. He immediately sent word to the Grand Vizir, that he wanted eight Vests, and that he would not go to his Audience, till he had the full number, which they had wont to present to the Ambassadors of France. There was some contest about it, which retarded the Audience near an hours time; but at last Mounsieur de Marcheville persisting in his resolution, the Grand Vizir complyed, and sent him eight other Vests.

The Form of the Oath of Allegiance made by the Cham of the Lesser Tartary to the Grand Seignor.

What remains of this Chapter must represent the manner, how the Cham of the Lesser Tartary comes into this Hall of Audience to take the Oath of Allegiance to the Grand Seignor. The Reader will be pleased to remember, what Observation I made at the beginning of this Work concerning the Family of that Tributary Prince, whom the Ottoman Emperors keep under the Yoke. The Cham who is to Reign in his turn, and according to what disposal the Grand Seignor has made of the Government, presents himself before him in the Hall of Audience, and after he has kissed his Robe, retires some paces back, and stands. Then they bring in the Alcoran, upon a great green Velvet Cushion, without any Embroydery, at the four Corners whereof there are four Tassels of Gold and Silk, and they place it on the Grand Seignors right hand. Now whereas he sits on a Carpet cross-leggd, there must be great care taken, that the Cushion be not so high as his knees; for the Turks would account that a great sin; and they bear so great a respect to the Book of the Alcoran, that they cannot touch it till they have first wash'd themselves. Before they open it, they kiss it, and put it upon their heads, and after they have read something in it, they kiss the writing of it, and then they rub their faces with it, before they shut it. The Prince, who is to take his Oath, is standing all this time, as I told you, with his hands stretch'd out one against the other, and lifted up as high as his shoulders, to receive the Book of the Alcoran out of those of the Capi-Aga, who had been to take it off the Cushion, having kiss'd it and touch'd his head with it.

The Oath which the Cham takes is in theſe Words:

Bou quittab hak juchun ſeadetlu, padichaim, tare ſin den her ne Emir, ve ferman bana keleurſe itaat ideym.

That is to ſay,

By the Truth of this Book I will cauſe to be executed all the Orders and Commands which ſhall be brought unto me from my Lord.

And now that I have given you the Oath of Allegiance made by the Vaſſal to his Lord, I ſhall alſo add the Form of that, which the Ottoman Emperour requires of all the Chriſtian Princes, who are ſubject to his Jurisdiction, ſuch are the Princes of Moldavia and Walachia. It runs in theſe words:

Hi iſa hac Juchum, ſeadetlu padichaim tare ſin den her ne Emir, ve ferman bana keleurſe itaat Ideym.

That is to ſay,

By the Truth of Jeſus Chriſt, I will cauſe to be executed all the Orders and Commands, which ſhall be brought unto me from the Emperour my Lord.

The Grand Seignor requires alſo an Oath of Allegiance of all the Baſſa's, whom he ſends to the Frontiers of the Empire; as the Baſſa's of Grand Cario, Babylon, and Buda, which is more than he exacts of the other Governours of Provinces, which are not upon the Confines of his Territories, and of whom he has no ground to be afraid.

Let us now make our Entrance into the Quarter of the Eunuchs and the Ichoglans, whereof the Baths make a great part.

CHAP.

CHAP. VII.

Of the Baths of the Seraglio.

THE PRINCIPAL HEADS.

The prodigious ſtrength of Body of a certain Ichoglan. The Moſquey belonging to the Appartment of the Eunuchs. The Employments of the Dwarfs, and the Mutes. The ſuperſtition of the Turks in the manner of paring their Nails. The Colours forbidden the Chriſtians in whatever they wear about their heads. The Deſcription of the Baths. Certain Abuſes reform'd. Why the Inhabitants of the Eaſtern Parts do not make uſe of Paper upon an undecent account. The Perſians more ſcrupulous than the Turks. They are great Lovers of cleanlineſs. Certain Chambers very commodious and divertive. The ſtrict prohibition of Mahomet for any one to ſuffer himſelf to be ſeen ſtark naked. A certain Earth which takes off the Hair, and its dangerous effects.

THE Baths deſign'd for the Grand Seignor's own Perſon, and his principal Officers, take up a great ſpace of the Quarter of the Eunuchs. The little Ovens, whereby they are heated, called Kulkans, are adjoyning to the Appartment of the Serai-houdaſi, and fifteen Ichoglans, the moſt robuſt that can be found, are imploy'd in keeping the Fire going. They have the denomination of Kulkangis; and five and twenty others, who are named Dellaks, are employ'd in the Baths, to ſhave and rub the Body, as alſo in applying Cupping-Glaſſes to thoſe who ſtand in need thereof. Among the Kulkangis, he who is the moſt antient in that Employment has a pre-eminence and ſuperiority over the reſt, whom he many times commands to exerciſe themſelves in wreſtling, and lifting a heavy Iron Bar with one hand.

There are three ſuch Bars faſten'd upon great Cramp-Irons over the door that goes into the Baths, and the middlemoſt of the three, as it is commonly reported, weighs a hundred Okkas, which amount to Three hundred and fifty pounds Paris weight, an Okka weighing three pounds and a half, or thereabours. There was heretofore one of thoſe Ichoglans, of ſo prodigious ſtrength, that the Grand Seignor himſelf would have the ſatisfaction of ſeeing a Tryal whether he could with one hand lift up and turn about that Iron-bar; which he did to the great aſtoniſhment of the Prince, and preſently after he entertain'd him with another demonſtration of the ſtrength of his Arm. Over theſe three Iron-bars, there hung two Head-pieces of Iron whereof one was an inch in thickneſs, and the other about the eight part of an inch. The ſame Ichoglan did, in the Grand Seignor's preſence, at one blow of a Battle-Axe,

The prodigious ſtrength of Body of a certain Ichoglan.

Axe, cut through the head-piece of an inch thick, and, at one blow with a Sabre, cleft the other to the middle of it.

The Moſquey belonging to the Appartment of the Eunuchs.

Oppoſite to thoſe Ovens are the Cocks, whereby the waters are diſtributed into the ſeveral Rooms of the Baths; and I forgot to tell you, That before you enter into that place, you find a little Moſquey, adjoyning to the Appartment of the Saraiket-houdaſi, where all the Ichoglans go to their devotions twice a day. If they fail the doing of it, the Oda-bachi, who, in every Chamber, takes notice of their demeanours, calls them to an account, and they are ſure of the baſtinado, as they are alſo for any other fault they commit; and ſometimes they receive the ſaid puiſhment on the ſoles of their feet, and, upon ſome occaſions to ſuch a number of blowes, that the nails of their toes come off; and that is the puniſhent which is properly call'd Drubbing.

The Employment of the Dwarfs and Mutes.

Out of that Moſquey you paſs into a Gallery, adjoyning to the Baths, and there the Diſlis and the Geuges; that is to ſay, the Mutes and the Dwarfs are employ'd in ſome work or other all day long. Some ſpend the time in learning to make up Turbants, wherein there is more work and difficulty than is imagin'd, eſpecially in making up the Grand Seignior's own Turbant, when he goes to the Divan. For then he takes an extraordinary large one, as do alſo all the Officers of the ſame Divan when they go to Council: and I cannot make a better repreſentation of that kind of Turbant, then by the form of our largeſt ſort of Citrals, if they be made hollow in the middle, ſo as that the head might enter into that hole.

Others are employ'd in ſhaving, paring the nails, and other things of that kind. They do not make uſe of any Scizars for the nails, in Turkey nor in any part of Aſia; it being a thing forbidden by Mahomet in his Law, and accordingly they account the doing of it a great ſin. But they make uſe of a little Steel Inſtrument, ſomewhat like a Pen-knife, and the only cutting part is the end of it, and they are dextrous enough in the performance of that Office. It is the Cuſtom all over the Eaſt, that the Barber who trims you, ſhould alſo make up your Turbant, which is many times diſcompos'd, pair the Nails of your Hands and Toes, and take away the filth out of your Ears: for the Turks and all the Inhabitants of Aſia, are great lovers of cleanlineſs, and cannot endure the leaſt naſtineſs, either on themſelves, or thoſe who come near them, as I ſhall give you an account anon.

Colours forbidden the Chriſtians in their Coiffure.

And having ſpoken ſo much of the Turbant, it will not be unſeaſonable for me to communicate this Remark to you here, That in the Ottoman Empire, and all over Arabia, none but Mahumetans are permitted to make uſe of White for the covering of their Heads; whereas in Perſia, and all over the Great Mogul's Empire, men may take what Colours they pleaſe themſelves.

The deſcription of the Baths.

I come now to the great Bath, which is adjoyning to the Chamber of the Hamangi-bachi, who is the chief Overſeer of it, and which makes part of the Appartment of the Seferlis, or the Grand Seignor's Laundry-men. The place where they put off their Cloaths, is a ſpacious Louver or Banquetting-Houſe of Free-ſtone, high enough, and in one of the moſt eminent parts of the Seraglio. The Floor is paved with a very delightful kind of Marble laid in ſquare pieces; and it has two large Windows jutting out upon the Gardens, ſomewhat like Balconies, from which you have a Proſpect of the two Seas. In the midſt of that Domo or Louver, you find a Fountain, the Water whereof is received into two Baſins or Ciſterns: The former, which is the higheſt, and withal the leaſt, is of one piece of White Marble, having in it a little intermixture of Red and Black Veins, and pierced through at ſix ſeveral places, for the reception of ſo many ſmall Pipes of Copper through which the Water falls down into the other Baſin, which is alſo of Marble, of ſevreal Pieces, and ſeveral Colours.

Abuſes reform'd

Within the Domo, there is a great number of Poles, which are diſpoſed all about it, and ſupported by certain pieces of Iron coming out of the Wall. Upon thoſe Poles they dry the Linnen which they had uſed in the Bath; and of that Linnen there are ſeveral ſorts. Heretofore, the Pages were allowed only a long Piece of Linnen Cloth, which came only twice about their waſtes: but upon obſervation made, that they abuſed them, and that handſome young Lads playing together, ſnatched that piece of Linnen one from the other, purpoſely to diſcover the their nakedneſs, they uſe in the Baths only ſuch Garments of Linnen as are ſowed cloſe above, and reach from the waſte down to the Feet, much after the manner of a Womans Petti-coat. At their coming out of the Bath, they have two other ſorts of Linnen to dry themſelves withal, of the largeneſs of ordinary Table-Cloths, whereof the one is Red, with a border of Silk of three fingers breadth, which covers them, as ſoon as they are out of the water, from the waſte downwards to the ham; and the other is White, wherewith they rub themſelves. For theſe two ſorts of Towels, they have but one Name, to wit, Pechetumal.

Why the Levantines do not uſe Paper undecently.

On one ſide of the Fountain, which is in the midſt of the Domo, there is an entrance into the Bath, and near that is the Hall where they uncloath themſelves in the Winter-time. A little Gallery which lies on the left hand, leads to the places deſign'd for the eaſing of nature, and every ſeat has a little Cock, which ſupplies them with water to waſh themſelves, after they have done. It is accounted an heinous Sin among them, to make uſe of Paper for that purpoſe; and the reaſon they give for it is this, That, poſſibly, the Name of God might be written upon it, or might contain ſome Text of the Law, which would be a profanation of it, and conſequently ought to be avoided. Beſides, they have another opinion, That Paper is not ſo proper ſo well to make clean that part, which the neceſſity of the Body does ordinarily ſo much defile, but that there may be ſomething of ordure left; and that being obliged to preſent themſelves before God with an abſolute Purity of Body and Mind, their Prayers could not be heard, if they ſhould not be wholly clean.

The Perſians more ſcrupulous than the Turks.

The Perſians are yet more ſcrupulous than the Turks upon this account. For though they both agree in this, That their Devotions are ineffectual, nay indeed that they are not in a condition to perform them without crime, if they be not pure, as to Body and Mind; Yet the former are of a perſwaſion, That the leaſt ordure which, through Negligence or Inadvertency, might remain upon their Perſons or their Garments, would render their Prayers fruitleſs and criminal, which the Turks, ſomewhat leſs ſuperſtitious as to that particular, will not acknowledge.

They are great lovers of cleanlineſs.

Certain it is alſo, That in Perſia they are extraordinary Lovers of Cleanlineſs; inſomuch that I have obſerved, That at Iſpahan, the Metropolis of that Country, where the Streets are not paved, when there falls a little Snow or Rain, which muſt occaſion ſome dirt, few People will come out of their Houſes, unleſs they be forced thereto by ſome Concern of great importance. And when they do go abroad at ſuch a time, at the Houſe-door into which they are to enter, they put off their Shooes, their Upper-garment, the Cap which covers their Turbants; and if they have the leaſt dirt or filth about them, they think themſelves impure, and that it would be a diſreſpect to the Perſon whom they are to Viſit. Nay, a Perſian ſhall be very ſcrupulous, and make a great difficulty to receive a Man into his Houſe in Foul Weather; and if any one preſents himſelf into that pleaſure, he makes a ſign to him with his hand to keep at a certain diſtance from him, in the place wherein he is to enter into Diſcourſe with him. For if by chance as he comes out of the Street, where there is ſome dirt, and where Horſes paſs to and fro, and may caſt ſome of it upon him, he has the leaſt ſpot of any daggling about him, and afterwards touch the Perſon whom he comes to Viſit, this latter would be Nagis, that is to ſay, Unclean, and thereupon be obliged immediately to change his Cloaths; ſo great is the Superſtition of the Perſians, as to that particular.

Chambers very divertive and Commodious.

At the end of the Gallery, there is a door which gives you paſſage into three Chambers, which are ſo many Baths for the uſe of the Grand Seignor's Quarter. There is adjoyning to the laſt of thoſe Chambers a ſpacious place pav'd Chequer-wiſe with Marble of different colours, and there the Ichoglans are trimm'd. This place has a little eminency in the midſt of it, from which there is a gentle deſcent of all ſides, that the Water wherewith the Barbars waſh their Heads and Beards may the more eaſily be carried off, and the place be always kept clean. On both ſides of the Wall, whereby it is enclos'd, there is a great double Cock, with two Keys belonging to it, which, at the ſame mouth, ſupplyes them alternately with either hot water, or cold, and that falls into a Baſin or Receptacle of White Marble.

Marble, wherein three or four men may bathe themſelves without any inconvenience, or trouble one to the other. There is alſo at one of the ends a little Room of Black and White Marble, and there the Barbers, who have no knowledge of any other Profeſſion, put up all their neceſſary Utenſils and Inſtruments, as Razors, Hones, Balls, and thoſe Irons wherewith they pare their Nails: for as for Linnen, they do not uſe any; and thoſe who are to be ſhav'd come in ſtark naked from the Waſte upwards, and are cover'd from thence downwards, only with a Cloath, which reaches to the Ancle. 'Tis a great Rarity to meet with any one among thoſe Barbers that knowes how to let blood, and their Lancets, are much like the Fleams, wherewith our Farriers bleed Horſes.

Oppoſite to the Chamber of the Barbers, there are three other Rooms arch'd with Marble, the largeſt whereof much ſurpaſſes in Beauty thoſe that are adjoyning to it. The Floor of it is of white and black Marble, and the Walls are done about with ſquare pieces, that are white and blew, and in every one of them you find a Flower in emboſs'd Work, done to the Life, and which a man would take for enamell. Little Lamines or Plates of Gold cover the junctures of thoſe ſquare pieces, and there cannot any thing be imagin'd more pleaſant and divertive than that Chamber is. In the Roof of it, there are ſeveral round holes, of about half a foot diameter, over which there are little Glaſſes made in the faſhion of Bells, order'd as the Venice-Looking-Glaſſes are, leſt any one ſhould have the curioſity, to get up to the Roof, and laying himſelf upon his belly think to ſee what is done in the Bath. The place has no light but what it receives by the means of thoſe holes, and while ſome body is in the Bath: But eſpecially when they go out of it, the door is ſhut, the better to keep in the heat, and to prevent their being ſeen; which might be if inſtead of thoſe forementioned holes in the Roof, there were Windows below, according to our Mode. All the other Baths have their Structures after the ſame manner, and having no light but what comes at little glaz'd holes, there is not any paſſage into it but that of the door, to the end that being preſently ſhut, the heat might the better be kept within the Bath, and to prevent their being ſeen who are in it.

The Second Chamber is another Bath, but as to Beauty, it is much inferiour to the other; And as for the third, there is ſomething in it which is ſingularly remarkable. The Floor of it is lay'd as with a ſort of ſmall ſtones, ſo as that the foot cannot ſlip, though it be wetted at their departure out of the Bath: And the whole Room is done all about with ſquare pieces, having in them flowers of emboſs'd work, done to the Life and covered with Gold and Azure. This is the place into which the Grand Seignor enters, when he comes out of the Bath; and he always goes into it alone, when he intends to ſhave himſelf in thoſe parts, which are not to be nam'd without immodeſty.

Mahomet's Prohibition to be ſeen naked.

Mahomet pronounces a Curſe upon thoſe perſons who ſuffer themſelves to be ſeen, and upon all thoſe who look on them: And the ſtrict obſervance, of his Law requires, That both Men and Women ought to ſhave themſelves, without uſing the aſſiſtance of any other hand.

An Earth that takes off hair, and its dangerous effects.

But moſt of the Inhabitants of the EASTERN Parts, the Arabians, Tartars, and the Indians, make uſe of a more eaſie expedient then the Razor, to get off hair. It is a certain Earth, which they mix with ſome Orpiment, or Arſenick, and which becomes ſoft as butter. When they are in the Bath, and begin to ſweat, they take of that Earth and therewith rub the parts, from which they would have the hair to fall, and preſently after they muſt be very carefull to ſee, whether it begins to fall, as one would obſerve a Fowl, whoſe feathers he would take off, after it had been caſt into ſcalding water. For if that Earth be left too long upon the parts whereto it had been apply'd, it burns and makes holes in the fleſh, the marks whereof will remain, ſomewhat reſembling thoſe, which the Small Pox ſometimes leaves behind it. Beſides the skin of thoſe parts, whereto this application is made, becomes in time as hard and rough as Leather; and thoſe ungrateful inconveniencies have diverted the Turks and Perſians from uſing that Expedient. Nor do the Chriſtians of the Levantine Countries make uſe of it, though they imitate the Mahumetans in the Cuſtom of frequenting the Baths:

Baths: But above all, in Perſia, none make uſe of that remedy, but the poorer ſort of people. The Ladies, not regarding the prohibition of Mahomet, employ their Female Slaves for the performance of that Office; and with a ſmall kind of Pincers and twitchers, ſuch as thoſe, wherewith we take of the hair of the muſtachoes, they do, with a little more trouble, but leſs hazard, what that Earth does in leſs time, but with more danger. Our Sultaneſſes are yet too delicate to imitate the Ladies of Perſia; nay the Men themſelves, in Turkey, are not very forward to have that twitch'd off with pain, which the Razour can take off without any trouble.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Grand Seignor's Treaſury.

THE PRINCIPAL HEADS.

Noble Relicks of Antiquity. The Turks cannot endure Figures repreſenting either Man or Beaſt. The Chambers of the Treaſury, and their Wealth. The Blood of the Baſſa's is one of the Rivers which enter into that Sea of the Treaſury. The uſe of Aloes Wood in Turkey. A ſort of Baſins of a more commodious form than ours, for the waſhing of the hands. Tapers or Candles of a kind of wax of great value. Coffers full of all ſorts of precious ſtones. The Precautions and Ceremonies which are obſerv'd at the opening of the Treaſury. A magnificent Piece of Tapiſtry, wherein the Emperour Charles the Fifth, is repreſented, in emboſs'd Work. A particular Relation of a Baſſa named Ruſtan. The heroick ſentiment of a Turk. The principal ſources of the Wealth of the Empire. How the Revenues of Egypt are employ'd.

THE Treaſury of the Seraglio and the Ottoman Empire, the vaſt Wealth therein contain'd, and the excellent order wherewith it is govern'd, requir'd my being a little more large upon that ſubject. I ſhall diſcover all the Rivers which fall into that Sea, and may have ſome reſemblance to thoſe that enter into the Caſpian Sea, and are never ſeen to come out of it again.

Out of the Chamber, where the Grand Seignor ſhaves himſelf, you paſs into a Gallery, which is Thirty Paces in length, and between Nine and Ten in breadth. There are on the one ſide of it, Six great Marble-Pillars, of Fifteen Foot in height, and of different colours, among which there is one of a very delightful Green, and that colour makes the Turks have a great eſteem for it. You have under your feet in this Gallery a Walk of large ſquare Pieces of Marble, and the high-rais'd Fret-work thereof is a Relick of Antiquity, and there are in it excellent Pieces of Painting after the Moſaick way, repreſenting divers Perſons, Noble Relicks of Antiquity.

and which ſome conceive to have been made for the reception and entertainment of ſome great Prince, in the time of the Greek Emperours.

The Turks have an averſion for Figures repreſenting Man or Beaſt.

The Turks, who have not among them either Gravers or Painters, in order to the making of any repreſentation of Man or Beaſt, for which they have an averſion, have thought it much to endure thoſe Figures, and not being able to refrain from diſfiguring the heads, there is nothing left but the bodies, which is much to be regretted. It may eaſily be conjectur'd, that the Gallery was open on both ſides, as being ſo ſtill to the Court-ſide, and 'tis in the midſt of the Wall, whereby it is enclos'd on the other ſide, that the Door of the Treaſury ſtands.

The Chambers of the Treaſury, and their Wealth.

The firſt Treaſury conſiſts in Four Chambers full of Riches and Rarities. The firſt contains a vaſt quantity of Long-Bows, Arrows, Croſs-bows, Muskets, Firelocks, Sabres, Cymitars, and other Arms of that kind, which are all ſo many Maſter-Pieces, that have been preſented, from time to time, to the Turkiſh Emperours. All theſe Arms are either hung up at the Ceeling, or faſten'd againſt the Wall; but in a pitiful condition, all over-run with ruſt, and cover'd with duſt; and the Grand Seignor ſuffers them to be ſo neglected, becauſe there come in daily Preſents of Arms excellently wrought, the novelty whereof makes him forget the old ones; as alſo for that it is the humour of the Turks, not to make any great account of Curioſities, but at the very time they are preſented with them.

The Second Chamber is a very ſpacious Arched Structure, of the ſame height and Architecture as that of the Bath, of which I gave you an account in the precedent Chapter, where they go and uncloath themſelves in the Summer time: And there is no difference between them, ſave only that this laſt has no overtures in the Roof. That place contains Six great Cheſts, or Coffers, each of them of Twelve Foot in length, Six in breadth, and Six in depth; and if the Covers were not broken to pieces, two men would find it a hard matter to lift them, they are ſo weighty. Theſe Coffers, which are called Ambars, are full of all ſorts of Cloaths for the Grand Seignor's uſe, as Veſts, rich Furs, Magnificent Turbants, and Cuſhions embroider'd with Pearls.

Beſides the Six Coffers before mentioned, there are Eight others, which are but Eight Foot in length, and four in breadth; and theſe are fill'd with Pieces of Scarlet, Engliſh and Dutch Cloaths, of the fineſt ſorts, Pieces of Velvet, Gold and Silver Brokadoes, Embroider'd Coverlets and Counterpanes for Beds, and other rich Commodities of that Nature. As for the Bridles and Saddles cover'd with precious Stones, they are diſpos'd upon ſupporters of Wood or Iron, coming out of the Wall: and all this Chamber is generally very well kept, and all things are neat, and in good order.

The Third Chamber is very ſpacious, and is more like a great Hall. The firſt thing that entertains your Eye, is a great Coffer, the inſide whereof is divided into three parts, and makes as it were Three other Coffers, one upon the other: but they are open'd all on the out-ſide, ſo as that if there be any thing look'd for in the undermoſt, there is no neceſſity of ſtirring the uppermoſt. The lowermoſt Coffer contains thoſe ſumptuous Coverings for the Grand Seignor's Throne, of which I have ſpoken in the Deſcription of the Hall of Audience. In the middlemoſt are diſpos'd the Houſſes and Trappings, enrich'd with Embroidery, and ſome of them with Pearls and precious Stones, which are uſed in great Solemnities. In the uppermoſt Coffer, are kept the Bridles, Breaſt-Pieces, Cruppers, and Stirrups, which are recommendable upon the ſcore of the Diamonds, Rubies Emeralds, and other Precious Stones, whereby they are enrich'd: but the greateſt part of them is cover'd with Turkiſh-Stones, which they have the art of ſetting excellently well.

The Blood of the Baſſa's one of the Rivers that fall into the Sea of the Treaſury.

It is a moſt aſtoniſhing ſight, to behold the quantity of thoſe precious Harneſſes: but it is ſuch only to thoſe, who are ignorant, how the Grand Seignor repleniſhes his Treaſury with ſo much Wealth. It happens thus, That there being a frequent mortality amongſt the Baſſa's and others, who are Governours, of Provinces, whether it be by a natural death, or a violent, and all they have in the World falling to the Grand Seignor, as I told you elſewhere, and being brought into the Seraglio, there are ordinarily found, amongſt their rich Harneſſes, ſome Bridles cover'd with pretious Stones, and thoſe Bridles are brought into the Treaſury.

The

The Caſe is the ſame with the Gold and Silver ready coyn'd, and all the Jewels, and whatever elſe thoſe Baſſa's were poſſeſs'd of. But as to their Saddles, which ordinarily are cover'd with Plates of Gold of the thickneſs of a Ducat, they are put into the hands of the Imbrohor-bachi, who is the Maſter of the Horſe, and come not within the Seraglio.

There are beſides, in the very ſame Chamber, ſeveral other Coffers of different Bulks, wherein there is contain'd abundance of moſt precious things. Some of them are full of rich Swords, adorn'd with precious Stones, as alſo of Sabres which have the ſame Ornaments. For the Turks when they are on Horſe-back, make uſe of both Sabres and Swords, of a good length, and ſomewhat broader than ours. They wear the Sabre on one ſide, and faſten the Sword all along the Saddle, as they alſo do the Battle-Axe, yet ſo as that this laſt paſſes under their Thighs, which cannot incommode them much, becauſe when they are mounted, they ride with very ſhort Stirrups. The Sides, and the Handles of the Battle-Axes which they carry in Triumph, are alſo covered with precious Stones; and in all their Accoutrements the Turks are Magnificent, and do not ſpare for Money. When the Grand Seignor deſigns to honour a Baſſa, he ſends him one of thoſe Swords, or one of thoſe Sabres, with a Veſt of Gold-Brockado, lin'd with ſome rich Fur. But theſe ſumptuous Pieces do but paſs to and fro, in as much as that upon the Death of the Baſſa's, whoſe Eſtates fall to the Grand Seignor, and conſequently are brought into the Seraglio, they are ſtill found again in the Treaſury, as in their Center.

There are yet other Coffers fill'd with Amber-greece, Muſk, the precious Wood call'd Lignum Aloes, and Sandal-wood. There is a certain ſort of this Lignum-Aloes, which is worth a thouſand Crowns the Pound, according as it is Fat, or Oily, the moſt Oily being always the beſt, and the Turks are very expenſive in this Aloes Wood. When ſome Perſons come to viſit them, and aſſoon as they are ſate down, it is their cuſtom to preſent them with a Pipe of Tobacco, with ſome Lignum Aloes in it, which is done after this manner. They take of that Wood, according to the Oylineſs of it, and conſequently its making a greater fumigation, the quantity of a Pea, or a ſmall Bean, and after they have moiſten'd it a little they put it over a few Coals in a Chafing-diſh, in a kind of Perfuming-Pot, which they preſent one after another, to all the Company. There comes out a thick Steam or Exhalation, wherewith every one Perfumes his Head and his Beard, and ſometimes the in-ſide of his Turbant, after which he lifts up his hands on high, crying Elmendels, that is to ſay, Thanks be to God. But before they preſent them with the Perfuming-pot, there is ſome Roſe-water brought in a Veſſel of Gold, or Silver, according to the Quality of thoſe who make the Viſit. This Veſſel is commonly a foot in height, the lower part of it being about the bigneſs of a mans fiſt, and from thence growing gradually ſmaller and ſmaller to the top of it, which is about the bigneſs of ones little finger. At the top of it there is a little hole, out of which comes the Roſe-water, wherewith they waſh their hands and faces, and then hold them over the ſuffumigation of the Lignum Aloes, which not only dries up the water, but alſo ſticks ſo much the cloſer to the hair of the Head and Beard.

The uſe of Aloes Wood uſed in Turkey.

There are alſo in thoſe Coffers abundance of Aromatical Simples, and precious Drugs, Bezoar-Stones, and ſtore of Maſtick, wherewith the Sultaneſſes, and the young Maids of the Seraglio paſs away their time. They have of it perpetually in their Mouths; and this Maſtick ſweetens the Breath, and cleanſes the Teeth, upon which ſcore they are the better belov'd.

Baſins of a more commodious faſhion than ours.

There may be ſeen alſo in the ſame Chamber, and in other Coffers, abundance of Plate, both Gold and Silver, which is never us'd, the Grand Seignor having other pieces, for his ordinary uſe, in the Kilar, whatever is ſerv'd up to his own Table being altogether in Pourcelain.

There are, amongſt other Pieces, ſeveral Baſins and Ewers, whereof ſome are enrich'd with ſeveral ſorts of precious Stones. Thoſe Baſins are of a faſhion more commodious than that of ours, and it is an evident Mark of the cleanlineſs of the Levantines. They are round, and about half a foot in depth, and cover'd as it were with a Plate or Server, full of little holes, which makes the concavity of it of equal height with the ſides, and ſo hides the dirtineſs of the water which lies at the bottom of it. They do not riſe after their refection, in Turkey, till they have wash'd their Mouths and their Hands, to do which they bring you Soap and warm Water; and amongst Persons of Quality, they present Rose-water or some other sweet Water, into which you put the corner of your Hand-kercher.

Tapers of a kind of Wax of great value.

They have also in those Coffers great Tapers, or Wax-Candles of above two foot in length, made of a certain very dear composition, of a greyish colour, which has some resemblance to Wax, and is brought out of Ethiopia, every Taper amounting to near a hundred Crowns. They are not us'd but only when the Grand Seignor goes to visit the Sultanesses, and then there are two of those Tapers lighted, and set in great golden Candlesticks, enrich'd with precious Stones. When they are a little above half burnt out, the Negro-Eunuchs, who serve in the Haran, light others, and, out of civility, make a Present of the fore-mentioned remainders to the principal Women attending on the Sultanesses.

There is moreover in one of those Coffers, abundance of Clocks and Watches, German-work, as also of Knives and Ink-horns, after the Turkish Mode, all those pieces being the choice Productions and Master-pieces of great Artists, and adorn'd with precious Stones. There is to be seen, in fine, all along the Walls, but cover'd with a Scarlet Stuff, several Arms, after the Turkish-Mode, neatly kept in order, as Bowes, Arrows, Targets, Battle-Axes, excellently well wrought, and most of these Pieces are of a considerable value.

An ineſtimable Coffer of all ſorts of precious Stones.

But what is most precious in that Chamber and transcends all the rest is a strong Coffer all of Iron-work, which contains another of about a foot and a half square, wherein there is a vast Treasure. When this Coffer is open'd, you see a kind of Gold-Smiths Jewel Box, wherein are ranked all sorts of Jewels of highest value, as Diamonds, Rubies, Emeralds, a huge number of excellent Topazes, and four of those Gems call'd Cats-eyes, which are so beautiful, that they are not to be valu'd. Having satisfy'd your curiosity with the former, you come next to certain little Drawers full of several Jewels, great Roses of Diamonds, Pendants, other Roses of Rubies and Emeralds, Strings and Chains of Pearls and Bracelets. There stands aside by it self a Cabinet, where are the Sorgonges, or the thing wherein are fastn'd the Heron-tops, which the Grand Seignor wears in his Turbant. They are as it were little handles, made in the fashion of Tulips, cover'd over with the most precious Stones of the Seraglio, and 'tis into this that the Heron-top enters, that rich Plume of Feathers, whereof I have elsewhere given the description. Of these Handles, some are higher and more precious than others; and my Overseer of the Treasury assur'd me, That, of all sorts of them, great and small, there are above a hundred and fifty. The lesser ones serve only for the Campagne, and the great ones, which are the richest are reserv'd for the Pomps and Magnificence of the Court, and when the Grand Seignor marches in Ceremony to Constantinople. If he has a desire to satisfie his sight with the lustre of his precious Jewels, he Orders the Coffer to be brought into his own Chamber; but if he call for some particular Piece of the Treasury, he gives order to the Chasnader-bachi, to fetch it, and that Chief Officer of the Treasury cannot enter into it, without abundance of mysterious precautions.

Precautions and Ceremonies obſerv'd at the opening of the Treaſury.

There are alwayes Sixty Pages, more or less, belonging to the Chambers of the Treasury. The number of them is not fixt, but the Credit of the Capi-Aga, and the Chasnader-Bachi, may augment or diminish it, according to their inclinations and interests. Unless they fall into disgrace, as he had done from whom I have some part of these Instructions, they never go out of the Seraglio, but upon their advancement to some considerable Government, or the settlement of a handsome Pension for their maintenance; and so, provided they do nothing amiss, they are well enough accommodated for their lives. The Chief Officer of the Treasury having receiv'd Orders from the Grand Seignor to bring the Piece he would have, assembles all the Pages in their Chamber, and sends for the Anakdar-Agasi, who has the Custody of the Keyes. This last having given three stroaks with his hand upon the Drawer, wherein they are enclos'd, takes them out of it, and following the Chasnadar-Bachi, attended by the Sixty Pages, they all make their appearance together at the door of the Treasury.

The

The first thing that is done is the untwisting of a Chain, which they had put there for the better securing of the Seal, which the Chief Officer of the Treasury had set over the hole, and having found it entire, he orders it to be broken by the keeper of the Keyes, and commands him to open. Assoon as they are got into the Chamber into which the Chasnadar-bachi knows they are to go, he sets himself down upon a low Bench, and declares what Piece it is that the Grand Seignor requires. They thereupon open the Coffer, wherein it ought to be, then they present it to the Chasnadar-bachi, and, if he be desirous of that honour, he has the priviledge to be himself the Bearer of it to the Grand Seignor. Then has he a fair Opportunity to secure something that is precious to himself, if he has the dexterity to do it without any discovery. When he is in the Treasury, he needs only say, That the Grand Seignor desires also the Piece, which he has a mind to convert to his own use, and causing all to be immediately carried to his own Chamber, he there leaves what he would keep, and presents to the Prince only that which he had commanded to be brought him. Not but that whatever is receiv'd into the Treasury and whatever goes out of it, is exactly set down and enroll'd by the Haznaquatib, or Clerk, who keeps the Registers; and the Cheat might be easily discover'd, when at the quitting of his Charge the Chasnadar-bachi gives an account of all things to his successor. But it ordinarily happens, that they are friends, and that the Chasnadar-bachi, who does not leave his Charge, but upon his advancement to that of the place of the Capi-Aga, in case he should dye, or be exalted to a higher Dignity, or upon his being made a Bassa and Governour of a Province, proposes him, among the Pages, for whom he has the greatest affection, and who is his Confident, as a Person qualify'd for the Charge of principal Officers of the Treasury. Accordingly being his Benefactor, he gives in his Accompts as he pleases himself, and delivering unto him an Inventory of what is in the Treasury, he withal produces a Memorandum of the Pieces, which had been taken out thence, during his Surintendency, by the Grand Seignor's Orders. The Clark of the Treasury, might, notwithstanding their intelligence and combination, discover the intrigue; but being one of the eldest Pages of the Chamber, and in a capacity of advancement to the Charge of Chasnadar-bachi, he shuts his eyes, and so avoids the creation of Enemies, thinking it more prudence, to be appeas'd, by the Presents he receives as well from him who enters into the Charge, as from him who quits it. But these Thieveries are not very often committed, and if there were but the least discovery made thereof, a severe punishment would soon be inflicted both on the Author and his Complices.

As to the little Chest or Coffer, wherein the most precious Jewels are kept, it is impossible to get any thing out thence: for when the Grand Seignor would have any Piece taken out of it, he orders the Coffer it self to be brought into his Presence, by the principal Officer of the Treasury, accompany'd by the Keeper of the Keyes, and all the Pages; and before he opens it, he takes notice whether the Seal be entire. After he has taken what he desir'd, the Coffer is lock'd up in his Presence the Seal is set upon it, and it is carry'd back into the Treasury with the same Ceremony. Then do the Sixty Pages receive, ordinarily some demostrations of the Grand Seignor's Liberality, which may amount to ten or twelve Purses, to be divided amongst them.

We are not yet got out of the third Chamber of the Treasury, which may pass for one Spacious Hall, the middle part whereof is taken up by a Scaffold, of nine or ten foot square, the height, the length, and the breadth being equal. This Scaffold is cover'd and surrounded with a piece of Tapestry of Gold and Silk, and in the upper part of it, there is, in emboss'd Work, the Effigies of the Emperour Charles the Fifth, seated on a Throne having in one hand, a Globe, and in the other, a Sword, surrounded by all the Grandees of the, Empire, doing him homage. At the bottom of the said Piece of Tapestry, there may be read certain Verses in Gothick characters: And the upper part of the Scaffold is full of Books in the Latin, French, Italian, high German, English, and other European Languages. There are also some Treatises upon the subject of Navigation, together with two Globes, the Celestial; and the Terrestrial, and some Geographical Maps drawn upon Velom: whence it may be conjectur'd, that they were all taken at Sea, by some Turkish Pirate, and sent as a Present to the Grand Seignor. But not being carefully look'd after, the dust has quite spoyl'd both the Tapestry, and the Books,

Rich Tapistry, wherein Charles the Fifth is represented,

Books, and ſo they remain there as a Monument of ſome Victory gain'd over the Chriſtians.

A remarkable Story of the Baſſa Ruſtan.

The Fourth Chamber of the Treaſury is very dark, and has no other light than what it receives from a little Garret-Window, which looks into the Court, and has three ſtrong Iron-bars, one over the other. Over the Door, there are theſe words Engrav'd in the Turkiſh-Language; Money acquired by the Diligence of Ruſtan. Take here an account of what occaſions this Monument, which they were pleas'd to Erect, to perpetuate the memory of a Grand Viſir, as I have been told it, by ſeveral Perſons in Conſtantinople. He was the Son of a Cow-keeper, and had followed the ſame Employment himſelf: but he had a Genius that might become a Perſon of the higheſt Extraction, and which raiſed him to the Charge of Grand Viſir, and the Honour of being Son-in-law to Solyman. He had many traverſes of Fortune, and was for ſome time out of Favour: but in fine, Solyman, who had great Affairs to manage, and was engaged in a War with Perſia, coming to a little indigency of Money, ſent for Ruſtan, and beſtowed on him the Superintendency of his Revenues. He knew him to be a Man of great Abilities, and capable of putting them, in a ſhort time, into a good poſture; and accordingly his pains and diligence in the management thereof proved ſo ſucceſsful, that he preſently fill'd Solymon's Coffers, and re-eſtabliſh'd the Affairs of the Empire.

The Heroick Sentiment of a Turk.

Upon which occaſion I ſhall here ſet down a thing which is ſtill freſh in the remembrance of many Turks, who receiv'd it from their Fathers. The Turks have ſo great a zeal for the welfare of the State. that one of the Grandees of the Port, an Enemy of Ruſtans, and one, who, upon other occaſions, would gladly have ruin'd him, proteſted to one of his Confidents, That, though it were in his power to do him an ill turn, yet he would not do it then, becauſe he had, by his Induſtrey and Labours, upheld the State, which he retriv'd from the Precipice of deſtruction, and was in a fair way to make a conſiderable augmentation of its Revenues. This generous and heriock Sentiment in the Soul of a Turk, who at his firſt riſe was but a ſimple Slave, would meet with but few Examples amongſt Chriſtians.

But, to reaſſume our diſcourſe concerning the Fourth Chamber of the Treaſury. It is full of Cheſts of two foot in length, and a breadth and depth proportionable thereto, fortify'd with plates of Iron, and made faſt, each of 'em, with two Chains. The number of them is not always the ſame, becauſe the Money is coming in, and going out of that Chamber, and the Coffers are tranſported thence according to the occurrent exigencies, for the payment of the Janizaries, and the maintenance of the Armies.

The principal Sources of the Wealth of the Empire.

All the Gold and Silver which is brought into the Treaſury riſes out of the Revenues of the Empire, and out of the Sale of what Goods the Baſſa's leave at their departure out of this World. As to what is rais'd out of the Empire, which dilates it ſelf ſo far into the three parts of our great Continent, and comprehends ſo many Kingdoms, it may be eaſily imagin'd, that it muſt ſupply the Treaſury with vaſt Sums; but it is not eaſie ſo to aſcertain them. Its revenues conſiſt principally in the collection of the Tributes, and in the Cuſtoms: and the three Teſterdars, or Treaſurers-General, give an account to the Grand Vizir of the Receipts of the Provinces. That Principal Miniſter has the cuſtody of one Key of that fourth Chamber of the Treaſury, and the firſt Teſterdar has that of another, and beſides that, it is always ſeal'd with the Grand Seignors Seal. It is ordinarily open'd, but upon thoſe days, on which the Divan ſits, that is, on Council-days, either for the reception of Money into it, or for the taking of any out, to defray the Charges of the Empire.

What is ſo receiv'd into it is for the moſt part in Silver; and as to the Species of Gold Coins that are brought into that Chamber, they come from four Sources, two whereof are upon a Foreign account, and the other two upon that of the Country. One of the two former conſiſts in the Commerce of the French, Engliſh, Dutch, Italians, Moſcovites, and Polanders, who bring in Ducats out of thoſe Provinces. The other is the annual Tribute, which the Cham of the Leſſer Tartary, the Princes of Tranſilvania, Moldavia, and Walachia, the Republick of Raguſa, and part of Mingrelia and Ruſſia, are to pay the Grand Seignor in Gold, which amounts to very great Sums. One of the two Sources of the Country poceeds from what is found upon the the removal of the Baſſa's, whereof the very coined Gold makes the beſt part; the other from the Revenue of Egypt, where there is an annual coinage of a certain number of Sequins, according to the quantity of Gold, which is brought thither out of Ethiopia, and being coin'd into Sequins, is all convey'd thence into the Treaſury.

The Revenues of Egypt how employ'd.

The Revenue of Egypt may amount yearly to twelve millions of Livers, (that is, about one million and two hundred thouſand Pounds Sterling) which muſt be divided into three parts. Five millions of the twelve, are brought into the Grand Seignor's Treaſury. Four millions of the foreſaid Sum, are employ'd in the maintenance of the Officers and Souldiers of that Kingdom: And the other three are deſign'd for the rich Preſent, which the Grand Seignor ſends every year to Mecha, for the Expences which relates to Religious Worſhip, and to fill the Ciſterns of Arabia, which are ſupply'd with Water, brought by Land, many days Journeys.

Of the five Millions Which are brought into the Seraglio, the greateſt part is in Sequins, according to the quantity of Gold, which the Abyſſines bring into Egypt, and the reſt in Dutch Rix-Dollars. All is brought together into the Coffers of the fourth Chamber of the Publick Treaſury. But as to the Sequins they are carried into the Secret Treaſury, which it is time for us now to open, and give the Reader an account of according to the deſcription which has been made to me thereof, by two men whom their Employments oblig'd to enter into it often.

CHAP. IX.

Of the Secret Treaſury.

THE PRINCIPAL HEADS.

A Vault under ground, into which few Perſons have acceſs. The great frugality of the Emperour Amurat. Ibrahim his Succeſſor, charg'd with evil Conduct. The Grand Seignor's precautions for the ſecurity of his Treaſure. His Liberalities to the Grandees of the Port.

A Vault under ground, into which few have acceſs.

Within the fourth Chamber of the Treaſury, you find a door laid all about with good ſtore of Iron-bars which opens the firſt paſſage, to the place that contains the Grand Seignor's Secret Treaſure. It is never open'd, but when he himſelf has a mind to enter into it; and he do's not enter into it but when the Grand Vizir advertiſes him, that it is time for him to do ſo, and that there is a conſiderable Sum to be carried in. In the firſt place, by the light of Torches they go down a Stair-Caſe of ten or twelve ſteps; at the bottom of which, after an advancement of ſeven or eight paces further, they find a ſecond Door, fortify'd with Iron-work as the former, but much leſs, ſo that a man is oblig'd to ſtoop ere he go into it. When it is open'd, and that they have made their entrance through it, as if they had paſs'd through a Wicket, they are under a great Vault, where they find a great many Coffers, of the ſame largeneſs, as thoſe of the Chamber we came laſt out of.

In

The great frugality of the Emperour Amurat.

In those Coffers they have, for these many years, laid up all that was not expended upon the Publick account, of the great Revenues of the Ottoman-Monarchs, and so it may be call'd his Private Exchequer, into which there is nothing but Gold has entrance, all the Silver being carried into the other Treasury, to be thence taken out again and dispos'd of, as occasion requir'd. After the death of Amurat, Ibrahim, his Successor in the Throne, found in that Treasury four thousand Bags, which they call Kizes, and every bag contains fifteen thousand Ducats of Gold, which amount to thirty thousand Crowns, and those reduc'd to our Pounds, come to thirty Millions Sterling. 'Twas the same Amurat (a prudent and valiant Prince, a man of great Parsimony, and as great conduct in Military Affairs, of whom I have often had occasion to make mention) who enter'd into a War against the King of Persia, and besieg'd Bagdet, or Babylon, which he took on the Twenty Second of December, 1638. I remember, that I was then but Five Days Journey from that place, in the Deserts of Arabia, as having left Aleppo, in order to my going to Balsara, and that of the Threescore and five daves, which the Caravan spent in that Journey, for nine of them, we were destitute of Water, which must needs press very hard, both on the Men and the Camels.

Ibrahim charg'd with ill-management of the Treasury.

Ibrahim, therefore, at his coming to the Crown, found, in the secret Treasury, that prodigious quantity of Gold, whereto he could not make any augmentations; nay some, on the contrary, are of opinion, That he was forc'd to use some part of it, through his ill Conduct of the Warr of Candia. True it is, That the long continuance of that Warre made a great hole in the Revenues of the Empire; but there are Two great Reasons, which divert me from giving absolute credit, to such as affirm, That those Exigencies reach'd the Secret Treasury, For, in short, it is as 'twere a fundamental Law among them, That, before any thing is taking out thence, it is requisite, the Empire should be in imminent danger of ruine; And it is manifest, That though the Turks could not reduce Candia under their Jurisdiction, yet their Empire was so far from being near its decadence, that it still continu'd powerful. Besides, it is to be observ'd, That when the Grand Seignor loses a Battel, it is a disadvantage to his provinces, upon the score of their being thereby depopulated, and so much the less cultivated; but that it is an advantage to his Coffers, in regard there's so much the less comes out of them. The reason of it is evident, because he pays the Veteranes, or Souldiers of long standing, seven or eight Aspers a day, and that those of the new-rais'd Forces do not stand him in above one and a half, or two at the most; their pay augmenting with the time, answerably to their services, and the Prince's good Pleasure. Whereto it is to be added, That when an Emperour dies, his Successor augments the pay of the Janizaries, by an Asper, or two, per diem.

It must be acknowledg'd indeed, That there died a great number of Turks in the Warr of Candia: but it is certain also, That if we consider the great number of Kingdoms and Provinces, whereof the Empire consists, among which there are some very fertile, and very well peopled, it is an easie matter to raise numerous Armies, and to rectuit them, when they have been weakned, by a Defeat, or by some Sickness, which often happens among them. Upon these two grounds, I cannot be induced to believe, that Ibrahim was oblig'd to make any diminution of the Secret Treasury: but I am very apt to believe, that he made not any great additions thereto, because he had not either the good Conduct, or good Fortune of Amurat, and ordinarily, the one avails not much without the other.

All the Gold that lies interr'd under that Vault is in Leather-bags, every Bag containing Fifteen thousand Ducats, that is Seven thousand five hundred pounds Sterling: and 'tis with his own hand that the Grand Seignor puts his Seal to them, which is the same that his Predecessors had us'd before him, save only the name, which must be that of the Prince then reigning. Amurat's Seal had these words graven upon it. Nasrum min allahi abdihil melekil Mourath. Which signifies, The Assistance of God is upon his Servant the Emperour Amurath.

The Grand Seignor's Precautions for the security of his Treasury.

And this is the manner how the Bags of Gold is brought into the Secret Treasury. All the Gold and Silver which come into the Seraglio, is first carried into the the Chamber of the Treasury, and each of them is dispos'd into the Coffers design'd for them. When there is as much Gold as will amount to two hundred Kizes, the Grand Vizir gives notice of it to the Grand Seignor, who appoints a day, for the disposal of it into the Secret Treasury. The day being come, the Grand Seignor, led under the Arm by the Chasnadar-bachi, who is on the left hand, which is accounted the more honourable amongst the Turks, and by the Seligdar-Aga who is on the right, comes into the Chamber of the Treasury, where the Sixty Pages expect him, ranked in order on both sides, with their hands cross their Breasts. The Grand Seignor, having pass'd through the Chamber, and order'd the first Door of the Secret Treasury to be open'd, enters into it, by the light of several Torches of white Wax, and is followed by the Pages, two by two, till they are within the Vault, into which the Bags are brought, ty'd with a Silk-string. Upon the string they put a piece of red soft Wax, whereto the Grand Seignor sets his Seal himself, which is upon a Gold-Ring, wherein are engraven the words before-mentioned, with the name of the Prince then reigning, after which they put the Bags into the Coffers which are all double chain'd.

Before they come out of the Vault, the chief Officer of the Treasury, does ordinarily make this Complement to the Grand Seignor; Seadetlu padichaim cumijd dur quibou bendelerignus euzre ihsan cherüginus izbar idesis: That is to say, My Emperour, we hope, that you will make a discovery of your Liberalities to your Slaves. According to the humour the Grand Seignor is then in, he orders, That there should be a distribution of Twenty or Thirty Purses amongst all those who have accompany'd him, every Purse as I told you before amounting to Five hundred Crowns. The Grand Vizir and the other Grandees of the Port, are permitted to enter into the Chambers of the Treasury, where the sumptous Harnesses, and the Precious Stones are kept, when the Grand Seignor comes thither himself, but they are not to go as far as the Secret Treasury. They stay for him in the Fourth Chamber, when he is to come out of the Vault and then he orders the Coffer of his Jewels to be opened, to shew them the most precious things there are in it. And whereas there are always some Favourites attending there, as also divers other persons, whom the Prince looks upon kindly upon the score of their merit, it seldom happens, but that they all receive some Present or other from him, and he makes not any, but what is of very considerable value. The Treasury being shut up, the Grand Seignor returns to his own Quarter, and all the Grandees accompany him to the Gate of it.

His Liberalities to the Grandees of the Port.

CHAP. X.

Of the Means which the Grand Seignor makes uſe of, to augment his Treaſures, beſides what is done by the ordinary Revenues of the Empire.

THE PRINCIPAL HEADS.

The Preſents made by the Baſſa's to the Grand Seignor, when they enter into their Charges. The Trade driven by the Jews very hazardous to them. The extraordinary Wealth of the Baſſa's. The great Advantages of the Chaznadar-Bachi, and the Pages of the Treaſury. The prohibition of lending Money upon Intereſt. The Perſians but poor Caſuiſts. Formalities obſerved in Turkey about Schedules.

BEſides what may be left every Year in the Treaſury, or Exchequer, out of the ordinary Revenues of the Empire, after all charges deducted, the Grand Seignor has Two other Expedients very Conducive to the augmentation of both the Treaſuries, to wit, the entrance of the Baſſa's upon their Governments, and their removal out of them, whether it be by ſome diſgrace, or by their natural, or violent deaths.

The Baſſas Preſents to the Grand Seignor, upon their advancements.

All the Baſſa's, on whom the Grand Seignor beſtowes Governments, and generally all thoſe, who are remov'd out of the Seraglio, upon their advancement into Charges, are oblig'd, before they take poſſeſſion of them, to make him Preſents, every one, anſwerable to the benefit he has receiv'd from the Prince. For example, the Baſſa of Cairo, aſſoon as ever he is nominated to that Government, knows, that two Millions of Livers, that is reduc'd to the Engliſh account, two hundred thouſand pounds ſterling, will hardly make good the Preſents, which are expected from him at the Port, that is, thoſe due to the Grand Seignor himſelf, and to the principal Sultaneſſes, as alſo to the Muftii, the Grand Vizir, the Caimacan, and other Perſons of Credit in the Court to whom he is ingag'd for his advancement to that Charge, and of whom he may ſtand in need for the future. The Preſent he makes the Grand Seignor himſelf, amounts to Five hundred thouſand Crowns, and the reſt will come to Two hundred thouſand. Add again to that, Five hundred thouſand Crowns, which will be expended in the Baſſa's equipage, and ſo before he ſets his foot in Cairo, his own Purſe, or thoſe of his Friends, will be drain'd of Three Millons and ſix hundred thouſand Livers.

The hazardous Trade of the Jews.

When he comes out of the Seraglio, if he want much of the aforeſaid Summe, there is a neceſſity of borrowing; and if the purſe of his Friends cannot do it, thoſe of the Jewes are readily open'd for his ſupply. They run a great hazard, upon hopes of the great profit of makeing Cent. per Cent. intereſt which the Baſſa does promiſe them. And to be the ſooner reimburs'd of the Money they have ſo hazarded, leaſt his Government be but a ſhort one, they teach him a thouſand lewd

leud wayes, to ſuck out the Peoples blood, and particulary to haraſs the poor Chriſtians. If the Baſſa's can but quietly enjoy their Governments, for one year, nay for ſix Months, the Jews make a good hand of it, and recover the Simms they had advanc'd. But, one the other ſide, they run a great hazard in regard that it happens, many times, the Grand Seignor ſends for the head of a Baſſa, before he has had time enough to ſettle himſelf in his new Government, and then, they who have lent him Money are not to hope ever to recover any part of it.

From what has been ſaid, it may eaſily be concluded, That the greateſt part of the Money of the whole Ottoman Empire is in the Grand Seignor's hands, and among the Jews; I mean the Jews of Conſtantinople. For as to thoſe who live in the Provinces, the world goes but ill with them, and they are in a much more wretched condition, than the Chriſtians; in regard they do not follow any thing of Husbandry: and their inclinations being altogether bent for Traffick, and the management of the publick Taxes or the Cuſtoms, 'tis impoſſible there ſhould be employment for them all.

The extraordinary Wealth of the Baſſa's.

The Grand Seignor therefore receives very conſiderable Summs from the Baſſa's, and other perſons, on whom he beſtows Charges, even before they have taken poſſeſſion of them. But that amounts to little or nothing in compariſon of the advantages which he makes, upon their removal out of them, and eſpecially when they have had a fair time to gather Treaſures, by their inſupportable exactions from the people. Some of theſe Baſſa's have come to that exceſſive Wealth and Power, that their Revenues were equal to thoſe of many great Princes. Such was the fortune of one Machmut, Beglierbeg of Europe, under the Reign of Mahomet the Second; and that, of the Grand Vizir Naſſuf, under Achmet the Firſt. At the death of the latter, there were extraordinary Riches found in his Houſe, in Silver, Gold, and Jewels, and all was brought to the Seraglio, along with his head.

It may eaſily be conjectur'd, by the number of the greater and leſſer Governments, whereof the Empire conſiſts, that there is a conſiderable mortality amongſt thoſe, who derive their Charges and Fortunes from the pure Munificence of the Grand Seignor, and whoſe acquiſitions thereupon falling to him, muſt of neceſſity make vaſt additonals to the Seraglio. But beſides thoſe who are gently convey'd out of this World, by a natural death, there hardly paſſes a year but, violent death comes and acts its part, and upon the leaſt jealouſie, or any fantaſtick apprehenſion the Grand Seignor may have, a Baſſa receives a peremptory Order to ſtretch out his Neck, and he is immediately ſtrangled. In the next Chapter, I ſhall give the Reader an Account, of the formality and ceremony, which is obſerv'd upon that occaſion, where he will find ſomewhat worth his remarking; and I think I may confidently affirm, That they who know it is the cuſtome, to ſtrangle thoſe, whoſe Lives the Grand Seignor would take away, know not all the Particulars obſervable in that Action.

The Baſſa's Goods brought into the Seraglio.

Aſſoon as a Baſſa, or other Grandee of the Port is dead, howe're it came to paſs, and an Inventory of his Goods taken, of which by the Laws of the Country the Prince is the only Heir, all is carried away into the Seraglio, and the Baltagis bring it in Coffers to the Door of the Treaſury. The Chaſnadar-bachi, having diſpos'd them into one of the Chambers, Commands the Locks to be broke open, and the Coffers to be emptied in his preſence; And 'tis then, that as well he himſelf, as the Pages of the Treaſury endeavour to make their advantages of that Rich Booty. For there being ordinarily, amongſt the other things, Jewels of great value, ſuch as that wherein the Heron-tops are faſten'd in their Turbants, or a Ponyard enrich'd with precious Stones, or ſome Carcanet of Pearls, if one or other of thoſe Pages can make a dexterous and clean conveyance of ſome Piece, 'tis his own and he puts it to what elſe he has in ſtock, reflecting on what he has to do, at his departure out of the Seraglio, in order to his eſtabliſhment in ſome Charge, and the great Expences he muſt be at upon that account. The Chaſnadar-bachi, who does his work firſt of all, and with more liberty, does ſometimes connive at what he ſees done by the others, remembring that he has been as they are, and was then glad, that he was not reprov'd for ſo doing. Yet if he perceives that any one of them has ſecur'd to himſelf a piece of great value, aſſoon as he is got to his Chamber, he ſecretly ſends for him, and makes him reſtore it, paying him one half of its worth, and ſo keeps it himſelf.

The great advantages of the Chaſnadar-bachi, and the Pages of the Treaſury.

There are yet other great advantages accrewing to the Chief Officer, and the Pages, from thoſe things which are brought into the Seraglio, upon the death of the Baſſa's. When the Chaſnadar-bachi has adverti's'd the Grand Seignor, that, in the Coffers, which had been brought in, there were many things not fit for the Service of his Highneſs, and that it were better to put them off, before they were injur'd by the moiſture or the duſt; the Prince gives his permiſſion for the ſale thereof, and therupon they take out of the Treaſury what they do not account worthy of a place there. Immediatedly, they ſend for the Bazarcan-bachi, or Chief of the Merchants, who is the beſt skill'd in thoſe things, and who, in the preſence of the Chaſnadar-bachi, and the Pages of the Treaſury, ſets a value on every piece, to their ſatisfaction; for he does not prize it at above half the worth. All the Jewels that will bear a good price, and all the precious ſtones are diſpos'd into the Treaſury, and they expoſe to ſale only things of leſs value, yet ſuch as are worth much: as Trappings for Horſes, Ponyards, Sabres, garniſh'd with Gold, Garments, rich Furres, Saſches, Turbants, and other things of that nature; all the pieces being valued, the Chaſnadar-bachi ſets aſide the beſt of them, to be ſent, together with the value ſet upon them, to the principal perſons of the Seraglio, with whom he is glad to hold a fair correſpondence, and they pay for them the more willingly, becauſe they have them at an eaſie rate. The reſt is diſtributed among the Pages, according to the valuation, and having made choice of ſuch things as they will keep themſelves, ſend away what they do not like, to be ſold in Conſtantinople, by the Halvagis, wherein they alſo make a vaſt advantage, conſidering the appriſement; not accounting what the ſame Halvagis may hedge in for themſelves, as a compenſation for their trouble.

When there is ſuch a ſale made, the Jews are always waiting about the great Gate of the Seraglio, not daring to come too near, for fear of a chaſtiſement of the Baſtinado from the Kapigis, which they are very free to give them. They ſtand in expectation of theſe Halvagis, with their bags full of Ducats and Ryals, and make the beſt bargains they can with them. Theſe ſales are ſeldome made above once in two years, and the leaſt of them does ordinarily exceed five hundred thouſand Crowns, nay ſome have amounted to eight hundred Thouſand. The Grand Seignor is ſoon adverti's'd, what money has been rais'd by the ſale, and giving orders for the diſpoſal of it into the Treaſury, he at the ſame time beſtows ten or twenty Purſes on the principal Officer, and the Pages of the Treaſury. He does not make them that Preſent out of any other deſign, then to ſhew his Grandeur, as being not ignorant of the advantages they have made by the Sale; but he tolerates that cuſtome, and knows well enough, that ſooner or later, all thoſe profits will come again into the Treaſury.

The prohibition to lend at Intereſt.

'Tis upon the ſame conſideration, that the Grand Seignor permits a manifeſt breach of the Law of Mahomet, which prohibits the taking of any intereſt for money lent; for he ſuffers the Pages, and others to lend conſiderable ſums to the Jewes, at the rate of fifteen upon the hundred, intereſt. And the Perſians have found out a very pleaſant evaſion, to ſtave off the reproach which might be made to them, of their tranſgreſſing againſt the ſame prohibition.

The Perſians ill Caſuiſts.

The evaſion is this. When they lend out mony to any one, they have a Bill or Schedule made of the ſum that's lent. Then they compute what the intereſt will amount to, which is commonly after the rate of twelve in the Hundred. That done; they take a handkerchief, or ſome old Saſche, and giving it to the Perſon whom they lend the money to, they make him write a ſecond Note, upon the ſcore of the intereſt, wherein it is expreſt, that the debt is for commodities bought, and duly receiv'd. And thus do they think to elude the reproaches of their own Conſciencies, and imagine, that they do not offend againſt the prohibition of Mahomet. The promiſe which the Debtor makes in writing, is not ſign'd by him, it being not the cuſtom of the Countrey, but he puts his ſeal to it. And yet that too is not ſufficient, and it is further requiſite, that they go before the Cadi, or the Judge of the Law, who conſummates the work, by putting his own Seal to the writing.

I have made appear, in this Chapter, the Means and Expedients, which the Grand Seignor makes uſe of, to augment his Revenues; we ſhall ſee in the next, the ways he has to exerciſe his Liberalities, without any charge at all to himſelf.

CHAP.

CHAP. XI.

A Subtle Expedient, whereby the Grand Seignor exerciſes great Liberalities, and meddles not at all with his Revenues.

THE PRINCIPAL HEADS.

The Commendable Policy of the Turks. The Ceremonies attending the Preſents ſent by the Grand Seignor, to thoſe whom he would honour. The particular way us'd by Mahomet the Fourth, to ſhew himſelf liberal, without any charge to himſelf. Formalities obſerv'd at the Death of the Baſſa's, who are ſtrangled by the Prince's Orders. When, and how they ſtrike off the Head in Turkey. A prohibition againſt ſhedding the blood of the Mahumetans, who are condemn'd to Death. The Inventories of the Goods of Baſſa's deceas'd, not faithfully taken. The Cauſes inducing the Turks to defie Death with ſo much conſtancy. How difficult it is to get out of Turkey. Preſents made to the Sultaneſſes.

THE Two expedients which the Grand Seignor makes uſe of to augment his Treaſury, beſides what comes in by the ordinary revenues of the Empire, are much of the ſame nature, with thoſe he uſes, to beſtow great largeſſes, without diſburſing any thing himſelf. He makes his advantages of all; the Baſſa's are as ſo many ſpunges, and he ſqueezes them, as well while they are living, as when they are dead, and at their coſt aſſigns recompence to thoſe, who have done him ſome acceptable ſervice. Let us take things in order, one after another, and ſhew in the firſt place, how he manages his ſubtle deſign, while the Baſſa's are living, in getting out of them wherewithall to make ample gratifications, without any diminution of his Revenues.

Amongſt the Political maxims of the Ottoman Monarchs, this is one of the moſt remarkable. They would have the Baſſa's to be reſpected in their ſeveral Governments, by the People, as much as if they were there themſelves in Perſon: and to make a greater, and a more lively impreſſion of that veneration in their minds, they think it fitting, to honour them, from time to time, with ſome Preſent, which is carried to them with much Ceremony. This Preſent, which is a certain demonſtration of the Eſteem, which the Prince has for the Perſon to whom he ſends it, is commonly ſome Rich Garment; and when he is willing to make it compleat, he adds the Sabre, and the Ponyard, garniſh'd and adorn'd with precious ſtones. The Grand Seignor, upon the conſideration before-mentioned, finding himſelf as it were oblig'd to make a Preſent to that Baſſa, knowes well enough, that he will be ſure, on the other ſide, to ſend him one which ſhall be worth ten times as much, and to make another to his Envoy, which he muſt look on as a recompence of his Services.

But

But it is not always the Grand Seignor's design, by such Presents, to honour the Bassa, and keep the People the more in subjection to him. It happens many times, that when he intends to ruine him, he makes him a Present, that he may thence take occasion, in case he does not receive another from him, such as he desires, to send another Messenger for his Head. The Present, upon that occasion, is not a Vest, or a Garment, but, a Sword, or a Battle-Axe, which are very Ominous Presents, and Advertisements to the Bassa, that the Grand Seignor has little kindness for him. To divert the Storm, which he sees likely to fall upon him, he doubles the Present he should have made, in case he had sent him but a Vest, which is a pledge of his Affection. And if that Bassa be one of those, who Commands in the greater Governments, the Present which he sends to the Grand Seignor, ought not to amount to less than Two hundred Purses, that is to say, a Hundred thousand Crowns, not comprehending what is particularly given to the person who is sent by the Emperour.

The Ceremonies attending the Presents sent by the Grand Seignor to those whom he would honour.

The Persons charg'd with this Commission are, for the most part, such as the Grand Seignor is willing to be Munificent to. So that, all things consider'd, the Present is not so much design'd for him who receives it, as for him who sends it, and the Person who carries it: And in this consists the artifice of exercising great Liberalities without disbursing any thing. The Ceremony perform'd at the delivery of this Present of the Grand Seignor, is this: He who carries it being come to the place where the Bassa lives, to whom it is sent, and having advertis'd him of it, this latter, with the noise of Drums, Trumpets, and Hawboys, assembles the People together, some of whom mount themselves on Horse-back, to do him the greater honour. The Bassa himself marches in the Head of all, and they who are not mounted follow afoot, together with the Curtezans, or common Strumpets of the place, who are obliged to assist at this Ceremony, dancing after a Tabour, and putting themselves into a thousand lascivious postures, according to the Custome of the Countrey.

The Messenger who brings the Present makes a halt, in expectation of this Cavalcade, in some Garden near the City, or in the Fields under a Tent, which he had got set up for that purpose. After mutual Salutations, he casts the Vest over the Bassa's shoulders, putting the Sabre by his Side, and thrusts the Ponyard into his Sasche before his Breast, telling him, That the Emperour their Master, honours him with that Present, upon the good report which had been made to him, that he has demean'd himself well, that he does not tyrannize over his People, and that there is no Complaint made, of his being defective in the Administration of Justice.

This Complement past, the Bassa, in the same order, and amidst the Joyful Acclamations of the People, takes his way, and the Grand Seignor's Envoy along with him, towards his House, where he entertains him at a great Treat, and, after all is done, with a Present, which amounts to Ten thousand Crowns at the least. For, as I told you before, if the Present be carried to one of the Bassa's who are in the greater Governments, as the Bassa's of Buda, Cairo, or Babylon, they shall not escape under Thirty or Forty thousand Crowns, and the Present which is sent to the Sultan, ought to amount to a hundred thousand. Nay it many times happens, that the Grand Seignor appoints what he would have their Present to his Envoy to amount to, and that especially, when he sends such as he has a particular kindness for, and would amply gratifie.

The particular way us'd by Mahomet IV. to shew himself liberal, without any Charge.

The Emperour Mahomet the Fourth, who now sits on the Throne, has a particular inclination to exercise Liberality, and to bestow Rewards on those who serve him; but he does it so, as that it costs him nothing, and consequently, there is no occasion of taking ought out of the Treasury. When there is not an opportunity to send the Person whom he has a desire to gratifie, into the Country with some Present, he has another Expedient, which will do the work. His Darling Divertisement is Hunting, and he takes but little pleasure in any other Exercise. He thereupon orders the Person whom he would recompence, to be one at the Sport, and having kill'd a Stagg, or some other Beast, he orders him to go and present it, from him, to one of the Grandees of the Port, whose abode is either at Constantinople, or some place near it.

This

The Preſent is receiv'd with great demonſtrations of joy, real, or apparent, th' perſon, to whom it is brought, is immediately to take order for the ſending back of another, much exceeding it in value, to the Grand Seignor. And that conſiſts ordinarily in excellent Horſes, good pieces of Gold-Brocado, or rich Furrs. But his work is yet not half over; there muſt be much more done for him, through whoſe hands he has receiv'd the Preſent, and he ſcapes very well, when, not accounting what he ſends to the Grand Seignor, the carriage of it coſts him but Ten thouſand Crowns. Nay many times, he is forc'd to double the Sum, when he has not been ſo liberal, as the Prince expected he ſhould have been; for he preſently diſpatches away an Officer, to reproach him with the ſlender account he has made of his Preſent, and the ſmall recompence he had receiv'd, whom he had employ'd to bring it him. To theſe reproaches he ſends him an expreſs Order, to make an additional Reward of Twenty or thirty Purſes, which is immediately put in execution: and as to the Preſent which the Grand Seingor has receiv'd, he commonly makes a diſtribution of it, amongſt thoſe, who are then about him.

And theſe are the Advantages which the Grand Seignor ſcrews out of the Baſſa's, and other Grandees of the Port, whilſt they are alive. Let us now conſider thoſe which accrew to him by their death, in order to the recompenſing of thoſe, whom he favours, without being oblig'd to take any thing out of his Coffers. When the death of a Baſſa is reſolv'd upon, the Grand Seignor delivers the Commiſſion to him, whom he has deſign'd to be kind to; and he finds it much more advantagous, to bring him the Sentence of his death, than to bring him a Preſent from the Prince.

Formalities obſerv'd at the death of the Baſſa's, who are ſtrangled by the Princes Orders,

If the Execution is to be done in Conſtantinople the ordinary Executioner is the Boſtangi bachi, who is alwaies about the Grand Seignor's Perſon, and he himſelf does the Work. But if there be a neceſſity of going into ſome remote Province, 'tis commonly either a Capigi-bachi, or one of the principal Boſtangis, whom the Prince has a mind to ſhew his kindneſs to, who is ſent to perform the Execution. He who carries the Order, accompany'd by five or ſix Capigis, ſometimes manages his Affairs ſo, as to arrive at the place, while the Council is ſitting. But if that cannot be ſo order'd, he goes to the Baſſa, and commands him in the Grand Seignor's name, to call one immediately. That Council conſiſts of the Baſſa's Lieutenant, the Mufti, the Cadi, the chief Commander of the Janizaries belonging to that place, and ſome other perſons concern'd in the adminiſtration of Juſtice, who are of the moſt conſiderable of the Province.

The Council being aſſembled, the Capigi-bachi enters, attended by his people, and preſents the Baſſa with the Grand Seignor's Letter. He recives it with great reſpect, and having put it three ſeveral times to his forehead, he opens it, reads it and finds that the Prince demands his head. He makes no other anſwer to that Order, then what he does in theſe few words; Let the Will, ſays he of my Emperour be done: onely give me leave to ſay my Prayers which is granted him. His Prayers being ended, the Capigis ſeize him by the Arms and the chief of them preſently takes off his Girdle or Saſche, and caſt it about his Neck. That Girdle conſiſts of ſeveral ſmall ſtrings of Silk, with knots at both ends, which two of the company immediately catch hold of, one drawing one way, and the other, t'other-way they diſpatch him in an inſtant.

If they are unwilling to make uſe of their Girdle they take a handkerchief, and with the Ring which they uſe, in the bending of their Bowes, and which they ordinarily wear on the right-hand Thumb, they thruſt the hand between the handkerchief, which is ty'd very cloſe, and the Throat, and ſo break the very Throat-Bone. Thus they make a ſhift to ſtrangle a man in an inſtant, ſuffering him not to languiſh in pain, that he may dye a faithful Mahumetan, and not have the time to enter into deſpair; the Turks thinking our way of hanging Criminals, who are ſo long in torment upon the Gibbet a ſtrange kind of Execution.

When and how they ſtrike off the Head in Turkey.

Though I have often us'd this expreſſion, That the Grand Seignor ſends to demand the Head of any perſon, whom he would rid out of the way; yet they never cut it off, but when he expreſly declares his deſire to ſee it, and then it is brought to him. If it be from ſome place at a great diſtance, they take out the Brains, and fill the empty place with Hay; and it was my fortune to ſee two

Heads

Heads ſo order'd at the ſame time, which they carried in a Bag. They were the Heads of the Baſſa's of Kars, and Erzerom.

It is further to be obſerv'd, That when the Sentence of Death is paſs'd by the Prince againſt any one, what quality ſoever he may be of, the Turks make no further Account of him; and when they ſpeak of him, treat him no otherwiſe than they would do a Dog. The Boſtangi, who had been commiſſionated to bring thoſe two Heads to the Grand Seignor, finding himſelf weary, and indiſpos'd at a Village, in Armenia, where it was my chance to be at that time, and haveing underſtood that there was a French-man in the Inne, asked one of my Servants whether I had any wine, and would be content to let him have any, to cheer up his Spirits. I immediately ſent him ſome in a large Flaggon; whereupon haveing intreated me to come and take a Glaſs with him, which I thought it not fit to deny, he would needs ſhew me, whether I would or no, the Heads of thoſe two Baſſa's; a ſight I had no great curioſity to ſee.

A Prohibition againſt ſhedding the blood of the Mahumetans who are condemn'd to death.

When there is no order given for the bringing of the Head, they bury the Body about Mid-night, without any ceremony, and the memory of the Baſſa, who had made ſo much noiſe before, is ſoon extinguiſh'd and laid in the duſt. But it is moreover to be noted, That it is the Cuſtome in Turkey, not to cut off the Head of any one, till after they have ſtrangled him, and that the blood is quite cold; it being againſt their Law, That the blood of a Muſſulman (that is, one of the Faithful) ſhould be ſpilt, upon any occaſion, but in Warr.

The Inventories of the Goods of Baſſa's deceas'd, not faithfully taken.

The execution being over, he who brought the Order for it, makes an immediate Seizure of all that belong'd to the deceas'd Baſſa; and after he has ſet aſide what he liked beſt for his own uſe, whether in Gold or Jewels, he brings the ſame perſons, who had been at the precedent Council, to proceed to the Inventory of his Goods, which are afterwards, as I have ſaid elſewhere, tranſmitted to the Chambers of the Treaſury. They who aſſiſt at the taking of that Inventory, know well enough, that many things, which belong'd to the deceas'd, are embezill'd but they are ſo far from repining or murmuring at it, that they ſign and atteſt, that there was not any more found. They are afraid, if they demean'd themſelves otherwiſe, leaſt that Officer of the Seraglio, whom the Grand Seignor has ſent, and who poſſibly is in favour, ſhould do them ill offices at the Court, and ſpread ſome falſe report of them; whence, according to the Example they have then before their eyes, might happen, in like manner, the loſs of their Charges, and Lives.

They therefore think it prudence, to connive at what ever is done by that Envoy, as being otherwiſe perſwaded, that he will not be diſown'd by the Grand Seignor, who is not ignorant of what's done upon thoſe occaſions. Nay on the contrary, and whatever he may have dextrouſly ſecured to himſelf of the Baſſa's Goods, they make him ſome additional Preſents of their own, at his own departure from them, engaging him thereby, to ſpeak well of them to the Grand Seignor, and to the Grand Vizir, at his return to the Port. And then alſo, not accounting what he had taken before-hand, and what Cuſtom tolerates, he receives new marks of the Liberality of his Prince, who is ſatisfy'd that he has ſo faithfully executed his Orders and ſo he participates of what is ſet down in the Inventory, when the Baſſa's Goods are brought into the Seraglio.

The Cauſes inducing the Turks to defie Death with ſo much Conſtancy.

Some poſſibly, will be apt to imagine, that this Sentence of Death paſs'd in the Grand Seignor's Letter, ſhould raiſe ſome diſturbance and aſtoniſhment in the Soul of him who reads it, and who reading therein his own Condemnation, knows that it muſt be immediately executed. Yet is it not apparent in his Countenance, that he is much ſtartled at it, he is not ſurpriz'd therewith, he ſees that few of his Companions eſcape the ſame fate, and he has diſpos'd himſelf for ſuch an end, aſſoon as he firſt took poſſeſſion of his Charge. Beſides, the Turks have a ſtrong perſwaſion, That the Decrees of Predeſtination are irrevocable, and that it is impoſſible to avoid them; which makes them look Death in the face, with ſuch a degree of conſtancy and interepity, as render them in a manner inſenſible. To which reflection we may adde this, That that ready and implicite obedience and ſubmiſſion of the Turks, to the Orders of their Sovereign, is rather a principle of Religion, than of State, which has been inſtill'd into them, by a moſt ſubtle piece of Politicks; and they believe, That, if they dye by the Command of their Prince, they go ſtraight into Paradiſe.

As

As for the opportunity of making an escape out of Turkey, by any one who might have some presentiment of his destruction, it is to no purpose to think of it. All the Officers and the Slaves, whom the Bassa's have in their Retinue, are so many Spies, and observers of their Actions; and it is impossible for them, to conceal what they doe from them. 'Twere dangerous for a man to entrust a Secret with any one of them; they are mean Souls, and uncapable of any gallant Action, besides that the Ports and Passages are equally shut up against both. If there be the least discovery made thereof, the Governour of the Frontier places would immediately have Orders from the Port, to take the Field; nay if there were not any such, they are but over-diligent, in enquiring after, and informing themselves of all those, who pass through the extent of their Jurisdiction. The Difficulties of making an Escape out of Turkey.

Besides, though there were some likelihood of compassing it, and that, travelling only in the Night time a man might get into some Neighbouring State; yet Turkey being in a manner quite surrounded by Nations who abhor the Domination of the Ottomans; 'twere as much as to leap out of the Frying-pan into the Fire, and to go and pass for a Spy, amongst a sort of people, who would give no quarter. Whence it might be imagin'd, that there were less difficulty in attempting an escape by Sea, than to hazard it by Land: but the former is the much more difficult. and the severe prohibitions made to the Christians, upon pain of death, not to take any Turk or Slave, into their Ships, which are exactly search'd, before they weigh Anchor, shut up all the Ports of Turkey, against those of the Country, who might be desirous to get out of it.

True it is, however, that few years pass, but that a considerable number of Slaves are convey'd away, by the charity and contrivances of the Christian Consuls, and Merchants. They are secretly kept at the Houses of some Christian Inhabitants of the Country, whose Secrecy and silence are bought with Money; and the same receipt stops the mouths of those, who have the over-sight of the Ports, and are warmly entertain'd with drinking, while thy cunningly get the Slaves aboard the Vessel, which has been visited, and is then ready to set sail. They would be loath to run themselves into that danger for natural Turks: there would be some ground to fear, that it might be some Plot on their side, to surprize and try the Christians; and it seldom happens that they have a thought of making any escape. They know well enough, that, whether it be by Sea, or Land, (excepting only the Kingdom of Persia, where they are hated upon the account of the difference of Sects) they cannot make their escape any where but into Christendom, where they would not be permitted the exercise of their Mahumetan Religion, which they would not renounce for a thousand lives.

E're we close up the Discourse concerning the Liberality of the Ottoman Monarchs, it is to be observ'd, that sometimes they make very considerable Presents, which they take out of the Grand Treasury, and which are paid in Silver only, if they are order'd for the Grandees of the Port, whether in the Seraglio, or out of it. Those Presents consists ordinarily of a Purse of Gold, which amounts to Fifteen thousand Ducats, or Thirty thousand Crowns; and when there are any such made to the Sultanesses, they receive all in Gold. To do that, there's no occasion of going to the Secret Treasury, there is gold enough in the Fourth Chamber, into which they at first bring in all the Gold and Silver of all the Revenues of the Empire; and that Summe, which makes no great hole in the great heap, returns again into the same place, by several waies. Presents made to the Sultanesses.

CHAP. XII.

Of the Preſent, which the Grand Seignor ſends every Year to Mecha.

THE PRNCIPAL HEADS.

The third part of the Revenue of Egypt, how employ'd. The great Wealth of the Sheck of Mecha. Ceremonies obſerv'd at Mahomet's Tomb. The Caravan of Cairo. The Preſent ſent from Mecha to the Great Mogul. The Opinion of the Mahumetans, concerning Mecha and Medina.

THat I make here a particular Chapter of the Preſent, which the Grand Seignor ſends every Year to Mecha, is occaſion'd by this third part of the Revenue of Egypt, which is peculiarly deſign'd for it; and upon this Conſideration withall, That I have ſingular Remarks to make upon that ſubject.

The third part of the Revenue of Egypt, how employ'd.

Three Millions of Livers, of Twelve, of annual Revenue, which the Kingdom of Egypt pays the Grand Seignor, are partly expended in the Rich Carpet, and the Sumptuous Tent, which he ſends to the Sheck, every year, in honour to Mahomet's Tomb. Another part goes to the payment of thoſe who ſerve in the Moſqueys; As for inſtance, the Imans, who are Prieſts; the Cheuchs, who are their Preachers; the Muezims, who, by their noiſe on the Towers of the Moſqueys, call the people to their Devotions; and the Kaijms of Mecha and Medina, who look to, and keep clean the Moſqueys, and light the Lamps. We muſt alſo put into the Account of theſe Three Millions, the Suſtenance of all the Pilgrims for the ſpace of Seventeen dayes, the Grand Seignor ſending, for that end, a ſufficient Summe to the Sheck. This Sheck, who is, as 'twere the Supream Perſon upon the ſcore of the Law, and the high Prieſt of all the Mahumetans, what Country and Sect ſoever they be of, makes the poor ignorant people believe, that there come every year to Mecha, Seventy thouſand Pilgrims, Men and Women; and if that number were not compleat, the Angels would come in humane forms, to make it up.

The great Wealth of the Sheck of Mecha.

This Prince, whom we call the Sheck, for whom all the Mahumetans have a great Veneration, is very Rich, and very powerful, and that may be eaſily conjectur'd, by the Preſents, which he receives every year from the Grand Seignor, and the other Mahumetan Princes. The Preſents are all his own, to be diſpos'd of as he pleaſes, at the end of the Year, when new ones are ſent to him. He makes his advantage alſo of all the preſents that are made by the Pilgrims, and of the Summes of Mony, which thoſe very Princes ſend him, to be diſtributed in Alms, which he alſo diſpoſes of as he pleaſes; and all theſe Preſents put together, make him ſuch a Revenue as is hardly imaginable. For Mahumetiſme ſpreads very much into Europe, Aſia, and Africa, and that much more then is commonly believ'd as I ſhall more diſtinctly make it appear, at the end of my Relation, in a particular Chapter, which I deſign for the handling of that matter.

From

From several Parts of the World, there come Caravans to Mecha, and when the Devotion is to begin, the High Priest, assisted by all the people belonging to the Law, spends night and day, in saying of Prayers, and performing the necessary Ceremonies. On the Seventh day, all the Pilgrims are assembled together before the Sheck's Tent, who appears at the entrance of it, and standing upon a low Stool, that he may be seen by those who are at the greatest distance from him, Prayes, and gives his Bendiction to all the people, putting a period to the Devotion, with these words, That God would enable them to return in Peace, as they came thither. Ceremonies observ'd at Mahomet's Tomb.

From that minute, every one must bethink himself, that he is to be at his own charge; the Sheck gives no more, and 'tis then that he begins to make great advantage to himself. For whatever is sold for the Sustenance of the Pilgrims, comes from him; and besides, he holds a correspondence with the Masters of the Caravans, of whom the Pilgrims are forc'd to buy conveniences for their rideing back again, at more then three times the rate they are worth, when the Beasts they had brought out of their own Countries have fail'd them by the way.

The Caravan of Cairo is the most numerous, and the most considerable of all the Caravans, that come to Mecha. The Caravan-bachi, who is the Captain and Conductor of it, makes his gains by it, at his return, worth him Two hundred thousand Crowns; and there is a great competition about his place, which is at the disposal of the Bassa of Cairo, and commonly carried by the highest bidder for it. The Captain of this Caravan is also Master of the Waters, which are carried into the Cisterns, and it is according to his Orders that they are distributed; and whereas that distribution is equal, as well in Relation to the Poor, as to the Rich, if the latter would have any beyond the quantity allow'd them, they must pay dearly for it; and the Captain, who sets what imposition he pleases upon it, makes a considerable advantage thereby. The Caravan of Cairo.

But let us return to the Grand Seignor's Present. The Tent, and the Carpet, which he sends, are two Pieces equally precious, as well for the excellency of the Stuffe, as the additional embellishments hereof. The Carpet is design'd for the covering of Mahomet's Tomb; and the Tent, which is erected hard by the Mosquey, is for the Sheck, who does not stirr out of it, during the Seventeen dayes of Devotion. This high Priest of the Mahumetan Law, has found out the Secret knack, of extracting inexpressible Summs of Money, out of that Carpet and Tent, which are renew'd every year: and when the new Present is arriv'd from the Grand Seignor, he sends, as 'twere out of a singular favour, certain pieces of the Curtain of the old Tent, to several Mahumetan Princes, of whom he receives Magnificent Presents in requital. This Curtain, which is set up on the out-side of the Tent, quite round it, to hinder the people from seeing those that are under it, consists of several pieces, six foot high, and of a great length: and the Sheck endeavours to perswade those Princes, That if they fasten one of those pieces to their Tents, when they are going to engage in a War, against those whom they account Infidels, good fortune will be sure to attend them, and it will not be long e're they gain the Victory. But if he sends either the whole Curtain, or the Tent, or Carpet entire, it must be to a great Monarch indeed, such as the great Cham of Tartary, or the Great Mogul: and that he does, once in ten, or twelve years; one while to the one, and another, to the other. The Present sent from Mecha to the Great Mogul.

Of this we have a late instance, in Aureng-zeb, who at the present is King of the Indies, and whom we otherwise call the Great Mogul. For upon his establishment in his Throne, the Sheck sent him the whole Courtain belonging to the Tent; and great joy there was at his Court, that the King had receiv'd so Magnificent a Present, from the Holy Place, as they call it. The Sheck was soon after made sensible of the Royal Liberality of that Great Monarch, one of the Richest and most Powerful of the Universe; and thus does that Spiritual Head of the Mahumetan Religion, who has a kind of Superintendency over all the Members, know how to make his advantage of them, and has found out the way, to enrich himself, at the cost of all the Princes and Nations, who submit themselves to the Mahumetan Law.

I queſtion not, but that they who have writ of the Religion of the Turks, have given ſome account of the Pilgrimage of Mecha, which is one of the moſt eſſential parts thereof; and therefore, as well for that reaſon, as alſo for that I ſhould digreſs too much from my ſubject, I ought not to proſecute that matter any farther. I ſhall take occaſion here, to make three Remaks, which I have originally learnt of one of the moſt learned in the Rubricks of the Mahumetan Law.

The firſt is, that the Turks, by an ancient Tradition, believe, That Mecha is the place where God commanded Abraham to build him an houſe; and that while he was there, all Nations came thronging to viſit him: and that it is alſo the ſame place, where Mahomet receiv'd the Alcoran, from Heaven.

The ſecond relates to the Commandement impos'd upon all the Mahumetans, to be, once in their lives, concern'd in the Pilgrimage of Mecha. For it is to be obſerv'd, That the obligation does not extend to the poorer ſort of people, who have hardly wherewithal to live upon, and would bring great miſery on their Families, by their abſence, as being not able to leave them what is requiſite for their ſuſtenance.

The third Remark is concerning the preference of the two Cities of Mecha, and Medina. The former is the place of Mahomet's birth, which it was his deſign to honour, and make known, by that famous Pilgrimage, whereto he obliges all thoſe of his Law. The latter is the place of his Burial, of which there is abundance of fabulous relations. Mahomet, in his Alcoran, does only enjoyn their going to Mecha, where there are no other Relicks of that falſe Prophet, then one of his Sandalls: And the Doctors of the Law are alſo of opinion, that there is no obligation of going to Medina, and that without ſeeing that City, a man ſatisfies the Command of Mahomet. I ſhall treat at large of the Pilgrimage of Mecha, in the laſt Chapter of this Relation of my Travels, and of the different Roads by which the Mahumetans of Europe, Aſia, and Africa, are conducted to the Tomb of their Prophet.

CHAP. XIII.

Of the Cup-Bearer's Quarter, and of divers other Appartments.

THE PRINCIPAL HEADS.

The Ancient Cuſtom practis'd, when the Grand Seignor is preſented with any thing to drink, between Meals. A way to quench thirſt at Meals, wholly particular to the Levantines. The compoſition of Treacle. A ſtately ſervice of Gold-Plate. Beds according to the Turkiſh mode. Ways to ſatisfie the Neceſſities of Nature different from ours. The Cauſes of the abominable Sin committed by the Turks, who are confin'd within the Seraglio.

I Have diſcover'd many things particularly obſervable, concerning the Treaſury of the Ottoman Monarchs, and there are yet ſome very Remarkable paſſages to be communicated, relating to the other Quarters of the inner part of the Seraglio.

Between the Treaſury, and an obſcure Vaulted Gallery, in length between Fifteen and Twenty paces, which conducts you to an Iron-Door, by which there is a paſſage into the Gardens, you find, on the left hand, the Appartment of the pages of the Kilar, or the Cup-Bearer's Office. That is the place where they prepare the Sherbets, and other Liquors, for the Grand Seignor's own drinking, and where they keep the Wine, if it happens, that he drinks any, as Sultan Amurath did, of whom I have often had occaſion to ſpeak. 'Tis an ancient Cuſtome, That when the Grand Seignor calls for Water to drink between meals, every time he ſo calls, coſts him ten Sequins, or Chequins. The Ceremony obſerv'd therein is this: In the Chamber call'd the Haz-Oda, which is the Appartment of the Forty pages, who are alwayes near the Grand Seignor's perſon, there is perpetually one of them ſtanding Scentinel at the Entrance, which leads to the Cup-Bearer's Office, where two pages of the ſame Quarter are in like manner upon the Scentry. When the Grand Seignor is thirſty, and calls for water, the Page of the Haz-Oda, immediately makes a ſign to the two Pages of the Kilar, of whom one advances up to the Kilar-bachi, or Cup-Bearer himſelf, crying out Sou, which ſignifies Water, to advertiſe him, that the Prince would drink; and the other runs to the door of the Haz-Oda, where the moſt ancient of the Forty Pages gives him Ten Sequins. That Page is the Treaſurer of the ſaid Chamber, and he pays the ſmall Sums which the Grand Seignor gives Order for, an Office which might be call'd in Engliſh, The Treaſurer of the petty Enjoyments. The Water is ſometimes brought in a Cup of Gold, ſometimes in a Veſſel of Pourcelain, placed upon a large Server of Gold, about two foot diameter, and enrich'd with Precious Stones within and without. That is look'd on, as one of the richeſt pieces of Plate belonging to the Seraglio. The principal Cup-Bearer, who is a white Eunuch, carries it with great Ceremony, attended by a hundred Pages of the Kilar, whom he ordinarily has under his Charge, and upheld under the Arms by two of them, who walk on both ſides of him. For it is requir'd, That he ſhould carry it lifted up above his head, and ſo he cannot ſee his way but by looking under it. When he is come to the Door of the Haz-Oda, the Pages of the Kilar, who have accompany'd him ſo far, paſs no further, ſave only the two who uphold his Arms, and the Pages of the Chamber go along with him quite into the Grand Seignor's Preſence. But when they come to the door of the Chamber, two of the more ancient among them, take the places of the two Pages of the Kilar, and compleat the conducting of the Kilargi-Bachi, under the Arms, to offer the Cup to the Prince. When he has not any thing to ſay to him, he carries it back again into the Kilar; but if he will take his opportunity to entertain him with ſome Affair, he delivers the Cup and the Server into the hands of one of the Pages, who led him under the Arms, and he delivers it to thoſe, who, belonging to the Cup-Bearer's Office, waited there in expectation of his return.

A way to quench thirſt at meals, wholly particular to the Levantines.

'Tis in the ſame place, to wit, that under the over-ſight of the Cup-bearer, they keep all ſorts of refreſhing and cooling Waters, as that of Peaches, Cherries, Raſpices, and ſuch other fruits. The Turks do not drink during their refection, that is, not till they have given over eating; and becauſe it is poſſible they may be dry, whilſt they eat; take here the manner how they quench that thirſt. They are ſerv'd at Table with theſe Waters, in great Cups of Pourcelaine, which hold about two Quarts, and the better to diſtinguiſh them, they put into every one of thoſe Cups, ſome of the ſame fruit, from which the Water that is therein had been extracted, and which they had preſerv'd for that purpoſe. Every one has lying by him a Wooden ſpoon, which holds three or four times as much as any of our ordinary ones, and whereof the handle is of a length proportionable: for as to Gold and Silver ſpoons, it is not their cuſtome to uſe any. With thoſe ſpoons, they can take out what is in the Cups, according to the Water which they moſt fancy, and ſo they ſuſpend thirſt, taking ever and anon ſome ſpoonfuls of it.

The Compoſition of Treacle.

It is alſo in the Cup-bearers Appartment that the Treacle is made, which the Turks call Tiriak-Farik, and there is a great quantity of it made, becauſe they uſe it as an Univerſal remedy, and charitably beſtow it on all ſorts of people, as well in City as Country, who are deſirous of it. The Vipers which are us'd in this compoſition are brought out of Egypt, and they make no account of thoſe which other Countries afford, or they are of opinion at leaſt, that the former are much the better for that purpoſe.

A ſtately ſervice of Gold Plate.

Before the Appartment of the Kilar, there is a Gallery whereof the floor is pav'd with ſquare pieces of Black and White Marble, and ſuſtain'd by eight fair Pillars of White Marble, and at the end of it is a little Quarter, where the principal Cup-bearer has his reſidence. There alſo are the Lodgings of his Subſtitute, the Kilarquet-houdaſi, who is not an Eunuch, as the Kilargi-bachi is, and who, at his removal out of the Seraglio, is ordinarily advanc'd to the charge of a Baſſa. The Kilargi-bachi has in his cuſtody all the Gold and Silver-plate, the Baſins, the Ewers the Bowls, the Cups, the Servers, and the Candleſticks, the greateſt part of that ſervice being garniſh'd with Diamonds, Rubies and Emeralds, and other precious Stones of value. As for golden Diſhes and Candleſticks, without any additional embelliſhments of precious Stones, there are ſome ſo large, and ſo maſſy, that there muſt be two men to carry one of them. Theſe Candleſticks are made after a faſhion quite different from ours. They are ordinarily two or three Foot high, upon a Baſe of above twelve inches Diameter, and the upper part thereof is as 'twere a Box or kind of Lamp, with its beak, and it may contain above a pound of ſuet. 'Tis to prevent the fall of any thing upon the Carpet, that they make the foot of the Candleſtick ſo large as I told you; and beſides, it is requiſite, that it ſhould bear ſome proportion to the height. The match, or wicke, which they put into the Suet, beaten into ſmall bits, is about the bigneſs of a Man's thumb, and conſequently muſt needs make a great light in the Room. As to the Kilarquet-houdaſi he

he is the Superiour over the Halvagis, and Akegis, who are the Cooks and the Confectioners, of whom not one can enter into ſervice, but by his Orders.

In my diſcourſe of the Treaſury I made no mention of the Quarter of thoſe Officers, who ſerve there, becauſe my deſign was to follow the order of the Structures of the Seraglio, and to conduct the Reader, by little and little, out of one Court into another, and out of one Quarter into another. That of the Pages of the Treaſury, is hard by the Kilar, and begins with a Gallery, pav'd with ſquare pieces of Marble, of different colours, ſuſtain'd by eight Pillars, of the ſame material, and whereof the ſides and the roof are painted with all ſorts of flowers, in Gold and Azure. That Gallery is open on the one ſide, and on the other you find in the midſt of it, the Door leading into the Appartment of the Pages, with three great Windows on the right hand, and as many on the left: And 'tis there that the ſix moſt elderly Pages of the Treaſury have reſidence night and day. From that door, along a walk pav'd with white Marble ſtones, very large ones, about fifteen paces in length, and five in bredth, you come to another Portal, of the ſame material, ſuſtain'd by two Pillars of black Marble; over the ſaid Portal, there may be read theſe words, which are ordinarily enough in the mouths of the Turks, and which I have explicated elſewhere;

La Illahe Illa Alla, Muhammed Reſoul Alla.

Beds according to the Turkiſh mode.

It gives entrance into a long Hall, where there may be ſeen on both ſides a kind of Seat, or Scaffold, a foot and a half in height, and between ſeven or eight in breadth. Every Page has but four foot in bredth for his repoſing place, as well by day, as by night: And for their Beds, they are permitted to have under them, only a Woollen Coverlet, four times doubled, which ſeryes them for a Quilt, and over that they ordinarily have one of Gold or Silver-Brockado, or ſome other ſumptuous Silk-ſtuff; and in the Winter time, they are permitted to have three of them. They are not to have their Coverlets all of Wooll, which would be ſo much the warmer, becauſe it would not be a decent ſight for the Grand Seignor, when he comes ever and anon, in the night time, pretending indeed as if he would ſurprize them, and ſee how they demean themſelves, but in effect, ſometimes to cover lewd deſigns. 'Tis between thoſe Coverlets that the Pages take their repoſe, having their Waſt-coat and Drawers on; for there is no talk of any other kind of Linnen, either in Turkey, or any part of the Eaſt; and whether it be Winter or Summer, they alwaies lay themſelves down to ſleep, half clad, without any great Ceremony.

Wayes to ſatisfie the neceſſities of nature different from ours.

Over the Beds of the Pages, there is a Gallery, which goes quite round the Hall, and is ſuſtain'd by Pillars of Wood, painted all over with red varniſh, and there they have their Coffers, wherein their Cloaths are kept. Every one has a Coffer to himſelf, but the twelve Senior Pages have each of them two Coffers, and one of thoſe twelve has the Key of the Gallery in his cuſtody. It is ordinarily open'd but one day in the Week, which is anſwerable to our Wedneſday, and then, every Page goes, and takes out of his Coffer, what he ſtands in need of. If any one of them muſt of neceſſity look for ſome thing there upon any other day, he gets five or ſix Pages together, and they all go to the principal Officer of the Treaſury, and he commands the Raſgi, who has the Key of the Gallery in his cuſtody, to open it for them, and to have a care that they meddle not with the Coffers of their Companions.

At one of the ends of the Hall, there is a Door, which conducts you to the Fountains, where thoſe that have their dependence on the Treaſury go and waſh, when they are call'd to their Devotions. There are ſeven Copper Cocks for that conveniency, and as well the pavement as the Walls, of that place are of white Marble.

The places appointed for the eaſing of Nature are on the right hand, divided into four little Rooms, which are alwas kept very clean, and pav'd with ſquare pieces of white Marble; as the Room of the Fountain is. The Turks do not ſit down, as we do, when they are in thoſe places, but they ſquat down over the hole, which which is not half a foot, or little more above the ground. That hole is cover'd with an Iron plate, which riſes and falls by a Spring, and turning one way or other, at the falling of the leaſt weight upon it, it comes to the ſtation it was in before, aſſoon as the ordure is fallen from it. I have obſerv'd elſewhere, that the Turks, and generally all the Mahumetans, do not uſe paper in ſuch caſes, or upon any undecent occaſion, and when they go to thoſe kinds of places, they carry along with them a Pot of water, to waſh themſelves withal, and the Iron-plate is alſo made clean at the ſame time. And ſo the hole being alwaies cover'd, and the Iron-plate always kept clean there can be no ill ſmell in the place, and that the rather, for that a ſmall current of water, which paſſes under that place, carries away all the Ordure.

The Cauſes of the abominable Sin committed by the Turks who are confin'd within the Seraglio.

But it were to be wiſh'd, that they would not ſo much concern themſelves in keeping thoſe places ſo clean, provided they could forbear polluting them with thoſe deteſtable impurities, which I ſhould gladly have left unmention'd, did I not fear the reproach might be made to me, of my having been defective in point of exactneſs. I have already ſaid ſomething of it, in the Second Chapter of this Relation, and it is a ſubject, which is to be ſlightely paſt over, that ſo there may be but imperfect Idæa's left of it. It is therefore in thoſe places, that the Pages make their nocturnal aſſignations, in order to the committing of the worſt of all crimes, which yet they find it very difficult to put in execution, becauſe they are ſo narrowly watch'd; and if they are taken in the very act, they are puniſhed with ſo great ſeverity, that ſometimes they are even drubb'd to death; of which chaſtiſement, I have elſewhere given an account. In like manner, to prevent the committing of that infamous act, in the places where they take their repoſe, there are two Torches lighted, which laſt all the Night, and three Eunuchs are ever and anon going their Rounds, by which means the Pages are depriv'd of the oportunities, which otherwiſe they might have, to offend.

But we need not go far, to find out the Source of this Evil: the ſtrictneſs of the reſtraint they are in, and their being depriv'd of the ſight of Women, induce thoſe Young Men to practiſe ſuch defilements, and hurry the Turks into a Gulph, to which they, by an execrable paſſion, are, naturally but too much inclinable. The Ichoglans, who are brought very young into the Seraglio, know not what a Woman is, but by the inſtinct of Nature; and there are ſome of them, who, for one day's ſight and enjoyment of a Woman, would be content to dye the next. All thoſe Nations generally have ſo great a bent to lubricity, that it ſeems impoſſible they ſhould quit it, but with their lives: what they cannot do one way, they endeavour to do another; and they of the Seraglio do all they can to elude the inſpection of their Overſeers. The Reader may call to mind the Action of the two Pages, who hid themſelves in the Moſquey, and that ſingle Example is enough, to ſhew, how they ſeek out all the ways imaginable, to ſatisfie their brutiſh paſſion.

The Quarter of the Kaſnadar-bachi, as alſo that of his Companion, or Subſtitute, is adjoyning to that of the Pages of the Treaſury, and from their Chambers, they have a Proſpect into a little Flower-Garden, which belongs to them. We have yet ſome other Chambers to view, before we come to that, which they call the Haz-Oda, which is the Appartment of the Forty Pages of the Chamber, and the entrance to that of the Grand Seignor.

Of the Quarter of the Dogangi-bachi, or Grand Faulconer, and of ſome other Officers.

THE PRINCIPAL HEADS.

Magnificent Chambers. The ordinary Revenues of the Grand Faulconers. The Magnificence of the Ottoman Princes, in what relates to Hunting. Birds ſupplying the places of Dogs, in running down a Deer, or a Hare. The delicate Chamber of the Selidgar-Agi, who carries the Grand Seignor's Sword. The excellent Order obſerv'd in the Seraglio.

Magnificent Chambers.

THE Dogangi-bachi, or Grand Faulconer, and the Pages, whom he has under his Charge, have their Quarter between that of the Pages of the Treaſury, and that of the Pages of the Chamber. The place appointed for the Pages of the Falconry, has nothing in it extraordinary, and a man cannot make a diſcovery of any thing of beauty therein: but on the other ſide, the two Chambers, where the Grand Falconer Lodges, have ſomething that's Magnificent and are as ſumptuouſly furniſh'd, as any other Rom of the Seraglio. The firſt, which ſerves for an Anti-Chamber, is leſſer, and they are both of them pav'd with a Checquer-work of black and white Marble, having the Roof beautify'd with Flowers, painted, and guilt. But that of the ſecond Chamber is the more ſumptuous by much, as having large Flowers, in emboſs'd Work, every Flower in its ſquare piece, and the Junctures all cover'd with Gold. The Walls are excellently wainſcoted, wherein alſo they have not ſpar'd for Gold, and on both ſides, there are croſs-barr'd Windows, whereby the Chamber receives much light. The Marble Chequer-work of the Floor is not ſeen, as being cover'd with a ſilken Carpet, upon which there are laid, in ſeveral parts of the Chamber, a certain number of Quilts, two or three Foot in breadth, and about four Inches thick. Some of them are cover'd with Velvet, or Satin, of different Colours; others with Gold-Brockadoes, and every one has its Cuſhion of the ſame Stuff, between three and four foot in length, and about two foot in heighth. Theſe Cuſhions are laid behind their backs, when they are ſiting, after their Mode croſs-legg'd, and thoſe lettle Quilts are to them, inſtead of Chairs, and Couches, in a Chamber.

The ordinary Revenues of the Grand Falconer.

If the Grand Falconer be remov'd out of the Seraglio, it is upon his advancement to the Charge of one of the principal Baſſa's, and to one of the greater Governments, as that of Cairo, or Babylon; and while he continues in the Seraglio beſides his Table, which is all at the Prince's charge, he is allow'd an annual Revenue, of ten or twelve thouſand Crowns. The Pages of the Falconry, carry Hawks on their Fiſts, and feed them: they have the liberty to go and exerciſe them in the Gardens, and they all attend the Grand Seignor, when he goes a Hawking, or Hunting. They wear the ſame Stuffes, as the Pages of the Treasury, and may also put on Vests of Cloth, but made after such a fashion, as makes them easily distinguishable from the Ichoglans, of the first and second Chamber, who are always clad in woollen-cloth. For the Pages of the Falconry have their Sleeves made narrower, and narrower, from the Shoulder to the wrist, and they are there fasten'd close with Buttons; but the Sleeves of the Pages of the Treasury, are as wide below, as they are above, and that makes the difference between them. The twelve Senior Pages of the Falconry have the same slaveries and advantages, as the Pages of the Treasury, and are their Fellow-Commoners; but the other Companions of the former, are treated after the same rate as the Pages of the Seferlis, who wash the Grand Seignor's Linnen, and they all common at the same Table.

The Magnificence of the Ottoman Princes in relation to Hunting and Hawking.

Besides the fore-mentioned Pages, the Grand Faulconer has under his command near eight hundred other persons, as well in Constantinople as the parts adjacent thereto, perpetually employ'd in the ordering and training up of all sorts of Birds for the Game, and there come none into the Seraglio, but what are so order'd, and taught. Though there may be a very great number of such, yet does not the Grand Seignor make use of any, but what have some stone of value about the neck, nay sometimes such as may be valued at ten thousand Crowns. All the Mahumetan Princes are very sumptuous, in all things relating to their Game, and particulary the King of Persia. Nothing can be imagin'd more Glorious, or Magnificent, than the long Train of the Grandees of his Court, when they return from their Sports. They all march in an excellent order, every one with a Hawke on his Fist, and every Hawke having about the neck, either a Diamond, or some other precious stone, of great value, with the hood all embroider'd with Pearles; which must needs make a most delightful show.

Birds supplying the place of Dogs, in running down a Deer or Hare.

The Turks, and other inhabitants of the Levant, breed up, in order to their divertisements, several sorts of Birds, which the Europæns make no use of at all, and they are of a larger size, and stronger, than ours. With those, instead of Dogs, will they run down a Hare, or a Stagge; and they have also the diversion of hunting the Wild Boar, and other savage Beasts. But what makes that Sport the more delightful is this, that in Persia the Countrey is all open and champion, and there are no Woods, into which the Hawke, or other Bird, might get out of their sight. He discovers the Beast at a great distance, fastens of a suddain upon it, so as that it cannot get loose from him, and sticking close to the Head, picks out the Eyes of it, vexes, and torments it, and retards the swiftness of its course, by which means, the Huntsman come up the sooner to it, and dispatch it. But they do not give the fatal blow, till the Prince has order'd them to do it, or till he has shot off an Arrow, or discharg'd his Fire-lock: upon which signall, they who are about him are permitted to exercise their courage and dexterity.

Next adjoyning to the Appartment of the Pages belonging to the Falconry, there is a long Gallery, which is open but of one side, and in the floor of it, there is a little ascent. It is sustain'd by ten Pillars of Marble, of several colours, and pav'd with a square-piec'd work of the same material; with a Wainscotage, wherein there are some flowers painted, but very meanly.

The Seligdar-Aga's Chamber, who carries the Grand Seignor's Sword.

From the end of the foresaid Gallery, turning on the right hand you come to the Chamber of the Selidgar-Aga, who carries the Sword before the Grand Seignor. Some part of that Chamber is cover'd with Carpets, the other has a Seat or Scaffold, rais'd three foot high, but of a considerable breadth, to which they ascend by so many steps of white Marble, of four foot in length, the remainder of which Seat, being divided from the Chamber by a Ballister'd work, partly gilt with Gold, and partly Green. All within that enclosure of Ballisters is cover'd with rich silken Carpets, and all about, as well to the Wall side, as to that of the Ballisters, there are sumptuous Cushions of all sorts, of Gold and Silver-Brokadoes. The Walls of the Chamber are all gilt, and at equal distances, there are flower-pots painted, rarely well diversify'd, and affording a most delightful prospect. The place where the Selidgar-Aga sits, is at the corner of that part of the Chamber which is enclos'd with the Ballisters, on the right hand, and over his Head hang the Swords and Sabres, which he carries before the Grand Seignor, whithin the Seraglio; and after him, when his Highness goes out of the Seraglio.

Assoon

Aſſoon as a Prince is come to the Crown, whatever he ordinarly wears, is never return'd into the Treaſury, till after his death: And the Chaſnader-bachi, who is the Overſeer of it, finds by his Regiſtries, whether all the things that were taken out of the Treaſury, during the Grand Seignor's life, are brought into it again at his death. Whenever any piece is taken out, the Seligdar-Aga, to whom it is deliver'd, gives the Principal Officer of the Treaſury an acknowledgment, under his hand, of his having receiv'd it; and by that means nothing can be embezill'd, good order being ſtrictly obſerv'd in all things, relating to the Seraglio. In ſome other parts of the Chamber you find hanging up Ponyards and Knives, all rich Pieces, and beſet with precious ſtones, which as all the reſt, are exactly Regiſtred in the Books of the Treaſury. On each ſide of the ſaid Chamber, there are two little Rooms, for four Pages of the Seferlis, who wait on the Seligdar-Aga, and are always about his perſon. 'Tis now time that we paſs into the Grand Seignor's Quarter.

The excellent order obſerv'd in the Seraglio.

THough the inner part of the Seraglio ought properly to be divided into but two great Quarters, which are the Grand Seignor's own Quarter, and the Quarter of the Sultaneſſes; yet have I thought it more convenient, for the Reader's better remembrance of things, to diſtinguiſh to him the different parts, of which the former conſiſts anſwerably to its ſeveral uſes: and after a large account, given of the Baths, the Treaſury, the Cup-Bearer's Office, and the Falconry, I come now to the particular Appartment of the Grand Seignor's Perſon.

The Haz O'la is the firſt ſtructure that offers it ſelf to your view, and 'tis by that name the Turks call the fourth and higheſt Claſſe of the Ichoglans, which is the Chamber of the Forty Pages, who are hourly employ'd in the Grand Seignor's Service. This Chamber is of the ſame largneſs, as that of the Pages of the Treaſury, and furnish'd much after the same rate; but it is not near so lightsome, or rather, it wants light. As there is not so great a number of them, so have they accordingly more place to sit, or lye down; and in the midst of the Chamber, you find a little square place, rais'd up somewhat higher than the Beds of the Pages, whence the Haz-Oda-bachi, their Governour, may observe all their actions, and see how they demean themselves. He has order to give the Grand Seignor notice of it, Rewards being the consequences of good actions, as chastilements are, of bad ones; and it is also incumbent upon him, to make speedy provision of all the things they stand in need of. Over the Door of that Chamber, these words, La Illa He Illa, &c. whereof I have often made mention, are engrav'd in large golden Letters; and at the four corners, are the Names of Mahomet's four Companions, Ebou-beker, Omar, Osman, and Ali, engrav'd in like manner in black Marble. When the Grand Seignor has made a Bassa, and that he is to take his leave of his Highness, to go to his Government, he comes out at that Door, where all those names are engrav'd, and as soon as he is come out, he turns his face again to the Door, and kisses the Threshold of it, with great humility.

As soon as you are come into the Chamber, you find on the right hand several words of the Law, written, and enchac'd, in guilt squares, and one of these Writings is, of Sultan Achmet's, the Father of Amurath. On the left hand, you find, fasten'd to the Wall, a Coat of Mail, a Head-piece, and a great Buckler; it is one of the Monuments of Amurath's Valour. During the Siege of Bagdet, or Babylon, a Persian coming out of the City, and challenging any one of the Besiegers to meet him, that Prince, one of the most courageous and strongest men of his age, would needs receive him himself, without any other Arms, than a Sabre in his hand, though the Persian was arm'd from head to foot. Amurath who was not only a prodigious Person as to strength, and valour, but also well skill'd in the use of a Weapon, afforded him not the time to consider whom he had to deal withal, but immediately gave him such a furious blow with the Sabre, over the right shoulder, that he cut his coat of Mail quite to the Middle of his Body, and left him dead upon the place.

A noble Monument of Amurath's Valour.

Opposite to the Haz-Oda, or the Chamber of the forty Pages, there is a Gallery of a considerable length, and particularly remarkable for its Structure. It is open on both sides, and has, of each, a row of white Marble-Pillars; but it is built after the Serpentine fashion, and they who walk in it are, every six paces, out of sight one of the other. There are, under this Gallery four great Presses, to put up the accoutrements of the four Officers, who are always about the Grand Seignor's Person, to wit, the Seligdar-Aga, the Chokadar-Aga, the Requabdar-Aga, and the Hazoda-bachi, of whom I have spoken at the beginning of this Relation, when I gave a List of the Grandees of the Port.

The situation of the Mosques in Turkey,

This Gallery, of so fantastick and so extraordinary a Structre, is not far from that other, which is a continu'd ascent, and whereof I made mention in the precedent Chapter. Opposite to this last, there is a Mosquey of the middle sort, as to the largeness, the length of it somewhat exceeding its breadth, and it stands North and South, a situation the Turks observe in all their Mosqueys, which are always turn'd towards Mecha, which place is Meridional to all the provinces of the Empire. There is in the Wall, opposite to the South, a kind of Neech, which they call Mihrab, into which the Iman, who is their Priest, gets up, to say Prayers at the accustomed hours, and the Grand Seignor is present thereat, with the forty Pages of the Haz-Oda, in a little Room, the Window whereof is opposite to the Neech. On both sides of the said Neech, there is a Gallery sustain'd by five Pillars, some whereof are of green Marble, and the rest of Prophyry. And in the Mosquey, and in the Chamber, or Room, into which the Grand Seignor comes to do his Devotions, and in the two Galleries, there's no going but upon rich Carpets. You are not to look for ought of Painting there; nor have the Walls any other Ornament, then that of the whiteness of the Marble, whereof they are built. But there are a great many Writings, in large Arabick Characters, enchac'd in gilt Borders, hanging up in several places, and those Writings contain only things taken out of the Law of Mahomet.

The Window of the Chamber into which the Grand Seignor comes to do his Devotions, is six foot in length, and three foot high, and has a Lattice with a Curtain behind it, as it is in ſeveral Chappels, which our Chriſtian Princes have in their Palaces. There is alſo oppoſite to the ſame Neech, before-mention'd, ſuch another Window, and ſuch another Chamber, for the Sultaneſſes, and when the Muezim, whoſe ſtation is of one ſide of the Iman, and who is as it were his Clerk, hears the drawing of the Curtains, he immediately rings a ſmall Bell which is the ſignal, that the Grand Seignor and the Sultaneſſes are come into their ſeveral Rooms.

a

The Ceremonies of their Devotions.

Upon their arrival, the foreſaid Muezim begins to ſing theſe two words, Allahu Ekber, which ſignifies, God is Great, repeating them four times: and afterwards, having added thereto ſome words, ſpeaking as 'twere to himſelf, the Iman in his turn, ſings theſe following; Elhamdu lillahi Rabbil alemijn, that is to ſay, The Grace of God is the Maſter of all things. He thus continues the Prayer, proſtrating himſelf ſeveral times to the ground, and all the people preſent do alſo proſtrate themſelves as he does,

In the midſt of the Domo of the Moſquey, there is a Hoop of Iron, all about which there hangs a great number of Lamps, of Venice-Cryſtal, and there are alſo ſome diſpos'd along the Galleries, of the ſame Metal, they being not permitted to have in thet Moſqueys, either Gold or Silver. They do not light thoſe Lamps, but only for the Prayers at night, and the fire caſting a reflection one thoſe Cryſtals, creates a moſt delighful Object to the ſight.

The Chamber of the Sarai-Agaſi, one of the four Principal Eunuchs, is adjoyning to that Moſquey, and the leaſt of all the Chambers, of the Officers, belonging to the Inner-part of the Seraglio. He has but little place more than is requiſite for him to ſleep in, and he is waited on by two Pages of the Couchouk-Oda, or the little Chamber Adjoyning to the Door of the Haz-Oda, there is a Hall pav'd with a Checquer-work of black and white Marble, in the midſt whereof there is a Baſin of the ſame material, but of ſeveral Colours, out of which there is an aſcent of water four or five foot high. That water is receiv'd into a ſecond Baſin, made in the form of a Scallop-ſhell, out of which it falls again into a third, much larger than the two precedent ones. The upper part of the Hall is built Domo-wiſe, having therein ſome Windows, which give it light, and a certain piece of dull Painting is all the Ornament of its Walls. At your entrance into this Hall, you ſee two Doors, one on the right hand, the other on the left. That on the left hand conducts to a Flower-Garden? and the other is the door of a Chamber, into which the Grand Seignor comes ſometimes in the Winter-Seaſon.

A magnificent Winter Chamber.

This Chamber is one of the moſt ſumptuous of any in the Seraglio. It's Arched Roof is divided into a great number of little Cells, Triangle-wiſe, diſtinguiſh'd by two little filets of Gold with a green ſtreak in the midſt, and out of every Angle, there juts ſomewhat like the bottom of Lamp, excellently well gilt. Though the Walls are of a curious white Marble, yet is there a delicate piece of Wainſcotage, of about the height of a man's waſte, carried quite round the Room, and the rich Carpets, upon which you walk, deprive your ſight of the large ſquares of Marble, of ſeveral colours, wherewith the Floor is embelliſh'd. Of a great number of Cuſhions, which are placed along the Walls, ſome are embroider'd with Pearls, and precious Stones, and ſet there only for oſtentation; the others, which are for ſervice, are cover'd with Gold, or Silver-Brokadoes, and other coſtly Stuffs. At one of the corners of the Chamber, there is a little Field-bed, about two foot in heighth, embroider'd all over, the Counterpane, the Cuſhions, and the Quilt; and that Embroidery is all of Pearles, Rubies, and Emeralds. But when the Grand Seignor is to come into that Chamber, they take away the Counterpane and Cuſhions, which are leſs fit for Service than for Ornament, and they bring in others of quilted or tufted Velvet, or Satin, upon which the Grand Seignor may more conveniently repoſe himſelf.

Mahomet's Myſterious Seal.

Towards the feet of the ſaid Bed, there is a kind of Neech made within the very Wall, in which there is a little Ebony Box, about half a foot ſquare, and in that is lock'd up Mahomet's Seal. It is enchac'd in a Cryſtal, with a Bordure of Ivory, and taking all together, it may be four inches in length, and three in breadth. I have ſeen the Impreſſion of it upon a piece of Paper

but

but he who shew'd it me, would not suffer me to touch it, only upon this score, that he look'd on it as a great Relick. Once in three months this Chamber is made clean, and the Carpets are chang'd, the Pages of the Treasury being employ'd in that Office. And then it is, that the Chasnader-bachi opens the Box, and having in his hands an embroider'd Hand-kerchief, he takes out the Seal, with great respect and reverence, whilst the Seignor of the Pages holds a golden Cup, garnish'd with Diamonds and blue Saphris, on the top of which there is a kind of Perfuming-Pot, out of which there comes an exhalation of all sorts of sweet Scents, whereby the whole Room is in a maner embalm'd. The Page holds that in both his hands joyn'd together, and lifting it up higher than his Head, all those that are present immediately prostrate themselves to the ground, as an acknowledgment of their veneration. As soon as they are up again, the Page brings down the Cup, lower than his chin, and the principal Officer of the Treasury, holding the Seal over the smoake, all those who are in the Room, come and kiss the Chrystal which covers one of the most precious Relicks, that they have of their Prophet. I have us'd all the endeavours I could, to get out of my two Officers of the Treasury, who had often kiss'd that Chrystal, what Observations they might have made, as to the material whereof the Seal was made and what Letters were engrav'd upon it; but they told me, that by the reason of the smoke, and the Chyrstal, which covers the Seal, not to insist on the small time they have to observe it, during the act of kissing it, it is not possible that any one can give a certain judgment of either the Stuff, or the Engraving of it.

Upon the fourteenth day of the Ramazan, that is to say, the Lent of the Turks, the Grand Seignor comes in person into that Chamber, accompany'd only by the Seligdar-Aga, and taking off the Chrystal, which lies over the Seal, he delivers it into his hands, ordering him to make the Impression of it upon fifty little bits of Paper, which are not much bigger than the Seal it self. This Impression is taken off with a certain gummy Ink, which is prepar'd in a Pourcelain Dish, whereinto he thrusts his finger, and rubs the Seal with it, and keeps all those Printed Papers, for the use, to which his Highness designs them, as we shall see, e're we come to the end of this Chapter.

The great Superstition of the Turks.

Within the same Chamber, and adjoyning to the place, where the Seal is kept, there is another Box or Coffer, of a larger size, cover'd with a Carpet of green Velvet, with a great fringe of Gold and Silver, wherein is kept, Mahomet's Hirka. It is a Garment with large sleves of a white Camlet, made of Goat's hair, which the Turks do also look upon as a great Relick. The Grand Seignor having taken it out of the Coffer, kisses it with much respect, and puts it into the hands of the Capi-Aga, who is come into the Room by his Order, after they had taken the Impression of the Seal. The Officer sends to the Overseer of the Treasury, for a large golden Cauldron, which is brought in thither by some of the Seignor-Pages. It is so capacious, according to the description which they gave me of it, as to contain the sixth part of a Tun, and the out-side of it is garnish'd, in some places, with Emeralds, and Turquezes. This Vessel is fill'd with water within six fingers breadth of the brink, and the Capi-Aga, having put Mahomet's Garment into it, and left it to soak a little while, takes it out again, and wrings it hard, to get out the water it had imbib'd, which falls into the Cauldron, taking great care, that there falls not any of it to the ground. That done, with the said water he fills a great number of Venice-Chyrstal Bottles, containing about half a pint, and when he has stopp'd them, he Seals them with the Grand Seignor's Seal. They afterwards set the Garment a drying, till the twentieth day of the Ramazan, and then his Highness comes to see them put up again in the Coffer.

A ridiculous and covetous knack of Devotion.

The next day after that Ceremoney, which is the fifteenth after their grand Fast, the Sultan sends to the Sultaneses, and the Grandees of Constantiople as also to most of the considerable Bassa's of the Empire, to each of them, an Impression of the Seal, in a little scrip of Paper roll'd up, and well fasten'd with with Silk, and with that, one of thoſe Bottles full of water, which is look'd upon as a great favour. But it proves a very dear favour to thoſe who receive it, and for a ſcrip of Paper, and a Glaſs of water, they muſt ſend back again to the Grand Seignor a very conſiderable Preſent, not accounting what they beſtow one thoſe perſons, who bring from him, thoſe teſtimonies and marks of his Affection.

It is to be obſerv'd alſo, That the Capi-Aga is allow'd to multiply the ſaid Water, as far as he thinks requiſite, and anſwerably to his deſire of multiplying the Preſents. All he has to do, is only to fill up the Cauldron, as it is emptied, and that additional water is as good as 'twas before, ſince it is intermix'd with that wherein Mahomet's Garment had been ſoak'd. For there are many perſons, to whome he ſends thoſe Bottles, without the impreſſion of the Seal, upon the little piece of paper, and he has a ſnack out of all that is beſtow'd on the Bearers of thoſe Preſents. But he is not permitted to make that multiplication of the Water, any longer than for the ſpace of three days; that is to ſay, till the Seventeenth of the Ramazan, after which time, the additional intermixture of it would not have the Vertue, which they imagine it has,

As ſoon as this Preſent is receiv'd by thoſe to whom it is ſent, they take the paper, which has the impreſſion of Mahomet's Seal, and after they have left it to ſoake a little while in the Water of the little Chryſtal bottle, they take off the water and the paper, ſwallowing down both together with great devotion. But it is to be noted, That no body muſt be ſo preſumptious as to open that paper; for they ſwallow it down as it is brought to them, after a little ſoaking in the water, they being not permitted to ſee the impreſſion of the ſacred Seal: And they who receive only the little bottle, without the paper, ſend for one of their Imans, who are as 'twere, their Prieſts, and get him to write down theſe words in another piece of paper, La he Illa, Alla hull, vahidul gebber, That is to ſay There is no other God then God, the puniſher of Crimes. There are others, who order theſe words to be writ down; La Illa he Illa, Allahul meliqued vehhab; which ſignifies, There is no other God then God alone, the Liberal Emperour, and Pardoner of Offences. The paper having thoſe words written upon it, is put into the water of the little Bottle, and ſo they ſwallow down both together, with a ſtrong perſwaſion, that thoſe words have the ſame verue, as the impreſſion of the Seal.

There is alſo to be ſeen, in the ſame Chamber, a very homely kind of Cuttelas, hanging by the Wall, near the place where the Prophet's Seal and Garment are kept. The Scabbard is cover'd with Green cloth, and they have it by Tadition, that it had been the Cuttelas of Omar, one of Mahomet's four Companions, who govern'd after him, though Ebou-Bequer was the elder of the two, and Father-in-law to Mahomet. The Arabians affirm, That Ebou-Bequer was a Jew, by extraction, and one of the moſt learned of his time; and that, having renounc'd the Moſaick Law he taught at Mecha, in the Schools, after which he beſet himſelf to compoſe ſome part of the Alcoran. The Relicks of Omar.

Near the Cuttelas, there is alſo to be ſeen a kind of ſhort Sword, for which they have, in like manner, a great veneration, upon a perſwaſion, that it ſome time was the Sword of a certain perſon named Ebou-Niſlum, with which he cut to pieces, thoſe, who had ſpread a Hereſie in the Law of Mahomet. He came not into the World till Four hundred years after the death of the Prophet, and at length deſtroy'd that Sect, which during the ſpace of two Ages before, had given much trouble to the true Mahometans, and gain'd ſeveral Battles againſt them.

The ſaid Sect was grown very powerful under the denomination of Muhaerignie, and I have met with ſome remainders of it in the Mountains of Curdiſtan, which is the ancient Chaldea. Thoſe people are very remarkable for their ſuperſtition, and much more for their ignorance; and a man muſt have a great care of ſtriking a black Dog, in their preſence, or cutting an Onion with a Knife; for their way, when they are to eat an Onion, is to cruſh it between two ſtones. The cauſe of that groſs ignorance, is their not having A ridiculous Sect.

having any Perſon among them, to inſtruct them; and a man may Travel five or ſix days Journey in their Countrey, and not meet with either a Mollah, or a Moſquey. The ſame reaſon may alſo be given for their being, for the moſt part, uncircumcis'd, and that they who have receiv'd Circumciſion, had it not till they were Twelve or Fifteen Years of Age, and that accidentally by going to ſome place at a great diſtance, to find out a Mollah, and defraying the Charges of their Friends and Relations, who muſt accompany them to that Ceremony.

The Grand Seignor's Quarter.

Between the Chamber, where theſe noble Relicks are to be ſeen, and that of the Forty Pages, of which I have given an Account at the beginning of this Chapter, you have the Proſpect of a treble Portal of Porphyry, that is, three doors at a ſmall diſtance one from the other, whereof that in the middle gives entrance into the Grand Seignor's Appartment. The two others lead to the Lodgings of the Chokadar-Aga, and the Riquabdar-Aga, and thoſe lodgings are very dark, becauſe they are not in a place where light can be brought into them, and that at the firſt building thereof, they could afford each of them but one little Window. But abating that inconvenience, they are well enough furniſh'd, according to the mode of the Country, you tread upon nothing but ſilken Carpets; there's no want of Brokado-Cuſhins and emboyder'd ones, and the Walls, which are all of white Marble, entertain the Eye with pots of Flowers plainly painted, at certain equal diſtances, about which there has been an ingenious application of Gold and Azure. The Grand Seignor's Quarter begins with a Hall, which is ſpacious enough, and the embelliſhments of the inſide of it are correſpondent to thoſe of the outſide. It is an incruſtation of Marble, of ſeveral colours, and the Floor of it is cover'd only with the large Woollen Carpets, which are brought out of Perſia, but ſuch as are more ſumptuous, and much more highly eſteem'd, than thoſe which are made of Silk. All about the Hall, for the ſpace of Five foot, there are ſpread Coverlets of Silk, of a light colour, ſome Tufted, ſome Embroyder'd, and upon the Coverlets, there are ſeveral ſorts of Rich Cuſhions, four foot in length, and between two and three in breadth.

Amurath's Belvedere.

Of the two Doors, which are within the Hall, one goes to the Appartment of the Pages, the other to the Quarter of the Sultanesses, and as you go out by this laſt mentioned, you enter into a Flower-Garden, in the midſt whereof there is a Baſin with its water-work. From one of the ends of the Garden you paſs to the Revan Kouchi, that is to ſay, a Chamber ſupported by Pillars. It is a Belvedere, or ſpacious Room, having a delightful Proſpect of all ſides, which the Sultan Amurath caus'd to be built, at his return from the Perſian War, after he had taken the City of Babylon from Sach-Seſi, the King of that Kingdom, ruin'd the Province of Tauris, and added that of Erivan to his Conqueſts, by the perfidiouſneſs of the Governour. I ſhall give you an account anon, how he was juſtly puniſh'd, for that act of Treachery, and I reſerve the Compleat hiſtory of his baſeneſs, for the Relations of my Travels.

This Room or Arbour, which we call the Blvedere, from the delightfulneſs of its Proſpect, is built in an Eminent place, upon a ſteepy Rock. It is a noble Arched Roof, and the Walls, which are rais'd no higher than that a Man may reſt his Elbow on them, are all of White Marble, with ſome Arabian Verſes thereon, cut and gilt. It is open on all ſides, and the Lattices all about it, hinder thoſe that are within it from being ſeen by ſuch as are on the outſide, and afford them withal one of the moſt delightful Proſpects in the World. For, from that Room, they have the ſight of all Galata and Pera, all that pleaſant Landskip of Aſia, about Scutaret and Chalcedon, the Port of Conſtantinople, one of the nobleſt of all Europe, and the Channel of the Black Sea, which at the point of the Seraglio, is intermixt with the Waters of the Medeterranan, where there is obſervable in the midſt, as it were, a white foamy ſtreak, which ſeems naturally to denote the Confines of Europe and Aſia.

The Excellent Wines of Tenedos.

'Twas in this pleaſant Arbour, that Amurath was often wont to divert himſelf, with that Governour of Erivan, who had taught him to drink Wine, whereto he had ſo eaſily accuſtom'd himſelf, that many times, he ſpent three days together, in a continu'd debauch. The only Wine he drunk was of the Iſlands of Tenedos, the moſt excellent of any of the Iſlands of the Archipelago, and the leaſt intoxicating; and he ſoon became as good a proficient in the drinking of it, as the Maſter, who had had taught him to do it. This Persian Governour was a man extreamly enclin'd to Debauchery, insomuch that before his perfidious delivery of the Place to Amurath, as I passed through Erivan, in one of my Voyages to Persia, he intreated me to make my Abode there for the space of fifteen days, and to humor him, there was a necessity of spending whole Nights in Drinking, so that I saw him not all the Day long, which I question not but he employ'd in the management of his Affairs, and taking his repose.

Perfidiousness punish'd.

But, at the long run, lewd actions meet with the Punishment they justly deserve. Shach-Sefi, King of Persia, would not entertain any proposition of Peace, no nor so much as give audience to an Ambassador from the Grand Seignor, whom I saw sent back from Ispahan, where I then was, unless Amurath would de-deliver up the Traytor, in order, to his punishment. Whereupon, they being both one day at their ordinary debauch, in the Belvedere, the Grand Seignor, without any formality, order'd him to be Strangled, in his presence.

The fortune of a beautiful Sicilian Lady.

It was sometimes also Amurath's custome, to bring into that pleasant place, the Principal Sultanesses, as, his Mothers, his Sisters, and such others as he had the greatest kindness for. But his most frequent assignations there, was with a Sicilian Lady, for whom he had a great affection, and who being extreamly handsome and of a mild disposition, obtain'd of him whatere he desir'd. She was taken at Sea, by the Pyrates of Barbary, as she was upon her Voyage into Spain in order to her intermarriage with one of the Grandees of that Countrey: And the Bassa of Algiers sent her a Present, to the Grand Seignor, who took a particular fancy for her, and made her as happy, as a Woman can be, who must endure the restraint of the Seraglio.

The Grand Seignor's Bed-Chamber.

From that door of the Hall, which gives entrance into the Flower-garden, you pass, on the right hand, into a kind of Gallery, about fifty paces in length, and twelve in breadth, the pavement whereof is a Chequer-work of Black and White Marble, at the end of it there is a great Structure, which is wholly of Marble, and what first entertains the Eye is a pretty lage Door, over which there is a kind of a flat arched Roof. And both the Roof, and the Door, are adorn'd with flowers in emboss'd work; and amongst those flowers, there are certain impresses cut in the Marble, and all curiously Gilt.

About five or six paces from that Door, you come to another not inferiour to it, as to beauty, which is that of the Grand Seignor's own Chamber. Its Cieling, or arched Roof, is according to the model of the Winter-room, whereof I have given you a Description at the beginning of this Chapter. The only difference between 'em is, in what issues out of the Angles of the little Arches; and whereas in the other Room they represent the bottoms of Lamps, gilt with Gold; in this, they are balls of Rock-Crystal, cut Facet-wise, with an inter-mixture of precious stones, of different Colours, which must needs give a very divertive entertainment to the Eye. The Floor of it is cover'd with Carpets, which, as to Beauty and Excellency of Workmanship, exceed those of the other Chambers; and the same thing is to be said, as to the Quilts, the Counterpanes, and the Cushions; the most part of this Furniture being adorn'd with an Embroidery of Pearls, and the whole Room which is very spacious, having in all parts, several other sumptuous embellishments. And whereas this Room was Originally design'd for the Grand Seignor's Summer-Divertisement, it is accordingly the more lightsome, and has large Windows on three sides of it. As to the Sultan's Lodging, he complies with the custome of the Countrey, or rather that of all the Eastern parts. There is no Bed-stead set up, but towards the Evening the Pages spread three Quilts one upon the other, at one of the corners of the Chamber, and place over it a Canopy of Cloth of Gold, garnish'd with an embroidery of Pearls.

The Ancient Veneration for Mahomet's Standard.

On the right hand, as you come into this Room, there is a Cub-board, or Press, wrought within the very Wall, where they keep the Bajarac, that is to say, the Standard of Mahomet, which has these words for its Impress, or Motto, Nasrum min Allah, that is, in our Language, The Assistance is from God. This Standard was heretofore in so great veneration among the Turks, that when there happen'd any Sedition, either at Constantinople, or in the Armies, there was no safer or more expeditious remedy to appease it, than to expose that Standard to the sight of the Rebels. And that very Expedient has many times prov'd very fortunate to the Ottoman Princes, when they have been reduc'd to their great Extremities, by the ſecret Combinations of ſome Factious Perſons. Then does the Grand Seignor ſend ſome of the Mollahs, who are in the nature of Prieſts, amongſt the Turks, with the Standard, and being come up to the firſt Ranks of the Rebellious Forces, they ſpeak to them, in their Language, to this effect: This Banner is the Standard of the Prophet; all they who are Faithful, and Obedient, ought to come and ſubmit themſelves at the Foot of this Standard; and they who will not come to it, are Unbelievers, and they ought to be deſtroyed. But ſome years ſince, the Turks made it appear, that they made but little account of that Standard; for Haſſan, one of the Baſſa's, who gave the Grand Seignor ſo much Trouble in the Year 1658. turn'd his back on Mahomet's Banner, and, follow'd by his own Party, compaſs'd the Deſign he was engag'd in.

A word further of the Prince's Appartment.

Out of the Grand Seignor's Chamber, there is a paſſage into a great Hall, the place appointed for the Reception of the Pages who approach his Perſon; and there is adjoyning to it a Bath, which is fill'd by three Cocks, where they waſh themſelves, when they go to their Devotions. Out of the ſame Hall, there is an aſcent of ſome ſteps, which brings you to a ſmall Cloſet, only Wainſcoted about, but well Painted, and well Gilt. That Stair-Caſe is always cover'd with a red Cloth, the Room is open on all ſides, having fair Windows, wherein Talc is us'd, inſtead of Glaſs; and from thence you have, in a manner, the ſame Proſpect as from the Belvedere, built by the Emperour Amurath.

Inclinations common to the Eaſtern Monarchs.

THE Ottoman Monarchs, and generally all the Princes of Aſia, what Reputation ſoever they may have gain'd, for their Valour, have always been guilty of a bent to Voluptuouſneſs, and Effeminacy, and found great Charms in a ſlothful kind of Life. They come out of their Seraglio's as ſeldome as they can, and that only, when an indiſpenſable neceſſity forces them to ſhew themſelves in publick, whether it be at the head of their Armies, or in thoſe Ceremonies, wherein the Law, or common Civilities, require their Preſence. True it is, that ſome of them were not ſo great Lovers of Retirement as others, and preferr'd the hardſhips of War, the Divertiſements of Hunting, before the blandiſhments of Eaſe, and the converſation of Women: But thoſe may be reduced into a very ſmall number, and the greateſt part of them being more addicted to mind their quiet, and to lead a Life void of diſturbance, have tranſferr'd all their concerns, Civil and Military, to the management of the principal Miniſter of State, thinking it enough to content themſelves with the account he was pleas'd to give him thereof.

The Seraglio a place delicious to one ſingle perſon, and incommodious to many.

It may be ſaid of the Seraglio, That it is a delicate, but withal a ſolitary place of abode: but as to the Obſervations I have made of things, it is delicious only to a ſingle perſon, and ſolitary to all the reſt. Of the many Thouſands, of the Male Sex, who are there as 'twere in Priſon, and have a dependence, one upon the other, none but the Prince himſelf has the ſight of Women; for the Negro-Eunuchs, whom their deformity of Body and Countenance has, in a manner, transform'd into Monſters, are not to be admitted into the number of Men.

The Mahumetans zealous obſervers of the Law.

But though the Ottoman Monarchs, and generally all that may be comprehended under the denomination of Turciſm, are involv'd in Voluptuouſneſs, as not having any tincture of ought relating to polite Literature, yet this is particularly recommendable in them, that their great purſuance of pleaſures does not ever make them neglect the Divine Worſhip, and that, ſetting all things aſide, they are careful to perform what the Law requires of them, upon that acccount. They are exact and punctual, even to ſuperſtition, in all their exerciſes of Piety, in their ways of waſhing themſelves, in their Prayers, in their Faſts, in their Alms, and in their Pilgrimages; which are the Five principal Articles of the Mahumetan Religion.

The regulated times of their Devotions.

It is a thing ſufficiently well known to all people, that the Turks go to their Prayers, or Devotions, five times a day, that is, in the ſpace of a natural Day, which amounts to four and twenty hours. For the performance of this work, there are no certain hours appointed, and it is according to the Sun's being above the Horizon. Upon which account, there is a greater interval between their ſeveral Offices, in the Summer-time, than there is in the Winter, and they place the principal part of their Devotion upon obſervations of that nature. The firſt exerciſe is to be perform'd at the break of day, before Sun-riſing; the ſecond at Noon; the third, between that time and Sun-ſet; the fourth, immediately after his ſetting; and the laſt, about an hour and an half after Night: in all which, unleſs ſickneſs intervene, they are very punctual, ſo that nothing of buſineſs, how important ſoever, ſhall divert them.

Their fervour in Acts of Devotion.

Nay, on the contrary, ſome are ſo zealous, and their fervour is ſo remarkable, that being once fixt in their Prayers, they could not be put out of them, though 'twere to force back an Enemy, who were entering into the City, or that word ſhould be brought them, that the houſe wherein they are, was on fire. They are moreover of a perſwaſion, that it is a great ſin, for them to put their hand to any part of the body, to ſcratch themſelves, if there ſhould be occaſion; and they would have the external part to be anſwerable to the internal, and correſpondent to that abjection, which ought to be the ſtate of the Soul, in the preſence of God, during their Exerciſes of Devotion.

The Grand Seignors ordinary Employments.

Nor does the Grand Seignor himſelf deſire to be diſpens'd from the obligation of performing theſe acts of Devotion, any more than the meaneſt of his Subjects; but, on the contrary, he is very religious in that obſervance of their Law, and he always begins the day with the Offices appointed for that part of it. We need ſay no more, than that he riſes at the break of day, nay ſometimes he is up before, and goes into the Bath to waſh himſelf, eſpecially when he has lain with one of his Wives, or Concubines. Having finiſh'd his Prayers, he diverts himſelf in ſhooting with the Bowe, or more commonly in looking after his Horſes, and riding ſome of them: and ſometimes he ſets himſef in a Gallery, where he cannot be ſeen by any, and contents himſelf with the diverſion of ſeeing ſome exerciſes perform'd by his Pages. If an one of them does ſomething that he is much pleas'd withal, he ſends him a Veſt, or ſome other thing of value, as an encouragement for his doing better another time, and to raiſe an emulation in his Companions. Upon Council-days, he comes through the cloſe Gallery, to the Window, which looks into the Divan Hall, to ſee what they are doing there: and upon the riſing of the Council, he returns to his own Quarter, where his Dinner is brought up to him.

The Services of his Table.

In the ſervices of his Table, there is not any great varitey, or delicacy, the Diſhes that are ſerv'd up, being anſwerable to the Bill of fare, wich I have given you in the Chapter, where I treat of the Kitchins. He takes his refection, ſitting, croſs-leg'd, as Taylors do amongſt us, being ſurrounded with ſumptuous Brocado-cuſhions, which keep from him the dampneſs of the Walls, and upon the Carpets which cover the Scaffold, or Balcony, where he is ſeated, they ſpread others of Spaniſh-Leather, leſt the former ſhould be prejudic'd by any thing of greaſineſs, which might fall on the Table-cloath, and ſoak through it. This Cloath, which is laid over the Spaniſh-Leather-Carpet, is of thoſe ſumptuous painted Cloaths, which are made in the Indies, and embroider'd all about: and as for Napkins, there are not any uſed amongſt the Turks, who are neat, and cleanly at their Meals, and if ſometimes there be any occaſion of wiping, 'tis done with a little handkerchief. At their refections, they uſe the right hand only, and when they have done, there is a Baſin of warm water and ſoap brought up, for them to waſh, and every one takes out his Handkerchief from under his Saſch, or Girdle, to wipe his hands and mouth. Nor muſt you expect in Turkey to find Knives and

Forks

Forks laid on the Table, but every one has his Knife lodg'd in his Saſch, and makes uſe of, when occaſion requires: but they have no great uſe for them, inaſmuch as their Bread being made thin, as 'twere into Cakes, and eaten in a manner as ſoon as 'tis out of the Oven they break it with their fingers, and all the meat, which is ſerv'd up to them, is cut into ſmall pieces, which is alſo the cuſtome in Perſia. But the Spoons they uſe, in taking their Pottages, and whatever is liquid upon the Table, are much larger than ours; and they are wooden ones. The Pages of the Kilar, that is the Cup-bearers Office bring up the Bread, and the Sherbets, and the Pages of the Chamber go and take the meat, at the Prince's Appartment, out of the hands of the Officers belonging to the Kitchin, who bring it in Diſhes cover'd with Pourcelain, the Grand Seignor not uſing any Gold Veſſels at his own Table.

After Dinner, the Grand Seignor ſays his Noon-Prayer, and ſometimes, on Sundays and Tueſdays, which are the principal Council-days he comes into the Hall of Audience, to diſcourſe with his Miniſters of State, concerning his Affairs. On the other days, he walks in the Gardens of the Seraglio, ſometimes with his Eunuchs, ſometimes with the Sultaneſſes, or with the Dwarfs and Mutes, who ſhew a thouſand apiſh tricks, to divert him: and ſometimes he goes a hunting, or fiſhing, according to his inclination. But neither his Affairs, nor his Recreations do ever divert him from performing the five Exerciſes of Devotion, at the times appointed by the Alcoran; and it is the general Perſwaſion of all the Turks, that if they neglect them, they bring down God's curſe upon themſelves, and that they cannot avoid the ill conſequences thereof.

The Sultan, when obliged to go, in Ceremony, to the Moſquey.

I have ſaid elſewhere, that Friday is to the Mahumetans, what the Saturday is to the Jews, and the Sunday to the Chriſtians, in regard it was upon the ſaid day, that Mahomet took his flight from Mecha; and I have alſo given this further intimation, that the Turks count their Months only by the number of the Moons. There is an ancient Cuſtome, whereby the Grand Seignor is obliged upon all the firſt Frydays of the ſeveral Moons, to go to the new Moſquey, in regard that S. Sophia is too near the Seraglio, and beſides that there is not, between thoſe places, room enough for ſo great a Train, as that of the Sultan, the people of Conſtantinople would not have the ſatisfaction of ſeeing him.

His Devotion is ſo great, that he ſeldom miſſes that Ceremony, and when there paſſes a firſt Fryday of the month, without his appearance in it, the people is preſently of opinion, that he is ſick and thereupon turbulunt ſpirits are mutining their factious deſigns. On thoſe dayes do they, who have any complaints to make, of ſome injuſtice that has been done them, take their opportunity and plant themſelves in the way through which he is to paſs, with Petitions in their hands, which upon a ſign made by the Sultan, are receiv'd by Eunuchs. If the injuſtice be very great and the perſon who preſents the Petition be extreamly oppreſs'd and injur'd, he holds a lighted Torch over his head, which is ordinarily practis'd in Turkey upon the like occaſions, and by that myſterious comportment, intimates to the Prince; That if he does not do him juſtice, his Soul ſhall burn in the other World, as that Torch does in this.

Upon the Emperour's going out of the Seraglio, the principal Sultaneſſes, his Mother, his deareſt Conſort, or his Siſters, are in a Room over the great Gate of that Palace, with Bags full of Aſpers, which they fling among the people, that they may pray, That God would graciouſly hearken to the Devotions, which the Grand Seignor is going to perform. His March is after the ſame Order, and with an obſervance of the Pomp, as that of the ancient Greek Emperours, and I queſtion not, but that thoſe Authors, who have written of the Ottoman Empire in general, or particularly of the City of Conſtantinople, have made ſufficient deſcriptions, of that Ceremony, and therefore I ſhall think my ſelf diſpens'd from the obligations of giving a new one of it. I ſhall only ſay this of it, That it is very Magnificent, and that there is not any Monarch in the World, who makes ſo great an expoſal of Gold and precious Stones together, wherewith the Harneſſes and Trappings of moſt of the Horſes, as well of the Grand Seignor, as thoſe of the Baſſa's are all cover'd.

The wicked contrivances of the Mufti, to get Money.

At their return from the Moſquey, the Mufti, on Horſe-back, and at the head of a wretched Crew of Greek Chriſtians, of the meaneſt ſort of people (for there are very few Armenians among them) expect the Grand Seignor, at the Gates of the Seraglio, and telling his Highneſs, That thoſe people were Mis-believers, who had embrac'd the good Law, intreat him to relieve them, and to make ſome proviſion for their Livelihood. Upon this Exhortation, the Sultan orders twenty or thirty Purſes to be diſtributed amongſt them; nay ſometimes his Charity is ſo great, as to amount to twenty thouſand Crowns, which are receiv'd by the Mufti, and the diſtribution thereof is made, as he pleaſes. But the greater part of it he converts to his own uſe, and holds an infamous Correſpondence with moſt of that wretched Crew, who though they often preſent themſelves for that Benevolence, he pretends not to have any knowledge of at all. By this Impoſture, which is ſo palpable, and ſuits well enough with the followers of Mahomet, does that High-Prieſt of the Mahumetan Law, put yearly into his Purſe, a conſiderable Sum of Money, which is no ſmall augmentation to his Revenue. But the Caſe is the ſame with him, as with the Baſſa's: that is, he is not exempted from refunding, and we ſhall, by and by produce a very late Example of it.

And this may ſerve for a general Account of the ordinary Lives of the Ottoman Monarchs while they are within the Seraglio. In their Armies, they have other Employments, eſpecially they, who have Military Souls, as there have been ſome among them, of whom Hiſtories have given us a very noble Character.

The preſent State of the Ottoman Family.

I come now to the preſent ſtate of the Ottoman Family, and to the particular inclinations of the Grand Seignor, who now Reigns. Mahomet, the Fourth of that Name, the Son of Ibrahim, and a Circaſſian Lady, was Born in the Year 1643. and he is, by that account, got into the Thirty fourth Year of his Age, and the Twenty fourth of his Reign. He has two Brothers, Bajazet, and Orchan, but they are by another Mother, who is ſtill living, and is perpetually ſtudying how to preſerve them. He has alſo a third Brother, named Solyman, who is the ſecond of the Sons of Ibrahim, according to the order of their Nativities. But the Mother of the laſt mentioned Son is dead; and thence it comes, that the Souldiery, who conceive greater hopes of that Prince, than of either Bajazet, or Orchan, his Brethren, pity him the more, and have the greater Affection for him, upon that very ſcore of his having loſt the ſupport, which he might have expected from a Mother.

Ever ſince the time of Bajazet the Second, who firſt introduc'd that inhumane and cruel Cuſtome, of ſecuring the Throne of the Sultan-Regent, by the death of his Brethren, few of thoſe unfortunate Princes have eſcap'd the Barbariſm of their Elder-Brother, and they, amongſt them, who have been treated with ſomewhat leſs of inhumanity, have pin'd away their Lives in a ſtrict and doleful Impriſonment, being not permitted to ſee any body. This was the Treatment of Ibrahim, the Father of Mahomet, during the Reign of Amurath, his Brother, the Son of Achmet, by Kioſem, a Woman of Excellent Parts, and well vers'd in the Management of Affairs. Mahomet's Brothers are now treated after the ſame rate, and the Mother of Bajazet, and Orchan, uſes all the endeavours ſhe can, to ſecure to them the Affections of the great Officers of the Port, and the Janizaries, who are ſomewhat diſguſted with the capricious humour, and extraordinary Covetouſneſs of Mahomet. This Prince was advanc'd to the Throne in the Year 1650. after the Death of Ibrahim, his Father, who was ſtrangled by the Janizaries in a Sedition. He being then but Seven Years of Age, the Regency was beſtowed, during his Minority, on the Old Sultaneſs, Mother to Ibrahim, who ſoon after abus'd her Authority, and raiſed a dangerous Faction againſt her Grand-Child Mahomet, wherein ſhe loſt her Life.

An extraordinary Example of a Father and Son ſucceſſively Grand Vizirs.

The preſent Grand Seignor, who is a Perſon much addicted to his Pleaſures, and takes a particular diverſion in Hunting, leaves the management of Affairs to his Grand Vizir Achmet, who has ſucceeded Coprogli, his own Father, in that principal Charge of the Empire. 'Tis a thing which may well paſs for a Prodigy, amongſt the Turks, and ſuch as that there has not yet been any Example of it ſeen, as perhaps there will not be any other hereafter. I have ſhewn, that it is a thing abſolutely contrary to their Politicks; and therefore had it not been for the great and particular obligations, which the Empire had to Coprogli, who on the other ſide, cunningly repreſented to the Grand Seignor, that he never durſt truſt any

but

but his own Son, with the Secret of Affairs, whereof he only had the Key, this very Achmet, who next to the Sultan, is the principal Person of the Empire, would have been, at present, but a simple Bey, or Captain of a Galley.

The Pourtraiture of Mahomet IV. the present Prince.

The Grand Seignor Mahomet is handsome enough as to his Person, his Stature somewhat exceeding that of the middle sort of persons; he has not too much corpulency, and his health is in an uncertain state. He is very much troubled with a Fall, which he receiv'd in the violence of his Game, some years since, by leaping his Horse over a broad Ditch: And whereas that passion is still predominant in him, this inconvenience attends it, That, when he is not somewhat favourable and indulgent to himself, in that violent Exercise, he is sometimes taken off his Horse in a miserable condition; the Remedies which might be apply'd to that indisposition, taking no effect, by reason of the little care he takes to preserve himself. He is a person of an unconstant and unquiet disposition, which creates the greater trouble to those who wait on him; and though they study his humours, yet is it a hard matter to satisfie him. He has a Son, who has been Circumcis'd with great Solemnity, at the Age, wherein that Ceremony is to be perform'd. The Sultaness, his Mother, a Woman of a Magnificent humour, to augment the Pomp and Splendour of that Action, to the Eyes as well of the Turks as Forreiners, would have the Garment, which the Young Prince wore that day, to be all cover'd with Diamonds, and, to that end, caus'd several Rich Pieces of the Treasury to be broken; but after the Solemnity, all the Precious Stones were carried back into it again.

I said erewhile, that the present Sultan-Mahomet is extreamly addicted to Hunting, and makes it so much his Darling Divertisement, that he makes less account of the Lives of Men, than he does of his Dogs; and withal, that he is of a very Covetous Humour. I shall, in one single Example make a sufficient discovery of both those inclinations in him, and that will also further make it appear, how well he was skill'd, in that Knack of exercising great Liberalities, without any deduction out of his Revenues.

When the Grand Seignor goes a Hunting, there are Orders sent to a great number of People, for the space of four or five Leagues about the place where he intends to Hunt, in order to the surrounding of a certain quantity of Ground, and for the enclosing of it so well, as that nothing can escape thence. 'Tis not to be imagin'd, this can be done, without great destruction to the Countrey, and much inconvenience to the poor People, who are forc'd to leave their Work, to carry on an Exercise which is much more toilsome than it, in which they many times come off with the Loss of Limb, or Life, or some other disastrous Accident. These continual impositions of trouble and toil, put many People into the repining humour, insomuch that an Eunuch, who was in favour, having one day, taken the freedom to represent to the Grand Seignor the prejudice his Subjects underwent, by those courses which occasion'd the spoyling of their Grounds, and the loss of their Lives, he grew very Angry, and after some days Imprisonment, he gave him a shameful Ejection out of the Seraglio.

But, in process of Time, the mischievous Inconveniences occasion'd by this insatiable pursuance of his Pleasures in Hunting, increasing more and more, the Grand Vizir, and the other Bassa's, resolv'd to intreat the Moufti, to make a Remonstrance to him, of the ill consequence thereof, he being the only Person who might presume to speak any more of it to the Grand Seignor. The Moufti would by no means hearken to it at first, imagining, as he might well, that his Harangue would not be pleasing to the Sultan: But, at last, being over-perswaded to do that good office to the Publick, he took Courage, and his opportunity, to speak to him, with all the insinuation he could.

The Ancient Custom of the Greek Empe-rours, to live by their handy-work.

He could not bethink himself of a better Expedient, to remove that predominant passion out of his mind, than to represent to him, the Custom of his Predecessors, who took their diversion in some handy-work, when the War, or the Concerns of State gave them any remission: That, according to their Example, their Subjects apply'd themselves to things that were beneficial, and made all Arts and Professions to flourish in the Empire, to the great Advantage of the Publick: That Sultan-Amurath his Uncle, delighted in making those Horn-Rings, which are us'd in shooting with the Long-Bowe: That Ibrahim his Father, was an Excellent

Artist,

Artist, in the making of Tooth-picks, and other small Instruments of Tortoise-shell: And that it were requisite that so Laudable a Custom should not be lost, since it gave the People occasion to do the like, and so to avoid Idleness.

He further Remonstrated to his Highness, That it was much more commendable in the sight of men, and more acceptable to God, for him to live by the Labour of his hands, than by the sweat of the People, and the Money arising by Impositions, which were forbidden by the Law: and that what was allotted for the peculiar Diet of his Predecessors, was the product of their own handy-work: That true it was indeed, they were not oblig'd to any assiduity in the Employments they had fancied, but that what they did was as much for their own diversion, as to satisfie the Precept of the Law; and when they had finish'd some piece of Work, they sent it to some Bassa, for whom they had a particular kindness, and he receiv'd it with extraordinary respect, and abundance of joy: That he, who was the Bearer of it, when he came to present it, said, That Piece of Work, was made by the Grand Seignor himself, who had sent him to sell it, in order to his own sustenance: And that the Bassa, or other Person, to whom it was directed, to express how highly he was pleas'd therewith, gave him a certain number of Purses for it; not accounting the Present which was to be made to the Bearer: That what Money came in that way, was design'd to bear the Charges of the Prince's own Table, and by that means, he could not be charg'd with living by the Labour of his Subjects.

To this effect was the Mousti's harangue; and I shall tell you by the way, That the Kings of Persia have the same Custome, or rather the same Superstition. In the Reign of Shach-Abas, there were built, at Ispahan, certain Places called Caravanseras, which are publick houses, where the Merchants are lodg'd, the Rents whereof are set aside for the maintenance of the King's own Table; the Money which is rais'd by the Customs, and other Impositions, being accounted as to that score, for Haram, that is to say, for unjust and forbidden, and reserv'd to be employed in the Exigencies of State, and not for the Sustenance of the Prince.

The Sultan is cunningly revenged of the Moufti.

The Grand Seignor dissembling and smothering the vexation, into which the Mousti's Remonstrance had put him, pretended to take his Advertisements very kindly, and dispos'd himself to satisfie him, in a short time, how well he could make his advantage of the Lecture he had read him. He acknowledg'd, that he had often thought of what he had represented to him, and that he had a way of Livelihood in his head, which he hop'd would take very well. Some days pass'd away, ere the Grand Seignor made the least mention of Hunting; but at last, he grows impatient, he leaves the Seraglio, and had the good fortune to kill a Hare with a Gun, the first he had ever destroy'd that way. He immediately sends it to the Mousti, with order to tell him, That he has follow'd his Advice, and that having learnt the Profession of a Huntsman, he has commanded that first piece of his Game should be brought to him, which he was willing to sell, that he might subsist by the Money it should produce: That he fail not to give twenty Purses to him who brings it; and that as to his own Person, he knew well enough what he ought to send him.

The Mousti conceal'd his surprizal as well as he could, and receiv'd the Hare with great testimonies of his resentments and joy, of the honour, which his Highness had done him; and having bestow'd, according to his own order, Twenty Purses upon the Bearer of the Hare, sends Sixty more to the Grand Seignor himself; learning, at his own Cost, and that to the value of Fourscore thousand Crowns, that men should not be over-forward to give their Sovereigns those Advertisements, which they desire not of them.

To finish the Pourtraiture of Sultan-Mahomet, he is further chargeable with a defect of constancy, in his humour, and a roughness of deportment towards his People, who are thereupon apt to have the less Affection for him. And whereas he is indefatigable in his Hunting-Exercises, and spends whole daies therein, even in the severest part of the Winter-Season, it happen'd, one day, as he was returning home, from the Sport of running down a Stag, that his Grand Faulconer took the boldness to represent to him the inconvenience of exposing his Slaves so much in the Ice and Snow, by which means there had dy'd about Thirty of them the

Night

Night before, and the reſt were in a fair way to follow them. The Prince, not mov'd at all with that Remonſtrance, made this Reply to the Grand Faulconer, That, if the Weather prov'd very hard, they ſhould have a care of his Dogs, and allow them cloathing, and other accommodations, leſt the rigour of the Seaſon might take off any one of them; making not the leaſt mention of, or proviſion for the men, whom he ſacrificed to his Divertiſement. That rough Repartee having been ſpread among the People, has begot ſuch animoſity in them againſt this Prince, that there's no queſtion made of his being ſenſible thereof, and that it is, in ſome meaſure, the cauſe of his keeping ſo much at a diſtance from the Metropolis of his Empire, where he does not think himſelf ſecure.

CHAP. XVII.

Of the Womens Appartment.

THE PRINCIPAL HEADS.

The impoſſibility of having a full knowledge of the Womens Appartment, in the Seraglio. The Commerce between the Jeweſſes and the Sultaneſſes. *The doleful Story of Two Famous Wreſtlers. The great Severity of the Sultan-*Amurath. How to diſtinguiſh between what is true, and what fabulous, in reference to the Sultaneſſes. A ſtrange Story of an Old Woman. Polygamy prejudicial to the propagation of Children. The great Secrecy of the Grand Seignor's Amours.

The impoſſibility of having an exact account of the Womens Appartment.

I Make a Chapter by it ſelf of the Appartment of the Women, only to entertain the Reader, with the impoſſibility there is, of having a perfect knowledge of it, or getting any exact account, either what the accomodations of it are; or how the Perſons, who are confin'd therein, behave themſelves. There is not in all Chriſtendome any Monaſtery of Religious Virgins, how regular and auſtere ſoever it may be, the entrance whereof is more ſtrictly forbidden to men, than is that of this Appartment of the Women: inſomuch that my white Eunuch, who has ſupply'd me with ſo particular a deſcription of the inner part of the Seraglio, could give me no certain information of this Quarter of it, where the Women are lodg'd. All I could get out of him, was, That the Doors of it are kept by Negro-Eunuchs, and that, beſides the Grand Seignor himſelf, and ſometimes, the Phyſician, in caſe of great neceſſity, there never enters any man into it, no nor Woman, beſides thoſe who live in it, and they are never permittied to go out of it, unleſs it be in order to their confinement in the Old Seraglio. But we muſt except, out of that number, the Sultaneſſes, and their Maids, or Ladies of Honour, whom the Grand Seignor allows, when he pleaſes, to come into the Gardens of the Seraglio, and whom he ſometimes takes abroad with him, into the Country; yet ſo as that they cannot be ſeen by any perſon whatſoever. Four Negro Eunuchs carry a kind of Pavilion, under which is the Sultaneſs, and the Horſe upon which ſhe is mounted, all ſave only the head of the horſe, which is ſeen on the out-ſide of the Pavilion, the two fore pieces of which taking him about the Neck, are cloſe faſten'd, above, and below.

And as to the Phyſician, he is never admitted, as I ſaid, but in caſe of extream neceſſity, into the Appartment of the Women, and with ſuch precautions, that he can neither ſee the perſon who is indiſpos'd, nor be ſeen by her, but to feel her Pulſe through a piece of Lawn, all the other Women having retir'd from her Bed-ſide, and the Negro-Eunuchs having taken their places. Thus you ſee what precautions they uſe, to deprive the Women, of the Seraglio, of all means of having any acceſs to Men, or indeed ſo much as a ſight of them: and if it happen that ſome Jeweſs has enterance into their Quarter, to Trade with them, and to ſell them ſome little Rarities, they are ſtrictly ſearch'd by the Negro-Eunuchs, leſt there ſhould happen to thruſt in ſome Man, diſguis'd in Woman's Cloaths, in which caſe immediate death would enſue. And when the Curioſity of ſome Chriſtian Ladies has inclin'd them to ſee the Sultaneſſes, they ſeldome eſcap'd without the receiving of ſome affront; and I could produce ſome examples of it did I think it covenient.

The Commerce between the Jeweſſes and the Sultaneſſes.

It might be imagin'd, that, by the relation of the Jeweſſes, it were poſſible to have ſome account, of the embelliſhments of the Halls and Chambers of the Appartment of the government of that Female Republick. But it is to be noted, That theſe Jeweſſes are not permitted to go far into it; for there is a Chamber appointed for the management of their Traffick, and the Negro-Eunuchs are the Brokers between them, and the Sultaneſſes. They take cognizance of all, and what the Princeſſes have a mind to buy, paſſing, through their hands they make them pay double and treble what the things are worth, and ſo heap up Wealth, though they have but little occaſion or opportunity to make uſe of it.

The doleful Story of Two Famous Wreſtlers.

But I do not expect, any one ſhould wonder at that great exactneſs, of not permiting any man, no not even a White Eunuch, to approach the Appartment of the Women, after an Accident, which happen'd at Adrianople, in the Year of our Lord M. DC. XXXIX. and which I ſhall here inſert in few words. Amurath, at his return, after the taking of Bagdet, came and made his abode, for ſome time, at Adrianople. He had a Page, belonging to the Treaſury, who was a Native of Tocat, in Natolia, and, from the place of his birth, they gave him the name of Tocatli. He was a well-fet Young man, robuſt, skillful in Wreſtling, and, upon that account, the Grand Seignor had made Chief of the Wreſtlers.

It happen'd, that one of the moſt Famous, for that Exerciſe, came about that time to Adrianople, out of the Confines of Muſcovy, and in all the Cities, through which he travell'd, he had alwaies been too hard for thoſe who had preſented themſelves to Wreſtle with him. His Reputation was ſpread all over the Empire, where he had not met with any Wreſtler, who acknowledg'd not himſelf inferiour to him; Which Report coming to the Page of the Treaſury, he conceiv'd ſo great an emulation at the Fame of that Man, whom all the World ſo higly celebrated, that he ſent one of the Halvagis, to carry him a Civil Challenge from him, and to acquaint him, That he was deſirous to have a Tryal of Skill with him, in the Grand Seignor's Preſence. He ſent him word withal, That, before his Highneſs had any notice of it, 'twere convenient, they made ſome tryal of their ſtrength; And that no body might know any thing of it, he would ſend him a Boſtangi's Garment and Cap, by which means he might come into the Seraglio.

When the Grand Seignor is not within the Seraglio, where ever it be, the Boſtangis are permitted to come into, and to go out of it, by the Garden-Gate; and there being a great number of them, it is no hard matter to get a man in under their accouttrements. By this contrivance did the Muſcovian Wreſtler get into the Seraglio, the next day, upon the ſollicitation of the Page, who ſent him what was requiſite; the Grand Seignor being that day, gone a Hunting. They both put on Drawers of Leather well liquor'd with ſome fat or oyly ſtuff, all the reſt of the body being ſtark naked, and liquor'd in like manner: and after a long diſpute, the Page had the better, whether he got it fairly by his own ſtrength, and skill, or that the other yielded the victory, out of complaiſance.

This Action paſs'd in the midſt of the place which is before the Garden, in the preſence of the Mutes, and all the Pages of the Seraglio; and the Grand Seignor being return'd from Hunting, the Superintendent of the Treaſury told him, That there was come into the City, a Pehlivan, a Muſcovite by Country, robuſt, and of a good meen, of great ſtrength, and well experienced in Wreſtling, and that if

if his Highneſs pleas'd he ſhould have the ſatisfaction to ſee him engag'd in that Exerciſe. The Grand Seignor commanded he ſhould be brought into the Seraglio, the next day; and that Tocateli ſhould have notice, to be ready to entertain him.

Being both come to the place, and in a condition ready to cloſe, the Grand Seignor came into a Gallery, attended by all the Grandees of the Seraglio, to be Spectators of that Tryal of Skill in Wreſtling. The Victory having ſtood as 'twere in the ballance a good while, and all Spectators, being ſomewhat impatient, to ſee which ſide it would turn to, a Mute expreſs'd himſelf by ſigns, to one of his Companions, to this effect, That he wondered the Page, who ſhould have deriv'd new ſtrength and courage, from the Grand Seignor's preſence, found it ſo difficult to get the better of the Muſcovite, whom he had ſo eaſily worſted the day before.

The language of the Mutes, by ſigns, is as intiligable in the Seraglio, as if they had the liberty of ſpeaking, and the Grand Seignor, who underſtands it as well as any of them, as having been accuſtom'd thereto from his Infancy, and commonly diſcourſing with them, was ſtrangly ſurpriz'd, to underſtand that the Muſcovite had been, the day before, in the ſame place. His indignation immediately fluſh'd into his face; he commanded the Wreſtlers to give over their Exerciſe, and, calling the Page to him, he ask'd him, how he had contriv'd that man's enterance into the Seraglio. The unfortunate Tocateli, who could not deny a thing, which ſo many others were ready to teſtifie, acquainted his Highneſs with what had paſs'd; whereupon, the Sultan, incens'd at the greatneſs of his confidence, prevented his making an end of the Story, by commanding the Boſtangi-bachi to be preſently ſent for, whom he order'd to ſeize on the Muſcovian Wreſtler, and ſee him receive Five hundred blows on the ſoles of the Feet, with a Wand or Cudgel; which no doubt was enough to make him uncapable of exerciſing himſelf, for a good while after. The Overſeer had Orders, to ſee the ſame puniſhment inflicted upon the Page Tocateli; which was immediately put in execution: the Grand Seignor having, in the mean time, retir'd into the Appartment of the Women.

It was the Opinion of moſt about the Seraglio, that thoſe two unfortunate wretches would have eſcap'd, with the puniſhment of Five hundred blowes, each of them, upon the ſoles of their feet. But the Grand Seignor, who was reſolv'd to have their lives, and had retir'd, purpoſely into the Lodgings of the Women, to prevent all mediation for their pardon, ſent away preſently a ſecond Order, to the Boſtangi-Bachi, whereby he was commanded to ſee the Page hang'd up, in the Evening, on a Tree, which is at the Corner of the place where they had Wreſtled, and the Muſcovite on another Tree, which is without the Gate of the Seraglio.

Some would be apt to think, that theſe two Executions were enough to appeaſe the Prince's indignation: but it prov'd otherwiſe. The next morning, the Sultan Amurath ſent for the Capi-Aga, the chiefeſt amongſt the Eunuchs, and the Grand Maſter and Comptroller, of the Seraglio, and commanded, That the Gellab, who is the common Executioner, ſhould alſo give his attendance. Upon the paſſing of theſe Orders, all thoſe, that were preſent, caſt themſelves at his Highneſſe's feet, beſeeching him to conſider, That the Capi-Aga was innocent, that he had not the leaſt notice of the confidence of the Page, and that, if it had come to his knowledge, he would have ſeverely puniſh'd it. The Grand Seignor continuing ſtill extreamly incens'd, could not be appeas'd by all the intreaties and ſubmiſſions they made to him, and would have the Capi-Aga, as Grand Maſter of the Seraglio, to be anſwerable for all thoſe that come into it; when, for the good fortune of that principal Officer of the Sultan's Palace, there came in the Mouſti, and the Seligdar, Chief of the Pages of the Chamber, who with much ado made a ſhift to beg his pardon. Yet was not that ganted but in part; for all they could obtain, extended only to the ſaving of his life; and ſo the Grand Seignor order'd him to be immediately thruſt out of the Seraglio, with a charge never to enter again into it, while he liv'd; and inſtead of the Dignity of Baſſa, whereto he ſhould have been advanc'd, to be reduc'd, to a ſmall Penſion of Three hundred Aſpers a day.

Amurath's great Severity.

I thought pertinent to my design, to bring in this Story of the Two wrestlers, in order to the greater confirmation of what I have affirm'd at the beginning of this Chapter, concerning the impossibility there is, for any person whatsoever, Man, or Woman, to get into the Appartment of the Sultanesses, when they punish, with so much severity, a Stranger, who without expres's order, presumes but to let his foot within any Court of the Seraglio.

How to distinguish what's true, and what fabulous, as to the Sultanesses.

Take it then for granted, that this is all that can be known, with certainty, of the Appartment of the Women, who are subservient to the pleasures of the Ottoman Monarchs; whatever is scatter'd abroad, beyond this Account thereof, being grounded only upon imaginations and conjectures, which haply are at a great distance from the truth. Certain it is, that this Quarter of the Seraglio, as to some part of it, has a fair Prospect upon that of the Grand Seignor, and that the Doors of it are kept night and day, by a certain number of Negro-Eunuchs, the most deformed, and the most dreadful to look upon, that can be found. It is certain also, that it is well furnish'd with abundance of most beautiful Women, of several Countries, who, by the chance of War, or otherwise, are fallen into the hands of the Bassa's, and Governours of Provinces, who send them up, as Presents to the Grand Seignor. It is known also, That, of that variety of Women, the Prince does not appropriate to himself above two or three, whom he has the greatest affection for; nay some of those Princes have confin'd themselves to the embraces of one only, after intermarriage. And this is affirm'd, at Constantinople, of Solyman the Great, after he had plighted his faith to Roxulana, contrary to the ordinary Policy of the Turks, after the affront, done by Temur-leng, to the Wife of Bajazet. The white Eunuchs, who wait in the Grand Seignor's Lodgings, are able in some measure, to give an account of these things, in regard that the Woman, who is to participate of the Grand Seignor's Bed, is conducted into his own Chamber; and, if it be a new Amour, the noise of it is spread, the next day, all over the Seraglio.

It is also known, That the first of those Women, who is deliver'd of a Male-child, and by that means, becomes Mother to the presumptive Heir of the Ottoman Empire, is consider'd as the principal Sultaness, and treated according to her dignity: and the others, who afterwards have Sons or Daughters, have also the quality and denomination of Sultanesses; but the number of the Women, who are to wait on them, is much inferiour, to that of those who are to attend the principal Sultaness. It is known in fine, That those young Princes are brought up under the tutelage of their Mothers, till they are so many years of Age; and when they are strong enough to be put upon certain Exercises, they have Governours and Masters appointed over them, in a distinct Quarter by themselves.

Besides these things, which may be positively known, concerning the Appartment of the Women, in the Seraglio, it may well be immagin'd, that the embellishments of their Lodgings are answerable to those of the Grand Seignor, since it is the Place, where he passes away the most divertive part of his time. It is also not to be question'd, but that it has its Infirmary, its Baths, and the other accommodations, and conveniences, that can be wish'd for. It may also be conjectur'd, that there is, in this Quarter, an observance of the same regulations, as there are in the Chambers of the Ichoglans: That some of the more ancient Maids are Mistresses over the Younger ones, and are, night and day employ'd in observing their actions; and that their unvoluntary restraint forces them to the same unseemly Actions amongst themselves, as the brutish Passions of those Young Men engages them in, whenever they can find the opportunities to commit them. And this presumption has no doubt given occasion to the Fabulous Story, which is related of their being serv'd up with Cucumbers cut into pieces, and not intire, out of a ridiculous fear least they should put them to undecent uses: they who have forg'd the Story not knowing, that it is the custome in the Levant, to cut the Fruit a-cross, into great thick slices, as I shall make it appear in the Chapter, where I treat of Gardens. But it is not only in the Seraglio, that that abominable Vice reigns, but it is predominant also in the City Constantinople, and in all the Provinces of the Empire, and the wicked Example of the Men, who, slighting the natural use of Women-kind, are mutually inflam'd with a detestable love for one another, unfortunately enclines the Women to intimate them.

Of

Of this, there was a ſtrange inſtance in the time of Solyman, the Magnificent. An old Woman was guilty of ſuch an exceſs of extravagance, as to put on Man's Cloaths, and to give out, that ſhe had bought a Chiaoux's place the better to compaſs her deſign, of obtaining the only Daughter of a Trades-man of Conſtantinople, with thing whom ſhe was deſperately fallen in love, having made fruitleſs attempts, by other ways, to ſatisfie her infamous inclinations. The Father not ſuſpecting any thing of her wicked intentions, and being withal poor, grants her his Daughter, the Marriage is ſolemniz'd in the preſence of the Cadi, and the impoſture having been diſcover'd the very Wedding-night, the old woman was condemn'd the next day to be thrown into the Sea, there to quench the Gomorrhean Inflammations of her lewd deſires. This Story is to this day related in Conſtantinople, and I have had it from ſeveral good hands. A ſtrange Story of an old Woman.

Theſe inſatiable ſalaciouſneſs amongſt the Women, are the effects and conſequences of the ſame inclinations in the Men; and the Turks are ſo much the more execrable and abominable as to this particular, the more they are permitted a plurality of Wives. But, whether it happens through a juſt puniſhment from Heaven, or proceed from their Sorceries, which are common and allowed in Turkey, and ordinarily practis'd by the Women, in oppoſition one to another, to appropriate the Affections of their Husbands, it has always been obſerv'd, That the Turks who keep many Women, are not ſo well ſtor'd with Children, as they, who obſerve Conjugal Chaſtity, and confine themſelves to one. I queſtion not but thoſe Authors, who have written of the Mahumetan Religion, have given a ſufficient account of that plurality of Wives, and of the Ceremonies of Matrimony amongſt the Turks. Polygamy prejudicial to propagation.

As to the manner, how the Grand Seignor demeans himſelf in the proſecution of his Amours, it is a Secret, which I ſhall not enquire into; I have not much endeavour'd to make any diſcoveries of it, and it is a hard matter to give any Account thereof, without ſome hazard of traveſting Hiſtory into Romance. They are Intrigues, which do not admit of any Confident, by whom they may be diſclos'd, and all that is commonly related thereof, is haply at a great diſtance from the true ſtate of things: not to preſs this, That we ought to have a reſpect for all Princes, and to forbear divulging what Informations we may poſſibly have receiv'd, of their ſecret Amours. The Secrecy of the Grand Seignor's Amours.

The Entrance into Conſtantinople of the Sultaneſs, Mother to the Grand Seignor, whom they honour with the Title of la Valide, on the Second of July, 1668.

THE PRINCIPAL HEADS.

The order of the March. The Wealth of the Grand Seignors Favourite. The Sultaneſſes Coaches. The prohibitions to look on her.

ON the Second of July, in the Year of our Lord, One Thouſand, ſix Hundred, Sixty and Eight, the Sultaneſs, Mother to the Grand Seignor Regent, at her return from Adrianople, made her Entrance into Conſtantinople, where I then was, of which Entrance take the enſuing Deſcription.

The Order of the March. About Six in the Morning, ſome numbers of Janizaries, not obſerving any order, took their way towards the Seraglio, ſometimes ten, or more, ſometimes twenty, in little detachments, which laſted for ſome time.

After them came two hundred men on Horſe-back, belonging to the Houſe of the Cologlou, that is to ſay, the Grand Seignor's Favourite, with ſhort Guns reſting on the Bowe of their Saddles, and all very meanly clad, as alſo the Officers of his Kitchin, who coming in the Rear of the others, were, in like manner, poorly habited, and ill mounted. After them appear'd in ſomewhat a better order, the menial Retinue of the Caimacan, his Officers, as well thoſe belonging to the Chamber, as thoſe of the Stables, were very handſomely mounted, and all in their yellow Garments.

The next appearance was that of the Spahis, who are the Sultaneſs-Mother's Life-Guard. Of thoſe there were four hundred, which made a handſome Shew, being all well mounted, and well clad. They had all their Coats of Mail, with their Veſts of red Taffeta, and had on the right ſide a Quiver of Crimſon Velvet, embroider'd with Flowers of Gold; and on the left, a Bowe in a Cover of red Velvet, embroider'd as the other. They had all of them Helmets on their Heads, and over them white Turbants, and from the Helmets there hung ſmall Chains of Mail, reſembling Locks of Hair, which they uſe when occaſion requires, to ward off a blow from the Neck and Face. Every one of them had alſo a Launce in his hand, and the Trappings of their Horſes were of one of theſe three Colours, yellow, violet, and red, of a rich Stuff, with an embroidery of Silver.

The Spahi-Bachi came in the Rear of them, having a Plume of Heron-tops in his Turbant, three foot in height, which made him remarkable, and diſtinguiſh'd him from all the other Spahis. On the breaſt-piece of his Horſe, were faſtn'd a dozen little Scarffs, which hung down negligently, and he was attended by ſix Pages, who had Caps on, after the Slavonian Mode, red Veſts tuck'd up about the waſte, and yellow Hoſe, or Drawers.

After the Spahis, there paſs'd ſeveral Janizaries, but not marching in any order, follow'd by two hundred men on Horſe-back, and in the Rear of them, came the Janizary-Aga, a Perſon of a very goodly preſence. He had for his immediate Attendants ſix gentle young Perſons, who had each of them, hanging over his ſhoulder, a kind of Quiver, full of ſmall Wands, which are a ſort of Arrows, without any Iron-work at the ends.

After

After the forementioned, there came up twelve men, who are as it were the Muſicks of the Ceremonies, in very ridiculous Accoutrements. They had Silver Wands reſting on their Shoulders, their Veſtments were garniſh'd with ſmall Bells, and they had Caps on, which had ſomewhat hanging down of each ſide, reſembling Aſſes Ears.

The next appearance after that extravagant Party, was that of a hundred Capigis, all well mounted, every one with a Launce in his hand, with a Flag faſten'd thereto, reaching from the top to the bottom, which made a very noble Shew. In the Rear of the Troop came the Capichi bachi, diſtinguiſh'd from the reſt by a high and large Plume of Heron-tops, which added much to the gracefulneſs of his looks, and Perſon.

After them, came a hundred Chiaoux's, well clad, and well mounted, having their great Caps on their Heads; and in the Rear of them came the Caimacan, having a Cap of the ſame faſhion, attended by twenty Pages, very neatly clad.

The next appearance was that of five or ſix hundred Boſtangis, with their Caps like Sugar-loaves, their Habits of a red linnen Cloath, and Muskets on their Shoulders. The Boſtangi-bachi came after them, ſumptuouſly clad, and mounted, with a Chiaoux-Cap upon his head, and a great number of People about him.

There appear'd next, two hundred Cadis, making a moſt noble Shew, all modeſtly clad, with their Busquins of black Spaniſh-Leather, and white Turbants, like great Balls of Wool, or Silk.

They were follow'd by the Scherifs, who affirm themſelves to be of the kindred of Mahomet, and made up a Troop of ſixty Perſons. As they were the Relations of the Prophet, they wore green Turbants of an extraordinary bigneſs.

After the Scherifs, came the two principal Officers of the Mouſti (for he never appears in Perſon in theſe ſorts of Ceremonies) and they were clad in white, having a very demure and religious Countenance.

The wealth of the Favourite.

The Cologlou, or Grand Seignor's Favourite, appear'd next mounted on a gallant Horſe, whoſe Harneſs and Trappings were of the richeſt. The Stirrups were of Gold, and the Houſſe was embelliſh'd with an embroydery of Gold and Pearls. His Veſt was of a red Brokado, and his Cap like thoſe of the Chiaouxes. Two men held the Reins of his Bridle, and his Horſe curvetted all along, as if he had been ſenſible of the goodly preſence of his Maſter, and how well it became him. He was a perſon of a good ſtature, and of a graceful Countenance, having withal a mild and ſprightly look, and every one ſaluted him, as he advanc'd ſtill towards the Seraglio. The Servants belonging to his Stables marched after him, and fifty Grooms led each of them a Horſe in his hand, and thoſe Horſes were all high-priz'd, and their Harneſſes as ſumptuous as could be made. 'Tis commonly reported, That this Favourite, who is a perſon of very great merit, hath acquir'd vaſt Riches, and that his Train, whether as to the number of Servants, or as to that of Horſes, ſurpaſſes that of many great Princes.

The Sultaneſſes Coaches.

There came up next a ſmall Troop of Negro-Eunuchs, marching confuſedly, before the Coaches of the Sultaneſs, Mother to the preſent Grand Seignor, all well mounted, and magnificently clad, in different colours.

There appear'd afterwards Six Capigis, about the firſt Coach, drawn by ſix Excellent Horſes. They had each of them a Launce in his hand; and, in the Rear of them, there appear'd a Horſe-tail-Banner, of a pale-red colour, whereby it was known, that ſome Baſſa's were coming up, as indeed there were, and they were a Convoy to the ſecond Coach, drawn by ſix white Horſes, in which was the Sultaneſs-Mother, and another Sultaneſs. Two Black Eunuchs march'd on each ſide of it, the Boots, or Doors being latic'd, that the Princeſſes might ſee, and not be ſeen. Which hindred not, however, but that, as the Coach of the Sultaneſs came forwards, ſome were ſtill crying out to the People, and commanding them to look the other way; which Command it concerns them exactly to obey, and that eſpecially in Perſia, where they muſt get away as far as they can, to avoid the hazard of receiving a good blow with a Sable.

After

After the aforesaid Coach, there pass'd by Twelve other Coaches with four Horses apiece, wherein were the Female-Slaves belonging to the Sultanesses, having two Negro-Eunuchs, at the Doors of each Coach, which were latic'd, as the former: After which there follow'd several Litters, and four great Waggons, full of Snow, for the use of the Sultanesses and their Retinue.

All this Cavalcade, consisting of between five and six thousand men, took up almost three hours in its passage, and having made its Procession through Constantinople, lodg'd it self in the Seraglio, according to the description I have given you of it.

Of the French Nation, there were several Persons of Quality, who had the Curiosity to see that Entrance; and among others, Monsieur Ribier, de Ville-neuve, a Councellor of the Parliament of Paris; Monsieur Le Mairat, a Counsellor of the Grand Council; The Abbot of Champhuon, de la Saulsay, all Parisians; and Monsieur Aubert, a Native of New-France, and, by Extraction, a Norman, Son to the Governour of Guardalupe.

CHAP. XIX.

Of the Gardens of the Seraglio.

THE PRINCIPAL HEADS.

The Revenues of the Gardens employed for the Grand Seignor's Table. Cucumbers, a fruit of much delicacy amongst the Levantines, and how they eat them. A noble Pyramid, resembling Trajan's Pillar. Fountains. The number of the Gardiners.

The Revenues of the Gardens, how employed.

IT is an ancient Custom, or rather, a Law, establish'd by the Ottoman Princes, that the profits made out of their Gardens, should be contributary to the keeping of their own Tables, and they have several of them, in the Neighbourhood of Constantinople, as well on the European side, as the Asian, all along the Sea-shore. But I shall give an Account only of the Gardens of the Seraglio, that so I may not exceed the limits I have prescrib'd to my self in this Relation.

There are in the Seraglio several Gardens, wherein there are only Flowers, in divers Appartments, and particularly in that of the Grand Seignor, and, no question but the same thing may be said of the Quarter of the Sultanesses. Yet is there not any thing extraordinary, which might oblige me to give this description thereof. The great Garden, whereof the Bostangi-bachi has the oversight, as he has also of all the others belonging to the Grand Seignor, takes up the greatest part of the Seraglio, and consists of a great number of Walks, planted of each side with Cypress. Those Walks are much neglected, so that in several places, they are not clear'd of Bryars and Thorns. When it is known, that the Grand Seignor is to come and take his divertisement there, a great number of Bostangis are immediately commanded out to make clean the Walks, which he uses to frequent, and the spaces between those Walks are so many Kitchin-Gardens, or Orchards, which are very well furnish'd with Fruit-Trees, of several excellent kinds. Of Strawberries and Raspices there is great store, and they have large beds of Melons, and Cucumbers; but most of these last, which are accounted a great delicacy amongst the Levantines.

Cucumbers a great delicacy amongst the Levantines.

As to the Cucumbers, they commonly eat them without taking off any thing of the rinde, after which they go and drink a glass of Water. In all Asia, it is the ordinary sustenance of the meaner sort of People, for the space of three or four months; the whole Family lives upon them, and when a Child asks for something to eat, whereas in our Europæan Countries, they would give him bread; in the Levant, they bring him only a Cucumber, which he eats raw, as it comes out of the Garriſon. Laborious perſons, and ſuch as are in a manner tyr'd with working, ſuch as Camel-drivers, and thoſe who are entruſted with the care of the Horſes, and Mules, in the Caravans, make a kind of Salled of their Cucumbers, not much unlike the Maſh, which we would give our Horſes. When they are come to the Lodging place, where the Caravan is to make a ſtay, they take a large Baſin, which they almoſt, fill with water, and having put ſome ſowr milk into it, they cut a great number of Cucumbers, into great ſlices, and, ſo make a kind of maſh of them. 'Tis a pleaſant ſight to ſee them at the confounding of it. Amongſt ten, or twelve, who all ſtand round the ſaid Baſin, there is but one wooden Spoon, which every one takes his turn, till they have made a ſhift to empty the Baſin. That done, they fall a drinking of water, and thoſe who have wherewithall, go and take a diſh of Coffee, or ſmoke a Pipe of Tobacco.

to

But to do them all the right they deſerve, the Cucumbers, in the Leavant are excellently good, and, though eaten raw, they never do a man any hurt. The Story of the Cucmbers which occaſion'd the cruel death of Seven Pages of the Grand Seignor's Chamber, is not, haply, known to all people; or at leaſt, all know not the reaſon, why the Pages of the Chamber are not now permitted to go into the Gardens.

Sultan Mahomet, the ſecond of that name, taking a turn in the Gardens of the Seraglio, attended by his Pages, was much ſurpriz'd to ſee a bed of Cucumbers, which look'd very fair to the eye, and were extreamly forward conſidering the Seaſon. Being a great lover of that fruit, he recommended them to the Boſtangibachi, who told them over every day, and, with ſome impatience, expected their maturity, that he might preſent them to the Grand Seignor. Some daies after, going to Viſit the bed, he found his number of Cucumbers ſhorter, than it ſhould have been, by three or four, and that they who had taken thoſe that were miſſing, had made choice of the ripeſt, and thereupon making a ſtrict enquiry, to find out who had been guilty of that preſumption, he found that the Pages of the Chamber were the only perſons who had been, that day, in the Gardens.

Upon that diſcovery, he went and gave an account of the whole matter to the Grand Seignor, who was ſo highly incens'd thereat, that, not prevailing with any one of the Pages to acknowledge the Theft, he, out of a cruelty as much above all credit, as beyond all example, caus'd the Bellies of ſeven of them to be ripp'd up. The Theft was found in the Belly of the ſeventh of thoſe unfortunate Young Men, who, after the execution done on the other ſix, would not acknowledge his guilt, out of hopes, that the Prince's indignation would not have extended ſo far. From that very time, and in commemoration of ſo ſtrange an action, the Pages of the Chamber are not permitted to go into the Gardens of the Seraglio; what one Prince has eſtabliſh'd, as I have hinted elſewhere, being never revok'd by his Succeſſors, who bear a certain reſpect to the enactions of their Anceſtors.

In the midſt of the Great Walk, which goes from the Seraglio, to the Sea-Gate which looks towards Scudaret, there is a Pyramid, erected upon a ſquare Pedeſtal, and which four men would have much ado to fathom. About the Pedeſtal they have ſuffer'd ſome bryars and thorns to grow, and it ſeems to have been done out of deſign, to hinder peoples coming cloſe to it. The Pyramid, from the top to the bottom, is full of Figures, whereof the heads are ſtruck off; and it may be conjectur'd by ſome remainders, that there was a very noble head on the top of it, as being the Maſter piece of the work. This Pyramid ſomewhat reſeſembles Trajan's Pillar at Rome; and ſome, who have ſeen both, imagine, they were the work of the ſame maſter. A Pyramid, much reſembling Trajan's Pilliar.

All the Fountains of the Gardens have their Baſins of Marble, of different colours. Near each of them, there is a little Scaffold, ſurrounded with Balliſters, which they ſpread with rich Carpets, and Brocado-Cuſhions, when the Sultan comes to take his walk there: and 'tis only at that time, the Waters play; which Diverſion he frequently gives the Princeſſes who bear him Company. Fountains.

There are appointed for the Culture of theſe Gardens two thouſand Boſtangis; and yet, though there be ſo vaſt a number to keep them, they come far ſhort of the Neat Contrivances and Imbelliſhments of ours. Two Gardiners.

Troubleſome Deſarts to be paſſed through in their way to the Sepulchre of* Hali. A Miraculous Channel of Water, of the continuance of Eighteen days Journey. The Burnt-Offering of a Weather.

General Laws for all the Mahumetan Sects.

I Have ſo often had occaſion, in the preſent Relation I have made of the Grand Seignor's Seraglio, to ſpeak of the Mahumetan Religion, that I am content before I put a period to this Work, to make it appear, how far it extends into the three parts of our great Continent: Mahumetiſme having not yet ſet footing into that which has been diſcover'd but two Ages ſince. I meddle not at all with the Doctrine of it, of which I am ſufficiently aſſur'd that many perſons have written: and I ſhall only entertain the Reader with a Geographical Chart of all the Countries of Europe, Aſia, and Africa, which are under the dominion of the followers of Mahomet.

Though the Opinions of their Doctors be different, as to what concerns the Explication of the Law, and that there are principally two great Sects, that of Mahomet, which is the Stock; and that of Hali, one of his principal Succeſſors: Yet thoſe two general Sects, and the particular ones, which are derivable thence, are all concordant in the fundamental Points, which every Mahumetan is oblig'd, in Conſcience, to obſerve and practiſe. Of thoſe I gave an account, when I made mention of the Prayers or Devotions, which the Turks are bound to perform five times a day, and the Pilgrimage of Mecha is one of thoſe principal Articles. I have alſo ſaid ſomething of them, in the Chapters treating of the Preſent, which the Grand Seignor ſends thither every Year; and in this laſt, I ſhall endeavour to expreſs my ſelf fully as to that matter.

In Europe, we have no Mahumetan Princes but the Emperour of the Turks, and the Cham of the Leſſer Tartary: But in Aſia there are many of them, who are powerful, and poſſeſs'd of great Dominions. The Grand Seignor extends his Juriſdiction, in this part, beyond the Sources of the River Tigris, and beyond the mouths, by which it falls into the Sea, and towards the North, as far as the Territories of the Mengrelians. To go thence from the Weſt to the Eaſt, next the Grand Seignor, we muſt count the Princes of the Three Arabia's, with ſeveral of whom I have often ſpoken, in Two of my Voyages, wherein I have been oblig'd to paſs through the Deſarts. The King of Perſia, the Great Mogul, the King of Viſapour, the King of Golconda, the Kings on the Coaſt of Malabar, of whom the moſt conſiderable is that of Comorin; the Great Cham of Tartary, and the Kings of the Mountains, to the North ſide of the ſame Tartary, who are got into China; All theſe Kings, I ſay, follow the Mahumetan, Religion.

Since

Since I have mentioned the Emperour of Java, I ſhall, by the way, inſert here an obſervation, which I made at the time of my being in that Iland, which was, That the eldeſt Son of that Emperour, who regin'd in the year 1648. had ſix fingers on each of his hands, and ſix toes one each foot, and all of equal length. A curious Remark of the Emeperour of Java's Son.

The Kings of Perſia, Viſapour and Golconda follow the Sect of Hali; and the Kings of the mountains of Tartary, with ſome others, have alſo their particular Sects. Beſides, it is to be obſerv'd, that if we except the Grand Seignor, the King of Perſia, the Arabian Princes, and the Cham of Great Tartary, all the other Kings, whom I have named, have only Idolaters to their Subjects, and all the meaner ſort of people is involv'd in the darkneſs of Paganiſm. But as to the Grand Seignor's, with all his Militia, they follow the Law of Mahomet. Kings following the Doctrine of Hali.

In Africa, there is a Mahumetan King, whoſe Territories lie all along the Coaſt of Abex, which is towards Arabia Felix, as far as the Cape of Guardafu, and his Juriſdiction extends over the Red Sea, and the Ocean. The Governours, whom the Grand Seignor employs in Egypt, aud in the Iſlands of the Red Sea, and thoſe others, whom he has eſtabliſh'd all along the Coaſt of Barbary, at Tripoli, Tunis, and Argiers, who aſſume the Title of Kings, are alſo Mahumetans; and, in fine, the King of Fez and Morocco follows the ſame Law.

All theſe Kings and Princes, are principally unanimous in this Point, That they acknowledg themſelves oblig'd to ſend every year ſome Preſent to Mecha, which ordinarily conſiſts in rich Carpets, to be put upon Mahomet's Sepulchre. Sometimes theſe Preſents are made upon a particular Vow; and it happen'd in one of my Voyages to Agra, that the Great Mogul, by way of thankfulneſs to the Prophet, for the recovery of his health, ſent to Mecha, an Alcoron, valued at four hundred thouſand Crowns, which had, in the midſt of the Cover, a Diamond, of three hundred Carats; the reſt of it being garniſh'd with ſeveral precious Stones on both ſides. The occaſion of this Preſent was, the fright which a certain Bramere, put him into, upon his telling him, That he ſhould die before the year was expir'd, which happen'd not accordingly. But the King being extremely incens'd at that direful Prediction, and, upon the ſmart Interrogatory he put to the Bramere, to wit, whether he knew alſo the time of his own death, having receiv'd this Anſwer, That it ſhould be within three days; which really happen'd upon the third day, there was a ſufficient ground for him to be frightned, and to conceive an apprehenſion, that the like accident might happen to himſelf, before the time limited. 'Twas that induc'd him to ſend a Preſent of ſo great value, to Mahomet's Sepulchre, to acknowledge the favour he had done him, in not ſuffering the Prediction of the Bramere to take effect, the King having not had as much as any indiſpoſition, during all that time. The Great Mogul's Royal ſent to Mecha.

When I gave an account of the Pilgrimage of Mecha, upon occaſion of the Tent and Carpet, which the Grand Seignor ſends thither every year, I made no mention of the ſeveral ways which the Caravans take, according to the ſeveral parts of the World, from whence great multitudes of Mahumetans do every year take their progreſs thither. The ſeveral ways whereby the Mahumetans come to the Sepulchre of their Prophet.

In the firſt place, the Ambaſſadors, whom the Kings of the Iſlands, whereof I have given you the names, and the Kings of the Indies, on this ſide the Ganges, ſend to the Sheck of Mecha, with their Preſents come by Sea, to Mocha, a Maritime City of Arabia Felix, and from thence they travel to Mecha by Land, by the conveniency of Camels.

The Perſians, who inhabit all along the Sea-ſide make their deſcent from Ormus, or to Bandar, and having paſs'd over the Gulf, which, at that place, is not above twelve or thirteen Leagues in breadth, are forc'd to croſs Arabia ere they can get to the Prophet's City. But the Inhabitants of the upper-parts of Perſia, towards the Caſpian Sea, and all the Tartars, come to Tauris, and from Tauris to Aleppo, from which place, the great Caravans, which take their progreſs through the Deſarts, ſet forth, and bring the Pilgrims to Mecha. Some take the way of Babylon, but very ſeldom, becauſe the Baſſa exacts a Tribute of them, and particularly of the Perſians whom they account Hereticks; and that conſideration has oblig'd the King of Perſia, to forbid his Subjects to take that Rode, thinking himſelf not inferiour to the Turk.

Troubleſome Deſarts in the way to Hali's Sepulchre.

Some of the Devouter ſort of Perſians, and ſuch as are moſt zealous for their own Sect, take the way of Babylon, upon this ſcore, that brings them at the ſame time to the Sepulchre of their Prophet Hali, which is but eight days Journey diſtant from it. This is the moſt wretched place, of all the places upon earth, and affords no water but the moſt corrupted water, which is drawn out of certain Pits, and that of a Canal, which Schach-Abas caus'd to be brought thither from the Euphrates, but which is now quite out of repair. Whoever expects to drink good water there, muſt bring it along with him, from other places, five or ſix days Journey diſtant from the other: And yet that falſe Prophet impoſes on thoſe, who have ſuch a Devotion for him, not only the inconveniences of coming ſo far off; but alſo thoſe of being in a fair way to periſh by thriſt, and hardſhip of lodging.

The laſt time it was my fortune to paſs through the Deſarts, I came to that deteſtable place upon this occaſion, that meeting with a Courrier, who was come from Babylon, with two Arabians, whom he had in his Company, he gave us intelligence, that the Grand Seignor's Forces, which had then newly taken Babylon, were upon their march back, in little Deteachments, and that there was no queſtion to be made, but they would ſeize on our Camels and Baggage. Which advertiſements oblig'd us to take our courſe more to the South, and to get further into the Deſert, where we ſpent ſixty and five days in croſſing of it, to avoid meeting with thoſe Forces.

As for the Princes of Arabia, they have no great Journey to make, becauſe they are the next neighbours to Mahomet's Sepulchre.

A Miraculous Canal of water of the length of 18 days journey.

The Mahumetans of Europe come to Aleppo, and there joyn the Caravan; and thoſe of Africa, paſs to Grand Cairo, and meet in the Deſarts, with the ſame Caravan of Aleppo at eighteen days Journey from Medina, where there is a water, which goes by a Canal, quite to that City, all the way of thoſe eighteen days Journey. They have it by Tradition, That that water was found by their Prophet Mahomet, as he croſs'd the Deſert with his Army, ready to dye for thirſt, and that going to drink of it firſt of any, there iſſued a Voice to him out of the Water, which ſaid to him, Prophet, thou wilt find it bitter: That he made the Voice this Anſwer, Let us all drink of it, for I know it is ſweet, and I would to God, that we could always find as good. That thereupon the Voice replying the ſecond time, Prophet, Command, and I will follow thee: And that as ſoon as he had ſpoken, the Water made a Canal under ground, and follow'd him quite to Medina.

From Damas, Hieruſalem, and Cairo, they account forty days Journey to Medina, and it is at the two and twentieth day's journey that they find that water. Tis partly to ſee that miraculous Water, which had been ſweetned by the Prophet, that there goes into thoſe places ſo great a concourſe of People, of ſo many different Nations, from all parts of the World: in as much as there is no Mahumetan, let him be at ever ſo great a diſtance, and but tolerably in a condition of health, and ſupply'd with the external accommodations of fortune, who does not think himſelf oblig'd to go once in his life to Mecha, in perſon, or to ſend ſome other in his ſtead.

After the Pilgrims have continu'd certain days at Medina, they go to Gebel-Araffa, that is to ſay, the place, where Adam found Eve, his Wife, five hundred years, after God had created her. It is a City in the Mountains, at the diſtance of Two Dayes Journey from Medina, and at one from Emena, another City, which is half way between both. Aſſoon as the Pilgrims are come thither, all thoſe who are ſo well furniſh'd, buy a Weather to make a Holocauſt of it, and to diſtribute it amongſt the poor, they being not allow'd to keep above two pounds of it, for themſelves. If they do not punctually obſerve that, and that ſome diſcovery ſhould be made thereof, they are made incapable, ever after, while they live, of ſhaving their Heads, or paring their Nails.

From Gebel-Araffa, they return to Medina, where they keep an account of the time, when the Caravan arrived there; in regard that all the Pilgrims, who came by Land, are, as I ſaid elſewhere, mantain'd with ſuſtenance for the ſpace of Seventeen days; but they who came by Sea are ſuſtain'd, as long as they continue there, even though they ſhould make it the place of their abode, as long as they live.

FINIS.

The Publiſher unto the Reader.

THE enſuing Narration was put into my hands Five or Six Years ago, by a very Intelligent Worthy Perſon, who long reſided in the ſame Family with our Author, and did aſſure me, that the Diſcourſe here publiſhed, was written with his own hand, and preſented unto that Honourable Perſon who redeemed him out of Captivity. The Gentleman who beſtowed theſe Papers upon me, will not be reſponſible for the Truth of all therein contained; but I having compared his Account of ſeveral Countries with that of Olearius and other more Ancient and Modern Writers, have found them very Conſonant unto each other, and therefore do charitably belive him no leſs Faithful in his Deſcription of thoſe Countries and People concerning whom little hath been ſaid by any beſides. By reaſon of his long abſence from his Native Country, and diſ-uſe of his Mother-Tongue, his ſtyle was ſo rough, odd, and unpleaſant, that I was forced to make therein great Alterations both as to Method and Expreſſion, yet keeping ſtrictly unto his ſenſe: I have alſo much abbreviated his Diſcourſe, many things being often repeated, and he having ſtuffed it with divers impertinencies, which would have been void of all Inſtruction and Delight. He would never own his true Name or Pedigree, for Reaſons mentioned in his Paper, which I thought altogether unneceſſary to be rehearſed; that of Aſtracan, wherewith he concludes his NARRATIVE, being fictitious, and I ſuppoſe aſſumed, becauſe of his long Reſidence in a City of that name, from which he made moſt of his Excurſions: And which with the Adjacent Country he hath above all others moſt particularly deſcribed, giving us the names of ſeveral Neighbouring Places and Rivers mentioned by no other Writer. I was highly pleaſed with the Account he gives us of Czarofs-gorod, which he alſo ſometimes calls Seraichan and Seraichena; the former of which is the Muſcovitiſh, the latter the Tartarian Appellation, and inrepreted, both ſignifie the Habitation of the Emperour or Cham, it being formerly the Metropolis of a great Empire. As alſo with his mention of a place on the Weſt ſide of the Volga, where he ſayes Aſtracan was formerly ſituated. Concerning both which Cities, I ſhall declare divers things I have Collected out of ſeveral European and Arabian Writers, which either are not commonly known, or little regarded. But I muſt neceſſarly premiſe ſomewhat concerning the Antient Inhabitants of the Country wherein theſe Cities are ſituated.

The firſt Nation (of whom I find any mention) who made any fix'd habitation in theſe Quarters were the Chazari, ſo named by the Latines and Greeks, but by the Mahumetans, Alchozar, and Gorjani. This Nation during the Reign of the Emperour Juſtine, like a Torrent Overflowed all that Vaſt Continent which lies between China and the Boriſthenes, Conquered part of India, all Bactria, Sogdiana, and made the Perſians Tributary, by whom they are always called Turks, and their Prince, Chacan, a Title formerly common unto all great Turkiſh Emperours. This Mighty Monarch having conquered the Igors or Jugurs, Avares, Chuni or Huns, Abtelites or White Huns, and all other Tribes of Turks and Tartars, together with the Alani (whoſe Dominion then extended, as appears by Marcellinus, from the Boriſthenes far beyond the moſt North-Eaſt part of the Caſpian Sea) entred into a League with Juſtine, and ſtyles himſelf in his Letters, Lord of the Seven Climates of the World. His Acts may be read at large in Theophilactus Simocatta; Excerptis de Legationibus: and divers others of the Bizantine Hiſtorians. This Nation Aſſiſted the Emperour Heraclius in his Wars againſt againſt the great Coſroes, whom by their Aſſiſtance he overcame. Theſe Cazari were alſo poſſeſſed of all that part of Turica Cherſoneſus which is plain and fit for feeding Cattle, they being addicted, after the manner of all other Scythian Nomades, unto a Paſtoral life; which Peninſula from them was untill the Famous Irruption of the Tartars in the Thirteenth Century, called Caſſaria, or Chazaria, and afterwards more corruptly by the Genoeſes, Venetians, and other Latines, Cazaria. I find mention of theſe Chazari or Chozars in divers Perſian and Arabian Hiſtorians and Geographers. Abulpharagius acquaints us with an Expedition they made into Perſia the 183 Year of the Hegira, which was after our Account in 799. From whence they returned with great Spoile, and above 100000 Captives: and afterwards, in the 514*th*. Year of the Mahumetan Epocha, being A. C. 1120. they made another Inroad, accompanied by the Comanians,) whom the Arabians call Kaphjacks;) Frequent mention is made of them by that Deſervedly Celebrated Arabian Geographer Al Edriſi, who flouriſhed in the 548*th*. year of the Hegira; of Chriſt, 1153. He always calls the Caſpian Sea, Mare Chozar: and all that Countrey on the North and to the Weſt of the Caſpian Sea, Terra Chozar. He acquaints us, that the Reſidence of the Prince of Chozar was not far above the Mouth of the Volga, which the Tartars call Athel; which name I ſuppoſe it derived from Attila, that Renowned King of the Hunns, being ſo called in the Relation of the Ambaſſadors who were ſent by the Emperour Juſtine, unto the Great Chacan of the Turks reſiding in the Eaſt. Al Edriſi and his Epitomizer, commonly known by the Name of Geographus Nubienſis intimate, That theſe Chozars inhabited divers other Cities, but that this was the Metropolis; he ſurpreſſes the Name, ſtyling it only from the River, the City of Athel; and declares it was divided by the River, the chief and greateſt part being on the Weſt-ſide; and that the other leſs conſiderable on the Eaſt-ſide, was inhabited only by the meaner ſort of People and Merchants, it being a place of great Trade, that which made it more conſiderable, was the liberty allowed unto all of the Publick Profeſſion, and Exerciſe of their reſpective Religious Perſwaſions, Jews, Chriſtians, Mahumetans, and Idolaters being there equally countenanced, which I ſuppoſe might occaſion that Dialogue publiſhed out of an Ancient Hebrew Manuſcript, by L' Empereur, between the Author a Jeweſh Rabbi, and the King of Chozar. This City is ſaid to have been extended along the River three miles in length, and its breadth proportionable; the Weſtern part well fortified; adorned with the Emperours Palace, and ſeveral other eminent Structures. Naſſir Eddin, who wrote at the latter end of the 13th. Century, calls this City in his Geographical Tables, Balanjar, and from him Abulfeda; they place it in 46 degrees 30 minutes of Northern Latitude; where within ſix or eight minutes our beſt Geographers ſeat Aſtracan. And queſtionleſs this was that City which our Author and Olearius call Old Aſtracan. Theſe Chazari, did I ſuppoſe, conſerve their vaſt Dominion without any great Interruption, at leaſt until A. C. 900. For Alferganus who lived about that Time, places no other Nation in his Table of Climes, between China and the Boriſthenes; And Eutichius, who worte about 30 or 40 years after, makes mention of them as a mighty Nation, and many amonſt them converted unto the Chriſtian Belief. About the middle of the 10th Century theſe Chazari gave place unto the Cumanians or Commanians, who were alſo a Turkiſh Nation known unto the Turks, Perſians, and Arabians, under the Name of Kaphjack; whether they expelled the Chazari, or that the former becoming the more Eminent Tribe, gave Law and Name unto theſe latter (as hath ſince frequently happened among the Tartars) I will not here undertake to determine: but this is certain, that ſuddenly the Name of Chazari was extinct, and all that Tract of Land from the Nepper unto Turkeſtan 1500 miles beyond the Volga, was inhabited by theſe Cumanians, who were often troubleſome unto the Ruſſes, Lithuanians, Hungarians, and other Neighbour-Nations. But this People was almoſt totally deſtroyed by the Tartars in that great Inundation which happened at the beginning of the 12th Century, ſoon after the death of Jingiz Chan; whoſe Son Hocota being choſen Emperour, ſent his Nephew Batu, or Bathy, the Son of Tuſſy Jingiz Chan, his Eldeſt Son with 400000 Men, to invade the Northern Parts of Aſia. The Cumani for divers years valianty reſiſted, and made the greateſt oppoſition the Tartars met with in all their Conqueſts; repuls'd them in two pitch'd Battels; but then growing ſecure, and diſperſing upon the Tartars retreat, they were unexpectedly ſurprized, the whole Countrey over-run, above 200000 killed, their King Kuthen hardly eſcaping with 40000 into Hungary, where he

he met with a kind reception, had land allotted him, and his Company; which Region is called Campus Cumanus unto this day. This Countrey was ſo miſerably waſted by the Tartars that in the Years 1253, and 1254, when Rubriquis paſſed through it, going unto and returning from his Ambaſſage to Mangu Chan, there was no fixed habitation, excepting a few Cottages in the Iſland where Aſtracan is now ſituated.

But Bathy having deſtroyed the Comanians, ruinated their Cities, and eſtabliſhed his own Dominion, began to think of a fix'd aboade, which after long obſervation he choſe near the River Volga, on the Eaſt-ſide, and immediately beneath the River Acũabon, a great Arm of the Volga, and the firſt it diſmiſſes, which empties it ſelf into the Caſpian-Sea (having run a courſe of near 400 miles, and received ſeveral other Branches from the foreſaid River) about 7 Leagues Eaſt off the main River. He had newly began this City at the return of Rubriquis from his Embaſſage unto Mangu Chan, in the year 1246, and called Serai; which City was enlarged and beautified by all his Succeſſors, unto the time of its deſtruction by Tamerlane, which was almoſt 150 years. Bathy was ſucceeded by Barcah, who was the firſt profeſſed Mahumetan Emperour; he by Hocola, or Hoctay, Contemporary with Hayton the Armenian, who hath in his Hiſtory largely diſcourſed concerning him: I ſhould here mention all the other Emperours interceeding between Hocota and Tucktamiſch (who was diſpoſſeſſed by Tamerlane) together with their Acts, but that I haſten unto that which moſt immediately concerns our preſent Deſign, and give ſome account of this City, which (as I ſaid) was firſt named Serai, which interpreted ſignifies only a Dwelling or Habitation; the beginning of it being a Palace built for Bathy. You may ſee what our Traveller ſays concering it, Page 112. Beſides him I find two Authors who make particular mention thereof; the firſt is in the Hiſtory of Arabſhiade, publiſhed by Golius. This Author repreſents it as one of the greateſt and moſt populous Cities in the Univerſe, agrees with our Traveller in the ſituation, only he calls that Branch which runs out of the Volga and paſſes to the South-Eaſt, Sencle. The other is Michovius, who wrote his Hiſtory of the Tartars in the year 1515. He affirms, That in his time there remained the ruines of 300 Temples beſides the Walls of the City, and ſeveral other Magnificent Structures. The Tarters have ſeveral times attempted to re-edifie it, but diviſions amongſt themſelves, Wars with the Muſcovites, and attempts of the Coſſacks cauſed them to retire unto places of greater ſecurity. But becauſe little mention is made of this great Revolution by any European Writer I ſhall here preſent the Reader with an account thereof out of the moſt Authentick Turkiſh, Arabian, and Perſian Writers. For Calcondilas is greatly miſtaken, who ſeems to have received by his confident way of writing, moſt particular information, when as nothing can be more remote from the truth than what he affirms, viz, That Tamerlane after ſeveral attempts, and two or three Battles was forced to retire, and glad to ſecure his Retreat by a Peace, he firſt made with Tucktamiſch, which was by both afterwards kept inviolable; which is contrary to the Reports of much more Authentick Hiſtorians. The Origin, Progreſs, and Event of this War, was after the enſuing manner.

Tamerlane being in effect Prince, but in name only Courachan (the Greeks call it Kurgan) that is, Viceroy or General over all thoſe Countries which are comprehended between the Oxus and Jaxartes, wherein Bochara, Samarchand, and ſeveral other famous Cities were contained, extended his Conqueſts towards Balch and Choraſan, (the Aria of the Antients;) which progreſs of his, filled Thuetamiſch Emperour of Serai (the City we have beforementioned) with jealouſies of his growing Greatneſs; whereupon gathering a numerous Army, he reſolved to invade him, uſing no formality, or ſo much as pretence, he thought to have ſurprized his Enemy; but Tamerlane, one of whoſe Maſter-pieces was to gain early Intelligenc of whatſoever was deſigned, or tranſacted by neighbouring Princes, having timely notice of his intention, gathering all his own Forces, together with conſiderable aſſiſtance from his Confederates, marched directly towards his Enemy, and paſſing the Jaxartes, met him to his no ſmall aſtoniſhment, on the Borders of his own Countrey; for the Jaxartes only divided their Territories. After a moſt obſtinate bloody fight, Tamerlane gained the Victory, yet neither abſolute, nor without great loſs, but it was ſufficient that he had had ſecured his own Dominion. After this ſucceſs he did for divers years attend other Conqueſts, and having ſubdued a great part of India, all Perſia, Media, Armenia, Aſſyria, Meſopotamia, Babylonia, and Syria, he reſolved to requite the Invaſion of Thuctamiſh: whereupon having drawn together an Army of 500000 men, he marched through Media Atropatia, then and ſtill called Shervan; paſſed the Portæ Caucaſiæ, which the Perſians name Derbent; thence through Dabeſtan, and the great Deſart between that and Aſtracan (then named Gitturchan) and having waſted all that ſpacious Countrey on the Weſt-ſide of the Volga, depoulated and diſmantled divers fair Cities (the ruines of ſeveral being yet viſible to thoſe who Navigate the Volga, as we are informed by Olearius) he paſſed the Volga, and on the Eaſt-ſide encountred Thuctamiſch, who had Collected a mighty Force, having beſides his own Hords, the aſſiſtance of the Tartars of Caſſan, Tumen, Kalmuke, and Dabeſtan: and his Army by this acceſſion was more numerous than that of his Enemy. The Battel was long doubtful, and exceeding all that happened in that Age for carnage and cruelty, both Parties being full of hatred unto their Adverſaries; and knowing that this Fight would loſe or gain them a mighty Empire. They fought three days with little intermiſſion, and it could not be diſcerned which had the advantage. But that which is thought chiefly to have occaſioned Tamerlane's Victory, was the departure of a great Tribe from Thuctamiſch, whoſe Prince Ectave pretended he had received ſome great injury or affront, but 'twas indeed thought he was corrupted: For retreating unto Amuarth the Turkiſh Emperour, he after the ſame mannner betrayed Bajazet, who ſoon after ſucceeded; revolting at the begining of the fight unto Tamerlane. Thuctamiſch being defeated, with great difficulty made his eſcape, leaving his Countrey expoſed unto the fury of the Zagataians, whom ſo great a ſlaughter of their own Friends had highly exaſperated. They ſpared nothing that was capable of being ſpoiled; demoliſhed Serai, together with Seraichick upon the Jaick, and Gitturchan, which were the only conſiderable Cities on the Eaſt-ſide of the Volga, and leaving the Countrey a meer Deſart, killing, or Captivating the Inhabitants, driving away the Cattle, they returnd into Perſia with great Booty. This happened in the 791 year of the Hegira. A. C. 1388. Serai, and Saraichick never regained thir former ſplendour; but (Gitturcan now Aſtracan) did by degrees recover, but never arrived to that heighth it attained unto during the Empire of the Chazari and Zavolgenſian Tartars.

For Joſaphat Barbaro, and Ambroſio Contarini, who were both Ambaſſadors from the Venetians unto Uſun Caſſan Emperour of Perſia, and well acquainted with thoſe Parts; Barbaro living ſixteen years at the City Tana on the mouth of the River Tanais; and Contarini being forced in his return from Perſia to reſide there ſome months: They, I ſay, both tell us, That this City before its deſtruction by Tamerlane, was a very famous Emporium; all the Silks, moſt of the Spices and other Commodities, which were afterwards brought down to Syria, were then carried by Shipping to Aſtracan (which they both name Citrachan) and thence by Land in a few days to Tana, whether the Venetians ſent every year ſixteen great Gallies. But after its ſubverſion by Tamerlane, this Commerce ceaſed and the Gallies receiving their Lading in Syria, and at Alexandria of Ægypt. In the time of the forementioned Writers, which was from the year 1436. when Barbaro firſt went to Tana, until his return out of Perſa in 1488. And Contarini, who returned not long before him, Citrachan was a mean Town, conſiſting chiefly of Tartarian Huts and incompaſſed with a pitiful mud-Wall, a place of no conſiderable Traffick, only the Muſcovites fetch'd thence Fiſh and Salt. But Juan Vaſſilowich having reduced it in the year 1554 under his Dominion, it hath been by ſucceeding Emperours both fortified and enlarged: I ſhall ſay no more concerning it, Olearius a moſt deligent and judicious Writer, having left us ſo particular a Deſcription thereof. I ſhall only add, That I ſuppoſe the cauſe of ſo diffrent names, as Gittarchan, Citrachan, and Aſtrachan, were occaſioned by the Princs, who ſucceſſively præſided, as is very obvious to any who are acquainted with the Cuſtomes of the Arabians, Perſians, Turks, and other Eaſtern People.

But to return unto our Zavolgentian Tartars, ſo called by the Neighbouring Slavonick Nations, becauſe the Seat of their Empire, and their chiefeſt places of Reſidence were on, or near the Volga (which River did alſo almoſt equally divide their Territory) Za being only an Expletive Particle, as I could manifeſt by Induction duction of ſeveral Ruſſian, Poliſh, and Lithuanian Names of Men and Countries. After the devaſtation of their Countrey they would notwithſtanding have ſoon recovered their former Grandeur, had not diviſions and inteſtine Wars long kept them low; and at length after divers wonderful and great Revolutions given the Ruſſes leaſure firſt to breath, and then invite them to deprive them of the beſt part of their Dominion. They not able to reſiſt, being broken, as I ſaid, by Diſcord and Diviſion into divers petty Principalities. And on the other ſide the Crim Tartar, aſſiſted by the Turk, ſubdued the remainder, whereby that Tribe which before was comparatively inconſiderable, became Supreme, and is at this day a terror unto all the North-Eaſt Countries of Chriſtendom. To ſhew in what manner, and by what degrees all this was tranſacted, is rather matter of a juſt Hiſtory, than of a Preface the decorum whereof I have already tranſgreſſed, in making a Porch almoſt as large as the main Building, to which it ſhould ſerve only for an Entrance.

I ſhall therefore conclude with ſome ſhort and ſlight Remarks on diver Paſſages in our Authors Relation. His account of the Periplus of the Exuine Sea, (leaving out what he allows for the Teine Sea, or Palus Mœtis) differs little in number of Miles from that of Arrian, though they diſagree ſomewhat in particular diſtances; and is wonderfully conſonant to that calculation of Eratoſthones, Hecatæus, Ptolmy, and Ammianus Marchellinus, who reckon it to amount unto 23000 Stadia, or 2875 Miles, which wants but 15 of our Travellers Computation.

He is alſo more particular, and I believe, more exact than any I have hitherto met with, in his Deſcription of Crim or Taurica Cherſoneſus, whoſe length and breadth he gives us in ſeveral places directly, or by conſequence. What he tells us concernining Arbotka and the great Field without it, ſourrounded by the Sea he calls The Ratten Sea, is ſcarcely mentioned by any Modern Geographer, but wonderfnlly conſonant to what is delivered by Strabo. Arbotka ſeems to be Taphre, the Ratten Sea, he calls σαπρὰν λίμνην, or Lacus Putris, and affirms to be part of the Palus Mæotis: in compaſs 4000 furlongs, with divers other particulars, confirming our Travellers Diſcourſe, as may be read at large in his ſeventh Book. And I find in a Diſcourſe publiſhed by Mr. Thevenot concerning the Tartars, written lately by a Religious Miſſionary who long reſided in thoſe parts, a Deſcription of this place very ſutable unto our Author. His words are theſe, ſpeaking of the moſt remarkable places in Crim. Arbotec eſt un Chaſteau avec une tour ſcituee ſur la col d'une Peninſule que eſt enfermee entre la Mer de Limen & Tineka Woda, cette gorge n'a plus d'un quart de lieue, elle eſt traverſee d'une Paliſade qui s'ende d'une Mer a l'autre: la Peninſule eſt appellee par nos Coſaques Cola, a cauſe q'elle a la forme d'une faulx, c'eſt on ce lieu ou le Chan tient ſon Paras qui eſt bien de ſeptante mille Chevaux. Et il eſt un deſtroit entre la terre ferme e Coſa 200 pas de large qui eſt gayable quand il eſt calme, le Coſſaques le paſſent quand ils vont derober le Chevaux de haras de Cham.

What our Author tells us of the Communication between the Tanais and Volga at Camuſshanka, is particularly deſcribed by Olearius, who wrote many years after him; who alſo agrees with us in his account of the Rivers of Circaſſia, and Comukes Countrey: only our Writer is more punctual in his Deſcription of their Sourſes and Courſe, and mentions two or three omitted by Olearius, or unknow to him. A frequent mention is made by Procopious, Agathias, and others of the Bizantine Hiſtorians, of that ſtrait paſſage between Georgia and Anadoule, or as they word it, between Colchis and Aſia Minor, or Armenia.

Our Author having given an account of the Courſe of the Volga, and of the moſt remarkable places lying upon, or near it; at laſt aſſures us, That it empties it ſelf into the Caſpian Sea only by 22 Mouths, whoſe names he there rehearſes: whereas other Writers aſcribe unto it 70 Entrances, though as Olearius judiciouſly obſerves, moſt of them are rather paſſages made by the Sea between Iſlands and broken Ground, than proper diſtinct Arms or Branches of the forementioned Rivers.

What is ſaid concerning the Coſſacks retiring unto, and neſting in an Iſland of the Caſpian Sea, is confirmed by a late French Writer, who long reſided in Perſia, He largely acquaints us with the great spoil these Outlaws made on the Coast of Mesanderon, that they took Asterabath one of the Emperours Royal Seats, and having continued several days in possession, retired with great Booty and little loss.

I could render some probable account of those Thieves our Writer calls Sigakes, of what Nation they are, when they began, and how they live; but shall for brevity-sake wave this and divers other Remarks; and that I may manifest how impartial my sentiments are in reference unto the Treatise I have here Published, I shall first acknowledge, That I never met with any Writer who calls that Vast Plain between the Rivers Boristhenes and Tanais the Desart of Ingel and Ungul, although I have seen divers Journals both Antient and Modern, of Persons who have frequently traversed that vast Region: and have read most Histories, and perused Geographical Books or Tables that relate unto the Tartars, or their Countrey. Secondly, I must declare my distrust of his computation concerning the compass of the Caspian Sea; which he makes less than in truth it is, as I could largely demonstrate; though he hath pretty well salved the mistake, by his allowance of a thousand Miles for Bays, broken Ground, and Promontories. Lastly, Our Author is greatly mistaken, when he affirms, There is no Nation of Tartars between those of Bochara and China; whereas indeed several very Potent Kingdoms intervene. And yet he hath luckily Andabatorum more, hit upon the Truth, where he assures us, there are no Cataians between the Usbeg Tartars and China. For indeed there is at present no Cataya besides China, which is so called by all Tartars, Persians, Arabians, and other Mahumetans, as also by the Muscovites and other Nations who travel thither by Land, either in the Quality of Ambassadors, or Merchants. Though formerly there was a mighty People, either Turks or Tartars (they bing both Originally the same, as to Extract, Language, Manners, Religion, and Government) who lay directly in the way between Persia and China, and were certainly the Chatæ of Ptolomy, but almost extirpated by Jingiz Chan, whom they vigorously resisted. And the remainder have ever since gone under the more general Names of Moguls and Tartars, as I shall hereafter more clearly and fully demonstrate in a Discourse which I have long ago written, and may speedily publish, concerning the Beginnings and Progress of the Turkish and Tartarian Nations and Empires.

A Short Description of all the Kingdoms which Encompass the Euxine and Caspian Seas.

Right Honourable and my most Worthy Lord,

BEing given to understand, That I have been represented unto your Lordship, by several who bear me no good will, as a Person possessed with that Vanity, which ordinarly prevails among Travellers, of affirming I was well acquainted with divers Countreys and Languages, whereunto I am utterly a stranger: And perceiving that none of my Discourses have more exposed me unto this Censure, than a petended monstrous rash Assertion (but indeed a real Truth) That I knew and had visited all the Countreys surrounding the Black and Caspian Seas: I thought my self necessarily obliged in order unto my Vindication, to draw up a short Account of all those Countreys, which do incompass the formentioned Seas, most of which Places I have personally surveyed, and fear not any Reprehension or Confutation, being resolved to declare nothing but what I saw, or received from such who were best able to give me full and faithful Information. And I am well assured, That the more strict and judicious Enquiry is made into this my Report, the more favour and credit I shall gain with your Lordship, and all other considering impartial persons.

I shall first begin with the Black Sea, as being that wherewith I was first acquainted, and neat unto this most Famous City of Constantinople, where your Lordship may easily learn, whether I am guilty of either falshood or mistake; and if I am found upon due Enquiry to declare any manifest Untruth, I deserve not only unparalleld Reproaches, but the most severe and exemplary Punishments which I should justly merit, when owing life and liberty unto your Lordships Bounty and Compassion, I should instead of a grateful Acknowledgment, present your Honour with a heap of impudent Falsities.

I will begin my Relation or Peregrination, from that side of the Black Sea on which Constantinople is situated, and round the said Sea, until I return to Scodra, which is in Asia opposite thereunto.

The first Province is Romelia; the second Wallakia; the third Ackremen; the fourth Crim; the fifth the great Desert of Ingul and Ungule, which is between Crim and Asshowa; the sixth is the Little Nagoy; the seventh Circassia; the eighth Abassa; the ninth is Mingrellia; then Georgia; and lastly Anatolia. All which Countreys are subjected unto the Turk; besides the great Desart, the Little Nagoy and Circassia.

I shall now mention the most noted Places which I know from Fennara, which is about the entrance into the Black Sea, unto the River of the Danaw, so to the Neistre, from thence unto the Nepper, so round about Crim, unto the Gulf that goeth from the Black Sea into the Teine Sea, and thence unto Asshowa.

As I said, neat the Entrance into the Black Sea is Fennara, then Innatada, Missewra, Warna, Balshick, Mangalley, Constancha, Karaharman, Keelley, Ackremen, Osshackowa, upon the mouth of the River of the Nepper.

Now I shall declare the Distances of these Places from each other; the number of miles being the space betwixt what forgoes and immediately ensues. From Finnara to Inatada 80 miles; to Missewra 90; to Warna 100; to Balshick 16; to Mangalley 40; to Constancha 40; to Carabarman 40; to Kelley 80; to Ackremen or Beallohorda 100; to Osshakowa, 80, in all 666 miles; and from Osshakowa, which is in the mouth of the Nepper, unto the River Don (or Tanais) is 500 miles; the Voyage by Sea and journeying by Land being much at one, viz. 1186 miles, unleſs you go by Land unto Precop, about Crim, and ſo unto Aſſhowa, where the Don falls into the Teine Sea (Palus Mæotis) and then it amounts unto at the leaſt 1500 miles. Were it not for the formentioned great Rivers of the Danaw (Danubius) and the Nepper (Boriſthenes) there would be almoſt continual Wars between the Turks and Tartars, and the Poles, Lithuanians and Muſcovites; for the Danaw is one of the greateſt Rivers in the World, ariſing in Dutchland, whence it paſſes through Hungary, Wallachy, and at the Town of Kelley falls into the Black Sea. It hath four Mouths or Entrances into the ſaid Sea, which the Turks call Bohaſſes, Boctegene Bohaſſe, Edreleiſſe Bohaſſe, Sullena Bohaſſe, and Kelley Bohaſſe. It abounds with Fiſh, as Sturgeon, Morone, and Sheveroke, beſides divers ſorts of ſmaller Fiſh. The Neiſtre is a River that comes from Lithuania, and runs into the Black Sea under Bealohorda. The Nepper comes from Lithuania and Ruſsland, runs by Smolensko and Kiovia to the Porrocks or Falls, thence to Aſlamgorode, and falls into the Black Sea at Oſſhakowa. It abounds with many ſorts of good Fiſh, and all along its Banks feed innumerable wild Beaſts of divers kinds. The Town of Aſlamgorod ſtands upon the Nepper; and in former times there dwelt in it two Brothers, Ingul and Ungul, who fell firſt at varience, which ended in cruel Wars, by reaſon whereof the adjacent Countrey became, though otherwiſe pleaſant and fruitful, a very Wilderneſs. And beſides, the Coſſacks increaſing on both ſides the Nepper and upon the Don, would never ſince ſuffer that Countrey to be quietly poſſeſſed by theſe, or any other Hords of Tartars; ſo that now it lieth waſte, being a vaſt Deſart 500 miles over, and 1000 miles long, from the ſhallow Waters near Precop, unto the Counttey of Muſcovy. About 1625. the Grand Seignior ſent an Army from Conſtantinople to rebuild Aſlamgorod, with Orders to inhabit the Countrey, and invite ſuch thereunto as would become ſubject unto the Turkiſh Government. But they who arrived, finding the Town of great Compaſs, built only a Caſtle on the Bank of the Nepper, and left 300 Men in Garriſon. At the ſame time Shaugary Prince of Crim, being beat out of his Countrey by his General Chan Timur Myrſa, retired unto the Coſſacks upon the Nepper, and having contracted a Friendſhip with them and the bordering Ruſſes, by their aſſiſtance he gathered an Army of 40000 Men, and marched towards Crim, leaving behind him a revolted Ottoman, with a Brigade of 3 or 4000 Men, who immediately after the departure of Sultan Shaugary, marched directly towards Aſlamgorod, and early in a Morning ſurprized the Caſtle, then in the poſſeſſion of the Turks, put every Man in Garriſon to the Sword, ſlighted the Walls and other Fortifications, retired with the Spoyl, and marched to joyn Sultan Shaugary, who in the interim arrived near Precop, where he was met by Chan Timur, and totally defeated, but by good fortune eſcaped, and by the way of Aſtracan got to Perſia.

From the Nepper we will paſs unto Crim, with which Countrey I am well acquainted, having againſt my will reſided there ſome years. Crim is a ſmall Land, ſo near as I can conjecture 200 miles long, and 50 miles broad, but is wonderfully populous, and exceedingly fruitful, abounding with Corn and Graſs; the only ſcarcity they have is Wood, which grows no where but upon the Sea-Coaſt, from Bakſſey Seray unto the Town of Crim, which in former times was the chief City: All the reſt of the Land is a Plain, where they have no Wood to burn, nor any ſort of Fewel, but Fiſſheke, Fuſſhane, Curay, and Stroa. The Land is incloſed with the Sea, excepting at two places, Precop, and Arbotka. By Precop there is a narrow paſſage, through which you may go to the Nepper, Lithuania, or Muſcovy, through the Deſarts of Ingul and Ungul, and there is a Water comes from the Teine Sea, called the ſhallow Water, and goeth along the Deſart, until it comes to Precop, upon the Weſt-ſide of Crim and by North, where it turns back on the North-ſide of Crim, and falls into Guellae Mare, commonly called the Ratten Sea. So that Crim is almoſt ſurrounded with Water; for the Black Sea is on the one ſide, and the Ratten Sea on the other, which latter produces nothing but Salt, for it is ſo ſalt, that no Fiſh can live therein; I have reaſon to know it, becauſe I lived in a Village which was called Seckely Otta Mamuttachy. The Towns round about Crim on the Sea-ſide are theſe, Precop, Cuſlowa, Crim, Caffa, Kerſe and Arbotka; and within the Land, Caraſu, Ackmeſh, Meſheite, and Bakeſſy Seray. The Town of Arbotka lieth on the North-Eaſt ſide of Crim, between the Black and Ratten Seas, which there come ſo near together, that there is no more Land between them, than that whereon whereon the Town of Arbotka ſtands; and without Arbotka is a great Fiel 50 miles long, incloſed with Water, where the Tartars in Winter do keep their Hergels or Horſes, which Field goeth to the ſhallow Waters, where I ran away from the Tartars. I ſhall here take my leave of Crim, and paſs unto the Little Nagoy, to Aſſhowa, on the River Don, which runs down from Bealla Oſſharra, through the Country of Ruſſia between Ruſſia, and Lithuania, until it comes to Peilesboy, not far from the Wolga; for from Peilsboy to the River Camuſſhanke, is not above 20 miles, all level, which is called Perewolog, where the Coſſacks do draw their Strukes or Boats upon Wheels, to the River of Camuſſhanke, by which they paſs into the Volga; whereupon this Place is called Perewolog. The Don runs down between the Little Nagoy and the Deſarts of Ingel and Ungule, ſo to Aſſhowa, right under the Town, and there falls into the Tein Sea. This River is full of Fiſh, eſpecially Sturgeons; well inhabited by Coſſacks, for there are ſeldom leſs than 10000 upon it, beſides thoſe that go on Freebooting. There are alſo 16 Gorodkees, or ſtrong Skonces, well manned, and with ſtore of great Guns; they being in continual fear of the Turks and Tartars, and ſometimes alſo of the Muſcovites. The Little Nagoy, lies between the Tein and Caſpian Seas; the former on the Weſt the latter on the Eaſt, Shercaſſan to South, and the Volga on the North; and there is never a Town in all this Countrey excepting Aſſhowa. It is inhabited by Tartars, who go altogether in Hords; their Prince in my Time was Caſſay Myrſa, whom the Tartars call alſo Sultan Vlugh, or the Great Prince. They ſowe no Corn but Proſs, which they ſowe upon the Sea-ſide up unto Aſſhowa; and after ſowing they depart with their Hords, and graze up and down the Deſarts to the Don, to Capbane, Shurpoha, Tedecul, Comma and Curray, to Maſſhargoredoke, and to Shercaſſen Land, under the Rivers Terigke, and Balke, and almoſt to Pettigor, and by the River of Cupba, and back again unto the Black Sea. Thus they ramble all the Summer, until their Harveſt be ripe, and their Proſs gathered, and put into Yams under ground; after which they ſettle from Aſſhowa, all along the Sea-ſide, amongſt the Reeds, and leave their Horſes to winter in the Deſarts. So I ſhall leave the Little Nagoy, and paſs unto Temeroſſa in Shercaſſen Land, which is 500 miles from Aſſhowa.

Now in all Circaſſia are but two Towns, Temeroſſa on the Black Sea, upon the Gulf that goeth from the Black Sea into the Tein Sea, right over againſt Arbotka. The other is Tumein, upon the Caſpian Sea, the diſtance between them being 1100 miles; and all the reſt of the inhabited Places are only Cubbacks made in the Woods, piled round with Timber. Their Houſes are very high, in the midſt whereof they make the Fire. Their Men are proper Men, very like the Iriſh both for perſon and garb; for they go in Trowſes, with ſhort Mantles, wear long Hair on both ſides of their Heads, with a ſhorn Crown between. Their Women are very beautiful, and loving to Strangers; for if a Stranger come unto their Houſes, their young Women and Maidens will look Lice in their Shirts, and all about them, the moſt private parts not excepted, and will allow them the liberty to examine and handle all parts of their Bodies beſides their Breaſts. The Circaſſians are excellent Horſemen, and very Couragious, but withal exceedingly ignorant and ſuperſtitious; for when they kill a Goat or Kid, they cut off the privy parts, and caſt it againſt a Wall, if it ſtick, they pray to it; if otherwiſe, they caſt it away, and ſpread the Skin upon Stakes, place it in their Corn-fields, and worſhip it. They have no Writing among them, yet pretend to be good Chriſtians. Do ſtrangely bewail the Dead, making great Cryes, ſcratch their Hands and Faces, until they draw much Blood, knock their Foreheads againſt the ground, until Knobs ariſe bigger than Plums. The Men are notorious Thieves, ſtealing from each other, and he that ſteals moſt is accounted the braveſt Fellow. Their Countrey is very fruitful, abounding with moſt ſorts of Grain; and they have ſtore of excellent Graſs. They have alſo much Fruit growing wild; many ſorts of Beaſts, as Harts, Hinds, Kine, Eiſſubraſs, Hogs and great Adders.

The conſiderable Rivers which I know are Cubba, which runs from Pettigor, between Shercaſſen Land and the little Nagoy, betwixt Termeroſſa and Aſſhowa, 20 miles from Temeroſſa it falls into the Tein Sea, and hath a Courſe of 500 miles. The next is the River of Balke, which comes out from Cabardy, and falls into the River of Terigke, 200 miles from its Source; which River of Terigke deſcends from the Mountains between between Shollohoſe Knaſſe and Mundarawa Knaſſe, runs through the Couutry almoſt due Eaſt, paſſes by Goracho Colloda, thence to the Shuſſa, and the Shunſa, ſo on to the Weiſtra; and 6 miles from Tumein, between Tumein and the Commocks Countrey, it falls into the Caſpian Sea, having a Courſe of 600 miles. There is another River called Tumenka, which is a branch of Terigke, runs through Tumeine Town, and 3 miles beyond it enters the Caſpian Sea. There is alſo another River which they call Keeſlar, which falls out of Terigke, and 60 miles from Tumeine is received by the Caſpian Sea.

Having formerly mentioned Pettigor, I ſhall give you ſome Account thereof. Pettigor being interpreted, is in Engliſh, 5 Hills. They are five very great and high Mountains, diſtant about 500 miles from the Black Sea, and 700 from the Caſpian beyond Cabardy. I came thus to know them:

In the Year 1618. I was ſent with Shiedka Myrſa, from Aſtracan to the Little Nagoy, to ſeize upon Orrake Myrſa, who being informed of our coming, fled up to Pettigor; yet he made not ſuch haſt but we overtook him, and having fought, overcame him, and took away his Hords, by which means I became acquainted with Pettigor. Nevertheleſs there are higher Hills than Pettigor, as Sneeſnagore in Cabardy, which is incredibly high, which is in Engliſh, the Hill of Snow; for upon that and Shadgore, which ſignifies a wonderful high Hill, and overtops the former, and ſo along for 100 miles, from Cabardy to Shollohoſe, prodigious quantities of Snow are lodged, which it's thought were never diſſolved ſince the Creation. I asked a Circaſſian, Whether ever any Man arrived at the top of Shadgore, which to me ſeemed much elevated above the reſt; who anſwered me, They had a Tradition among them, that formerly a Bohatteere, whoſe Name was Hroda, attempted to climb it, and after two or three days hard labour, arrived not unto the middle; but after a few days, being better accommodated, he returned, with a reſolution, if it were poſſible, to ſee the top, but was never afterwards heard of; and added, That it was to that day cuſtomary for the Neighbouring Circaſſians, at a certain ſeaſon of the Year, with divers Ceremonies and great Lamentations to bewail his loſs.

The next Country to Sheercaſſen Land is Abaſſa, which is ſituated between Circaſſia and Mingrellia, and the Inhabitants are a kind of Circaſſians. Mingrellia is under the Dominion of the Turks, and lies on the Black Sea. Of theſe two Countreys, I have no great knowledge, having only coaſted them three or four times in Boats, when I was among the Coſſacks, where alſo we landed divers times, taking ſtore of Kine and Sheep, but no Priſoners, becauſe they affirmed themſelves to be Chriſtians. They are a proper handſome People, but very poor, and notorious Thieves, for they ſteal not only Goods, but even Women and Children from each other, and ſell them unto the Turks and Tartars chiefly for Salt, which is there very ſcarce.

Next unto Mingrellia is Georgia, whoſe Inhabitants are little better than the former, only they have a kind of Scripture; for they Worſhip Idols or Images, yet have Cloiſters, and a ſort of Monks, with ſome Prieſts of the Greek Belief. I once landed in Georgia with an Army of 5000 Men, we marched up into the Countrey, until we came within a days journey of Deimur Capon, or the Iron Gate, which is a narrow paſſage between Georgia and Anatolia, with Rocks on each ſide, and a ſtrong Town built in the midſt: We ſtayed ten days ravaging the Countrey; they told us, this Town and Caſtle belonged to the King of Perſia, and there is no other paſſage out of Georgia into Perſia but through it.

The next Countrey unto Georgia is Anatolia, where our Traveller reſided ſeveral Years, having been ſold by the Precopenſian Tartars, unto a Turkiſh Spahi, or Timariot; of which Countrey, and the Manners of the Inhabitants, he gives a large Deſcription: But we being ſufficieintnly informed thereof by divers intelligent Europeans, who dwelt long in thoſe Parts, ſhall with our Traveller paſs on to thoſe Countreys which are leſs known. But firſt we will take his Account of the Periplus of the Euxine or Black Sea.

From

From Fennara, which is at the head of the Strait or Gulf that enters the Black Sea to Precop, is 700 miles; from thence to Caffa, a noted City and Port in Crim 300 miles; to Aſſhowa 500 miles; to Temeroſſa 500 miles; to Mingrelia 400 miles; to Trebezond 400 miles; and from thence unto Conſtantinople 1000 miles; in all 3800 miles. Thus much I know of the Black Sea, which I have three times coaſted by Sea, and traced above half by Land; ſo that now it is time to ſpeak concerning the Caſpian Sea, and ſhew all the Kingdoms and Countreys which lie upon it, beginning at Aſtracan, and proceeding thence Eaſtwards, until I return unto the ſame City from the South.

Aſtracan is placed on a riſing ground, not far from the mouth of the Volga, from which it is not diſtant above 50 miles; it is in an Iſland on the Great Nagoy ſide, made by the River Volga, and a branch thereof, having the Caſpian Sea on the South. The Town or City is ſecured by a ſtrong Caſtle, furniſhed with ſtore of great Ordnance, and in the midſt of the Caſtle is a Roskade, which commands both Caſtle, Town, and the Fields round about for above a mile. The Tartar's Town is adjoyning, placed near unto Cutuma, which is a River naturally derived from the Volga, or one of its many branches; ſo that the Town is incompaſſed with Waters, having the main body of the Volga on the Weſt, and Cutuma on the Eaſt. Now if you would know whence the Volga comes, I will acquaint you with what I have learned from the Muſcovites. Its utmoſt Source is ſaid to be at the foot of a great Tree, whence it runs unto Feriſlave 1000 miles; whence it proceeds to Neiſna 500 miles, and thence unto Caſſan 300 miles; from Caſſan to Samara 500; to Saratoſt 350 miles; to Saraichena 350, and thence unto Aſtracan 500 miles; from whence it is, as we ſaid before, unto the Caſpian Sea, 50 miles; in all 3550 miles.

The Volga is a wonderful great River, abounding with divers ſorts of great Fiſh, as Sturgeon Bellonke, Severnke, Shelren, Sterleke, Som, Saſſan, Suke, Soudake, Konnee, Sablee, Leſſee, Wobla, Tarane, and many others both great and ſmall, which I cannot readily call unto remembrance, notwithſtanding that I dwelt there ten years. The Volga enters the Caſpian Sea by 22 mouths, and upon each of them is an Oughſuke or Fiſh-wear, for to take Sturgeon, every one of which Oughſukes is called by the name of the Water, as Soellova, Dertullee, Bſſerigee and Ruſſowa upon the main Wolga. Cokelou, Bzerullee, Ewanſuke, Manſor, Argeeſſan, Keeſſan, Camuſſhuke, Naowara, Tuſſockly, Collobery, Malla Collobery, Yamanſuke, Etrichſha, Surka, Libeſha, Buſſan, Carabuſſan, Bealla Wolloſke. In all which Oughſukes or Wears, they take no Fiſh beſides Sturgeon. They are made of Shigenas, or long Poles made ſharp at one end, and beaten into the ground under Water, and a pleiting made of Rods, ſomwhat reſembling Oſier, after the manner of our Matts, which are faſtened to the Poles, and hinder the Fiſh from paſſing up the River. And Houſes are built neat the Wears for the Conveniency of the Fiſhers, 40, 50, more or leſs, according unto the greatneſs of the Water, or reſort of Fiſh, and twice every day, uſually in the morning and evening, they ſet about their Fiſhery. They imploy only long ſlender Poles with an Iron Hook or Cruke in the end baited, and do ordinarily take 400 every day in the ſmaller, and 600 in the larger Streams. The Sturgeon they take is all ſalted, excepting that wherewith they ſerve the Town of Aſtracan, where a whole fair Sturgeon may be bought for ten pence Engliſh; and when the great Caravan comes from Ruſſia, it takes off moſt of their Fiſh, which is conveyed into dives parts of Muſcovy, but chiefly unto the great City of Moſco. They return alſo with great quantities of Caviar and Salt, there being not far from the Volga, on the Little Nagoy ſide, great Salt-pits, which yield an immenſe quantity of Salt, prepared yearly by the heat of the Sun, without any further trouble, than taking it off the ſuperficies of the Water where it daily kerns.

The Volga a little above Seraichena, 500 miles from Aſtrachan, diſmiſſes a great Branch named Aćtabon, which paſſing through the Deſart of the Great Nagoy through Baſſane, enters the Caſpian Sea. The remainder of the Volga, after having parted with ſeveral ſmaller Branches, moſt of which joyn with the forementioned River, divides the Little and Great Nagoy, paſſes under the Town of Aſtrachan, whence it proceeds unto Ruſſowa, on the South weſt ſide of Croſna Boggar, and then falls into the Caſpian. And the diſtance between the Eaſt-ſide of the Volga near Aſtrachan, and the River Aćtabon, is about 20 miles, which is moſtly Water and Iſlands.

And that the Courſe of the Volga from its firſt Source, until it doth diſ-embouge it ſelf into the Caſpian Sea, can be no leſs than what we have aſſerted, is hence confirmed; That

That the Snow which falls abundantly in Ruſſia, and begins to be diſſolved about the latter end April, and do mighily increaſe the Waters of the Volga, come not unto Aſtrachan until Midſummer, when it ſo raiſes the Volga, that overflowing the Banks, it covers with his Waters all the Illands near Aſtrachan; ſo that from the Little Nagoy, un Actabon in the Great Nagoy, all the Coutries ſeems, excepting a Hillock or two, one continued Lake, or a great Gulf of the Sea. Wherefore they who go in the Spring from Arſtachan to fetch Wood, having cut it, make great Floats, which are liſted up when the River overflows, and guided each by a few Men, until they are brought unto Aſtrachan, or thoſe other places for which they are deſigned.

The moſt remarkable Towns and Habitations upon the Volga, between Seraichena and Aſtrachan, (which are 500 miles diſtant from each other) are Camena, Rokegowa, Oſſhenofka, Chornoyar, Boriſſe, Offatalka, Poollowoy, Collmakof Satone, Coſſoyar, Croſnoyar, Naſſonoyar, Satone, Tanatavy, Daneelofka, Perre Ouſſhake, Eillanſuke, Eiskyborro, Crukla, Buſſan, Balſheeke, Tollotongorod, Dolgoa, Goradocha, (which was old Aſtrachan) Sharine, Bogar, which is near Aſtrachan, beſides many other Places, with whoſe Names I have not charged my memory. We will now paſs over the Volga through Aſtrachan into the Great Nagoy.

The Great Nagoy may be properly enough divided into Illands and Continent; the former are made by the Volga, and ſeveral Rivers which fall out of it, variouſly mix'd with each other, and are all at length emptied into the Caſpian Sea. Thoſe Rivers or Brances have their ſeveral Names; thoſe which I remember are Cuttoma, Boulda, Malla, Guelluſa, Creewantya, Buſane, Actabon and Bereket. The Kingdom of the Great Nagoy is all plain and deſert; 1200 miles in length between Aſtrachan and Semara; 500 miles in breadth from the ſaid Aſtrachan unto the River of the Yeike or Jaick. There is no wood in all this Countrey, except what grows near the Rivers. It hath no Towns or fixed Habitations, though it had formerly divers, and ſome among them very conſiderable, as Czarofsgorod, or Czarofs Pollate, in Engliſh, the Emperour's Town, which formerly muſt needs have been as its name imports, an Imperial or Capital City. I have often viewed it with admiration, and connot compute it to have been leſs than 20 miles in Circuit; I have told fourſcore great eminent Buildings, which muſt have been either Moſchees, Pallaces, or Caravanſeries, and ſome of them 6 miles diſtant from the other. The Muſcovites are of divers Opinions concerning its Deſtruction: Some ſay it was ruined by the Coſſacks; but the Coſſacks, who are ready enough to brag of Atchievements, know nothing thereof, only that they have often diſpoſſeſſed the Ruſſes, when they endeavoured to rebuild part of it. For indeed the ſituation is very excellent, having the Volga on one ſide, and the Actabon on the other: The Countrey very beautiful, healthful and fertile; and yet notwithſtanding all theſe encouragements, it is not yet inhabited, not by the Ruſſes becauſe it ſtanding on the main Land, they would be continually expoſed unto the Inroads of the Tartars; nor by the Tartars, becauſe its nearneſs unto the Rivers, would render them obnoxious to the Ruſſes, every time the great Caravan paſſes that way, which is at leaſt twice each year. Yet the Muſcovites do frequently fetch Brick and Stones from this ruined City, wherewith they have built a great part of Aſtrachan, and the neighbouring Forts or Towns, where ſuch ſolid Materials are imployed. But beſides this Serai, (for ſo the Tartars call any fix'd Habitation) there were in ancient times five or ſix more down along the Rivers ſide, in each of which formerly dwelt a Chan; but Time and Wars have almoſt intirely ruined them. There is alſo another Serai upon the River Jaick named Seraichika, where is ſaid formerly to have been the Reſidence of a great Myrſa or Chan; but 'tis now quite ruinated.

The Tarters who inhabit the Great Nagoy, both Men and Women, are very proper, at leaſt of much taller Stature than many other Tartars, but have ill-favoured Countenances, broad Faces, flat little Noſes, ſmall Eyes ſunk in their Heads, all which are common to moſt of the Eaſtern Tartars. But the Tartars of Crim are more comely, which I ſuppoſe, may partely proceed from their Wives, who are many of them Captive Circaſſians, Ruſſes, Poles, Hungars, and of divers other Nations. The Nagoy Tartars are alſo Black or rather Tawny; which I Conjecture is not ſo much natural, as proceeding from the heat of the Sun, which is in theſe Parts ſome Months of the Year much more exceſſive than one would expect from the Climate. And beſides, their Children go ſtark naked during the great heats in Summer. It is alſo remarkable, That the Cold in Winter in the ſame Country is exceeding ſevere, and one would think to them who have ſuch mean accommodation, intollerable. Theſe Nagoy Tartars have great ſtore of Cattle, as Kine, Sheep, Horſes and Camels, and yet notwithſtanding they are verv ill clad, moſt of their Cloathing being Sheep-Skins, and thoſe but ſcurvily dreſſed. They have no ſort of Corn or Grain, mightily ſcorning the Europeans and Perſians, whoſe chief Diet they ſay, is the top of a pitiful weed. Poligamy is not only allowed, but altogether in faſhion among them, moſt having divers Wives, more or fewer according unto their Quality and Ability; who unleſs they are Captivated by War, are ſuch as they buy of their Parents or Kindred for Cattle. If one Brother dye, the other takes all his Wives, who are uſually five or ſix. But if all the Brothers die, either in War or by Diſeaſes, then they are devolved like other Goods or Chattels unto the Elder Brother's Son, they never ſuffering any married Woman, during life, to go out of the Kindred.

Here our Author hath inſerted a Diſcourſe concerning divers odd, and ſome barbarous Cuſtoms which have long prevailed among the Nagoy-Tartars, and wherewith they will not eaſily Diſpence. But they giving little light unto Hiſtory or Geography, I have not thought them worthy the trouble of tranſcribing; nor do I apprehend they would afford any conſiderable inſtruction or divertiſement unto the Reader.

Theſe Tartars of the Great Nagoy when they remove their habitation, tranſport their Houſes from place to place in Waggons with four Wheels, which are drawn uſually by Camels; they paſs up and down the Country in great Hords, their ordinary march is from the Volga unto Buskowſhake; thence to Voroſlane, Semara, Eirgeeſſe, Eiſhene, Ongogura, Reimpeska, and all along under the Calmukes Country, until they arrive at the Jaick or Teike: Sometimes they paſs by Caſſoone, Aurrow, Camoyes Samar, and ſo to Saraichika: this is ordinarily their Summer Progreſs. Againſt Winter they return unto thoſe parts of the Countrey which border upon the Caſpian Sea. As Baksake upon the Caſpian Sea; Beallanſia, Kitgach, Sheennamara, Coudake, Caradowan, Actabon; and higher upon the Volga, ſcattering themſelves upon the Sea-ſhore and Banks of the Rivers among the Reeds and Woods, or whereſoever they find the Climate moſt mild and beſt defence againſt the Cold, which in the Winter is in theſe Parts extremely Severe; ſo that 'tis hard to determine whether they ſuffer more from the Heat in Summer, or Cold in Winter. During which latter Seaſon they leave their Hergels or Horſes, and moſt of their greater Cattle to ſhift for themſelves in the Deſerts.

Having often had occaſion to mention the River Jaicke or Teike, I ſhall here give a ſhort Account of what I have obſerved and learnt concerning its Riſe and Courſe. It comes from the Calmukes Land, where it is thought to ſpring; though ſome of the Ruſſes affirm its Fountains are more Remote in Siberia, the Southern parts of which is alſo inhabited if not poſſeſſed by the Kalmukes, ſome of whoſe Ulaſſes or Hords are ſubject unto the Muſcovites; others in League with them: but they have ſometimes cruel Wars, and did formerly deſtroy Tumen with ſome other Towns and Caſtles of the Ruſſes, who they apprehended did incroach too faſt upon them. But to return unto the Courſe of the Teick, after it hath paſſed through the Calmukes Country, it divides the Great Nagoy from Caſſachy Horda, and after it hath paſſed in all a Thouſand miles, throws it ſelf into the Caſpian Sea a little below Seraichika. This is a very large River, and the Land on each ſide well cloathed with Wood, Graſs, divers ſorts of Herbs and wild Fruits, and the Water full of good Fiſh; which Conveniences do oft-times invite the Coſſacks to make their abode there, and from thence they make Incurſions on divers parts bordering on the Caſpian Sea. This River, among divers other Fish, doth so wonderfully abound with Sturgeon, that a man may stand upon the Bank-side with a Pole in hand arm'd at the end with an Iron Crook, make choice of what Sturgeon best pleaseth him, which he shall rarely fail of taking though never so inexpert in Fishing, if he have but strength or help to draw it on Land. Not far from the Mouth of the Jaick in the Caspian Sea near the Shore, are many Coves and Corners which they call Liapatcas and Calmakes, which are always full of Swans usually swimming on the Sea, which are so numerous, that it is impossible to make any reasonable Computation thereof. These Swans after Midsummer every Year cast their Feathers, a little before which time there parts from Astracan many Boats which are manned by Russes, and most of them are their Youth; after a passage of five hundred miles they arrive at those places which the Swans mostly haunt, and having filled their Boats with Swans Skins and Feathers, they return unto Astracan, where a great Trade is driven with the Persians who give ordinarily a Dollar apiece for these Skins.

The next Countrey unto the Great Nagoy towards the East is Cassachy Horda, which hath, as I said, on the West the Jaick, by which it is divided from the Great Nagoy. On the North the Kalmukes, North-East the Turgeach, or Turgench-Tartars, and to the South the Caspian Sea and Caragans, who inhabit on the North-East-side of the Caspian Sea. These Cassachy Tartars march up and down the Country much after the manner of the Nagoys. They have frequent Wars with the Kalmukes and Turgeachians; but seldome with either Nagoys or Caragans. Only after the manner of most other Tartars, they will clandestinely steal even from those Neighbours with whom they have the most uninterrupted and profound Peace.

Cassachy Horda is altogether Desart, excepting some Woods Northward, bordering upon the Kalmukes, where there are divers small Rivers which empty themselves into the Jaick; which River is also in most places bordered with Woods unto its Entrance into the Caspian Sea. And therefore the Inhabitants may well be named Cassachy Horda, or Wild People, as the Name imports: They sow no sort of Corn, their chief Food being Horse-flesh and Mares milk; which is also common to divers other Nations of the Tartars.

On the North of Cassachy Horda dwell the Kalmuke Tartars, if such a life as they lead may be called dwelling. The Country they inhabit deserves a better People, the Land abounding with all things necessary for a Comfortable subsistence. This Country hath store of Sables, Masterns, Black Foxes, Squerrils, and several other sorts of Furs, which they Exchange with the Russes for Aqua-vitæ, Mead, Tobacco, and other Commodities. This Country hath some Towns, as Sibyria, the Head of a Province of the same Name, and Tumen, both which the Russes have gained from them; Ossiba, Wadke, Selowa, Lucomoria, which latter place, they say, is situated upon a Cold Sea. But Ossiba is a midland Town, 500 miles from Cassan which is near the Volga. The Kalmukes are accounted good Souldiers, being kept in continual Exercise by the Muscovites on the one side, the Nagoyans and Cassachy-Horda on the other. Their unmarried Women do not only accompany the Men unto the Wars, but are said to be little inferiour unto the Men in Skill and Valour, shooting almost as strongly and dexterously as the men, from whom they cannot be distinguish'd by their Garb, being apparelled and riding much after the same manner; Both Men and Women in all their Expeditions seldome carry along with them fewer than five or six Horses apiece. I cannot precisely determine what their Religion is, but I do perceive by Converse with them, that they have a more favourable Opinion of the Christians than of the Mahumetans, or of some of their fellow Ethnicks; for if I mistake not, they are Heathens, I not being able to discern among them any Religious Worship, excepting some kind of Adoration which they pay unto the Sun and Moon. They have a very peculiar kind of Diet; for besides Horse-flesh, which is a great Dainty, they scruple not to eat Snakes, Adders, Foxes, and indeed even Carrion of divers sorts of Creatures, such Food as to Europeans would be intollerable, even in the greatest Famine. They wear a kind of Caps or Hats which are called by the Muscovites, Coudpackes, open before and behind, with broad Brims on each side. And thereupon they are called by the other Tartars, Calmukes.

Eastward

Eaſtward from theſe Calmuks, inclining unto the South towards China, live the Jurgeachians, ſo named from their chief Town, which ſome call Jurgeach, others Jurgench: Of which Country I cannot ſay ſo much as concerning the former, having never been therein but once; for in the Year 1620. there being great Wars in Jurgeach, between the Chan or King, and the Myrſa his Son; ſome of the Nagoy Tartars hearing thereof, invaded the Country, who whilſt they were united, durſt not peep out of their own Borders, the Jurgeachians being a numerous and warlike People. Theſe Nagoys were all Volunteers, who went without any Command from their own Prince, or Allowance from the Muſcovites, without whoſe conſent by mutual Agreement they are not permitted to War. The News of their Expedition being brought unto Aſtracan, the Voyvoad who had not long before made a League with the Jurgeachians, ſent out Allye (I ſuppoſe his true Name was Ali or Hali) Myrſa a Tartarian Prince, with a Thouſand of his own Subjects, and Five Hundred Ruſſes, all Horſe. We were 20 days marching before we came to the Borders of Jurgeach from Aſtracan; whence we proceeded 10 days journey, the Country through which we paſſed being miſerably ravaged by the aforeſaid Nagoys. At the end of which 30 days by a reaſonable Computation, 'twas judged we were diſtant from Aſtracan at leaſt 1000 miles; about which time we overtook them in the Valley of Ougogura, having got from the Jurgeachians an innumerable company of Cattle of divers ſorts, as Horſe, Kine, Camels and Sheep. We took all their Booty from them; and as a further puniſhment for their Riot, took away their own ſupernumerary Horſes, leaving them only a Horſe a Man for to convey them home. Then Ally Myrſa divided the Spoil, half he beſtowed upon thoſe who did accompany him, and ſent the remainder for a Preſent unto the Voyvod, returning nothing unto the Jurgeachians, becauſe they were taken from Thieves. In the mean while the Prince of Jurgeach in a pitcht Battel overthrew his Father, took him Priſoner, put out both his Eyes, and cauſed himſelf to be Crowned King. He had a younger Brother, whom fearing that in time he might occaſion ſome Inſurrection, he gave Command unto ſome of his Creatures, that they ſhould ſtrangle him, and bring his Head: But divers of the Nobles, by whoſe means he obtained the Soveraignty, gaining intelligence thereof, would not permit his Order to be put in execution; but ſeizing on the Child, ſent him unto the Emperour of Muſcovy, with whom he remained when I was laſt at Aſtracan.

But I muſt return from the Jurgeachians unto the Caragans, whom I have left behind, and they do more immediately refer unto my promiſe, which was to give an Account of all the Nations and Countries incompaſſing the Caſpian Sea.

The Country of the Caragans occupies moſt of that vaſt ſpace, which interceeds between the River Teike and the Dominions of the Ousbegs, or Tartars of Bouchara, and their Territory ſurrounds the North-Eaſt corner of the Caſpian Sea, proceeding Southwards unto the River Jaxartes; and ſome Hords of the ſaid People do inhabit between the ſaid River and the Oxus, which divides the Tartars of Boehara and the Caragans, from the Perſians and the Tartars of Balk. This Country of the Caragans is very deſart and barren; the People miſerably Poor; their Houſes are wretched Huts, the greateſt part under ground; they are very tawny and ill-favour'd; their Habitations are ſcatter'd, ſcarcely deſerving the Name of Villages: And they have no Town, as I have been informed, beſides Preesſlames, which is ſituated on the South-ſide of the Jaxartes, near the Caſpian Sea; which whilſt I dwelt in Aſtracan, was by ſurprize taken by the Coſſacks, but they had little cauſe to brag of their Victory, finding little booty therein; and the Caragans gath'ring together, beat them out with great loſs of Men, forcing them to retire into an Iſland two or three Leagues from the Land, which they poſſeſs unto this day, no Nation being able, or elſe not caring to un-neſt them, although Tartars, Perſians, and Muſcovites, do continually ſuffer by their Depredations.

Towards the Eaſt and by South of the Caragans, dwell the Tartars of Bochara, who are by divers called Tusbegs. The Country which they poſſeſs is better watred, and more fertile than moſt of the preceeding, and there is great reſort of Merchants from divers Parts unto them, eſpecially Perſians, Muſcovites, and ſeveral Nations of Indians, as Moguls, Boutans, with many others, whoſe Names I cannot recollect. I have been alſo told, That the Chineſes do ſometimes trade with them. I am perſwaded, that this is the famed Kingdom of Cataye; for the Carayans are a ſort of Tartars, and I know no other Tartars between this Country and China. Caragan lieth from them to the North-Weſt; Urgenſhe due North; China to the Eaſt; the Tartars of Balk to the South; and the Perſians South and by Weſt; and the Caſpian Sea duly Weſt. They are almoſt continually in Wars with the Perſians.

The next Country I am to deſcribe is Perſia, in which Land I was never, excepting once, in that part thereof which borders upon the Comukes; but I have converſed with ſeveral Perſian Merchants at Aſtracan, who came by Shipping from Gilan, which when the Wind is very fair and good, they ſail in two or three days and Nights. They wear Turbants like the Turks, and ſo do the Bouchars. Therefore not having ſeen much of Perſia, nor having ſufficiently informed my ſelf concerning it, I ſhall paſs through it unto the Comukes Land, of which I have obtained more perfect knowledge both by War and Traffick. This Country is bounded on the South by Perſia, on the Eaſt by the Caſpian Sea; Weſtward by Circaſſia; and on the North by the River of Tumeine; on which ſtands a Town of the ſame Name, from which unto Chahamate, the moſt Northerly Habitation of Perſia, is 600 miles A great part of this Country, eſpecially Weſtward, is very mountainous; I could never learn where it doth exactly Terminate. I have been in four of their Towns: The firſt is Tarkee, where Gildar, whom they own for their Prince, doth ordinarily reſide. The ſecond is Derbeine, in the Mountains. The third Derevena, in the ſame mountainous Tract. The fourth Koſſa, upon a River of the ſame Name, not far from the place where it empties it ſelf into the Caſpian Sea. Theſe Comukes are proper Men and very couragious; and that which makes them more daring and adventurous than moſt Tartars, is the goodneſs of their Horſes, and the advantage of their Arms, both offenſive and defenſive; for they ſeldome engage in Wars without Helmets, Jacks of Steel, Shirts of Mail, and Targets, which excepting thoſe times wherein they fight, hang behind their backs, being very light, and not very large, and therefore not cumberſome. They have, as other Tartars, both Bows and Cymetars, and withal never go without Lances, which they uſe with great ſtrength and dexterity. In their Apparel they differ little from the Circaſſians; but as for Religion, they are generally Mahumetans, and their Language is in ſubſtance the ſame with other Tartars, their vicinity unto the Perſians, Muſcovites and Sheercaſſes, having ſomewhat diſguiſed it. The Countrey they inhabit abounds with Wood; part of it is hilly, with ſmall pleaſant Valleys between the Hillocks; and in ſome places, eſpecially towards Perſia, and thence into the Land, it hath many great and almoſt inacceſſible Mountains, by reaſon of their heighth and ſteepneſs. This Land was reduced under the Government of the Ruſſes many years ago, after the enſuing manner: Evan Vaſſilywich being Czar or Emperour of Ruſſia, after he had taken Caſſan and Aſtracan, ſent part of his Army into Circaſſia, where they took in Tumeine. Another Body entred the Comukes Country, and poſſeſſed themſelves of Derevena, Derbeine, Tarkee and Koſſa. The Ruſſe Emperour conſtituted a Voyvod, whom he ordered to reſide in Tarkee, and left with him 10000 Men; he ordered alſo at the ſame time another conſiderable Brigade to ſtay at Coiſa, where he left a great number of Boats and other Veſſels, who had brought ſupplies of Men and Proviſions from Moſco, and other Parts of his Dominions. And having, as he apprehended, ſecured his new Conqueſts, he returned unto Moſco: Immediately after his retreat, the Comukes gather'd their whole Force, and ſet down before the Town of Tarkee, which after a vigorous reſiſtance they took, and in it with the Voyvod, ſeveral Officers of divers Nations, whom with the common Souldiers they ſold unto the Circaſſians, Tartars, and other neighb'ring Nations, ſo that few were ever afterwards recover'd. From Tarkee they marched unto Koiſa, which by the inſtruction of Captives they did pretty regularly beſiege and aſſault, and after ſome repulſes took it by ſtorm, killing all the Ruſſes, excepting ſuch as eſcaped in the Ships and Boats which lay before the Town. The Ruſſe Emperour being ſpeedily informed of theſe Succeſſes, immediately raiſed a great Army, with which he ordered all the Coſſacks between the Don and Volga, unto the River of Tumeine, to joyn his Forces, and aſſiſt them, in order unto the recovery of what he had loſt, and utter extirpation of the Comukes: Who hearing how highly the Czar was exaſperated, and how great a Force was ready to invade them, they began to be ſolicitous about the Event; and having conſulted together agreed to make ſome kind of ſubmiſſion, and ſue for pardon and peace. Whereupon they ſent Ambaſſadors unto Temeine, where the Ruſſe Army was encamped; and after a Treaty with the Czar's Plenipotentaries, they agreed upon theſe Articles, That the Comukes ſhould reſtore the Towns they had taken, and aid the Emperour with ſuch a number of Souldiers, as he ſhould require, againſt any Enemy whatſoever, whereunto their Heads being Sworn, they have inviolably obſerved the Agreement unto this day. But it's time we take our leave of Gildar, Prince of Terki, and his Comukes, and proceed into Shercaſſen Land, part of which as I hinted before, lyes upon the Black Sea, and extends it ſelf unto the Caſpian.

This ſide of Circaſſia which borders upon the Caſpian Sea, is a very plentiful Countrey; and as for Fiſh, it is ſo wonderfully plentiful, that in Tumeine you may ordinarily purchaſe a good Sturgeon for two pence, and ſometimes for a penny; a moſt prodigious quantity of Fiſh being taken in the River of the Weeſtra, and about the Iſland of Chekiene, which is off at Sea not far from Tumeine. On the main Land, over againſt this Fiſhery, 4 miles above the River of Terike, there is a great Well, made by a Spring, which falls from a Rock, on the ſide of a great Hill, and immediately fills this Little Lake, which whether it is Natural or Artificial, I know not. The Water of this Lake is ſo ſcalding hot, that the Fiſhers flinging in their Sturgeon or other Fiſh, it is in a ſhort time boyled, as if over a fire, the heat being ſo intenſe, that no Man can detain his hand in it for a moment; from which ſtrange Quality it derives its Name, being called by the Ruſſes, Goracha Colloda, or the Scalding Well.

I ſhall conclude my Diſcourſe with a ſhort Account of the Little Nagoy, or of that part thereof which confines upon the Caſpian; for all that ſpace between Tumeine and Aſtracan, is by many aſcribed unto the Nagoy Tartars. I did before declare, That the Little Nagoy is for the moſt part a wide waſte Deſart, the worſt of which is all that Tract which lyeth between Tumeine and Aſtracan. Theſe Tartars have no Town but only Aſſhowa, which is not properly theirs, though lying in their Countrey, being poſſeſſed by the Turks.

There is a ſort of people in this Countrey, whom the Tartars call Sigakes; I could never learn what their language is, or from what Place or Nation they proceed; nor could I underſtand after what manner they live, whether they have any Religion, or Civil Government. Their chief Subſiſtance is what they gain from the Tartars; for they gather ſomtimes 2 or 3000, and rob the ſmaller Hords of the Tartars, and thoſe which are moſt remote from help. But ſometimes the Tartars diſcovering the place of their Retreat or Rendevous, ſurround them with their Carts, and then fall in, cut them all off, never giving Quarter unto any; no Crime being ſo ſeverly puniſhed amongſt the Tartars, as Thievery; which makes me apprehend, that theſe Sigakes are ſome of their own people, who formerly deſerted them upon ſome extraordinary occaſion: But whatſoever is the reaſon, they do moſt irreconcileably hate each the other.

The moſt noted Places on that ſide the Little Nagoy, which regards the Caſpian Sea, and lye all along the Coaſt from Tumeine to Aſtracan, are Sheerlona Yeare (where I was firſt taken Priſoner by the Tartars) Peremetka, Arſi Baſh, Moyackee, Bealla Oſhera Baſhmackake, Kaboylly Machakofska, Choſtoway, and ſo over the Volga unto Aſtrachan.

And to conclude all, I ſhall here enumerate all the Places on the Coaſt near Aſtracan, which have Names that are conſiderable for Havens, Trade, Fiſhing, or any other remarkable Circumſtance. Soteeza Bockgra, Vcuſlowa Coſſa, Beerulska Coſſa, Ewanſhoska Coſſa, Seamme Bogaroffe, Tuſſocleoff Lapateene, Chaska Coſſa, Croſna Bogore, Cocklouska Coſſa, Owarska Coſſa, Comaſhaska Coſſa, Colloberinska Coſſa, Cocktabow, Buſſanska Lapaten, Kara Buſſan; which laſt place is not far from Sheene Mare, which I have formerly mentioned.

I cannot ſo exactly tell the Circumference of the Caſpian, as of the Black Sea, having been only on the North and Weſt ſide; but howſoever I ſhall from what I have ſeen and learnt from experienced perſons, be enabled to approach very near unto the Truth.

The Diſtance between Aſtracan and the Jaick, is 500 miles; from thence unto the Confines of Bochara 500 miles: From Jaxartees to Perſia, and thence unto Gilian is, according unto my Information, 1100 miles. From Gilan unto Koiſa 500 miles: From thence thence unto Aſtracan as much; in all, 3100 miles. But if any perſon ſhould endeavour by Land to Travel round this Sea, or in a Voyage by Sea follow the Coaſt, he would make at leaſt a Thouſand miles more: for this Sea is full of great Gulphs, Bays, and broken ground; ſo that the Calculation I make, is upon a direct paſſage by Sea, ſuppoſe from Aſtracan to Gilan, from thence to the Oxus, from the Oxus to the great North-East Bay, into which the River Jem falls, which is full of Iſlands and broken Grounds, Shelves, Sand and Shallow Water; and from thence back to Aſtracan.

Having preſented your Lordſhip with a ſhort but true Account of thoſe Countries encompaſſing and lying between the two forementioned Mediterranean Seas, I ſhall no leſs briefly and faithfully declare by what Accidents I came unto this Knowledge: which coſt me ſo dear, that I ſuppoſe the moſt inquiſitive perſon would not purchaſe the gratification of his Curioſity at a far leſs Expence of time and trouble, than I have imployed (though often againſt my will) in my Travels and Enquires.

I was born in Ireland, yet of Engliſh Extract: my Family Noble, but my Eſtate not correſponding with my Quality, being ambitious, and withal naturally inclined to ſee Forraign Countries, I hoped to Raiſe my Fortune by my Sword. After I left Ireland, before I had been long in England, an opportunity preſenting it ſelf, I engaged in the Service of the King of Sweden, who had then Wars with the Muſcovites; having given ſome Conſiderable proofs of my Courage, I was gradually raiſed unto a Conſiderable Command; but being engaged too far in a Body of the Enemies, I was unhappily taken Priſoner by the Ruſſes, and carried Priſoner unto Pleſcow, then in their poſſeſſion, having at the ſame time Arrears due unto me from the Swede above 5000 Dollars. The Swedes taking no care for my Enlargement, being willing, I ſuppoſe, to ſave ſo great a Sum of Money, as at my Return I ſhould have challenged: after Three years cloſe Impriſonment, I was proiered Liberty by the Muſcovite, upon condition I would faithfully ſerve him againſt all his Enemies; whereunto aſſenting, I was ſent unto Moſcow, and there before the Chancellor ſworn a Tolmack, and preferred unto a Command little inferiour unto what I enjoyed before. And the Poles advancing towards Moſcow with a great Army, fearing leſt I ſhould go over unto them, I was ſent unto Aſtracan where I remained 10 years, being continually Employed againſt the Tartars and Circaſſians. By which means I came to know Pettigor, Sneeſnagor, Shadgore, Cabardye, and the Great and Little Nagoy, the Comukes, the Tartars of Caſſen, the Kalmukes, Caſſachy, Horda, Caragans, Ungenſh, and Usbeg Tartars. During which Wars, I conflicted with great difficulties and hardſhip; in making long Journies, faring hardly: Nor was it a ſmall labour to make floates in order unto our paſſing over the great Rivers I have mentioned, to ſay nothing of the Danger. Beſides, we run great hazards in our Journeying over thoſe waſte wide howling Deſarts, which on every ſide ſurrounded us; frequently wanting proviſions, and ſomtimes Guides; ſo that had we failed never ſo little in our Conjectures, we had all periſhed. After Ten years hard Service, in my Return from Conveying Shollohofe Knez into Shercaſſen Land, I was taken Priſoner by the Tartars of the Little Nagoy, and by them carried unto Aſſowa upon the Mouth of the Tana or Don. There I was ſould unto a Precopenſan Tartar, who carried me along with him towards Crim: But upon the ſhallow Waters I very happily made my Eſcape. I had little Knowledge of the Country, but having formerly underſtood by our Coſſacks at Aſtracan, that great Bodies of the ſame name, mortal Enemies unto the Tartars, dwelt upon the Nepper not far beyond Crim; by the help of the Sun and Stars, I journeyed due Weſt many days without any diſaſtrous Adventure, until I found them; who gave me a very kind reception: In this eſcape I traverſed almoſt the whole Deſart of Ingile and Ungule. Doroſenſko who then Commanded all the Coſſacks upon the the Nepper, immediately made me a Poskofneke, from which time for the ſpace of almoſt two years, I did accompany them in divers expeditions, in which we viſited moſt of thoſe Countries which lye upon the Black Sea, to the no ſmall vexation and loſs of the Inhabitants. We kept a Correſpondence with the Coſſacks upon the Don, and frequently aſſiſted each other. And being all Foot, and the Country exactly level, we travelled ſurrounded with Wagons (which they call a Tabor) for fear of the Tartars who often ſet upon us, but were as often repulſed, we being well accommodated with Fire-Arms and ſmall Field-piecs, which the Tartars do exceedingly fear and will not ordinarily attempt cloſely, unleſs they have greatly the Odds in Number. But at length it was my ill Fortune between the Nepper and the Don to be again taken by the Tartars, and by them carried into Crim, where I lived long in great miſery, and was at length ſould unto a Timariot Spahi living in Anadoule, (Anatolia or Aſia minor) with whom I lived 5 years, but in more eaſie ſervitude than among the Tartars. And to make my ſervice leſs irkſome, my Maſter beſtowed on me a Wallachian Woman, whom I received for my Wife, though without the uſuall Solemnities of Marriage, which are practiſed among Chriſtians: Underſtanding at length that a Lord Ambaſſador was reſident at Conſtantinople in behalf of the King of Great Brittian, and to manage the Affairs of the Engliſh Nation in Turkey, I prevailed with my Maſter, whoſe Favour I had gained to grant me my freedom, together with my Wives, if I ſhould procure an hundred Dollars. Whereupon he diſmiſſed me in the company of a Turk his Friend, who upon my humble ſupplicacion unto your Lordſhip receiving the formetioned Sum, did in the behalf of his Friend before the Cady make me free, and leave the Woman alſo at my Diſpoſal. At the ſame time I very happily met with ſome Vallachian Gentlemen, who were ſent on a Meſſage from their Vayvod unto the Grand Seignor, They gladly received my Woman, and took her along with them, promiſing upon their Return into their own Country, to Reſtore her unto her Parents.

Now that I may fully ſatiſfie your Lordſhip, that I had really viſited all thoſe Countries which I have mentioned, I beſeech your Lordſhip let your Interpreter try me in thoſe Languages wherein he is skilled; and as for others wherewith he is not acquainted, I am ready to converſe with any of thoſe Nations whom I pretend to know. For although I have never converſed much with Books, yet my great Travel accompanied with a pretty good Memory, will ſufficiently Qualifie me to paſs through the Countries I ſhall hereafter mention.

To begin my Progreſs from Conſtantinople, I can paſs over from Scutery, and thence by the help of my Tukiſh Language paſs through all Anatolia; Thence leaving Armenia on my right hand, and having the Black Sea on the left, go through Georgia, Mingrellia, Abaſſa, and Shercaſſen Land with the ſame Tongue, and another, which with little variation is common unto them all. Thence into the Comukes Countrey, who are a ſort of Tarters and do agree with others of the ſame name in ſpeech, as indeed moſt Tartars do; only they who are Mahumetans, and converſe much with the Turks, uſe divers Arabick and Turkiſh words whereunto the Heathen Tartars are ſtrangers: From Comukes Land I can paſs into Perſia, but I am not ſo well acquainted with their Country and Language, as I have elſewhere acknowledged. Therefore to return unto Conſtantinople, I can proceed from thence unto Romellia, or Romania, through Wallachy, Beallo Horda, Crim, the Great Deſart I have ſo often mentioned of Ingell and Ungull, the little Nagoy, ſo over the Vogal unto Aſtracan; thence through the Great Nagoy, and leaving the Caſpian on my Right hand into the Caragans Country, and ſo through Boghar into Perſia. I can alſo by my knowledg of the Languages peculiar unto the following Countries traverſe all Ireland, England, Norway, Sweeden, Finland, Leifland, Poland, Ruſſia, Mordwa, Sheremeſſa, Caſſan, Kalmukes Land, Caſſachy Horda, Turgench, and leaving China on the left hand through Bochara into Perſia.

And now, Sir, nothing remains, But that I make moſt humble and hearty acknowledgment of your great Generoſity and Chriſtian Charity, in delivering a Stranger out of Captivity, wherein I had Otherwiſe continued without hope of ſeeing my Friends or Country. And were I as expert at my Pen, as I have heretofore been at managing a Sword, I would by Conſigning my Travels to Writing, leave behind me a laſting Monument of your Fame: But being for want of Learning and by long Diſuſe of my Mother Tongue rendered unfit for ſuch a Work, I ſhall whereſoever I come proclaim your Worthineſs, and continually pray unto the Omnipotent GOD to return your Kindneſs into your Boſome a Thouſand fold. And ſhall ever remain, during Life,

Your Faithful Slave,

Aſtrachan.

AN EXTRACT OF A LETTER WRITTEN TO Mr. H. Ouldinburgh, FROM Monſieur DE MONCEAUX:

Giving a Character of the BOOK here Engliſhed, and its AUTHOR.

VIrtue ſometimes is no leſs intereſſed than Affection: Both, Sir, are glad to receive from time to time pledges mutually anſwering for thoſe that have united themſelves in a cloſe correſpondence. Yours indeed ſhould demand of me ſuch, as might be a ſecurity to you for the advance you have been pleaſed to make me of your Friendſhip. But ſince at preſent I have nothing worth preſenting you with; and yet am unwilling to give you any leiſure to be diffident of my realneſs, or to repent for having ſo eaſily given me a ſhare in your eſteem, I here ſend you a Relation of Indoſtan, in which you will find ſuch conſiderable Occurrences, as will make you confeſs, I could not convey to you a more acceptable Preſent, and that Monſieur Bernier, who hath written it, is a very Gallant Man, and of a mould, I wiſh all Travellers were made of. We ordinarily travel more out of Unſetledneſs than Curioſity, with a deſign to ſee Towns and Countries rather than to know their Inhabitants and Productions; and we ſtay not long enough in a place, to inform our ſelves well of the Government, Policy, Intereſts and Manners of its People. Monſieur Bernier, after he had benefitted himſelf for the ſpace of many years by the converſe of the famous Gaſſendi, ſeen him expire in his arms, ſucceeded him in his Knowledge, and inherited his Opinions and Diſcoveries, embarqued for Ægypt, ſtay'd above a whole year at Cairo, and then took the occaſion of ſome Indian Veſſels, that Trade in the Ports of the Red Sea, to paſs to Suratte; and after Twelve years abode at the Court of the Great Mogol, is at laſt come to ſeek his reſt in his native Countrey, there to give an Accompt of his Obſervations and Diſcoveries, and to pour out into the boſom of France, what he had amaſſed in India.

Sir, I ſhall ſay nothing to you of his Adventures, which you will find in the Relations that are to follow hereafter, which he abandons to the greedineſs of the Curious, who prefer their ſatisfaction to his quiet, and do already perſecute him to have the ſequel of this Hiſtory. Neither ſhall I mention to you the hazards he did run, by being in the Neighbourhood of Mecca; nor of his prudent Conduct, which made him merit the eſteem of his Generous Fazelcan, who ſince is become the firſt Miniſter of that Great Empire, whom he taught the principal Languages of Europe, after he had Tranſlated for him the whole Philoſophy of Gaſſendi in Latin, and whoſe leave he could not obtain to go home, till he had got for him a ſelect number of our beſt European Books, thereby to ſupply the loſs he ſhould ſuffer of his Perſon. This, at leaſt, I can aſſure you of, that never a Traveller went from home more capable to obſerve, nor hath written with more knowledge, candour, and integrity; that I knew him at Conſtantinople, and in ſome Towns of Greece, of ſo excellent a Conduct, that I propoſed him to my ſelf for a Pattern in the Deſign I then had, to carry my Curioſity as far as the place where the Sun riſeth; that I have often drowned in the ſweetneſs of his entertainment the bitterneſſes, which elſe I muſt have ſwallowed all alone, in ſuch irkſome and unpleaſant paſſages, as are thoſe of Aſia.

Sir, You will do me a pleaſure to let me know the ſentiment, your Illuſtrious Society hath of this Piece. Their Approbation begets much emulation among the Intelligent, who all have no other Ambition than to pleaſe them. I my ſelf muſt avow to you, that if I thought I could merit ſo much, I ſhould not ſo ſtifly oppoſe, as I do, the Publication of the Obſervations and Notes I have made in the Levant. I ſhould ſuffer my Friends to take them out of my Cabinet, where from the ſlight value I have for them, they are like to lye impriſoned, except the King my Maſter, by whoſe Order I undertook thoſe Voyages, ſhould abſolutely command me to ſet them at liberty, and to let them take their courſe in the world. Mean time, Sir, you will oblige me, to aſſure thoſe Great Men, who this day compoſe the moſt knowing Company on Earth, of the Veneration I have for the Oracles that come from their Mouth, and that I prefer their Lyceum before that of Athens; and laſtly, that of all their Admirers there is none, that hath a greater Concern for their Glory, than Paris, July 16. 1670. De MONCEAUX.

THE HISTORY OF THE Late Revolution OF THE DOMINIONS OF THE GREAT MOGOL.

THE desire of seeing the World having made me Travel into Paleſtina and Egypt, would not let me ſtop there; it put me upon a reſolution to ſee the Red Sea from one end to the other. I went from Grand Cairo, after I had ſtaid there above a year; and in two and thirty hours, going the Caravan-pace, I arrived at Suez, where I Embarked in a Gally, which in ſeventeen days carry'd me, always in ſight of Land, to the Port of Gidda, which is half a days Journey from Mecca. There I was conſtrained (contrary to my hopes, and the promiſe which the Beig of the Red Sea had made me) to go aſhore on that pretended Holy Land of Mahomet, where a Chriſtian, that is not a Slave, dares not ſet his foot. I ſtaid there four and thirty days; and then I Embarked in a ſmall Veſſel, which in fifteen days carried me along the Coaſt of Arabia the Happy to Moka, near the Streight of Babel-mandel. I reſolved to paſs thence to the Iſle of Maſowa and Arkiko, to get as far as Gouder, the Capital Town of the Countrey of Alebech, or the Kingdom of Æthiopia; but I received certain information, that, ſince the Portugueſes had been killed there by the intrigue of the Queen-Mother, or expelled, together with the Jeſuit Patriarch, whom they had brought thither from Goa, the Roman Catholicks were not ſafe there; a poor Capuchin having loſt his head at Suaken, for having attempted to enter into that Kingdom: That indeed, by going under the name of a Greek, or an Armenian, I did not run ſo great hazard, and that even the King himſelf, when he ſhould know, that I could do him ſervice, would give me Land to Till by Slaves, which I might buy if I had money; but that undoubtedly they would forthwith oblige me to Marry, as they had lately done a certain Frier, who had paſſed there under the name of a Greek Phyſitian; and that they would never ſuffer me to come away again.

Theſe conſiderations, among others, induced me to change my reſolution. I went aboard of an Indian Veſſel; I paſſed thoſe Streights, and in two and twenty days I arrived at Suratte in Indoſtan, the Empire of the Great Mogol, in the Year 1655. There I found, that he who then Reigned there, was call'd Chah-Jehan, that is to ſay, King of the World; who, according to the Hiſtory of that Countrey, was Son of Jehan-Guyre, which ſignifieth Conqueror of the World, Grandchild of Ekbar, which is Great, and that thus aſcending by Houmayons, or the Fortunate, Father of Ekbar, and his other Predeceſſors, he was the Tenth of thoſe that were deſcended from that Timur-Lengue, which ſignifieth the Lame Prince, commonly and corruptly call'd Tamerlan, ſo renowned for his Conqueſts; who married his near Kinſwoman, the only Daughter of the Prince of the Nations of Great Tartary, call'd Mogols, who have left and communicated their Name to the Strangers, that now govern Indoſtan, the Countrey of the Indians, though thoſe that are employ'd in publick Charges and Offices, and even thoſe that are liſted in the Militia, be not all of the Race of the Mogols, but Strangers, and Nations gather'd out of all Countries, moſt of them Perſians, ſome Arabians, and ſome Turks. For, to be eſteem'd a Mogol, 'tis enough to be a Stranger white of Face, and a Mahumetan; in diſtinction as well to the Indians, who are brown, and Pagans, as to the Chriſtians of Europe, who are call'd Franguis.

I found alſo at my arrival, that this King of the World, Chah-Jehan, of above ſeventy years of Age, had four Sons and two Daughters; that, ſome years ſince, he had made theſe four Sons Vice-Kings or Governors of four of his moſt conſiderable Provinces or Kingdoms; that it was almoſt a year that he was fallen into a great ſickneſs, whence it was believed he would never recover: Which had occaſioned a great diviſion among theſe four Brothers (all laying claim to the Empire) and had kindled among them a War which laſted about five years, and which I deſign here to deſcribe, having been preſent at ſome of the moſt conſiderable Actions, and entertained for the ſpace of eight years at that Court, where Fortune and the ſmall ſtock of Money (left me after divers Encounters with Robbers, and the Expences of a Voyage of ſix and forty days from Suratte to Agra and Debli, the Capital Towns of that Empire) obliged me to take a Salary from the Grand Mogol in the quality of a Phyſitian, and a little after from Danechmend-Kan, the moſt knowing Man of Aſia, who had been Bakchis, or Great Maſter of the Horſe, and was one of the moſt powerful and the moſt conſiderable Omrahs or Lords of that Court.

The Eldeſt of theſe four Sons of Chah-Jehan was call'd Dara, that is Darius. The Second was call'd Sultan-Sujah, that is, the Valiant Prince. The name of the Third was Aurenge-Zebe, which ſignifies the Ornament of the Throne. That of the Fourth was Morad-Bakche, as if you ſhould ſay, Deſire accompliſhed. Of the two Daughters, the eldeſt was call'd Begum-Saheb, that is, the Miſtreſs Princeſs; and the youngeſt Rauchenara-Begum, which is as much as Bright Princeſs, or the Splendor of Princeſſes.

'Tis the Cuſtom of the Countrey, to give ſuch Names to their Princes and Princeſſes. Thus the Wife of Chah-Jehan, ſo renown'd for her Beauty, and for having a Tomb, which much more deſerved to be reckon'd among the Wonders of the World, than thoſe unſhapen Maſſes, and thoſe heaps of Stones in Egypt, was called Tage-Mehalle, that is to ſay, the Crown of the Seraglio; and the Wife of Jehan-Guyre, who hath ſo long govern'd the State, whilſt her Husband minded nothing but Drinking and Diverſiſements, was firſt called Nour-Mehalle, and afterwards, Nour-Jehan-Begum, the Light of the Seraglio, the Light of the World. The reaſon, why they give ſuch kind of Names to the Great Ones, and not Names from their Land or Dominion (as is uſual in Europe) is, becauſe all the Land being the Kings, there are no Marquiſates, Earldoms and Dutchies, of which the Grandees might bear their Names; all conſiſts in Penſions either of Land or ready Money, which the King giveth, increaſeth, retrencheth, and takes away, as ſeems good unto him: And 'tis even for this reaſon, that the Omrahs have alſo no other but ſuch Names; one (for example) being called Raz-Audaze-Kan, i. e. a Thunderer; another, Safe Cheken-Kan, a Breaker of Ranks; a third, Bare-Audaze-Kan, a Man of Lightening; others, Dianet-Kan, or Danechmend-Kan, or Fazel-Kan, i. e. the Faithful Lord, the Intelligent, the Perfect, and the like.

Dara, the Eldeſt Son, wanted not good Qualities. He was Gallant in Converſation, Witty in Repartees, exceeding Civil and Liberal, but entertained too good an Opinion of his perſon, eſteeming himſelf alone capable of all, and thinking it ſcarce poſſible that any Body was able to give him counſel; inſomuch, that he would give reproachful Names to thoſe who pretended to adviſe him in any thing; whereby it came to paſs, that even thoſe, who were moſt affectionate to him, were ſhie to diſcover to him the moſt ſecret Intrigues of his Brothers. Beſides, he was apt to be tranſported with paſſion, to menace, to injure, to affront, even the greateſt Omrahs or Lords; but all paſſed over like a flaſh of light. Though he was a Mahumetan, and publickly expreſſed in the ordinary Exerciſes of Religion to be ſo, yet, in private, he was Heathen with the Heathen, and Chriſtian with the Chriſtians. He had conſtantly about him of thoſe Heathen Doctors, to whom he gave very conſiderable Penſions, and who (as was ſaid) had inſtilled into him Opinions contrary to the Religion of the Land; of which I may touch ſomething hereafter, when I ſhall come to ſpeak of the Religion of the Indians or Gentiles. He alſo hearkened of late very willingly to the Reverend Father Buzée a Jeſuit, and began very well to reliſh what he ſuggeſted. Yet there are ſome who ſay, that at the bottom he was void of all Religion, and that whatever he pretended in it, was only for curioſity, or, as others ſay, out of policy, to make himſelf beloved by the Chriſtians, who are pretty numerous in his Artillery; but above all, to gain the Affection of the Rajas, or Soveraign Gentiles, that were Tributary to the Empire, and to make them of his party upon occaſion. Mean time, this hath not much furthered his Affairs, on the contrary, it will appear in the ſequel of this Hiſtory, that the pretence uſed by Aureng-Zebe, his third Brother, to cut off his head, was, that he was turned Kafer, that is to ſay, an Infidel, of no Religion, an Idolater.

Sultan Sujah, the ſecond Brother, was much of the humor of Dara, but he was more cloſe and more ſetled, and had better conduct and dexterity. He was fit to manage an Intrigue well, and he made, under-hand, Friends, by the force of Preſents, which he heaped upon the great Omrahs, and principally upon the moſt powerful Rajas, as Jeſſomſeigne, and ſome others; but he did ſomewhat too much indulge his pleaſures, in entertaining an extraordinary number of Women, among whom when he was, he ſpent whole days and nights in drinking, ſinging, and dancing. He made them Preſents of very rich Apparel; and he encreaſed or leſſened their Penſions according as the fancy took him: By which kind of life his Affairs did languiſh, and the Affections of many of his People cooled. He caſt himſelf into the Religion of the Perſians, although Chah-Jehan, his Father, and all his Brothers, were of the Turkiſh. 'Tis known that Mahumetaniſm is divided into ſeveral Sects, which made that famous Check-Sady, Author of the Gouliſtan, ſay in Verſe, which is to this effect in Proſe; I am a Dervich Drinker, I ſeem to be without Religion, and I am known of ſixty two Sects. But of all thoſe Sects there are two principal ones, whoſe Partiſans are mortal Enemies to one another. The one is that of the Turks, whom the Perſians call Oſmantous, that is, Sectators of Oſman; they believing that 'tis he that was the true and lawful Succeſſor of Mahomet, the Great Caliph or Soveraign Prieſt, to whom alone it did appertain to interpret the Alcoran, aud to decide the Controverſies to be met with in the Law. The other is that of the Perſians, whom the Turks call Chias, Rafezys, Aly-Merdans, that is, Sectaries, Hereticks, Partiſans of Aly, becauſe they believe, contrary to the belief of the Turks, that this Succeſſion and Pontifical Authority, which I juſt now intimated, was due only to Aly the Son-in-law of Mahomet. It was by reaſon of State that Sultan Sujah had embraced this latter Sect, conſidering that all the Perſians being Chias, and moſt of them, or their Children, having the greateſt power at the Court of Mogol, and holding the moſt important Places of the Empire, he had moſt reaſon to hope, that, when occaſion ſerved, they would all take his part.

Aureng-Zebe, the third Brother, had not that Gallantry, nor ſurprizing Preſence of Dara, he appeared more ſerious and melancholy, and was indeed much more judicious, underſtanding the World very well, and knowing whom to chuſe for his ſervice and purpoſe, and where to beſtow his favour and bounty moſt for his intereſt. He was reſerved, crafty, and exceedingly verſed in diſſembling, inſomuch that for a long while he made profeſſion to be Fakire, that is, Poor, Dervich, or Devout, renouncing the World, and feigning not to pretend at all to the Crown, but to deſire to paſs his life in Prayer, and other Devotions. In the mean time he failed not to make a Party at Court, eſpecially when he was made Vice-King of Decan; but he did it with ſo much dexterity, art, and ſecreſie, that it could hardly be perceived. He alſo had the skill to maintain himſelf in the affection of Chah-Jehan his Father, who although he much loved Dara, could yet not forbear to ſhew that he eſteemed Aureng-Zebe, and judged him capable to Reign; which cauſed jealouſie enough in Dara, who began to find it, inſomuch that he could not hold from ſaying ſometimes to his Friends in private, Of all my Brothers I apprehend only this Nemazi, that is, this Bigot, this great Praying-man.

Morad-Bakche, the youngeſt of all, was the leaſt dextrous, and the leaſt judicious. He cared for nothing but mirth and paſtime, to drink, hunt, and ſhoot. Yet he had ſome good qualities, for he was very civil and liberal; he gloried in it, that he kept nothing ſecret; he deſpiſed Cabals; and he bragg'd openly, that he truſted only in his Arm and Sword: In ſhort, he was very Brave, and if this Bravery had been accompanied with ſome conduct, he would have carried the Bell from all his Brothers, and been King of Indoſtan, as will appear in what is to follow.

Concerning the two Daughters, the Eldeſt, Begum-Saheb, was very beautiful, and a great Wit, paſſionately beloved of her Father. It was even rumoured, that he loved her to that degree as is hardly to be imagined, and that he alledged for his excuſe, that, according to the determination of his Mullahs, or Doctors of his Law, it was permitted a Man to eat of the fruit of the Tree he had planted. He had ſo great a confidence in her, that he had given her charge to watch over his ſafety, and to have an eye to all what came to his Table: And ſhe knew perfectly to manage his humor, and even in the moſt weighty Affairs to bend him as ſhe pleaſed. She was exceedingly enriched by great Penſions, and by coſtly Preſents, which ſhe received from all Parts, for ſuch Negotiations as ſhe employed her ſelf in about her Father: And ſhe made alſo great Expences, being of a very liberal and generous diſpoſition. She ſtuck entirely to Dara, her eldeſt Brother, eſpouſed cordially his part, and declared openly for him; which contributed not a little to make the Affairs of Dara proſper, and to keep him in the affection of his Father; for ſhe ſupported him in all things, and advertiſed him of all occurrences: Yet that was not ſo much, becauſe he was the eldeſt Son, and ſhe the eldeſt Daughter (as the People believed) as becauſe he had promiſed her, that as ſoon as he ſhould come to the Crown, he would marry her; which is altogether extraordinary, and almoſt never practiſed in Indoſtan.

I ſhall not ſcruple to relate here ſome of the Amours of this Princeſs, although ſhut up in a Seraglio, and well kept, like other Women. Neither ſhall I apprehend, that I may be thought to prepare matter for a Romancer; for they are not Amours like ours, followed by Gallant and Comical Adventures, but attended with Events dreadful and Tragical.

Now 'tis reported, that this Princeſs found means to let a young Gallant enter the Seraglio, who was of no great Quality, but proper, and of a good Meen. But among ſuch a number of jealous and envious perſons, ſhe could not carry on her buſineſs ſo privily, but ſhe was diſcover'd. Chah-Jehan, her Father, was ſoon advertiſed of it, and reſolved to ſurprize her, under the pretence of giving her a Viſit, as he uſed to do. The Princeſs ſeeing him come unexpected, had no more time than to hide this unfortunate Lover in one of the great Chaudrons made to Bath in; which yet could not be ſo done, but that Chah-Jehan ſuſpected it. Mean time he quarrelled not with his Daughter, but entertained her a pretty while, as he was wont to do; and at length told her, that he found her in a careleſs and leſs neat poſture; that it was convenient ſhe ſhould waſh her ſelf, and bath oftner; commanding preſently, with ſomewhat a ſtern countenance, that forthwith a Fire ſhould be made under that Chaudron, and he would not part thence, before the Eunuchs had brought him word, that that unhappy Man was diſpatched. Some time after ſhe took other meaſures, ſhe choſe for her Kane-ſaman, that is, her Steward, a certain Perſian called Nazerkan, who was a young Omrah, the handſomeſt and moſt accompliſhed of the whole Court; a Man of Courage and Ambition, the Darling of all, inſomuch that Chah-Heſtkan, Uncle of Aureng-Zebe, propoſed to marry him to the Princeſs: But Chah-Jehan received that Propoſition very ill, and beſides, when he was informed of ſome of the ſecret Intrigues that had been formed, he reſolved quickly to rid himſelf of Nazerkan. He therefore preſented to him, as 'twere to do him honour, a Betele, which he could not refuſe to chew preſently, after the cuſtom of the Countrey. Betele is a little knot made up of very delicate leaves, and ſome other things, with a little chalk of Sea-Cockles, which maketh the mouth and lips of a vermilion colour, and the breath ſweet and pleaſing. This young Lord thought of nothing leſs than being poyſoned: He went away from the Company very jocund and content, into his Paleky; but the Drug was ſo ſtrong, that before he could come to his houſe, he was no more alive.

Rauchenara-Begum never paſſed for ſo handſom and ſpiritual as Begum-Saheb, but ſhe was not leſs cheerful, and comely enough, and hated pleaſures no more than her Siſter. But ſhe addicted her ſelf wholly to Aureng-Zebe, and conſequently declared her ſelf an Enemy to Begum-Saheb and Dara. This was the cauſe, that ſhe had no great Riches, nor any conſiderable ſhare in the Affairs of the State: Nevertheleſs as ſhe was in the Seraglio, and wanted no Wit and Spies, ſhe could not but diſcover many important matters, of which ſhe gave ſecret advertiſement to Aureng Zebe.

Chah-Jehan, ſome years before the Troubles, finding himſelf charged with theſe four Princes, all come to Age, all Married, all pretending to the Crown, Enemies to one another, and each of them making ſecretly a Party, was perplexed enough, as to what was fitteſt for him to do, fearing danger to his own perſon, and foreſeeing what afterwards wards befell him: For, to ſhut them up in Goualeor, which is a Fortreſs where the Princes are ordinarily kept cloſe, and which is held impregnable, it being ſituated upon an inacceſſible Rock, and having within it ſelf good water, and proviſion enough for a Gariſon; that was not ſo eaſie a thing. They were too potent already, each of them having a Princely Train. And again, he could not handſomly remove them far off, without giving them ſome Government fit for their Birth; wherein he apprehended they would Cantonize themſelves, and become little independent Kings, as actually they afterwards did. Nevertheleſs, fearing leſt they ſhould cut one anothers Throat before his Eyes, if he kept them ſtill at Court, he at laſt concluded to ſend them away. And ſo he ſent Sultan Sujah, his ſecond Son, into the Kingdom of Bengale; his third, Aureng-Zebe, into Decan; and the youngeſt, Morad-Bakche, to Guzaratte; giving to Dara, the eldeſt, Cabal and Multan. The three firſt went away very well content with their Government, and there they acted each the Soveraign, and retained all the Revenues of their reſpective Countries, entertaining great Troops, under the pretence of bridling their Subjects and Neighbours. As to Dara, becauſe the eldeſt, and deſigned to the Crown, he ſtirred not from the Court; which that he ſhould not do, ſeemed alſo to be the intention of Chah-Jehan, who entertained him in the hopes of ſucceeding him after his death. He even permitted then, that Orders were iſſued out by him, and that he might ſit in a kind of Throne, beneath his, among the Omrahs; ſo that it ſeemed, as if there were two Kings together. But as 'tis very difficult for two Soveraigns to agree, Chah-Jehan, though Dara ſhew'd him great obſervance and affection, always harbour'd ſome diffidence, fearing above all things the Morſel; and beſides, for as much as he knew the parts of Aureng-Zebe, and thought him more capable to Reign than any of the reſt, he had always (as they ſay) ſome particular correſpondence with him.

This it is, what I thought fit to premiſe concerning theſe four Princes, and their Father Chah-Jehan, becauſe 'tis neceſſary for the underſtanding of all that follows. I eſteem'd alſo, that I was not to forget thoſe two Princeſſes, as having been the moſt conſiderable Actors in the Tragedy; the Women in the Indies taking very often, as well as at Conſtantinople, and in many other places, the beſt part in the moſt important Tranſactions, though men take ſeldom notice of it, and trouble their heads of ſeeking for other cauſes.

But to deliver this Hiſtory with clearneſs, we muſt riſe ſomewhat higher, and relate what paſſed, ſome time before the Troubles, between Aureng-Zebe, the King of Golkonda, and his Viſier Emir-Jemla; becauſe this will diſcover to us the character and temper of Aureng-Zebe, who is to be the Heros of this Piece, and the King of the Indies. Let us then ſee, after what manner Emir-Jemla proceeded, to lay the firſt foundation of the Royalty of Aureng Zebe.

During the time that Aureng-Zebe was in Decan, the King of Golkonda had for his Viſier and General of his Armies this Emir-Jemla, who was a Perſian by Nation, and very famous in the Indies. He was not a man of great Extraction, but beaten in Buſineſs, a perſon of excellent parts, and a great Captain. He had the wit of amaſſing great Treaſures, not only by the adminiſtration of the affairs of this opulent Kingdom, but alſo by Navigation and Trade, ſending Ships into very many Parts, and cauſing the Diamond Mines, which he alone had farmed under many borrowed names, to be wrought with extraordinary diligence. So that people diſcourſed almoſt of nothing but of the Riches of Emir-Jemla, and of the plenty of his Diamonds, which were not reckon'd but by Sacks. He had alſo the skill to render himſelf very potent and conſiderable, entertaining, beſides the Armies of the King, very good Troops for his particular, and above all a very good Artillery, with abundance of Franguys or Chriſtians to manage it. In a word, he grew ſo rich, and ſo puiſſant, eſpecially after he had found a way to enter into the Kingdom of Karnates, and to pillage all the ancient Churches of the Idols of that Countrey, that the King of Golkonda became jealous of it, and prepared himſelf to unſaddle him; and that the more, becauſe he could not bear what was reported of him, as if he had uſed too great familiarity with the Queen his Mother, that was yet beauteous. Yet he diſcover'd nothing of his deſign to any, having patience, and waiting 'till Emir came to the Court, for he was then in the Kingdom of Karnates with his Army. But one day, when more particular News was brought him of what had paſſed between his mother and him, he had not power enough to diſſemble any longer, but was tranſported by choler to fall to invectives and menaces: Whereof Emir was ſoon made acquainted, having at the Court abundance of his Wives Kindred, and all his neareſt Relations and beſt Friends poſſeſſing the principal Offices. The King's Mother alſo, who did not hate him, had ſpeedy information of the ſame. Which obliged Emir, without delay, to write to his only Son, Mahmet Emir-Kan, who then was about the King, requiring him to do the beſt he could to withdraw with all ſpeed from the Court, under ſome pretence of Hunting, or the like, and to come and join with him. Mahmet Emir-Kan failed not to attempt divers ways; but, the King cauſing him to be narrowly obſerved, none of them all would ſucceed. This very much perplexed Emir, and made him take a ſtrange reſolution, which caſt the King in great danger to loſe his Crown and Life; ſo true 'tis, that he who knows not to Diſſemble, knows not how to Reign. He writ to Aureng-Zebe, who was then in Daulet-Abad, the Capital of Decan, about fifteen or ſixteen days Journey from Golkonda, giving him to underſtand, that the King of Golkonda did intend to ruine him and his Family, notwithſtanding the ſignal Services he had done him, as all the World knew; which was an unexampled Injuſtice and Ingratitude; that this neceſſitated him to take his refuge to him, and to intreat him, that he would receive him into his protection; that, for the reſt, if he would follow his advice, and confide in him, he would ſo diſpoſe Affairs, that he would at once put into his hands both the King and Kingdom of Golkonda. This thing he made very eaſie, uſing the following Diſcourſe: You need but take four or five thouſand Horſe, of the beſt of your Army, and to march with Expedition to Golkonda, ſpreading a rumor by the way, that 'tis an Ambaſſador of Chah-Jehan that goes in haſte, about conſiderable matters, to ſpeak with the King at Bag-naguer. The Dabir, who is he that is firſt to be addreſſed unto, to make any thing known unto the King, is allied to me, and my creature, and altogether mine; take care of nothing but to march with Expedition, and I will ſo order it, that without making you known, you ſhall come to the Gates of Bag-naguer; and when the King ſhall come out to receive the Letters, according to cuſtom, you may eaſily ſeize on him, and afterwards of all his Family, and do with him what ſhall ſeem good to you; in regard that his houſe of Bag-naguer, where he commonly reſides, is unwalled and unfortified. He added, that he would make this Enterpriſe upon his own charges, offering him fifty thouſand Roupies a day (which is about five and twenty thouſand Crowns) during the whole time of the March.

Aureng-Zebe, who looked only for ſome ſuch occaſion, had no mind at all to loſe ſo fair an one. He ſoon undertook the Expedition, and did ſo fortunately manage his Enterpriſe, that he arrived at Bag-naguer, without being otherwiſe known than as an Ambaſſador of Chah-Jehan. The King of Golkonda being advertiſed of the arrival of this pretended Ambaſſador, came forth into a Garden, according to cuſtom, received him with honour, and having unfortunately put himſelf into the hands of his Enemy, ten or twelve Slaves, Gurgis, were ready to fall upon and to ſeize his perſon, as had been projected; but that a certain Omrah, touched with tenderneſs, could not forbear to cry out, though he was of the Party, and a creature of Emir, Doth not your Majeſty ſee that this is Aureng-Zebe? Away, or you are taken. Whereat the King being atrighted, ſlips away, and gets haſtily on horſeback, riding with all his might to the Fortreſs of Golkonda, which is but a ſhort League from thence.

Aureng-Zebe ſeeing he was defeated in his deſign, yet was not therefore diſcompoſed; but ſeized at the ſame time on the Royal Houſe, taketh all the rich and good things he finds there; yet ſending to the King all his Wives (which over all the Indies is very religiouſly obſerved) and goeth to beſiege him in his Fortreſs. But as the Siege, for want of having brought along all Neceſſaries, held on long, and laſted above two months, he received order from Chah-Jehan to raiſe it, and to retire into Decan again; ſo that, although the Fortreſs was reduced to Extremities, for want of Victuals and Ammunition of War, he found himſelf obliged to abandon his Enterpriſe. He knew very well, that it was Dara and Begum that had induced Chah-Jehan to ſend theſe Orders, from the apprehenſion they entertained, that he would become too powerful; but in the mean time he never diſcover'd any reſentment of it, ſaying only, that he ought to obey the Orders of his Father. Yet he withdrew not, without cauſing under-hand payment to be made to him of all the Charges of his Expedition: Beſides, he married his Son Sultan Mahmond to the eldeſt Daughter of that King, with a promiſe, that he would make him his Succeſſor, cauſing him alſo to give him for a Dowry the Fortreſs and the Appurtenances of Bamguyre. He alſo made the King conſent, that all the Silver Money that ſhould be Coined for the future in that Kingdom, ſhould bear on one ſide the Arms of Chah-Jehan; and that Emir-Jemla ſhould withdraw with his whole Family, all his Goods, Troops, and Artillery.

Theſe

These two great Men were not long together, but they framed great designs: On the way they besieged and took Bider, one of the strongest and most important Places of Visapour; and thence they went to Daulet-Abad, where they contracted so intimate a friendship together, that Aureng-Zebe could not live without seeing Emir twice a day, nor Emir without seeing Aureng-Zebe. Their Union began to cause a new Face in all the Affairs of those Parts, and laid the first foundations of the Royalty of Aureng-Zebe.

This Prince having used the Art to make himself to be called to the Court divers times, went with great and rich Presents to Agra to Chah-Jehan, presenting him his service, and inducing him to make War against the King of Golkonda, and him of Visapour, and against the Portugals. At first he presented to him that great Diamond, which is esteem'd matchless; giving him to understand, that the precious stones of Golkanda were quite other things, than those Rocks of Kandahar; that there it was, where the War ought to be made, to get the possession thereof, and to go as far as Cape-Comory. Chah-Jehan, whether it were that he was dazled by the Diamonds of Emir, or whether he thought it fit, as some believe he did, to have an Army in the Field, somewhat to restrain Dara, whom he found active in making himself potent, and who with insolence had ill treated the Visier Sadullah-Kan (whom Chah-Jehan passionately loved, and considered as the greatest Statesman that had been in the Indies) causing him even to be made away with Poison, as a Man not of his Party, but inclined to Sultan Sujah; or rather, because he found him too powerful, and in a condition to be the Umpire of the Crown, if Chah-Jehan should decease; or lastly, because being neither Persian, nor of Persian Extraction, but an Indian, there were not wanting envious persons, who spread abroad, that he entertained in divers places numerous Troops of Patans, very gallant men, and well paid, with a design to make himself King, or his Son; or at least to expel the Mogels, and to restore to the Throne the Nation of the Patans, of whom he had taken his Wife. However it be, Chah-Jehan resolved to send an Army towards Decan, under the conduct of Emir-Jemla.

Dara, who saw the consequence of this Affair, and that the sending of Troops for those Parts, was to give strength to Aureng-Zebe, opposed it exceedingly, and did what he could to hinder it. Nevertheless, when he saw that Chah-Jehan was resolute for it, he at last thought it best to consent; but with this condition, that Aureng-Zebe should keep in Daulet-Abad, as Governor only of the Countrey, without medling at all in the War, or pretending to govern the Army; that Emir should be the absolute General, who for a pledge of his Fidelity was to leave his whole Family at the Court. Emir strugled enough within himself, whether he should agree to this last condition, but when Chah-Jehan desir'd him to give that satisfaction to Dara, and promised him, that after a little while he would send him back his Wife and Children, he consented, and marched into Decan towards Aureng-Zebe with a very gallant Army, and without any stop entred into Visapour, where he besieged a strong place called Kaliane.

The Affairs of Indostan were in that condition, as I have been relating, when Chah-Jahan fell dangerously sick, I shall not speak here of his sickness, much less relate the particulars of it. I shall only say this, that it was little suitable to a man of above Seventy years of Age, who should rather think on preserving his strength, than to ruine it, as he did. This sickness did soon alarm and trouble all Indostan. Mighty Armies were levied in Dehly and Agra, the Capitals of the Empire. Sultan Sujah did the like in Bengale, and Aureng-Zebe in Decan, and Mord-Bakche in Guzaratte: All four assembled to themselves their Allies and Friends; all four write, promise, and form divers Intrigues. Dara having surprised some of their Letters, shew'd them to Chah-Jehan, and made great noise about them; and his Sister Begum failed not to make use of this occasion, to animate the King against them. But Chah-Jehan was diffident of Dara, and fearing to be poisoned, gave order, that particular care should be had of what was brought to his Table. 'Twas also said, that he wrote to Aureng-Zebe; and that Dara being advertised thereof, could not forbear to menace, and to break into very passionate expressions. In the mean time the distemper of Chah-Jehan lingred, and 'twas bruited every where, that he was dead. Whereupon the whole Court was disorder'd, the whole Town alarm'd, the Shops for many days shut up; and the four Sons of the King made openly great Preparations, each for himself: And to say truth, it was not without reason, that they all made ready for War; for they all very well knew, that there was no hopes of Quarter, that there was no other way, than to vanquish or die, to be King or undone, undone, and that he that ſhould be Conqueror would rid himſelf of all the reſt, as formerly Chah-Jehan had done of his Brothers.

Sultan Sujah, who had heaped up great Treaſures in that rich Kingdom of Bengale, ruining ſome of the Rajas or petty Kings that are in thoſe Parts, and drawing great Sums from others, took the Field firſt of all with a puiſſant Army, and in the confidence he had of all the Perſian Omrahs, for the Sect of whom he had declared himſelf, he boldly marched towards Agra, giving out openly, that Chah-Jehan was dead, that Dara had poiſon'd him, that he would revenge the death of his Father, and, in a word, that he would be King. Dara deſired Chah-Jehan to write himſelf to him, and to forbid him to advance further; which he did, aſſuring him, that his ſickneſs was not at all dangerous, and that he was already much better. But he having Friends at Court, who aſſured him that the ſickneſs of Chah-Jehan was mortal, he diſſembled, and ceaſed not to advance, ſaying ſtill, that he knew very well Chah-Jehan was dead; and if he ſhould be alive, he was deſirous to come and kiſs his feet, and to receive his Commands.

Aureng-Zebe immediately after, if not at the ſame time, taketh the Field alſo in Decan, maketh a great noiſe, and prepareth to march towards Agra. The ſame prohibition was made to him alſo, as well from Chah-Jehan, as from Dara, who threaten'd him. But he diſſembleth, for the ſame reaſon that Sultan Sujah had done, and giveth the like anſwer. Mean time, finding that his Treaſure was low, and his Soldiery very inconſiderable, he deviſed two Artifices, which ſucceeded admirably well; the one, in regard of Morad-Bakche; the other, in reſpect of Emir-Jemla. To Morad-Bakche he writes with ſpeed a very fair Letter, importing, that he had always been his true and intimate Friend; that, as for himſelf, he laid no claim at all to the Crown; that he might remember, he had all his life-time made profeſſion of a Fakire, but that Dara was a perſon incapable to govern a Kingdom; that he was a Kafer, an Idolater, and hated of all the greateſt Omrahs; that Sultan Sujah was a Rafezy, an Heretick, and by conſequence an Enemy to Indoſtan, and unworthy of the Crown: So that, in a word, there was none but he (Morad-Bakche) that could reaſonably pretend to the Succeſſion; that the Crown did expect him; that the whole Court, which was not ignorant of his Valor, would be for him; and that for his particular, if he would promiſe him, that being King, he would give him leave to live quietly in ſome corner or other of his Empire, there to ſerve God the remainder of his days, he was ready to make a conjunction with him, to aſſiſt him with his Counſel and Friends, and to put into his hands his whole Army, to fight Dara and Sultan Sujah; that in the mean time he ſent him an Hundred thouſand Rupies (which make about Fifty thouſand Crowns of our money) and prayed him to accept thereof as a pledge of his friendſhip; and that he would adviſe him to come with all poſſible ſpeed to ſeize on the Caſtle of Suratte, where he knew to be the Treaſure of the Land.

Morad-Bakche, who was neither too rich, nor too powerful, received with much joy this Propoſition of Aureng-Zebe, and the Hundred thouſand Rupies ſent by him; and ſhew'd Aureng-Zebe's Letter to every body, thereby to oblige the Flower of that Countrey to take up Arms for him, and the ſubſtantial Merchants to lend him the more willingly ſuch Sums of money as he demanded of them. He began in good earneſt to act the King, made large promiſes to all, and, in ſhort, did ſo well, that he ſet a good Army on foot, of whom he ſingled out ſome Three thouſand, who, under the conduct of Chah-Abas, one of his Eunuchs, but a valiant man, ſhould go to beſiege Suratte.

Aureng-Zebe ſent his eldeſt Son, Sultan Mahmoud (him whom he had married to the Daughter of the King of Golkonda) to Emir-Jemla, who was yet employed in the ſiege of Kaliane, to perſwade him to come to him to Daulet-Abad, pretending to have matter of the greateſt importance to communicate to him. Emir, who ſoon ſuſpected his intentions, excuſed himſelf, ſaying openly, that Chah-Jehan was not dead, that he had freſh News of his being alive, and that beſides, all his Family being at Agra in the hands of Dara, he could by no means aſſiſt Aureng-Zebe, nor declare himſelf for him. Whereupon Sultan Mahmoud return'd to Daulet-Abad, without effecting any thing, and very much diſſatisfied with Emir. But Aureng-Zebe loſt no courage for all that, but ſent the ſecond time to Emir, yet not Sultan Mahmoud, but Sultan Mazum his ſecond Son, who preſented to him his Fathers Letter, and handled him with that dexterity, ſweetneſs, and proteſtation of friendſhip, that it was not poſſible to reſiſt him. Emir therefore preſſed the ſiege of Kaliane, forced the beſieged to ſurrender upon compoſition, took the choice of his Army, and with all diligence went away with Sultan Mazum. At his arrival, Aureng-Zebe courted him in the higheſt degree, treating him no otherwiſe than with the name of Baba and Babagy, that is, Father, Lord-Father; and after an hundred Embraces, he took him ſomewhat aſide, and told him (according to what I could learn from perſons who knew of it) That it was not juſt, that having his Family at the Court, he ſhould adventure to do any thing in his behalf that might come to be known; but that, after all, there was nothing ſo difficult but an Expedient might be found. Give me leave therefore, ſaid he, to propoſe to you a Deſign, which at firſt will poſſibly ſurpriſe you; but, ſince you apprehend the danger of your Wife and Children that are in Hoſtage, the beſt way of providing for their ſecurity would be, to ſuffer me to ſeize on your perſon, and to put you in Priſon. It is out of doubt, that all the World will believe it done in earneſt: For who would imagine, that ſuch a perſon as you would be content to let your ſelf be laid in Priſon? In the interim, I could make uſe of part of your Army, and of your Artillery, as you ſhall judge moſt proper and convenient: You alſo could furniſh me with a Sum of money, as you have frequently offered it; and beſides, methinks I might tempt Fortune further, and we might together take our meaſures, to ſee in what manner I had beſt to demean my ſelf, if you would alſo permit, that I might cauſe you to be tranſported into the Fortreſs of Daulet-Abad, where you ſhould be Maſter; and that there I might have you kept by my own Son, Sultan Mazum, or Sultan Mahmoud; this would yet better palliate the matter, and I ſee not, what Dara could juſtly ſay of it, nor how he could reaſonably treat your Wife and Children ill.

Emir, whether it were by reaſon of the friendſhip he had ſworn to Aureng-Zebe, or for the great promiſes made to him, or the apprehenſion he had, of ſeeing near him Sultan Mazum, who ſtood by, very penſive and well armed, and Sultan Mahmoud, who looked grim upon him for his coming away at the ſolicitation of his Brother, not at that of his, and had at his very entrance lift up his foot, as if he would have hit him; whatever of theſe Conſiderations might induce him, conſented to all what Aureng-Zebe deſired, and approved of the Expedient to ſuffer himſelf to be impriſon'd; ſo that Aureng-Zebe being no ſooner gone, but the great Maſter of the Artillery was ſeen to approach with ſome fierceneſs to Emir, and to command him in the name of Aureng-Zebe to follow him, locking him up in a Chamber, and there giving him very good words, whilſt all the Soldiery that Aureng-Zebe had thereabout, went to their Arms. The report of the detention of Emir-Jemla was no ſooner ſpread, but a great Tumult aroſe; and thoſe, whom he had brought along with him, although aſtoniſh'd, yet put themſelves into a poſture of reſcuing him, and with their Swords drawn ran to force the Guards, and the Gate of his Priſon, which was eaſie for them to do: For Aureng-Zebe had not with him ſufficient Troops to make good ſo bold an Enterpriſe, the only name of Emir-Jemla made all tremble. But the whole matter being altogether counterfeited, all theſe Commotions were preſently calmed, by the intimations that were given to the chief Officers of Emir's Army, and by the preſence of Aureng-Zebe, who there appeared very reſolute with his two Sons, and ſpoke now to one, then to another; and at laſt by Promiſes and Preſents, liberally beſtowed on thoſe that were concerned. So that all the Troops of Emir, and even moſt of thoſe of Chah-Jehan, ſeeing things troubled, and being without their General, and believing Chah-Jehan to be dead, or, at beſt, deſperately ſick; conſidering alſo the ample promiſes made to them of augmenting their Stipend, and of giving them at that very time three months Advance, ſoon Liſted themſelves under Aureng-Zebe; who having ſeized on all the Equipage of Emir, even his very Camels and Tents, took the Field, reſolved to march to the Siege of Suratte, and to haſten the taking it in; where Morad-Bakche was exceedingly embarraſſed, becauſe that his beſt Troops were employed there, and that he found more reſiſtance in that place than he imagined. But Aureng-Zebe, after ſome days March, was informed, that the Governor had ſurrendred the Place; for which he ſent Congratulations to Morad-Bakche, acquainting him withal of his Tranſactions with Emir-Jemla, and aſſuring him, that he had Forces and Money enough, and very good intelligence at the Court; that nothing was wanting; that he was directly going to Brampour and Agra; that he had expected him on the way, and therefore deſired him to join with him.

'Tis true, that Morad-Bakche found not ſo much money in the Fortreſs of Suratte as he had imagined, whether it were that really there was not ſo much as was reported, or whether the Governor had diverted a part of it, as ſome believed: Yet notwithſtanding that little he found there was uſeful to him, to pay the Soldiers that had Liſted themſelves in hopes of the advantages, they ſhould make of the imagined vaſt Treaſure of Suratte. 'Tis not leſs true, that he had no greater reaſon to boaſt of the taking of this Place, in regard there was not any Regular Fortification about it; and yet his Army had lain before it above a month, and would never have reduced it without the Hollanders, who furniſhed them with the Invention of Springing a Mine, which ruining a great ſide of the Wall, caſt the beſieged into ſuch a Conſternation, that it made them immediately ſurrender. The reduction of this Town did much advance his Deſign, Fame proclaiming immediately throughout theſe Countreys, that Morad-Bakche had taken Suratte; that he had ſprung a Mine, which ſounded very big among the Indians, who as yet do little underſtand that practice; and that there he had found a vaſt Treaſure. Notwithſtanding this great noiſe, and all the firſt advantages, joyned to all thoſe frequent Letters and great Promiſes of Aureng-Zebe, the Eunuch, Chah-Abas, a Man of good Senſe, of a great Heart, and exceedingly affectionate to the Service of his Maſter, was not of opinion, that Morad-Bakche ſhould ſo much tye himſelf in Intereſt to Aureng-Zebe, or precipitate his conjunction with him, but adviſed, that he ſhould amuſe him with words, and let him advance alone towards Agra; that in the mean time there would come certain News of the ſickneſs of Chah-Jehan; that he ſhould firſt ſee what Channel Affairs would run in; that he ſhould Fortifie Suratte, as a very good Poſt, able to render him Maſter of a very large and rich Countrey; and that perhaps in time he might ſeize Brampour, which is a very conſiderable Paſſage of a River, and as 'twere a Bar of Decan. But the continual Letters and Proteſtations of Aureng-Zebe, joyned to the ſmall Forces, Artillery, and Treaſure of Morad-Bakche, blinded with an exceſſive ambition to Reign, made him regardleſs of all other conſiderations; ſo that he went away from Amadevad, abandoned Guzaratte, and took his way through the Woods and Mountains, with all Expedition, to be at the Rendezvouz, where Aureng-Zebe had looked for him theſe two or three days.

Great Solemnities of Joy were made at the conjunction of the two Armies, the Princes viſited one another, Aureng-Zebe made a hundred Proteſtations and no leſs Promiſes to Morad-Bakche, aſſured him afreſh, and ſolemnly, of his not caring for the Crown, as alſo of his being there for no other end than to aſſiſt him againſt Dara, their Common Enemy, and to place him in the Throne, which expected him.

Upon this Enterview, and confirmation of Friendſhip, both Armies marched together, Aureng-Zebe continuing always, during the March, in the Proteſtations of Friendſhip, and in his Courtſhip to Morad-Bakche, treating him never otherwiſe, whether in publick or private, but with the Title of Hazaret, that is, King and Majeſty: So that Morad-Bakche was fully perſwaded, that Aureng-Zebe meant ſincerely, from an exceſs of affection towards him; whence he even willingly, and without Ceremony, ſuffered the ſubmiſſions and reſpects he ſhewed him; inſtead of remembring what had lately paſſed at Golkonda, and of conſidering, that he, who had thus hazarded himſelf with ſo much boldneſs to uſurp a Kingdom, was not of a temper to live and dye a Fakire.

Theſe two Armies thus joyned made a Body conſiderable enough; which begot a great noiſe at Court, and gave cauſe of thoughtfulneſs, not only to Dara, but to Chah-Jehan himſelf, who knew the great parts and ſubtle Conduct of Aureng-Zebe, and the Courage of Morad-Bakche; and who foreſaw wery well, that a fire was a kindling, which would be very hard to quench. It was to no purpoſe to write Letters upon Letters, ſignifying that he was well, and giving Order that they ſhould turn back to their reſpective Governments, and expreſſing alſo, that he would forget all that had paſſed hitherto. All his Letters were not able to hinder their Advance; and as the ſickneſs of Chah-Jehan did ſtill paſs for mortal, there being no perſons wanting to bring and ſpread ſuch News, they ſtill continued to diſſemble, giving out, that they were Letters counterfeited by Dara; that Chah-Jehan was dead indeed; but that, in caſe he were alive, they would go to kiſs his Feet, and deliver him from the hands of Dara.

What then ſhould Chah-Jehan, this unfortunate King, do, who ſeeth, that his Sons have no regard to his Orders; who is informed at all hours, that they march apace towards Agra in the head of their Armies, and who in this conjuncture finds himſelf ſick to boot in the hands of Dara, that is, of a man who breatheth nothing but War; who prepareth for it with all imaginable earneſtneſs, and with all the marks of an enraged reſentment againſt his Brothers; but what could he do in this extremity? He is conſtrained to abandon to them his Treaſures, and to leave them to their diſpoſal. He is forced to ſend for his old and moſt truſty Captains, whom he knows for the moſt part to be not very affectionate to Dara; he muſt command them to fight for Dara, againſt his own Blood, his own Children, and thoſe, for whom he hath more eſteem than for Dara; he is obliged forthwith to ſend an Army againſt Sultan Sujah, becauſe 'tis he that is moſt advanced; and he is to ſend another againſt Aureng-Zebe and Mored-Bakche, who no leſs are marching towards him.

Soliman Chekouh, the eldeſt Son of Dara, a young Prince of about five and twenty years of Age, very proper of Body, and of good Parts and Conduct, generous, liberal, and univerſally beloved, eſpecially of Chah-Jehan, who had already enriched him, and who conſidered him rather for his Succeſſor than Dara, was he, that was made General of this Army againſt Sujah. Nevertheleſs Chah-Jehan, who wiſhed much rather, that Sujah were returned to Bengale, than that the matter ſhould be tryed by a bloody Combat, which could not be but very Tragical, and wherein he run the hazard of loſing one or other of his Sons, gave him for Companion an Ancient Raja, called Jeſſeigne, who is at preſent one of the powerfulleſt and richeſt Rajahs of all Indoſtan, and one of the ableſt in the whole Kingdom, with a ſecret Order not to fight, except it were altogether unavoidable; as alſo to endeavour by all means to induce Sujah to retire, and to reſerve his Forces for a better occaſion; that is to ſay, after they ſhould have ſeen the event of the ſickneſs of Chah-Jehan, and the ſucceſs of Aureng-Zebe, and of Morad-Bakche. But this young Prince, Soliman Chekouh, full of heat and Courage, breathing after nothing but to ſignalize himſelf by ſome great action, and Sultan Sujah fearing leſt Aureng-Zebe gaining a Battle ſhould firſt make himſelf Maſter of the Capital Towns of the Empire, Agra and Dehly; it was impoſſible for the Raja Jeſſeigne to keep them from a Combat. The two Armies are no ſooner in ſight of one another, but they prepare to fall on, and they were not long from giving ſome Vollies of Cannon. I ſhall not relate the particulars of this Fight, for, beſides that the narration of it would be too long and tedious, in the ſequel of this Hiſtory we ſhall be obliged to deſcribe more conſiderable ones, by which the Reader will be able to judge of this. 'Tis ſufficient to know in general, that the firſt onſet was very ſharp and obſtinate on both ſides, but that at length Soliman Chekouh did urge Sujah with that force and vigour that he diſordered him, and made him fly: So that if Jeſſeigne, and the Patan Delil-kan, who was one of the firſt Captains and a valiant Man, but an intimate friend of the Raja, and did not act but being moved by him, had ſeconded him in good earneſt, 'tis thought that the whole Army of Sujah would have been defeated, and himſelf in danger of being taken: But that was not the deſign of the Raja to deſtroy him, no more than it was that of Chah-Jehan, who had given him order to the contrary. Thus then had Sujah time to retreat, and that without loſing any conſiderable number of his Men; yet becauſe Soliman Chekouh kept the field, and brought away ſome pieces of Artillery, it was preſently bruited at Court, that Sujah had been totally overthrown. This Defeat purchaſed great reputation to Soliman Chekouh, leſſened much the eſteem of Sultan Sujah, and cooled exceedingly all the Perſians that had an inclination for him.

After that ſome days were ſpent in the purſuit of Sujah, the Prince Soliman Chekouh, who every day received News from the Court, and who learned that Aureng-Zebe and Morad-Backche did approach with great reſolution, well knowing, that his Father Dara had no great ſtock of Prudence, but good ſtore of ſecret Enemies, reſolved to quit the purſuit of Sultan Sujah, and with all ſpeed to return to Agra, where in all appearance Dara was to give Battel againſt Aureng-Zebe and Morad-Bakche. This was the beſt counſel he could take, for no man doubts, that if he could have been there in good time, Aureng-Zebe would not have had the Advantage; and 'tis even believed, he would never have hazarded the Combat, the Party being too unequal; but the bad fortune of Dara did not permit it.

Whilſt all that was thus tranſacted towards Elabas, which is the place where the Gemna is joyned to Ganges; the Scene was very different on the ſide of Agra. At the Court they were much ſurpriſed to hear, that Aureng-Zebe had paſſed the River of Brampour, and all the other paſſages that were moſt difficult between the Mountains; ſo that with all haſt they ſent away ſome Troops to diſpute with him the paſſage of the River Eugenes, whilſt the whole Army was making ready. For which purpoſe there were choſen two of the moſt conſiderable and the moſt powerful of the Kingdom to command it; the one was Kaſem-Kan, a Renowned Captain and very affectionate to Chah-Jehan, but one that had no great inclination to Dara, and who went not but to oblige Chah-Jehan, whom he ſaw in the hands of Dara: The other was Jeſſomſeigne, a potent Raja, not inferior to Jesseigne, and Son-in-law to that Raja Rana, who was at the time of Ekbar so puissant, as if he had been the Emperor of the Raja's. Dara at their farewel expressed to them great kindness, and presented them nobly; but Chah-Jehan took his time, before their departure, to charge them in secret, as he had done the Raja Jesseigne, when he went away in the Expedition against Sultan Sujah with Soliman Chekouh. Neither were they wanting, in their March, to send several times to Aureng-Zebe and Morad-Bakche, to perswade them to turn back: But this was in vain; their Envoys came not again, and the Army advanced with that diligence, that they saw it much sooner than they thought upon a riling ground, not far remote from the River.

It being then Summer, and the season of the greatest heats, the River was fordable; which was the cause, that at the same time Kasem-kan and the Raja prepared themselves to give Battel; besides that, they soon knew the resolution of Aureng-Zebe, that he would force them, since that, although his Army was not all come up, he gave them some Vollies of Cannon; his design being to amuse them, fearing lest they themselves should pass the River, not only to prevent his passage, but also to hinder his Army from reposing, and from taking an advantageous post; which was indeed in great disorder, and so tired by their March, and so faint by the heat, that if at the very first it had been assaulted, and kept from passing the Water, it would doubtless have been routed without much resistance. [I was not by in this first Encounter, but thus it was generally discoursed of, and it agreeth with the after-relation of many of our Frenchmen, who served Aureng-Zebe in the Artillery.] But they were content to stay at the River-side, to keep Aureng-Zebe from passing it, according to the Order they had received.

After that Aureng-Zebe had let his Army rest two or three days, and by amusing the Enemy, had fitted it to pass the River, he made his whole Artillery play, which was very well placed; and he commanded, that under the favour of the Cannon they should pass the River. Kasem-Kan and the Raja, on their part, discharged theirs also, and did what they could to repulse the Enemy, and to keep him from passing. The Combat was sharp enough at first, and very obstinately maintained by the extraordinary Valour of Jessomseigne. For as to Kasem-Kan, although a great Captain, and a stout Man, he gave no great proof of his Valour in this occasion; yea, some accuse him of Treachery, charging him that he had in the night caused the Bullets and Powder to be hid under the Sand, there being no more of them to be found after two or three discharges. However it be, the Combat for all that was, as I said, very resolutely carried on, and the Passage long disputed. There were Rocks in the Bed of the River, which did much embarass, and the Banks in many places were very high and difficult to climb up. But at last, Morad-Backche cast himself into the water with so much resolution and force, and shewed so much valour and boldness, that there was no resisting of him. He passed over, and with him a good part of the Army, which made Kasem-Kan to give back, and cast Jessomseigne into great danger of his Person. For by and by he found the whole Body of the Enemy upon him, and without the extraordinary resolution of his Ragipous, who almost all were killed about him, he had been a dead man. One may judge of the great danger he was in upon this occasion, by this, that after he had disengaged himself as well as he could, and was come back to his own, not daring to return to Agra, because of the great loss he had suffered, of seven or eight thousand Ragipous he had but five or six hundred of them remaining.

These Ragipous, who take their name from the Rajas, that is to say, the Children of the Rajas, are from Father to Son such Men as make the Sword their Profession. The Rajas, whose Subjects they are, do assign them Lands for their subsistence, on condition to be always ready to go to War when summoned. So that one might say, that they were a sort of Pagan Nobles, if the Rajas gave them their Lands in propriety for them and their Children. They are great takers of Opium; and I have sometimes wondred at the quantity I have seen them take: They accustom themselves to it from their youth. On the day of Battel they double the Dose, this Drug animating, or rather inebriating them, and making them insensible of danger; insomuch that they cast themselves into the Combate like so many furious Beasts, not knowing what it is to run away, but dying at the feet of their Raja, when he stands to it. They want nothing but Order, Resolution they have enough. 'Tis a pleasure thus to see them, with the fume of Opium in their Head to embrace one another, when the Battel is to begin, and to give their mutual Farewels, as men resolved to dye. And that they do for this reaſon; that the Great Mogol, though a Mahumetan, and by conſequence an Enemy of the Heathen, yet for all that entertains always a good number of Rajas in his ſervice, whom he conſiders as his other Omrahs, and imploys in his Armies as if they were Mahumetans.

I cannot forbear to relate here the fierce reception, which the Daughter of the Rana gave to her Husband Jeſſomſeigne, after his defeat and flight. When ſhe heard that he was nigh, and had underſtood what had paſſed in the Battel; that he had fought with all poſſible courage; that he had but four or five hundred Men left; and that at laſt, not being able to reſiſt any longer the Enemy, he had been obliged to retreat: She, in ſtead of ſending one to receive him, and to condole him in his misfortunes, commanded in a dry mood to ſhut the Gates of the Caſtle, and not to let this infamous Man enter; that he was not her Husband; that ſhe would never ſee him; that the Son-in-law of the Great Rana, could not have ſo low a Soul; that he was to remember, that being grafted into ſo Illuſtrious an Houſe, he was to imitate the Virtue of it; and, in a word, that he was either to vanquiſh, or to dye. A moment after ſhe was of another humour; ſhe commands a Pile of Wood to be laid, that ſhe might burn her ſelf, that they abus'd her; that her Husband muſt needs be dead; that it could not be otherwiſe. And a little while after this, ſhe was ſeen to change her countenance, to fall into paſſion, and to break out into a thouſand reproaches againſt him. In ſhort, ſhe remained thus tranſported eight or nine days, without being able to reſolve to ſee her Husband, 'till at laſt her Mother coming in, brought her in ſome degree to her ſelf, and comforted her, aſſuring her, that as ſoon as the Raja had but a little refreſh'd himſelf, he would raiſe another Army, to fight Aureng-Zebe, and repair his Honour at any rate.

By which ſtory one may ſee a pattern of the Courage of the Women in that Countrey: To which I could add ſomething I have ſeen ſome of them do, who burned themſelves alive after the death of their Husbands; but we muſt reſerve this Diſcourſe for another place, where I ſhall alſo ſhew, that there is nothing which opinion, prepoſſeſſion, cuſtom, hope, and the point of honour, &c. may not make Men do or ſuffer.

Dara having underſtood what had paſſed at Eugenes, fell into that choler againſt Kaſem Kan, that it was thought he would have cut off his Head, if he had been upon the place. He was alſo tranſported againſt Emir-Jemla, as the Perſon that was the firſt and principal cauſe of the Misfortune, and who had furniſh'd Aureng-Zebe with Men, Money, and Cannon. He is ready to kill his Son Mahmet Emir-Kan, and will ſend his Wife and Daughter to Baſar, or the Market-place of proſtituted Women; and 'tis paſt doubt, that he would have done ſome ſuch thing, if Chah-Jehan, with much art and prudence, had not moderated the exceſs of his paſſion, in remonſtrating to him, that Emir-Jemla had not ſo little conduct, nor ſo great a friendſhip for Aureng-Zebe, as to hazard, and in a manner to ſacrifice his Family, for the advancing of his Intereſt; that Aureng-Zebe muſt needs have gulled and enſnared him, by his uſual artifice and cunning.

As for Aureng-Zebe and Morad-Bakche, the happy ſucceſs of this firſt Encounter did ſo ſwell their hearts, and gave ſuch Courage to their whole Army, that henceforth they believed themſelves invincible, and capable to compaſs any thing. Beſides, Aureng-Zebe, the more to animate his Soldiers, bragged openly, that he had Thirty thouſand Mogals at his devotion in the Army of Dara; and there was ſomething in it, as appeared by the ſequel. Morad-Bakche was for nothing but fighting, and would march with all diligence. But Aureng-Zebe repreſented to him, that it was neceſſary the Army ſhould refreſh themſelves for ſome time upon the Banks of this ſweet River; that in the mean time he would write to all his Friends, and get a full and certain information of the ſtate of the Court, and of the condition of all Affairs. So that he marched not towards Agra, 'till he had reſted ſome days, and after that he marched but ſlowly, to inform himſelf of all, and to take his time and meaſures.

Concerning Chah-Jehan, when he plainly ſaw the reſolution of Aureng-Zebe and Morad-Bakche, and that there was no hope left to make them turn back, he was in ſuch a perplexity, that he knew not what to reſolve, and foreſeeing ſome great calamity, he would fain have hindred the laſt deciſive Battel, for which he ſaw Dara preparing himſelf with great eagerneſs. But what could he do to oppoſe it? He was yet too weak of his ſickneſs, and ſaw himſelf ſtill in the hands of Dara, whom, as I have ſaid, he truſted not much: So that he found himſelf obliged to acquieſce in his Will, and to commit mit to him all the Forces of the Empire, and to command all Captains to obey him. Immediately all was in Arms: I know not, whether there was ever a more gallant Army seen in Indostan. 'Tis said, that there were little less than an Hundred thousand Horse, and Twenty thousand Foot, with Four thousand pieces of Cannon, without reckoning the incredible number of Servants, Followers, Victuallers, whom Historians, methinks, do often put into the number of the Combatants, when they speak of those formidable Armies of Three or four hundred thousand men, of which their Books are full. Though this Army was very brave, and strong enough to cut in pieces two or three of such as Aureng-Zebe had, in which there were no more than Thirty Five or Forty thousand men in all, and these tired and harassed by a very long and irksom march, during the height of the Heats; and but a small number of Cannon, in respect of that of Dara. Mean time (which seems hard to believe) there was scarce any Body that presaged well for Dara, all knowing, that most of the chief Omrahs had no affection for him, and that all the good Soldiers that were for him, and whom he might confide in, were in the Army of Soliman Chekouh, his Son. And 'twas for this reason, that the most prudent and the most faithful of his Friends, and Chah-Jehan himself, counselled him, not to hazard a Battel: Chah-Jehan offering, as infirm as he was, that he would go into the Field himself, and be carried before Aureng-Zebe, to interpose; which was looked upon as a very good Expedient for Peace, and for accommodating the Affairs of Chah-Jehan. For 'tis certain, that Aureng-Zebe and Morad-Bakche, would never have had the boldness to fight against their own Father; and if they should have attempted it, they would have smarted for it, because, besides that the match was not equal, and all the great Omrahs were so affectionate to Chah-Jehan, that they would not have failed to fight resolutely, if they had seen him in the head of the Army; besides this, I say, the Captains themselves of Aureng-Zebe and Morad-Bakche, bore great affection and respect to this Prince, whose Creatures they most were; and the whole Army, in a manner, was his. So that in all appearance, not one of them would have presumed to draw his Sword against him, nor he been at the pains of drawing his.

Then they advised Dara, that if he would not hearken to this Expedient, he should at least not precipitate the business, but delay, 'till Soliman Chekouh, who made all haste to join, were come in. Which was also very good counsel, in regard that that Prince was beloved of all, and was lately come home victorious, and had the most faithful and the bravest Soldiers with him. But Dara would never hearken to any Proposition that could be made to him, and he thought on nothing else but to give Battel presently, and to go against Aureng-Zebe in person. And possibly he did not amiss, as to his own Honour and particular Interest, if he could have commanded Fortune, and made things succeed as he contrived them. For the Considerations he had (as he could not forbear now and then to discover) were some such as these:

He looked upon himself as Master of the person of Chah-Jehan; that he could dispose of him as he pleased; that he was also Possessor of all the Treasures and Forces of the Empire; that Sultan Sujah was half ruined; that his two other Brothers, with a weak and tired Army, were come to cast themselves into his hands; that, if he gained the Battel, they could not escape him; that he should all at once be absolute Master, and at the end of all his troubles, and at the height of his wishes, so as no body could contradict him in any thing, or dispute the Crown with him. Whereas if Chah-Jehan should take the Field, all Affairs would be accommodated, his Brothers would return to their Governments, Chah-Jehan, who began to recover his health, would resume the Government as before, and all things would return into their first Channel: That, if he should stay for Soliman Chekouh, his Son, Chah-Jehan might take some design to his disadvantage, or contrive something with Aureng-Zebe; that whatever he could do for gaining the Victory, the Reputation which Soliman Chekouh had purchased, would still give him all the honour of it. And after that, what would not he be capable to undertake, swelled with so much glory and success, and especially being supported, as he was, by the favour and affection of Chah-Jehan, and of the greatest part of the Omrahs? What did he know, whether he would keep any modesty, or any respect for him, and whither his Ambition might not carry him?

These Considerations made Dara resolve to stand out against the counsel of all, and to pursue his Point. And for that purpose, he commanded immediately the whole Army to take the Field, and thereupon came to take leave of Chah-Jehan, who was in the Fortress treſs of Agra. This good old Man was ready to melt in tears, when he embraced him; but withal failed not to repreſent to him, with a very grave countenance: Well, Dara, ſince thou art reſolved to follow thine own Will, Go, God bleſs thee, but remember well theſe few words: If thou loſeſt the Battel, take heed of ever coming into my Preſence. But this made no great impreſſion upon him; he goeth forth briskly, taketh Horſe, and ſeizeth on the Paſſage of the River Tchembel, which is about twenty miles from Agra; where he fortified himſelf, expecting his Enemy. But the ſubtile and crafty Fakire, who wanted no good Spies, and People that gave him intelligence of all, and who knew that the Paſſage was there very difficult, took good heed to attempt the forcing it. He came to encamp himſelf near it, ſo that from the Camp of Dara one might diſcover his Tents. But what doth he in the mean time? He inveigles a certain Rebel of Raja, called Chempet, preſents him richly, and promiſeth him a thouſand fine things, if he would let him paſs thorough his Territories, that ſo he might go with ſpeed to gain a certain place, where he knew that the River might be paſſed on foot with eaſe. Chempet agreeth, and offers of his own accord, that he would himſelf attend him, and ſhew him the way through the Woods and Hills of his Countrey. Aureng-Zebe raiſed his Camp the ſame night, without any noiſe, leaving ſome of his Tents to amuſe Dara, and marching night and day, made ſuch haſte, that he was almoſt as ſoon on the other ſide of the River, as Dara could have notice of it. Which obliged Dara to abandon the River there, and to leave all his Fortifications, and to follow his Enemy, who, he was told, did advance with great diligence towards Agra, to gain the River of Gemna, and there without trouble, and at his eaſe, to enjoy the water, to fortifie, and to fix himſelf well, and ſo to expect Dara. The place where he encamped is but five Leagues from Agra, it was formerly called Samonguer, and now Fateabad, which is to ſay, Place of Victory. A little while after, Dara alſo came to encamp there, nigh the Bank of the ſame River, between Agra, and the Army of Aureng-Zebe.

The two Armies were there between three and four days in ſight of one another, without fighting. Mean time Chah-Jehan wrote ſeveral Letters to Dara, that Soliman Chekouh was not far off; that he ſhould not precipitate; that he ſhould come near Agra, and chuſe an advantageous place to fortifie himſelf 'till he came. But Dara anſwered, that before three days were paſſed, he would bring to him Aureng-Zebe and Morad-Bakche tyed hand and foot, to do with them what he ſhould think fit. And without expecting any longer, he began at that very hour to put his Army in Battel-Array.

He placed in the Front all his Cannon, cauſing them to be tyed the one to the other with Chains, to ſhut the paſſage to the Cavalry. Behind theſe Peeces of Cannon, he placed alſo front-wiſe a great number of light Camels, on the forepart of the Bodies, whereof they faſten a ſmall Peece, of the bigneſs of a double Muſquet; a Man ſitting on the hind-part of the Camel, being able to charge and diſcharge without lighting. Behind theſe Camels ſtood the greateſt part of the Muſqueteers. Of the reſt of the Army, which chiefly conſiſted in Cavalry, furniſh'd with Bows and Arrows, (as ordinarily are the Mogols, that is, at preſent, White Men, Mahumetans, ſtrangers, as Perſians, Turks, Arabians, and Usbecks;) or with a Sword, and a kind of Halt-pike, as commonly are the Ragipous: Of all theſe, I ſay, there were made three different Bodies. The right Wing was committed to Calil-ullah-Kan, with thirty thouſand Mogols under his Command; for he was made Great Bakchis, that is, Great Maſter of the Cavalry, in the place of Danechmend-Kan, that was afterwards my Agah, who voluntarily reſigned this Office, ſeeing that he was not well-beloved of Dara, for having always highly maintained againſt him the Intereſt and Authority of Chah Jehan. The left Wing was given to Ruſtam-Kan Dakny, a very renowned and very valiant Captain, together with the Raja Chatreſale, and the Raja Kamſeigne Routlé.

On the other ſide, Aureng-Zebe and Morad-Bakche put alſo their Army almoſt into the ſame Order; except that in the midſt of the Troops of ſome Omrahs, they had hid ſome ſmall Field-Peeces, which was, as was ſaid, after the Way and Art of Emir-Jemla, and with no ill effect.

They hardly made uſe of any more Art, than what hath been now related; only they placed here and there ſome Men caſting Bannes, which is a kind of Granado faſtened to a ſtick, that may be caſt very far through the Cavalry, and which extremely terrifieth Horſes, and even hurts and kills ſometimes.

All this Cavalry turns about very eaſily, and they draw their Arrows with marvellous

ſwiftneſs; one Man being able to draw ſix of them, before a Muſqueteer can twice diſcharge his Muſquet. The ſame Cavalry keeps alſo very cloſe in ſeveral Troops under their reſpective Officers, eſpecially when they are going to fight hand to hand. But after all, I ſee not, that this way of putting an Army in Array, is any great matter, in compariſon of our Armies, when in good order.

All things being thus diſpoſed, the Artillery began to play on both ſides; for 'tis always the Cannon that makes the prelude amongſt them; and the Arrows were now ſeen to fly through the Air, when unexpectedly there hapned to fall a Storm of Rain, ſo violent, that it interrupted the Combat. The Rain ceaſing, the Cannon began afreſh to roar; and then it was that Dara appeared, who being mounted upon a proud Elephant of Ceilau, commanded that an Onſet ſhould be made on all ſides; and himſelf advanced into the midſt of the Body of the Cavalry, directly towards the Enemies Artillery, who received him warmly, kill'd ſtore of Men about him, and put into diſorder, not only the main Body which he commanded, but alſo the other Bodies of the Cavalry that followed him. Yet notwithſtanding, becauſe he was ſeen to keep firm upon his Elephant, without any appearance of giving back, and was obſerved to look every where about him with an undaunted look, and to make ſigns with his hands to advance and follow him, this diſorder ſoon ceaſed, every one reſuming his Rank, and advancing in the ſame place with Dara. But he could not reach the Enemy, without receiving another Volley of Cannon-ſhot, which cauſed a ſecond and great diſorder in his Men, and made a good part of them recoil; yet he, without any change in his Countenance, ſtood to it, encouraging his Troops, and gave ſtill ſigns, that they ſhould follow him, and advance with ſpeed without any loſs of time. Thus preſſing vigorouſly forward, he forced the Enemies Artillery, broke the Chains, entred into their Camp, and made a Rout in their Camels and Infantry, and in every thing he met with on that ſide; opening alſo a good paſſage to the Cavalry that followed him. Then it was, that the Enemies Cavalry facing him, a ſore Combat began. A ſhowre of Arrows filled the Air from both ſides, Dara himſelf putting his hand to that work: But, to ſay truth, theſe Arrows do but little Execution; more of them are loſt in the Air, or broken on the ground, than hit. The firſt diſcharges of Arrows being made, they fought hand to hand with their Sables, peſle meſle, and the Combat was ſtoutly maintained on both ſides. Dara is ſtill ſeen to continue firm on his Elephant, encouraging, making a noiſe, and giving ſigns on all ſides; and at laſt advancing with ſo much reſolution and force, againſt all that oppoſed him in his March, that he overthrew the Cavalry, and made them to retire and run away.

Aureng-Zebe, who was not far from thence, and mounted alſo on an Elephant, ſeeing this great diſorder, was in great trouble, and laboured with all his might to remedy it; but to no purpoſe. He made the main Body of his beſt Cavalry advance, to try whether he could make head againſt Dara; but it was not long before this Body alſo was forced to give back, and to retreat in great diſorder, whatever Aureng-Zebe could ſay or do to hinder it. Mean time let us take notice of his courage and reſolution: He ſaw that almoſt the whole Body of his Army was diſordered, and in a flying poſture, inſomuch that he had not a thouſand Men about him that kept their ſtanding; (ſome told me, that there were ſcarce five hundred:) He ſaw, that Dara, notwithſtanding the difficulty of the way, which was uneven, and full of holes in divers places, made as if he would ruſh in upon him: Yet, for all this, he loſt no courage, and was ſo far from being ſtruck with fear, or from retreating, that he ſtood firmly to it, and called by name moſt of his Captains that were about him, crying out to them, Delirane Kodahé, (theſe are his own words,) that is, Courage my old Friends, God is: What hope is there in flying? Know you not, where is our Decan? Kodahé, Kodahé, God is, God is. And that none might doubt of his being undaunted, and that he thought on nothing leſs than running away, he commanded before them all (oh ſtrange extremity!) that forthwith Chains ſhould be faſtned to the feet of his Elephant; and was going to faſten them in good earneſt, but that they all declared their courage and reſolution, to live and dye with him.

Dara in the interim endeavoured to advance upon Aureng-Zebe, though he was yet at a good diſtance from him, and though the difficulty of the way embaraſſed and retarded him much; he meeting alſo with ſome reſiſtance, even from theſe diſordered Horſe of the Enemy, that covered all high and low places where he was to march. And this Encounter with Aureng-Zebe was looked upon as the thing, that was to aſſure Dara of the the Victory, and to decide the Battel. And doubtleſs, he would have overcome all theſe difficulties, and Aureng-Zebe, with the ſmall number left him, would not have been able to bid head to this Victorious Army, if Dara had known how to profit of the prize he had in his hands. But here he failed; of which I ſhall now ſhew the occaſion, and how thereby the Scale was turned to Aureng-Zebe's advantage.

Dara perceived that his left Wing was in great diſorder, and he was informed, that Ruſtam-Kan and Chatreſale were killed; that Ramſeigne Routlé had too far advanced, that he had indeed forced the Enemy, and made way through the midſt of them; but that now he was ſurrounded every way, and in very great danger. This it was, which made Dara deſiſt from his deſign of making directly towards Aureng-Zebe, that he might go to ſuccour his left Wing. There at firſt the Battel was alſo very ſharp, but Dara at laſt carried it, forcing and routing all, yet ſo, as that there ſtill remained ſomething that reſiſted and ſtopped him. Mean time, Ramſeigne Routlé fought with ſo much courage and vigour as was poſſible. He wounded Morad-Bakche, and came ſo near him, that he began to cut the Girdles of his Elephant, to make him fall down; but the valour and good fortune of Morad-Bakche gave not time enough for it. In ſhort, never any Man fought and defended himſelf more bravely, than Morad-Bakche did on this occaſion: All wounded as he was, and preſſed by the Ragipous of Ramſeigne Routlé, who were round about him, he was not daunted, nor gave way in the leaſt, but knew ſo well to take his time, that although he was, beſides defending himſelf, to cover with his ſhield a Son of his, but of ſeven or eight years of Age, who was ſitting on his ſide, he made an Arrow-ſhot ſo luckily at Ramſeigne Routlé, that it made him fall dead to the ground.

Dara ſoon heard the ſad News of this Accident; but at the ſame time he underſtood alſo, that Morad-Bakche was in very great danger; the Ragipous fighting furiouſly, and like Lions, to revenge the death of their Maſter. And though he ſaw, on that ſide the way was very difficult, and that he ſtill found ſome ſmall Body oppoſing and retarding him; yet he was determined to ruſh through to Morad-Bakche: And doubtleſs this was the beſt he could do, and that, which was capable to repair the fault he had committed in not doing his buſineſs thoroughly with Aureng-Zebe. But his bad fortune kept him from it, or rather, one of the blackeſt Treacheries that ever was imagined, and the greateſt overſight that was ever committed, did cauſe the entire loſs and ruin of Dara.

Calil-ullah-Kan (he that commanded the thirty thouſand Mogols, which made the right Wing, and were alone able to defeat the whole Army of Aureng-Zebe) did, whilſt Dara and his left Wing fought with ſo much courage and ſucceſs, keep off, as idle as if he were not concerned in the fray, not permitting any one of his Horſemen to ſhoot an Arrow, with a pretence, that they were for a Reſerve, and that he had expreſs Order not to fight but in the laſt extremity. But the true cauſe was, that he reſerved in his breaſt the rancour of an old Affront, done him by Dara, when he commanded him to be ſtruck. But after all, this Treachery would have done no great miſchief, if this infamous Man had contented himſelf with this firſt Effect of his Reſentment: Behold, how far he carried his rage, and revengefulneſs! He cut himſelf off from his main Body, and taking only a few men with him, rid with all poſſible ſpeed towards Dara, at the ſame time when he was turning to fall on Morad-Bakche, and being come ſo near as to make himſelf be heard, cryed out with all his force; Mobbareck-bad, Hazaret, Salamet, Elhamdul-ella; God ſave your Majeſty, you have obtained the Victory; what will you do any longer upon your Elephant? Is it not enough, that you have expoſed your ſelf ſo long? if the leaſt of thoſe ſhots, that have been made into your Dais, had reached your Perſon, what would have become of us? Are there Traitors wanting in this Army? In the Name of God come down quickly and take Horſe. What remains more to be done, than to purſue theſe Run-aways. Let us do ſo, nor let us ſuffer that they ſhoulde eſcape our hands!

If Dara had had wit enough to diſcover the cheat, and to conſider upon a ſudden the conſequences of his not appearing any more upon the Elephant, and being no more ſeen by the whole Army, always eying him, or rather, if he had preſently commanded to cut off the Head of this Paraſitical Traitor, he had been Maſter of all. But the good Prince ſuffered himſelf to be blinded by theſe ſweet words: He hearkned to this advice, as if it had been very true and very ſincere; he deſcended from his Elephant, and took Horſe. But I know not whether there paſſed one quarter of an hour, but he perceived the Treachery of Calil ullah-Kan, and repented himſelf extremely of the great fault he had committed. He looks about him, he ſeeketh, he asketh where he is; he ſaith, he is a Traitor, he will kill him. But the perfidious Villain is by this time at a good diſtance; the occaſion is loſt. Would it be believed, that as ſoon as the Army perceived Dara to be no more upon the Elephant, they imagined that there was Treaſon, that Dara was killed; and all were ſtruck with ſuch a terror, that every one thought on nothing, but how to eſcape the hands of Aureng-Zebe, and to ſave himſelf? What ſhall I ſay? All the Army disbands and flyeth. A ſudden and ſtrange revolution! He that ſaw himſelf juſt now Victorious, finds himſelf in a few moments vanquiſhed, abandoned, and obliged to fly himſelf to ſave his life. Aureng-Zebe, by holding out firm a quarter of an hour upon his Elephant, ſeeth the Crown of Indoſtan upon his Head; and Dara for having come down a little too ſoon, ſeeth himſelf precipitated from the Throne, and the moſt unfortunate Prince of the World. Thus Fortune taketh pleaſure, to make the gain or loſs of a Battel, and the deciſion of a great Empire, depend upon a nothing.

Theſe great and prodigious Armies, 'tis true, do ſometimes great things; but when once terror ſeiſeth, and diſorder comes among them, what means of ſtopping the Commotion? 'Tis like a great River broke through its Dams; it muſt overrun all, without a Remedy. Whence it is, that as often as I conſider the condition of ſuch Armies, deſtitute of good order, and marching like flocks of Sheep, I perſwade my ſelf, that, if in theſe parts one might ſee an Army of five and twenty thouſand men, of theſe old Troops of Flanders, under the conduct of Monſieur le Prince, or Monſieur de Turenne, I doubt not at all, but they would trample under foot all thoſe Armies, how numerous ſoever they were. And this it is, that now maketh me not find it any longer ſtrange or incredible, what we are told of ten thouſand Greeks; and of fifty thouſand Men of Alexander, overcoming ſix or ſeven hundred thouſand Men of Darius; (if it be true, that there were ſo many, and that the Hiſtorian did not reckon the Servants, and all thoſe numbers of Men, which were to follow the Army, to furniſh it with Forrage, Cattle, Corn, and all other neceſſaries.) Bear only the firſt brunt, which would be no very difficult thing for us to do; and behold, they are all aſtoniſhed: Or, do like Alexander, ſet vigorouſly upon one place, if that hold not out, (which will be very hard for them to do) you may be ſure the work is done; all the reſt preſently take fright and flight together.

Aureng-Zebe, encouraged by ſuch a wonderful ſucceſs, is not wanting to turn every ſtone, to employ skill, dexterity, ſubtilty, craft, courage, to profit by all the Advantages, which ſo favourable an occaſion puts into his hands. Calil-ullah-Kan is preſently with him, offering him his Service, and all the Troops he could be Maſter of. He, on his ſide, wants not words of thanks and acknowledgments, nor a thouſand fair Promiſes: But he was very cautious to receive him in his own name; he carried him preſently and preſented him to Morad-Bakche, who, as we may eaſily think, received him with open Arms; Aureng-Zebe in the mean time congratulating and praiſing Morad-Bakche, for having fought ſo valiantly, and aſcribing to him all the honour of the Victory; treating him with the title of King and Majeſty before Calil-ullah-Kan, giving him uncommon reſpect, and doing ſubmiſſions to him becoming a Subject and Servant. In the interim, he labours night and day for himſelf, he writeth round about to all the Omrahs, making ſure to day of one, and next day of another. Chah-heſt-Kan, his Uncle, the great and old Enemy of Dara, by reaſon of an Affront he had received from him, did the ſame for him on his part; and as he is the Perſon who writeth beſt and ſubtilleſt of the Empire of Indoſtan, ſo he contributed not a little by his Cabals to the advancement of the Affairs of Aureng-Zebe, making ſtrong Parties every where againſt Dara.

In the mean time let us ſtill obſerve the artifice and diſſimulation of Aureng-Zebe. Nothing of what he doth, treateth, promiſeth, is for himſelf, or in his own Name; he hath ſtill (forſooth) the deſign of living as a Fakire: all is for Morad-Bakche, 'tis he that commands; Aureng-Zebe doth nothing; 'tis Morad-Bakche doth all, 'tis he that is deſigned to be King.

As for the unhappy Dara, he comes with all ſpeed to Agra, in a deſperate condition, and not daring to go ſee Chah-Jehan, remembring, doubtleſs, thoſe ſevere words which he let

let fall, when he took leave of him before the Battel; viz. That he ſhould remember not to come before him, if he were overcome. Yet, for all that, the good old Father ſent ſecretly a truſty Eunuch to him, to comfort him, to aſſure him of the continuance of his affection, to declare to him his trouble for his misfortune, and to remonſtrate to him, that the caſe was not yet deſperate, conſidering that there was a good Army with Soliman Chekouh, his Son, that he ſhould go to Dehli, where he ſhould find a thouſand Horſe in the Royal Stables; and that the Governor of the Fortreſs had Order to furniſh him with Money and Elephants; for the reſt, that he ſhould not go further than he needs muſt; that he would often write to him: And laſtly, that he very well knew how to find out and chaſtiſe Aurenge-Zebe.

I have been informed, that Dara was then in ſuch a confuſion, and ſunk ſo low, that he had not the power to anſwer a word to the Eunuch, nor the courage to ſend any one to Chah-Jehan; but that, after having ſent ſeveral times to Begum-Saheb, his Siſter, he went away at midnight, taking with him his Wife, his Daughters, and his Grandchild Sepe-Chekouh; and that (which is almoſt incredible) he was attended with not above three or four hundred perſons. Let us leave him in his Voyage to Dehli, and ſtay at Agra, to conſider the dexterity and craft, wherewith Aureng-Zebe proceeded to manage Affairs.

He well knew, that Dara, and thoſe of his Party, could yet place ſome hopes in the victorious Army of Soliman Chekouh, and therefore he reſolved to take it from him, or to make it uſeleſs to him. To this end, he wrote Letters upon Letters to the Raja Jeſſeigne, and to Delil-Kan, who were the chief Heads of the Army of Soliman Chekouh, telling them, that there was no hope left for Dara and his Party; that he had loſt the Battel; that his whole Army had ſubmitted to him; that all had abandon'd him; that he was fled alone towards Dehli; that he could never eſcape him, and that Orders were diſtributed every where to ſeize on him. And as for Chah-Jehan, that he was in a condition hopeleſs of recovery; that they ſhould take good care of what they had to do; and if they were Men of underſtanding, and would follow his fortune, and be his Friends, they ſhould ſeize on Soliman Chekouh, and bring him to him.

Jeſſeigne found himſelf perplexed enough, what he ſhould do, ſtill much apprehending Chah-Jehan and Dara, and more, to lay hands upon a Royal Perſon, well knowing, that ſome miſchief might therefore fall on him, ſooner or later, even from Aureng-Zebe himſelf. Beſides, he knew that Soliman Chekouh had too much courage to let himſelf be taken after that manner, and that he would rather die in defending of himſelf. Behold therefore, what he at laſt reſolved! After having taken counſel with Delil-Kan, his great Friend, and after they had renewed to one another the Oath of mutual Fidelity, he went directly to the Tent of Soliman Chekouh, who with great impatience expected him, (for he alſo had heard the News of the Defeat of Dara his father) and had already divers times ſent for him. To him he frankly diſcovered all things, ſhewed him the Letter of Aureng-Zebe, told him what courſe was beſt for him to take, repreſented to him the danger he was in; that there was no reaſon he ſhould truſt in Delil-Kan, or in Daoud-Kan, or in the reſt of his Army; but that, as ſoon as he could, he ſhould gain the Mountains of Serenaguer; that that was the beſt Expedient he could take; that the Raja of that Countrey being in unacceſſible places, and not apprehending Aureng-Zebe, would doubtleſs receive him gladly; and; for the reſt, he would ſoon ſee how things would go, and be always in a condition to come down from the Mountains, when he ſhould think good.

The young Prince underſtood well enough by this kind of diſcourſe, that there was no ground to truſt henceforth in this Raja, and that there was no more ſafety for his Perſon; and that the rather, becauſe he knew that Delil-Kan was altogether devoted to him, and he ſaw well enough, that there was a neceſſity to take this courſe ſuggeſted. Whereupon he ſoon commanded, that his Baggage ſhould be put up to march towards the Mountains. Some of his moſt affectionate Friends, as a good number of Manſeb-Dars, of Sajeds, and others, put themſelves in order to attend him; the reſt of the Army, altogether aſtoniſhed, remain'd with the Raja. But that, which was very mean for a great Raja, and a very ſordid barbarouſneſs, was, that he and Delil-Kan ſent under hand ſome to fall upon his Baggage, who alſo took other things, and among them an Elephant laden with Rupies of Gold, which cauſed a great diſorder among thoſe ſmall Troops that followed him; and which was an occaſion, that many of them return'd and abandon'd him; and invited also the Country-people to set upon his Men, pillaging them, and even killing some of them: Yet he made a shift to gain the Mountains, with his Wife and Children, where the Raja of Serenaguer received him with all the honour and civilities he could desire, assuring him, that he was in safety, as much as if he were King of that Countrey, and that he would protect and assist him with all his Forces. In the mean time, behold what hapned on Agra's side.

Three or four days after the Battel of Samonguer, the Victorious Aureng-Zebe, together with Morad-Bakche, came directly to the Gate of the Town into a Garden, which may be a little League distant from the Fortress, and sent from thence an able Eunuch, and one of those whom he most confided in, to Chah-Jehan, to salute him with a thousand fair Protestations of his affection and submission; that he was exceedingly sorry for what had passed, and for having been obliged, by reason of the ambition and evil designs of Dara, to proceed to all those extremities; that, for the rest, he rejoyced extremely to hear, that he began to find himself better, and that he was come thither for no other end than to receive his Commands. Chah-Jehan was not wanting to express to the Eunuch much satisfaction, as to the proceedings of Aureng-Zebe, and to receive the Submissions of this Son with all possible appearances of joy; though he saw very well, that matters had been carried too far, and sufficiently knew the reserved and crafty humour of Aureng-Zebe, and his secret passion for Reigning; and that therefore he was not much to be trusted, for all his fair words. And yet notwithstanding he suffers himself to be circumvented, and instead of playing the surest Chart, by using his utmost power, by stirring, by appearing, by causing himself to be carried through the Town, and by assembling all his Omrahs, (for it was yet time to do all this) he goes about to outwit Aureng-Zebe, him that was his Crafts-Master, and attempts to draw him into a snare, wherein he will be found taken himself. He then sends also an Eunuch to this Son, to let him know, that he well understood the ill conduct, and even the incapacity of Dara; that he could not but call to mind the particular inclination he always had and expressed towards him, that he could not doubt of his affection; and lastly, that he should come to see him, and to advise with him what was fit to be done in these disorders; and that he passionately wished to embrace him.

Aureng-Zebe, on his side, saw also well enough, that he was not to trust too much to the words of Chah-Jehan, knowing especially, that Begum-Sahcb, his Enemy as well as Sister, was night and day about him, and that 'twas very probable, he acted nothing but by her motion. And he apprehended, that if he should come into the Fortress, he might be seized on, and ill-treated; as it was said, that the resolution was indeed taken to do so, and several of those lusty Tartarian Women, which serve in the Seraglio, were armed to set upon him as soon as he should enter. Whatever it be, he would never hazard himself, and yet spread a rumour abroad, that the next day he would go to see his Father Chah-Jehan. But when the day was come, he put it off till another, and so he delayed it from day to day, without ever making the Visit. In the mean time he continued his secret Negotiations and Cabals, and sounded the mind of all the greatest Omrahs, so far, that at last, after he had well and closely laid his Design, and politickly disposed all things for the success thereof, all were amazed to see, that one day, when he had sent Sultan Mahmoud, his eldest Son, to the Fortress, under a pretence of seeing Chah-Jehan in his name; this young Prince, bold and undertaking, falls presently on the Guards that were at the Gate, and vigorously driveth all before him, whilst a great number of Men appointed, who were there all ready, did enter with fury, and made themselves Masters of the Walls.

If ever a man was astonished, Chah-Jehan was, seeing that he was fallen into the snare which he had prepared for others, that himself was imprisoned and Aurenge-Zebe Master of the Fortress. 'Tis said, that he presently sent to sound the mind of Sultan Mahmoud, promising him upon his Crown and upon the Alcoran, that if he would be faithful to him, and serve him in this conjuncture, he would make him King; that he should come presently to see him within, and not lose this occasion: Besides, that it would be an action that would accumulate on him the blessings of Heaven, and an immortal Glory; in regard it would be said for ever, that Sultan Mahmoud had delivered Chah-Jehan his Grandfather out of Prison.

And certainly, if Sultan Mahmoud had been resolute enough to give this stroke, and Chah-Jehan could have come abroad to shew himself to the Town, and to take the Field, no no man doubts, but all his great Omrahs would have followed him; nor would Aureng-Zebe himſelf have had the boldneſs nor the ſavageneſs to fight againſt his own Father in Perſon, eſpecially ſince he muſt have apprehended, that all the world would have abandon'd him, and poſſibly Morad-Bakche himſelf. And 'tis indeed the great fault which Chah-Jehan is obſerved to have committed after the Battel, and the flight of Dara, not to have come out of the Fortreſs. But yet I have converſed with many, who maintained that Chah-Jehan did prudently in it. For this hath been a queſtion much agitated among the Politicians, and there are no reaſons wanting to countenance the Sentiment of the latter ſort; who alſo add, that Men almoſt always judge of things by the Event; that often very fooliſh Enterpriſes have been obſerved to ſucceed, and which therefore are approved by all; that if Chah-Jehan had proſpered in his deſign, he would have been eſteemed the moſt prudent and the moſt able Man in the World; but now being taken, he was nothing but a good old Man, that ſuffer'd himſelf to be led by a Woman, his Daughter Begum; which was blinded by her paſſion, and had the vanity to believe, that Aureng-Zebe would come to ſee her, that the Bird of it ſelf would fly into the Cage, or at leaſt, that he would never be ſo bold as to attempt the ſeiſure of the Fortreſs, nor have the power to do ſo. Theſe ſame Reaſoners maintaining alſo ſtifly, that the greateſt fault that Sultan Mahmoud could poſſibly commit, was, that he knew not how to take the occaſion to aſſure himſelf of the Crown, by the rareſt and the moſt generous Action that ever was, to put his Grandfather at liberty, and thus to do himſelf Right and Juſtice, as the Soveraign Umpire of Affairs; whereas, as things now ſtand, he muſt one day go and dye in Goualeor. But Sultan Mahmoud (whether it was that he feared his Grandfather would not keep his word with him, or that he ſhould be himſelf detained within, or that he durſt not play tricks with his Father Aureng-Zebe) would never hearken to any thing, nor enter into the Apartment of Chah-Jehan, anſwering very cloſely, that he had no order from his Father to go and ſee him, but that he was by him commanded not to return, without bringing him the Keys of all the Gates of the Fortreſs, that ſo he might come with all ſafety to kiſs the Feet of his Majeſty. There paſſed almoſt two whole days before he could reſolve to ſurrender the Keys; during which time, Sultan Mahmoud ſtaid there, unalterable in his reſolutions, keeping himſelf upon his Guard night and day, with all his Troops about him; till at length Chah-Jehan, ſeeing that all his people that were upon the Guard at the little Gate, little by little disbanded, and that there was no more ſafety on his ſide, gave him the Keys, with an order to tell Aureng-Zebe, that he ſhould come preſently if he were wiſe, and that he had moſt important things to diſcourſe with him about. But Aureng-Zebe was too cunning to commit ſo groſs a fault: On the contrary, he made his Eunuch Etbarkan Governor of the Fortreſs, who preſently ſhut up Chah-Jehan, together with Begum-Saheb, and all his Women; cauſing divers Gates to be walled up, that ſo he might not be able to write or ſpeak to any body, nor go forth out of his Apartment without permiſſion.

Aureng-Zebe in the mean time writ to him a little Note, which he ſhewed to every body before he ſealed it; in which, among other things, he told him with dry expreſſions, that he knew from good hands, that notwithſtanding thoſe great proteſtations of eſteem and affection he made to him, and of contempt he made of Dara, he had, for all that, ſent to Dara two Elephants charged with Rupies of Gold, to raiſe him again, and to re-commence the War; and that therefore, in truth, it was not he that impriſoned him, but Dara, and that he might thank him for it, as the cauſe of all theſe misfortunes; and if it had not been for him, he would have come the very firſt day to him, and paid him all the moſt dutiful reſpects he could have looked for from a good Son: That, for the reſt, he begged his pardon, and a little patience; as ſoon as he ſhould have diſenabled Dara from executing his evil deſigns, he would come himſelf and open the Gates to him.

I have heard it ſaid concerning this Note, that Chah-Jehan in very deed, the ſame night that Dara departed, had ſent to him theſe Elephants laden with Rupies of Gold, and that it was Rauchenara-Begum that found a way to diſcover it to Aureng-Zebe; as ſhe alſo had detected to him that Plot, which was laid againſt him with thoſe Tartarian Women; and that Aureng-Zebe himſelf had intercepted ſome Letters of Chah-Jehan to Dara.

I have

I have converſed with others, that maintain there is no ſuch thing, and that this Writing, which Aureng-Zebe ſhewed to all, was only to caſt Sand into the Eyes of the People, and to labour, in ſome degree, to juſtifie himſelf in ſo ſtrange an action, and to devolve the Cauſe of it upon Chah-Jehan and Dara, as if he had been forced to ſuch proceedings. They are things, which are difficult enough well to diſcover. However it be, as ſoon as Chah-Jehan was ſhut up, almoſt all the Omrahs were in a manner neceſſitated to go and make their Court to Aureng-Zebe and Morad-Bakche; and (which is almoſt incredible) there was not one that had the Courage to ſtir, or to attempt the leaſt in the behalf of his King, and for him that had made them what they were, and raiſed them from the duſt, and perhaps from ſlavery it ſelf (which is ordinary enough in that Court) to advance them to Riches and Honour. Yet ſome few there are, as Danechmend-Kan, and ſome others, that took no ſide; but all the reſt declared for Aureng-Zebe.

'Tis notwithſtanding to be noted what I ſaid, that they were neceſſitated to do what they did. For 'tis not in the Indies, as in France, or other States of Chriſtendom, where the Grandees and Nobles have large Poſſeſſions of Land, and great Revenues, which enables them for a while to ſubſiſt of themſelves. There they have nothing but Penſions (as I have already touched above) which the King can take away from them at all hours, and thus ruin them in an inſtant; ſo that they ſhall be conſidered no more than if they never had been, nor have any credit to borrow a farthing.

Aureng-Zebe therefore having thus aſſured himſelf of Chah-Jehan, and of all the Omrahs, took what Sums of Money he thought fit out of the Treaſury; and then having left Chah-beſt-Kan, his Uncle, Governor of the Town, he went away with Morad-Bakche to purſue Dara.

The day that the Army was to march out of Agra the particular Friends of Morad-Bakche, eſpecially his Eunuch Chah-Abas, who knew, that the exceſs of civility and reſpect is ordinarily a ſign of impoſture, counſelled him, that ſince he was King, and every body treated him with the Title of Majeſty, and Aureng-Zebe himſelf acknowledged him for ſuch, he ſhould let him go to purſue Dara, and ſtay himſelf with his Troops about Agra and Dehli. If he had followed this counſel, 'tis certain, that he would have embaraſſed Aureng-Zebe not a little; but 'twas fatal, that he ſhould neglect ſo good advice: Aureng-Zebe is too fortunate; Morad-Bakche entirely confideth in his promiſes, and in the Oaths of Fidelity they had ſworn to one another upon the Alcoran. They went away together, and went with the ſame pace towards Dehli.

When they were come to Maturas, three or four ſmall days Journey from Agra, the friends of Morad-Bakche, who perceived ſomething, endeavoured again to perſwade him, that he ſhould beware; aſſuring him that Aureng-Zebe had evil deſigns, and that beyond all doubt ſome miſchief was upon the Anvil; that they had notice of it from all parts, and that by no means, for that day at leaſt, he ſhould go to ſee him; that it would be much better to prevent this ſtroke the ſooneſt it might be; that he was only to forbear going to viſit him that day, excuſing himſelf with ſome Indiſpoſition. But whatſoever could be ſaid to him he believed nothing of it, his Ears were ſtopped to all the good advice that was given him, and as if he had been enchanted by the friendſhip of Aureng-Zebe, he could not hold to go to him that very night, and to ſtay at Supper with him. As ſoon as he was come, Aureng-Zebe, who expected him, and had already prepared all things with Mirkan, and three or four of his moſt intimate Captains, was not wanting in embracements, and in redoubling his Courtſhip, Civilities and Submiſſions, inſomuch as gently to paſs his hankerchief over his face, and to wipe off his ſweat and duſt, treating him ſtill with the title of King and Majeſty. In the mean time the Table is ſerved, they ſup, the converſation grows warm, they diſcourſe of various things as they uſe to do; and at laſt there is brought a huge Bottle of excellent Chiras Wine, and ſome other Bottles of Caboul Wine, for a Debauch. Then Aureng-Zebe, as a grave ſerious Man, and one that would appear a great Mahumetan, and very regular, nimbly riſeth from Table, and having with much kindneſs invited Morad-Bakche, who loved a Glaſs of Wine very well, and who reliſhed the Wine that was ſerved, ſcrupled not to drink of it to exceſs. In a word, he made himſelf drunk, and fell aſleep. This was the thing that was wiſhed; for preſently ſome Servants of his that were there, were commanded away, under a pretence, to let him ſleep without making any noiſe; and then his Sable and Ponyard were taken from about him: But Aureng-Zebe was not long, but came himſelf and wakened him. He entred into the Chamber, and roughly hit him with his foot, and when he began to open a little his Eyes, he made to him this ſhort and ſurpriſing Reprimand: What means this, ſaid he, What ſhame and what ignominy is this, that ſuch a King as you are, ſhould have ſo little temper, as thus to make himſelf drunk? What will be ſaid both of you and me? Take this infamous Man, this Drunkard, tye him hand and foot, and throw him into that room to ſleep out his Wine. No ſooner ſaid, but it was executed; notwithſtanding all his appeal and out-cry, five or ſix perſons fall upon him, and fetter his hands and feet. The things could not be done, but ſome of his Men that were thereabout had news of it. They made ſome noiſe, and would enter forcibly; but Allah-Couly, one of his chief Officers, and the Maſter of his Artillery, that had been gained long before, threatned them, and made them draw back. Without any delay, Men were ſent through the whole Army to calm this firſt Commotion, which alſo might have proved dangerous; they made them believe it was nothing, they having been preſent, that Morad-Bakche was only drunk, that in that condition he had railed at every body, and Aureng-Zebe himſelf, inſomuch that there had been a neceſſity, ſeeing him drunk and furious, to keep him apart; that the next day they would ſee him abroad, after he had digeſted his Wine. In the mean time, the Preſents walked about all night amongſt the chief Officers of the Army, their Pay was forthwith encreaſed, they had great Promiſes made them; and as there was none, that had not long ſince apprehended ſome ſuch thing, there was no great wonder to ſee almoſt all things quieted the next morning; ſo that the very next night this poor Prince was ſhut up in a little cloſe houſe, ſuch an one as is wont to be placed on Elephants to carry Women, and he was carried directly to Dehli into Slimager, which is a little old Fortreſs in the midſt of the River.

After that all was thus appeaſed, except the Eunuch Chah-Abas, who cauſed difficulty enough, Aureng-Zebe received the whole Army of Morad-Bakche into his Service, and went after Dara, who marched apace towards Lahor, with an intention well to fortifie himſelf in that place, and thither to draw his Friends. But Aureng-Zebe followed him with ſo much ſpeed, that he had not time to do any great matter, finding himſelf neceſſitated to retreat, and to take the way of Multan, where alſo he could do nothing conſiderable, becauſe that Aureng-Zebe, notwithſtanding the great heat, marched night and day; inſomuch, that to encourage all to make haſte, he ſometimes advanced almoſt all alone two or three Leagues before the whole Army, finding himſelf often obliged to drink ill water like others, to be content with a cruſt of dry bread, and to ſleep under a Tree, ſtaying for his Army in the midſt of the high-way, laying his head on his Shield like a common Souldier. So that Dara found himſelf conſtrained to abandon Multan alſo, that he might avoid being near Aureng-Zebe, whom he was not able to encounter. Here 'tis that the Stateſmen of this Countrey have reaſoned very diverſly: For 'tis ſaid, that if Dara, when he went out of Lahor, had caſt himſelf into the Kingdom of Caboul, as he was adviſed, he would there have found above ten thouſand warlick Men, deſigned againſt the Augans, the Perſians, and the Usbecs, and for a Guard to that Countrey, the Governor whereof was Mohabet-Kan, one of the moſt potent and the moſt ancient of Indoſtan, and that had never been Aureng-Zebe's Friend; that, beſides, he would have been there at the Gate of Perſia and Usbec; that he was likely, that there being no want of Money, all that Militia and Mohabet-Kan himſelf, would have embraced his Party; and that further, he might have drawn aſſiſtance, not only from Usbec, but alſo from Perſia, as well as from Houmayon, whom the Perſians had reſtored to his Country againſt Zaher-Kan, King of the Patans, who had driven him thence. But Dara was too unfortunate to follow ſo good advice. Inſtead of that he went towards Scimdy, to caſt himſelf into the Fortreſs of Tatabakar, that ſtrong and famous place, ſeated in the midſt of the River Indus.

Aureng-Zebe ſeeing him take this way, found it not fit to follow him further off, being extremely glad that he had not taken the way to Caboul. He contented himſelf to ſend after him ſeven or eight thouſand Men, under the Conduct of Mir-baba, his Foſter-brother, and turned back with the ſame expedition to the place whence he was come, much apprehending leſt any thing ſhould fall out about Agra; leſt ſome or other of thoſe potent Rajah's, as Jeſſeigne, or Jeſſomſeigne, ſhould make an attempt in his absence, to free Chah-Jehan out of Prison; or left Soliman Chekouh, together with the Raja of Serenaguer, should descend from the Hills; or left also Sultan Sujah should approach too near Agra. Behold a little Accident, which one day befell him, for too great precipitation.

When he thus returned from Multan towards Labor, and marched his ordinary swift pace, he saw the Raja Jesseigne come against him, accompanied with four or five thousand of his Ragipous, in a very good equipage; Aureng-Zebe, who had left his Army behind, and who also knew that this Raja was very affectionate to Chah-Jehan, was sufficiently surprised, as may easily be imagined, fearing lest this Raja should make use of this occasion, and do a Master-piece of State, by seising on him, to draw Chah-Jehan out of Prison, which at that time was very easie to do. Neither is it known, whether this Raja had not some such design; for he had marched with extraordinary speed, insomuch that Aureng-Zebe had no news of it, believing him yet to be at Dehli. But what may not resolution and presence of mind do? Aureng-Zebe, without any alteration of his Countenance, marched directly towards the Raja, and as far off as he could see him, maketh signs to him with his hands, importing that he should make hast to a nearer approach, crying out to him with a loud voice, Salamed Bached Rajagi, Salamed Bached Babagi, treating him with the Titles of Lord Raja, and Lord Father. When the Raja was come to him; I expected you, said he, with great impatience; the work is done, Dara is lost, he is all alone; I have sent Mir-baba after him, from whom he cannot escape: And for an excess of kindness to him, he took off his Neck-lace of Pearls, and put it about the Neck of this Raja: And the sooner to rid himself handsomely of him, (for he wished him far enough) Go, saith he, with all the expedition you can to Labor, my Army is somewhat tyred; go quickly to attend me there; I apprehend that else something sinister might fall out there; I make you Governor of that place, and put all things into your hands. For the rest, I am exceedingly obliged to you for what you have done with Soliman Chekouh: Where have you left Delil-Kan? I shall find my revenge of him. Make all possible dispatch, Salamed Bached, Farewell.

Dara being arrived at Tata-baker, made Governor of that place a very understanding, gallant, and generous Eunuch, with a very good Garrison of Patans and Sayeds; and for Cannoneers, a good number of Franguis, Portugals, English, French, and Germans, who had followed him out of great hopes he had given them, (for, if his Affairs had prospered and he were become King, we must all have resolved to be Omrahs, as many Franguis as we were.) He there left also the greatest part of his Treasure; he wanted as yet no Gold nor Silver; and staying there but a very few days, he marched away with two or three thousand Men only, descending along the River Indus towards Scindy, and from thence crossing with an incredible celerity all those Territories of the Raja Katche, he arrived in Guzaratte, and came to the Gates of Amadevat. The Father-in-law of Aureng-Zebe, called Chah-Navaze-Kan, was Governor there, with a very good Garrison, able to resist. Yet notwithstanding, whether it was that he was surprised, or that he wanted courage (for although he was of those ancient Princes of Machate, yet he was no great Souldier, though a Man of a very obliging and civil conversation) he did not oppose Dara, but rather received him very honourably, and even managed him afterwards with so much dexterity, that Dara was so simple as to trust himself with him, and to communicate to him his Designs; insomuch as that he shewed him the Letters which he received from the Raja Jessomseigne, and of many other of his Friends, which prepared themselves to come to him; although it proved too true, what every body told him, and his Friends confirmed by Letters, that certainly this Chah-Navaze-Kan would betray him.

Never was any man more surprized than Aureng-Zebe, when he heard that Dara was in Amadevat: For he well knew, that he wanted no Money, and that all his Friends, and all the discontented Party, which was numerous, would not fail to betake themselves by little and little to him: And on the other side, he found it not safe to go and find him out himself in that place, by removing himself so far from Agra and Chah-Jehan, to go and embarase himself in all those Countries of the Rajah's, Jesseigne, Jessomseigne, and others, that are in those Provinces. Besides, he apprehended, lest Sultan Sujah should advance with a strong Army, which was already about Elabas, and lest the Raja of Serenaguer should descend from the Hills with Soliman Chekouh: So that he was ſufficiently perplexed and troubled, not knowing which way to turn. At laſt he believed it beſt to leave Dara for a time quiet where he was, and to go thither where his preſence and Army was moſt neceſſary, which was towards Sultan Sujah, who had already paſſed the River Ganges at Elabas.

This Sultan Sujah was come to encamp in a little Village called Cadjoue, and had conveniently ſeized himſelf of a great Talab, or Reſervatory of Water, which is there in the way; and Aureng-Zebe came to place himſelf on the ſide of a ſmall Torrent, at the diſtance of a mile and an half from thence, on Agra's ſide. Between both was a very fair Campagne, very proper for a Battel. Aureng-Zebe was no ſooner arrived, but being impatient to end this War, at break of day he went to face Sujah, leaving his Baggage on the other ſide of the Torrent. He fell upon Sujah with an effort unimaginable. Emir-Jemla, Priſoner of Decan, and who arrived juſt on the day of the Combat, fearing Dara no more, becauſe his Family was more in ſafety, did there alſo lay out all his force, courage, and dexterity. But ſeeing that Sultan Sujah had well fortified himſelf, and was accompanied with a very good Artillery, advantageouſly placed, it was not poſſible for Aureng-Zebe to force him, nor to make him retreat from thence, ſo as to make him loſe thoſe Waters. On the contrary, he was obliged himſelf to draw back ſeveral times, ſo vigorouſly was he repulſed, inſomuch that he found himſelf in great perplexity. Sultan Sujah not being willing to advance too far into the Campagne, nor to remove from that advantagious place where he was, pretending only to defend himſelf; which was very prudently done. For he foreſaw, that Aureng-Zebe could not ſtay there long, and that in that hot ſeaſon he would be abſolutely obliged to turn back towards the Torrent for the Water; and that, when he ſhould do ſo he would fall upon his Rear, Aureng-Zebe alſo foreſaw well enough the ſame thing, and that was the reaſon why he was ſo forward and preſſing; but behold another more troubleſome accident.

In this very time he receiveth intelligence, that the Raja Jeſſomſeigne, who in appearance had accommodated himſelf with him, was fallen upon his Rear, and plundred his Baggage and Treaſure. This News aſtoniſhed him much, and the more, becauſe he perceived that his Army which had heard of it was thereby frighted, and fallen into diſorder. Yet he loſes not his judgment for all this; and being well aware, that to turn back was to hazard all, he reſolved, as in the Battle of Dara, to bear up the beſt he could, and to expect with a ſteady foot all Events. In the mean time, the diſorder grew worſe and worſe in his Army: Sujah, who was reſolved to profit of the occaſion, taketh his time, and preſſeth him vigorouſly. He that led Aureng-Zebe's Elephant is killed with the ſhot of an Arrow; he leads the Beaſt as well as he can himſelf, till another could be had in that Leaders place. Arrows rain upon him; he returns many himſelf, his Elephant begins to be frighted, and to go back. Behold him now in great extremity, and brought to that point, that one foot of his was out of the ſeat, as if he meant to caſt himſelf to the ground; and no man knows what in that trouble he had not done, if Emir-Jemla, being nigh, and performing like a great Man as he was, beyond imagination, called to him, in holding up his hand Decan-kou, Decan-kou, where is Decan? This ſeems to have been the greateſt extremity, to which Aureng-Zebe could be reduced. One would have ſaid, 'twas now and here that Fortune had abandon'd him, and there is almoſt no appearance of a poſſibility to eſcape. But his good Fortune is ſtronger than all that: Sultan Sujah muſt be routed, and take flight, like Dara, to ſave his life: Aureng-Zebe muſt remain Victorious, carry away the Bell, and be King of the Indies.

We are to remember the Battel of Samenguer, and that, in appearance, ſlight accident which ruined Dara: 'Tis the ſame over-ſight, or rather the ſame Treaſon, which is now deſtroying Sultan Sujah. One of his chief Captains, Allah-verdi-Kan, who (as ſome ſay) had been gained, uſeth the ſame Artifice that Calil-ullah-Kan had employed towards Dara; though there were ſome who believed, that there was no malice in the caſe, and that it was a meer piece of Flattery. For ſeeing that the whole Army of Aureng-Zebe was in diſorder, he ran towards Sultan Sujah, telling him the ſame thing, that Calil-ullah Kan did to Dara, and begging of him with folded hands, that he would ſtay no longer in ſo great danger upon his Elephant. Come down, ſaid he, in the name of God, mount on Horſe-back, God hath made you Sovereign of the Indies, let us purſue thoſe Fugitives, let not Aureng-Zebe eſcape us.

But not to ſtay long from declaring the ſtrange Fortune of Aureng-Zebe, and the incredible conjuncture that recovers his deſperate condition; Sultan Sujah, not more conſiderate than Dara, commits the ſame Fault; and he was no ſooner come down from his Elephant, but his Army ſeeing him no more, was ſtruck with a terror, believing there was Treaſon, and that he was either taken or ſlain. Whereupon they disbanded, without any more ado, as Dara's Army did in the Battel of Samonguer; and the Defeat was ſo great, that the Sultan was fortunate in that he could ſave himſelf.

Jeſſomſeigne hearing this unexpected News, and perceiving it was not very ſafe for him to tarry there, contented himſelf with the Spoil he had got, and with all diligence marched ſtreight to Agra, thence to paſs to his Countrey. The noiſe was already in Agra, that Aureng-Zebe had loſt the Battel; that he was taken, together with Emir-Jemla, and that Sultan-Sujah brought them both Priſoners. Inſomuch, that Chahbeſt-Kan, who was Governor of the Town, and Uncle to Aureng-Zebe, ſeeing Jeſſomſeigne, whoſe Treachery he had heard of, at the Gates, and deſpairing of his Life, had taken into his hand a Cup of Poyſon to make himſelf away, and had, as they ſay, in very deed ſwallowed it, if his Women had not fallen upon him, and hindred him: So that 'tis thought, if Jeſſomſeigne had had the wit and courage to ſtay longer in Agra, if he had threatned boldly, and promiſed and acted vigorouſly for the freedom of Chah-Jehan, he might have drawn him out of Priſon; ſo much the more eaſily, becauſe all Agra was for two whole days in that belief, that Aureng-Zebe was overcome. But Jeſſomſeigne, who knew how all things went, and who durſt not long ſtay there, nor attempt any thing, did nothing but paſs, returning with all ſpeed homewards.

Aureng-Zebe, who apprehended miſchief from Agra, and fear'd leſt Jeſſomſeigne ſhould undertake ſomething for Chah-Jehan, was not long in the purſuit after Sultan Sujah; he turn'd ſhort for Agra with his whole Army, where he ſtay'd a good while, giving order for all things. Mean time he received intelligence, that Sultan Sujah had not loſt many Men in his being routed, for want of farther purſuit; that alſo from the Lands of the Raja's, which are in thoſe quarters, on the right and left of Ganges, he raiſed great Forces, upon the ſcore of the reputation he had of being very rich, and very liberal, and that he fortified himſelf in Elabas, that important and famous Paſſage of Ganges, which, with its Fortreſs, is the firſt In-let into Bengale. And then he conſidered alſo, that he had about him two Perſons, which indeed were very capable to ſerve him, Sultan Mahmoud his eldeſt Son, and Emir-Jemla; but he well knew, that thoſe who have done good ſervice to their Prince, grow often inſolent, in the belief, that all is due to them, and that they cannot be recompenced enough. He perceived already, that the former of them began very much to emancipate himſelf, and that every day he became more arrogant, for having ſeized on the Fortreſs of Agra, and by that means had broken all the Deſigns which Chah-Jehan could have formed. And as to the latter, he knew indeed the force of his Underſtanding, his Conduct, and Valour; but that was the very thing which made him apprehend him the more: For knowing that he was very rich, that his Reputation was great, that he paſſed for the Firſt Mover in Affairs, and for the ableſt Man in all the Indies, he doubted not, but that after the Example of Sultan Mahmoud, he entertain'd himſelf with big hopes. All this certainly would have been able to perplex an ordinary Spirit, but Aureng-Zebe found a Remedy to all. He knew to remove them both with ſo much prudence, and even with ſo much handſomneſs, that neither of them found any cauſe to complain of it. He ſent them both againſt Sultan Sujah with a puiſſant Army, letting Emir ſecretly know, that the Government of Bengale, which is the beſt quarter of Indoſtan, was deſign'd for him, to hold it during his life, and for his Son after his deceaſe; and that thereby he would begin to expreſs to him his acknowledgments for the great Services he had done him; and that therefore it belonged only to him to defeat Sujah, and that as ſoon as he ſhould have compaſſed it, he would make him Mir-ul Omrahs, which is the firſt and the moſt honourable place of Indoſtan, and no leſs than the Prince of the Omrahs.

To Sultan Mahmoud his Son, he ſaid only theſe few words: Remember that thou art the Eldeſt of my Children, that 'tis for thy ſelf thou goeſt forth to fight; that thou haſt done much, but yet nothing, if thou overcomeſt not Sujah, who is our greateſt and powerfulleſt Enemy; I hope, God aſſiſting me, to be ſoon Maſter of the reſt.

With theſe words he diſmiſſed them both, with ordinary Honours, that is, with rich rich Veſts, ſome Horſes and Elephants gallantly harneſſed; making in the mean time Emir-Jemla to conſent, that his only Son, Mahmet Emir-Kan, ſhould ſtay with him for a good Education, or rather for a Pledge of his Fidelity; and Sultan Mahmoud, that his Wife ſhould remain in Agra (which was the Daughter of the above-mention'd King of Golkonda) as too troubleſom a thing in an Army, and in ſuch an Expedition.

Sultan Sujah, who was always in the apprehenſion, leſt the Raja's of the lower Bengale, which he had ill treated, ſhould be raiſed againſt him, and who feared nothing more than to have to do with Emir-Jemla, had no ſooner received this News, but apprehending that the paſſage to Bengale would be obſtructed, and that Emir would paſs in ſome other place the River Ganges, either lower or higher than Elabas, raiſed his Camp, and went down to Benares and Patna, whence he betook himſelf to Mogiere, a ſmall Town ſeated upon the Ganges, a place commonly call'd the Key of the Kingdom of Bengale, being a kind of Streight between the Mountains and the Woods, which are not far from thence. He thought fit to ſtay in that place, and there to fortifie himſelf; and for greater ſafety, he cauſed a great Trench to be made, which I have ſeen, paſſing that way ſome years after, from the Town and River unto the Mountain, being well reſolved there to attend Emir-Jemla, and to diſpute that paſſage with him. But he was ſufficiently aſtoniſh'd, when he was told, that the Troops of Emir, which ſlowly deſcended along the River Ganges, were certainly for nothing but to amuſe him; that himſelf was not there; that he had gained the Raja's of thoſe Mountains, which are on the right hand of the River; and that he and Sultan Mahmoud marched apace over their Lands with all the Flower of the Army, drawing ſtraight to Rage-Mehalle, to intercept him: So that he was conſtrained to quit, as ſoon as he could, his Fortifications; yet notwithſtanding he made ſo much haſte, that though he was obliged to follow thoſe windings, which the River Ganges on that ſide maketh towards the left hand, he prevented Emir by ſome days, and arrived firſt at Rage-Mehalle, where he had time to fortifie himſelf; becauſe Emir having heard this News, took his March to the left hand towards Ganges, through very ill ways, there to expect his Troops, which came down with the Body of the Artillery and the Baggage along the River. As ſoon as all was come, he went to attaque Sultan Sujah, who defended himſelf very well for five or ſix days; but ſeeing that the Artillery of Emir, which played inceſſantly, ruined all his Fortifications, which were made but of ſandy Earth and Fagots, and that he could not but with much difficulty make reſiſtance in that place, beſides that the Seaſon of the Rain began, he retired himſelf, at the favour of the Night, leaving behind two great Peeces of Cannon. Emir durſt not follow him in the night, for fear of ſome Ambuſh, putting off the purſuit 'till the next morning: But Sujah had the good luck, that at the break of day there began to fall a Rain, which laſted above three days; ſo that Emir could not only ſtir out of Rage-Mehalle, but ſaw himſelf obliged to paſs the Winter there, by reaſon of the exceſſive Rains in that Countrey, which render the ways ſo troubleſom for more than four Months, viz. July, Auguſt, September, and October, that the Armies cannot poſſibly march. And hereby Sultan Sujah had the means to retire himſelf, and to chuſe what place he would, having time enough to fortifie his Army, and to ſend out of the inferiour Bengale for many Peeces of Cannon, and a good number of Portugals, that were retired thither, becauſe of the great fertility of the Countrey: For he much courted all thoſe Portugal Fathers, Miſſionaries, that are in that Province, promiſing them no leſs than that he would make them all rich, and build Churches for them whereſoever they would. And they were indeed capable to ſerve him, it being certain, that in the Kingdom of Bengale there are to be found no leſs than eight or nine Thouſand Families of Franguis, Portugals, and theſe either Natives or Meſticks.

But Sultan Mahmoud, who, for the reaſon above-mentioned, was grown fierce, and aſpired, perhaps, to greater things than at that time he ought, did pretend to command the Army abſolutely, and that Emir-Jemla ſhould follow his Orders, letting alſo from time to time fall inſolent words in reference to his Father Aureng-Zebe, as if he were obliged to him for the Crown, and uttering Expreſſions of Contempt and Threat againſt Emir Jemla; which cauſed great coldneſs betwixt them two, which laſted a pretty while, until Sultan Mahmoud underſtood, that his Father was very much diſſatisfied with his conduct: And apprehending, leſt Emir had order to ſeize on his perſon, he went away to Sultan Sujah, accompanied with a very ſmall number, and to him he made great promiſes, and ſwore Fidelity. But Sujah, who feared Aureng-Zebe and Emir-Jemla's ſnares, could not truſt him, having always an Eye upon his Actions, without giving him any conſiderable Command; which he ſo diſguſted, that ſome months after, not knowing what would become of him, he left Sultan Sujah, and returned to Emir, who received him well enough, aſſuring him, that he would write in his behalf to Aureng-Zebe, and do his utmoſt to make him forget that fault.

I think fit here to take notice, on the by, of what many have told me, viz. That this Eſcape of Sultan Mahmoud was altogether made by the Artifices of Aureng-Zebe, who cared not much to hazard this Son of his to try to deſtroy Sujah, and who was glad enough, that whatever the Event were, he might have a ſpecious pretence to put him in a place of ſurety. However it be, he afterwards ſhew'd himſelf much diſſatiſfied with him, and wrote to him a ſevere Letter, in which he enjoin'd him to return to Dehli, but giving order in the mean time, that he ſhould not come ſo far: For he no ſooner had paſſed the River Ganges, but he met with Troops that ſtopt him, and put him up in a ſmall Chair, (as was done to Morad-Bakche) and carried him to Goualeor, whence 'tis thought he will never be ſet at liberty: Aureng-Zebe by this means freeing himſelf from great perplexity; who then alſo let his ſecond Son, Sultan Mazum, know, that the point of Reigning is ſo delicate a thing, that Kings muſt be jealous even of their own ſhadow; adding, that if he be not diſcreet, the like may befall him what had befallen his Brother, and that he ought to think Aureng-Zebe was not a Man, that would ſuffer that to be done to himſelf, what Chah-Jehan did to his Father Jehan-Guyre, and what he had alſo lately ſeen done to Chah-Jehan.

And indeed we may on this occaſion ſay, that if this Son continue to behave himſelf as he hath done hitherto, Aureng-Zebe will have no cauſe to ſuſpect him, and to be diſſatisfied with him: For no Slave can be more tractable, and Aureng-Zebe himſelf never appear'd more careleſs of Greatneſs, nor more given to Devotion than he: Yet I have known Men of Parts, who believed, that he is not ſo in good earneſt, but by ſuperlative policy and craft, like that of his Father, which we may have the proof of in time.

Whilſt all theſe things were thus tranſacted in Bengale, and that Sultan Sujah reſiſted the beſt he could the Forces of Emir-Jemla, paſſing now on one ſide of the River Ganges, of a Channel, or ſome other River, (for that Countrey is full of them) then on the other; Aureng-Zebe kept himſelf about Agra, going to and fro; and at length, after he had alſo ſent Morad-Bakche to Goualeor, he came to Dehli, where in good earneſt he took upon him publickly to act the King, giving order for all Affairs of the Kingdom, and eſpecially thinking on means to catch Dara, and to get him out of Guzaratte, which was a very hard thing, for the Reaſons already mentioned. But the great good Fortune, and the ſingular dexterity of Aureng-Zebe ſoon drew him thence, which now follows next to be related.

Jeſſomſeigne, who had retired himſelf to his Countrey, and made the beſt of what he had taken in the Battel of Kadjoue, raiſed a ſtrong Army, and wrote to Dara, that he ſhould come to Agra as ſoon as he could, and that he would join with his Forces. Dara, who had by this time ſet on foot a pretty numerous Army, (though it conſiſted, for the moſt part, but of gathered people) and who hoped, that approaching to Agra, many of his old Friends, ſeeing him with Jeſſomſeigne, would not fail to join with him alſo, immediately leaveth Amadevad, and marcheth with great ſpeed to Aſmire, ſeven or eight days journey from Agra. But Jeſſomſeigne kept not his word with him: The Raja Jeſſeigne interpoſed to make his peace with Aureng-Zebe, and to faſten him to his Party; or, at leaſt, to hinder his deſign, which was capable to ruine himſelf, and to make all the Raja's riſe; and wrote to him ſeveral Letters, giving him to underſtand the great danger he went to expoſe himſelf to, by eſpouſing a Party in that Extremity, as that of Dara's was; that he ſhould well conſider what he was going to do; that he went about wholly to deſtroy himſelf, and all his whole Family; that Aureng-Zebe would never forgive him; that he was a Raja as himſelf; that he ſhould think on ſparing the blood of the Ragipous; that if he thought to draw the Raja's to his Party, he would find thoſe that would hinder him from it. In a word, that it was a buſineſs which concern'd all the Gentry of Indoſtan, and expoſed them to danger, if way were given to kindle a Fire, which would not be extinguiſh'd at pleaſure. And laſtly, if he would leave Dara to himſelf, Aureng-Zebe would forget all that had paſſed, and preſent ſent him with all he had taken, and give him that very inſtant the Government of Guzaratte, which would be very convenient for him, that Countrey being near his Lands; that he could be there in full liberty and ſafety, and as long as he pleaſed, and that himſelf would be Caution for all. In a word, this Raja acted his part ſo well, that he made Jeſſomſeigne return to his Land, whilſt Aureng-Zebe approached with his whole Army to Aſmire, and encamped in the ſight of that of Dara.

And now what could this poor Prince Dara do? He ſeeth himſelf abandoned, and fruſtrated of his hopes. He conſiders, that to turn back ſafe to Amadevad was impoſſible, in regard that it was a March of Thirty and five days; that it was in the heat of Summer; that water would fail him; that they were all the Lands of Raja's, Friends or Allies of Jeſſeigne or Jeſſomſeigne; that the Army of Aureng-Zebe, which was not haraſſed like his, would not fail to follow him. 'Tis as good, ſaith he, to periſh here; and although the Match be altogether unequal, let us venture all, and give Battel once more. But alas! what does he mean to do? He is not only abandoned by all, but he hath yet with him Chah-Navaze-Kan, whom he truſts, and who betrays him, and diſcovers all his Deſigns to Aureng-Zebe. 'Tis true, that Chah-Navaze-Kan was puniſh'd for his Perfidiouſneſs, and kill'd in the Battel; whether it was by the hands of Dara himſelf, as many told me, or (which is more probable) by ſome of Aureng-Zebe's Army, who being ſecret Partiſans of Dara, found means to get to him, and to diſpatch him, fearing leſt he ſhould diſcover them, and have ſome knowledge of the Letters they had written to Dara. But what did it benefit him at that time, that Chah-Navaze-Kan was dead? Dara ſhould have ſooner follow'd the advice of his Friends, and never have confided in him.

The Fight began between Nine and Ten of the Clock in the morning: Dara's Artillery, which was very well placed on a little Eminency, was loud enough; but, as was ſaid, moſt of the Peeces without Bullets; ſo was he betray'd by all! 'Tis needleſs to relate the other Particulars of this Battel; it was properly not a Battel, but a Rout. I ſhall only ſay, that hardly the Onſet was begun, but Jeſſeigne was near and in ſight of Dara, to whom he ſent word, that he ſhould flie preſently, unleſs he would be taken. So that this poor Prince, being altogether ſurpriſed, was conſtrained to run away inſtantly, and with ſo much diſorder and precipitation, that he had not leiſure to put up his Baggage. It was no ſmall matter, that he was able to get away with his Wife, and the reſt of his Family. And 'tis certain, that if the Raja-Jeſſeigne would have done what he could, he could never have eſcaped; but he always had a reſpect to the Royal Family; or rather, he was too crafty and politick, and had too great forecaſt, to venture to lay hands on a Prince of the Blood.

This unfortunate Prince, deſerted by almoſt all, and finding himſelf accompanied but of Two thouſand Men at moſt, was forced in the hotteſt of Summer to croſs, without Tents or Baggage, all thoſe Countries of the Raja's, that are almoſt from Aſmire to Amadevad. Mean time the Koullis, which are the Countrey People, and the worſt of all the Indies, and the greateſt Robbers, follow him night and day, rifle and kill his Soldiers, with ſo much cruelty, that no Man could ſtay Two hundred Paces behind the Body, but he was preſently ſtripp'd naked, or butcher'd upon the leaſt reſiſtance. Yet notwithſtanding, Dara made ſhift to get near Amadevad, when he hoped, that the next day, or ſoon after, he ſhould enter into the Town to refreſh himſelf, and to try once more to gather again ſome Forces: But all things fall out contrary to vanquiſhed and unfortunate Men.

The Governor, whom he had left in the Caſtle of Amadevad, had already received both menacing and promiſing Letters from Aureng-Zebe, which made him loſe Courage, and incline to that ſide; inſomuch that he wrote to Dara, forbidding him to come nearer, if he did, he would find the Gates ſhut, and all in Arms.

Three days before I met this unhappy Prince, by a ſtrange Accident, when he obliged me to follow him, having no Phyſician about him; and the Night before that he received this News from the Governor of Amadevad, he did me the favor to make me come into the Karavan-Serrak where he was, fearing leſt the Koulis ſhould aſſaſſinate me: And (what is hard enough to believe in Indoſtan, where the Grandees eſpecially are ſo jealous of their Wives) I was ſo near to the Wife of this Prince, that the Cords of the Kanates, or Wind ſcreen, which encloſed them, (for they had not ſo much as a poor Tent) were faſtned to the wheels of my Chariot. I relate this circumſtance by the by only, to ſhew the extremity Dara was reduced to.

When-

When theſe Women heard this ſad News (which was at the break of day, as I well remember) they broke out upon a ſudden into ſuch ſtrange cryes and lamentations, that they forced tears from ones Eyes. And now behold all was in an unexpreſſible confuſion: Every one looks upon his Neighbor, and no body knows what to do, or what will become of him. Soon after we ſaw Dara come forth, half dead, now ſpeaking to one, then another, even to the meaneſt Soldiers. He ſeeth all aſtoniſh'd, and ready to abandon him. What counſel? whither can he go? he muſt be gone inſtantly. You may judge of the extremity he muſt needs be in, by this ſmall accident I am going to mention. Of three great Oxen of Guzaratte, which I had for my Chariot, one died the Night before, another was dying, and the third was tyred out, (for we had been forced to march for three days together, almoſt night and day, in an intolerable heat and duſt:) Whatever Dara could ſay or command, whether he alledged it was for himſelf, or for one of his Women that was hurt in her Leg, or for me; he could not poſſibly procure for me, whether Ox, or Camel, or Horſe: So that he was obliged, to my good fortune, to leave me there. I ſaw him march away, and that with tears in his Eyes, accompanied with four or five hundred Cavaliers at moſt, and with two Elephants, that were ſaid to be laden with Gold and Silver; and I heard them ſay, that they were to take their March towards Tatabakar; for he had no other Game to play, though even that ſeem'd in a manner impoſſible, conſidering the ſmall number of People left him, and the great ſandy Deſarts to be waded through in the hotteſt ſeaſon, moſt of them without water fit to drink. And indeed moſt of thoſe that follow'd him, and even divers of his Women, did there periſh, either of drought, or the unwholſom waters, or the tireſom ways and ill food; or laſtly, becauſe ſtripped by the Koullis above-mention'd. Yet notwithſtanding all this, Dara made hard ſhift to get to the Raja Katche; unhappy even herein, that he periſh'd not himſelf in this March.

This Raja at firſt gave him a very good Reception, even ſo far as to promiſe him aſſiſtance with all his Forces, provided he would give his Daughter in marriage to his Son. But Jeſſeigne ſoon wrought as much with this Raja, as he had done with Jeſſomſeigne; ſo that Dara one day ſeeing the kindneſs of this Barbarian, cooled upon a ſudden, and that conſequently his Perſon was in danger there, he betakes himſelf to the purſuit of his Expedition to Tatabakar.

To relate how I got away from thoſe Robbers, the Koullis, in what manner I moved them to compaſſion, how I ſaved the beſt part of my ſmall Treaſure, how we became good Friends by the means of my Profeſſion of Phyſick, my Servants (perplexed as well as my ſelf) ſwearing that I was the greateſt Phyſician of the World, and that the People of Dara, at their going away, had ill treated me, and taken from me all my beſt things: How, after having kept me with them ſeven or eight days, they had ſo much kindneſs and generoſity, as to lend me an Ox, and to conduct me ſo far, that I was in ſight of Amadevad: And laſtly, how from thence after ſome days I returned to Dehli, having lighted on an occaſion to go with a certain Omrah paſſing thither; in which Journey I met from time to time, on the way, with Carkaſſes of Men, Elephants, Oxen, Horſes, and Camels, the remainder of that unfortunate Army of Dara. Theſe are things, I ſay, I muſt not inſiſt upon to deſcribe them.

Whilſt Dara advanced towards Tatabakar, the War continues in Bengale, and much longer than was believed, Sultan Sujah putting forth his utmoſt, and playing his laſt Game againſt Emir-Jemla: Yet this did not much trouble Aureng-Zebe, who knew 'twas a great way between Bengale and Agra, and was ſufficiently convinced of the prudence and valor of Emir-Jemla. That which diſquieted him much more was, that he ſaw Soliman Chekouh ſo near (for from Agra to the Mountains 'tis but eight days Journey) whom he could not maſter, and who perpetually alarm'd him by the rumors that went continually about, as if he were coming down the Mountains with the Raja. 'Tis certainly very hard to draw him thence: But behold how he manages the matter to compaſs it.

He maketh the Raja Jeſſeigne write one Letter after another to the Raja of Serenaguer, promiſing him very great things, if he would ſurrender Soliman Chekouh to him, and menacing War at the ſame time, if he ſhould obſtinately keep him. The Raja anſwers, That he would rather loſe his Eſtate, than do ſo unworthy an Action. And Aureng-Zebe, ſeeing his reſolution, taketh the Field, and marcheth directly to the foot of the Hills, Hills, and with an infinite number of Pike-men cauſeth the Rocks to be cut, and the paſſage to be widen'd. But the Raja laughs at all that; neither hath he much cauſe to fear on that ſide. Aureng-Zebe may cut long enough, they are Mountains inacceſſible to an Army, and ſtones would be ſufficient to ſtop the Forces of four Indoſtans; ſo that he was conſtrained to turn back again.

Dara in the mean time approacheth to the Fortreſs of Tatabakar, and when he was but two or three days journey off, he received News, that Mir-baba, who had long held it beſieged, had at length reduced it to extremity: As I afterwards learned of our French, and other Franguis that were there, a pound of Rice and Meat having coſt there above a Crown, and ſo of other Victuals in proportion: Yet the Governour held out; made Sallies, which extreamly incommoded the Enemy; and ſhew'd all poſſible prudence, courage and fidelity; deriding the endeavours of the General, Mir-baba, and all the menaces and promiſes of Aureng-Zebe.

And this alſo I learned afterwards of my Country-men, the French, and of all thoſe other Franguis that were with him; who added, that when he heard Dara was not far off, he redoubled his liberalities, and knew ſo well to gain the hearts of all his Souldiers, and to encourage them to do bravely, that there was not one of them, that was not reſolved to ſally out upon the Enemy, and to hazard all to raiſe the Siege, and to make Dara enter; and that he alſo knew ſo well to caſt fear and terrour into the Camp of Mir-baba, by ſending Spies about very cunningly to aſſure, that they had ſeen Dara approach with great reſolution, and very good Forces; that if he had come, as was believed he would do every moment, the Army of the Enemy was for disbanding upon his appearance, and even in part to go over to him. But he is ſtill too unfortunate, to undertake any thing proſperouſly. Believing therefore, that to raiſe the Siege with ſuch an handful of Men as he had, was impoſſible; he did deliberate to paſs the River Indus, and to endeavour to get into Perſia; although that alſo would have had mighty difficulties and inconveniencies, by reaſon of the Deſarts, and the ſmall quantity of good waters in thoſe parts; beſides, that upon thoſe Frontiers there are but mean Rajas and Patans, who acknowledge neither the Perſian nor the Mogol. But his Wife did very much diſſwade him from it, for this weak reaſon, that he muſt, if he did ſo, expect to ſee his Wife and Daughter Slaves of the King of Perſia; that that was a thing altogether unworthy of the Grandeur of his Family, and 'twas better to die, than to undergo this Infamy.

Dara, being in great perplexity, remembred, that there was thereabout a certain Patan, powerful enough, called Gion-Kan, whoſe Life he had formerly ſaved twice, when Chah-Jehan had commanded he ſhould be caſt under the feet of an Elephant, for having rebelled divers times: He reſolved to go to him, hoping that he could give him ſufficient Succours to raiſe the Siege of Tatabakar; making account, that thence he would take his Treaſure, and that going from thence, and gaining Kandahar, he could caſt himſelf into the Kingdom of Caboul, having great hopes of Mohabet-Kan, who was Governour of it, becauſe he was both potent and valiant, well beloved of his Country, and had obtained this Government by his (Dara's) favour. But his Grandchild, Sepe-Chekouh, yet but very young, ſeeing his deſign, caſt himſelf at his Feet, intreating him for God's ſake, not to enter into the Country of that Patan. His Wife and Daughter did the ſame, remonſtrating to him, that he was a Robber, a revolted Governour, that he would infallibly betray him; that he ought not to ſtand upon the raiſing of the Siege, but rather endeavour to gain Caboul, that the thing was not impoſſible, foraſmuch as Mir-baba was not like to quite the Siege to follow him, and to hinder him from getting thither.

Dara, being carried head-long by the force of his unhappy Deſtiny, rejected this counſel, and would hearken to nothing of what was propoſed to him, ſaying, as was true, that the March would be very difficult, and very dangerous; and maintaining always, that Gion-Kan would not be ſo mean, as to betray him, after all the good he had done him. He departed, notwithſtanding all that could be ſaid to him, and went to prove, at the price of his Life, That no truſt is to be given to a wicked Man.

This Robber, who at firſt believed that he had numerous Troops following him, gave him the faireſt reception that could be, and entertained him with very great kindneſs and civility in appearance, placing his Souldiers here and there among his Subjects, with a ſtrict order to treat them well, and to give them what refreſhments

the Country afforded: But when he found that he had not above two or three hundred Men in all, he quickly ſhow'd what he was. It is not known, whether he had not received ſome Letters from Aureng-Zebe, or whether his avarice had not been tempted by ſome Mules ſaid to be laden with Gold; which was all that could be ſaved hitherto, as well from the hands of Robbers, as of thoſe that conveyed it. Whatever it be, on a certain morning, when no body looked for any ſuch thing, all being taken up with the care of refreſhing themſelves, and believing all to be ſafe; behold this Traitor, who had beſtirr'd himſelf all night to get armed Men from all parts, fell upon Dara and Sepe-Chekouh, killed ſome of their Men that ſtood up to defend themſelves; forgot not to ſeize on the loads of the Mules, and of all the Jewels of the Women; made Dara to be tyed faſt upon an Elephant, commanding the Executioner to ſit behind, and to cut off his head upon the leaſt ſign given, in caſe he ſhould be ſeen to reſiſt, or that any one ſhould attempt to deliver him. And in this ſtrange poſture he was carried to the Army before Taba-bakar, where he put him into the hands of Mir-baba, the General, who cauſed him to be conducted in the company of this ſame Traitor to Lahor, and thence to Dehli.

When he was at the Gates of Dehli, it was deliberated by Aureng-Zebe, whether he ſhould be made to paſs through the midſt of the City, or no, to carry him thence to Gonaleor. Many did adviſe, that that was by no means to be done; that ſome diſorder might ariſe; that ſome might come to ſave him; and beſides, that it would be a great diſhonour to the Family Royal. Others maintained the contrary, viz. That it was abſolutely neceſſary he ſhould paſs through the Town, to aſtoniſh the World, and to ſhew the abſolute Power of Aureng-Zebe, and to diſabuſe the People, that might ſtill doubt, whether it were himſelf, as indeed many Omrahs did doubt; and to take away all hopes from thoſe, who ſtill preſerved ſome affection for him. The Opinion of theſe laſt was followed; he was put on an Elephant, his Grand-child, Sepe-Chekouh, at his ſide; and behind them was placed Bhadur-Kan, as an Executioner. This was none of thoſe brave Elephants of Ceilan or Pegu, which he was wont to ride on, with gilt Harneſs and embroidered Covers, and Seats with Canopies very handſomely painted and gilt, to defend themſelves from the Sun: It was an old Caitiff Animal, very dirty and naſty, with an old torn Cover, and a pitiful Seat, all open. There was no more ſeen about him, that Necklace of big Pearls, which thoſe Princes are wont to wear, nor thoſe rich Turbants and Veſts embroider'd. All his Dreſs was a Veſt of courſe Linnen, all dirty, and a Turbant of the ſame, with a wretched Scarf of Kachimere over his head, like a Varlet; his Grand-ſon, Sepe-Chekouh, being in the ſame equipage. In this miſerable poſture he was made enter into the Town, and to paſs through the greateſt Merchant-ſtreets, to the end that all the People might ſee him, and entertain no doubt any more whether it was he.

As for me, I fancied we went to ſee ſome ſtrange Maſſacre, and was aſtoniſh'd at the boldneſs of making him thus paſs through the Town; and that the more, becauſe I knew that he was very ill guarded, neither was I ignorant, that he was very much beloved by the lower ſort of people, who at that time exclaimed highly againſt the cruelty and tyranny of Aureng-Zebe, as one that kept his Father in priſon, as alſo his own Son Sultan Mahmoud, and his Brother Morad-Bakche. I was well prepar'd for it, and with a good Horſe and two good Men I went, together with two others of my Friends, to place my ſelf in the greateſt ſtreet, where he was to paſs. But not one Man had the boldneſs to draw his Sword, only there were ſome of the Fakires, and with them ſome poor people, who ſeeing that infamous Gion-Kan ride by his ſide, began to rail and throw ſtones at him, and to call him Traitor. All the Shops were ready to break for the crowd of Spectators, that wept bitterly; and there was heard nothing but loud Out-cryes and Lamentations, Invectives, and Curſes, heaped on Gion-Kan. In a word, Men and Women, great and ſmall (ſuch is the tenderneſs of the hearts of the Indians) were ready to melt into tears for compaſſion; but not one there was that durſt ſtir to reſcue him. Now after he had thus paſſed through the Town, he was put into a Garden called Heider-Abad.

There were not wanting to tell Aureng-Zebe, how the People at this ſight had lamented Dara, and curſed the Patan, that had deliver'd him; and how the ſame was in danger to have been ſtoned to death, as alſo that there had been a great apprehenſion of ſome ſedition and miſchief. Hereupon another Council was held, whether he ſhould indeed be carried to Goualeor, as had been concluded before; or whether it were not more expedient to put him to death, without more ado? Some were of opinion, that he ſhould go to Goualeor with a ſtrong Guard, that that would be enough; Danechmend-Kan, though Dara's old Enemy, inſiſting much upon that. But Rauchenara-Begum, in purſuance of her hatred againſt this Brother of hers, puſhed Aureng-Zebe to make him away, without running the danger there was in ſending him to Goualeor; as alſo did all his old Enemies, Galilullah-Kan, and Chah-heſt-Kan, and eſpecially a certain Flatterer, a Phyſitian, who was fled out of Perſia, firſt called Hakim-Daoud, and afterwards being become a great Omrah named Takarrub-Kan: This Villain boldly roſe up in a full aſſembly, and cryed out, that it was expedient for the ſafety of the State to put him to death immediately, and that the rather, becauſe he was no Muſſulman; that long ſince he was turn'd Kafire, Idolater, without Religion, and that he would charge the Sin of it upon his own head: Of which imprecation he ſoon after felt the ſmart; for within a ſhort time he fell into diſgrace, and was treated like an infamous Fellow, and dyed miſerably. But Aureng-Zebe, carried away by theſe inſtances and motives, commanded that he ſhould be put to death, and that Sepe-Chekouh, his Grand-child, ſhould be ſent to Goualeor.

The Charge of this Tragical Execution was given to a certain Slave, call'd Nazer, that had been bred by Chah-Jehan, and was known to have been formerly ill treated by Dara. This Executioner, accompanied with three or four Parricides more, went to Dara, who was then himſelf dreſſing ſome Lentils with Sepe-Chekouh his Grandchild. He no ſooner ſaw Nazer, but cryed out to Sepe-Chekouh, My dear Son, behold thoſe that come to kill us! laying hold at the ſame time of a ſmall Knife, which was all the Arms that were left him. One of theſe Butchers immediately fell upon Sepe-Chekouh; the others, upon the arms and legs of Dara, throwing him to the ground, and holding him under, 'till Nazer cut his throat. His Head was forthwith carried to the Fortreſs of Aureng-Zebe, who preſently commanded it to be put in a diſh, and that water ſhould be fetch'd; which when brought, he wiped it off with an Handkerchief, and after he had cauſed the Face to be waſhed clean, and the blood done away, and was fully ſatisfied that it was the very head of Dara, he fell a weeping, and ſaid theſe words; Ah Bed-Bakt! Ah unfortunate Man! Take it away, and bury it in the Sepulchre of Houmayon.

At night, the Daughter of Dara was brought into the Seraglio, but afterwards ſent to Chah-Jehan, and Begum-Saheb, who asked her of Aureng-Zebe. Concerning Dara's Wife, ſhe had ended her days before at Labor: She had poyſon'd her ſelf, foreſeeing the extremities ſhe was falling into, together with her Husband. Sepe-Chekouh was ſent to Goualeor. And after a few days, Gion-kan was ſent for, to come before Aureng-Zebe in the Aſſembly: To him were given ſome Preſents, and ſo he was ſent away; but being near his Lands, he was rewarded according to his deſert, being killed in a Wood. This barbarous Man not knowing, or not conſidering, that if Kings do ſometimes permit ſuch Actions for their Intereſt, yet they abhor them, and ſooner or later revenge them.

In the mean time, the Governour of Tatabakar, by the ſame Orders that had been required of Dara, was obliged to ſurrender the Fortreſs. It was indeed upon ſuch a compoſition as he would have, but it was alſo with an intention not to keep word with him. For the poor Eunuch, arriving at Labor, was cut in pieces, together with thoſe few Men he had then with him, by Kalil-ullah-kan, who was Governour thereof. But the reaſon of the non-obſervance of the Capitulation was, that there was come intelligence, that he ſecretly prepar'd himſelf to go directly to Soliman-Chekouh, ſparing no Gold, which under-hand he conveyed into the hands of our Franguis, and to all thoſe that were come with him out of the Fortreſs to follow him, under pretext of accompanying him as far as Dehli to Aureng-Zebe, who had often ſaid, that he ſhould be very glad to ſee ſo gallant a Man, and who had ſo valiantly defended himſelf.

There remained therefore none of the Family of Dara, but Soliman-Chekouh, who could not eaſily be drawn away from Serenaguer, if the Raja had been ſteady to his firſt Declarations. But the ſecret practices of the Raja Jeſſeigne, the promiſes and threats of Aureng-Zebe, the death of Dara, and the other Rajas his Neighbours that had been gain'd, and were prepared by the Orders, and at the coſt of Aureng-Zebe, to make War againſt him, did at laſt ſhake the Faith of this perfidious Protector, and made him consent to their demands. Sepe-Chekouh, who was advertised of it, fled through the midst of those horrid Countries and fearful Deserts, towards the great Tibet. But the Son of the Raja, soon pursuing and overtaking him, caused him to be assaulted with stones. The poor Prince was hurt, seized, and carried to Dehli, where he was imprison'd in Serenguer, that little Fortress, where at first they had put Morad-Bakche.

Aureng-Zebe, to observe what he had practised towards Dara, and that no body might doubt it was Soliman-Chekouh himself, commanded him to be brought before him in the presence of all the Grandees of the Court. At the entry of the Gate, the Chains were taken from his feet, leaving those he had about his hands, which seemed gilt. When this proper young Man, so handsome and gallant, was seen to enter, there was a good number of Omrahs that could not hold their tears; and, as I was informed, all the great Ladies of the Court, that had leave to see him come in, fell a weeping. Aureng-Zebe, who appear'd himself to be touched at his misfortunes, began to speak very kindly to him, and to comfort him; telling him amongst other things, that he should fear nothing, that no hurt should be done to him; on the contrary, that he should be well treated, and therefore be of good courage; that he had caused his Father to be put to death for no other reason, than that he was turn'd Kafer, and a Man without Religion. Whereupon this young Prince returned him the Salem, and blessed him, abating his hands to the earth, and lifting them, as well as he could, up to his head, after the custom of the Country; and told him with resolution enough, That if he were to drink the Pousk, he intreated him that he might dye presently, being very willing to submit to his Fate. But Aureng-Zebe promised him publickly, that he should drink none of it; that he should rest satisfied as to that, and not entertain any sad thoughts about it. This being said, he once more repeated the Salem: And after they had asked him several Questions, in the Name of Aureng-Zebe, touching that Elephant which was charged with Roupies of Gold, taken from him when he went to Serenaguer, he was sent to Goualeor to the rest. This Pousk is nothing else else but Poppy expressed, and infused a night in water. And 'tis that potion, which those that are kept at Goualeor, are commonly made to drink; I mean those Princes, whose heads they think not fit to cut off: This is the first thing that is brought them in the morning, and they have nothing given them to eat 'till they have drunk a great cup full of it; they would rather let them starve. This emaciates them exceedingly, and maketh them dye insensibly, they losing little by little their strength and understanding, and growing torpid and senseless. And by this very means 'tis said, that Sepe-Chekouh, and the Grand-child of Morad-Bakche, and Soliman-Chekouh, were dispatch'd.

As to Morad-Bakche, he was made away by a more violent death. For Aureng-Zebe seeing, that though he was in prison, yet the generality had an inclination to him, and that many Verses were spread in the praise of his Valour and Courage, thought himself not safe enough by putting him to death in private, by giving him Pousk like others; apprehending, that his Death would be still doubted of, and that that might one time or other occasion some commotion, and therefore devised the following Charge against him.

The Children of a certain Sayed, very rich, whom he had caused to be put to death in Amadevad, to get his Estate, when he there made his preparations for War, and borrowed or took by force great Sums of Money from all the rich Merchants, appeared in full Assembly, making their complaints, and demanding Justice, and the Head of Morad-Bakche, for the Blood of their Father. Not one of the Omrahs durst contradict it, both because he was a Sayed, that is, one of Mahomet's Kindred, to whom great Veneration was paid; and that every body sufficiently understood the design of Aureng-Zebe, taking this for a pretence to rid himself openly of Morad-Bakche, under a shew of Justice. So that the Head of him, that had killed the Father of the Plaintiffs, was granted them without any other form of Process. Whereupon they went, with necessary Orders issued out for that purpose, to cut it off in Goualeor.

There remained no other Thorn in the Foot of Aureng-Zebe but Sultan Sujah, who kept himself still in Bengale; but he also was forced to yield at last to the power and fortune of Aureng-Zebe. There were sent so many Troops of all sorts to Emir-Jemla, that at last he was encompassed on all sides, both on this and that side of the River

Ganges;

Ganges; ſo that he was neceſſitated to flye to Dake, which is the laſt Town of Bengale on the Sea ſide; and here comes the concluſion of this whole Tragedy.

This Prince being deſtitute of Ships to put to Sea, and not knowing whether to flye, ſent his eldeſt Son, Sultan-Banque, to the King of Racan or Moy, a Heathen or Idolatrous King, to know whether he would give him leave to make his Country his place of refuge only for ſome time, and do him the favour, when the Monſons or the Seaſon-winds ſhould come, to furniſh him with a Veſſel for Mecha, from thence to paſs into ſome part of Turky or Perſia. That King ſent anſwer, that he ſhould be very welcome, and have all poſſible aſſiſtance. So Sultan Banque returned to Dake with ſome Galeaſſes, manned with Franguis (I mean, with thoſe fugitive Portugals, and other ſtraggling Chriſtians, that had put themſelves in ſervice to that King, driving no other Trade than to ravage all this lower Bengale; upon which Sultan Sujah embarked, with his whole Family, viz. his Wife, his three Sons, and Daughters. They were well enough received; whatever was neceſſary for their ſubſiſtance, ſuch as that Countrey would afford, was provided for them, in the name of that King. Some months paſs, the Seaſon of the favourable Winds come in, but not a word of the Veſſel, though he demanded it no otherwiſe than for his Money; for as yet he wanted not Rupies of Gold, nor Silver, nor Gems: He had too great a plenty of them; his Riches were, in all appearance, the cauſe of his ruin, or at leaſt contributed much to it. Thoſe barbarous Kings have no true generoſity, and are not much refrained by the Faith they have given, regarding nothing but their preſent Intereſts, without ſo much as conſidering the miſchiefs that may befall them for their perfidiouſneſs and brutality. To get out of their hands, one muſt either be the ſtronger, or have nothing that may tempt their avarice. Sultan Sujah may long enough ſollicit for a Veſſel; all is in vain, he effects nothing: On the contrary, the King begins to ſhew much coldneſs, and to complain of his not coming to ſee him. I know not, whether Sultan Sujah thought it unworthy of himſelf, and too mean a thing to give him a Viſit; or rather, whether he fear'd, that being in the Kings Houſe he might not there be ſeized on, to take away all his Treaſure, and then be delivered into the hands of Emir-Jemla, who for that purpoſe promiſed, in the name of Aureng-Zebe, great Sums of Mony, and many other conſiderable advantages. Whatever the matter was, he would not go thither himſelf, but ſent his Son Sultan Banque, who being near the Kings Houſe, began to ſhew liberality to the people, throwing out to them a good quantity of half Rupies, and whole Rupies, of Gold and Silver. And being come before the King, he preſented him with ſtore of Embroideries, and of rare pieces of Goldſmiths-work, ſet with precious Stones of great value, excuſing his Father, Sultan Sujah, as being indiſpoſed, and beſeeching him in his name, that he would remember the Veſſel, and the promiſe made to him thereof. But all that did not advance his buſineſs; on the contrary, five or ſix days after, this King ſent to Sultan Sujah, to ask of him one of his Daughters in Marriage; which he could never reſolve to grant him, whereat this barbarous Prince was highly offended. What then could he do in this caſe? The Seaſon paſſeth away. What ſhall become of him? What other reſolution can he take, but to do a deſperate Action? Behold a ſtrange undertaking, which may give a great Example of what Deſpair can do!

Although this King of Racan be an Heathen, yet there is in his Dominions ſtore of Mahumetans mingled with the people, that are retired thither, or have been, for the moſt part, taken Slaves, here and there, by thoſe Franguis above-mention'd. Sultan Sujah did under-hand gain theſe Mahumetans; and with two or three hundred Men, whom he had yet remaining of thoſe that follow'd him from Bengale, he reſolved, one day to fall unpectedly upon the Houſe of this Barbarian, to kill all, and to make himſelf proclaim'd King of Racan. This was a very bold Enterpriſe, and ſuch a one, as had more of a Deſperado in it, than of a prudent Man. Yet notwithſtanding, as I was inform'd, and by what I could learn from many Mahumetans, and Portugals, and Hollanders, that then were there preſent, the thing was feaſible enough. But the day before the ſtroke was to be given, the Deſign was diſcover'd; which did altogether overthrow the Affairs of Sultan Sujah, and was ſoon after the cauſe of his ruin. For not finding hereafter any way more to recover himſelf, he attempted to flye towards Pegu; which was a thing in a manner impoſſible, by reaſon of the vaſt Mountains and Forreſts to be paſſed. Beſides, he was immediately purſued ſo cloſe, that he was overtaken the ſame day he fled. It may well be thought, that he defended himſelf with as much courage as was poſſible. He killed ſo many of thoſe Barbarians, that it will ſcarce be believed, but he was ſo overpow'red by the multitude of purſuers, that he was obliged to quit the Combat. Sultan Banque, who was not ſo far advanced as his Father, defended him alſo like a Lion; but at length, being all bloody of the wounds, by ſtones poured upon him from all ſides, he was ſeized on, and carried away, with his two little Brothers, his Siſters, and Mother.

As to the Perſon of Sultan Sujah himſelf, all what could be learnt of it, is this: That he, with one Woman, one Eunuch, and two other perſons, got up to the top of the Mountain; that he received a wound in his Head by a ſtone, which ſtruck him down, but yet he roſe again, the Eunuch having wound his Head about with his Turbant, and that they eſcaped through the midſt of the Woods.

I have heard the Relation three or four other manner of ways, even by thoſe perſons that were upon the place. Some did aſſure, that he had been found among the dead, but was not well known: And I have ſeen a Letter of the Chief of the Dutch Factory, confirming this. So that 'tis difficult enough to know aright what is become him. And this it is, which hath adminiſtred ground to thoſe ſo frequent Alarms, given us afterwards at Dehli: For at one time it was rumored, that he was arrived at Maſlipatan, to joyn with the Kings of Golkonda and Viſapour; another time it was related for certain, that he had paſſed in ſight of Suratte with two Ships, bearing the Red Colours, which the King of Pegu, or the King of Siam had given him; by and by, that he was in Perſia, and had been ſeen in Chiras, and ſoon after in Kandahar, ready to enter into the Kingdom of Caboul it ſelf. Aureng-Zebe one day ſaid ſmiling, that Sultan Sujah was at laſt become an Agy or Pilgrim. And at this very day there are abundance of perſons who maintain that he is in Perſia, returned from Conſtantinople, whence he is ſaid to have brought with him much Money. But that which confirms more than enough, that there is no ground for any of theſe reports, is that Letter of the Hollanders; and that an Eunuch of his, with whom I travelled from Bengale to Maſlipatan, as alſo the Great Maſter of his Artillery; whom I ſaw in the Service of the King of Golkonda, have aſſured me, that he is no more in being, though they made difficulty to ſay any more concerning him; as alſo, that our French Merchants, that lately came out of Perſia and from Hiſpahan, when I was yet at Dehli, had in thoſe parts heard no news at all of him; beſides that, I have heard that a while after his Defeat, his Sword and Poynard had been found: So that 'tis credible, that if he was not killed upon the place, he ſoon dyed afterwards, and was the prey of ſome Robbers, or Tygers, or Elephants, of which the Forreſts of that Country are full. However it be, after this laſt Action his whole Family was put in Priſon, Wives, and Children, where they were treated rudely enough; yet ſome time after they were ſet at more liberty, and they received a milder entertainment: And then the King called for the eldeſt Daughter, whom he married.

Whilſt this was doing, ſome Servants of Sultan Banque, joyned with divers of thoſe Mahumetans which I have mentioned, went to plot another Conſpiracy like the firſt. But the day appointed for it being come, one of the Conſpirators, being half drunk, began too ſoon to break out. Concerning this alſo I have heard forty different relations, ſo that 'tis very hard to know the truth of it. That which is undoubted is this, that the King was at length ſo exaſperated againſt this unfortunate Family of Sujah, that he commanded it ſhould be quite rooted out. Neither did there remain any one of it, that was not put to death, ſave that Daughter which the King had made his Wife. Sultan Banque, and his Brothers, had their Heads cut off with blunt Axes; and the Women were mured up, where they dyed of hunger and miſery.

And thus endeth this War, which the luſt of Reigning had kindled among thoſe four Brothers, after it had laſted five or ſix years, from 1655, or thereabout, to 1660 or 1661; which left Aureng-Zebe in the peaceable poſſeſſion of this puiſſant Empire.

The End of the FIRST TOME.

Par-

Particular Events:

OR,

The moſt conſiderable Paſſages after the War for Five Years, or thereabout, in the Empire of the GREAT MOGOL.

THE War being ended, the Tartars of Usbec entertained thoughts of ſending Ambaſſadors to Aureng-Zebe. They had ſeen him fight in their Countrey, when he was yet a young Prince; Chah-Jehan having ſent him to command the Succors, which the Kan of Samarkand had deſired of him againſt the Kan of Balk. They had experienced his Conduct and Valor on many occaſions, and they conſider'd with themſelves, that he could not but remember the Affront they did him, when he was juſt taking Balk, the Capital Town of the Enemy: For the two Kans agreed together, and obliged him to retreat, alledging, That they apprehended he might render himſelf Maſter of their whole State, juſt as Ekbar had formerly done of the Kingdom of Kachimere. Beſides, they had certain intelligence of all he had done in Indoſtan, of his Battels, Fortune, and Advantages; whence they might ſufficiently eſtimate, that though Chah-Jehan was yet living, yet Aureng-Zebe was Maſter, and the only Perſon that was to be owned King of the Indies. Whether then they feared his juſt reſentments, or whether it was, that their inbred Avarice and Sordidneſs made them hope for ſome conſiderable Preſent, the two Kans ſent to him their Ambaſſadors to offer him their Service, and to Congratulate him upon the happy beginning of his Reign. Aureng-Zebe ſaw very well, that the War being at an end, this offer was out of ſeaſon, and that it was nothing but fear or hope, as we ſaid, that had brought them. Yet for all this, he received them honourably; and, ſince I was preſent at their Audience, I can relate the Particulars of it with certainty.

They made their Reverence at a conſiderable diſtance from him, after the Indian cuſtom, putting thrice their hands upon their heads, and as often letting them down to the ground. Then they approached ſo near, that Aureng-Zebe himſelf might very well have taken their Letters immediately from their hands; but yet it was an Omrah that took and open'd them, and gave them to him. He forthwith read them with a very grave countenance; and afterwards commanded, there ſhould be given to each of them an embroider'd Veſt, a Turbant, and a Girdle of Silk in Embroidery, which is that which they call Ser-apah, that is, an Habit from head to foot. After this, their Preſents were call'd for, which conſiſted in ſome Boxes of choice Lapis Lazulus, divers Camels with long hair, ſeveral gallant Horſes, ſome Camel-loads of freſh Fruit, as Apples, Pears, Raiſins and Melons; (for 'tis chiefly Usbec that furniſhes theſe ſorts of Fruit, eaten at Dehli all the Winter-long;) and in many Loads of dry Fruit, as Prunes of Bokara, Aprecocks, Raiſins without any ſtones that appeared, and two other ſorts of Raiſins, black and white, very large and very good.

Aureng-Zebe was not wanting to declare, how much he was ſatisfied with the Generoſity of the Kans, and much commended the Beauty and Rarity of the Fruit, Horſes, and Camels; and after he had a little entertain'd them of the ſtate of the Academy of Samarkand, and of the Fertility of their Countrey, abounding in ſo many rare and excellent things, he deſired them to go and repoſe themſelves, intimating withall, that he ſhould be very glad to ſee them often.

They came away from their Audience full of contentment and joy, not being much troubled, that they had been obliged to make their Reverence after the Indian cuſtom, though it have ſomething of ſlaviſh in it; nor much reſenting it, that the King had not not taken their Letters from their own hands. I believe if they had been required to kiſs the ground, and even to do ſomething of a lower nature, they would have complied with it. 'Tis true, it would have been in vain, if they had deſired to make no other Salute, but that of their own Countrey, and to deliver to the King their Letters with their own hands; for that belongs only to the Ambaſſadors of Perſia, nor have theſe this favour granted them, but with much difficulty.

They ſtay'd above four months at Dehli, what diligence ſoever they could uſe to be diſpatch'd, which did incommode them very much; for they fell almoſt all ſick, and even ſome of them dyed, becauſe they were not accuſtomed to ſuch heats as are in Indoſtan, or rather becauſe they were ſordid, and kept a very ill Diet. I know not whether there be a more avaricious and uncleanly Nation than they are. They laid up the Money which the King had appointed them for their maintenance, and lived a very miſerable life, altogether unworthy of Ambaſſadors; yet they were diſmiſſed with great honour: The King, in the preſence of all the Omrahs, preſented each of them with two rich Ser-apahs, and gave order that Eight thouſand Rupies ſhould be carried to their Lodgings, which amounted to near Two thouſand Crowns each. He alſo gave them for Preſents to the Kans their Maſters, very handſom Ser-apahs, ſtore of the richeſt and beſt wrought Embroideries, a good quantity of fine Cloth, and Silk-ſtuffs, wrought with Gold and Silver, and ſome Tapeſtries, and two Poynards ſet about with precious ſtones.

During their ſtay, I went thrice to ſee them, being preſented to them as a Phyſician by one of my Friends, that was Son of an Uſbec, that had made his Fortune in that Court. I had a deſign to have learned ſomething in particular of their Countrey, but I found them ſo ignorant, that they knew not ſo much as the Confines of their State, much leſs could they inform me of any thing concerning the Tartars that have conquer'd China of late years: In ſhort, they told me nothing that I knew not before. I had once the Curioſity to dine with them, which liberty I obtained eaſily enough. They are not Men of much Ceremony; it was a very extraordinary Meal for ſuch a one as I, it being meer Horſe-fleſh; yet for all this I got my Dinner with them; there was a certain Ragou, which I thought paſſable: And I was obliged to expreſs a liking of ſo exquiſite a Diſh, which they ſo much luſt after. During Dinner, there was a ſtrange ſilence; they were very buſie in carrying in with their whole hands, for they know not what a Spoon is; but after that this Horſe-fleſh had wrought in their ſtomachs, they began to talk, and then they would perſwade me, they were the moſt dextrous at Bows and Arrows, and the ſtrongeſt Men in the World. They call'd for Bows, which are much bigger than thoſe of Indoſtan, and would lay a wager, to pierce an Ox or my Horſe through and through. Then they proceeded to commend the ſtrength and valor of their Women, which they deſcribed to me quite otherwiſe than the Amazons, telling me very wonderful ſtories of them, eſpecially one, which would be admirable indeed, if I could relate it with a Tartarian Eloquence, as they did: They told me, that at the time when Aureng-Zebe made War in their Countrey, a Party of Twenty five or Thirty Indian Horſemen came to fall upon a ſmall Village; whilſt they plundred, and tyed all thoſe whom they met with to make them Slaves, an old Woman ſaid to them, Children, be not ſo miſchievous, my Daughter is not far off, ſhe will be here very ſhortly, retreat if you be wiſe, you are undone if ſhe light upon you. They laughed at the old Woman, and her Advice; and continued to load, to tye, and to carry away her ſelf; but they were not gone half a Mile, but this old Woman, looking often backward, made a great out-cry of Joy, perceiving her Daughter coming after her on Horſe-back; and preſently this generous She Tartar, mounted on a furious Horſe, her Bow and Arrows hanging at her ſide, called to them at a diſtance, that ſhe was yet willing to give them their Lives, if they would carry back to the Village all they had taken, and then withdraw without any noiſe. The Advice of this young Woman affected them as little as that of her old Mother; but they were ſoon aſtoniſh'd, when they found her let flie at them in a moment three or four great Arrows, which ſtruck as many of their Men to the ground, which forced them to fall to their Quivers alſo. But ſhe kept her ſelf at that diſtance from them, that none of them could reach her. She laughed at all their Effort, and at all their Arrows, knowing how to attack them at the length of her Bow, and to take her meaſure from the ſtrength of her Arm, which was of another temper than theirs: So that after ſhe had killed half of them with her Arrows, and put

put them into diſorder, ſhe came and fell upon the reſt with the Zable in her hand, and cut them all in pieces.

The Ambaſſadors of Tartary were not yet gone away from Dehli, when Aureng-Zebe fell exceeding ſick; a violent and continued Fever made him ſometimes loſe his underſtanding: His Tongue was ſeized with ſuch a Palſie, that he loſt almoſt his ſpeech, and the Phyſicians deſpaired of his Recovery; nothing was heard for the time, than that he was gone, and that his Siſter Rauchenara-Begum concealed his death out of deſign. It was already bruited, that the Raja Jeſſomſeigne, Governor of Guzaratte, was on the way to deliver Chah-Jehan; that Mohabet-Kan (who had at length obeyed the Orders of Aureng-Zebe) quitting the Government of Caboul, and being already on this ſide Labor to come back, made haſte alſo with Three or four thouſand Horſe for the ſame end; and that the Eunuch Etbar-kan, who kept Chah-Jehan in the Fortreſs of Agra, would have the honour of his delivery. On one ſide we ſee Sultan Mazum beſtir himſelf exceedingly with Bribes, endeavouring by Promiſes to aſſure himſelf of the Omrahs, ſo far, as that one Night he went diſguiſed to the Raja Jeſſeigne, entreating him with expreſſions of deep reſpect, that he would engage himſelf for his intereſt.

We knew from other hands, that Rauchenara-Begum, together with Teday-kan, the great Maſter of Artillery, and many Omrahs, declared for the young Prince Sultan Ekbar, the third Son of Aureng-Zebe, though he was but ſeven or eight years old; both Parties in the mean time pretending, they had no other deſign than to deliver Chah-Jehan: ſo that the People believed, that now he was going to be ſet at liberty, though none of the Grandees had any ſuch thing in their thoughts, ſpreading this Rumor, only to gain Credit and Concourſe, and becauſe they feared, leſt by the means of Etbar-kan, or ſome other ſecret Intrigue, he ſhould one day appear in the Field. And indeed of all the Parties, there was not one that had reaſon to wiſh for his liberty and reſtoration to the Throne, except Jeſſomſeigne, Mohabet-kan, and ſome others, that as yet had done no great matter to his diſadvantage. The reſt had been all againſt him, at leaſt they had vilely abandon'd him. They knew very well he would be like an unchain'd Lyon, if he came abroad: Who then could truſt him? And what could Etbar-kan hope for, who had kept him up ſo cloſe? I know not, if by ſome Adventure or other, he ſhould have come out of Priſon, whether he would not have ſtood ſingle, and been alone of his Party.

But though Aureng-Zebe was very ſick, yet for all this he gave order for all things, and particularly for the ſure cuſtody of Chah-Jehan his Father; and though he had adviſed Sultan Mazum to go and open the Gates to Chah-Jehan, in caſe he ſhould die, yet he omitted not to have Etbar-kan inceſſantly writ to. And the fifth day, in the height of his ſickneſs, he cauſed himſelf to be carried into the Aſſembly of the Omrahs to ſhew himſelf, and to diſabuſe thoſe who might believe him to be dead, and to obviate popular Tumults, or ſuch Accidents as might have cauſed Chah-Jehan to be ſet at liberty. The ſeventh, ninth, and tenth day, he made himſelf to be carried again into the ſaid Aſſembly for the ſame reaſon; and, what is almoſt incredible, the thirteenth, after he had recollected himſelf from a Fit of Swooning, which occaſioned a rumor through the whole Town of his being dead, he called for two or three of the greateſt Omrahs, and the Raja Jeſſeigne, to let them ſee that he was alive, made himſelf to be raiſed in his Bed, called for Ink and Paper to write to Etbar-kan, and ſent for the Great Seal, which he had truſted with Rauchenara-Bagum, and commonly encloſed in a ſmall Bag, ſealed with a Seal he always wore about his Arm, fearing leſt ſhe had already made uſe of it for her deſigns. I was nigh my Agah, when all this News was told him, and I underſtood, that lifting up his hands to Heaven, he ſaid, What a Soul is this? A matchleſs Fortitude and Courage of Spirit! God preſerve thee Aureng-Zebe, for greater things, certainly he will not that thou ſhouldſt yet die. And indeed after this Fit, he recover'd by little and little.

He had no ſooner recover'd his health, but he ſought to get out of the hands of Chah-Jehan, and Begum-Saheb, the Daughter of Dara, to ſecure the Marriage of Sultan-Ekbar, his third Son, with this Princeſs, on purpoſe thereby to gain him Authority, and to give him the greater right to the Empire: For he it is, who is thought to be by him deſigned for it. He is yet very young, but he hath many near and powerful Relations at the Court, and is born of the Daughter of Chah-Navaze-kan, and conſequently quently of the Blood of the Ancient Sovereigns of Machate; whereas Sultan Mahmoud and Sultan Mazum are only Sons of Ragipontnis, or Daughters of Raja's. These Kings, though Mahumetans, do, for all that, marry of the Daughters of the Heathen, either for State-interest, or for extraordinary Beauty. But Aureng-Zebe, was disappointed in this design: It will hardly be believed, with what height and fierceness of spirit Chah-Jehan and Begum rejected the Proposition, and the young Princess her self, who, in the fear of being carried away, was for some days desperate, and protested she would rather kill her self an hundred times over, if it were possible, than to marry the Son of him that had murthered her Father.

He had no better satisfaction from Chah-Jehan about certain Jewels which he asked of him, in order to finish a piece of work which he caused to be added to a famous Throne, which is so highly esteemed. For he fiercely answer'd, That Aureng-Zebe should take no other Care, but to rule better than he did; that he should let his Throne alone; that he was weary to hear of these Jewels; and that the Hammers were ready to beat them to dust, the first time he should be importun'd again about them.

The Hollanders would not be the last in doing Reverence to Aureng-Zebe: they had thoughts of sending an Ambassador to him. They pitched upon Monsieur Adrican, the Commander of their Factory at Suratte; and being a right honest man, and of good sense and judgment, not neglecting to take the counsel of his Friends, he well acquitted himself of this Employment. Aureng-Zebe, though he carries it very high, and affects to appear a zealous Mahumetan, and consequently to despise the Franguis, or Christians, yet thought fit to receive them with much Respect and Civility. He even was desirous, that this Ambassador should complement him in the mode of the Franguis, after he had been made to do it the Indian way. 'Tis true, he received his Letters by the hand of an Omrah; but that was not to be taken for any Contempt, he having shew'd no more Honour to the Ambassadors of Usbec. After this, he intimated to him, that he might produce his Present; and at the same time he caused him, and some of his Train, to be dressed with a Ser-Apah embroider'd. The Present consisted of store of very fine Scarlet, some large Looking-glasses, and divers excellent pieces of Chinese and Japonese work, among which there was a Paleky, and a Tackravan, or a Field-Throne of admirable workmanship.

This Ambassador was not so soon dispatch'd as he wish'd, it being the Custom of the Kings of Mogol to detain Ambassadors as long as they well can, from a belief they have, that 'tis the interest of their Greatness, to oblige Strangers to give long Attendance at their Court; yet he was not kept so long as the Ambassadors of Usbec. Mean time he had the misfortune, that his Secretary died there, and the rest of his Retinue began to grow sick. When the King dismissed him, he gave him such another Ser-Apah embroider'd, as the first was for himself; and another, a very rich one, for the General of Batavia, together with a Poynard, set about with Jewels, all accompanied with a very obliging Letter.

The chief Aim of the Hollanders in this Embassy was, to make themselves immediately known to the King, thereby to gain Credit, and to intimidate the Governors of the Sea-Ports, and other places, where they have their Factories; that so they may not attempt, when they please, to insult over them, or to trouble them in their Trade; thereby letting them know, that they had to do with a potent Nation, and that hath a door open to address themselves, and to complain immediately to the King. Their End also was, to make it appear, what interest the King had in their Commerce; and therefore they shew'd long Rolls of Commodities, bought up by them through the whole Kingdom, and Lists of considerable Sums of Gold and Silver, every year brought thither by them; but saying not a word of those which they draw thence, from the Copper, Lead, Cinamon, Cloves, Muscadin, Pepper, Wood of Aloes, Elephants, and other Commodities which they vend there.

About this time, one of the most considerable Omrahs of Aureng-Zebe addressed himself to him, and represented, that this multitude and variety of perplexing Affairs, and this perpetual Attention of mind in him, might soon cause a great Alteration in his Temper, and a dangerous Inconvenience in his Health. But Aureng-Zebe, seeming to take almost no notice of what that Omrah said, turn'd himself another way, and approaching to another of the prime Omrahs of the Court, a person of great knowledge and judgment, spoke to him in this purpose (as I was informed by the Son of this Lord, who was my Friend.)

You

You other Sages, are you not all of the mind, that there are times and conjunctions ſo urgent, that a King ought to hazard his life for his Subjects, and ſacrifice himſelf for their defence with Arms in his hands? And yet this effeminate Man would diſſwade me from taking pains, and debort me from watching and ſollicitude for the Publick; and carry me by pretences of Health, to the thoughts of an eaſie life, by abandoning the Government of my People, and the management of Affairs, to ſome Viſir or other. Doth he not know, that Providence having given me a Royal Extraction, and raiſed me to the Crown of Indoſtan, hath not made me for my ſelf alone, but for the good and ſafety of the Publick, and for the procurement of Tranquility and Happineſs to my Subjects, as far as that may be obtained by Juſtice and Power? He ſeeth not the conſequence of his Counſels, and what miſchiefs do attend Viſirſhips. Doth he think it to be without reaſon, what our Grand Sady hath ſo generouſly pronounced, O Kings, ceaſe, ceaſe to be Kings, or govern your Kingdoms your ſelves? Go tell thy Countrey-man, that I ſhall well like of the care he is conſtantly to take of the faithful diſcharge of his Place; but adviſe him alſo, not any more to run out himſelf ſo far as he hath done. We have natural inclination enough to a long, eaſie, and careleſs life, and there need no Counſellors to ſhake off buſineſs and trouble. Our Wives, that lie in our boſom, do too often, beſides our own genius, incline us that way.

At the ſame time there happen'd an Accident, that made a great noiſe at Dehli, eſpecially in the Seraglio, and diſabuſed a great many, that could as hardly believe as my ſelf, that Eunuchs, though they had their Genitals quite cut away, could become amorous as other men. Didar-kan, one of the chief Eunuchs of the Seraglio, who had built an houſe, where he came often to divert himſelf, fell in love with a very beautiful Woman, the Siſter of a Neighbor of his, that was an Heathen Scrivener.

Theſe Amours laſted a good while, before any Body blamed them, ſince it was but an Eunuch that made them, which ſort of men have the priviledge to go where they pleaſe; but the familiarity grew ſo great, and ſo extraordinary betwixt the two Lovers, that the Neighbors began to ſuſpect ſomething, and to rally the Scrivener, which did ſo touch him, that he threatned both his Siſters and the Eunuch to kill them, if they ſhould continue their Commerce. And ſoon after, finding them in the Night lying together, he ſtabbed the Eunuch out-right, and left his Siſter for dead. The whole Seraglio, Women and Eunuchs, made a League together againſt him to make him away; but Aureng-Zebe diſſipated all theſe machinations, and was content to have him turn Mahumetan. Mean time 'tis thought, he cannot long avoid the malice and power of the Eunuchs; for 'tis not, as is the common ſaying, with Men as with Brutes; theſe latter become gentler and more tractable when they are caſtrated; but men more vicious, and commonly very inſolent, though ſometimes it turneth to an admirable Fidelity and Gallantry.

It was alſo about the ſame time, that Aureng-Zebe was ſomewhat diſcontented with Rauchenara-Begum, becauſe ſhe was ſuſpected to have given Acceſs to two young Gallants into the Seraglio, who were diſcover'd, and brought before Aureng-Zebe. Yet this being but a ſuſpicion, he expreſſed to her no great reſentment of it; nor did he make uſe of ſo great rigor and cruelty againſt thoſe poor men, as Chah-Jehan had done againſt the perſon above ſpoken of. The matter was related to me by an old Portugueſe Woman (that had a long while been Slave to the Seraglio, and went out and in at pleaſure) as followeth: She told me that Rauchenara-Begum, after ſhe had drawn from a young man, hidden by her, all his Ability, deliver'd him to ſome Women, to convey him away in the Night thorough ſome Gardens, and ſo to ſave him: But whether they were diſcover'd, or whether they feared they ſhould be ſo, or what elſe might be the cauſe, they fled, and left him there wandring in the midſt of thoſe Gardens, not knowing which way to get out: And being at laſt met with, and brought before Aureng-Zebe, who examined him ſtrictly, but could draw nothing elſe from him, than that he was come in over the walls, he was commanded to get out the ſame way by which he entred: But it ſeems, the Eunuchs did more than Aureng-Zebe had given order for, for they caſt him down from the top of the walls to the bottom. As for the other young Gallant, this ſame Woman aſſured me, that he was found wandring in the Garden like the firſt; and having confeſſed that he was come in by the Gate, Aureng-Zebe commanded likewiſe, that he alſo ſhould paſs away again by the ſame Gate; yet reſerving to himſelf a ſevere chaſtiſement for the Eunuchs, ſince not only the honour of the Royal Houſe, but alſo the ſafety of the King's perſon is herein concerned.

Some months after, there arrived at Dehli ſeveral Ambaſſadors, almoſt at the ſame time. The firſt was Xerif of Meccha, whoſe Preſent did conſiſt in ſome Arabian Horſes: The ſecond and third Ambaſſadors were, he of the King of Hyeman, or Happy Arabia, and he of the Prince of Baſſora, who likewiſe preſented Arabian Horſes. The two remaining Ambaſſadors were ſent from the King of Ethiopia. To the three firſt no great regard was given; they appear'd in ſo miſerable and confuſed an Equipage, that it was perceived they came only to get ſome money by the means of their Preſent, and of the many Horſes, and other Merchandize, which under the pretence of Ambaſſadors, entred without paying any Duty into the Kingdom, there to be ſold, and to buy for the money a quantity of Indian Stuffs, and ſo to return, without paying likewiſe any Impoſt at all.

But as to the Ethiopian Embaſſy, that deſerves to be otherwiſe taken notice of; the King of Ethiopia having received the News of the Revolution of the Indies, had a deſign to ſpread his Name in thoſe Parts, and there to make known his Grandeur and Magnificence, by a ſplendid Embaſſy: Or, as Malice will have it, or rather as the very truth is, to reap ſome Advantage by a Preſent as well as the reſt. Behold therefore this great Embaſſy! He choſe for his Ambaſſadors two perſons, that one would think were the moſt conſiderable in his Court, and the moſt capable to make ſuch a Deſign proſper. And who were they? The one was a Mahumetan Merchant, whom I had ſeen ſome years ago at Moka, when I paſſed there coming out of Egypt over the Red-Sea, where he was to ſell ſome Slaves for that Prince, and to buy of the money, raiſed thence, ſome Indian Commodities. And this is the fine Trade of that great Chriſtian King of Africa. The other was a Chriſtian Merchant of Armenia, born and married in Aleppo, known in Æthiopia by the name of Murat. I had ſeen him alſo at Moka, where he had accommodated me with the half of his Chamber, and aſſiſted me with very good Advice, whereof I have ſpoken in the beginning of this Hiſtory, as a thing taking me off from paſſing into Ethiopia, according to my firſt deſign. He alſo came every year to that place, in that King's Name, for the ſame end that the Mahumetan did, and brought the Preſent which the King made every year, to the Gentlemen of the Engliſh and Dutch Company of the Eaſt-Indies, and carried away theirs. Now the King of Ethiopia, ſutably to his deſign, and the deſire he had of making his Ambaſſadors appear with great Splendor, put himſelf to great Expences for this Embaſſie: He gave them Thirty two young Slaves, of both Sexes, to ſell them at Moka, and thence to make a Sum of Money to bear their Charges. A wonderful Largeſs! Slaves are commonly ſold there for Twenty five or thirty Crowns apiece, one with another. A conſiderable Sum. Beſides, he gave them for a Preſent to the Great Mogol Five and twenty choice Slaves, among which there were nine or ten very young, proper to make Eunuchs of. A very worthy Preſent for a King, and he a Chriſtian, to a Mahumetan Prince! It ſeems the Chriſtianity of the Ethiopians is very different from ours. He added to that Preſent, twelve Horſes, eſteem'd as much as thoſe of Arabia, and a kind of little Mule, of which I ſaw the Skin, which was a very great Rarity, there being no Tyger ſo handſomly ſpeckled, nor Silken Stuff of India ſo finely, ſo variouſly, and ſo orderly ſtreaked, as that was. Moreover, there were for a part of the Preſent, two Elephants teeth, ſo prodigious, that they aſſured it was all that a very able bodied man could do, to lift up one of them from the ground. Laſtly, an Horn of an Ox full of Civett, and ſo big, that the Aperture of it being meaſur'd by me, when it came to Dehli, it had a Diameter of Half a Foot, and ſomewhat better. All things being thus prepared, the Ambaſſadors depart from Gondez, the Capital of Ethiopia, ſituated in the Province of Dambea, and came through a very troubleſom Countrey to Beiloul, which is a diſpeopled Sea-Port over againſt Moka, nigh to Babel-mandel, not daring to come (for Reaſons elſewhere to be alledged) the ordinary way of the Caravans, which is made with eaſe in Forty days to Arkiko, and thence to paſs to the Iſle of Maſoua. During their ſtay at Beiloul, and expecting a Bark of Moka, to waſt over the Red-Sea, there died ſome of their Slaves, becauſe the Veſſel tarried, and they found not in that place thoſe refreſhments that were neceſſary for them. When they came to Moka, they ſoon ſold their Merchandize, to raiſe a Stock of Money according to order. But they had th is ill luck, that that year the Slaves were very cheap, becauſe the Market was glutted glutted by many other Merchants, yet they raiſed a Sum to purſue their Voyage: They Embark'd upon an Indian Veſſel to paſs to Suratte; their Paſſage was pretty good; they were not above Five and twenty days at Sea; but whether it was that they had made no good proviſion for want of ſtock, or what elſe the cauſe might be, many of their Slaves and Horſes, as alſo the Mule, whereof they ſaved the Skin, died. They were no ſooner arrived at Suratte, but a certain Rebel of Viſapour, called Seva-Gi, came and ranſacked and burned the Town, and in it their Houſe, ſo that they could ſave nothing but their Letters, ſome Slaves that were ſick, or which Seva-Gi could not light on, their Ethiopian Habits which he cared not for, and the Mule's Skin, and the Ox's Horn, which was already emptied of the Civett. They did very much exaggerate their misfortune; but thoſe malicious Indians that had ſeen them arrive in ſuch a wretched condition, without Proviſions, without Habits, without Money, or Bills of Exchange, ſaid, that they were very happy, and ſhould reckon the Plunder of Suratte for a piece of their beſt Fortune, foraſmuch as Seva-Gi had ſaved them the labour of bringing their miſerable Preſent to Debli, and had furniſht them with a very ſpecious pretence for their beggarly condition, and for the ſale they had made of their Civett, and of ſome of their Slaves, and for demanding of the Governor of Suratte Proviſions for their ſubſiſtence, as alſo ſome Money and Chariots to continue their Voyage to Debli. Monſieur Adrican, chief of the Dutch Factory, my Friend, had given to the Armenian Murat a Letter of Recommendation to me, which he deliver'd himſelf at Debli, not remembring that I had been his Hoſt at Moka. It was a very pleaſant meeting when we came to know one another, after the ſpace of five or ſix years. I embraced him affectionately, and promiſed him that I would ſerve him in whatever I could; but that, though I had Acquaintance at the Court, it was impoſſible for me to do them any conſiderable good Office there: For ſince they had not brought with them any valuable Preſent, but only the Mule's Skin, and the empty Ox's Horn, and that they were ſeen going upon the ſtreets without any Paleky or Horſes, ſave that of our Father Miſſionary, and mine (which they had almoſt killed) cloathed like Beggars, and followed with ſeven or eight Slaves, bare-headed and bare-foot, having nothing but an ugly Sharſe tyed between their Legs, with a ragged Cloth over their Left ſhoulder, paſſing under their Left Arm like a Summer-Cloak; ſince, I ſaid, they were in ſuch a poſture, whatever I could ſay for them was inſignificant; they were taken for Beggars, and no body took other notice of them. Yet notwithſtanding I ſaid ſo much of the Grandeur of their King to my Agah Danechmendkan, who had cauſe to hearken to me, as managing all Foreign Affairs there, that Aureng-Zebe gave them Audience, received their Letters, preſented them each with an Embroider'd Veſt, a Silken Embroider'd Girdle, and a Turbant of the ſame, gave order for their Entertainment, and diſpatched them in a little time, and that with more honour than there was ground to expect: For in diſmiſſing them, he preſented them each with another ſuch Veſt, and with 6000 Rupies for them all, which amounteth to about 3000 Crowns, of which the Mahumetan had four thouſand, and Murat, becauſe a Chriſtian, but two thouſand. He alſo gave them for a Preſent to their Maſter a very rich Ser-apah or Veſt, two great ſilver and gilt Trumpets, two ſilver Tymbals, a Poynard cover'd with Jewels, and the value of about twenty thouſand Francs in golden and ſilver Rupies, to let their King ſee Money coined, as a Rarity he had not in his Countrey: But Aureng-Zebe knew very well, that theſe Rupies would not go out of the Kingdom, and that they were like to buy Commodities for them: And it fell out ſo; for they laid them out, partly in fine Cotton Cloth, to make ſhirts of for their King, Queen, and their only lawful Son that is to be the Succeſſor; partly in ſilken Stuffs ſtreaked with Gold or Silver, to make Veſts and Summer-Drawers of; partly in Engliſh Scarlet, to make two Arabian Veſts of for their King alſo; and laſtly, in Spices, and in ſtore of coarſer Cloth, for divers Ladies of his Seraglio, and for the Children he had by them, all without paying any Duty.

For all my friendſhip with Murat, there were three things that made me almoſt repent to have ſerved them. The firſt, becauſe Murat having promiſed me to leave with me for 50 Rupies, a little Son of his, that was very pretty, of a delicate black, and without ſuch a ſwelled Noſe, or ſuch thick Lips as commonly the Ethiopians have, broke his word with me, and let me know, that he ſhould take no leſs for him than 300 Rupies. For all this, I had thoughts of buying him, for Rarity's ſake, and that I might say, a Father had sold me his Son. The second, because I found that Murat, as well as the Mahumetan, had obliged themselves to Aureng-Zebe, that they would employ their interest with their King, that he might permit in Ethiopia to rebuild an old Mosquee ruined in the time of the Portugals, and which had been built for a Tomb of a great Dervich, which went from Mecha into Ethiopia, for the propagation of Mahumetanism, and there made great progress. They receiv'd of Aureng-Zebe two thousand Rupies for this Engagement. This Mosquee had been pulled down by the Portugals, when they came with their Succors into Ethiopia, which the then King, who turn'd Catholick, had asked of them against a Mahumetan Prince, invading his Kingdom. The third, because they desired Aureng-Zebe, in the name of their King, to give them an Alcoran, and eight other Books, which I well remember, were of the most reputed in the Mahumetan Religion: Which proceeding seemed to me very unworthy of a Christian Embassador, and Christian King, and confirmed to me what I had been told at Moka, that the Christianity of Ethiopia must needs be some odd thing; that it savors much of Mahumetanism, and that the Mahumetans increase exceedingly in that Empire, especially since the Portugals, that came in there for the Reason lately expressed, were either killed, upon the death of the King, by the Cabal of the Queen-Mother, or expell'd together, with the Patriarch Jesuite, whom they had brought along from Goa.

During the time that the Ambassadors were at Debli, my Agah, who is more than ordinary curious, made them often come to him, when I was present, to inform himself of the State and Government of their Countrey, and principally to learn something of the source of the Nile, which they call Ababile, of which they discourfed to us as a thing so well known, that no body doubted of it. Murat himself, and a Mogol, who was returned out of Ethiopia with him, had been there, and told us very near the same Particulars with those I had received of it at Moka, viz. That the Nile had its Origine in the Countrey of Agaw; that it issued out of the Earth by two Springs bubling up, near to one another, which did form a little Lake of about thirty or forty paces long; that coming out of this Lake, it did make a considerable River: and that from space to space, it receiv'd small Rivers increasing it. They added, that it went on circling, and making as 'twere a great Isle; and that afterwards it tumbled down from steep Rocks into a great Lake, in which there were divers fruitful Isles, store of Crocodiles, and (which would be remarkable enough, if true) abundance of Sea-Calves, that have no other vent for their Excrements than that, by which they take in their food; this Lake being in the Countrey of Dambea, three small days journey from Gondar, and four or five days journey from the source of the Nile. And lastly, that this River did break out of this Lake, being augmented with many River-waters, and with several Torrents falling into it, especially in the rainy Season, (which do regularly begin there, as in the Indies about July, which is very considerable and convincing for the inundation of the Nile) and so runs away through Sonnar, the capital City of the King of Fungi, Tributary to the King of Ethiopia, and from thence passeth to the Plains of Mesre, which is Egypt.

The Ambassadors were not wanting to say more than was liked on the subject of their King's Greatness, and of the strength of his Army, but the Mogolian did not over-much agree with them in it; and in their absence represented to us this Army, which he had seen twice in the Field, with the Ethiopian King on the head of it, as the most wretched thing in the world.

They also related to us divers Particulars of that Countrey, which I have put in my Journal, one day perhaps to be digested and copied: In the mean time I shall insert here three or four things which Murat told me, because I esteem them very extravagant for a Christian Kingdom. He said then, that there were few men in Ethiopia, who besides their lawful Wife, had not many others, and himself owned that he had two, without reckoning her which he had left at Aleppo: That the Ethiopian Women did not so hide themselves, as they do in the Indies among the Mahumetans, nor even as among the Gentiles: That those of the meaner sort of People, Maids, or married Women, Slaves or Free, were often together pell-mell, night and day, in the same Chamber, without those jealousies so common in other Countries: That the Women of Lords did not stick much to go into the house of a simple Cavalier, whom they knew to be a Man of Execution: That if I had gone into Ethiopia, they would soon have obliged me to marry, as they had done, a few years since, to a certain European, who named named himſelf a Greek Phyſician: That an ancient man, of about fourſcore years of age, did one day preſent to the King fourſcore Sons, all of age, and able to bear Arms; and that the King asked him, Whether he had no more but them? To whom having anſwer'd, No, but only ſome Daughters, the King ſent him away with this reproach; Be gone, thou Calf, and be aſhamed for having no more Children at that age, as if Women were wanting in my Dominions! That the King himſelf had at leaſt fourſcore Sons and Daughters running about pell-mell in the Seraglio, for whom he had cauſed to be made a number of round verniſhed ſticks, made like a little maze; thoſe Children being fond of having that in their hand like a Scepter, diſtinguiſhing them from thoſe that were Children of Slaves, or from others living in that place.

Aureng-Zebe ſent alſo twice for theſe Ambaſſadors, for the ſame reaſon that my Agah did, and eſpecially to enquire after the ſtate of Mahumetaniſm in that Country. He had alſo the curioſity of Viewing the skin of the Mule, which remained, I know not how, in the Fortreſs amongſt the Officers; which was to me a great mortification, becauſe they had deſigned it for me for the good ſervices I had done them. I made account to have one day preſented it to ſome very curious perſon in Europe. I urged often, that together with the Mules skin, they ſhould carry the great Horn to Aureng-Zebe, to ſhew it him; but they fear'd, leaſt he ſhould make a queſtion, which would have perplexed them; viz. how it came to paſs, that they had ſaved the Horn from the plunder of Suratte, and loſt the Civet?

Whilſt theſe Ambaſſadors of Ethiopia were at Dehli, it came to paſs that Aureng-Zebe called together his Privy Councel, and the moſt learn'd perſons of his Court, to chuſe a new Maſter for his third Son, Sultan Eckbar, whom he deſign'd for his Succeſſor. In this Councel he ſhew'd the paſſion he hath to have this young Prince well Educated, and to make him a great Man. Aurenge-Zebe is not ignorant of what importance it is, and how much 'tis to be wiſhed, that as much as Kings ſurmount others in Greatneſs, they may alſo exceed them in Virtue and Knowledge. He alſo well knows, that one of the principal ſources of the Miſery, of the miſ-Government, of the un-Peopling, and the decay of the Empires of Aſia proceeds from thence, that the children of the Kings thereof are brought up only by Women and Eunuchs, which often are no other than wretched Slaves of Ruſſia, Circaſſia, Mingrelia, Gurgiſtan and Ethiopia; mean and ſervile, ignorant and inſolent ſouls. Theſe Princes become Kings, when they are of Age, without being inſtructed, and without knowing what 'tis to be a King; amazed when they begin to come abroad out of the Seraglio, as perſons coming out of another World, or let out of ſome ſubterraneous Cave, where they had lived all their life time; wondring at every thing they meet, like ſo many Innocents; believing all, and fearing all, like Children, or nothing at all, as if they were ſtupid: And all this, according to their Nature, and ſutable to the firſt Images imprinted upon them; commonly high and proud, and ſeemingly grave, but of that kind of pride and gravity, which is ſo flat and diſtaſteful, and ſo unbecoming them, that one may plainly ſee, 'tis nothing but brutality or barbarouſneſs, and the effect of ſome ill-ſtudied, and ill-digeſted Documents; or elſe they fall into ſome childiſh civilities, yet more unſavoury; or into ſuch cruelties, as are blind and brutal; or into that mean and groſs vice of drunkenneſs, or into an exceſſive and altogether unreaſonable Luxury, either ruining their bodies and underſtandings with their Concubines, or altogether abandoning themſelves to the pleaſures of Hunting, like ſome carniverous Animals, preferring a pack of Dogs before the life of ſo many poor people, whom they force to follow them in the purſuit of their Game, and ſuffer to periſh of hunger, heat, cold, and miſery. In a word, they always run into ſome extreme or other, being altogether irrational and extravagant, according as they are carried by their natural temper, or by the firſt impreſſions that are given them; thus remaining, almoſt all, in a ſtrange ignorance of what concerns the ſtate of the Kingdom; the reins of the Government being abandoned to ſome Viſir, who entertains them in their ignorance and in their paſſions, which are the two ſtrongeſt ſupports he can have to rule always according to his own mind, with moſt aſſurance, and the leaſt contradiction; and given over alſo to thoſe Slaves their Mothers, and to their Eunuchs, who often know nothing but to continue plots of cruelty, whereby they ſtrangle and baniſh one another, and ſometimes the Viſirs, and even the Grand Signors themſelves; ſo that no man whatſoever, that hath any Eſtate, can be in ſafety of his life.

But

But to return; after all theſe Ambaſſadors, which we have ſpoken of, there came at laſt news, that the Ambaſſador of Perſia was upon the Frontiers. The Perſian Omrahs, that are at the ſervice of the Mogol, ſpred a rumor that he came for affairs of great importance; though intelligent perſons much doubted of a Commiſſion of that nature, conſidering that the time of great conjunctures was paſſed, and that thoſe Omrahs, and the other Perſians did what they did, rather to make a ſhow, than for any thing elſe. Mean time, on the day of the Entry, this Ambaſſador was received with all poſſible reſpect: The Bazars, through which he paſſed, were all new-painted, and the Cavalry attending on the way for above the length of a whole League. Many Omrah's accompanied him with Muſick, Tymbals and Trumpets, and when he entred into the Fortreſs, or the Palace of the King, the Guns went off. Aureng-Zebe received him with much civility, and was content he ſhould make his Addreſs to him after the Perſian mode, receiving alſo, without any ſcruple, immediately from his hands the Letters of his King; which, out of reſpect, he lifted up even to his head, and afterwards read them with a grave and ſerious countenance: Which done, he cauſed an embroider'd Veſt to be brought, together with a rich Turbant and Girdle, commanding it to be put on him in his preſence. A little after, it was intimated to him, that he might order his Preſent to be brought in, which conſiſted of five and twenty as handſome Horſes as ever I ſaw, led, and cover'd with embroider'd trapings; and of twenty very ſtately and luſty Camels, as big as Elephants: Moreover, of a good number of Boxes, ſaid to be full of moſt excellent Roſe-water; and of a certain diſtilled water, very precious, and eſteemed highly cordial; beſides, there were diſplayed five or ſix very rich and very large Tapiſſeries, and ſome embroider'd pieces exceeding noble, wrought in ſmall flowers, ſo fine and delicate, that I know not whether in all Europe any ſuch can be met with. To all this were added four Damaskin'd Swords, with as many Poynards, all cover'd with Jewels; as alſo five or ſix Harnaſſes of Horſes, which were much eſteem'd, being alſo very fine and rich, the ſtuff being raiſed with rich Embroidery ſet with ſmall Pearls, and very fair Turcoiſes of the old Rock.

It was obſerv'd, that Aureng-Zebe beheld this Preſent very attentively; that he admired the beauty and rarity of every piece, and that ſeveral times he extolled the Generoſity of the King of Perſia; aſſigning to the Ambaſſador a place among his chief Omrahs. And after he had entertained him a while with a diſcourſe about the inconveniencies and hardſhips of his Voyage, he diſmiſt him, and made inſtance, that he ſhould come every day to ſee him.

During the four or five Months that the Ambaſſador ſtaid at Dehli, he was always ſplendidly treated at Aureng-Zebe's charge; and the greateſt Omrahs preſented him one after another; and at laſt he was very honourably diſmiſſed: For Aureng-Zebe had him apparelled with another rich Serapah or Veſt, to which he added conſiderable preſents for himſelf, reſerving thoſe he intended for his King, 'till he ſhould ſend an Ambaſſador expreſly; which ſome time after he did.

Notwithſtanding all theſe teſtimonies of honour and reſpect which Aureng-Zebe had ſhew'd to this Ambaſſador, the ſame Perſians, above ſpoken of, gave out, that their King had ſenſibly reproached him in his Letters, with the Death of Dara, and the Impriſonment of Chah-Jehan, as actions unworthy of a Brother, and a Son, and a Muſulman; and that he had alſo hit him with the word Alem-Guire, or Conquerour of the World, which Aureng-Zebe had cauſed to be engraven on his Coyn. But 'tis hard to believe, that the King of Perſia ſhould do any ſuch thing to provoke ſuch a Victorious Prince, ſince Perſia is not in a condition to enter into a War with Indoſtan; I am rather apt to believe, that Perſia hath work enough to keep Kandahar on the ſide of Indoſtan, and the Frontiers on the ſide of Turky: Its Forces and Riches are known; it produceth not always ſuch great Kings as the Chah-Abbas, Valiant, Intelligent, and Politick, knowing to make uſe of every thing, and to do much with ſmall expences. If it were in a condition of undertaking any thing againſt Indoſtan, or really ſenſible of Piety and the Muſal-Man Faith, why was it that in theſe laſt troubles and Civil Wars, which continued ſo long in Indoſtan, the Perſians ſat ſtill and looked on, when Dara, Chah-Jehan, Sultan Sujah, and perhaps the Governour of Caboul deſired their aſſiſtance; and they might with no very great Army, nor great expences have ſeized on the faireſt part of India, beginning from the Kingdom of Caboul, unto the River Indus, and beyond it, and ſo made themſelves Umpires of all things? yet notwithſtanding ſtanding there muſt needs have been ſome offenſive Expreſſions in thoſe Perſian Letters, or elſe the Ambaſſador muſt have done or ſaid ſomething that diſpleaſed Aureng-Zebe; becauſe two or three days after he had diſmiſſed him, he made a rumor to be ſpread abroad, that the Ambaſſador had cauſed the Ham-ſtrings of the preſented Horſes to be Cut; And the Ambaſſador being yet upon the Frontiers, he made him return all the Indian Slaves which he carried along with him, of which he had a prodigious number.

Mean while, Aureng-Zebe was not ſo much concern'd, nor troubled himſelf ſo much with this Ambaſſador, as Chah-Jehan, upon a like occaſion, did with him, that was ſent to him from the great Chah-Abbas. When the Perſians are in the humor of Rallying againſt the Indians, they relate theſe three or four little Stories of them: They ſay, That Chah-Jehan ſeeing that the Courtſhip and Promiſes made to their Ambaſſador were not able to prevail with him, ſo as to make him perform his Salute after the Indian Mode, he deviſed this Artifice; he commanded to ſhut the great Gate of the Court of the Amkus, where he was to receive him, and to leave only open the Wicket, through which one man could not paſs but very difficultly, by ſtooping and holding down his Head, as the faſhion is, when one maketh an Indian Reverence, to the end that it might be ſaid, he had made the Ambaſſador put himſelf in a poſture, which was ſomething lower than the Indian Salam, or Salute; but that that Ambaſſador being aware of this trick, came in with his Back foremoſt: And that Chah-Jehan, out of indignation to ſee himſelf catch'd, told him, Eh Bed-bakt, Thou Wretch, doſt thou think thou comeſt into a Stable of Aſſes, ſuch as thou art? And that the Ambaſſador, without any alteration, anſwer'd, Who would not think ſo, ſeeing ſuch a little Door?

Another ſtory is this; That at a certain time Chah-Jehan taking ill ſome coarſe and fierce Anſwers return'd to him by the Perſian Ambaſſador, could not hold to tell him, What, hath Chah-Abbas no other men at his Court, that he muſt ſend to me ſuch a Fool as thy ſelf? And that the Ambaſſador anſwer'd, He hath many better and wiſer than me, but to ſuch a King, ſuch an Ambaſſador. They add, That on a certain day Chah-Jehan, who had made the Ambaſſador to dine in his Preſence, and ſought ſome occaſion to affront him, ſeeing that he was buſie in picking and gnawing of Bones, asked him ſmiling, Eh Eltchy-Gi, My Lord Ambaſſador, What ſhall the Dogs eat? And that he anſwer'd readily, Kichery, that is, a Diſh of Pulſe, which is the food of the meaner ſort of People, and which he ſaw Chah-Jehan eat, becauſe he loved it.

They ſay alſo, That Chah-Jehan once asked him, What he thought of his new Dehli (which he was building) in compariſon of Hiſpahan? And that he anſwer'd aloud, and with an Oath, Billah, Billah, Hiſpahan doth not come near the duſt of Dehli; which Chah-Jehan took for a high Commendation, though the Ambaſſador mocked him, becauſe the duſt is ſo troubleſom at Dehli.

Laſtly, They relate that Chah-Jehan one day preſſing him to tell him, What he thought of the Grandeur of the Kings of Indoſtan, compared to that of the Kings of Perſia? He anſwer'd, That, in his opinion, one could not better compare the Kings of India than to a large Moon of 15 or 16 days old, and thoſe of Perſia, to a ſmall Moon of two or three days. And that this Anſwer did at firſt pleaſe Chah-Jehan, but that ſoon after he perceived, that that Compariſon did him but little honour, the Ambaſſador's ſence being, that the Kings of Indoſtan were decreaſing, and thoſe of Perſia increaſing.

Whether theſe Points are ſo commendable, and ſuch marks of Wit, every one is free to judge, as he ſeeth cauſe. My opinion is, That a diſcreet and reſpectful Gravity is much more becoming Ambaſſadors, than Rallery and Roughneſs, eſpecially, when they have to do with Kings, who will not be rallied with, witneſs an Accident that befell this very Ambaſſador; for Chah-Jehan was at length ſo weary of him, and his freedom, that he called him no otherwiſe than Fool; and one day gave ſecret order, that when he ſhould enter into a pretty long and narrow Street, that is near the Fortreſs, to come to the Hall of the Aſſembly, they ſhould let looſe upon him an ill-conditioned and fierce Elephant; and certainly, if the Ambaſſador had not nimbly leapt out of his Paleky, and, together with his dextrous Attendants, ſhot ſome Arrows into the Trunk of the Elephant, which forced him to turn back, he had been utterly ſpoiled.

It was at this time, upon the departure of the Perſian Ambaſſador, that Aureng-Zebe received with that admirable wiſdom his Tutor Mallah-Sale, the Hiſtory of which is rare and conſiderable. This old man, who long ſince had retired himſelf towards Caboul, and ſetled himſelf on ſome Lands, which Chah-Jehan had given him, had no ſooner heard of the great fortune of Aureng-Zebe his Diſcipline, who had overcome Dara and all his other Brothers, and was now King of Indoſtan, but he came in haſte to the Court, ſwelled with hopes of being preſently advanced to no leſs than the dignity of an Omrah. He maketh his Court, and endeavors to engage all his Friends, and Rauchenara-Begum, the King's Siſter, employs her ſelf for him. But yet there paſs three whole Months, that Aureng-Zebe does not ſo much as ſeem to look upon him; till at length wearied to have him always at his Elbow, and before his Face, he ſent for him to a place apart, where there was no body but Hakim-lul-Mouluk, Danechmend-kan, and three or four of thoſe Omrahs, that pretend to Science, and then ſpoke to him to this effect (as I was informed by my Agah.)

What is it you would have of me Doctor? Can you reaſonably deſire I ſhould make you one of the chief Omrahs of my Court? Let me tell you, if you had inſtructed me as you ſhould have done, nothing would be more juſt: For I am of this perſwaſion, that a Child well educated and inſtructed, is as much, at leaſt, obliged to his Maſter as to his Father: But where are thoſe good Documents you have given me? In the firſt place you have taught me, that all that Frangiſtan (ſo it ſeems they call Europe) was nothing, but I know not what little Iſland, of which the greateſt King was he of Portugal, and next to him he of Holland, and after him he of England; and as to the other Kings, as thoſe of France and Andaluſia, you have repreſented them to me as our petty Raja's; telling me, that the Kings of Indoſtan were far above them all together, and that they were the true and only Houmajons, the Ekbars, the Jehan-Guyres, the Chah-Jehans, the Fortunate ones, the Great ones, the Conquerors and Kings of the World; and that Perſia and Usbec, Kachguer, Tartar and Catay, Pegu, China, and Matchina did tremble at the name of the Kings of Indoſtan: Admirable Geography! You ſhould rather have taught me exactly to diſtinguiſh all thoſe different States of the world, and well to underſtand their ſtrength, their way of fighting, their Cuſtoms, Religions, Governments and Intereſts; and by the peruſal of ſolid Hiſtory, to obſerve their Riſe, Progreſs, Decay, and whence, how, and by what accidents and errors, thoſe great Changes and Revolutions of Empires and Kingdoms have happened. I have ſcarce learnt of you the name of my Grandfires, the famous Founders of this Empire; ſo far were you from having taught me the Hiſtory of their Life, and what courſe they took to make ſuch great Conqueſts. You had a mind to teach me the Arabian Tongue, to read and to write, I am much obliged to you (forſooth) for having made me loſe ſo much time upon a Language, that requires ten or twelve years to attain to its perfection; as if the Son of a King ſhould think it to be an honour to him, to be a Grammarian, or ſome Doctor of the Law, and to learn other Languages than thoſe of his Neighbors, when he cannot well be without them; he, to whom Time is ſo precious for ſo many weighty things, which he ought by times to learn. As if there were any ſpirit that did not with ſome reluctancy, and even with a kind of debaſement, employ it ſelf in ſo ſad and dry an exerciſe, ſo long ſom and tedious, as is that of learning words.

Thus did Aureng-Zebe reſent the pedantick Inſtructions of his Tutor; to which 'tis affirmed in that Court, that after ſome Entertainment which he had with others, he further added the following Reproof.

'Know you not, that Childhood well govern'd, being a ſtate which is ordinarily 'accompanied with an happy memory, is capable of thouſands of good Precepts and 'Inſtructions, which remain deeply impreſſed the whole remainder of a man's life, and 'keep the mind always raiſed for great Actions? The Law, Prayers, and Sciences, may 'they not as well be learned in our Mother-Tongue, as in Arabick? You told my Fa'ther Chah-Jehan, that you would teach me Philoſophy. 'Tis true, I remember very 'well, that you have entertain'd me for many years with airy queſtions, of things that 'afford no ſatisfaction at all to the mind, and are of no uſe in humane Society, empty 'Notions, and meer Phancies, that have only this in them, that they are very hard to 'underſtand, and very eaſie to forget, which are only capable to tire and ſpoil a good 'underſtanding, and to breed an Opinion that is inſupportable. I ſtill remember, that 'after you had thus amuſed me, I know not how long, with your fine Philoſophy, all 'I retained of it, was a multitude of barbarous and dark words, proper to bewilder,

'per-

'perplex, and tire out the beſt Wits, and only invented, the better to cover the vani'ty and ignorance of men like your ſelf, that would make us believe, that they know
'all, and that under thoſe obſcure and ambiguous words, are hid great myſteries, which 'they alone are capable to underſtand: If you had ſeaſon'd me with that Philoſophy,
'which formeth the mind to ratiocination, and inſenſibly accuſtoms it to be ſatisfied
'with nothing but ſolid Reaſons; if you had given me thoſe excellent Precepts and 'Doctrines, which raiſe the Soul above the Aſſaults of Fortune, and reduce her to an
'unſhakeable and always equal temper, and permit her not to be lifted up by Proſperi-
'ty, nor debaſed by Adverſity; if you had taken care to give me the knowledge of 'what we are, and what are the firſt principles of things; and had aſſiſted me in form'ing in my mind a fit Idea of the greatneſs of the Univerſe, and of the admirable
'order and motion of the parts thereof; if, I ſay, you had inſtilled into me this kind 'of Philoſophy, I ſhould think my ſelf incomparably more obliged to you, than Alex- 'ander was to his Ariſtotle; and believe it my duty to recompence you otherwiſe, than
'he did him. Should not you, inſtead of your flattery, have taught me ſomewhat of 'that point ſo important to a King, which is, what the reciprocal duties are of a So'vereign to his Subjects, and thoſe of Subjects to their Sovereign? And ought not you 'to have conſider'd, that one day I ſhould be obliged with the Sword to diſpute my 'Life and the Crown with my Brothers? Is not that the deſtiny almoſt of all the Sons 'of Indoſtan? Have you ever taken any care to make me learn, what 'tis to beſiege a 'Town, or to ſet an Army in Array? For theſe things I am obliged to others, not at 'all to you. Go, and retire to the Village whence you are come, and let no body know 'who you are, or what is become of you.

At that time there aroſe a kind of Tempeſt againſt Aſtrologers, which did not diſ-pleaſe me. Moſt people of Aſia are ſo infatuated by Judiciary Aſtrology, that they believe there is nothing done here below, but 'tis written above (for ſo they ſpeak.) In all their Undertakings therefore they conſult Aſtrologers. When two Armies are ready to give Battel, they beware of falling on, till the Aſtrologer hath taken and de-termined the moment he fancies propitious for the beginning of the Combat. And ſo, when the matter is about electing a Captain-General of an Army, of diſpatching an Ambaſſador, of concluding a Marriage, of beginning a Voyage, and of doing any other thing, as buying a Slave, putting on new Apparel, &c. nothing of all that is done, without the ſentence of Mr. Star-Gazer; which is an incredible vexation, and a cuſtom drawing after it ſuch important conſequences, that I know not how it can ſub-ſiſt ſo long: For the Aſtrologer muſt needs have knowledge of all that paſſeth, and of all that is undertaken, from the greateſt Affairs to the leaſt.

But behold, it happen'd, that the prime Aſtrologer of the King was drown'd, which occaſioned a great noiſe at Court, and was a great diſcredit to Aſtrology: For he be-ing the perſon that determined the moments of all Enterprizes and Actions for the King, and the Omrahs, every one wondred, how a man ſo experienced, and that for ſo long time had diſpenſed good Adventures to others, could not foreſee his own miſ-fortune. There were not wanting thoſe, who pretended to be wiſer than others, and ſaid, that in Frangiſtan, where Sciences did flouriſh, the Grandees do ſuſpect all ſuch kind of people, and that ſome hold them even no better than Mountebanks, that 'tis much doubted, whether this knowledge is grounded upon good and ſolid reaſons, and that it may very well be ſome fancy of Aſtrologers, or rather an Artifice to make them-ſelves neceſſary to the great ones, and to make them in ſome meaſure to depend on them.

All theſe Diſcourſes very much diſpleaſed the Aſtrologers; but nothing angred them ſo much as this Story, become very famous, viz. That the great Chah-Abas King of Per-ſia, commanded to be digged and prepared a little place in his Seraglio to make a Gar-den; that the young Trees were all ready, and that the Gardener made account to plant them the next day. Mean time the Aſtrologer taking upon him, ſaid, That a good nick of time was to be obſerved for planting them, to make them proſper. Chah-Abas being content it ſhould be ſo, the Star Gazer took his Inſtruments, turned over his Books, made his Calculation, and concluded, That by reaſon of ſuch and ſuch a Conjunction and Aſpect of the Planets, it was neceſſary they ſhould be ſet preſently. The Maſter-Gardener, who minded nothing leſs than this Aſtrologer, was not then at hand; yet for all that, they fell to work immediately, making holes, and planting the Trees, Chah-Abas him-ſelf ſetting them, that it might be ſaid, that they were Trees ſet with Chah-Abas's own hands. The Gardener returning at Night, was ſufficiently amazed when he ſaw the work done; and finding that the right place and order deſigned by him, was not taken; that, for Example, an Apricock-Tree ſtood where an Apple-Tree ſhould ſtand, and a Pear-Tree where an Almond-Tree; being heartily angry with the Aſtrologer, cauſed all the Trees to be plucked up again, and laid them down, with ſome Earth about them, for next morning, the time choſen by himſelf. The News hereof came ſoon to the Ears of the Aſtrologer, who preſently told Chah-Abas of it: He forthwith ſent for the Gardner, and with ſome indignation asked him, What had made him ſo bold, as to pull up thoſe Young Trees he had planted with his own hand? That the time had been ſo exactly taken for them, that ſo good an one would never be had again; and that ſo he had marred all. The rude Gardener, who had a Cup of Chiras-Wine in his head, look'd aſide upon the Aſtrologer, and grumbling and ſwearing, ſaid to him theſe words, Billah, Billah, that muſt needs be an admirable point of time which thou haſt taken for theſe Trees, Unhappy Aſtrologer! They were planted this day Noon, and this Evening they have been plucked up again. When Chah-Abas heard this, he fell a laughing, turned his back upon the Aſtrologer, and went away.

I ſhall here add two Particulars, though hapned in the time of Chah-Jehan, becauſe ſuch things fall out often enough, and do withall give occaſion to obſerve that ancient and barbarous cuſtom, which makes the Kings of India Heirs of the Goods of thoſe that die in their Service. The firſt was of Neiknam-kan, one of the moſt ancient Omrahs of the Court, and who for the ſpace of 40 or 50 years, wherein he had always been employ'd in conſiderable Offices, had heaped up great ſtore of Gold and Silver. This Lord ſeeing himſelf near his End, and thinking upon this unreaſonable cuſtom, which often renders the Wife of a great Man, upon his deceaſe, poor and miſerable in an inſtant, and neceſſitates her to preſent a Petition, begging ſome ſmall Penſion for her ſubſiſtence, and for that of her Children, who are conſtrained to liſt themſelves for common Soldiers under ſome Omrah, who, I ſay, conſidering this with himſelf, ſecretly diſtributed all his Treaſure to indigent Knights, and poor Widows, filled his Trunks with old pieces of Iron, old Shoes, Rags and Bones, and locked and ſealed them, telling every body that they were Goods belonging to Chah-Jehan the King. Theſe Trunks, after his death, were brought before Chah-Jehan, when he was in the Aſſembly, and by his command inſtantly opened in the preſence of all the Omrahs, that ſaw all this fine Stuff, which ſo provoked and diſcompoſed Chah-Jehan, that he roſe in great fury, and went away.

The other is only a piece of Gallantry. A rich Banean, or Heathen Merchant, being a great Uſurer, (as moſt of them are) who had always been in Employment, and in the Pay of the King, came to dye. Some years after his death, his Son did extremely importune the Widow, his Mother, to let him have ſome Money: She finding him to be a prodigal and debauched Youth, gave him as little as ſhe could. This young Fool, by the perſwaſion of others like himſelf, made his Complaints to Chah-Jehan, and was ſo ſilly, as to diſcover to him all the Goods his Father had left, which amounted to Two hundred thouſand Rupies, or Hundred thouſand Crowns. Chah-Jehan, who ſoon got an itch for this Treaſure, ſent for the Widow, and commanded her in the open Aſſembly to ſend him an Hundred thouſand Rupies, and to give Fifty thouſand to her Son, giving order at the ſame time to put her away. The old Woman, though ſurprized at this Command, and perplext enough, that ſhe was ſo ſuddenly thruſt out, without the liberty of ſpeaking, yet loſt not her judgment, but with a loud voice gave out, That ſhe had ſomething of moment to diſcover to his Majeſty: Whereupon being brought in again, ſhe ſaid, God ſave your Majeſty; I find that my Son hath ſome reaſon to demand of me the Goods of his Father, as being of his and my fleſh and blood, and therefore our Heir; but I would gladly know, what Kindred your Majeſty is to my deceaſed Husband, to be his Heir. When Chah-Jehan heard ſo plain a piece of Rallery, and a diſcourſe of Parentage of the King of the Indies, with a She-Banian, or Idolatrous She-Merchant, he could not hold laughing, and commanded ſhe ſhould be gone, and that nothing ſhould be asked of her.

But to return, I ſhall not relate all the other conſiderable things that have happened ſince the end of the War, that is, ſince 1660. unto my departure, which was above ſix years after; though doubtleſs that would tend much to the deſign I had in relating the other Particulars, which is, to make known the Genius and Temper of the Mogols and Indians. This I may do in another place: Here I ſhall only give an Account of five or ſix Particulars, which thoſe that ſhall have read this Relation, will doubtleſs be curious of.

The

The firſt, that though Aureng-Zebe made Chah-Jehan his Father, to be kept in the Fortreſs of Agra with all imaginable care and caution; yet notwithſtanding he ſtill left him in his old Apartment with Begum-Saheb, his eldeſt Daughter, his other Women, Singers, Dancers, Cooks, and others, nothing of that kind was wanting to him. There were alſo certain Mullahs, that were permitted to come and to read the Alcoran to him (for he was become very devout.) And when he thought fit, there were brought before him brave Horſes, and tamed Gazelles (which is a kind of Goat) to make them fight with one another; as alſo divers ſorts of Birds of Prey, and ſeveral other rare Animals, to divert him as formerly. Aureng-Zebe himſelf uſed an Art to overcome at laſt his fierceneſs and obſtinacy, which he had hitherto kept, though a Priſoner. And this was the effect of the obliging Letters, full of reſpect and ſubmiſſion, which he often wrote to his Father, conſulting him often as his Oracle, and expreſſing a thouſand cares for him; ſending him alſo unceſſantly ſome pretty Preſent or other, whereby Chah-Jehan was ſo much gained, that he alſo wrote very often to Aureng-Zebe touching the Government and State Affairs, and of his own Accord ſent him ſome of thoſe Jewels, which before he had told him of, that Hammers were ready to beat them to Powder the firſt time he ſhould again ask for them. Beſides, he conſented that the Daughter of Dara, which he had ſo peremptorily denied, ſhould be deliver'd to him; and granted him at length that pardon and paternal bleſſing which he had ſo often deſired without obtaining it. Yet, under all this, Aureng-Zebe did not always flatter him; on the contrary, he ſometimes return'd ſharp Anſwers, when he met with ſtrains in his Fathers Letters that were pregnant, or expreſſed ſomething of his former height and authority. Of this we may judge by the Letter, which I know from a very good hand was once written to him by Aureng-Zebe, to this effect:

Sir, You would have me indiſpenſably follow thoſe ancient Cuſtoms, and make my ſelf Heir to all thoſe that are in my Pay with the wonted rigor: An Omrah, and even a Merchant can no ſooner dye, and ſometimes even before his death, but we ſeal up his Trunks, and ſeize on his Goods, and make a ſtrict enquiry into his Eſtate, impriſoning and ill-treating the Officers of the Houſe to diſcover to us all he hath, even to the leaſt Jewels. I will believe that there is ſome policy in doing ſo, but it cannot be denied, that 'tis very rigorous, and ſometimes very unjuſt; and to ſpeak the very truth, we may deſerve well enough, that the ſame ſhould befall us every day, what hapned to you from your Neikman-kan, and from the Widow of your rich Indian Merchant. Moreover (ſaid he) it ſeems, I am by you reputed proud and haughty now I am King: As if you knew not by the experience of more than Forty years of your Reign, how heavy an Ornament a Crown is, and how many ſad and reſtleſs Nights it paſſeth through: as if I could forget that excellent paſſage of Mir-Timur, (commonly called Tamberlan) which is ſo ſeriouſly delivered to us by that great Grandfather of ours, Ekbar, to the end that we might the more weigh the importance and value of it, and conſider, whether we have cauſe to pride our ſelves ſo much in a Crown. You well know, that he ſaid, that the ſame day when Timur took Bajazet, he made him come before him, and having fixed his eyes on him, fell a laughing; at which Bajazet being highly offended, fiercely ſaid to him, Laugh not at my Fortune, Timur; know that 'tis God that is the Diſpenſer of Kingdoms and Empires; and that the ſame can befall you to morrow, that hath befallen me to day. Whereupon Timur made this ſerious and brave Anſwer, I know as well as you, Bajazet, that 'tis God that diſtributeth Kingdoms and Empires; I laugh not at your ill Fortune, God forbid I ſhould do ſo: But beholding your face, I ſmiled, and had this thought, That certainly theſe Kingdoms and Empires muſt in themſelves be very little and contemptible things in the eyes of God, ſince he giveth them to perſons ſo ill made as you and I both are; a deformed one-ey'd man, as you; and a lame wretch, as my ſelf. You require alſo, that abandoning all my other Employments, which I believe very neceſſary for the eſtabliſhment and happineſs of this State, I ſhould think on nothing but Conqueſts, and the enlargement of the Empire. I muſt confeſs that this is indeed the buſineſs of a great Monarch, and of a Soul truly Royal, and that I ſhould not deſerve to be of the Blood of the Great Timur, if I were not of that mind, and had not ſuch inclinations. Mean time, I think I ſit not idle, and my Armies are not uſeleſs in the Kingdoms of Decan and Bengale: But we muſt alſo aver, that the greateſt Conquerors are not always the greateſt Kings; that we too often ſee a Barbarian making Conqueſts, and that thoſe great Bodies of Conqueſts do ordinarily fall of themſelves, and by their own weight. He is a great King, that knows to acquit himſelf worthily of that Great and Auguſt Employment and Charge of Kings, which is to diſpenſe Juſtice to their Subjects, &c. The reſt is not come to my hands.

The second is in regard of the Emir-Jemla. It were to injure this great Man, to pass by with silence his deportment to Aureng-Zebe after the War, and the manner of ending his days. This eminent person after he had dispatched the Affair of Bengale, with Sultan Sujah (the second of these four Brothers) not like Gionkan, that infamous Patan with Dara; nor like the Raja of Serenaguer with Soliman-Chekouh; but like a Great Captain and dextrous Politician, pursuing him as far as the Sea-side, and necessitating him to fly and to escape out of his hands; after, I say, he had done these things, he sent an Eunuch to Aureng-Zebe, intreating him, that he would give him leave to transport his Family to Bengale; that now that the War was at an end, and he broken with Age, he hoped he would grant him the advantage of ending his life in the company of his Wife and Children.

But Aureng-Zebe is too sharp-sighted, not to pierce into the designs of Emir. He seeth him triumphing over Sujah; he knows his great credit and reputation, and that he hath the esteem of a very wise, undertaking, valiant and rich man; and that the Kingdom of Bengale is not only the best of all Indostan, but strong of it self, and further, that this Emir is in the head of a well disciplin'd Army, which both honours and fears him. Besides, he is not ignorant of his ambition, and foreseeth well enough, that if he should have with him his Son Mahmet-Emirkan, he would aspire to the Crown, and at least take full possession of Bengale, if he should not be able to advance things further. At the same time he is also well aware, that there is danger in refusing him, and that he may possibly prove such a man, as in case of denial, may run into some dangerous extream, as he had done in Golkonda. How then, think ye, did he carry himself in this conjuncture? He sends to him his Wife and Daughter, and all the Children of his Son: He maketh the Emir a Mir-Ul Omrah, which is in that Empire the greatest degree of honour that a Favourite can be raised to: And as to Mahmet-Emirkan, he maketh him the Great-Bakchis, which is a dignity and charge like that of our Great Master of the Horse, the second or third Office in the State, but such an one as absolutely obligeth the possessor of it to be always at the Court, not suffering him, but very difficultly, to be absent from the person of the King.

The Emir soon perceived, that Aureng-Zebe had skilfully put by the stroke, that it would be in vain the second time to ask of him his Son; that he could not do it without offending him; and that therefore the safest way would be to rest contented with all the testimonies of Friendship, and with all the Honours, together with the Government of Bengale; being in the mean time always upon his guard, and in such a posture, that since he could attempt nothing against Aureng-Zebe, Aureng-Zebe should not be able to attempt any thing against him.

Thus have we seen these two Great Men carry themselves to one another: And in this condition did affairs remain for almost a year; till Aureng-Zebe, too well knowing that a great Captain cannot be long at rest, and that, if he be not employed in a Foreign War, he will at length raise a Domestick one; proposed to him to make War upon that rich and potent Raja of Acham, whose Territories are on the North of Dake, upon the Gulf of Bengale. The Emir, who in all appearance had already designed this same thing of himself, and who believed, that the Conquest of this Country, would make way for his Immortal Honour, and be an occasion of carrying his Arms as far as China, declared himself ready for this Enterprize. He embarked at Dake with a puissant Army, upon a River which comes from those parts; upon which having gone about an hundred Leagues North-Eastward, he arrived at a Castle called Azo, which the Raja of Acham had usurped from the Kingdom of Bengale, and possessed for many years. He attacked this place, and took it by force in less than fifteen days; thence marching over Land towards Chamdara, which is the Inlet into the Country of that Raja; he entred into it after 26 days journey, still Northward: There a Battel was fought, in which the Raja of Acham was worsted, and obliged to retreat to Guerguon, the Metropolis of his Kingdom, four miles distant from Chamdara. The Emir pursued him so close, that he gave him no time to fortifie himself in Guerguon: For he arrived in sight of that Town in five days, which constrained the Raja, seeing the Emir's Army, to fly towards the Mountains of the Kingdom of Lassa, and to abandon Guerguon, which was pillaged, as had been Chamdara. They found there vast riches, it being a great, very fair and Merchant-like Town, and where the Women are extraordinarily beautiful. Mean time, the season of the Rains came in ſooner than uſually; and they being exceſſive in thoſe parts, and overflowing all the Countrey, except ſuch Villages as ſtand on raiſed ground, the Emir was much embaraſſed. For the Raja made his people of the Mountains come down from all parts thereabout, and to carry away all the proviſions of the Field; whereby the Emir's Army (as rich as 'twas) before the end of the rains fell into great ſtreights, without being able to go forward or backward. It could not advance, by reaſon of the Mountains very difficult to paſs, and continually peſter'd with great Rains; nor retreat, becauſe of the like Rains and deep wayes; the Raja alſo having cauſed the way to be digged up as far as to Chamdara: So that the Emir was forced to remain in that wretched condition during the whole time of the Rain; after which, when he found his Army diſtaſted, tired out, and half ſtarved, he was neceſſitated to give over the Deſign he had of advancing, and to return the ſame way he was come. But this Retreat was made with ſo much pains, and ſo great inconveniencies, by reaſon of the dirt, the want of Victuals, and the purſuit of the Raja falling on the Rear, that every body (but he) that had not known how to remedy the diſorder of ſuch a March, nor had the patience to be ſometimes five or ſix hours at one paſſage to make the Souldiery get over it without confuſion, would have utterly periſh'd, himſelf, Army, and all; yet he, notwithſtanding all theſe difficulties and obſtacles, made a ſhift to come back with great honour and vaſt riches. He deſign'd to return thither again the next year, and to purſue his undertaking, ſuppoſing that Azo, which he had fortified, and where he left a ſtrong Garriſon, would be able to hold out the reſt of the year againſt the Raja. But he was no ſooner arrived there, but Fluxes began to rage in his Army: Neither had himſelf a body of Steel more than the reſt; he fell ſick and died, whereby Fortune ended the juſt apprehenſions of Aureng-Zebe. I ſay, the Juſt apprehenſions; for there was none of thoſe that knew this great man, and the ſtate of the affairs of Indoſtan, who did not ſay, 'Tis this day that Aureng-Zebe is King of Bengale. And himſelf could not forbear to expreſs ſome ſuch thing; for he publickly ſaid to Mahmet-Emir-kan; You have loſt your Father, and I the greateſt and the moſt dangerous Friend I had; yet notwithſtanding he comforted this Son, and withal aſſured him, that he would ever be a Father to him. And whereas 'twas thought, that he would at leaſt cut off his Salary, and make Inquiſition into his Treaſury, he confirmed him in his Office of Bakchis, augmented his Penſion to a thouſand Rupies a month, and left him Heir of all the Eſtate of his Father, although the Cuſtom of the Country empower'd him to ſeize on all.

The third is concerning Chah-beſt-kan, whom Aureng-Zebe made firſt Governour of Agra, when he went out to the Battel of Kadjoue againſt Sultan Sujah; and afterward, Governour and General of the Army in Decan; and at laſt, after the death of Emir-Jemla, Governour and General of the Army in Bengale, together with the charge of Mirul Omrah which Emir-Jemla had poſſeſſed. This Chah-beſt-kan is he, whom in our Hiſtory we have mention'd as Uncle to Aureng-Zebe, and one that hath ſo much contributed to his happineſs by his eloquent and skilful pen, as well as by his intrigues and counſels. It would be injurious to his Renown alſo, to be ſilent of the important enterpriſe, which he undertook preſently when he entred upon his Government; and that the rather, becauſe Emir-Jemla, whether out of Policy, or for another cauſe, had no mind to tempt him; as alſo, becauſe the particularities, which I am going to relate, will ſhew not only the paſſed and preſent ſtate of the Kingdoms of Bengale and Rakan, which hitherto hath not been well deſcribed to us by any; but alſo ſome other things that are worth knowing.

To the end therefore that the importance of Chah-beſt-kan's attempt may be well underſtood, and a good Idea be had of what paſſeth about the Gulf of Bengale, we are to know, that theſe many years there have always been in the Kingdom of Rakan or Moy, ſome Portugueſes, and with them a great number of their Chriſtian Slaves, and other Franguis, gather'd from all parts. That was the refuge of the Run-aways from Goa, Ceilan, Cochin, Malague, and all thoſe other places, which the Portugueſes formerly held in the Indies; and they were ſuch as had abandoned their Monaſteries, men that had been twice or thrice Married, Murtherers: In a word, ſuch as had deſerved the Rope, were moſt welcome and moſt eſteem'd there, leading in that Country a life that was very deteſtable, and altogether unworthy of Chriſtians, inſomuch that they impunely butchered and poiſoned one another, and aſſaſſinated their own own Prieſts, who ſometimes were not better than themſelves. The King of Rakan in the apprehenſion he hath ever had of the Mogol, kept them for a guard of his Frontiers, in a Port-Town called Chategon, giving them Land, and liberty to live as they pleaſed. Their ordinary Trade was Robbery and Piracy. With ſome ſmall and light Gallies they did nothing but coaſt about that Sea, and entring into all Rivers thereabout, and into the Channels and Arms of Ganges, and between all thoſe Iſles of the lower Bengale, and often penetrating even ſo far as fourty or fifty leagues up into the Country, ſurprized and carried away whole Towns, Aſſemblies, Markets, Feaſts and Weddings of the poor Gentiles, and others of that Country, making Women Slaves, great and ſmall, with ſtrange cruelty; and burning all they could not carry away. And thence it is, that at preſent there are ſeen in the mouth of Ganges ſo many fine Iſles quite deſerted, which were formerly well peopled, and where no other Inhabitants are found but wild Beaſts, and eſpecially Tygers.

This great number of Slaves, which thus they took from all quarters, behold what uſe they made of. They had boldneſs and impudence enough, to come and ſell to that very Country the old people, which they knew not what to do with; where it ſo fell out, that thoſe who had eſcaped the danger by flight, and by hiding themſelves in the Woods, labour'd to redeem to day their Fathers and Mothers, that had been taken yeſterday. The reſt they kept for their ſervice to make Rowers of them; and ſuch Chriſtians as they were themſelves, bringing them up to robbing and killing; or elſe they ſold them to the Portugueſes of Goa, Ceilan, St. Thomas, and others, and even to thoſe that were remaining in Bengale at Ogouli, who were come thither to ſettle themſelves there by the favour of Jehan-Guyre, the Grandfather of Aureng-Zebe, who ſuffered them there upon the account of Traffick, and of his having no averſion to Chriſtians, as alſo becauſe they promiſed him to keep the Bay of Bengale clear from all Pyrates. And it was towards the Iſle of Galles, near the Cape of Palmes, where this fine Trade was. Theſe Pyrates lay there in wait at the paſſage for the Portugueſes, who filled their Ships with them at a very eaſie rate; this infamous Rabble impudently bragging, that they made more Chriſtians in one year, than all the Miſſionaries of the Indies in ten; which would be a ſtrange way of enlarging Chriſtianity.

Theſe were the Pyrates that made Chah-Jehan, who was a more zealous Mahumetan than his Father Jehan-Guyre, to expreſs at laſt his paſſion, not only againſt the Reverend Fathers the Jeſuits, Miſſionaries of Agra, in that he cauſed to be pulled down the beſt part of a very fair and large Church that had been built, as well as that of Labor, by the favour of Jehan-Guyre, who as I ſaid, did not hate Chriſtianity; and upon which there ſtood a great Steeple with a great Bell in it, whoſe ſound might be heard over all the Town, not only, I ſay, againſt thoſe Jeſuits, but alſo againſt the Chriſtians of Ogouli: For being impatient to ſee them connive at the Pyrates, to make the name of the Franguis formidable, and to fill their houſes with Slaves that were his own Subjects, he waſted and utterly ruined them, after he had both with fair words and menaces drawn from them as much money as he could: And becauſe they were indiſcreetly obſtinate, in refuſing what he demanded of them, he beſieged them, and cauſed them all to be brought to Agra, even their very Children, their Prieſts and Friers. This was a miſery and a deſolation not to be paralleld; a kind of Babilonian tranſmigration. There they were all made Slaves: The handſom Women were ſhut up in the Seraglio; the old Women and others were diſtributed among divers Omrahs. The young Lads were circumciſed, and made Pages; and men of age renounced for the moſt part their Faith, either terrified by the threatnings they heard daily, that they ſhould be trampled upon by Elephants, or drawn away by fair Promiſes. 'Tis true, that there were ſome of thoſe Friers, who perſiſted, and that the Miſſionaries of Agra, who notwithſtanding all this unhappineſs, remained in their houſes, found means afterwards, partly by Friends, partly by Money, to get many of them away, and to have them conveyed to Goa, and to other places belonging to the Portugueſes.

They were alſo the ſame Pyrates, who ſome time before the deſolation of Ogouli, offered to the Vice-Roy of Goa to put the whole Kingdom of Rakan into their hands for the King of Portugal; but he refuſed, they ſay, this offer, out of arrogance and jealouſie, and would not ſend the ſuccours, which for that end was demanded of him by a certain Baſtian Conſalve, who had made himſelf head of thoſe people, and was become become ſo potent and conſiderable, that he married one of the Kings Daughters; being unwilling that it ſhould be ſaid, that a man of ſo mean Extraction as this Baſtian was, had done ſuch a Maſter-piece. But it may be ſaid on this occaſion, that this is not much to be wondred at, conſidering that the Portugueſes in the Indies by ſuch a conduct have divers times been faulty on the like occaſions, in Japan, in Pegu, in Ethiopia, and other places; not to mention, that by this way, and that perhaps by a juſt Divine chaſtiſement (as they all frankly confeſs themſelves) they are become a prey to their Enemies, and fallen ſo low in the Indies, that I know not whether they will ever recover there; whereas formerly, before they were corrupted by vice, and degenerated through pleaſure, they made all others tremble in thoſe parts; foraſmuch as then they were brave and generous men, zealous for the Chriſtian Religion, conſiderable for gallant exploits and for riches; all the Indian Kings ſeeking their friendſhip.

Beſides this, the ſame Pyrates ſeized at that time on the Iſle of Sondiva, an advantageous Poſt to command a part of the Mouth of Ganges: In which Iſle a certain Auguſtin Frier, a very famous man, acted the King for many years, having taken a courſe, God knows how, to rid himſelf of the Commander of that place.

Moreover, the ſame Robbers took Sultan-Sujah at Daka, to carry him away in their Galeaſſes to Rakan, as we related above, and found means to open his Coffers, and to rob him of good ſtore of Jewels, which afterwards were ſecretly, and at a very cheap rate, ſold in Rakan, moſt of them being fallen into the hands of people that had no skill in them, and afterwards into the hands of the Hollanders, and others, who knew how to buy them up quickly, making thoſe fellows believe, that they were ſoft Diamonds, and that they would pay them according to the degrees of their hardneſs.

Laſtly, They are they that for many years have given exerciſe to the Great Mogol in Bengale; having obliged him there to keep always Garriſons every where upon the Paſſes, and a great Militia, and a Fleet alſo of Galeaſſes to oppoſe their courſes, and who, notwithſtanding all this, have made ſhift to make ſtrange devaſtations, and often to enter far into the Country, and to laugh at all the Souldiery of the Mogols; in regard they were become ſo bold, and ſo dextrous at their Weapons, and ſo skilful in piloting their Galeaſſes, that four or five of them ſtuck not to ſet upon fourteen or fifteen Mogolians, which they alſo actually worſted, and took or run aground. And upon theſe Pyrates Chah heſt-kan caſt his eyes as ſoon as he came into Bengale, taking a reſolution to deliver the Country of this plague of people, that had ſo long waſted it; and deſigning afterwards to paſs on, and to attack the King of Rakan, according to the order of Aurenge-Zebe, who at any price had a mind to revenge the blood of Sultan-Sujah, and all his Family, that had been ſo cruelly handled, and to teach that Barbarian, how the Blood Royal was to be regarded and eſteemed on any occaſion whatſoever: Behold now with what dexterity Chah heſt-kan carrieth on this deſign!

Knowing that 'tis impoſſible to paſs any Cavalry by Land, no not ſo much as any Infantry, from Bengale into Rakan, becauſe of the many channels and rivers upon the Frontiers; and alſo that on the other ſide, thoſe Pyrates of Chatigon, whom we juſt now were ſpeaking of, would be powerful enough to hinder him from tranſporting them by Sea; he thought upon this experiment, viz. to engage the Hollanders in his deſign. He therefore ſent a kind of Ambaſſador to Batavia, empowering him to treat upon certain Conditions, with the General of that Company, joyntly to ſubdue the whole Kingdom of Rakan; as formerly Chah-Abbas ſubdued that of Ormus, in conjunction with the Engliſh. The General of Batavia ſeeing the thing to be poſſible, and that it was a means more and more to break the Portugueſes in the Indies, and that it would turn to a very good account to the Company, diſpatch'd away two Men of War for Bengale, to favour the tranſportation of the Mogolian Troops in ſpight of thoſe Pyrates. But obſerve what Chah-heſt-kan did before theſe Men of War arrived: He equipped a great number of Galeaſſes, and many large Veſſels to tranſport the Army; threatned the Pyrates, utterly to ſpoil and ruin them; acquainted them with the deſign of Aureng-Zebe upon Rakan; that a potent Army of the Dutch was near; that they ſhould think on themſelves and their families, if they were wiſe; and in a word, if they would abandon the ſervice of the King of Rakan, and take that of Aureng-Zebe, he would procure very good conditions for them, diſtribute amongſt them as much Land in Bengale as they deſired, and pay them the double of what they had now.

Aureng-

'Tis doubtful, whether theſe Menaces and Promiſes made impreſſion upon them, or whether it was not an Accident that moved them, they having about that time aſſaſſinated one of the chief Officers of the King of Rakan, and apprehending a puniſhment for that Crime: However it be, they were caught, and they were one day ſtruck with ſuch a panick terror, that they ſhipp'd themſelves all at once in forty or fifty of their Galeaſſes, and wafted over to Bengale to Chah-heſt-kan, and that with ſo much precipitation, that they hardly took time to embark their Wives and Children, and what elſe was moſt precious to them. Chah-heſt-kan receiv'd them with open Arms, courted them exceedingly, gave them very conſiderable Pay, and without letting them cool, made them, jointly with his whole Army, to attack and take the Iſle of Sondiva, which was fallen into the hands of the King of Rakan, and thence to paſs with all his Horſe and Foot to Chatigon. About this time the two Holland Veſſels arrived, but Chah-heſt-kan, who thought that henceforth it would be eaſie for him to compaſs his deſign, thanked them. I ſaw theſe Ships in Bengale, and their Commanders, who were but little contented with ſuch thanks and liberalities of Chah-heſt-kan. As to the Pyrates, ſince now he holds them faſt, and hopeleſs of ever returning to Chatigon, and hath no more need of them, he makes nothing of all thoſe large Promiſes he made them, and treats them not as he ſhould, but as they deſerve, leaving them whole months without Pay, and not looking upon them otherwiſe than Traytors, and infamous men, unfit to be truſted, after they have ſo vilely deſerted him, whoſe Salt they had eaten ſo many years. After this manner did Chah-heſt-kan put an end to this Rabble, which, as I ſaid, have ruined and diſpoiled all the lower Bengale. Time will ſhew whether he will be as happy in the remainder of his Enterprize againſt the King of Rakan.

The fourth Particular is concerning the two Sons of Aureng-Zebe, viz. Sultan Mahmoud, and Sultan Mazum. He ſtill keeps the firſt of them in Gonaleor, but (if one may believe the common report) without making him take the Pouſt, which is the ordinary Drink of thoſe that are put into that place. As to the other, though he hath always been a pattern of reſervedneſs and moderation, yet one knows not whether he was not too forward in making a Party, when his Father was ſo extremely ſick; or whether Aureng-Zebe have not upon other occaſions perceiv'd ſomething that might give him cauſe of jealouſie; or whether he had not a mind to make an authentick proof of both his Obedience and Courage. However it be, one day he commanded him in an unconcerned manner, in a full Aſſembly of the Omrahs, to go and kill a Lyon that was come down to the Mountains, and had made great havock and waſte in the Countrey; and this he did, without giving order to furniſh him with thoſe ſtrong and large Nets, which they are wont to employ in this dangerous kind of hunting in a real mood; telling the great Hunting-Maſter, who preſently call'd for thoſe Nets, that when he was Prince, he did not look for ſuch Formalities. It was the good fortune of Sultan Mazum, that he proſper'd in this Attempt, not loſing any more than two or three men, and ſome Horſes that were wounded, although, on the other hand, the matter went not off ſo pleaſantly, the wounded Lyon having leapt up to the head of the Sultan's Elephant. Since that time, Aureng-Zebe hath not been backward to expreſs much Affection to him; he hath given him even the Government of Decan, though with ſo little power and treaſure, that there is no great cauſe to apprehend any thing upon that Account.

The fifth thing toucheth Mohabet-kan, the Governor of Kaboul, whom Aureng-Zebe took from his Government, and generouſly pardon'd; not willing, as he ſaid, to loſe ſo brave a Captain, and that had ſtuck ſo cloſe to his Benefactor Chah-Jehan. He made him even Governor of Guzuratte, in the place of Jeſſomſeigne, whom he ſent to make War in Decan. It may very well be, that ſome conſiderable Preſents he made to Rauchenara-Begum, and a good number of excellent Perſian Horſe and Camels, wherewith he preſented Aureng-Zebe, together with fifteen or ſixteen thouſand Rupies of Gold, did contribute to make his peace.

On this occaſion of mentioning the Government of Kaboul, which borders upon the Kingdom of Kandahar, which is now in the hands of the Perſians, I ſhall here briefly briefly add ſome particulars, that ſerve to this Hiſtory, and will ſtill more diſcover that Country, and declare the Intereſts between Indoſtan and Perſia, which no body, that I know of, hath explained hitherto.

Kandahar, that ſtrong and important place, which is the Capital and the ſwaying City of this Noble and Rich Kingdom of the ſame Name, hath in theſe latter Ages been the ſubject of grievous Wars between the Mogols and Perſians, each of them pretending a Right thereto. Ekbar, that great King of the Indies, took it by force from the Perſians, and kept it during his life. And Chah-Abbas, that famous King of Perſia, retook it from Jehan-Guyre, the Son of Ekbar. Afterwards it return'd to Chah-Jehan, Son of Jehan-Guyre, not by the Sword, but by the means of the Governor Aly-Merdan-kan, who ſurrendred it to him, and went over to live at his Court, apprehending the Artifices of his Enemies, who had brought him into diſfavour with the King of Perſia, that ſent for him to make him give an accompt, and to deliver up his Government. The ſame City was beſieged, and retaken afterwards by the Son of Chah-Abbas, and ſince that beſieged twice again, yet without being taken by Chah-Jehan. The firſt time it was ſaved from being taken by the ill underſtanding and jealouſie between the Perſian Omrahs, that are Penſioners of the Great Mogol, and the moſt powerful of his Court, as alſo by the reſpect they bear to their Natural King: For they all behaved themſelves very effeminately in the Siege, and would not follow the Raja Roup, who had already planted his Standards upon the Wall on the ſide of the Mountain. The ſecond time it was ſaved by the jealouſie of Aureng-Zebe, who would not fall into the breach of the Wall, that our Franguis, the Engliſh, Portugueſes, Germans and French had made by their Canon, though it was a large one; being unwilling to have it ſaid, that in the time of Dara, who was, in a manner, the firſt mover of that Enterpriſe, and was then in the City of Caboul, with his Father Chah-Jehan, the Fortreſs of Kandahar was taken. Chah-Jehan, ſome years before the late trouble, was alſo ready to beſiege it the third time, had not Emir-Jemla diverted him from it, adviſing him to turn his Forces towards Decan, (as hath been ſaid;) with whom Aly-Merdan-kan himſelf concurred, who was ſo earneſt in his diſſwading him from it, as to ſay to him theſe words, which I ſhall punctually relate, as having ſomething extravagant in them:

Your Majeſty will never take Kandahar, unleſs you had ſuch a Traytor there as my ſelf; except you were reſolved never to bring a Perſian into it, and to make the Bazars or Markets wholly free, that is, to lay no Impoſt on thoſe that furniſh the Army with proviſion.

At length, Aureng-Zebe, like the others, had prepared himſelf in theſe latter years to beſiege it alſo; whether it was that he was offended at the tart Letters, written to him by the King of Perſia, or by reaſon of the affronts and ill treatment which he had offer'd to Tarbiet-kan his Ambaſſador; that hearing of the King of Perſia's death, he turned back, ſaying, (which yet is not very credible) that he would not meddle with a Child, a new King; although Chah-Soliman, who hath ſucceeded his Father, is, in my opinion, about 25 years of age.

The ſixth particular we purpoſed to ſpeak of, concerns thoſe that have faithfully ſerved Aureng-Zebe. Thoſe he hath almoſt all raiſed to great places. For firſt, as we have already related, he made Chah-heſt-kan, his Uncle, Governor and General of the Army of Decan, and afterwards, Governor of Bengale. Next, he made Mir-kan Governor of Kaboul; Then Kalil-ullah-kan, of Labor; and Mirbaba, of Elabas; and Lasker-kan, of Patna. The Son of that Allah-Verdi-kan of Sultan Sujah, he appointed Governor of Scimdy; and Fazel-kan, who had conſiderably ſerv'd him both by his counſels and dexterity, he made Kane-ſaman, that is, Great Steward of the Houſe Royal: And Danechmend-kan, Governor of Dehli, with this particular grace and priviledge, that ſince he is perpetually employed in ſtudies and foreign Affairs, he ſo diſpenſeth with him for not coming twice a day (after the ancient cuſtom) to wait on the King in the Aſſembly, as not to retrench any thing of his penſion for his abſence, as he doth to the other Omrahs, if they fail. He hath given to Dianet-kan the Government of Kacibmer (alias Caſſimere) that little, and in a manner inacceſſible Kingdom, which Ekbar ſeized on by craft, that earthly Paradiſe of the Indies; which hath its Hiſtories written in its peculiar Language, whereof I have an abridgment in the Perſian Tongue, made by the command of Jehan-Guyre, containing a large Catalogue of many very ancient Kings, that often were ſo powerful, that they ſubdued the Indies as far as China.

'Tis true, that Aureng-Zebe diſmiſſed Nejabat-kan, who did very well in the two Battels of Samonguer and Kadjoue, but then 'tis not fit at all, that a Subject ſhould ever reproach his King, as he did, with the ſervices done him.

As to thoſe infamous men, Gion-kan and Nazer, 'tis known, that the former hath been recompenced as he deſerved; but the other no man knows what is become of him.

What concerns Jeſſomſeigne and Jeſſeigne, there is ſomething as to them that is intricate, which I ſhall endeavour to unfold. There is a certain Heathen revolted from the King of Viſapour, who knew how to poſſeſs himſelf of many important Fortreſſes, and of ſome Sea-ports of that King. His name is Seva-Gi, that is, Lord Seva. He is a ſtout man, vigilant, bold, and undertaking in the higheſt degree, who gave Chah-heſt-kan more work and trouble in Decan, than the King of Viſapour with all his Forces, and all his Raja's joined with him for their common defence: Inſomuch that having deſigned to take away Chah-heſt-kan and his Treaſures out of the midſt of his Army, and of the Town Aurenge-Abad, he carried on his deſign ſo far, that he had effected it, if he had not been diſcover'd a little too ſoon; for one night, accompanied with a number of reſolute Fellows he hath about him, he was got into the very apartment of Chah-heſt-kan, where his Son, who was forward in the defence, was killed, and himſelf grievouſly wounded; Seva-Gi in the mean time getting away as well as he came: Who for all this was ſo far from being daunted, that he undertook another very bold and very dangerous Enterpriſe, which ſucceeded much better. He took two or three Thouſand choſen men of his Army, with whom he took the Field without noiſe, ſpreading a report by the way, that it was a Raja going to the Court. When he was near Suratte, that famous and rich Port of the Indies, inſtead of marching further, (as he made the great Provoſt of that Country, whom he met, believe) he fell into that Town, where he ſtaid about three days, cutting off the Arms and Legs of the Inhabitants, to make them confeſs where were the Treaſures; ſearching, digging, and loading away, or burning what he could not carry with him. Which done, he returned, none oppoſing his return, loaden with millions of Gold, Silver, Pearls, Silken Stuffs, Fine Linnen, and other rich Merchandiſe. Jeſſomſeigne was ſuſpected to have had ſince intelligence with this Seva-Gi, which was the cauſe that Aureng-Zebe called him away from Decan; but he, inſtead of going to Debli, went to his own Territory.

I forgot to mention, that in the plunder of Suratte, that Ringleader Seva-Gi, like a Saint, had ſo much reſpect to the Houſe of the Reverend Father Ambroſe, a Miſſionary Capucian, that he gave order it ſhould not be plundered; becauſe, ſaid he, I know that the Fathers Franguis are good men. He had alſo regard to the Houſe of the deceaſed de Lale, becauſe he underſtood that he had been great Almoner. He alſo conſider'd the Houſes of the Engliſh and Dutch, not from Devotion, as he did the former, but becauſe they were in a good poſture of defence; eſpecially the Engliſh, who having had time to ſend for aſſiſtance from ſome of their ſhips that lay near the Town, behaved themſelves gallantly, and ſaved, beſides their own, ſeveral other houſes near them. But a certain Jew of Conſtantinople, who had brought Rubies of a very great value, to ſell them to Aureng-Zebe, carried away the Bell from all, by ſaving himſelf from the hands of Seva-Gi; for, rather than to confeſs that he had any Jewels, he was brought thrice upon his Knees, and the Knife held up to cut his Throat: But it became none ſave a Jew, hardly in Avarice, to eſcape in ſuch a manner.

Touching Jeſſeigne, King Aureng-Zebe made him content to go General of the Army in Decan, ſending Sultan-Mazum with him, without any power. He preſently and vigorouſly beſieged the principal Fortreſs of Seva-Gi, and knowing more than all the reſt in matter of Negotiation and Treaty, he ſo order'd the buſineſs, that Seva-Gi ſurrendred before it came to extremity; and then he drew him to Aureng-Zebe's party againſt Viſapour, King Aureng-Zebe declaring him a Raja, taking him under his protection, and giving the Penſion of a very conſiderable Omrah to his Son. Some time after, Aureng-Zebe deſigning to make War againſt Perſia, wrote to Seva-Gi ſuch obliging Letters touching his Generoſity, Ability and Conduct, that he made him reſolve, upon the faith of Jeſſeigne, to come to him to Debli. There a Kinſwoman of Aureng-Zebe, the Wife of Chah-heſt-kan, (who was then at Court) by the influence ſhe had upon the ſpirit of Aureng-Zebe, perſuaded him to arreſt him that had murder'd her Son, Son, wounded her Husband, and ſacked Suratte: So that one evening Seva-Gi ſaw his Pavilions beſet with three or four Omrahs; but he made ſhift to get away in the night. This eſcape made a great noiſe at Court, every one accuſing the eldeſt Son of the Raja Jeſſeigne to have aſſiſted him in it. Jeſſeigne, who preſently had news that Aureng-Zebe was very angry with him and his Son, and was adviſed no more to go to the Court, was day and night upon his guard, apprehending leſt Aureng-Zebe ſhould take this for a pretence to fall upon his Lands, and poſſeſs himſelf of them. Whereupon he alſo ſoon left Decan to ſecure his Eſtate; but when he was at Brampour, he died. Yet notwithſtanding Aureng-Zebe was ſo far from expreſſing any coldneſs or reſentment to the Son of Jeſſeigne, that he ſent to condole with him for the death of his Father, and continued to him his Penſion; which confirms what many ſay, that it was by the conſent of Aureng-Zebe himſelf, that Seva-Gi eſcaped, foraſmuch as he could retain him no longer at Court, becauſe all the Women there had too great a ſpleen againſt him, and looked upon him as a man that had embroiled his hands in the blood of his Kinſmen.

But to return to Decan, we are to conſider, that that is a Kingdom, which theſe Forty years hath conſtantly been the Theater of War, and upon the ſcore whereof the Mogol hath much to do with the Kings of Golkonda, and of Viſapour, and divers little Soveraigns, which is not to be underſtood, unleſs it be known, what conſiderable things have paſſed in thoſe Parts, and the condition of the Princes that govern them.

All this great Peninſule of Indoſtan, cutting it from the Bay of Cambaja unto that of Bengale, near Jagannate, and paſſing thence to Cape Comori, was ſcarce two hundred years ſince entirely (ſome mountainous Parts excepted) under the Dominion of one only Prince, who conſequently was a very great and very potent Monarch: But now it is divided among many different Soveraigns, that are alſo of different Religions. The cauſe of this diviſion was, that the King Ramras, the laſt of thoſe that have poſſeſſed this mighty State entirely, did imprudently raiſe three Slaves, Gurgis, he had about him too high, ſo as to make them all three Governors of places: The firſt, of the greateſt part of thoſe Countries, which at preſent are poſſeſſed by the Mogol in Decan, about Daulet-Abad, from Bider, Paranda, Suratte, unto Narbadar: The ſecond, of all the other Lands, now comprehended under the Kingdom of Viſapour: And the third, of all that is contained under the Kingdom of Golkonda. Theſe three Slaves grew very rich, and found themſelves ſupported by a good number of the Mogols, that were in the ſervice of Ramras, becauſe they were all three Mahumetans, of the Sect Chyas, like the Perſians. And at length they all revolted together with one accord, killed King Ramras, and return'd to their Government, each taking upon him the Title of Chah or King. The Iſſue of Ramras, not finding themſelves ſtrong enough for them, were content to keep themſelves in a corner, viz. in that Country which is commonly call'd Karnatek, in our Maps, Biſnaguer, where they are ſtill Raja's to this very day. All the reſt of the State was alſo at the ſame time divided into all thoſe Raja's Naiques, and petty Kings, ſuch as we ſee there. Theſe three Slaves and their Poſterity have always defended themſelves very well in their Kingdoms, whil'ſt they kept a good mutual Correſpondence, and aſſiſted one another in their grievous Wars againſt the Mogols. But when they once came to think every one to defend their Lands apart, they ſoon found the effects of their diviſion. For the Mogol ſo well knew to take his time upon that occaſion, (which is now about Thirty five, or Forty years ſince) that he poſſeſs'd himſelf within a little time of all the Country of Nejam-Chah, or King Nejam, the fifth or ſixth of the Family of the firſt Slave, and at laſt took him Priſoner in Daulet-Abad, the Capital, where he died.

After that time, the Kings of Golkonda have maintain'd themſelves well enough; not as if they could compare with the power of the Mogol, but becauſe the Mogol hath always been employ'd againſt the two others; from whom he was to take Amber, Paranda, Bider, and ſome other places, before he could conveniently march towards Golkonda. And becauſe they have always been ſo politick, being very opulent, as to furniſh under-hand the King of Viſapour with Money, and thereby to help him to maintain a War againſt the Mogol: Beſides that, they ever have a conſiderable Army on foot, which is always ready, and never fails to take the Field, and to approach to the Frontiers, at the time when there is News that that of the Mogol marches againſt Viſapour; to let the Mogol ſee, not only that they are always ready to defend themſelves, but alſo that they could eaſily aſſiſt the King of Viſapour, in caſe he ſhould be reduced to any extremity.

tremity. Next, which is very conſiderable, they know alſo how to convey Mony underhand to the Chieftains of the Mogolian Army; who thereupon adviſe the Court, that it is more to purpoſe to attack Viſapour, as being nearer to Daulet-Abad. Further, They ſend every year very conſiderable Preſents to the Great Mogol, by way of Tribute, which conſiſt partly in ſome rare Manufactures of the Country; partly in Elephants, which they ſend for from Pegu, Siam, and Ceilan, partly in fair ready mony. Laſtly, The Mogol conſiders that Kingdom as his own, not only becauſe he looks upon the King thereof as his Tributary, but chiefly ſince that Agreement heretofore ſpoken of, which the preſent King made with Aureng-Zebe, when he beſieg'd Golkonda; and there being alſo no place able to reſiſt, even from Daulet-Abad unto Golkonda, he judgeth, that when he ſhall think fit to puſh for it, he may take in the whole Kingdom in one Campagne; which, in my opinion, he would certainly have done, if he did not apprehend, leſt ſending his Forces towaids Golkonda, the King of Viſapour ſhould enter into Decan; as, no doubt, he would do, knowing it to be very important to his Conſervation, that that Kingdom may always ſubſiſt as now it is.

From all which, ſomething may be underſtood of the Intereſts and Government of the King of Golkonda with the Mogol, and what way he taketh to ſupport himſelf againſt him. Yet notwithſtanding all this, I find this State much ſhaken, in regard that the King that now is, ſince that unhappy Affair of Aureng-Zebe and Emir-Jemla, ſeems to have loſt heart, and as 'twere abandon'd the reins of the Kingdom, not daring any more to go forth of this Fortreſs of Golkonda, nor ſo much as appear in publick to give Audience to his People, and to render Juſtice, according to the cuſtom of the Country: Which diſcompoſeth things very much, and occaſions the Grandees to tyrannize over the meaner ſort of People, and to loſe even their reſpect to the King, often ſlighting his Commands, and conſidering him no more than a Woman; and the People, weary of the injuſtice and ill treatment, breathing after nothing but Aureng-Zebe. 'Tis eaſie to judge of the ſtreights this poor King is in, by four or five Particulars I am about to relate.

The firſt, that Anno 1667. when I was at Golkonda, King Aureng-Zebe having ſent an Ambaſſador Extraordinary to declare War to that King, unleſs he would furniſh him with Ten thouſand Horſe againſt Viſapour, he did extraordinary honour, and give exceſſive Preſents to that Ambaſſador, as well for him in particular, as for Aureng-Zebe, and made an agreement with him, to ſend him, not Ten thouſand Horſe, but as much Mony as is neceſſary to maintain ſo many; which was all that Aureng-Zebe looked for.

The ſecond is, That Aureng-Zebe's Ambaſſador in Ordinary, that is conſtantly at Golkonda, commands, threatens, ſtriketh, gives Paſs-ports, and ſaith and doth whatſoever he will, no man daring with the leaſt word to croſs him.

The third is, That Mahmet-Emir-kan, the Son of Emir-Jemla, though he be no more than a ſimple Omrah of Aureng-Zebe, is yet ſo much reſpected through that whole Kingdom, and eſpecially in Maſlipatan, that the Taptata, his Commiſſioner, is, as 'twere, Maſter thereof, buying and ſelling, bringing in and ſending abroad his Merchants Ships, no Body daring to contradict him in any thing, nor to demand any Cuſtoms. So great was once the power of Emir-Jemla his Father in this Kingdom, which time hath not yet been able to root out.

The fourth is, That the Hollanders ſcruple not to threaten him ſometimes, to lay an Embargo upon all the Merchants Ships of the Country that are in that Port, and not to let them go out, until their demands be granted; as alſo to put in Proteſtations againſt him: which I have ſeen actually done, upon the account of an Engliſh Veſſel, which they had a mind to take by force in the Port of Maſlipatan it ſelf, the Governor having hindred it, by arming the whole Town againſt them, and threatning to put Fire to their Factory, and to put them all to death.

A fifth is, That the Portugueſes, as poor, and miſerable, and decayed, as they are in the Indies, yet ſtick not to threaten that King alſo with War; and that they will come and ſack Maſlipatan, and all that Coaſt, if he will not render them that place of St. Thomas, which ſome years ago they choſe to put into his hands, rather than to be conſtrained to yield it up to the Dutch.

Yet for all this, I have been informed in Golkonda, by very intelligent perſons, that this King is a Prince of very great judgment, and that whatever he ſo does and ſuffers, is only in policy, to the end to provoke no body, and principally to remove all

ſuſpition

ſuſpition from Aureng-Zebe, and to give him to underſtand, that he hath in a manner no ſhare any more in the Kingdom: But that in the mean time a Son of his, that is kept hid, grows up, the Father watching for a fit time to declare him King, and ſo to laugh at the Agreement made with Aureng-Zebe. Of this, time will ſhew us more; in the mean time, let us conſider ſomewhat of the Intereſts of Viſapour.

The Kingdom of Viſapour hath alſo not been wanting to ſupport it ſelf, though the Mogol do almoſt continually make War againſt it; not ſo much as if he of Viſapour were able to bid head to the Mogolian Forces, but becauſe there is never any great effort uſed againſt him. For it is not very frequent there, no more than 'tis elſewhere, for Generals of Armies to deſire the end of a War; there being nothing ſo charming, as to be in the head of an Army, commanding like little Kings, remote from the Court. It is alſo grown to a Proverb, That Decan is the Bread and Life of the Soldiers of Indoſtan. Beſides, the Country of Viſapour is on the ſide of the Mogol's Dominions of a very difficult acceſs, upon the account of the ſcarcity of good Waters, Forage, and Victuals; and becauſe Viſapour, the Capital City, is very ſtrong, and ſituate in a dry and ſteril Country, there being almoſt no good Water but in the Town. And laſtly, becauſe there are many Fortreſſes in that Country, ſeated on Hills hard to climb.

Yet notwithſtanding all this, that State is much ſhaken, if conſidering that the Mogol hath taken Paranda, the Key, as 'twere, of that Kingdom; as alſo that fair and ſtrong Town Bider, and ſome other very important places: But principally, becauſe the laſt King of Viſapour died without Heirs Males, and he that now calls himſelf King, is a Youth, whom the Queen, Siſter of the King of Golkonda, hath raiſed, and taken for her Son (a favour for which he hath made an ill return, having ſhew'd no eſteem for this Queen after her return from Mecca, under the pretext of ſome ill demeanor in her on a Dutch Veſſel that carried her to Moka:) Laſtly, becauſe that in the diſorders of that Kingdom, the Heathen-Rebel, Seva-Gi, above diſcourſed of, found means to ſeize on many ſtrong Holds, moſtly ſeated on ſteep Mountains, where he now acteth the King, laughing at the Viſapour, and the Mogol, and ravaging the Country every where, from Suratte, even to the Gates of Goa. This notwithſtanding, if he wrongs Viſapour one way, he helps to ſupport it another, foraſmuch as he is reſolutely bent againſt the Mogol, preparing always ſome Ambuſh, and cutting ſo much work for his Army, that there is no diſcourſe, no apprehenſion but of Seva-Gi; inſomuch that he hath come and ſacked Suratte, and pillaged the Iſle of Burdes, which belongs to the Portugueſe, and is near the Gates of Goa.

The ſeventh Particular, which I learn'd at Golkonda, when I was come away from Debli, is the death of Chah-Jehan; and that Aureng-Zebe had been exceedingly affected therewith, having diſcover'd all the marks of grief, that a Son can expreſs for the loſs of his Father: That at the very hour of receiving that News, he went towards Agra; that Begum-Saheb cauſed the Moſquee, and a certain place, where he was at firſt to ſtop, before he entred the Fortreſs, to be hung with richly embroider'd Tapiſteries: That at his entring into the Seraglio, ſhe preſented him with a great Golden Baſon, wherein were all her Jewels, and all thoſe of Chah-Jehan; and in ſhort, that ſhe knew to receive him with ſo much Magnificence, and to entertain him with that dexterity and craft, that ſhe obtain'd his pardon, gain'd his favour, and grew very confident with him.

To conclude, I doubt not, but moſt of thoſe, who ſhall have read my Hiſtory, will judge the ways taken by Aureng-Zebe, for getting the Empire, very violent and horrid. I pretend not at all to plead for him, but deſire only, that before he be altogether condemned, reflection be made on that unhappy cuſtom of this State, which leaving the ſucceſſion of the Crown undecided, for want of good Laws, ſetling it, as amongſt us, upon the eldeſt Son, expoſeth it to the Conqueſt of the ſtrongeſt, and the moſt fortunate, ſubjecting at the ſame time all the Princes born in the Royal Family, by the condition of their Birth, to the cruel neceſſity either to overcome, or to reign, by deſtroying all the reſt, for the aſſurance of their power and life, or to periſh themſelves, for the ſecurity of that of others: For I am apt to believe, that upon this Conſideration, the Reader will not find Aureng-Zebe's Conduct ſo ſtrange as at firſt it appear'd. However I am perſuaded, that thoſe who ſhall a little weigh this whole Hiſtory, will not take Aureng-Zebe for a Barbarian, but for a great and rare Genius, a Great States-man, and a Great King.

A Letter

A Letter to the Lord COLBERT, of the Extent of INDOSTAN; the Circulation of Gold and Silver, coming at length to be swallowed up, there, as in an Abyss; the Riches, Forces, Justice, and the principal Cause of the Decay of the States of ASIA.

My Lord,

SInce it is the Custom of Asia, never to approach Great Persons with Empty Hands, when I had the Honour to kiss the Vest of the Great Mogol Aureng-Zebe, I presented him with eight Roupies, [A Roupy is about Half a Crown] as an expression of respect; and the illustrious Fazel-kan, the prime Minister of State, and he that was to establish my Pension as Physitian, with a Case of Knives garnished with Amber. My Lord, though I intend not to introduce new Customs in France, yet I cannot forget this upon my Return from those Parts; being persuaded, that I ought not to appear before the King, for whom I have a far deeper Veneration, than for Aureng-Zebe; nor before You, my Lord, for whom I have a much higher Esteem, than for Fazel-kan, without some little Present to both, which is rare, at least, for its Novelty, though it be not so upon the account of the presenting hand. The Revolution of Indostan, by reason of its extraordinary Occurrences and Events, hath to me seemed worthy of the Greatness of our Monarch, and this Discourse, for the quality of the matters therein contained, sutable to the rank you hold in his Counsels; to that Conduct, which at my Return appear'd to me so admirable in the Order, which I found setled in so many things, that I thought incapable of it; and to the passion you entertain to make it known to the Ends of the Earth, what a Monarch we have, and that the French are fit to undertake, and with Honour to atchieve, whatsoever you shall have design'd for their Honour and Advantage.

'Tis in the Indies, my Lord (whence I am lately return'd, after twelve years absence) where I learn'd the felicity of France, and how much this Kingdom is oblig'd to your cares; and where your Name is so diffused, and so well known. This were a fair Theme for me to enlarge upon; but my Design being no other than to discourse of things New, I must forbear to speak of those that are already so notorious to all the World. I shall doubtless please you better, by endeavouring to give you some Idea of the state of the Indies, which I have engaged my self to give you an account of.

My Lord, You may have seen before this, by the Maps of Asia, how great every way is the Extent of the Empire of the Great Mogol, which is commonly call'd India, or Indostan. I have not measur'd it Mathematically; but to speak of it according to the ordinary Journeys of the Country, after the rate of three whole months march, traversing from the Frontiers of the Kingdom of Golkonda, as far as beyond Kazni near Kandahar, which is the first Town of Persia, I cannot persuade my self otherwise, but that it is at least five times as far as from Paris to Lyons, that is, about Five hundred common Leagues.

Next, You may please to take notice, that of that vast Extent of Land, there are large Countries that are very fertil, and some of them to that degree, (for Example, that whole great Kingdom of Bengale) that they exceed those of Egypt, not only upon the account of the abundance of Rice, Corn, and all other things necessary for life, but also upon the score of all those Commodities so considerable, which Egypt is destitute of, as Silks, Cottons, Indigo, and so many others, sufficiently related by Authors.

Moreover, That of these same Countries there are many that are well enough peopled and cultivated, and where Tradesmen, though naturally very lazy there, are not wanting, either from Necessity, or other Causes, to apply themselves to work, as to Tapisseries, Embroideries, Cloth of Gold and Silver, and to all those kinds of Silk and Cotton Manufactures, that are uſed in the Country, or tranſported to other Parts.

Silk

You may further obſerve, how that Gold and Silver circulating as it were upon the Earth, comes at laſt, in part, to be ſwallow'd up in this Indoſtan. For of that which comes out of America, and is diſperſed through the ſeveral Kingdoms of our Europe, we know, that one part is carried into Turky many ways, for the Commodities drawn thence; and that another part is conveyed into Perſia, by the way of Smyrna, for the Silks afforded there: That all Turky generally needs Coffee, which comes out of Hyeman, or Happy Arabia, and is the common Drink of the Turks: That the ſame Turky as well as Hyeman and Perſia cannot be without the Commodities of India; and that thus all thoſe Countries are obliged to carry to Moka over the Red-Sea, near Babel-mandel; and to Baſſora the utmoſt part of the Perſian-Gulf; and to Bandar-Abbaſi, or Gomoron near to Ormus, a part of that Gold and Silver, that had been brought into their Country, to be thence tranſported into Indoſtan, in Veſſels, that yearly, in the ſeaſon of the Mounſons, come purpoſely to thoſe three famous Parts: That on the other hand, all thoſe Ships of India, whether they be Indian ones, or Dutch, or Engliſh, or Portugueſe, that every year tranſport Merchandiſe out of Indoſtan to Pegu, Tanaſſeri, Siam, Ceilan, Achem, Mocaſſer, the Maldives, Moſambic, and other places, bring back alſo much Gold and Silver from all thoſe Countries, which meets with the ſame Deſtiny, that the other doth: That of that quantity of Gold and Silver which the Hollanders draw from Japan, (which is ſtored with Mines) a part alſo comes to be at length diſcharged in this Indoſtan: And that laſtly, what is carried thither directly by Sea, whether from Portugal, England, or France, ſeldom comes back from thence but in Merchandiſe, the reſt remaining there, as the former.

I very well know, that it may be ſaid, that this Indoſtan needs Copper, Cloves, Nutmegs, Cinamon, Elephants, and ſundry other things, which the Hollanders carry thither from Japan, the Molucques, Ceilan, and Europe; as alſo that it hath occaſion for Lead, which in part, it is furniſh'd with out of England; likewiſe for Scarlet, which it hath from France: Moreover, that it ſtands in need of a good number of Horſes, it being certain, that from the ſide of Usbec it receives yearly more than 2500. That out of Perſia alſo it is furniſhed with abundance of the ſame; as alſo out of Ethiopia, Arabia, the Ports of Moka, Baſſora, and Bander-abbaſy: Beſides, that it needs that ſtore of freſh Fruit, which comes thither from Samarkand, Ball-bocara, and Perſia, as Melons, Apples, Pears, and Grapes, that are ſpent at Dehli, and bought at great Rates, almoſt all the Winter long; as well as dry Fruit, which are had there all the year long, and come from the ſame Countries, as Almonds, Piſtaches, Nuts, Prunes, Abricots, Raiſins, and the like. And that laſtly, it wants thoſe little Sea-cockles of the Maldives, which ſerve for common Coyn in Bengale, and in ſome other places; as alſo Ambergriece, carried thither from the ſaid Maldives and Moſambic, Rhinoceros-horns, Elephants-teeth, Muſk, China-diſhes, Pearls of Bahæren, and Tutucoury near Ceilan; and, I know not of how many other things of this kind.

But all this makes not the Gold and Silver to go out of that Empire, becauſe the Merchants at their return freight their Ships with the Commodities of the Country, finding a better account by ſo doing, than if they ſhould bring back Mony, ſo that that hinders not, but that Indoſtan proves, as we have ſaid, a kind of Abyſs for a great part of the Gold and Silver of the World, which finds many ways to enter there, and almoſt none to iſſue thence.

In a word, you may take notice, that this Great Mogol makes himſelf Heir of the Omrahs or Lords, and of the Manſeb-dars, or petty Lords, that are in his Pay; and (which is of very great conſequence) that all the Lands of that Empire are his Propriety, excepting ſome Houſes and Gardens, which he giveth leave to his Subjects to ſell, divide, or buy amongſt them, as they ſhall think fit.

Theſe are the things, which ſufficiently ſhow, both that there muſt needs be a very great ſtore of Gold and Silver in Indoſtan, though there be no Mines; and alſo that the Great Mogol, the Soveraign of the ſame, at leaſt, of the beſt part of it, hath immenſe Revenues and Riches.

But on the other hand, there are alſo many things to be obſerved, which are a poiſe to theſe Riches. The firſt, that among thoſe vaſt tracts of Land there is much, which is nothing but ſand and ſteril Mountains, little Tilled or Peopled: That even of thoſe that would be fertile, there is much, that is not uſed for want of Workmen, ſome of which which have periſh'd by the too evil treatment of the Governors, who often take from them their neceſſary livelihood, and ſometimes their very Children whom they make Slaves when they are not able, or are unwilling to pay: Others have abandon'd the Field for the ſame reaſon, and deſponding out of the conſideration that they labour'd only for others, have caſt themſelves into Towns, or into Armies, to ſerve there for Porters, or waiting men, and many have fled to the lands of the Rajas, becauſe there they found leſs tyranny, and more kindneſs.

The ſecond is, That in this ſame Extent of Country there are ſundry Nations, which the Mogol is not full Maſter of, moſt of them retaining yet their particular Soveraigns and Lords, that obey him not, nor pay him Tribute but from conſtraint; many, that do little; ſome, that do nothing at all; and ſome alſo, that receive Tribute from him, as we ſhall ſee anon. Such are thoſe petty Soveraigns, that are ſeated on the Frontiers of Perſia, who almoſt never pay him any thing, no more than they do to the King of Perſia: As alſo the Balouches and Augans, and other Mountineers, of whom alſo the greateſt part pay him but a ſmall matter, and even care but very little for him: witneſs the Affront they did him, when they ſtopp'd his whole Army by cutting off the Water, which they kept back within the Mountains, when he paſſed from Atek on the River Indus to Caboul, to lay ſiege to Kandahar; not ſuffering the Water to run down into the Fields, where was the Highway, 'till they had receiv'd Preſents, although they ask'd them by way of Alms. Such are alſo the Patans, a Mahumetan People, iſſued from the ſide of the River Ganges towards Bengale; who before the Invaſion of the Mogols in India, had taken their time to make themſelves potent in many places, and chiefly at Dehli, and to render many Rajas thereabout their Tributaries. Theſe Patans are fierce and warlike, and even the meaneſt of them, though they be waiting Men and Porters, are ſtill of a very high ſpirit, being often heard to ſay by way of ſwearing, Let me never be King of Dehli, if it be not ſo: A People that deſpiſe the Indians, Heathen, and Mogols, and mortally hate the laſt, ſtill remembring what they were formerly, before they were by them driven away from their large Principalities, and conſtrained to retire hither and thither, far from Dehli, and Agra, into the Mountains, where now they are ſetled, and where ſome of them have made themſelves petty Soveraigns, like Rajas, but of ſmall ſtrength.

Such an one alſo is the King of Viſapour, who pays to the Mogol nothing, and is always in War with him; maintaining himſelf in his Country, partly by his own Forces, partly becauſe he is very remote from Agra and Dehli, the ordinary places of Reſidence of the Great Mogol; partly alſo, becauſe his Capital City Viſapour is ſtrong, and of difficult acceſs to an Army, by reaſon of the ill Waters, and the want of Forage on the way; and partly becauſe many Rajas join with him for their common defence, as did the famous Seva-Gi, who, not long ſince, came pillaging and burning that rich Sea-port, Suratte, and who ſometimes will pay little or no Tribute.

Such is likewiſe that potent and rich King of Golkonda, who underhand gives Mony to the King of Viſapour, and hath always an Army ready on the Frontiers for his own defence, and for the aſſiſtance of Viſapour, in caſe he find him too much preſſed.

Of the like ſort are more than an hundred Rajas, or conſiderable Heathen Soveraigns, diſperſed through the whole Empire, ſome near to, others remote from Agra and Dehli: amongſt whom there are about fifteen or ſixteen that are very rich and puiſſant; ſuch as is Rana (who formerly was, as 'twere, Emperor of the Rajas; and who is ſaid to be of the Progeny of King Porus;) Jeſſeigne and Jeſſomſeigne, which are ſo great and powerful, that if they three alone ſhould combine, they would hold him tack; each of them being able, in a very ſhort time, to raiſe and bring into the Field Twenty five thouſand Horſe, better Troops than the Mogols. Theſe Cavaliers are call'd Ragipouts, or the Children of Rajas. They are men, who, as I have elſewhere ſaid, carry Swords from Father to Son, and to whom the Rajas allot Land, on condition to be always ready to appear on Horſeback, when the Raja commands. They can endure much hardſhip, and they want nothing to make them good Soldiers, but good Order and Diſcipline.

The third thing to be noted is, That the Mogol is a Mahumetan, not of the Sect called Chias, who follow Aly and his Off-ſpring, (ſuch as the Perſians are, and conſequently the greateſt part of his Court;) but of that, which follows Oſman, and thence are call'd Oſmanlys, ſuch as the Turks are. Beſides, that he is a ſtranger, being of the Race of Tamerlan, who was the Head of thoſe Mogols, that about the year 1401, over-ran

India,

India, where they made themſelves Maſters: ſo that he is in a Country, almoſt all hoſtile; and that the more, becauſe not only for one Mogol, but in general, for one Mahumetan, there are hundreds of Gentiles or Heathen; which obligeth him, conſtantly to entertain (for his defence amongſt ſo many domeſtick and potent Enemies, and againſt the Perſians and Usbecks, his Neighbours) very great Armies, whether in time of Peace or War, as well about his Perſon, as in the Field; as well of the People of the Country, (Rajas and Patans,) as chiefly Mogolians, or at leaſt eſteemed ſuch, becauſe they are White, and Mahumetans; which ſufficeth at preſent; his Court being no more now as 'twas at firſt, conſiſting altogether of true Mogols; but a mixture of all ſorts of ſtrangers, Usbecks, Perſians, Arabians, and Turks, or their Children; but with this diſtinction, that the Children of the third or fourth Generation, and that have taken the Brown colour, and the ſoft humor of the Country, are not ſo much eſteem'd as the new comers; being alſo ſeldom rais'd to publick Offices, but counting themſelves happy, if they may ſerve as ſimple Horſemen or Foot.

Of theſe Armies I am now going to give you ſome deſcription, that thereby knowing the great Expences, which the Grand Mogol is oblig'd to be at, you may the better judge of his true Riches; let us firſt take a view of the Field Militia, he is neceſſitated to maintain.

The chief thereof are the Rajas, ſuch as Jeſſeignæ, Jeſſomſeignæ, and many others to whom he allows very great Penſions, to have them always ready with a certain number of Ragipouts, eſteeming them like Omrahs, that is, like other Strangers, and Mahumetan Lords; both in the Army, that is always about his perſon, and in thoſe alſo, that are in the Field. Theſe Rajas are generally oblig'd to the ſame things, that the Omrahs are, even to the point of keeping Guard; yet with this diſtinction, that they keep not the Guard within the Fortreſs, as thoſe, but without, under their Tents; they not liking to be ſhut up Twenty four hours in a Fortreſs, nor ſo much as ever to go thither, but well attended with Men, reſolute to be cut in pieces for their ſervice; as hath appear'd, when they have been ill dealt withal.

The Mogol is oblig'd to keep theſe Rajas in his ſervice for ſundry reaſons.

The firſt, becauſe the Militia of the Rajas is very good (as was ſaid above) and becauſe there are Rajas, (as was intimated alſo) one of whom can bring into the Field above 25000 men.

The ſecond, the better to bridle the other Rajas, and to reduce them to reaſon when they cantonize, or when they refuſe to pay Tribute, or when out of fear or other cauſe, they will not go out of their Country to the Army, when the Mogol requireth it.

The third, the better to nouriſh jealouſies and keenneſs amongſt them, by favouring and careſſing the one more than the other, which is done to that degree, that they proceed to fight with one another very frequently.

The fourth, to employ them againſt the Patans, or againſt his own Omrahs and Governors, in caſe any of them ſhould riſe.

The fifth, to employ them againſt the King of Golkonda, when he refuſeth to pay his Tribute, or when he will defend the King of Viſapour, or ſome Rajas his Neighbours, which the Mogol hath a mind to riſle, or to make his Tributaries; the Mogol in thoſe caſes not daring to truſt his Omrahs overmuch, who moſt are Perſians, and not of the ſame Religion with him, but Chias, like the Kings of Perſia and Golkonda.

The ſixth, and the moſt conſiderable of all, is, to employ them againſt the Perſians upon occaſion; not daring then alſo to confide in his Omrahs, who, for the greateſt part, as was juſt now ſaid, are Perſians, and conſequently have no ſtomach to fight againſt their natural King; and the leſs, becauſe they believe him to be their Imam, their Caliph or High Prieſt, deſcended from Aly, and againſt whom therefore they believe they cannot make War without a Crime, or a great Sin.

The Mogol is farther oblig'd to entertain ſome Patans for the ſame, or ſomewhat like reaſons, that he doth the Rajas.

At laſt he muſt entertain that ſtranger Militia of the Mogols, that we have taken notice of: And as this is the main ſtrength of his State, and which obliges him to incredible charges, methinks it will not be amiſs to deſcribe to you, of what nature it is, though I ſhould be ſomewhat long in doing it.

Let us therefore conſider, if you pleaſe, this ſtranger Militia, both Cavalry and Infantry, as divided into two; the one, being always near the Mogol's Perſon; the other, diſperſed up and down in the ſeveral Provinces. And in the Cavalry that is about his Perſon, let us firſt take notice of the Omrahs; then, of the Manſebdars; next, of the Rouſindars; laſt of all, of the ſimple Horſemen. From thence let us proceed to the Infantry, in which we ſhall conſider the Muſquetiers, and all thoſe men on foot that attend the Ordnance, where ſomething will occur to be ſaid of their Artillery.

It is not to be thought, that the Omrahs or Lords of the Mogol's Court are Sons of great Families, as in France; All the Lands of that Empire being the Mogol's Propriety, it follows, that there are neither Dutchies, nor Marquiſats, nor any Family rich in Land, and ſubſiſting of its own Income and Patrimony. And often enough they are not ſo much as Omrah's Sons, becauſe the King being Heir of all their Eſtates, it is conſequent that the Houſes cannot ſubſiſt long in their greatneſs; on the contrary, they often fall, and that on a ſudden, inſomuch that the Sons, or at leaſt the Grandſons of a potent Omrah are frequently, after the death of their Father, reduced, in a manner, to Beggary, and oblig'd to liſt themſelves under ſome Omrah for ſimple Horſemen. 'Tis true, that ordinarily the Mogol leaves ſome ſmall Penſion to the Widow, and often alſo to the Children; or, if the Father liveth too long, he may by particular favour advance them ſooner, eſpecially if they be proper men, white of Face, having as yet not too much of the Indian Complexion and temper, and ſo paſſing yet for true Mogols: Though this advancement by favour do always proceed in a ſlow pace; it being almoſt a general cuſtom, that a man muſt paſs from ſmall Pays and ſmall Places, to great ones. Theſe Omrahs then are commonly but Adventurers and Strangers of all ſorts of Nations, ſuch as I have ſaid; which draw one another to this Court; men of a mean deſcent, ſome of them ſlaves; moſt of them without inſtruction, which the Mogol thus raiſeth to Dignities as he thinks good, and degrades them again, as he pleaſeth.

Amongſt theſe Omrahs, ſome are Hazary, others Dou Hazary, others Penge, Hecht, and Deh Hazary, and even (ſuch was the King's eldeſt Son) Dovazdeh Hazary, that is to ſay, Lord of a thouſand Horſe, of two thouſand, five thouſand, ſeven, ten, and twelve thouſand; their Pay being leſs or more in proportion to the number of Horſes; I ſay, of Horſes, becauſe they are not paid in reſpect of the Horſemen, but of the Horſe; the Omrahs having power to entertain Horſemen of two Horſes a man, to be the better able to ſerve in the hot Countries, where 'tis a common ſaying, That the Horſeman that hath but one Horſe, is more than half a Footman. Yet we muſt not think, that they are oblig'd to entertain, or that the King effectively pays ſo many Horſe, as theſe great names of Dovazdeh or Hecht Hazary do impart, that is, 12000, or 8000 Horſe. Theſe are ſpecious Names, to amuſe and attract Strangers; the King determines the number of Horſes in actual ſervice, which they are bound to entertain, pays them according to this number; and beſides that, he pays them a certain number which they are not bound to entertain; and this is that which ordinarily makes the principal part of their Penſions; not to ſpeak of what they finger out of the Pay of every Horſeman, and of the number of the Horſes; which certainly amounts to very conſiderable Penſions; eſpecially if they can obtain good Jah-ghirs, that is, good Lands for their Penſion. For I ſaw, that the Lord, under whom I was, that was a Penge-hazary, or one of five thouſand Horſe, and who was only obliged to entertain five hundred in effect, had, after all his Cavalry was paid, remaining for his Penſion near Five thouſand Crowns a month; though he was Nagdy, that is, paid in Mony drawn out of the Treaſury, as all thoſe are, that have not Lands. Yet notwithſtanding all theſe great Penſions, I ſee none but very few that are rich, but many that are uneaſie and indebted: Not that they are ruin'd by keeping too plentiful Tables, as elſewhere great Lords frequently are; but that which exhauſteth them, are the great Preſents which they are oblig'd to make to the King at certain Feſtivals of the year, every one after the rate of his Pay; next, the vaſt Expences they muſt be at for entertaining their Wives, Servants, Camels, and many Horſes of great value, which they keep in their particular Stables.

The number of the Omrahs, as well of thoſe, that are in the Field in the Provinces and Armies, as of thoſe that are at the Court, is very great. I never could preciſely learn it; nor is it determined: But I have never ſeen leſs of them at Court, than twenty five or thirty, that are thus Penſionaries according to a greater or leſſer number of Horſes to be entertain'd by them, from 12000 downward to 1000. Theſe are the Omrahs, that arrive to the Governments and principal Offices of the Court and Armies; that are, as they ſpeak, the Pillars of the Empire, and that keep up the ſplendor of the Court; never going abroad, but richly deck'd, ſometimes riding on Elephants, ſome-ſometimes on Horſeback, ſometimes carried in a Paleky or Chair, commonly attended by a good number of Horſemen, to wit, of thoſe that have the Guard at that time, as alſo by many Footmen marching before, and on his ſides, to make way, to drive away the Flies, to take off the duſt with Peacocks tails, to carry water for drink, and ſometimes Books of Accompts, or other Papers.

All thoſe that are at Court, are oblig'd, under a conſiderable Penalty, to come twice every day to ſalute the King in the Aſſembly, once about Ten or eleven a clock in the morning, when he renders Juſtice; and the ſecond time, about ſix hours at night. They are alſo oblig'd by turns to keep the Guard in the Caſtle once a week, during twenty four hours. Thither they carry at that time their Beds, Tapiſſeries and other Moveables, the King furniſhing them with nothing but Proviſions of Meat and Drink, which they receive with great reverence, making a treble obeiſance, with their face turn'd to his Apartment, their hands down to the ground, and then lifted up upon their heads. Beſides, they are oblig'd on Horſeback to follow the King whitherſoever he marcheth in any weather, rainy or duſty, whether he be carried in his Chair, or on an Elephant, or a Field-Throne, which laſt is done by eight men carrying him on their ſhoulders, eight others marching on his ſide, to relieve the others; himſelf being in all Marches well cover'd from the inconveniencies of the Weather, whether he go to War, or to Hunt, or to exerciſe his Soldiery. And this attendance thoſe Omrahs are to give, except ſome of them be exempted by the Mogol, becauſe of their peculiar Offices, or upon the account of ſickneſs or old age, or to avoid embaraſment, as commonly 'tis practiſed, when he goeth only to ſome neighbouring Town to hunt, or to ſome houſe of Pleaſure, or to the Moſquee, there being then ſeldom any about him but thoſe that keep the Guard that day.

Manſebdars are Cavaliers of Manſeb, which is particular and honourable Pay; not ſo great indeed as that of the Omrahs, but much greater than that of the others; they being eſteemed as little Omrahs, and of the rank of thoſe, that are raiſed to that dignity.

Theſe acknowledge alſo none for their Head but the King, and they are generally obliged to whatever we have ſaid the Omrahs are. In a word, they would be true Omrahs, if they had, as divers heretofore have had, ſome Horſemen under them; whereas they have ordinarily but two, four, or ſix Horſes, having the King's mark, and their Pay goes no higher than from 200, to 600 or 700 Roupies a month. Their number alſo is not fixed, but much exceeds that of the Omrahs, there being of them at the Court always two or three hundred, beſides thoſe that are in the Provinces and Armies.

Rouzindars are alſo a ſort of Cavaliers, but ſuch as have their Pay by the day, (as the word it ſelf imports) which yet ſometimes is greater than that of many Manſebdars, but not ſo honourable; but then they are not bound, as the Manſebdars, to take at a ſet price (which ſometimes is not too reaſonable) of thoſe Tapiſſeries and other Houſhold-ſtuff, that hath ſerv'd for the King's Palace. Their number is very great; they enter into the meaner Offices, many of them being Clerks, Under-Clerks, Signet-Men, and the like.

Simple Cavaliers, are thoſe, that are under the Omrahs; amongſt whom the moſt conſiderable, and having moſt Pay, are thoſe that have two Horſes marked on the Leg with the mark of their Omrah. Their Pay is not abſolutely fixed, but depends chiefly from the generoſity of the Omrah, who may favour whom he pleaſeth. Yet the Mogol's intention is, that the Pay of a ſimple Cavalier or Horſeman be no leſs than twenty five Roupies, or thereabout a Month, ſtating his account with the Omrahs upon that Foot.

The Pay of the Foot is the leaſt; and their Muſquetiers are pitiful men, unleſs they diſcharge when their Muſquet leans on that ſmall wooden Fork hanging to it; yet even then they are afraid of ſingeing their great Beards, and of burning their Eyes, but moſt of all, leaſt ſome Dgen or evil Spirit burſt their Muſquet. Some of theſe have 20 Roupies a Month, ſome 15, ſome 10. But yet there are ſome Gunners that have great Pay, eſpecially thoſe of the Franguis or Chriſtians, as Portugueſes, Engliſh, Dutch, Germans, French, that retire thither from Goa, flying from Engliſh and Dutch Companies. Heretofore when the Mogols did not yet know how to manage Artillery, their Pay was very great. And there are yet ſome of that time, who have 200 Roupies a Month; but now they will receive none for more than thirty two.

Their Artillery is of two sorts; the one is the great and heavy Artillery, the other the light. As for the former, I remember, that when the King after his Sickness went with his whole Army abroad into the Country, diverting himself every day in Hunting, sometimes of Cranes, sometimes of the gray Oxen, (a kind of Elks) sometimes of Gazels, Leopards and Lions, and making his progress towards Labor and Kachmire (that little Paradise of India,) there to pass the Summer, the Army had Seventy pieces of Cannon, most of them cast, not counting the two or three hundred Camels, carrying each a small Field-piece of the bigness of a good double Musquet, fastned to those Animals. The other light Artillery is very brave and well order'd, consisting of fifty or sixty small Field-pieces all of Brass, each mounted on a little Chariot, very fine and well painted, with a small Coffer before and behind for the Powder, drawn by two very fair Horses, driven by a Coachman like a Caleche, adorned with a number of small red Streamers, each having a third Horse led by the Chariot for relief.

The great Artillery could not always follow the King, who often left the Highway, and turn'd sometimes to the right, sometimes to the left hand, crossing the fields, to find the true places for Game, and to follow the course of the Rivers. That therefore was to keep the Highway to go the more easily, and to avoid the embarasments, which it would have met with in the ill passages, especially in those Boat-Bridges made to pass Rivers. The light Artillery is inseparable from the person of the King, it marcheth away in the morning, when the King comes out of his Tent; and whereas he commonly goes a little aside into the places for Game, this Artillery passeth on straight with all possible speed, to be in time at the Rendezvous, and there to appear before the King's Tent, which is there made ready the day before; as are also the Tents of the great Omrahs: And this whole Artillery giveth a Volley just when the King enters into his Tent, thereby to give notice to the Army of his arrival.

The Militia of the Field is not different from that which is about the King: There are everywhere Omrahs, Mansebdars, Rousindars, simple Horsemen, and Foot and Artillery where-ever any War is made. The difference is only in the number, which is much greater in the Field-Army, than in the other. For that Army alone, which the Mogol is constrain'd perpetually to maintain in Decan, to bridle the potent King of Golkonda, and to make War upon the King of Visapour, and upon all the Raja's that join with him, must consist at least of twenty, or twenty five thousand Horse, sometimes of thirty.

The Kingdom of Kaboul, for its ordinary Guard against the Persians, Augans, Balouches, and I know not how many Mounteniers, requireth at least Fifteen thousand. The Kingdom of Kachmire, more than Four thousand; and the Kingdom of Bengale, much more; not counting those that are employ'd in the War, which must almost always be maintain'd on that side; nor those which the Governors of the several Provinces do need for their defence, according to the particular extent and situation of their Governments, which maketh an incredible number.

Not to mention the Infantry, (which is inconsiderable) I am apt to believe with many others, well inform'd of these matters, that the number of the Horse in actual service about the King's Person, comprehending the Cavalry of the Raja's and Patans, mounteth to Thirty five or forty thousand; and that this number, joined to those that is abroad in the Field, may make Two hundred thousand, and better.

I say, that the Infantry is inconsiderable; for I can hardly believe, that in the Army which is about the King, comprising the Musquetiers, and all the Gunners and their Mates, and whatever serves in this Artillery, can amount to much more than Fifteen thousand; whence you may make a near guess, what the number of the Foot must be in the Field. So that I know not whence to take that prodigious number of Foot, which some do reckon in the Armies of the Great Mogol, unless it be, that with this true Soldiery they confound all the Serving-men and Victuallers that follow the Army; for in that sense I should easily believe, that they had reason to reckon two or three hundred thousand men in that Army alone which is with the King, and sometimes more; especially when 'tis certain, that he is to be long absent from the Capital City: which will not seem so strange to him, that considers the multitude and confusion of Tents, Kitchens, Baggage, Women, Elephants, Camels, Oxen, Horses, Waiting-men, Porters, Forragers, Victuallers, Merchants of all sorts, that must follow the Army; nor to him, that knows the State and particular Government of that Country, wherein the King is the sole Proprietor of all the Lands of the Kingdom; whence it necessarily follows, that a whole Metropolitan City, such as Dehly and Agra, liveth of almost nothing but of the

Soldiery,

Soldiery, and is consequently oblig'd to follow the King when he taketh the Field; those Towns being nothing less than Paris, but indeed no otherwise govern'd than a Camp of Armies a little better and more conveniently lodg'd than in the open Field.

Besides all these things, you may also consider, if you please, that generally all this Militia, which I have been representing to you, from the greatest Omrah, to the meanest Soldier, is indispensibly paid every two months, the King's Pay being its sole refuge and relief; nor can its Pay be deferred there, as 'tis sometimes with us; where, when there are pressing occasions of the State, a Gentleman, an Officer, and even a simple Cavalier, can stay awhile, and maintain himself of his own Stock, Rents, and the Incomes of his Land. But in the Mogol's Country, all must be paid at the time prefix'd, or all disbands and starves, after they have sold that little they have; as I saw in this last War, that many were going to do, if it had not soon ceased. And this the more, because that in all this Militia, there is almost no Soldier that hath not Wife and Children, Servants and Slaves, that look for this Pay, and have no other hope of relief. And hence it is, that many wonder, considering the huge number of persons living of Pay (which amounts to millions) whence such vast Revenues can be had for such excessive Charges: Although this need not to be so much wondred at, considering the Riches of the Empire, the peculiar Government of the State, and the said universal Propriety of the Sovereign.

You may add to all this, That the Grand Mogol keeps nigh him at Debly and Agra, and thereabout, two or three thousand brave Horses, to be always ready upon occasion; as also eight or nine hundred Elephants, and a vast number of Mules, Horses, and Porters, to carry all the great Tents and their Cabinets, to carry his Wives, Kitchens, Houshold-stuff, Ganges-Water, and all the other Necessaries for the Field, which he hath always about him as if he were at home; things not absolutely necessary in our Kingdoms.

To this may be added those incredible Expences upon the Seraglio, more indispensible than will be easily believ'd; that vast store of fine Linnen, Cloth of Gold, Embroideries, Silks, Musk, Amber, Pearls, sweet Essences, &c. consumed there.

All these Charges being put together, and compar'd with the Revenues the Mogol may be thought to have, it will be easie to judge, whether he be indeed so very rich, as he is made to be. As for me, I very well know, that it cannot be denied, that he hath very great Revenues; I believe, he hath more alone than the Grand Seignior, and the King of Persia, both together: But then, to believe all those extravagant Stories made of the vastness of his Revenues, is a thing I could never do: And if I should believe the best part of them, yet should I not believe him in effect and truth so rich, as the World rings of him; unless a man would say, that a Treasurer, who receiveth great Sums of mony from one hand at the same time when he is oblig'd to disburse them to another, were therefore truly rich. For my part, I should count that King rich indeed, who, without oppressing and impoverishing his People too much, should have a Revenue sufficient to keep a great and gallant Court, (after the manner of that of ours, or otherwise) and a Militia sufficient both to guard his Kingdom, and to make an important War for divers years against his Neighbours; as also to shew Liberality, to build some Royal Edifices, and to make those other Expences which Kings are wont to make according to their particular Inclinations; and who, besides all this, should be able to put up in his Treasury, for a Reserve, Sums big enough to undertake and maintain a good War for some years. Now I am apt enough to believe, that the Great Mogol enjoyeth very near these Advantages, but I cannot perswade my self, that he hath them in that excess, as is thought and pretended. Those vast and inevitable Expences, that I have taken notice of, will certainly incline you to my Opinion without any other consideration; but you will, doubtless, be altogether of my mind, when I shall have represented to you these two things, which I am very well informed of.

The one is, that the Great Mogol, now reigning, about the end of this last Revolution, though the Kingdom was everywhere in peace (except in Bengale, where Sultan-Sujah yet held out) was much perplexed where to find means for the subsistence of his Armies, though they were not so well paid as at other times, and the War lasted no longer than five years, or thereabout, and though also he had laid hold of a good part of the Treasury of his Father Chah-Jehan.

The other is, That all this Treasure of Chah-Jehan, who was very frugal, and had Reigned above Forty years without considerable Wars, never mounted to six Kourours of Roupies. A Roupy is about twenty nine pence. An hundred thouſand of them make a Lecque, and an hundred Lecques make one Kourour. [So that the ſix Kourours would make about ſeven Millions and an half Engliſh Money.] 'Tis true, I do not comprehend in this great Treaſure that great abundance of Goldſmiths work, ſo variouſly wrought in Gold and Silver; nor that vaſt ſtore of precious Stones and Pearls of a very high value. I doubt, whether there be any King in the World that hath more. The Throne alone, cover'd with them, is valu'd at leaſt three Kourors, if I remember aright: But then, it is to be conſider'd alſo, that they are the ſpoils of thoſe ancient Princes, the Patans and Rajas, gather'd and piled up from immemorial times, and ſtill increaſing from one King to another, by the Preſents which the Omrahs are obliged yearly at certain Feſtival-days to make him; and which are eſteemed to be the Jewels of the Crown, which it would be criminal to touch, and upon which a King of Mogol in caſe of neceſſity would find it very hard to procure the leaſt Sum.

But before I conclude, I ſhall take notice, whence it may proceed, that though this Empire of Mogol be thus an Abyſs of Gold and Silver, (as hath been ſaid,) yet notwithſtanding there appears no more of it among the people, than elſewhere; yea, rather that the People is there leſs Monied than in other places.

The firſt reaſon is, that much of it is conſumed in melting over and over all thoſe Noſe and Ear-rings, Chains, Finger-rings, Bracelets of Hands and Feet, which the Women wear, but chiefly in that incredible quantity of Manufactures, wherein ſo much is ſpent, which is loſt, as in all thoſe Embroideries, Silk-ſtuffs, enterwoven with Gold and Silver, Cloth, Scarf, Turbants, &c. of the ſame. For generally all that Militia loveth to be guided from the Omrahs to the meaneſt Soldiers with their Wives and Children, though they ſhould ſtarve at home.

The ſecond, That all the Lands of the Kingdom being the Kings propriety, they are given either as Benefices, which they call Jah-ghirs, or, as in Turky, Timars, to men of the Militia for their Pay or Penſion (as the word Jah-ghir imports:) Or elſe they are given to the Governours for their Penſion, and the entertainment of their Troops, on condition that of the ſurplus of thoſe Land-revenues they give yearly a certain ſum to the King, as Farmers; Or laſtly, the King reſerveth them for himſelf as a particular Domaine of his Houſe, which never or very ſeldom are given as Jah-ghirs, and upon which he keeps Farmers, who alſo muſt give him a yearly ſum; which is to ſay, that the Timariots, Governours and Farmers have an abſolute Authority over the Country-men, and even a very great one over the Tradeſmen and Merchants of the Towns, Boroughs, and Villages, depending from them: ſo that in thoſe Parts there are neither great Lords nor Parliaments, nor Preſidial Courts, as amongſt us, to keep theſe People in awe: nor Kadis or Judges, powerful enough to hinder and repreſs their violence; Nor, in a word, any perſon, to whom a Country-man, Tradeſ-man, or Merchant, can make his complaints to, in caſes of extortion and tyranny, often practiſed upon them, by the Soldiery and Governors, who every where do impunely abuſe the Authority Royal, which they have in hand, unleſs it be perhaps a little in thoſe places that are near to Capital Cities, as Dehli and Agra, and in great Towns and conſiderable Sea-ports of the Provinces, whence they know that the complaints can be more eaſily conveyed to the Court. Whence it is, that all and every one ſtand in continual fear of theſe people, eſpecially of the Governors more than any Slave doth of his Maſter: that ordinarily they affect to appear poor and money-leſs, very mean in their Apparel, Lodging, Houſhold-ſtuff, and yet more in meat and drink; that often they apprehend even to meddle with Trade, leſt they ſhould be thought Rich, and ſo fall into the danger of being ruined: So that at laſt they find no other remedy to ſecure their Wealth, than to hide and dig their money deep under Ground, thus getting out of the ordinary commerce of men, and ſo Dying, neither the King nor the State having any benefit by it. Which is a thing not only happens among the Peaſants and Artizans, but (which is far more conſiderable) amongſt all ſorts of Merchants; whether Mahumetans or Heathens, except ſome that are in the Kings, or ſome Omrahs Pay, or that have ſome particular Patron and ſupport in power: But principally among the Heathen, which are almoſt the only Maſters of the Trade and Money, infatuated with the belief, that the Gold and Silver, which they hide in their life-time, ſhall ſerve them after death. And this, in my opinion, is the true reaſon, why there appears ſo little money in Trade among the People.

But thence ariſeth a Queſtion very conſiderable, viz. Whether it were not more expedient,

dient, not only for the Subjects, but for the State it ſelf, and for the Sovereign, not to have the Prince ſuch a Proprietor of the Lands of the Kingdom, as to take away the Meum and Tuum amongſt private perſons; as 'tis with us; For my part, after a ſtrict comparing the State of our Kingdoms, where that Meum and Tuum holds, with that of thoſe other Kingdoms, where it is not, I am thoroughly perſwaded, that it is much better and more beneficial for the Sovereign himſelf, to have it ſo as 'tis in our parts. Becauſe that in thoſe parts where 'tis otherwiſe, the Gold and Silver is loſt, as I was juſt now obſerving: There is almoſt no perſon ſecure from the violences of thoſe Timariors, Governours, and Farmers: The Kings, how well ſoever they be diſpoſed toward their people, are never almoſt in a condition (as I lately noted) to get Juſtice adminiſtred to them, and to hinder tyrannies; eſpecially in thoſe great Dominions, and in the Provinces remote from the Capital Towns; Which yet ought to be, as doubtleſs it is, one of the chief employments and conſiderations of a King. Beſides, this tyranny often grows to that exceſs, that it takes away what is neceſſary to the life of a Peaſant or Tradeſman, who is ſtarved for hunger and miſery; who gets no Children, or if he does, ſees them die young for want of food; or that abandons his Land, and turns ſome Cavalier's man, or flies whither he may to his Neighbours, in hopes of finding a better condition. In a word, the Land is not tilled but almoſt by force, and conſequently very ill, and much of it is quite ſpoiled and ruined, there being none to be found, that can or will be at the charge of entertaining the ditches and channels for the courſe of waters to be convey'd to neceſſary places; nor any body that care to build Houſes, or to repair thoſe that are ruinous; the Peaſant reaſoning thus with himſelf: Why ſhould I toil ſo much for a Tyrant that may come to morrow to take all away from me, or at leaſt all the beſt of what I have, and not leave, if the fancy taketh him, ſo much as to ſuſtain my life even very poorly? And the Timariot, the Governor and the Farmer, will reaſon thus with himſelf; Why ſhould I beſtow mony, and take pains of bettering or maintaining this Land, ſince I muſt every hour expect to have it taken from me, or exchanged for another? I labour neither for my ſelf, nor for my Children; and that place which I have this year, I may, perhaps, have no more the next. Let us draw from it what we can, whilſt we poſſeſs it, though the Peaſant ſhould break or ſtarve, though the Land ſhould become a Deſart, when I am gone!

And for this very reaſon it is, that we ſee thoſe vaſt Eſtates in Aſia go ſo wretchedly and palpably to ruine. Thence it is, that throughout thoſe Parts we ſee almoſt no other Towns but made up of earth and dirt; nothing but ruin'd and deſerted Towns and Villages, or ſuch as are going to ruine. Even thence it is, that we ſee (for Example) thoſe Meſopotamia's, Anatolia's, Paleſtina's, thoſe admirable Plains of Antioch, and ſo many other Lands, anciently ſo well tilled, ſo fertile, and ſo well peopled, at the preſent half deſerted, untill'd and bandon'd, or become peſtilent and uninhabitable Bogs. Thence it is alſo, that of thoſe incomparable Lands of Egypt it is obſerv'd, that within leſs than fourſcore years, more than the tenth part of it is loſt, no people being to be found, that will expend what is neceſſary to maintain all the Channels, and to reſtrain the River Nile from violently overflowing on one hand, and ſo drowning too much the low Lands, or from covering them with Sand, which cannot be remov'd from thence but with great pains and charges. From the ſame root it comes, that Arts are languiſhing in thoſe Countries, or at leaſt flouriſh much leſs than elſe they would do, or do with Us. For what heart and ſpirit can an Artizan have to ſtudy well, and to apply his mind to his work, when he ſees, that among the people, which is for the moſt part beggarly, or will appear ſo, there is none that conſiders the goodneſs and neatneſs of his Work, every body looking for what is cheap, and that the Grandees pay them but very ill, and when they pleaſe. The poor Tradeſman often thinking himſelf happy, that he can get clear from them without the Korrah, which is that terrible Whip that hangs nigh the Gate of the Omrahs. Further, when he ſeeth that there is no help at all ever to come to any thing, as to buy an Office, or ſome Land for himſelf and Children, and that even he dares not appear to have a Penny in Caſh, or to wear good Cloaths, or to eat a good Meal, for fear he ſhould be thought rich. And indeed the beauty and exactneſs of Arts had been quite loſt in thoſe Parts long ago, if it were not that the Kings and Grandees there did give Wages to certain Workmen, that work in their Houſes, and there teach their Children, and endeavour to make themſelves able in order to be a little more conſider'd, and to eſcape the Korrah; and if alſo it were not, that thoſe great and rich Merchants of Towns, who are protected by good and powerful Patrons, pay'd thoſe Workmen a little better; I ſay, a little Better; for, what fine ſtuffs ſoever we ſee come from thoſe Countries, we muſt not imagine, that the Workman is there in any honour, or comes to any thing; 'tis nothing but meer Neceſſity, or the Cudgel, that makes him work, he never grows rich; it is no ſmall matter, when he hath wherewith to live, and to cloath himſelf narrowly. If there be any mony to gain of the Work, that is not for him, but for thoſe great Merchants of Towns, I was juſt now ſpeaking of; and even theſe themſelves find it often difficult enough to maintain themſelves, and to prevent Extortion.

'Tis from the ſame cauſe alſo, that a groſs and profound Ignorance reigns in thoſe States. For, how is it poſſible, there ſhould be Academies and Colleges well founded, where are ſuch Founders to be met with? And if there were any, Whence were the Scholars to be had? Where are thoſe that have means ſufficient to maintain their Children in Colleges? And if there were, who would appear to be ſo rich? And if they would, Where are thoſe Benefices, Preferments, and Dignities, that require Knowledg and Abilities, and that may animate young men to ſtudy?

Thence it is likewiſe, that Traffick languiſhes in all that Country, in compariſon of ours. For how many are there, that care to take pains, to run up and down, to write much, and to run danger for another, for a Governor, that ſhall extort, if he be not in league with ſome conſiderable Sword-man, whoſe Slave he in a manner is, and that makes his own Conditions with him?

It is not there, that the Kings find for their ſervice, Princes, Lords, Gentlemen, Sons of rich and good Families, Officers, Citizens, Merchants, and even Tradeſmen, well born, well educated, and well inſtructed; men of Courage, that have a true affection and reſpect for their King, that often live a great while at the Court, and in the Army, at their own Expences, entertaining themſelves with good hopes, and content with the favourable aſpect of the Prince; and who, upon occaſion, fight manfully, covetous to uphold the honour of their Anceſtors and Families. Thoſe Kings, I ſay, never ſee about them, but men of nothing, Slaves, Ignorants, Brutes, and ſuch Courtizans as are raiſed from the Duſt to Dignities; and that for want of good Education and Inſtruction, almoſt always retain ſomewhat of their Offſpring, of the temper of Beggars, enriched, proud, unſufferable, heartleſs, inſenſible of honour, diſingenuous, and void of affection and regard for the honour of their King and Country. Here it is, where thoſe Kings muſt ruine all, to find means to defray all thoſe prodigious Charges, which they cannot avoid for entertaining their great Court, which hath no other ſource to ſubſiſt but their Coffers and Treaſure, and for maintaining conſtantly the vaſt number of Soldiers, neceſſary for them to keep the People in ſubjection, to prevent their running away, to make them work, and to get what is exacted from them, they being ſo many Deſperado's, for being perpetually under hatches, and for labouring only for others.

Thence it is alſo, that in an important War that may happen (which may be almoſt at all times) they muſt almoſt of neceſſity ſell the Government for ready Mony, and immenſe Sums, whence chiefly that ruine and deſolation comes to paſs which we ſee. For the Governor, which is the Buyer, muſt not he be re-imburſed of all thoſe great Sums of mony, which he hath taken up, perhaps the third or fourth part, at high intereſt? Muſt not a Governor alſo, whether he have bought the Government or not, find means as well as a Timariot and a Farmer, to make every year great Preſents to a Viſir, an Eunuch, a Lady of the Seraglio, and to thoſe other perſons that ſupport him at Court? Muſt he not pay to the King his uſual Tributes, and withal enrich himſelf, that wretched Slave, half famiſh'd, and deeply indebted when he firſt appear'd, without Goods, Lands, and Revenues of his Houſe, ſuch as they all are. Do not they ruine all, and lay all waſte? I mean thoſe, that in the Provinces are like ſo many ſmall Tyrants with a boundleſs and unmeaſur'd Authority, there being no body there, as hath been already ſaid, that can reſtrain them, or to whom a Subject can have refuge, to ſave himſelf from their Tyranny, and to obtain Juſtice?

'Tis true, that in the Empire of the Mogol, the Vakea-nevis, that is, thoſe Perſons, whom he ſends into the Provinces to write to him whatever paſſeth there, do a little keep the Officers in awe, provided they do not collude together (as it almoſt always happens) to devour all; as alſo that the Governments are not there ſo often ſold, nor ſo openly as in Turky; I ſay, not ſo openly (for thoſe great Preſents, they are from time to time obliged to make, are almoſt equivalent to Sales) and that the Governors ordinarily remain longer in their Governments; which maketh them not ſo hungry, ſo beggarly, garly, and ſo deep in debt, as thoſe new Comers, and that conſequently they do not always tyrannize over the people with ſo much cruelty; even apprehending, leſt they ſhould run away to the Raja's; which yet falls out very often.

'Tis alſo true, that in Perſia the Governments are not ſo frequently nor ſo publickly ſold as in Turky; the Sons of the Governors alſo ſucceeding often enough to their Fathers; which is alſo the cauſe, that the people there is often not ſo ill treated as in Turky, and occaſions withal, that there is more politeneſs, and that even ſome there are that addict themſelves to ſtudy. But all that is really but a ſlight matter; thoſe three States of Turky, Perſia and Indoſtan, foraſmuch as they have all three taken away the Meum and Tuum as to Land, and propriety of Poſſeſſions (which is the foundation of whatever is good and regular in the World) cannot but very near reſemble one another: they have the ſame defect, they muſt at laſt, ſooner or later, needs fall into the ſame inconveniencies, which are the neceſſary conſequences of it, viz. Tyranny, Ruine, and Deſolation.

Far be it therefore, that our Monarchs of Europe ſhould thus be Proprietors of all the Lands which their Subjects poſſeſs. Their Kingdoms would be very far from being ſo well cultivated and peopled, ſo well built, ſo rich, ſo polite and flouriſhing as we ſee them. Our Kings are otherwiſe rich and powerful; and we muſt avow that we are much better and more royally ſerved. There would be Kings of Deſarts and Solitudes, of Beggars and Barbarians, ſuch as thoſe are whom I have been repreſenting; who, becauſe they will have all, at laſt loſe all; and who, becauſe they will make themſelves too rich, at length find themſelves without riches, or, at leaſt, very far from that which they covet after, out of their blind Ambition and Paſſion, of being more abſolute than the Laws of God and Nature do permit. For, where would be thoſe Princes, thoſe Prelates, thoſe Nobles, thoſe rich Citizens, and great Merchants, and thoſe famous Artizans, thoſe Towns of Paris, Lyons, Thoulouſe, Rouen, London, and ſo many others? Where would be that infinite number of Burroughs and Villages, all thoſe fair Country-houſes and Fields, and Hillocks, tilled and maintained with ſo much Induſtry, Care and Labour? And where would conſequently be all thoſe vaſt Revenues drawn thence, which at laſt enrich the Subjects and the Sovereign both? We ſhould find the great Cities, and the great Boroughs rendred inhabitable, becauſe of the ill Air, and to fall to ruine without any bodies taking care of repairing them; the Hillocks abandoned, and the Fields overſpread with the Buſhes, or filled with peſtilential Mariſhes, as hath been already intimated.

A word to our dear and experienc'd Travellers: They would not find thoſe fair conveniencies of Travelling; they would be obliged to carry all things with them, like the Bohemians; and all thoſe good Inns, for example, that are found between Paris and Lyons, would be like ten or twelve wretched Caravans-ſerrahs, that is, great Barns, raiſed and paved, ſuch as our Pont-neuf is, where hundreds of men are found pel-mel together with their Horſes, Mules and Camels, where one is ſtifled with heat in Summer, and ſtarved of cold in Winter, if it were not for the breathing of thoſe Animals, that warm the place a little.

But it will be ſaid, we ſee ſome States, where the Meum and Tuum is not, (as for example, that of the Grand Seignior, vvhich vve knovv better than any, vvithout going ſo far as the Indies) that do not only ſubſiſt, but are alſo very povverful, and encreaſe daily.

'Tis true, that that State of the Gr. Seignior, of ſuch a prodigious Extent as it is, having ſo vaſt a quantity of Lands, the Soil of which is ſo excellent, that it cannot be deſtroyed but very difficultly, and in a long time, is yet rich and populous; but it is certain alſo, that if it were cultivated and peopled proportionably to ours, (which it would be, if there were propriety among the Subjects throughout) it would be a quite different thing; it would have people enough to raiſe ſuch prodigious Armies as in old times, and rich enough to maintain them. We have travelled through almoſt all the parts of it; we have ſeen how ſtrangely it is ruined and unpeopled; and how in the Capital City there now need three whole months to raiſe five or ſix thouſand men. We know alſo, what it would have come to ere this, if it had not been for the great number of Chriſtian Slaves that are brought into it from all Parts. And no doubt but that, if the ſame Government were continued there for a number of years, that State would deſtroy it ſelf, and at laſt, fall it by its ovvn Weakneſs, as it ſeems that already it is hardly maintained but only by that means, I mean, by the frequent change of Governors;

there being not one Governor, nor any one man in the vvhole Empire, that hath a penny to enable him to maintain the leaſt thing, or that can almoſt find any men, if he had money. A ſtrange manner to make States to ſubſiſt! There vvould need no more for making an end of the Seditions, than a Brama of Pegu, who killed the half of the Kingdom with hunger, and turned it into Foreſts, hindring for ſome years the Lands from being tilled, though yet he hath not ſucceeded in his Deſign, and the State have afterwards been divided, and that even lately Ava, the Capital Town, was upon the point of being taken by an handful of China Fugitives. Mean time we muſt confeſs, that we are not like to ſee in our days that total ruine and deſtruction of this Empire we are ſpeaking of, (if ſo be we ſee not ſomething worſe) becauſe it hath Neighbors, that are ſo far from being able to undertake any thing againſt him, that they are not ſo much as in a condition to reſiſt him, unleſs it be by thoſe ſuccours of ſtrangers, which the remoteneſs and jealouſie would make ſlow, ſmall, and ſuſpect.

But it might be yet further objected, that it appears not, why ſuch States as theſe might not have good Laws, and why the People in the Provinces might not be enabled to come and make their Complaints to a Grand Viſir, or to the King himſelf. 'Tis true, that they are not altogether deſtitute of good Laws, and that, if thoſe which are amongſt them were obſerved, there would be as good living there, as in any part of the World. But what are thoſe Laws good for, if they be not obſerved, and if there be no means to make them to be executed? Is it not the Grand Viſir, or the King that appoints for the People ſuch beggarly Tyrants, and that hath no others to ſet over them? Is it not He that ſells thoſe Governments? Hath a poor Peaſant or Tradeſman means to make great Journies, and to come and ſeek for Juſtice in the Capital City, remote, perhaps, 150 or 200 Leagues from the place of his Abode? Will not the Governor cauſe him to be made away in his journy (as it hath often hapned) or catch him ſooner or later? And will he not provide his Friends at Court, to ſupport him there, and to repreſent things quite otherwiſe than they are? In a word, this Governor, hungry as well as the Timariots and Farmers (that are all men for drawing Oyl out of Sand, as the Perſian ſpeaks, and for ruining a World, with their heap of Women-harpies, Children and Slaves) this Governor, I ſay, is he not the abſolute Maſter, the Superintendant of Juſtice, the Parliament, the Receiver, and all?

It may perhaps be added, That the Lands, which our Kings hold in Domaine, are no leſs well tilled and peopled, than other Land. But there is a great difference between the having in propriety ſome Lands here and there in a great Kingdom (which changes not the Conſtitution of the State and Government) and the having them all in propriety, which would alter it altogether. And then we in theſe Parts have Laws ſo rational, which our Kings are willing to be the firſt to obſerve, and according to which they will that their particular Lands ſhall be governed as thoſe of their Subjects are, ſo as to give way, that Actions of Law may be laid againſt their own Farmers and Officers, ſo that a Peaſant or Tradeſman may have means to obtain Juſtice, and to find remedy againſt the unjuſt violence of thoſe that would oppreſs him: Whereas in thoſe Parts of Aſia, I ſee almoſt not any refuge for thoſe poor People; the Cudgel and the Hammer of the Governor being in a manner the only Law that rules, and decides all Controverſies there.

Laſtly, It may be ſaid, that 'tis at leaſt certain, that in ſuch States there is not ſuch a multitude of long-laſting Suits of Law, as in theſe Parts, nor ſo many Lawyers of all ſorts, as amongſt us. It is in my opinion, very true, that one cannot too much applaud that old Perſian Saying, Na-hac Kouta Beter-Ez hac Deraz, that is, Short Injuſtice is better than long Juſtice; and that the length of Law-Suits is unſufferable in a State, and that it is the indiſpenſable duty of the Sovereign, by all good means, to endeavor a remedy againſt them. And 'tis certain, that by taking away this Meum and Tuum, the Root would be cut of an infinite number of Law-Proceſſes, and eſpecially of almoſt all thoſe that are of importance, and long and perplexed; and conſequently there would not need ſo great a number of Magiſtrates, which our Sovereigns do employ to adminiſter Juſtice to their Subjects, nor that ſwarm of men, which ſubſiſt only by that way. But 'tis alſo manifeſt, that the Remedy would be an hundred times worſe than the Diſeaſe, conſidering thoſe great inconveniences that would follow thereupon, and that in all probability the Magiſtrates would become ſuch as thoſe of the Aſiatick States, who deſerve not that Name; for, in a word, our Kings have yet cauſe to glory upon the account of good Magiſtracy under them. In thoſe Parts, ſome Merchants chants excepted, Juſtice is only among the meaneſt ſort of People, that are poor, and of an unequal condition, who have not the means of corrupting the Judges, and to buy falſe Witneſſes, that are there in great numbers, and very cheap, and never puniſhed. And this I have learn'd every where by the experience of many years, and by my ſolicitous Enquiries made among the People of the Country, and our old Merchants that are in thoſe Parts, as alſo of Ambaſſadors, Conſuls and Interpreters; whatever our common Travellers may ſay, who, upon their having ſeen by chance, when they paſſed by, two or three Porters, or others of the like Gang, about a Kady, quickly diſpatching one or other of the Parties, and ſometimes both, with ſome laſhes under the ſole of their Feet, or with a Maybalé Baba, ſome mild words, when there is no Wool to ſheer; who, I ſay, upon ſight of this, come hither, and cry out, O the good and ſhort Juſtice! O what honeſt Judges are thoſe in reſpect of ours! Not conſidering in the mean time, that if one of thoſe Wretches, that is in the wrong, had a couple of Crowns to corrupt the Kady, or his Clerks, and as much to buy two falſe Witneſſes, he might either win his Proceſs, or prolong it as long as he pleaſed.

In concluſion, to be ſhort, I ſay, That the taking away this Propriety of Lands among private men, would be infallibly to introduce at the ſame time Tyranny, Slavery, Injuſtice, Beggary, Barbariſm, Deſolation, and to open a Highway for the ruine and deſtruction of Mankind, and even of Kings and States: And that on the contrary, this Meum and Tuum, accompanied with the hopes that every one ſhall keep, what he works and labours for, for himſelf and his Children, as his own, is the main foundation of whatever is regular and good in the World: Inſomuch that whoſoever ſhall caſt his eyes upon the different Countries and Kingdoms, and taketh good notice of what follows upon this Propriety of Sovereigns, or that of the People, will ſoon find the true ſource and chief cauſe of that great difference we ſee in the ſeveral States and Empires of the World, and avow, that this is in a manner that which changes and diverſifieth the Face of the whole Earth.

The End of the SECOND TOME.

A LETTER TO Monſieur de la MOTHE le VAYER,

WRITTEN

At DEHLI, JULY 1. 1663.

CONTAINING

The Deſcription of DEHLI and AGRA, and divers Particulars diſcovering the Court and Genius of the Mogols and Indians.

SIR,

I Know that one of the firſt Queſtions you are like to ask me, at my return in France, will be, Whether Dehli and Agra are Cities as fair and large, and as well peopled as Paris. Concerning its Beauty, I ſhall tell you by way of Preface, that I have ſometimes wonder'd to hear our Europeans, that are here, deſpiſing the Towns of the Indies, as not coming near ours, in reſpect of the Edifices. Certainly they ought not to reſemble them; and if Paris, London, and Amſterdam, ſtood in the place where Dehli is, the greateſt part of them muſt be thrown down, to build them after another manner. Our Cities indeed have great Beauties and Embelliſhments, but they are ſuch that are proper to them, and accommodated to a cold Climat. Dehli alſo may have its Beauties peculiar to it, and ſutable to a very hot Climat: For you are to know, that the heat here obligeth all People, even the great Lords, and the King himſelf, to go without Stockings, in a kind of Slippers only, a fine and ſlight Turbant on their Heads, and the other Garments accordingly; that there are months in the Summer ſo exceſſively hot, that in the Chambers one can hardly hold ones hands againſt a Wall, nor ones head on a Cuſhion: And that People are oblig'd for the ſpace of more than ſix months to lie without covering, at the door of their Chamber, as the Rabble doth in the open Streets, or as the Merchants, and other People of ſome Quality do, in ſome airy Hall or Garden, or upon ſome Terraſs well watered at Night: thence you may judge, whether if there were ſuch ſtreets as that of St. Jacques, or St. Denis, with their Houſes ſhut, and of ſo many Stories high, they would be habitable? And whether in the Night, eſpecially when the heats are without wind and ſtuffing, it would be poſſible to ſleep there? And who is there (I pray) that would have a mind in Summer, when he returns on Horſeback from the City half dead, and in a manner ſtifled of the heat and duſt, and all in a Sweat, (for ſo it is) to go climbing up an high pair of Stairs, which often is narrow and dark, to a fourth or fifth Story, and to abide in this hot and ſuffocating Air? On ſuch occaſions they deſire nothing, but to throw down into the Stomack a Pint of freſh Water, or Lemonade, to undreſs, to waſh the Face, Hands and Feet, to lie down in ſome cool and ſhady place all along, having a Servant or two to fan one by turns, with their great Panhas, or Fans. But, to leave this, we ſhall now endeavour to entertain you with the repreſentation of Dehli as it is, that ſo you may judge, whether it be truly ſaid, that it is a fair City.

It

It is now about forty years that Chah-Jehan, Father of the Grand-Mogol Aureng-Zebe now reigning, to eternize his memory, cauſed to be built a Town contiguous to old Dehli, which he called after his Name Chah-Jean-Abad, and by way of abbreviation Jean-Abad; that is to ſay, a Colony of Chah-Jehan, deſigning to make it the Capital of the Empire, inſtead of Agra, where he ſaid, that the Summer heats were too violent. This nearneſs hath occaſioned, that the ruines of old Dehli have ſerved to build a new City; and in the Indies they ſcarce ſpeak any more of Dehli, but only of Jehan-Abad. Yet notwithſtanding, ſince the City of Jehan-Abad is not yet known amongſt us, I intend to ſpeak of it under the old name of Dehli, which is familiar to us.

Dehli then is a Town altogether new, ſeated in a plain Campagne, upon a River like our Loire, called Gemna, and built along one ſide of the River only; there being but one Boat-bridge to paſs over into the Plain. This Town is ſurrounded with Walls, except the River ſide: theſe Walls are of Bricks, and without a conſiderable defence, they being without a Ditch, and having nothing to flank them but round Towers after the old way, diſtant from each other an hundred common paces, and a rampart behind them, four or five foot thick. The compaſs of theſe Walls, comprizing the Fortreſs, is not ſo big as is commonly believed: I have gone it round with eaſe in three hours; and I believe not, though I was on Horſeback, that I diſpatched more than one league in an hour: 'tis true, that if you will take into the Town a very long Suburb, which goeth towards Labor, as alſo what remains inhabited of old Dehli, which is likewiſe a great and very long Suburb, and beſides, three or four ſmall Suburbs more, all that would make in a direct line above a league and a half, and ſuch a compaſs which I cannot well determine, becauſe that between the Suburbs are great Gardens, and large ſpaces not built; but I may ſay, that thus taken it would be of a prodigious bigneſs.

The Fortreſs, in which is the Mehalle, or Seraglio, and the other Royal Apartments, which I ſhall hereafter ſpeak of, is built round upon the River; yet there is between the Water and the Walls a pretty large and long ſandy ſpace, where commonly Elephants are exerciſed, and where frequently the Militia of the Omrahs and Rajas is muſtered in the King's preſence, who looks out of the Windows of one of his Apartments. The Walls of the Fortreſs, as to their round antick Towers, are very neat like thoſe of the Town, but they are partly of Bricks, and partly of a certain red Stone reſembling Marble, which maketh them look fairer than thoſe of the Town; beſides that, they are much higher, ſtronger and thicker, being able to bear ſome Field-pieces that are there planted towards the Town; and incompaſſed alſo, excepting that ſide which reſpects the River, with a fair Ditch, walled up with Free-ſtone, full of Water and Fiſh. But yet whether they are conſiderable for ſtrength; a battery of ſome middle ſized Canons would, in my opinion, ſoon caſt them down.

Round about the Ditch there is a pretty large Garden, at all times full of Flowers and green Apricocks, which together with thoſe great Walls all red, maketh a very fine ſight.

About this Garden is the great Street, or rather the great Place Royal, to which the two great and principal Gates of the Fortreſs do anſwer, and to theſe Gates the two chief Streets of the Town.

In this great Place it is, where the Tents of the Rajas are, that are in the King's Pay, to keep there every one in his turn their weekly Guard; whereas the Omrahs and the Manſebdars, or ſmall Omrahs, keep it within the Fortreſs. Theſe little Soveraigns are not pleaſed to ſee themſelves thus and ſo long ſhut up in a Fort.

In this very Place it is, where at the break of day are exerciſed the Horſes of a long Royal Stable, near it. And here 'tis alſo, that the Kobat-kan, or great Commiſſioner of the Cavalry, carefully vieweth the Horſes of thoſe Cavaliers, that have been received into Service, to the end that if theſe Horſes are of Turkiſtan, or Tartary, and large and ſtrong enough for Service, the King's Mark, and that of the Omrahs, under whom ſuch Cavaliers are to be liſted, may be branded upon them: A thing not ill deviſed, to prevent the mutual Loan of Horſes in the Muſters.

This ſame Place is alſo a kind of Bazar, or Market, of an hundred things ſold there, and a Rendezvous of Players, and Juglers of all ſorts, as the Pont-neuf at Paris. It is no leſs the Meeting-place of the poor Aſtrologers, as well Mahumetan as Heathen. Theſe Doctors (forſooth) ſit there in the Sun upon a piece of Tapeſtry, all covered with duſt, having about them ſome old Mathematical Inſtruments, which they make ſhew of to draw Paſſengers, and a great open Book repreſenting the Animals of the Zodiack. Theſe men are the Oracles, but rather the Affronters of the Vulgar, to whom they pretend to give, for one Payſſa, that is, a penny, good Luck; and they are they, that looking upon the Hands and the Face, turning over their Books, and making a ſhew of Calculation, determine the fortunate moment when a Buſineſs is to be begun to make it ſucceſsful. The mean Women, wrapt up in a white Sheet from Head to Foot, come to find them out, telling them in their Ear their moſt ſecret Concerns, as if they were their Confeſſors, and (which ſmells very ſtrongly of Stupidity and Folly) entreat them to render the Stars propitious to them ſuitable to their Deſigns; as if they could abſolutely diſpoſe of their Influences.

The moſt ridiculous of all theſe Aſtrologers, in my opinion, was that mongrel Portugueſe, fugitive from Goa, who ſate in that Place with much Gravity upon his piece of Tapeſtry, like the reſt, and had a great deal of Cuſtom, though he could neither write nor read, and as for Inſtruments and Books, was furniſhed with nothing elſe but an old Sea-Compaſs, and an old Romiſh Prayer-Book in the Portugueſe Language, of which he ſhewed the Pictures for Figures of the Zodiack: A tal Beſtias, tal Aſtrologuo: For ſuch Beaſts, ſuch Aſtrologer, ſaid he to the Reverend Father Buze, a Jeſuit, who met him in that Place.

I here ſpeak only of the pitiful Aſtrologers of the Bazar; for there are others in theſe Parts, that are in the Courts of the Grandees, and are conſidered as great Clerks, and are very rich; whole Aſia being overſpread with this Superſtition. The Kings and the great Lords, who would not undertake the leaſt things without conſulting them, allow them great Salaries, that they may read to them what is written in the Heavens, (for ſo they ſpeak here) and take out for them that fortunate moment, I was lately ſpeaking of; or find out, at the opening of the Alcoran, the deciſion of all their Doubts.

To return; theſe two principal Streets, which I ſaid do anſwer to the two Gates of the Fortreſs, and to the Place, may have twenty five or thirty common paces in breadth, and they run in a ſtreight line as far as you are able to ſee: Yet that which leads to the Gate of Labor, is much longer than the other; but they are both alike as to the Houſes. There is on both ſides nothing but Arches, as in our Place Royal; yet with this difference, that they are but of Bricks, and that there is not any Building upon them, but only the Terraſs. There is alſo this difference, that they are not continued Galleries. Theſe Arches are generally ſevered by Rails that make Shops which are not to be ſhut, where Tradeſ-men work in the day, where Bankers ſit for their Buſineſs, and where Merchants ſet out their Wares, which at night they lock up in a Magazin, the little Door of which, to be ſhut, is in the bottom of every Arch.

It is upon this Magazin, which is in the back-part of the Arches, that the Houſes of Merchants are built and raiſed, which make a Shew good enough towards the Street, and are alſo pretty convenient, being well aired, out of the way of the duſt, and having for their Floor the terraſſes of the Arches, upon which they can walk to look out upon the Street, and to ſleep at night in freſco. But excepting theſe Houſes of the chief Streets, and a few others, there are not many of theſe fair Houſes, that are thus raiſed upon Terraſſes; nor are even theſe two Streets univerſally furniſht with them, there being moſtly upon the Magazin, or on the ſide, nothing but a ſmall Building, not ſeen from the Street, the great Merchants having their Houſes ſomewhere elſe, whither they retire at night.

Beſides theſe two principal Streets, there are yet five others, which indeed are not ſo long nor ſo ſtreight, but for the reſt are altogether like them. There are alſo a great many other Streets croſſing thoſe on all ſides, whereof there are alſo ſome furniſht with Arches; but becauſe they have been built piece-meal by ſuch particular perſons, as have not obſerved the Symmetry that was requiſite, they are, for the moſt part, neither ſo large nor ſo ſtreight, nor ſo well built as the others.

Amongſt all theſe Streets are ſpread every where the Houſes of the Manſebdars, or little Omrahs, and thoſe of the men of the Law, as alſo of many great Merchants, and other private men; of which there is a good number that are paſſable. It is true, there are but few that are all of Brick or Stone, and there is even a good number of theſe, that are made all of Earth only, and thatched; but for all that, they are convenient, becauſe they are generally airy, being furniſhed with Courts and Gardens. Nor are they diſagreeable within, foraſmuch as beſides the fine moveables, theſe thatched Coverings are ſupported by a layer of certain long Canes, that are hard and ſtrong, and very pretty, and becauſe alſo theſe earthen Walls are plaſtered over with very fine and very white Chalk.

Amongſt

Amongſt theſe Houſes I have been ſpeaking of, that are tolerable, there is alſo a prodigious number of other ſmall ones, that are only made up of Earth and Straw, where all the ſimple Cavaliers, and their Servants, and all thoſe little people of the Market, that follow the Court and the Army are lodged.

It is from theſe thatched Houſes that Debli is ſo ſubject to Fires. This laſt year there were burnt above ſixty thouſand ſuch, at two or three times that they took Fire, when there blew certain impetuous Winds, that riſe chiefly in Summer. The Fire was ſo quick and ſo violent, that it ſurpriſed the Houſes, and many Horſes alſo that could not be time enough looſened; and there were even ſome of theſe poor Women burnt, that never had been out of the Seraglio, and that are ſo weak and ſhamefaced when they ſee people, that they know nothing elſe but to hide their Faces.

And it is upon the account of theſe pitiful Houſes of Earth and Straw, that I look upon Debli almoſt no otherwiſe than as many Villages joyned together, and (which I have already ſaid in another place) as a Camp of an Army, a little better and more commodiouſly placed, than in the Field.

As to the Houſes of the Omrahs, that are alſo up and down in this City, and principally upon the River, and even in the Suburbs: You are to know that in theſe hot Countries, to entitle an Houſe to the name of Good and Fair, it is required it ſhould be commodious, ſeated in a Place well aired, and capable to receive the Wind from all ſides, and principally from the North; having Courts, Gardens, Trees, Conſervatories, and little jets of Waters in the Halls, or at leaſt at the Entry; furniſhed alſo with good Cellars with great Flaps to ſtir the Air, for repoſing in the freſh Air from twelve till four or five of the Clock, when the Air of theſe Cellars begins to be hot and ſtuffing: or having in lieu of Cellarage certain Kas-kanays, that is, little Houſes of Straw, or rather of odoriferous Roots, that are very neatly made, and commonly placed in the midſt of a Parterre near ſome Conſervatory, that ſo the Servants may eaſily, with their Pompion-bottles, water them from without. Moreover it is required for the beauty of an Houſe, that it be ſeated in the midſt of ſome great Parterre, that it have four great Divans or Ways raiſed from the ground to the height of a man, or thereabout, and expoſed to the four Parts of the World, to receive the Wind and the Cold from all the Parts it may come from. Laſtly, it is requiſite for a good Houſe to have raiſed Terraſſes, to ſleep upon in the night, ſuch as are of the ſame Floor with ſome great Chamber, to draw in ones Bed-ſtead upon occaſion; that is to ſay, when there comes ſome Tempeſt of Rain or Duſt, or when that rouſing freſhneſs of the break of day awakens you, and obliges you to look for a Covering: or elſe when you apprehend that ſmall and light Dew of the morning, which pierceth, and cauſeth ſometimes benumming and paralitical Symptoms in the Limbs.

As to the interior part of an Houſe, it is requiſite that the whole Floor be covered with a mattereſs of Cotton four inches thick, covered with a white fine linnen Sheet during Summer, and with a piece of ſilk Tapeſtry in Winter: That in the moſt conſpicuous part of the Chamber, near the Wall, there be one or two cotton Quilts, with fine flowered Coverings, and ſet about with ſmall and fine embroidery of Silk, wrought with Gold and Silver, for the Maſter of the Houſe, or Perſons of Quality coming in, to ſit upon; and that every Quilt have its croſs Board, purfled with God, to lean upon: that round about the Chamber, along the Walls, there be ſeveral of theſe croſs Boards, as I juſt now mentioned, handſomly covered with Velvet or flowred Sattin, for Byſtanders alſo to lean upon. The Walls five or ſix foot from the Floor, muſt be almoſt all with Niches, or little Windows, cut in an hundred different manners, or ſhapes, very fine, well meaſured and proportioned to one another, with ſome porcelain Veſſels and Flower-pots in them; and the Ground muſt be painted and guilded, yet without any figure of Man or Beaſt, their Religion not allowing thereof.

This is as near as I know, the Idea of a handſom and convenient Houſe in theſe Parts: And as there is a good number of them in Debli, that have all theſe Qualities mentioned, or at leaſt in part, according to which they are more or leſs fair and gallant: I believe one may ſay, without any injury to our Towns, that Debli is not without Houſes that are truly handſom, although they be not like ours in Europe.

Concerning the Appearance and Riches of the Shops, (which is the thing that contributeth moſt to the beauty of our Towns in Europe) although Debli be the Seat of a very potent and magnificent Court, and conſequently the reſort of infinite quantities and varieties of rich Wares; yet we are not to imagine, that you ſhall find there our Streets of St. Denis; I know not whether there be any ſuch in all Aſia. And even as to the moſt fine and the moſt rich Stuffs, they are commonly but in the Magazins, their Shops are not furniſht with them: So that for one Shop that maketh any ſhew, that is, where there are ſold thoſe fine ſorts of Linnen, thoſe Stuffs of Silk ſtreaked with Gold and Silver, Cloth of Gold, Turbands embroidered with Gold, and other Commodities of great price; you ſhall always find five and twenty and more, that are filled with nothing but Pots of Oyl and Butter, and Panniers one upon another full of Rice, Barley, Peaſe, Corn, and many other ſorts of Grain and Legume; which are the ordinary Food not only of all the Gentiles, that never eat any meat, but alſo of the meaner ſort of the Mahumetans, and of a good part of thoſe of the Souldiery.

It is true that there is a Fruit-market that maketh ſome ſhew. One may there ſee in Summer abundance of Shops full of dry Fruit, that come out of Perſia, Balk, Bokara, and Samarkand, as Almonds, Piſtaches, ſmall Nuts, Raiſins, Prunes, Apricocks, and the like. And in Winter there are found excellent Raiſins freſh, black and white, brought from the ſame Countries, well wrapt up in Cotton; alſo Apples and Pears of three or four ſorts, and of theſe admirable Melons that laſt all Winter. But all this Fruit is very dear; I have ſeen Melons ſold even for a Crown and an half a piece. And they are indeed the great delicacy and expence of the Omrahs. I have often ſeen in the Houſe of my Aga, that there was eaten in Melons in one morning for more than twenty Crowns. There are none but the Melons of the Country that are cheap in Summer, but thoſe are not ſo good. The Grandees only, that take care to ſend for Seed out of Perſia, and to get the Ground well fitted for them, may eat good ones; yet that but rarely neither, the Ground being not ſo proper but that the Seed degenerateth the very firſt year.

It is true, there is yet another Fruit called Amba, or Mangue, which in its ſeaſon, during two Summer months, is found in great plenty and very cheap; but thoſe of Dehli are none of the beſt, being very looſe and flaſhly: thoſe of Bengala, Golkonda, and Goa, are admirable. It hath a certain ſweetneſs ſo peculiar, that I doubt whether there be any Comfit in the World ſo pleaſant. There are alſo Pateques, or Water-Melons in abundance, and almoſt all the year long; but they alſo do not thrive well at Dehli; they never have their meat ſo ruddy, firm and ſuggary; and if there be any good, they are not to be found but amongſt the Great ones, who take the pains of making them grow as Melons, with extraordinary care and coſt.

There be alſo up and down in Dehli Shops of Comfit-makers; but all their Comfits are very ill done, being full of Duſt and Flyes.

There are beſides many Shops of Bread every where, but becauſe they have no Ovens like ours, it is never well baked: yet in the Fortreſs there is ſold ſome that is reaſonably good; and the Omrahs cauſe ſuch to be made in their Houſes that is very delicate, ſparing no new Butter, Milk, nor Eggs: yet though they leaven it, it is always much inferior in goodneſs to our Bread of Goueſſe, and to thoſe other ſorts of excellent Bread of Paris, it ſavouring always of the Cake or Simnel.

In theſe Bazars there are alſo ſome Tents, where they trade in Roſt-meat, and in dreſſing I know not how many ſorts of Diſhes; but all that is but beggarly, naſty, and ill meat. I fear you ſometimes meet with the fleſh of Camels, Horſes, or Oxen, dead of ſickneſs: I do not much truſt them; ſo that if you will eat any thing worth eating, you muſt have it dreſſed at home.

There are alſo many Shops every where where they ſell Fleſh; but you muſt take heed, leſt they give you Mutton for Kid; the Mutton and Beef, but eſpecially Mutton, though well enough taſted, being here very hot, windy, and of ill digeſtion. The beſt meat here is young Kid, but it is very rarely ſold in the Market by Quarters; ſo that if you have a mind to eat any, you muſt buy a whole and a live one; which is inconvenient enough, becauſe the meat is ſpoiled between one morning and evening, and is commonly ſo lean, that it is taſteleſs. Ordinarily you find in the Shambles nothing but the quarters of great Kids, which often alſo are very lean and hard. It is true, that ſince I have learned ſomething of the manner of the Country, I find both Meat and Bread good enough, becauſe I ſend my Servant to the Fortreſs to the King's Caterers, who are very ready to let him have what is good for good payment, though it coſt them nothing. And it was in reference to this, that one day I made my Agah ſmile, when I told him that I had I know not how many years lived by artifice and ſtealing, and that for all the 150 Crowns pay he monthly allowed me, I was ready to be ſtarved; whereas in France for half a Roupy, I could every day eat as good a bit of meat as the King.

They

They have no Capons, all that People being too tender-hearted towards all Animals but Men, whom they need for their Seraglios. But the Markets are full of Hens, that are very good and cheap: Among the reſt there is one ſort of little ones, that I called Æthiopian Hens, becauſe they have their skin black like the Æthiopians, which are very tender and very delicate.

Pidgeons there are, but no young ones, becauſe they will not kill them young; they would be (ſay they) too ſmall, and it were ill done to kill ſuch poor little Animals.

There are alſo Partridges, but ſmaller than ours, and generally (ſeeing they bring them afar off alive, knowing how to take them with Nets) they are worſe than our Pullets. The like may be ſaid of their Ducks and Hares, of which they alſo bring whole Cages full alive.

Concerning Fiſh, the People here are no great Fiſh-mongers; yet at times one meets with very good Fiſh, eſpecially of two ſorts, the one reſembleth our Pike, and the other our Carp; but that is only when it is not cold, for the Indians fear that much more than we Europeans apprehend heat. And if at any time you meet accidentally with any, the Eunuchs, who love them exceſſively, (I know not why) carry them preſently away. None but the Omrahs have power to make men fiſh when they pleaſe, which they do with the Korrah, that great common Whip always hanging at their Gates.

From all that I have ſaid, you may by the By ſee, whether a man ought to leave Paris to come to Dehli to make good cheer. Certainly the Grandees have all things, but that is upon the account of their many Servants, of the Korrah, and of the plenty of Money. And thence it was I once ſaid, that at Dehli there is no mean; there you muſt either be a great Lord, or live miſerably: for I have experienced it my ſelf, in a manner dying of Hunger this good while, though I have had conſiderable Pay, and was reſolved to ſpare nothing that way, becauſe commonly there is found nothing in the Markets but the refuſe of the Grandees. Beſides that, the ſoul of a Feaſt which is good Wine, is not there; not that no Grapes do grow there to make Wine, (for I have drunk ſome at Amadevad and Golkonda, in the Houſes of Engliſh men and Hollanders, that was not ill) but becauſe it is prohibited to make Wine, in regard that not only by the Law of Mahomet, but alſo by that of the Heathen, it is not permitted to drink any: So that it is very rare to find Wine, and that which we find comes out of Perſia from Chiras by Land to Banderabaſy, from thence by Sea to Suratte, and from Suratte hither by Land in forty ſix days: or it comes from the Canaries, brought alſo over Sea to Suratte by the Dutch. And both are ſo dear, that the coſt (as the ſaying is) maketh it loſe the taſte; for a Bottle holding about three Pariſian pints cometh often to ſix or ſeven Crowns, and more. That which is of this Countreys growth is called Arac, a ſtrong Water made of Sugar not refined, and even this is expreſly prohibited to be ſold, and there are none but Chriſtians that dare drink of it, except others do it by ſtealth. This is a Drink very hot and penetrant, like the Brandy made of Corn in Poland. It ſo falls upon the Nerves, that it often cauſeth ſhaking Hands in thoſe that drink a little too much of it, and caſts them into incurable Maladies. Here we muſt accuſtom our ſelves to fair and good Water, and to Lemonade, which is excellent, and may be made with ſmall charges, and doth not ſpoil the Stomach. But to ſay all, a man hath no great inclination, in ſuch hot Countries as theſe to drink Wine; and I am willing notice ſhould be here taken together with me, that the abſtinence from Wine in theſe Parts, joyned to the general ſobriety of the Natives, and to the ſweats and perpetual tranſpiration made by the pores, are the cauſe (in my opinion) that we almoſt know not what is the Gout, the Stone, Aches of the Kidneys, Rheumatiſms, Quartans; and that thoſe that bring any of theſe Sickneſſes hither, as I did, are at length totally freed from them: and further, that the Pox it ſelf, though very frequent, is not ſo cruel nor ſo pernicious here as in Europe: ſo that People generally live here more healthily than with us. But then on the other hand, there is not ſo much vigour here in People, as in our cold Climat; and this feebleneſs and languor of body is a kind of perpetual malady, very troubleſom to all, eſpecially in the great heats of Summer, and eſpecially to the Europeans, whoſe bodies are not yet inured to heat.

As for Shops of excellent Handy-craftſmen, that is alſo a thing we muſt not look for here: all we find is but very little; not that the Indians have not wit enough to make them ſucceſsful in Arts, they doing very well (as to ſome of them) in many Parts of India, and it being found that they have inclination enough for them, and that ſome of them make (even without a Maſter) very pretty workmanſhip, and imitate ſo well our Work of Europe, that the difference thereof will hardly be diſcerned. I have ſeen amongſt them even of our kind of Guns, very fine and very good; and pieces of Goldſmiths Work ſo well done, that I doubt whether in Europe they could be made better. I have alſo ſeen in Picture and Miniature ſuch curious and delicate pieces, that I admired them. Amongſt others, I have ſeen the Combats of Eckbar, repreſented upon a Buckler by a famous Painter, who was ſaid to have been ſeven years working at it, which ſeemed to me an admirable piece of Work. It is manifeſt, that they want nothing but good Maſters, and the precepts of Art to give them juſt proportions; and above all, that life of the Face, to which they have not yet been able to attain. The Reaſon therefore why in the Shops of Dehli there are rarely found good Handy-craftſmen, is not want of Wit, but contempt of the Workmen, who are ill treated, and whoſe Work is debaſed to too low a price. If ſome Omrah, or Manſebdar, will have any thing made by a Workman of the Bazar, he will ſend for him, and make him work in a manner by force, and afterwards pay him as he pleaſeth; and the man will think himſelf happy too, if in part of payment he receive not the Korrah. What heart then can a poor Workman have to take pains to ſucceed in his Workmanſhip? He conſiders nothing but to diſpatch his Work, thereby to earn ſomething to put Bread into his Mouth. So that if there be any of them that ſucceed, they are of thoſe whom the great Lords entertain in their Service, and that work only for them.

Touching the things within the Fortreſs, where are the Seraglio, and ſome other Royal Edifices, you muſt not look for a Louvre, or an Eſcurial; thoſe Buildings do not reſemble ours, nor by what I have ſaid, ought they to reſemble them: it is enough that they have that ſtatelineſs, which is proper to the Climat.

I find nothing remarkable at the entry, but two great Elephants of ſtone, which are on the two ſides of one of the Gates. Upon one of them is the Statue of Jamel, that famous Raja of Chitar, and upon the other, that of Polta his Brother. Theſe are thoſe two gallant Men, that together with their Mother, who was yet braver than they, cut ſo much Work for Eckbar; and who in the Sieges of Towns, which they maintained againſt him, gave ſuch extraordinary proofs of their Generoſity, that at length they would rather be killed in the out-falls with their Mother, than ſubmit: and for this Gallantry it is, that even their Enemies thought them worthy to have theſe Statues erected for them. Theſe two great Elephants, together with the two reſolute Men ſitting on them, do at the firſt entry into this Fortreſs make an Impreſſion of I know not what greatneſs and awful terror.

After you have paſſed this Gate, you find a long and large Street, divided into two by a Channel of running Water, and having on both ſides, as our Pont-neuf, a long raiſed Wall five or ſix foot high, and four broad; and further off ſome Arches ſhut, that follow one another all along in the form of Gates. It is upon this long raiſed Place that thoſe Clerks, Controllers, and other ſmall Officers ſit to do their Office, without being incommoded by the Horſes and People that paſs along beneath. And it is there alſo where the Manſeb-dars, or little Omrahs, are at night to keep the Guard. The Water of the Channel runneth dividing it ſelf through the whole Seraglio, and at length falleth into the Ditches to fill them. It is drawn out of the River by a Channel opened five or ſix leagues above Dehli, and conveyed croſs the Field, and that through ſome Rocks that have coſt great pains to be cut in divers places. And this is very near what may be ſeen at the entry into one of the two principal Gates, that anſwer to the great Piazza.

If you enter at the other Gate, you alſo find preſently a pretty long and large Street, having its riſings on the ſides as the other, together with Shops upon them in lieu of the Arches. This Street is properly a Bazar, which is very commodious during the ſeaſon of the Rains and Summer, becauſe it is covered by a long and large Vault, which hath on the top great openings to let in light.

Beſides theſe two Streets, there are many other ſmall ones on the right and left hand, that lead to the Apartments, where the Omrahs keep their Guard, each in his turn, once a week, for twenty four hours. Theſe Places are ſtately ones for Corps de Gardes, the Omrahs ſtriving to beautifie them at their own charges. Theſe are ordinarily great raiſed Places reſpecting a Parterre, that hath its little Channels of running Water, ſmall Conſervatories and Jets of Water. The Omrahs during the twenty four hours of Guard, take no care for their Table, the King ſending them all their Meat ready dreſſed, and they being but to receive it, as they do, with very much Ceremony and Reſpect, ſpect, making three obeyſances of thanks, by elevating their Hand upon their Head, and bowing down to the ground, their Face turned toward the King.

There are alſo found many raiſed Walks and Tents in ſundry Places, that are the Offices of ſeveral Officers. Beſides, there are many great Halls that are the Kar-kanays, or Places where Handy-craftſmen do work. In one of theſe Halls you ſhall find Embroiderers at work, together with their Chief that inſpects them; in another you ſhall ſee Gold-ſmiths; in a third Picture-drawers; in a fourth Workmen in Lacca; in others, Joyners, Turners, Taylors, Shoo-makers; in others, Workmen in Silk and purfled Gold, and in all thoſe ſorts of fine Cloth, of which they make Turbands, Girdles with golden flowers, and thoſe Drawers of Ladies, that are ſo fine and delicate, as that ſometimes they laſt them but one night, though they often coſt them ten or twelve Crowns, when they are of that faſhion, as I have mentioned; I mean, enriched with thoſe fine Embroideries of Needle-work.

All theſe Handy-craftſmen come in the morning to thoſe Kar-kanays, and work there all day long, and at night return to their ſeveral homes, every one paſſing his Life quietly, without aſpiring above his condition: for the Embroiderer maketh his Son an Embroiderer, the Gold-ſmith maketh his Son a Gold-ſmith, and a Phyſician in a Town maketh his Son a Phyſician; and no body marrieth but with thoſe that are of his Trade: which is religiouſly obſerved, not only among the Heathen, that are obliged to it by their Law, but almoſt always among the Mahometans themſelves: Whence it is that you may often ſee very handſom young Women, that remain unmarried, paſſing their time as well as they can, though they might meet with good Matches, if their Parents would or could marry them into another Family, eſteemed leſs noble than their own.

After all theſe Apartments, we come at length to the Am-kas, which is ſomething very Royal. This is a great ſquare Court with Arches, as may be our Place Royal: with this difference, that there are no Buildings atop, and that the Arches are ſevered from one another by a Wall, yet ſo that there is a ſmall Gate to paſs from one to the other. Over the great Gate, which is in the middle of one of the ſides of this Square, there is a large raiſed Place, all open on the ſide of the Court, which is called Nagar-kanay, becauſe that is the Place where the Trumpets are, or rather the Hoboys and Timbals, that play together in conſort at certain hours of the day and night: but this is a very odd conſort in the Ears of an European that is a new comer, not yet accuſtomed to it: for ſometimes there are ten or twelve of thoſe Hoboys, and as many Timbals, that ſound altogether at once; and there is an Hoboy which is called Karna, a fathom and an half long, and of half a foot aperture below; as there are Timbals of Braſs or Iron, that have no leſs than a fathom in diameter: whence it is eaſie to judge, what a noiſe they muſt needs make. Indeed this Muſick in the beginning did ſo pierce and ſtun me, that it was unſufferable for me; yet I know not what ſtrange power cuſtom hath, for I now find it very pleaſing, eſpecially in the night, when I hear it afar off in my bed upon my Terraſs; then it ſeemeth to me to carry with it ſomething that is grave, majeſtical and very melodious. And there is ſome Reaſon for this melody; for ſeeing it hath its Rules and Meaſures, and that there are excellent Maſters taught from their youth to manage it, and perfectly know how to qualifie and temper thoſe ſtrong ſounds of the Hoboys and Timbals, it cannot be otherwiſe, but they muſt thence obtain ſome ſympathy that cannot be diſpleaſing to the Ear, provided (as I ſaid) that it be heard at a diſtance. And even for this Reaſon it is, that they have placed the Nagar-kanay very high, and remote from the Ears of the King, as you will hear by and by.

Over againſt the great Gate of the Court, upon which is the Nagar-kanay, beyond the whole Court, there is a great and ſtately Hall, with many ranks of Pillars high raiſed, very airy, open on three ſides, looking to the Court, and having its Pillars and Ground painted and guilded. In the midſt of the Wall, which ſeparateth this Hall from the Seraglio, there is an opening, or a kind of great Window high and large, and ſo high that a Man cannot reach to it from below with his hand: There it is where the King appears ſeated upon his Throne, having his Sons on his ſides, and ſome Eunuchs ſtanding, ſome of which drive away the Flyes with Peacocks-tails, others fan him with great Fans, others ſtand there ready with great reſpect and humility for ſeveral Services. Thence he ſeeth beneath him all the Omrahs, Rajas, and Ambaſſadors, who are alſo all of them ſtanding upon a raiſed Ground encompaſſed with ſilver Rails, with their Eyes downwards, and their Hands croſſing their Stomachs: ſomewhat further off he

ſeeth the Manſebdars, or leſſer Omrahs, which are alſo all ſtanding in the ſame poſture and reſpect as the Omrahs do: and ſomewhat further off, in the remaining part of the Hall, and in the Court, he ſeeth a great crowd of all ſorts of People. For there it is where the King every day about noon giveth a general Audience to all; which is the Reaſon that this great Hall is called Am-kas, that is, Place of Audience, or a Place of Meeting common to great and ſmall.

During an hour and an half, or thereabouts, whilſt this Aſſembly laſteth, the King is diverted by ſeeing paſs before him a certain number of the handſomeſt Horſes of his Stables, to ſee whether they be well dreſſed, and in good plight. So he doth ſee a good number of Elephants paſſing alſo before him, whoſe dirty bodies are then well waſhed and cleanſed, and painted black like Ink, except that they have two great ſtreaks painted red, which from the top of their Head come down to their Trunk, where they meet. Theſe Elephants have then alſo certain deckings embroidred with a couple of ſilver Bells hanging down on the ſides, faſtened to the two ends of a great ſilver Chain, paſſing over their Shoulders; as alſo certain Cow-tails of the great Tibet, white and very dear, hanging at their Ears like great Muſtachoes: and two little Elephants well accoutred going by their ſides, as if they were their Slaves and appointed to ſerve them. Theſe great Coloſſes, as if they were proud to ſee themſelves ſo bravely adorned and attended, march with much gravity; and when they are come before the King, the Conductor that ſits upon their Shoulders, with a pointed Iron in his Hand pricketh them, and ſpeaketh to them, and maketh them bow with one Knee, and liſt up the Trunk into the Air and make a noiſe, which the People take for a Taſlim, or deep Salute.

After theſe Elephants there are brought divers tamed Gazelles, which are made to fight with one another; as alſo ſome Nilgaux, or grey Oxen, which in my opinion are a kind of Elands and Rhinoceroſs, and thoſe great Buffalos of Bengala with their prodigious Horns to combat with a Lion or Tiger; likewiſe Leopards, or Panthers tamed, which he uſeth in the hunting of Gazelles: further, ſome of thoſe handſom hunting Dogs of Usbeck of all ſorts, every one with his little red Cover; ſtore of Birds of prey of all kinds, ſome of which are for Partridges, others for Cranes, others to fall upon Hares, and, as they ſay, upon the very Gazelles, beating their Heads and blinding them with their Wings and Claws.

Often alſo one or two of the Omrahs cauſe at that time to paſs their Cavalry for a review before the King: the Omrahs coveting that their Horſemen ſhould appear gallant, advantagiouſly decked with extraordinary Garments, and their Horſes trapped with Iron, and harneſſed with I know not how many different and odd faſhions.

The King taketh ſometimes pleaſure himſelf to cauſe Cutlaſes, or ſhort Swords, to be tryed upon dead Sheep, brought to him without the bowels, and very neatly packed up, where the young Omrahs, Manſeb-dars and Gourze-berdars, or Mace-bearers, ſtrive to ſhew their force and dexterity by cutting aſunder the four Legs joyned together, and the Body of the Sheep all in one ſtroke.

Mean time all theſe Divertiſements are nothing but an Interlude of ſerious Affairs: for as I have ſaid, the King omits not to make a Muſter of his Cavalry, and well to view them himſelf. We have ſeen, that the War being ended, there is not one Cavalier, nor any other Souldier, but He hath ſeen him and examined him, either to increaſe his Pay, or to leſſen it, or quite to caſhier him. Beſides it is ſeen every day, that he commands the Petitions, which are ſhewed him afar off in the crowd of the People, to be brought to him and to be read: ordering the Parties concerned to approach, and examining them, and often cauſing Juſtice to be done them immediately, although he hath the Adalet-kanay, the Chamber of Juſtice, where he ordinarily is preſent once a week, attended by his two firſt Kadys, or Chief Juſtices: and though alſo at one other time in the week he hath the patience to hear in private, for the ſpace of two hours, ten Perſons of the common People, whom a good and rich old Man preſents to him. Whence it appears (to note that by the By) that thoſe Kings, how barbarous ſoever eſteemed by us, do yet conſtantly remember, that they owe Juſtice to their Subjects.

All what I have been relating to you of what is tranſacted in this Aſſembly of the Am-kas, ſeems to me great and royal; but that which hath extreamly offended me there, is a kind of Adulation too mean and flat, commonly heard in that Place. For the King cannot ſay a word to any purpoſe, but he is preſently exalted, and ſome of the firſt Omrahs lifting up their Hands, as if they were to receive ſome Benediction from Heaven, cry

cry out, Karamat ! Karamat ! Wonder! Wonder! Neither is there any Mogolian but he knoweth and glorieth in reciting this Proverb in Perſian Verſe:

Aguer chach ronzra Gonyed cheb eſt in Buhayed Gouſt inek mah ou peruin.

If the King ſaith at Noon-day, it is Night, you are to ſay, behold the Moon and the Stars. This Vice paſſeth even unto the People. I have ſeen an hundred times People of Mogol, who having need of me in ſome Buſineſs, made no ſcruple to come and tell me to my Face for a Preamble, that I was Ariſtotalis, Bocrate, and Abouyſina Ulzaman; the Ariſtotle, the Hippocrates, and the Avicenna of the Time. At firſt I endeavoured to fence my ſelf againſt it by this ordinary Complement, that I was none ſuch, and was far inferior to the merit of thoſe Men: but that made them worſe; ſo that I thought it better to accuſtom my Ears to their Flattery, as I have done to their Muſick. I cannot forbear imparting to you this little piece of Flattery, becauſe that will let you ſee the more how far they carry it. A Pendet Brachman, or Heathen Doctor, whom I had put to ſerve my Agah, at the entring into his Service would needs make his Panegyrick, and after he had compared him to the greateſt Conquerors that ever were, and told him an hundred groſs and impertinent Flatteries, at laſt concluded ſeriouſly with this; When you put your Foot into the Stirrup, my Lord, and when you march on Horſe-back in the front of the Cavalry, the Earth trembleth under your feet, the eight Elephants, that hold it up upon their Heads, not being able to ſupport it. I could not hold laughing, and I ſtrove ſeriouſly to tell my Agah, who could not hold neither, that then he would do well not to go on Horſe-back but very ſeldom, to prevent Earthquakes, which often cauſe ſo great Miſchiefs. Who quickly made this Reparty with a conſtrained Countenance between ſerious and ſmiling: And it is therefore that I cauſe my ſelf ordinarily to be carried in a Palekey.

But no more of this: from the great Hall of the Am-kas one enters into a more retired Place, called the Goſelkane, that is, the Place to waſh in. But few are ſuffered to enter there; neither is the Court of it ſo great as that of the Am-kas: but the Hall is very handſom, ſpacious, painted and guilded, and its Floor raiſed four or five foot high. There it is where the King is ſeated in a Chair, his Omrahs ſtanding round about him, and giveth a more particular Audience to his Officers, receiveth their Accompts, and treateth of the moſt important Affairs of State. All the Omrahs are obliged to be without fail every evening at this Aſſembly, as in the morning at the Am-kas; elſe ſomething is retrenched of their Pay. There is only my Agah Danechmend-kan, that becauſe he is a Perſon of Learning, and perpetually buſie in ſtudying, or in foreign Affairs, is diſpenſed with, except Wedneſday, which is his day of being upon the Guard. Theſe are indiſpenſible Cuſtoms, and it is very juſt they ſhould be ſo in reſpect of the Omrahs, becauſe they are in a manner ſo in reſpect of the King: for he almoſt never faileth to be at theſe two Aſſemblies, unleſs ſome urgent Affair do ſupervene, or he be exceeding ſick. And we did ſee, that Aureng-Zebe, even in his laſt Sickneſs, which was very dangerous, failed not to make himſelf to be carried thither once a day at leaſt. It is true, he being ſick to extremity, that if he had not been ſeen there, the whole Kingdom would preſently have been in diſorder, and the Shops ſhut up in the City.

Whilſt the King in this Hall of Goſle-kanay is buſie, as I was ſaying, they omit not to let paſs before him moſt of the things that are made to paſs at the Am-kas. There is only this difference, that this Aſſembly being held in the evening, and the Court being then leſs, the review of the Cavalry of the Omrahs is not made, as in the morning at the Am-kas: but then there is this of particular, that all the Manſeb-dars that are upon the Guard do ſalute the King, and paſs before him with Ceremony enough: before them marcheth with ſufficient Pomp that which is called the Kours, which are many Figures of Silver carried at the end of ſome great ſilver Sticks, that are very fine and very artificially made; of which there are two that repreſent two great Fiſhes, two others that exhibit a phantaſtick Animal of an horrid figure, by them called Eiedeha; others that repreſent two Lions, others two Hands, others Scales, and many more whereof they make Myſteries. Amongſt theſe Kours and Manſeb-dars, are mixt many Gourze-berdars, or Mace-bearers, who are choſen Men, tall of Stature, and of a good Mean, (ſpoken of elſewhere) and appointed to prevent Diſorders in Aſſemblies, and to run about with ſpeed to carry the Orders, and to execute the Commands of the King.

I now wish I could lead you about in the Seraglio, as I have done in the rest of the Fortress: but who is the Traveller that can speak of that as an Eye-witness? I have sometimes entred into it when the King was not at Dehli, and I think pretty far, upon the occasion of a great Lady, that was so sick that she could not be carried to the Gate, according to custom; but I had always a Covering of Kachemire over my Head, which like a great Scarf hung down to my Feet, and an Eunuch conducted me by the Hand, like a blind Man, so that I cannot particularly describe to you what it is. Only in general I can tell you, according to what I have learnt from some Eunuchs, that in it there are very handsom Apartments severed one from another, more or less great and stately, according to the Quality and the Pensions of the Women; that there is almost no Chamber but it hath at its Door a Store-house of running Water; that 'tis full of Parterres, pleasant Walks, shady Places, Rivolets, Fountains, Jets of Water, Grotta's, great Caves against the heat of the day, and great Terrasses raised high, and very airy, to sleep upon in the cool: in a word, you know not there what 'tis to be hot. They principally boast of a little Tower respecting the River, being, say they, covered with Plates of Gold, as those two that are at Agra, and within all Gold and Azure, very handsom and rich Pictures and Looking-glasses.

This is very near what I can tell you of the Fortress, yet before we leave it, let us return once more to the Am-kas. I am now going to represent it to you after the manner I saw it at certain Festivals of the Year, especially at that which was kept after the War for an extraordinary rejoycing; for this is one of the most remarkable things I have seen.

The King appeared sitting upon his Throne, in the bottom of the great Hall of the Am-kas, splendidly apparelled. His Vest was of white Sattin flowred, and raised with a very fine Embroidery of Gold and Silk. His Turban was of Cloth of Gold, having a Fowl wrought upon it like an Heron, whose foot was covered with Diamonds of an extraordinary bigness and price, with a great Oriental Topas, which may be said to be matchless, shining like a little Sun. A Collar of big Pearls hung about his Neck down to his Stomach, after the manner that some Heathens wear here their great Beads. His Throne was supported by six high Pillars, or Feet, said to be of massie Gold, and set with Rubies, Emeralds and Diamonds. I am not able to tell you aright, neither the number nor the price of this heap of precious Stones, because it is not permitted to come near enough to count them, and to judge of their water and purity. Only this I can say, that the big Diamonds are there in confusion, and that the Throne is estimated to be worth four Kourours of Roupies, if I remember well. I have said elsewhere, that a Roupie is almost equivalent to half a Crown, a Lecque to an hundred thousand Roupies, and a Kourour, to an hundred Lecques: so that the Throne is valued forty millions of Roupies, which are worth about sixty millions of French Livers. Chah-Jehan, the Father of Aureng-Zebe, is he that caused it to be made, to shew so many precious Stones as successively had been amassed in the Treasury, of the Spoyls of those ancient Patans and Rajas, and of the Presents which the Omrahs are obliged to make yearly upon certain Festival days. The Art and Workmanship of this Throne is not answerable to the Matter: that which I find upon it best devised, are two Peacocks covered with precious Stones and Pearls, which are the work of a French-man, called——————that was an admirable Workman, and that after having circumvented many Princes with his Doublets, which he knew how to make admirably well, fled unto this Court, where he made his Fortune. Beneath this Throne there appeared all the Omrahs in splendid Apparel, upon a raised Ground covered with a great Canopy of purled Gold with great golden Fringes, and inclosed by a silver Balistre. The Pillars of the Hall were hung with Tapestries of purled Gold, having the ground of Gold; and for the roof of the Hall, there was nothing but great Canopies of flowred Sattin, fastened with red silken Cords, that had big tufts of Silk mixt with threads of Gold hanging on them. Below there was nothing to be seen but great silken Tapestries very rich, of an extraordinary length and breadth. In the Court there was set abroad a certain Tent they call the Aspex, as long and large as the Hall and more. It was joyned to the Hall by the upper part, and reached almost as far as to the middle of the Court; mean time it was all inclosed by a great Balistre covered with Plates of Silver. It was supported by three Pillars, being of the thickness and height of a Barge-mast, and by some lesser ones, and they all were covered with Plates of Silver. It was red from without, and lined within with those fine Chittes, or Cloth painted by a Pencil of Maslipatan, purposely wrought and contrived with with ſuch vivid Colours, and Flowers ſo natural drawn of an hundred ſeveral faſhions and ſhapes, that one would have ſaid, it were an hanging Parterre. Thus was the great Hall of the Am-kas adorned and ſet out.

As to thoſe arched Galleries, which I have ſpoken of, that are round about the Court, each Omrah had received order to dreſs one of them at his own charges. And they now ſtriving who ſhould make his own moſt ſtately, there was ſeen nothing but purfled Gold above and beneath, and rich Tapeſtries under foot.

The third day of the Feaſt, the King cauſed himſelf to be weighed with great Ceremony, and after him divers Omrahs, in great Scales, and with Weights ſaid to be of maſſie Gold. I remember that all the Omrahs expreſſed a great joy, that the King weighed two pounds more now than the year preceding.

Every year there are held ſuch kind of Feſtivals, but never any was ſeen done with ſo much ſplendor and charge. It is ſaid, that that which induced Aureng-Zebe to celebrate this ſplendid Feaſt, was nothing elſe but to make the Merchants of purfled Gold recover themſelves, who had whole Magazins full of it, much ſpoiled in thoſe four or five years of War, wherein they could not ſell them. Theſe Expences of the Omrahs were great; but the ſimple Cavaliers paid their ſhare of it, becauſe that the Omrahs after the Feaſt made them take off that Commodity to make Veſts thereof.

There is an ancient Cuſtom accompanying theſe Feaſts, which little pleaſeth the Omrahs: And it is this, that then they are by reſpect obliged to make ſome fair Preſents to the King in proportion of their Pay. There are ſome, that to appear brave, or for fear of being ſearched for the Rapines by them committed in their Offices and Governments; or to purchaſe the Favour of the King, in the hopes of having their Penſions augmented, make him Preſents that are extraordinary. Some (which is ordinary enough) do preſent fine Veſſels of Gold ſet with precious Stones; others preſent fair Pearls, Diamonds, Emeralds, or Rubies; others (which alſo is very common) give him, without other Ceremony, a quantity of thoſe pieces of Gold, that are worth about a Piſtol and an half. I remember, that Aureng-Zebe, being gone to viſit (during this great Feſtival) his Viſir Jafer-kan, not as Viſir, but as a Kinſman, and under the pretence of deſiring to ſee a piece of Building, which he had cauſed to be raiſed anew, Jafer-kan preſented him in theſe pieces of Gold, with the value of an hundred thouſand Crowns, ſome good Pearls, and one Ruby valued forty thouſand Crowns; but which Chah-Jehan, who was admirably well skill'd in Jewels, diſcovered not to be worth five hundred Crowns; the which perplexed the firſt Jewellers exceedingly, that had been deceived therein.

There is another thing ſometimes attending theſe Feaſts, which is odd enough: And that is a kind of Fair, then held in the Mehale, or the King's Seraglio. The Women of the Omrahs and of the great Manſeb-dars, or little Omrahs (I mean thoſe that are the handſomeſt and the moſt gallant) are the She-Merchants that keep the Fair, and ſell Commodities; the King is the Merchant that buyeth, as alſo all thoſe Begums or Princeſſes, and other great Ladies of the Seraglio. The Wares are fine purfled Gold, or rich Embroideries of the new faſhion, ſome rich Ribbons well wrought upon Cloth of Gold, or ſome pieces of that fine Cloth which is worn by the great Ladies, and other ſuch Merchandize of great price. If they have ever a handſom Daughter, they forget not to bring her along with them to let the King ſee her, and ſo make her known to thoſe Begums. The jeſt of this Fair is, that the King comes to bargain with thoſe She-Merchants, like a petty Merchant, penny by penny, conteſting that they are not in earneſt, that it is too dear, that he will give no more than ſo much; that the Merchandize of ſuch an one is far better, and the like. The Women, on the other hand, do their beſt to make good their part, and without conſidering that 'tis the King, (which is the beſt of the ſport) they contend and ſtand upon their price, till ſometimes they come to high words, as that that is to be a Merchant of Snow, (one of their phraſes) that he underſtands nothing in the matter of Wares, that he may go to another Place, that that Commodity is not for him, &c. The Begums do the like, or worſe, for they ſometimes fall to downright railing, ſo that there is ſuch a cry and noiſe, and bouſonnery, that it cannot be parallel'd. But when any price is agreed on, who ever buyeth on this or that ſide, the King payeth, and the Begums pay, all with ready money: and it alſo falls out often enough, that the King and the Begums, inſtead of Silver Roupies, let ſlide (in favour of the handſom She-Merchant, or her Daughter) ſome Roupies of Gold, as if 'twere by miſtake, and without taking notice of any thing. The She-Merchants alſo take it in like manner, all paſſeth with expreſſions of rallery and gallantry. Chah-Jehan, who did not hate the Sex, would ſtill multiply this Fair, and have it at all Feſtival days, though he knew it did not very well pleaſe ſome Omrahs. But there is one thing, which to me ſeems to be a little too extravagant; which is, that the publick Women, I mean not thoſe of the Bazar, but thoſe more retired and conſiderable ones, that go to the great marriages in the houſes of the Omrahs and Manſeb-dars to ſing and dance, thoſe that are called Kenchen, as if you ſhould ſay, the guilded, the bloſſoming ones; that thoſe, I ſay, did alſo enter in the time of Chah-Jehan into the Seraglio at ſuch Fairs, and there paſſed even the whole night in ſinging and dancing. Theſe are not of that ſort which proſtitute themſelves promiſcuouſly to all; and they are moſt of them handſome and well apparelled, and excellent ſingers and dancers, after the mode of the Country, ſurpriſing in the ſuppleneſs of their body, and the nimbleneſs of their motions, yet in the upſhot of the rank of Publick Women. Chah-Jehan was not content only to have them come to the Seraglio at thoſe Feaſts, but when they came to ſalute him, according to that antient cuſtom that obligeth them to come every Wedneſday to do obeyſance to the King in the Amkas, he often made them to enter there, and to paſs all night with him in ſuch ſports and bouſonries, Aureng-Zebe is more ſerious, he ſuffers them not to come into the Seraglio: he permits only (not to abrogate the cuſtom) that they may ordinarily come every Wedneſday to give him the Salam, or Salute, in the Am-kas, at a diſtance, but they muſt preſently return home again.

But ſince we are upon theſe Feaſts and Fairs, and ſpeak of theſe Kenchens, what hurt were it if I ſhould tell you a ſtory to make you merry, of one of our French Men; ſince Plutarch is of opinion, that little things are not always to be paſſed by, and that they often mind us more of the genius and temper of men than the greateſt. This French Man called Bernard, was at this Court about the latter years of King Jehan-Guire. He muſt needs have been ſome good Phyſitian, and withal Excellent in Chirurgery, according to the relations that are made of him. He was welcome to Jehan-Guire, and became very familiar with him, to that degree that they drank and debauched together. Nor did this Jehan-Guire ever think on any thing, but a good cup and merriment, leaving the management of the State to his Wife, the renowned Nour-Mehale, or Nour-Jehan-Begum, which he uſed to ſay, had wit enough to govern the Empire without his giving himſelf any trouble about it. Beſides that this our Country-man had of the King ten Crowns daily pay, he gained yet more by treating thoſe great Ladies of the Seraglio, and the grand Omrahs, that all made uſe of him, and preſented him who could beſt, becauſe he was both ſucceſsful in his Cures, and extraordinarily favoured by the King: But he was a man that could keep nothing, what he received with one hand, he at the ſame time gave away with the other, ſo that he was known and loved by all, eſpecially by thoſe Kenchens, upon whom he made great expences, having always a ſet of them that paſſed the night at his houſe in ſinging and dancing. Mean time he chanced to fall in love with one of theſe Women that was young and beautiful, and danced exceeding well; but the Mother apprehending leaſt the Daughter, by proſtituting her ſelf, ſhould loſe her ſtrength and vigor (as it will fall out) would not let her go out of her ſight: ſo that Bernard could never find any other way to compaſs his ends but this. One day when the King made him a Preſent in the Am-kas, before all the Omrahs, for a conſiderable Cure he had done in the Seraglio, he very ſubmiſſively gave his Majeſty thanks, waving the Preſent, but inſtead of it, begged this favour of him, that he would vouchſafe to give him this young Kencheny, which he was amorous of, and which ſtood behind him, ready to make the uſual obeyſance to the King. The whole Aſſembly brake out out into laughter to ſee him wave the Preſent, and to hear him make ſo ridiculous a demand, he being a Chriſtian, and the Woman a Mahometan and a Kencheny. But Jehan-Guire, who never troubled his head much with Mahometaniſm, and could not hold laughing aloud, preſently commanded that this young Woman ſhould be given him, ſaying, Lay her on his ſhoulders, and let him carry her away. So ſaid, ſo done; and in the preſence of the whole Aſſembly this Kenchen was put on Bernard's back, who went away thus charged, and carried her to his houſe.

I cannot forbear giving you here an account of a divertiſement, which uſually theſe Feaſts end with, and which is unknown to us in Europe: and that is the combat of the Elephants, which the King, the Ladies of the Court, and the Omrahs do behold from ſeveral apartments of the Fortreſs, and which is ſhewn before all the people in this great ſandy place which looks to the River.

They

They raiſe a wall of earth three or four foot broad, and five or ſix foot high. The two Elephants that are to fight, meet one another face to face, one on the one ſide of the wall, the other on the other, each having two Riders upon him, that ſo, if the firſt, who ſits on his ſhoulders (having a great pointed iron in his hand, to turn the Beaſt on the right or left hand) ſhould fall, the other, who ſits backward, may caſt himſelf into his place. Theſe four Riders or Guides, do animate their Elephants to the Combat, and vigorouſly to fall upon their enemy, now flattering them, and by and by chiding them as cowards, and very rudely kicking them with their heels. After they have been a good while thus chafed and puſht on, then you ſhall ſee theſe two bulky maſſes come to the wall, and bluntly aſſault one another, and give ſuch cruel blows with their teeth, head and trunk, that you would think they would ſoon ſtrike one another dead. This fight continues a while, then ceaſeth, and begins afreſh ſeveral times, until the mud-wall being overthrown, the ſtouteſt of the two paſſeth upon the other, maketh him turn his back, purſueth him with blows of his teeth and trunk, and gets ſuch an hold-faſt upon him, that there is no means of ſeperating them, except it be with the Cherkys, that is, certain artificial fires caſt betwixt them, this Animal being very fearful of fire: whence it comes, that ſince Fire-arms have been uſed in Armies, Elephants do almoſt no good at all. It is true indeed, that ſome of thoſe brave ones that come out of Ceilan, are not ſo timerous; but that is not till they have been whole years accuſtomed to it, by diſcharging every day Muskets before them, and by caſting ſquibs between their legs. Mean time, this conflict of the Elephants would be no ſuch diſpleaſing ſight, if it were not ſo cruel, it often happening, that ſome of thoſe poor Guides are trod under foot and periſh: for the Elephants in the combat have this malice, that they ſtrive above all things to ſtrike with their trunk, and to pull down the conductor of their adverſary; and thence it is, that on the day when theſe poor Riders know they are to make the Elephants fight, they bid farewel to their Wives and Children, as if they were condemned to death. That which encourages and comforts them, is, that if they eſcape and quit themſelves well of their duty, the King increaſes their pay, and commands a ſack of Peyſſas, which amounts to about fifty French Livres, to be forthwith given them, or if they be killed upon the ſpot, he orders that pay to be made to the Widow, and the Office to be given to his Son, if he have any. There is another miſchief, which often accompanieth this combat; which is, that in this great throng there are always ſome perſons overthrown by the Elephant, or trod under foot by the Horſes and People, that on a ſudden run away all at once, and fall one upon another, when the Elephants are enraged, and the one purſueth the other, ſo that then one cannot at any nearneſs look on but with danger. For my part, the ſecond time I ſaw it, I did ſufficiently repent for having approached ſo nigh, and if I had not had a good Horſe, and two good Servants, I believe I ſhould have paid for my curioſity as dear as others.

But 'tis time we ſhould leave the Fortreſs, and return into the City, there to obſerve to you two things I had forgot. The firſt is the great Moſquee, ſeen afar off in the midſt of the Town, ſtanding upon a rock, flatted to build upon, and to make round about a large place for four long and fair Streets to end upon, and anſwering to the four ſides of the Moſquee, viz. one to the principal Gate, or Frontiſpiece, another behind that, and the two others to the two Gates that are in the middle of the two remaining ſides. To come to the Gates, there are twenty five or thirty ſteps of fair and large Stones going round about, except the back-part, which is covered with other great Quarry-ſtones to cover the uneveneſs of the cut Rock: which contributes much to make this Fabrick make a ſhew. The three Entries are ſtately, there is nothing but Marble, and their large Gates are covered with Copper Plates exceedingly well wrought. Above the principal Gate, which is much ſtatelier than the two others, there are many ſmall Turrets of white Marble as well without as within; that in the middle is much bigger and higher than the two others. All the reſt of the Moſquee, I mean from theſe three Domes unto the great Gate, is without covering, becauſe of the heat of the Country; and the whole Pavement is of large ſquares of Marble. I grant willingly, that this ſtructure is not according to the rules and orders of Architecture, which we eſteem is indiſpenſably to be followed; yet I obſerve nothing in it that offends the eye; but rather find all to be well contrived, and well proportioned: And I do even believe, that if in Paris we had a Church of this way of Architecture, it would not be diſliked, if there were nothing elſe in it but that 'tis of an extraordinary and ſurpriſing aſpect, and becauſe that, excepting the three great Domes and all the Turrets, which are of white white Marble it appears all red, as if all were nothing elſe but great Tables of red Marble, though it be nothing elſe but a ſtone very eaſie to cut, and which even flaketh off in time. I ſhall add by the by, that if it be true what is ſaid of the quarries of this ſtone, 'tis remarkable, that it grows again every year; whether it be by a petrefcent water yearly filling it, or otherwiſe, I decide not.

This Moſquee it is to which the King repaireth every Friday (which is the Sunday of the Mahumetans) to pay his devotion. Before he goes out of the Fortreſs, the Streets he is to paſs, are conſtantly watered becauſe of the heat and duſt. Two or three hundred Muſqueriers are to ſtand and make a lane about the Gate of the Fortreſs, and as many more on the ſides of a great Street that ends at the Moſquee. Their Muſquets are ſmall, but well wrought, and they have a kind of Scarlet-caſe with a little ſtreamer upon them. Beſides there muſt be five or ſix Cavaliers well mounted ready at the Gate, and ride at a good diſtance before the King, for fear of raiſing duſt; and their office is to keep off the people. Things being thus prepared, the King is ſeen to come out of the Fortreſs ſeated upon an Elephant richly harnaſſed, under a Canopy with Pillars painted and guilded; or elſe on a Throne ſhining of Gold and Azure, upon two beams, covered with Scarlet or purfled Gold, carried by eight choſen and well accoutred men. The King is followed by a body of Omrahs, ſome of which are on horſeback, ſome in a Palekey. Among theſe Omrahs there are many Manſeb-dars, and Mace-Bearers, ſuch as I have before ſpoken of. And though this be not that ſplendid and magnificent Proceſſion, or rather Maſcarade of the Grand Seignior, (I have no properer name for it) nor the warlike order of our Kings, it being altogether of another faſhion, yet for all that there is ſomething great and royal in it.

The other thing I had forgot to acquaint you with, is an Edifice in the City, called the Karvanſarah of the Princeſs; the renowned Begum-Sabeb, eldeſt Daughter of Chah-Jehan, having cauſed it to be built at her charges, and willing to contribute ſomething to the decoration of the Town, as all the Omrahs ſtrove to do to pleaſe Chah-Jehan. This is another great Square, arched like our Palace-Royal, but ſtill with this difference, that one Arch is ſeparate from the other by a wall, and that in the bottom of every Arch there is a little Chamber; and beſides that, above the Arches there is a Gallery which rangeth round about the building, to enter into as many high Chambers, as there are below. This Place is the Rendezvous of all the great Merchants, Perſians, Vsbecks, and other Strangers that ordinarily do there find empty Chambers convenient enough, to ſtay in for ſome time in great ſafety, the Gate being ſhut every night. If there were a ſcore of ſuch Structures in divers parts of Paris, Strangers newly arriving would not be in that trouble, as often they are to find ſafe Lodgings; for there they might be until they had ſeen their Acquaintance, and looked for good Accomodation: beſides that they would ſerve for Magazins of all ſorts of Commodities, and for the Rendezvous of all Merchants Strangers.

Before we leave Dehli, I ſhall add a few lines in reference to this queſtion, which doubtleſs you'l make, viz. Whether in Dehli there be as much People and Gallantry as at Paris? Certainly when I conſider thoſe three or four Cities of Paris that are one above another, all thoſe Chambers and other Rooms full from top to bottom; when I farther conſider that incredible throng and confuſion of Men and Women, of Horſe-men and Paſſengers on foot, of Chariots, Sedans and Coaches, and that there are but few great Piazzas and Gardens in Paris; this City ſeems to me a Nurſery of the World, and I can hardly believe, that there are as many People in Dehli. Yet notwithſtanding when I reflect upon that multitude of Shops on one ſide of Dehli, and on the other, upon the vaſt extent of that City, and that there are never leſs in it then 35000 Cavaliers, not to ſpeak of the Houſes of the Omrahs; that of all theſe Cavaliers, there are very few but have Wives and Children, and a great number of Servants having their Houſes apart as their Maſters; and that all theſe Houſes ſwarm with Women and Children: that in many places of Dehli, though the Streets be broad, and there be but few Chariots and no Coaches, yet at the hours when the heat ſuffers People to come abroad for their buſineſs, there is great confuſion: When (I ſay) I conſider all this on the other hand, I do not well know what to determine about the queſtion, and I imagine, that if there be not altogether ſo much People in Dehli as in Paris, at leaſt there wants not much of it.

Concerning the number of gallant People, it muſt be acknowledged, that there is this difference between thoſe of Paris and Dehli, that of ten Perſons met with upon the Streets of Paris, you ſhall ſee ſeven or eight well cloathed and of ſome faſhion, which no Man will count raſcally or beggerly People; whereas in Debli, for two or three Perſons that are pretty well covered, you ſhall always find ſeven or eight poor and ragged People; the Army which is there drawing after it all that crew of Beggers and Raſcals. Yet this is to be acknowledged for a truth, that in Debli, as well as in Paris, one meets with a very great quantity of Perſons well made, gallant, well mounted, well dreſſed, and well attended: And indeed, to be upon the great Place before the Fortreſs at the hours when all thoſe Omrahs, Rajas, and Manſeb-dars go to the Aſſembly and to the Guard, that hath ſomething, great and ſplendid in it: when you ſhall ſee there every where arrive thoſe Manſeb-dars well accoutred, ſhining with Gold, and well mounted, a couple of Men going before them to make place, and as many behind; when you ſhall alſo ſee many of thoſe great Omrahs and Rajas riding upon proud Elephants, and ſome of them on Horſe-back like the Manſeb-dars, and moſt of them ſitting in their rich Palekys, carried upon the ſhoulders of ſix men, their back leaning againſt ſome thick Cuſhion of purfled Gold, chewing their Betele, to have a good breath and vermilion lips, with a Servant on the ſide carrying a Tooth-pick, and a Porcelain or ſilver Spitting-Veſſel; and two more, fanning him and keeping off the flies and duſt from him with Peacocks-tails; and three or four others marching before to put by the People; to which is to be added part of their Cavalry (I mean the braveſt and beſt mounted of them) following after: When, I ſay, all this is ſeen together marching, as hath been ſaid, with the crowd made there as well as at Paris, it will not be denied to be ſomething great and very gallant.

As to the Country about Debli, it is conſiderable for its fertility; for it beareth Rice, Millet, and three or four other ſorts of Legumes, (which is the ordinary food of the common People) Corn, Sugar, Indigo, and all that in abundance. At two leagues off the City on Agra's ſide, in a place by the Mahumetans called Koja Kotubeddine, there is a very antient Edifice which hath been a Temple of Idols, where are Inſcriptions that muſt alſo be very antient, the Characters of them being ſuch that no body knows what they are, and different from thoſe of all the Languages of the Indies,

On another ſide, at two or three leagues diſtance from the Town, you ſee an Houſe of pleaſure of the Kings, which indeed is a ſtately and Royal Houſe, but yet you muſt not think it approach to Fontain-bleau, or to St. Germain, or to Verſaille. Neither muſt you imagine that in this Campagne of Debli there are any St. Cloux, Chantilly's, Meudons, Liancourts, Vaux, Ruelles, and many ſuch others; or that you ſee there any of thoſe other inferior Houſes of pleaſure belonging to ſimple Gentlemen, Citizens and Merchants. The Maxime, That the Subjects of a Kingdom have no propriety in any thing, hinders all that.

Laſtly, to make you paſs quickly thoſe fifty or ſixty leagues, which are betwixt Debli and Agra, you are not to think, that upon this road you ſhall ſee any ſuch large and rich burroughs as there upon our roads. Set aſide Maturas, where you ſee ſtill an antient and ſtately Temple of Idols, and excepting ſome Karavan-ſarrahs, that are well enough, found on the high-way to ſerve for night-lodgings, I find nothing conſiderable there, but that Royal Alley of Trees planted by the command of Jehan-Guire, and continued by the ſame order for an hundred and fifty leagues, with little Pyramids or Turrets erected every half league, to mark the ways, and with frequent wells to afford drink to Paſſengers, and to water the young Trees.

Of AGRA.

TO paſs to the deſcription of Agra, you have the Idea of it, if you have well taken that of Debli; at leaſt in reſpect of its ſcituation, which is alſo upon the Gemma, and in regard of the Fortreſs, or Royal Houſe, and of moſt of the Buildings. It is true, that Agra hath this advantage over Debli, that being a City where the Kings have already reſided a long while, viz. ſince Akber, who cauſed it to be built, and called it after his name Akber-abad, it is of greater extent then Debli, and hath more of thoſe fine Houſes of the Omrahs and Rajas, and more of the fair Karvanſarrahs, as alſo more of thoſe pretty Houſes of Stone and Brick belonging to particular Perſons; beſides that it hath two famous Tombs, of which I ſhall ſpeak hereafter: But then it hath theſe diſadvantages, that it wants Walls; that having been built altogether by one deſign, it hath not thoſe fair and large Streets of uniform buildings as Debli; and that excepting four or five of thoſe principal Streets of Merchants, which are very long and well enough enough built, all the reſt for the moſt part, is nothing but a number of little Streets, ſtreight without proportion, and nothing but windings and turnings; which cauſes ſtrange confuſions when the Court is there. I ſee no other difference between Agra and Dehli, then that I have been juſt now ſpeaking of; except it be that Agra hath more of a Country Town then Dehli, eſpecially when we look upon it from an higher place: But 'its not ſuch a Country-aſpect as diſgraceth it, but a very agreeable and divertiſing one; for, there being betwixt the Houſes of Omrahs, Rajas and others, ſtore of big green Trees mixt, every one having been curious to plant of them in his Garden and in his Court for ſhade; and beſides, thoſe high Houſes of the Banians, or Heathen Merchants, appearing here and there between thoſe Trees, as Reliques of old Caſtles of Forreſts; all that cauſeth within the Town very pleaſing ſights and perſpectives, eſpecially in a dry and hot Country, where Peoples eyes ſeem to deſire nothing but verdure and ſhade.

Mean time you need not go out of Paris, to find the moſt pleaſing and the moſt gallant ſight in the World. Take onely a walk upon the Pontneuf, attentively beholding in the day-time all things ſurrounding you, together with that incredible and ſtrange confuſion of People: and at night the infinite number of lights in the windows, of thoſe high buildings that are round about you; and the ſame confuſion which continues till after mid-night; the good Citizen, and (which you ſhall not ſee in any part of Aſia) the fair She-Citizen walking without fear of Robbers, and without the inconvenience of dirt: and then the long files of Stars that brave the wind, the rain and darkneſs. Take only, I ſay, ſuch a walk upon that Bridge, obſerving all thoſe things together, and then (upon my word) you may boldly maintain it, that you are upon the ſpot of the faireſt, braveſt and moſt magnificent artificial view of the Earth, unleſs it be ſome part of China or Japan, where I have not been. What will it be then when the Louvre, that work which was once thought would never be ſeen but in deſigu and upon paper, ſhall be finiſht? I have purpoſely added the word Artificial, becauſe ſpeaking of the beſt Perſpectives that are, we muſt always except Conſtantinople, when one is in a Boat in the midſt of that great Channel, over againſt the point of the Seraglio: For there you ſhall find your ſelf altogether ſurprized, as 'twere in the midſt of ſome great and vaſt inchanted Amphitheater; but in this Perſpective the Workmanſhip of Nature is moſt conſiderable, whereas in that of Paris, Art and Dexterity is moſt conſpicuous, which doubtleſs renders it more eminent, foraſmuch as thereby it looks more like the Seat of a great King, the Capital of a great Empire, and is really, without flattering our ſelves, and all thoſe beauties of Dehli, Agra, and Conſtantinople, well conſidered and compared, the faireſt, the richeſt, and the chiefeſt City of the World.

In Agra the Reverend Fathers the Jeſuits have a Church and a Colledge, where in private they teach the Children of ſome twenty five or thirty Chriſtian families, that have (I know not how) gathered and ſettled themſelves there by the charity of thoſe Fathers the Chriſtian Doctrine. It was Ekbar who (in the time of the great power of the Portuguezes in the Indies) called them, and gave them a penſion for their ſubſiſtence, permitting them to build Churches in the capital Cities of Agra and Lahor. And his Son Jehan-Guire favoured them yet more. But Chah-Jehan, Son of Jehan-Guire, and Father of Aureng-Zebe now reigning, took from them their penſion, cauſed their Church at Lahor to be pulled down, and the greateſt part of that in Agra, overthrowing alſo the Steeple of the Church, wherein that Bell was that could be heard over all the Town.

Theſe Fathers the Jeſuits entertained great hopes of the progreſs of Chriſtianity in the time of King Jehan-Guire, becauſe of his contempt of the Mahumetan Law, and the eſteem he profeſſed to the Chriſtian, even giving way to two of his Nephews to embrace the Chriſtian Religion, and to a certain Mirza-Zul-Karmin (that had been bred in the Seraglio, and was circumciſed) to turn Chriſtian too, under the pretence that he born of Chriſtian Parents, and Son of the Wife of a rich Armenian, which Jehan-Guire had cauſed to be brought to him into the Seraglio.

The ſame Fathers ſay, that this King, to begin in good earneſt to countenance the Chriſtian Religion, deſigned to put the whole Court into the habit of the Franqui, and that after he had prepared all things for it, and even dreſſed himſelf in that faſhion, he called to him one of the chief Omrahs, asking his opinion of this dreſs; but that this Omrah altogether ſurprized at it, having anſwered him very ſeriouſly, that it was a very dangerous thing, he thought himſelf obliged to change his mind, and turned all into raillery.

Theſe

Theſe Fathers affirm further, that he being upon the point of death, comm anded that they ſhould be called to make him a Chriſtian, but that then they were not made acquainted with it. Many ſay, that this is not ſo, and that he died as he had lived, without any Religion, and in the deſign he had, as well as his Father Ekbar, to ſet himſelf up for a Prophet, and to become the Head of a particular Religion of his own compoſure. However it be, there is another thing I have learned of a Mahumetan, that was Son to an Officer of Jehan-Guire, namely, that this King being one day in a debauche, called to him a certain Religious man of Florence, whom he called Father Atech, as being a little fiery man; and after he had commanded him to ſay all he could againſt the Law of Mahumet, and for the Law of Chriſt, in the preſence of many knowing Mullahs, he would have made this terrible tryal of both thoſe Laws, viz That a great Pit ſhould be made, and a good Fire in it, and that Father Atech with the Goſpel under his arm, and one of thoſe Mullahs with the Alcoran under his, ſhould caſt themſelves both together into that fire, and that he would embrace the Law of him that ſhould not burn. But that the ſad countenance of the Mullahs, altogether aſtoniſht, and the compaſſion he had of the Florentine Father, who accepted the condition, diverted him from it. Whatever the truth be of this ſtory, 'tis certain, that whilſt Jehan-Guire lived, theſe Fathers were reſpected and honoured in this Court, and that they conceived great hopes of the advancement of Chriſtianity in thoſe parts; but that ſince that time they have had no great cauſe to hope much of it, except perhaps what they received by that familiarity, which our Father Buzé had with Dara. But I ſhall ſay no more of this matter of our Miſſions, intending to give you a particular long Letter of it another time.

Certainly I cannot but exceedingly approve of Miſſions, and the good Miſſionaries, eſpecially our Capucins and Jeſuits, and ſome others of our neighborhood, becauſe they give meek inſtructions, without that indiſcreet zeal and tranſport which is expreſſed by ſome others, and they charitably entertain the Chriſtians of the Country in their Religion, whether they be Catholicks, or Greeks, or Armenians, Neſtorians, Jacobites, or others; and foraſmuch alſo as they are the refuge and comfort of poor Strangers and Travellers, and by their knowledge, ſober and exemplary life, they confound the ignorance and licentious life of the Infidels: which ſome others do not always practiſe; who therefore would do better to keep themſelves cloſe in their Convents, and not come hither and give us a maſquarade of our Religion, and by doing ſo, and by their ignorance, jealouſie, looſneſs, and the abuſe of their authority and character, become a ſtumbling-block to the Law of Jeſus Chriſt. But a particular thing infers no general; and notwithſtanding thoſe miſcarriages, I very much applaud the Miſſions, and pious and learned Miſſionaries, they are abſolutely neceſſary: it is the honour and prerogative of Chriſtianity, to have every where thorow the World Subſtitutes of the Apoſtles. But after all that I have ſeen, and after all the converſe and diſcourſe I have ſo often had with thoſe obſtinate Infidels, I may take leave to ſay, that I almoſt deſpair to ſee ſtruck ſuch great ſtroaks, as the Apoſtles did, who converted two or three thouſand People in one Sermon: finding by experience, and knowing very well upon other accounts, after I have travelled through all the places of the Miſſions in the Eaſt, that all the Miſſionaries together, not only in the Indies, but in all the Mahumetan Dominions, do indeed by their Inſtructions, accompanied with Charity and Alms, make ſome progreſs among the Gentils, but do in ten years not make one Chriſtian of a Mahumetan. Truly theſe Infidels have high thoughts of our Religion, they never ſpeak of Jeſus Chriſt but with great veneration; and they never pronounce the word Ayſa, that is to ſay, Jeſus, without adding that of Azeret, which is Majeſty. They even agree with us, that he was miraculouſly born of a Virgin-Mother, and that he is the Kelum-Allah, and the Roub-Allah, the Word of God, and the Spirit of God: but 'tis not to be hoped, that they will approve the reſt of our Religion, ſo as to abandon theirs in which they were born, and their falſe Prophet, to embrace ours, what reaſons ſoever be given them. Our Chriſtians of Europe ought to wiſh, and even to employ their Power, Care and Charity, that Miſſionaries may be ſent over all, ſuch as may be no charge to the People of the Country, and whom want may not induce to do mean things, as well for the reaſons already alledged, as for this cauſe, that they may be ever ready to lay hold on all occaſions, always to bear witneſs to the Truth, and to labour in the Vineyard when it ſhall pleaſe God to give them an overture. But for the reſt we ought to be diſabuſed, and not to ſuffer our ſelves to be ſo eaſily perſwaded of ſo many ſtories, and not to believe the thing to be ſo facil as ſome make it. The Sect is too much libertine, and too attractive to quit it; it is a pernitious Law, which hath been introduced by Arms and Force, and ſtill gets ground by thoſe means: and I hardly know any other way capable to ſhake and root it out. If therefore there intervene not ſome of thoſe grand and extraordinary ſtroaks of Heaven, and God by his powerful and particular Providence interpoſe not, (as we ought always to hope, according to the great appearance there have been in China, in Japan, and in the Perſon of King Jehan-Guire) conſidering the irreverence of the Chriſtians in their Churches, ſo diſſonant from our belief of the particular preſence of God upon our Altars, and ſo different from that deep and aſtoniſhing reſpect which thoſe Infidels bear to their Moſquees, where they would not ſo much as turn their heads, or ſpeak the leaſt word to one another; there will alwayes be great obſtacles to their Converſion.

In Agra the Hollanders have alſo an Houſe, where ordinarily they keep four or five perſons. Formerly they had a good trade there in ſelling Scarlet, great and ſmall Looking-glaſſes, plain Lace, and Gold and Silver Lace, and ſome ſmall Wares; and in buying Indigo, which is gathered round about Agra, but eſpecially at Bianes, but two leagues diſtant from it, and whither they go once a year, having an houſe there for that purpoſe; as alſo in buying thoſe cloths of Jelapour and Laknau, at ſeven or eight days journey from Agra, where they alſo keep an houſe, and whither they ſend ſome Factors once a year. But now they ſay, that there is little profit for them in that trade, whether it be that the Armenians drive the ſame traffick, or that 'tis ſo far from Agra to Suratte, or that commonly ſome miſchief or other befalls their Caravanes, which muſt paſs by Amadavad over all the Countries of the Rajas to avoid the ill ways, and the mountains that are on the ſide of Ganleor and Brampour, which is the nearer way. Yet notwithſtanding theſe diſcouragements, they will never (I believe) abandon this Factory, as the Engliſh have done theirs in that place, if it were for nothing elſe but their Spices, which there they ſell very well, and for having ſome of their People near the Court taking care of their concerns: ſince it cannot be otherwiſe, but that frequently ſome trouble will befal their Factories by the tyranny of the Governors and other Officers, now from the ſide of Bengala and Patna, another time from Suratte and Amadavad.

We will conclude this part with thoſe two wonderful Mauſolees, or Tombs, that give to Agra ſo much advantage over Dehli. It was Jehan-Guire that cauſed the firſt to be erected to honour the memory of his Father Eckbar; and Chah-Jehan raiſed the other in honour of Taje-Mehale his Wife, that extraordinary and celebrated Beauty of the Indies, whom he loved ſo paſſionately, that 'tis ſaid, he never enjoyed any other Woman but her whilſt ſhe lived, and that when ſhe died, he was in danger to die himſelf.

I ſhall not ſtay to diſcourſe of the Monument of Eckbar, becauſe whatever beauty is there, is found in a far higher degree in that of Taje-Mehale, which I am now going to deſcribe unto you. You may therefore repreſent to your ſelf, that at the going out of the City of Agra Eaſt-ward, you enter into a long and broad paved ſtreet, which riſeth gently, and hath on one ſide an high and long wall, making the ſide of a ſquare Garden that is much bigger then our Palace-Royal; and on the other ſide a row of new houſes arched, ſuch as are thoſe of the principal Streets of Dehli above ſpoken of. Having gone the length of half the Wall, you ſhall find on the right hand of the ſide of the Houſes a great Gate well made, by which one enters into a Carvan-ſerah, and over againſt it on the walls ſide, a ſtately Gate of a great ſquare Pavilion, by which you enter into the Garden between two Conſervatories built up with Freeſtone. This Pavilion is longer then 'tis large, built of a Stone like red Marble, but not ſo hard. The Frontiſpiece ſeems to me very magnificent after their way, and as high as that of St. Louys in the Street of St. Antony. It is true, you do not there ſee Columns, Archi-traves, and Corniſhes cut out after the proportion of thoſe Five Orders of Architecture ſo religiouſly obſerved in our Palaces: it is a different and particular kind of ſtructure, but ſuch an one as wants no agreeableneſs even in the unuſualneſs of its contrivance, and which in my opinion, would very well deſerve a place in our Books of Architecture. 'Tis almoſt nothing but Arches upon Arches, and Galleries over Galleries, diſpoſed and ordered an hundred different ways; and yet all appears ſtately, well enough contrived and managed. There is nothing that offends the eye; on the contrary all is pleaſing, and a man cannot be weary in beholding it. The laſt time I ſaw it, I was there with one of our French Merchants, who alſo could not behold it enough. I durſt not tell him my thoughts of it, apprehending I might have ſpoiled my guſt, and framed it according to that of Indoſtan: but he being lately come from France, I was very glad to hear him ſay, he had never ſeen any thing ſo auguſt and bold in Europe.

After you are ſomewhat entred into the Pavilion to paſs into the Garden, you find your ſelf under an high Vault made like a Cap, which hath Galleries above round about and below, on the right and left ſide two Divans or Cauſeys, made up of earth of eight or ten foot high. Oppoſite to the Gate there is a great Arch quite open, by which you enter into an Alley, which cuts almoſt the whole Garden into two equal parts. This Alley is by way of terraſſe ſo large, as that ſix Coaches can paſs on it abreſt, paved with great ſquares of hard Stone, raiſed ſome eight foot high above the Garden-plots, and divided in the middle by a Channel walled up with Free-ſtone, having jets of water at certain diſtances. After you have gone twenty five or thirty paces upon this Alley, turning your eye to behold the Entry, you ſee the other face of the Pavilion, which though it be not comparable to that which looks to the Street, yet wants not its ſtatelineſs, being high and of a ſtructure approaching the other. And on both ſides of the Pavilion, along the wall of the Garden, you ſee a long and profound gallery by way of terraſſe, ſupported by many low columns near one another. And in this Gallery 'tis, that during the ſeaſon of the rains, the Poor are permitted to enter, who come there thrice a week, receiving Alms from a foundation made there by Chah-Jehan for ever.

Advancing further in this Alley, you diſcover at a diſtance before you a great Dome, where is the Sepulchre, and below on the right and left hand you ſee divers Alleys of a Garden ſet with Trees, and ſeveral Parterres covered with Flowers. At the end of this Alley, beſides the Dome before you, you diſcover on the right and left two great Pavilions, built of the ſame Stone, and conſequently looking all red as the firſt. Theſe are great and ſpacious ſquare Edifices, made by way of Terraſſe, opening by three Arches, and having at the bottom the wall of the Garden, ſo that you march under them as if they were high and large Galleries.

I ſhall not ſtay to deſcribe unto you the Ornaments within theſe Pavilions, becauſe in reſpect of their Walls, Ground-plot, and Pavement, they are not much unlike the Dome, which I am going to delineate unto you, after I ſhall have obſerved, that between the end of the Alley (which we have ſpoken of) and the Dome, there is a pretty large ſpace of a floor, which I call a Water-Parterre, becauſe that the diverſly cut and figured Stones you march upon, are there inſtead of the Box-Wood of our Parterres. And 'tis from the midſt of this Parterre, that you may conveniently ſee a part of this Edifice, where the Sepulchre is, which remains now to be conſidered.

It is a great and vaſt Dome of white Marble, which is near the height of that of our Val de Grace in Paris, ſurrounded with many Turrets of the ſame matter with Stairs in them. Four great Arches ſupport the whole Fabrick, three of which are viſible, the fourth is cloſed in by the wall of an Hall, accompanied with a Gallery, where certain Mullahs (entertained for that end) do continually read the Alcoran, with a profound reſpect to the honour of Taje-Meballe. The mould of the Arches is inriched with Tables of white Marble, wherein are ſeen engraven large Arabian Characters of black Marble, which is very agreeable to behold. The interior or concave part of this Dome, and the whole wall from top to bottom is covered with white Marble; and there is no place which is not wrought with Art, and hath not its peculiar Beauty. You ſee ſtore of Agat, and ſuch ſorts of Stones, as are employed to inrich the Chappel of the great Duke of Florence; much Jaſper, and many other kinds of rare and pretious Stones, ſet a hundred ſeveral ways, mixt and enchaſed in the Marble that covers the body of the Wall. The Quarries of white and black Marble, that make the floor, are likewiſe ſet out with all imaginable beauty and ſtatelineſs.

Under this Dome is a little Chamber incloſing the Sepulchre, which I have not ſeen within, it not being opened but once a year, and that with great Ceremony, not ſuffering any Chriſtian to enter, for fear (as they ſay) of Prophaning the Sanctity of the place: but really by what I could learn, becauſe it hath nothing rich or magnificent in it.

There remains nothing elſe, then to give you occaſion to take notice of an Alley in the faſhion of a Terraſſe, twenty or twenty five ordinary paces large, and as many or more high; which is betwixt the Dome and the extremity of the Garden, whence you ſee below you, at the foot of it, the River of Gemna running along, a great campagne of Gardens, a part of the Town of Agra, the Fortreſs, and all thoſe fair Houſes of the Omrahs that are built along the water. There remains no more, I ſay, then to cauſe you to obſerve this Terraſſe, which taketh up almoſt the whole length of one ſide of the Garden, and then to desire you to judge, whether I had reason to say, that the Mausoleum, or Tomb of Taje-Mehale, is something worthy to be admired. For my part, I do not yet well know, whether I am not somewhat infected still with Indianisme; but I must needs say, that I believe it ought to be reckoned amongst the wonders of the World, rather then those unshapen masses of the Ægyptian Pyramids, which I was weary to see after I had seen them twice, and in which I find nothing without, but pieces of great Stones ranged in the form of steps one upon another, and within nothing but very little Art and Invention.

A Letter written to Mr. Chapelain, sent from Chiras in Persia, Octob. 4. 1667. concerning the Superstitions, strange Fashions, and Doctrin of the Native Indies, or Gentiles of Indostan. Whence may be seen, that there are no Opinions so ridiculous, and so extravagant, which the spirit of Man is not capable of.

SIR,

IF I should live whole ages, I know not whether I could ever forget those two Eclipses of the Sun, of which I saw one in France in the Year 1654. and the other in the Indies at Dehli in the Year 1666. if I remember aright. The former seemed very remarkable to me upon the account of the childish credulity of our common people; and of that pannick terror which had so seized the heart, that some bought Drugs against the Eclipse; others kept themselves close in the dark in their Caves, and their well-closed Chambers; others cast themselves in great multitudes into the Churches: Those apprehending some malign and dangerous influence, and these believing that they were come to their last day, and that the Eclipse would shake the foundations of Nature, and overturn it, notwithstanding any thing that the Gassendi's, Robervals, and many other famous Philosophers could say or write against this perswasion, when they demonstrate, that this Eclipse was of the same nature with so many others that had preceded without any mischief, and that it was a known accident, foreseen and ordinary, which had nothing peculiar, but what some cheating Astrological Mountebanks might have devised.

That which I saw at Dehli seemed also very considerable to me, by reason of the ridiculous Errors and Superstitions of the Indians. At the time when the said Eclipse was to appear, I went up to the Terrasse of my house, which was scituate on the side of the River Gemna, thence I saw both sides of the River, for near a league in length, covered with the Heathen Idolaters, that stood in the water up to their girdle, demurely looking up into the sky, to the end that they might plunge and wash themselves at the moment when the Eclipse should begin. The little Boys and Girls were stark naked; the men were almost so too, but that they had a kind of scarf round about their thighs to cover their nakedness: and the married Women, together with the young Maids that were not above six or seven years old, were covered with a single cloth. Persons of condition, as the Rajas, or soveraign Princes of those Gentils, (who commonly are about the Person, and in the pay of the King) and the Serrahs or Exchangers, the Banckers, Jewellers, and other great Merchants, were most of them gone to the other side of the water with all their family, and had there put up their Tents, and fastned in the River certain Kanates, which are a kind of skreens, to perform their Ceremonies, and conveniently to wash themselves with there Wives, so as not to be seen by others. These Idolaters no sooner saw the Eclipse begin, but they raised a great cry, and all at once plunged themselves wholly into the water, I know not how many times one after another; standgin ing up afterwards in the water, and lifting up their eyes and hands to Heaven, muttering and praying with great devotion, and from time to time taking water with their hands, which they threw up towards the Sun, bowing down their heads very low, moving and turning their arms and hands ſometimes one way, ſometimes another, and thus continuing their plunging, praying and apiſhneſs unto the end of this Eclipſe; at which time every one retired, caſting ſome pieces of Silver a good way off into the water, and giving alms to the Brachmans or men of the Law, who failed not to be at that Ceremony. I took notice, that at their going out of the water, they all took new cloathes that were laid ready for them folded up on the ſand, and that many of the devouter ſort left there their old garments for the Brachmans. And in this manner did I ſee from my Terraſſe this great ſolemnity of the Eclipſe; which was celebrated after the ſame manner in the River Indus and Ganges, and in all the other Rivers, as alſo in the Receivers of water in the Indies, but eſpecially in that of the Tanaiſer, where were met together above an hundred and fifty thouſand perſons, come together from all parts of the Indies, becauſe the water of it is on that day reputed more holy and efficacious than on any other.

The great Mogol, though he be a Mahumetan, ſuffers theſe Heathens to go on in theſe old ſuperſtitions, becauſe he will not, or dareth not croſs them in the exerciſe of their Religion, and beſides it is not performed without preſenting him, by the hands of the Brachmans as Commiſſioners, a Leeque or an hundred thouſand Roupies, which are worth above fifty thouſand Crowns, for which he returns nothing but a few Veſts and an old Elephant. Now you ſhall ſee thoſe ſolid reaſons (forſooth) which they alledge for this Feaſt, and for the Ceremonies by them obſerved in it.

We have (ſay they) our four Beths, that is, Books of the Law, Sacred and Divine Writings, given us by God through the hands of Brahma. Theſe Books do teach us that a certain Deuta, which is a kind of corporeal Divinity, very malign and miſchievous, very black and very filthy (theſe are their own expreſſions in their language) ſeizeth on the Sun, blackens it as 'twere with ink, and ſo darkens it: That this Sun, which is alſo a Deuta, but of the beſt and the moſt beneficent and perfect Divinities, is at that time in very great pains and terrible anguiſh, to ſee himſelf thus ſeized on and miſuſed by that black villain: That 'tis a general duty to endeavour to deliver him from this miſerable condition; which cannot be effected but by the force of prayers, waſhings and alms, and that theſe actions are of a very extraordinary merit to ſuch a degree, that an alms given at that time is worth an hundred given at another. Who is there, ſay they, that would not give cent pour cent?

Sir, theſe are the two Eclipſes I ſpoke of which I ſhall hardly ever forget, and which miniſter occaſion to me to proceed to ſome other extravagancies of theſe Gentils, whence you may draw what conſequences you ſhall pleaſe.

In the Town of Jagannat, which is ſeated upon the Gulf of Bengala, and where is that famous Temple of the Idol of the ſame name, there is yearly celebrated a certain Feaſt, which laſts eight or nine days, if I remember well. There is found an incredible number of people, as there was antiently in the Temple of Hammon, and as 'tis at this day at Mecca. This number, 'tis ſaid, amounts ſometimes to above an hundred and fifty thouſand perſons. They make a ſtately Engin of wood, as I have ſeen of them in many other places of the Indies, with I know not how many extravagant figures, almoſt ſuch as we are wont to paint Monſters with two heads or bodies, half man and half beaſt, or gigantick and terrible heads, Satyrs, Apes or Devils; which Engin is put upon fourteen or ſixteen wheels, ſuch as the Carriages of Cannons may be, which fifty or ſixty perſons more or leſs do draw, or thruſt forwards; Upon the middle of it appears moſt conſpicuouſly the Idol Jagannat, richly dreſſed and adorned, which is thus tranſported from one place to another.

The firſt day that they ſhew this Idol with Ceremony in the Temple, the crowd is uſually ſo great to ſee it, that there is not a year, but ſome of thoſe poor Pilgrims, that come afar off, tired, and haraſſed, are ſuffocated there; all the people bleſſing them for having been ſo happy, as to die on ſo holy an occaſion. And when this Helliſh Triumphant Chariot marcheth, there are found (which is no Fable) perſons ſo fooliſhly credulous and ſuperſtitious as to throw themſelves with their bellies under thoſe large and heavy wheels, which bruiſe them to death, having ſuffered themſelves to be perſwaded, that there is no action ſo heroick nor ſo meritorious as that, and that Jagennat will at the ſame time receive them as his Children, and cauſe them to be born again in a ſtate of felicity and glory.

The

The Brachmans for their particular advantage and intereſt, I mean that of Alms and Reſpect given to them as Perſons devoted to theſe Myſteries, do entertain the People in theſe errors and ſuperſtitions, and they proceed even to ſuch infamous cheats and Villanies, that I could never have believed them, if I had not fully informed my ſelf of it. Theſe Impoſtors take a young Maid, of the faireſt they can meet with, to be the Bride (as they ſpeak, and bear the beſotted people in hand) of Jagannat, and they leave her all night in the Temple (whither they have carried her) with the Idol, making her believe that Jagannat himſelf will come and embrace her, and appointing her to ask him, Whether it will be a fruitful Year, what kind of Proceſſions, Feaſts, Prayers and Alms he demands to be made for it. In the mean time one of theſe luſtful Prieſts enters at night by a little back-door into the Temple, deflowreth this young Maid, and maketh her believe any thing he pleaſeth; and the next day, being tranſported from this Temple into another with the ſame magnificence, ſhe was carried before upon the Chariot of Triumph on the ſide of Jagannat her Bridegroom; theſe Brachmans make her ſay aloud before all the people, whatſoever ſhe had been taught of theſe Cheats, as if ſhe had learnt it from the very mouth of Jagannat. But let us go on (if you pleaſe) to follies of another kind.

Before this Chariot, and often in the very Temples of the Idols, on Feſtival days, you ſhall ſee publick Women dance, making an hundred indecent and extravagant poſtures; and yet the Brachmans find a way to accord all that with their Religion. I have ſeen ſome Women, that are not only famous for their beauty, but alſo for great reſervedneſs, which refuſed very conſiderable preſents of certain Mahumetans and Chriſtians, and even of Heathen ſtrangers, as if they were only dedicated to the Miniſtery and the Miniſters of Deura, or the Idol Temple to the Brachmans and theſe Fakires, which are there ſeated moſt of them upon aſhes round about, altogether naked with their fearful hair of Megera, and in the poſture I ſhall ſpeak of hereafter. But let us ſtay no longer upon theſe follies.

There are ſo many Writers of voyages relating the cuſtom of the Indian Women, burning themſelves with their Husbands, that I think ſomething will at laſt be believed of it. For my part, I am going to take my turn alſo, and to write to you of it like others; yet in the mean time obſerving withall, that 'tis not all true what is ſaid of it, and that now they do not burn themſelves in ſo great a number as formerly, becauſe the Mahumetans, that bear ſway at preſent in Indoſtan, are enemies to that barbarous cuſtom, and hinder it as much as they can; not oppoſing it abſolutely, becauſe they are willing to leave their idolatrous people, who are far more numerous then themſelves, in the free exerciſe of their Religion, for fear of ſome revolt: but by indirectly preventing it, in that they oblige the Women, ready to burn themſelves, to go and ask permiſſion of the reſpective Governors, who ſend for them, make converſe with their own Women, remonſtrate things to them with annexed promiſes, and never give them this permiſſion, but after they have tryed all theſe gentle ways, and till they find them fixt in their ſottiſh reſolution. Which yet hinders not but that many burn themſelves, eſpecially of thoſe that live upon the Lands of the Rajas, where no Mahumetan Governors are. I ſhall not ſtay to give you the hiſtory of all thoſe, which I have ſeen burn themſelves; that would too be long, and too tedious: I ſhall only relate unto you two or three Examples of them, whence you may judge of the reſt; but firſt you ſhall have the relation of a Woman, which I was ſent unto to divert her from ſuch a miſchievous deſign.

A friend of mine, called Bendidas, the firſt Clerk of my Agah Danechmend-kan, died of an Hectick, having been treated by me above two years. His Wife immediately reſolv'd to burn her ſelf, together with the Body of her Husband; but her Parents, by the order of my Agah, whoſe ſervants they were, endeavour'd to diſſwade her from it, repreſenting to her, that though it were indeed a generous and laudable reſolution, and would be a great honour and happineſs in the Family, yet ſhe ought to conſider, that her Children were yet little, that ſhe could not abandon them, and that ſhe was to prefer their good, and the affection ſhe had for them, to the love ſhe had for her Huſband, and to her own ſatisfaction. Theſe Parents not having been able to prevail with her by all theſe repreſentments, bethought themſelves to deſire me to go to her, as ſent from my Agah, and as an antient friend to the Family. I went and when I came, I did, as ſoon as I came in, ſee a cluſter of ſeven or eight fearful old Women, together with four or 5 infatuated and brain-ſick Brachmans, who all cried by turns, beating their hands about the dead Corps, and the Widow in her looſe hair, looking pale, yet with dry and ſparkling Eyes, ſitting and crying alſo aloud, and beating her Hands, as the reſt with a kind of Cadency, upon the Feet of her Husband. The out-cry and noiſe being ended, I approach'd to this Company of people, and addreſſing my ſelf to the Widow, I gave her ſoftly to underſtand, that I came from Danechmend-kan; that he had appointed a monthly Penſion of two Crowns, to each of her two Sons, but on condition that ſhe ſhould not burn her ſelf, to the end, that ſhe might take care of them, and breed them up as was fit; that elſe we knew ways enow to hinder her from burning her ſelf, if ſhe were obſtinate for it, and to make thoſe repent, that ſhould allure and incite her to ſuch an unreaſonable reſolution, eſpecially ſince none of her Kindred was ſatisfied with it, and that ſhe would not be counted infamous, as thoſe are that want the reſolution to burn themſelves after the death of their Husbands, when they have no Children. I often inculcated to her all theſe conſiderations, without hearing a word of anſwer from her; though at laſt ſhe ſaid, looking fiercely upon me: Well, if I am hindred to burn my ſelf, I am reſolved to break my head againſt the Wall. Then ſaid I by my ſelf; What Diabolical fury doth poſſeſs thee? And to her I anſwer'd, full of indignation: Then take thy Children, thou unhappy Creature, and cut their Throats, and burn them with thee; for they will be ſtarved, I being now ready to return to Danechmend-kan, and to annull their Penſion. Theſe words being ſpoken by me, with the loudeſt and moſt menacing tone I could, made impreſſion upon the ſpirit of this Woman, and upon that of all the aſſiſtants: She preſently, without any reparty, let her Head ſink down upon her knees, and moſt of the old Women and Brachmans went away. Whereupon her Relations, that were come with me, entred and parlied with her. And I, thinking I had done enough, took Horſe, and came away to my Lodgings, ſuppoſing they would do the reſt well enough. In ſhort, about evening, when I was going to give an account to my Agah of what I had done, I met with her Parents, who thank'd me, and ſaid, that the dead Corps had been burnt, and the Widow perſwaded to remain alive.

Concerning the Women that have actually burn'd themſelves, I have ſo often been preſent at ſuch dreadful ſpectacles, that at length I could endure no more to ſee it, and I retain ſtill ſome horrour when I think on't. Yet I ſhall repreſent to you ſome of them, but pretend not to expreſs to the life, with what courage and reſolution theſe poor Women atchieved ſuch a direful Tragedy; for there is nothing but the Eye it ſelf that can exhibit a right idea thereof.

When I was paſſing from Amadevad to Agra, over the Lands of the Rajas, that are in thoſe parts, there came news to us in a Burrough, where the Caravane reſted under the ſhade (ſtaying for the cool of the evening, to march on in their journey) that a certain Woman was then upon the point of burning her ſelf with the Body of her Huſband. I preſently roſe and ran to the place where it was to be done, which was a great Pit, with a Pile of wood raiſed in it, whereon I ſaw laid a dead Corps, and a Woman, which at a diſtance ſeem'd to me pretty fair, ſitting near it on the ſame Pile; beſides four or five Brachmans, putting the Fire to it from all ſides; five Women of a middle age, and well enough dreſſed, holding one another by the Hand, and dancing about the Pit, and a great Crowd of People, Men and Women, looking on. The Pile of Wood was preſently all on fire, becauſe ſtore of Oyl and Butter had been thrown upon it, and I ſaw at the ſame time through the flames, that the Fire took hold of the Cloaths of the Woman, that were imbued with well-ſented Oyls mingled with Powder of Santal and Saffron. All this I ſaw, but obſerved not, that the Woman was at all diſturbed; yea, it was ſaid, that ſhe had been heard to pronounce with great force theſe two words, Five, Two, to ſignifie, according to the Opinion of thoſe that hold the Souls Tranſmigration, that this was the 5*th*. time ſhe had burnt her ſelf with the ſame Husband, and that there remain'd but two times for perfection; as if ſhe had at that time this Remembrance, or ſome Prophetical Spirit. But here ended not this Infernal Tragedy: I thought it was only by way of ceremony, that theſe five Women ſung and danced about the Pit; but I was altogether ſurpriſed, when I ſaw, that the flame having taken hold of the cloaths of one of them, ſhe caſt her ſelf with her Head foremoſt into the Pit, and that, after her, another, being overcome by the flame and ſmoak did the like: And my aſtoniſhment redoubled afterwards, when I ſaw, that the remaining three took one another again by the Hand, continued their dance without any apparent fear, and that at length they precipitated themſelves, one after another into the fire, as their companions had done. It troubled me ſufficiently, that I knew not what that meant; but I learnt ſhortly after, that theſe had been five Slaves, who, having ſeen their Miſtreſs extreamly afflicted at the ſickneſs of her Husband, and heard her promiſe him, that ſhe would not ſurvive him, but burn her ſelf with him, were ſo touch'd with compaſſion and tenderneſs towards this their Miſtreſs, that they engaged themſelves in a promiſe to follow her in her reſolution, and to burn themſelves with her. Many perſons, whom I then conſulted about this cuſtome of Women burning themſelves with the Bodies of their Husbands, would perſwade me, that what they did was from an exceſs of affection they had for them: But I underſtood afterwards, that it was only an effect of Opinion, prepoſſeſſion and cuſtome; and that the Mothers, from their youth beſotted with this ſuperſtition, as of a moſt vertuous and moſt laudable action, ſuch as was unavoidable to a Woman of honour, did alſo infatuate the ſpirit of their Daughters from their very infancy: Although, at the bottom, it was nothing elſe but an Art of the Men, the more to enſlave their Wives, thereby to make them have the more care of their health, and to prevent poiſoning of them.

But let us proceed to another Tragedy, which I ſhall rather repreſent to you than many others, at which I have been preſent, becauſe it hath ſomething uncommon in it. 'Tis true, I was not there my ſelf; but you may do as I, who do not ſtand out againſt crediting theſe things, becauſe I have ſeen ſo many of them which ſeem'd incredible to me. This action is grown ſo famous in the Indies, that no body doubts of it, and it may be, that even your ſelf have already heard of it in Europe.

'Tis of a Woman, that was engaged in ſome Love-intrigues with a young Mahumetan her Neighbour, that was a Tailor, and could play finely upon the Tabor. This Woman in the hopes ſhe had of marrying this young man, poiſon'd her Husband, and preſently came away to tell her Tailor, that it was time to be gone together as they had projected, or elſe that ſhe ſhould be obliged to burn her ſelf. The young Man fearing, leſt he might be entangled in a miſchievous buſineſs, flatly refuſed her. The Woman, not at all ſurprized at it, went to her Relations, and advertiſed them of the ſudden death of her Husband, and openly proteſted that ſhe would not ſurvive him, but burn her ſelf with him. Her Kindred well ſatisfied with ſo generous a reſolution, and the great honour ſhe did to the whole Family, preſently had a Pit made, and filled with Wood, expoſing the Corps upon it, and kindling the Fire. All being prepar'd, the Woman goes to embrace and bid farewell to all her Kindred that were there about the Pit, among whom was alſo the Tailor, who had been invited to play upon the Tabor that day, with many others of that ſort of Men, according to the cuſtome of the Country. This fury of a Woman being alſo come to this young Man, made as if ſhe would bid him farewell with the reſt; but in ſtead of gently embracing him, ſhe taketh him with all her force about his Collar, pulls him to the Pit, and tumbleth him together with her ſelf into the Ditch, where they both were ſoon diſpatch't.

She which I ſaw burn her ſelf, when I parted from Suratte to travel into Perſia, in the preſence of Monſieur Chardin and Paris, and of many Engliſh and Dutch, was of a middle age and not unhandſome. To repreſent unto you the undaunted chearfulneſs, that appear'd in her countenance, the reſolution with which ſhe marched, waſh'd her ſelf, ſpoke to the people; the confidence with which ſhe look'd upon us, view'd her little Cabin, made up of very dry Millet-ſtraw and ſmall Wood, went into this Cabin, and ſate down upon the Pile, and took her Husband's Head into her Lap, and a Torch into her own Hand, and kindled the Cabin, whilſt I know not how many Brachmans were buſie in kindling the fire round about: To repreſent unto you, I ſay, all this, as it ought, is not poſſible for me; I can at preſent ſcarce believe it my ſelf, though it be but a few days ſince I ſaw it.

'Tis true, that I have ſeen ſome of them, which at the ſight of the Pile and Fire, appear'd to have ſome apprehenſion, and that perhaps would have gone back, but 'tis often too late: Thoſe Demons, the Brachmans, that are there with their great Sticks, aſtoniſh them, and hearten them up, or even thruſt them in; as I have ſeen it done to a young Woman that retreated five or ſix paces from the Pile, and to another that was much diſturbed when ſhe ſaw the Fire take hold of her Cloaths, theſe Executioners thurſting her in with their long Poles. Yet I have often ſeen one, that is ſtill a handſome Woman, and had ſaved her ſelf out of their Hands, falling into the Hands of the Gadous, that ſometimes meet there in great numbers, when they know that 'tis ſome fair and young Woman that is to be burnt, and that hath no great Kindred, nor much Company with her: For the Women that are afraid of the Pile, and fly away from it, know-

knowing that they cannot be received again amongſt the Gentiles, nor live with them, becauſe they repute them infamous, after they have committed ſuch a fault, and brought ſuch a diſgrace upon their Religion, ſuch Women, I ſay, are ordinarily the prey of this kind of Men, who are alſo counted infamous in the Indies, and that have nothing to looſe. A Mogolian durſt not ſave, nor receive any, for fear of bringing himſelf into great trouble. Some Portugueſes living in Sea-ports, where they were ſtrongeſt, have ſometimes carried away ſome of them. For my part, I have often been ſo enraged againſt thoſe Brahmans, that if I durſt, I had ſtrangled them. I remember, among others, that at Labor, I ſaw a very handſome and a very young Woman burn'd: I believe ſhe was not above twelve years of age. This poor unhappy Creature appear'd rather dead then alive, when ſhe came near the Pile; ſhe ſhook, and wept bitterly: Mean time three or four of theſe Executioners, the Brahmans, together with an old Hag, that held her under the Arm, thruſt her on, and made her ſit down upon the Wood, and leaſt ſhe ſhould run away, they tied her Legs and Hands, and ſo burn'd her alive. I had enough to do to contain my ſelf for indignation; but I was forced to content my ſelf with deteſting this horrid Religion, and to ſay by my ſelf, what the Poet once ſaid of ſuch another, upon the occaſion, of Iphigenia, whom her own Father Agamemnon ſacrificed to Diana, for the intereſt of the Grecians, amongſt whom he was one of the principal Leaders.

——Tantum Religio potuit ſuadere malorum!

Theſe are certainly very barbarous and very cruel Cuſtomes, but that which the Brahmans do in ſome other places of the Indies is yet more ſo: For inſtead of burning thoſe Women that will dye upon the death of their Husbands, they bury them in the ground alive up to the very Throat, and then two or three of them fall at once upon them, and wring their Neck round, and ſo choak them, covering them quickly with ſome earth, and then marching over their Heads. But let us paſs to ſome other Cuſtomes of thoſe Countries.

Moſt of the Gentiles burn their dead; but ſome there are, that do no more than with ſome Straw broil them on a Rivers ſide, caſting them thereupon from the height of a ſteep Bank into the Water: Which I have often ſeen upon the River Ganges.

Some of theſe Gentiles there are, who, when they perceive a ſick perſon near death carry him to the ſide of a River (at which barbarous action I have been once preſent) and then firſt put his Feet into the Water, and afterwards let him ſlide down as far as to his Throat, and then when they think he is now expiring, they ſink him quite under Water, and there leave him, after they have made a great clamour, and clapping with their Hands: And this, ſay they, to the end that the Soul leaving the body may be waſh'd from all the impurities, ſhe may have contracted in the Body. And this is not only a reaſon given by the Vulgar; for I have ſpoken with the moſt Learned of them, who deliver'd the ſame with great ſerioufneſs. But let us go on to other extravagancies.

Amongſt that vaſt number and great variety of Fakires, Derviches, or Religous Heathens of the Indies, there is abundance of them that have Convents, in which there are Superiours, and wherein they make certain vows of Chaſtity, Poverty, and Obedience, leading ſo odd a life, that I doubt whether you can give credit to it. Theſe are commonly called Jauguis, as if you ſhould ſay, United to God. You ſhall ſee many of them ſit ſtark naked, or lie days and nights upon Aſhes, and commonly enough, under ſome of thoſe large trees, that are on the ſides of the Talabs or Ponds, or elſe in thoſe Galleries that are about their Deuras or Idol-temples. Some of them have their Hair hanging down to the middle of their Legs, and that wreathed into ſeveral parcels, as the large Main of our Barbes, or rather as the Hair of thoſe that have the ſickneſs of Poland called the Plica. Of theſe I have ſeen ſome in divers places, who held one Arm, and ſometimes both, lifted up perpetually above their Heads, and that had at the end of their Fingers wreathed Nails, that were longer by meaſure than half my little finger. Their Arms were ſmall and lean as of hectical perſons, becauſe they took not ſufficient nouriſhment in that forced poſture, and they could not let them down to take any thing with them, either meat or drink, becauſe the Nerves were retired, and the Joints were filled and dried up: wherefore alſo they have young Novices, that ſerve them as Holy men with very great reſpect. There is no Megera in Hell ſo terrible to look on, as thoſe Men are, all naked, with their black skin, long Hair, dried Arms, and in the poſture mention'd, and with crooked Nails.

I have often met in the Field, eſpecially upon the Lands of the Rajas, whole ſquadrons of theſe Faquires, altogether naked, dreadful to behold. Some held their Arms lifted up in the poſture mention'd; others had their terrible Hair hanging about them, or elſe they had wreathed them about their Head; ſome had a kind of Hercules's Club in their Hand; others had dry and ſtiff Tiger-skins over their Shoulders. I ſaw them paſs thus quite naked, without any ſhame, through the midſt of a great Burrough, I admired how Men, Women, and Children could look upon them ſo indifferently, without being moved no more than if we ſhould ſee paſs ſome Eremite through our ſtreets; and how the Women brought them almes with much devotion, taking them for very holy Men, much wiſer and better than others.

I have ſeen for a long while a very famous one in Debli, called Sarmet, who went thus ſtark naked along the ſtreets, and who at length would rather ſuffer his Neck to be cut off, than to put on any cloaths, what promiſes or menaces ſoever Aureng-Zebe might ſend to him.

I have ſeen many of them, who out of devotion went long Pilgrimages, not only altogether naked, but charged with Iron-chains, like thoſe that are put about the Legs of Elephants. Others, who, out of a particular vow, ſtood for ſeven or eight days upright upon their Legs, which thereupon ſwell'd as big as their Thighs, without ſitting or lying down, or without repoſing themſelves otherwiſe than by leaning ſome hours of the night upon a ſtretched Cord: Others, who ſtood for whole hours upon their Hands without wavering, the Head down, and the Feet upward: And ſo of many others ſorts of poſtures ſo conſtrain'd, and ſo difficult, that we have no Tumbler able to immitate them; and all this it ſeems upon the account of Religion, of which yet their appears not the leaſt ſhadow in it.

All theſe ſo extraordinary things did (to tell you the truth) exceedingly ſurprize me at firſt, I knew not what to ſay or think of it. Sometimes I look'd upon them as a remainder, or rather as the Authors of that antient and infamous Sect of the Cynicks, but only that I found nothing in them, but brutality and ignorance, and that they ſeem'd to me a kind of Trees, ſomewhat moving from one place to another, rather than rational Animals. Another time I conſider'd them as Men altogether Enthuſiaſtical; though as I lately ſaid, I could not find any ſhadow of true Piety in all they did. Sometimes I thought, that this lazy, idle, and independent Life of Beggars might have ſomething attractive in it. Sometimes I imagin'd that the vanity, which creeps in every where, and which is as often found under the patched Mantle of Diogenes, as under the comely Garment of Plato, there might lurk that Spring, which might ſet a going ſo many Engins; and then reflecting withal upon the miſerable and auſtere life they led, I knew not what Judgment to make of them.

'Tis true, that many ſay, that they do not exerciſe theſe ſtrange auſterities but in the hopes they entertain of becoming Rajas in their renaſcence, or of returning again in a more happy life. But, as I have often told them to their Faces, how is't poſſible for any Man to reſolve upon ſuch a miſerable life from the hope of another, that is to be no longer, and hath alſo, in the upſhot, but very little happineſs in it, though one ſhould return a Raja, and even a Jeſſeingue or a Jeſſomſeingue, which are the two moſt puiſſant Rajas of the Indies? There muſt needs, ſaid I, lie ſomething elſe under it, which you have no mind to diſcover to us, or you muſt be arrant Fools.

Amongſt thoſe I have been ſpeaking of, there are ſuch that are believed to be true Saints, illuminated and perfect Jauguis, entirely united to God. Theſe are people that have altogether abandon'd the World, and ſequeſter'd themſelves into ſome very remote corner or Garden, like Eremites, without ever coming to Town. If you carry them any meat, they receive it; if they do not, 'tis believed that they can live without it, and ſubſiſt by the ſole favour of God in perpetual faſting, prayer, and profound meditations: For they ſink themſelves ſo deep into theſe raptures, that they ſpend many hours together in being inſenſible, and beholding in that time, as they give out, God himſelf, like a very bright and ineffable Light, with an unexpreſſible joy and ſatisfaction, attended with an entire contempt and forſaking of the World: For thus much one of them, that pretended he could enter into this rapture when he pleaſed, and had been often in it, told me; and others that are about them, affirm the thing with ſo much ſerioufneſs, that they ſeem to believe in earneſt, as if there were no impoſture in it.

Go

God alone knows whether there be any truth in it, and whether in this ſolitude and faſting the imagination debilitated, may not ſuffer it ſelf to be carried away into theſe illuſions: Or whether they be not of that kind of natural Raptures, into which Cardan ſaid he fell when he liſted; and this the rather, becauſe I ſee, there is uſed ſome Art in what they do, foraſmuch as they preſcribe to themſelves certain Rules, by little and little to bind up their Senſes: For they ſay, for Example, that after they have faſted many days, uſing nothing but Bread and Water, 'tis requiſite firſt to keep themſelves alone retired from all company, directing the Eyes ſteadily towards Heaven for a while, then gently caſting them down again, and then fixing them both ſo as to look at one and the ſame time upon the tip of their Noſe equally, and as much on one ſide as the other (which is troubleſome enough) and remaining firm and intent in that poſture, until ſuch a Light do come. Whatever the matter be, I know, that theſe Raptures, and theſe ways of falling into them, make the great Myſtery of the Cabala of Jauguis, as the Soufys do alſo. I call it Myſtery, becauſe they keep it very ſecret amongſt them; and if it had not been for this Pendet or Indian Doctor, to whom Danechmend-kan gave a Penſion, and who durſt hide nothing from him; and if alſo Danechmend-kan had not known the Myſteries of the Cabala of the Soufys, I ſhould not have diſcover'd ſo much of it. I know beſides, that as for the extremity of Poverty, of Faſtings and Auſterities, that alſo can do much to it. We muſt not think (or I am much deceived) that any of our Religious Fryars or Eremites go in this point beyond thoſe Men, nor generally beyond all the Aſiatick Monks; witneſs the Life and Faſtings of the Armenians, Copthites, Greeks, Neſtorians, Jacobites, and Maronites. We muſt rather avow, that we are but Novices, when compared with thoſe Religious Men: But then we muſt alſo acknowledge, according to what I have experimented, in reſpect of thoſe of the Indies, that they can much more eaſily bear hunger than we can in our colder Climates.

There are others very differing from thoſe, but very ſtrange Men likewiſe; they are almoſt perpetually travelling up and down, they deride all, take care of nothing, Men that brag of ſecrets, and who, as the people ſay, know no leſs than to make Gold, and ſo admirably to pepare Mercury, that a grain or two of it taken every morning reſtoreth the body to perfect health, and ſo ſtrengthens the Stomach, that it feeds greedily and digeſts with eaſe. This is not all: When two of theſe Jauguis, that are eminent, do meet, and you ſtir them up in the point and power of their knowledge or Jauguiſme, you ſhall ſee them do ſuch tricks out of ſpight to one onother, that I know not whether Simon Magus could have out-done them. For they divine what one thinketh, make the Branch of a Tree bloſſome and bear fruit in leſs than an hour, hatch Eggs in their boſome in leſs than half a quarter of an hour, and bring forth ſuch Birds as you demand, which they make fly about the Chamber, and many ſuch other prodigies. I mean, if what is ſaid of them be true; for I remember, that one day my Agah ſent for one of theſe famous Diviners, and when he was come, agreed with him to give him the next day 300 Roupies, which is about 150 Crowns, if he ſhould tell him, as he ſaid he would, his preſent thought, which he was to write before him upon a paper: As alſo, that I my ſelf made a bargain with the ſame, to give him 25 Roupies, if he ſhould divine mine; but the Prophet failed us, as alſo did at another time one of thoſe pretended producers of Birds, to whom I had alſo promiſed 20 Roupies. I am ſtill to be underſtood, if it be true what is ſaid of them. For, as for me, I am with all my curioſity none of thoſe happy Men, that are preſent at, and ſee thoſe great feats; and if I ſhould chance to ſee any of ſuch things as are thought ſtrange, I am always conſidering and ſeeking, whether the thing may not be done by ſome Juggle, Art, or Trick of Leger-demain: and I am ſometimes even ſo unhappy, or, if you will, ſo fortunate, as to find out the cheat, as I did him, that made a Cup run, to diſcover who it was, that had ſtolen money from my Agah.

Laſtly, there are ſome in many places, that are quite of another way than all thoſe I have diſcourſed of. Their Life and their Devotion is more meek and more poliſht; they go over the ſtreets bare-foot and bare-headed, girt about with a Scarfe hanging down to their Knees, and having a white Sheet which paſſeth under their right Arm, and comes out over their left Shoulder like a Cloak, without other Cloaths under it. They are always very clean and neat in all things, and commonly go two and two together with great modeſty, holding in their Hand a ſmall Earthen Trevet with two handles, very neat. They do not go goſſiping from Shop to Shop, as many of the other Fakires do. They go freely every where into the Houſes of the Gentiles, where they are welcome, and much made of; they being esteem'd a Blessing to the House. They are by no means to be accused of any thing, though it be well enough known, what in such visits among the Women passeth. But 'tis the custom, they are in possession of being Saints for all that, and any House thinks it self honour'd with their visit. But it is not only there so; many other places there be in the World, where things are not so strictly look'd to. But that which I find most ridiculous in those people is, That they are impertinent enough, to compare themselves with our Religious Men, they meet with in the Indies. I have often taken pleasure to catch them, using much ceremony with them, and giving them great respect; but I soon heard them say to one another, This Franguis knows who we are, he hath been a great while in the Indies, he knows that we are the Padrys of the Indians. A fine comparison, said I within my self, made by an impertinent and idolatrous rabble of Men!

But we stay too long upon these Heathen-Beggers: Let us go on to their Books of Law and Sciences: you may afterwards judge, whether most of what I am going to say of it, may be put, as I think it may, in the number of Extravagancies.

Do not wonder, if, though I know not the Hanscrit, the language of the Learn'd (of which somewhat may be said hereafter, and which is perhaps the same with that of the old Brahmans) do notwithstanding tell you many things taken out of Books written in that Tongue. For you must know, that my Agah Danechmend-kan, partly upon my solicitation, partly out of his own curiosity, took into his service one of the famousest Pendets that was in all the Indies, and that formerly had had a Pension of Dara, the Eldest Son of King Chah-jehan; and that this Pendet, besides that he drew to our House all the most Learned Pendets, was for three years constantly of my conversation. When I was weary of explaining to my Agah those late discoveries of Harvey and Pecquet in Anatomy, and of discoursing with him of the Philosophy of Gassendi and Des-cartes, which I translated to him into Persian (for that was my chief employment for five or six years) that Pendet was our refuge, and then he was obliged to discourse, and to relate unto us his stories, which he deliver'd seriously and without ever smiling. 'Tis true, that at last we were so much disgusted with his tales and uncouth reasonings, that we scarce had patience left to hear them.

They say then, that God, whom they call Achar, that is to say, Immoveable or Immutable, hath sent them four Books, which they call Beths, a word signifying Science, because they pretend that in these Books all Sciences are comprehended. The first of these Books is call'd Athen-babed, the second Zager-bed, the third Rek-bed, the fourth Sama-bed. Conform to the doctrine of these Books, this people ought to be distinguish't, as really they are, into four Tribes: The first is of Brachmans, Men of the Law; the second of Quetterys, Men of Arms; the third, Men of Bescue or Trafick, commonly called Banians; and the fourth, Men of Seydra, that is, Handy-crafts Men and Labourers. And these are so discriminated, that those of one Tribe cannot marry into another, that is, a Brahman cannot marry with a Woman Quettery, and so of the rest.

They all agree in one Doctrine, which is that of Pythagoras concerning the Metempsychosis or Transmigration of Souls, and in this, that they must not kill or eat of any Animal. However there are some of the second Tribe that may eat of them, provided it be neither Cows nor Peacocks-flesh, they all having a great veneration for these two creatures, especially the Cow, because they fancy I know not what River lying between this Life and that to come, which they are to pass by holding themselves fast on a Cows-tail. Possibly their ancient Legislators had seen those Shepherds of Egypt, crossing the Nile, by holding with their left-hand the Tail of an Oxe, and in their right-hand a Stick to guide him with; or rather they have imprinted in them this respect for Cows, because they draw from them Milk and Butter, which is a great part of their subsistance; and because also they are so serviceable for the Plough, and consequently for the Life of Man; and that the rather because it is not so in the Indies as in our Parts, for maintaining so great a number of Cattle as we do: if but half as many of them should be killed in the Indies, as there are in England or France, the Country will quickly be destitute of them, and the Land remain Untilled. The heat is there so violent for eight months of the year, that all is dry, and that Oxen and Cows are often starved, or dye of eating trash in the Fields like Hogs. And 'tis upon the account of the scarcity of Cattle, that in the time of Jehan-Guire, the Brahmans obtain'd an Edict, that no Cattle should be kill'd for a certain number of years, and that of late they presented a Petition to Aureng-Zebe, and offered him a considerable sum, if he would make the like Prohibition.

hibition They remonſtrated, that for 50 or 60 years paſt much Land had remained Unploughed, becauſe the Oxen and Cows were become too ſcarce and too dear. It may be alſo, that theſe Law-givers conſidered, that Cows and Ox-fleſh in the Indies is not very ſavoury, nor wholeſome, unleſs it be for a little time in Winter, during the cooler ſeaſon: Or laſtly, that they would take the People off from mutual cruelty, (to which they were too much inclined) by obliging them, as by a Maxime of Religion, to exerciſe humanity to the very Beaſts, and by making them believe, that killing or eating an Animal, it might happen that they did kill or eat one of their Grand-fires; which would be an horrid crime.

According to the Doctrine of theſe Beths, they are obliged to ſay their Prayers at leaſt thrice every day, in the morning, at noon, and at night, with their face turned to the Eaſt. They are alſo bound to waſh their whole body thrice, or at leaſt before they eat; and they believe, that 'tis more meritorious to waſh themſelves in running water then in any other. And it may be, that the Legiſlators in this point alſo have had a reſpect to what is proper and convenient for this Countrey, where nothing is more deſirable then waſhing and bathing. And they find it troubleſome enough to obſerve this Law, when they are in cold Countries: I have ſeen ſome of them that were like to die, becauſe they would there alſo obſerve their Law of waſhing their Body by plunging themſelves into Rivers or Ponds, when they found any near; or by throwing whole buckets of water over their heads, when they were remote from them. When I told them upon occaſion, that in cold Countries it would not be poſſible to obſerve that Law of theirs in Winter (which was a ſign of its being a meer human invention) they gave this pleaſant anſwer: That they pretended not their Law was univerſal; that God had only made it for them, and it was therefore that they could not receive a Stranger into their Religion: that they thought not our Religion was therefore falſe, but that it might be it was good for us, and that God might have appointed ſeveral differing ways to go to Heaven; but they will not hear that our Religion ſhould be the general Religion for the whole earth, and theirs a fable and pure device.

Theſe ſame Books do teach them, that God having determined to create the World, would not execute it immediately, but made firſt three Perfect Beings: the firſt was Brahma, which ſignifieth Penetrating into all things; the ſecond Beſchen, that is Exiſting in all things; and the third Mehabden, that is, great Lord. That by the means of Brahma he created the World, by the means of Beſchen he preſerveth it, and by the means of Mehabden he will deſtroy it. That it is Brahma, who by the command of God did publiſh the four Beths, and that therefore he is in ſome of their Churches repreſented with four Heads.

As to thoſe three Beings, I have ſeen ſome European Miſſionaries that were of opinion, that theſe Gentils had ſome Idea of the Myſtery of the Trinity; and ſaid, it was expreſly contained in their Books that there are three Perſons, and one only God. For my part, I have made the Pendets ſufficiently diſcourſe upon this point; but they declare themſelves ſo poorly, that I could not clearly underſtand their ſenſe. I have even heard ſome of them, who ſaid, that theſe are three Creatures very perfect, which they called Deütas, yet without explaining well what they underſtood by this word Deütas; as our antient Idolaters never explained what they meant by theſe words Genius and Numina, which is (I think) the ſame with Deüta among the Indians. 'Tis true, that I have ſpoken with others of the moſt knowing amongſt them, who ſaid, that theſe three Beings were indeed nothing but one and the ſame God, conſidered three manner of way, viz. as he is the Producer, Conſervator, and Deſtroyer of things; but they ſaid nothing of three diſtinct Perſons in one onely Deity.

Moreover I have ſeen the Reverend Father Roa, a German Jeſuit and Miſſionary at Agra, who being well verſed in their Hanſcrit, maintained that their Books did not onely import, there was one God in three Perſons, but that even the ſecond Perſon of their Trinity was incarnated nine times. And that I may not be thought to aſcribe to my ſelf the writings of others, I ſhall relate unto you word for word, what a certain Carmelite of Chiras hath lighted upon, which he related when the above-mentioned Father Roa paſſed that way to come back to Rome. The Gentils (ſaith he) do hold, that the ſecond Perſon of the Trinity was incarnated nine times, and that becauſe of divers neceſſities of the World, from which he hath delivered it: But the eighth Incarnation is the moſt notable; for they hold, that the World being inſlaved under the power of Giants, it was redeemed by the ſecond Perſon, incarnated and born of a Virgin at midnight, midnight, the Angels ſinging in the Air, and the Heavens pouring down a ſhower of flowers all that night. This ſavours much of Chriſtianity: But then there follows a Fable again, which is, That this God incarnate killed firſt of all a Giant that flew in the Air, and was ſo big as to obſcure the Sun, and by his fall to make the Earth to ſhake, and that by his great weight he ſunk as deep as Hell; that this God incarnate being wounded in the ſide, in the firſt conflict with this Giant, fell, but by his fall put his Enemies to flight; that after he had raiſed himſelf again, and redeemed the World, he aſcended into Heaven; and that by reaſon of his wound, he is commonly called the Wounded in his Side. In the tenth Incarnation, which ſhall then be, when according to our ſupputation Antichriſt ſhall come, the World ſhall be delivered from the ſlavery of the Mahumetans: But this is only a vulgar Tradition, which is not found in their Books.

They ſay alſo, that the Third Perſon of the Trinity hath manifeſted himſelf to the World; concerning which they relate, That the Daughter of a certain King, being fit to be married, and asked by her Father, whom ſhe would marry, anſwered, that ſhe would not be united but to a Divine Perſon; and that at the ſame time, the Third Perſon of the Trinity appeared to the King in the form of Fire; that that King forthwith gave notice of it to his Daughter, who preſently conſented to the Marriage; That this Perſon of the Trinity, though altogether in a firy appearance, was called before the King's Council, and ſeeing that the Counſellors oppoſed this Marriage, took hold of their Beards and burned them, together with the whole Royal Palace, and then married the Daughter. Ridiculous!

They add, that the firſt Incarnation of the ſecond Perſon, was in the nature of a Lion; the ſecond, in that of a Swine; the third, in that of a Tortoiſe; the fourth, in that of a Serpent; the fifth in that of a Brahma She-Dwarf, onely a foot and a half high; the ſixth, in that of a Monſter, a Man-Lion; the ſeventh, in that of a Dragon; the eighth, as hath been ſaid already; the ninth, in an Ape; the tenth, in that of a great Cavalier.

Concerning this I ſhall acquaint you, that I doubt not but that the Reverend Father Roa, hath taken all he ſaith of this matter out of the Books of the Gentiles, and that is the main ground of their Mythology. I had written many things of it at large in my Papers, and had alſo taken the Figures of their Gods or Idols, which I had ſeen in their Temples, having alſo got of them the Characters of their Language Hanſcrit; but finding at my return all thoſe things, or at leaſt the beſt part of it Printed in the China Illuſtrata of Father Kircher, who had obtained it at Rome from the ſame Father Roa; I ſhall content my ſelf to have named the Book to you. 'Tis true, that the word Incarnation, which the Reverend Father uſeth, was new to me, having never ſeen it ſo expreſly uſed; I had only heard ſome Pendets thus explaining the thing, viz. That God had formerly appeared in thoſe Figures when he did all thoſe wonders they relate. Others explained it to me after this manner, to wit, That it was the Soul of certain Great Men, ſuch as we might call Hero's, that had paſſed into theſe Bodies, and that theſe Hero's were thus become Deütas, or to ſpeak in the phraſe of our old Idolaters, ſome powerful and conſiderable Divinities, Numens, Genio's, Demons, Spirits; for I ſee not that this word Deüta can ſignifie any other thing: But this ſecond Explication of the Pendets, cometh in effect to the firſt, for as much as moſt of them believe, that our Souls are Portions of God.

Others there were that gave me a much ſublimer Explication, ſaying, That all thoſe Incarnations or Apparitions, which their Books ſpeak of are not to be underſtood according to the Letter, but Myſtically, foraſmuch as thereby are explained the ſeveral Attributes of God. Some there were, and thoſe of the moſt learned, acknowledging to me candidly, that there was nothing more fabulous then thoſe Incarnations, and that they were only the Inventions of Legiſlators, to retain People in ſome Religion: And though this were ſo, if there were nothing elſe but this, (which is common to them all) that our Souls were Portions of the Deity, it were to be exploded in ſound Phyloſophy, without making any Myſteries in Religion of it, ſeeing that in reſpect of our Souls we ſhould be God, and that in effect it ſhould be our ſelves that had impoſed upon us a Religious Worſhip, Metempſychoſes, Paradice and Hell, which would be ridiculous.

I ſhall here add a few words, to declare that I am not leſs obliged to Monſieur Henry Lor, and to Monſieur Abraham Roger, then to the Reverend Fathers Kircher and Roa. I had compil'd an hundred things relating to the Gentiles, which I found in the Books of thoſe Gentlemen, and which would have been a great trouble to me to range them as they they have done. I ſhall therefore content my ſelf to ſay ſomething in General to you of their Studies and Sciences, not indeed in that good order which poſſibly you might expect, but juſt as I have learnt it, and as 'tis probably found in their Books; I mean by fragments, and without coherence.

The Town of Benares, which is ſeated upon the Ganges in a very fine and rich Country and place, is the General School, and as 'twere the Athens of the Gentry of the Indies; where the Brachmans and the Religious (thoſe that addict themſelves to ſtudy) come together. They have no Colledges nor Claſſes ordered as with us, me thinks, 'tis more after the way of the School of the Antients; the Maſters being diſperſed over the Town in their Houſes, and eſpecially in the Gardens of the Suburbs, where the great Merchants do ſuffer them. Of theſe Maſters ſome have four Diſciples; others ſix or ſeven; and the moſt famous, twelve or fifteen at moſt, who ſpend ten or a douzen years with them. All this ſtudy goeth on very cooly, becauſe moſt Indians are of a ſlow and lazy humour, to which the heat and diet of the Country contributes much; and becauſe they are not animated to induſtry as we, by that great emulation, and by the great hopes we have of coming thereby to great preferment. They ſtudy leaſurely, and without much tormenting themſelves; eating their Kichery or mixture of Legums, which the rich Merchants cauſe to be dreſſed for them.

Their firſt ſtudy is of the Hanſcrit, which is a Language altogether different from the common Indian, and not known but by the Pendets. And this is that Tongue, of which Father Kircher hath publiſht the Alphabet received from Father Ros. It is called Hanſcrit, that is, a pure Language; and becauſe they believe this is to be the Tongue, in which God, by the means of Brahma, gave them the four Beths, which they eſteem Sacred Books, they call it an Holy and Divine Language. They pretend alſo, that it is as antient as Brahma, whoſe Age they do not reckon but by Leeques, or hundred thouſands of years. But I would gladly have a warrant for ſuch an extraordinary Antiquity. However, it cannot be denied that 'tis very old, in regard that the Books of their Religion, which certainly is very antient, are written in this Tongue, and beſides that, it hath it's Authors in Philoſophy and Phyſick in Verſes, and ſome other Poems, and many other Books, of which I have ſeen a great Hall quite full in Benares.

After they have learned the Hanſcrit (which is very difficult to them, becauſe they have no Grammar worth any thing) they commonly apply themſelves to read the Purane, which is as it were the interpretation and ſum of the Beths, which are very large, at leaſt if thoſe be they which were ſhewed me at Benares: and beſides they are ſo very rare, that my Agah could never find them to be ſold, what induſtry ſoever he uſed in it. And they keep them very ſecret, for fear leaſt the Mahumetans ſhould lay their hands on them and burn them, as they have already done ſeveral times.

After the Purane ſome fall upon Philoſophy, wherein certainly they go not far. I have already intimated, that they are of a ſlow and lazy temper, and are not excited by the hopes to obtain ſome good place by their ſtudy.

Among their Philoſophers there have principally been ſix very famous, who make ſo many different Sects; which cauſeth alſo a difference and an emulation among the Pendets or Doctors: For they know, that ſuch an one is of this Sect, another of another, and every one of them pretends his Doctrine to be better than that of others, and more conform to the Beths. There is indeed another, a ſeventh Sect, which is called Bauté whence do proceed twelve other different Sects; but this is not ſo common as the others, the Votaries of it being hated and deſpiſed as a company of irreligious and atheiſtical people, nor do they live like the reſt.

All theſe Books ſpeak of the firſt principles of things, but very differently. Some ſay, that all is compoſed of little Bodies that are indiviſible, not by reaſon of their ſolidity, hardneſs, and reſiſtance, but ſmalneſs; adding divers things which approach to the opinions of Democritus and Epicurus, but with ſo much confuſion that one knows not where to faſten, all ſeeming like a rope of ſand: which yet may be as much or more the fault of the Pendets, which ſeem to me very ignorant, then of the Authors.

Others ſay, that all is made up of matter and form; but not one of them explains himſelf clearly about the matter, and leſs about the form. Yet ſo much I have found, that they underſtand them not at all as they are wont to be explained in our Schools, by educing the Form out of the power of the Matter: For they always alledge Examples of things Artificial, and among them that of a Veſſel of ſoft Clay, which a Potter turns and ſhapes divers ways.

Others

Others hold, that all is compoſed of four Elements and a nothing; but they do not at all explain themſelves concerning Mixtion and Tranſmutation. And as for their nothing, which comes near to our privation, they admit I know not how many ſorts of them, which (I believe) they underſtand not at all, nor are able to make out to others.

There are alſo ſome, that maintain light and darkneſs to be the firſt Principles, and ſay a thouſand impertinent and confuſed things upon it, making long-winded diſcourſes, which ſavour nothing at all of Philoſophy, but are like the talk of the vulgar.

Others there are that admit privation for the Principle, or rather privations, which they diſtinguiſh from nothing, and of which they make long enumerations, ſo uſeleſs and little philoſophical, that I can ſcarce imagine them to be in their Books, or that their Authors could have entertained themſelves with ſuch uncouth things.

Laſtly, ſome of them do pretend that all is compoſed of accidents; of which alſo they make odd, long, and tedious enumerations, and ſuch as ſavour only ſome Pettifogger, that can amuſe the common People.

Touching theſe Principles in general, they all agree that they are eternal; our production out of nothing not having come (it ſeems) into their thoughts, as it hath neither to many others of the antient Philoſophers: Yet they ſay, that there is one of them that hath touched ſomething of it.

As to Phyſick, they have many little Books that are rather collections of receits then any thing elſe; the moſt antient and chief wherefore is in Verſe. I ſhall here tell you, that their practice is ſufficiently different from ours, and that they ground themſelves upon theſe Principles: That one who is ſick of a Feaver, needs no great nouriſhment: That the main Remedy of ſickneſſes, is Abſtinence: That nothing is worſe for a ſick Body then Fleſh-broth, nor which corrupts ſooner in the Stomach of a feveriſh Patient: That no Blood is to be let but in great and evident neceſſity, as when you apprehend ſome tranſlation into the Brain, or finde ſome conſiderable part, as the Cheſt, Liver, Kidneys, enflamed.

Whether this Practice be better then ours, I leave to Phyſitians to decide; but I ſee that 'tis ſucceſsful among them. The ſame practice is not peculiar to the Phyſitians of the Gentils, but the Mogolian and Mahumetan Doctors, that follow Avicen and Averroes, do alſo very ſtrictly obſerve it, eſpecially as to Meat-broths. 'Tis true that the Mogols are ſomewhat more prodigal of their Blood then the Gentils, for in thoſe ſickneſſes wherein they fear thoſe accidents lately ſpecified, they commonly blood once or twice: but theſe are none of thoſe petty veneſections of the new invention of Goa and Paris, but they are of thoſe plentiful ones uſed by the Antients, of 18. or 20. ounces of Blood, which often come to a ſwounding, and frequently choak the Diſeaſe in the very beginning, as Galen ſaith, and as I have often experimented.

Concerning Anatomy, I may ſafely ſay, that the Gentils underſtand nothing at all of it, and they can ſpeak nothing as to that ſubject but what is impertinent. Nor is it a wonder they are ſo ignorant in it, ſince they never open any Body of Man or Beaſt: they do ſo much abhor it, that when I opened ſome living Kids and Sheep before my Agah, to make him underſtand the Circulation of the Blood, and to ſhew him the Pecquetian Veſſels, through which the Chyle at laſt comes into one of the ventricles of the Heart, they trembled for fear and ran away. Yet notwithſtanding they affirm, that there are five thouſand Veins in Man, neither more nor leſs, as if they had well counted them all.

Touching Aſtronomy, they have their Tables, according to which they foreſee the Eclipſes; and though they do it not with that exactneſs as our European Aſtronomers, yet they come pretty near. Mean time they diſcourſe of the Eclipſe of the Moon, as they do upon that of the Sun, believing that it is the Rah, that black Villain, and miſchievous Deita, who at that time ſeizeth on the Moon and blackens her. They hold alſo, that the Moon is an hundred thouſand koſſes, that is, above fifty thouſand Leagues above the Sun: that ſhe is lucid of her ſelf; and that 'tis ſhe, from whom we receive a certain Vital Water, which gathereth and diſpoſeth it ſelf in the Brain, deſcending thence as from a ſource into all the members for their functions. Beſides this, they are of opinion, that the Sun and Moon, and generally all Stars are Deitas; that 'tis night when the Sun is behind the Someire, that imaginary Mountain, which they place in the midſt of the Earth, and make I know not how many thouſand Leagues high, and to which they give the ſhape of an inverted Sugar-loaf; ſo that 'tis not day with them, but when the Sun gets out from behinde this Mountain.

In

In Geography they have ſped no better. They believe the Earth to be flat and triangular, and that it hath ſeven ſtories, all differing in beauty, perfection, and inhabitants; each of which is encompaſſed, they ſay, by its Sea; that of theſe Seas one is of Milk, another of Sugar, the third of Butter, the fourth of Wine, and ſo forth: ſo that after one Earth there comes a Sea, and after, Sea an Earth; and ſo on unto ſeven, beginning from Someire, which is in the midſt of theſe ſtories: that the firſt ſtory, which is at the foot of Someire, hath Deütas for its inhabitants, which are very perfect; that the ſecond contains likewiſe Deütas, but leſs perfect; and ſo the reſt, ſtill leſſening the perfection unto the ſeventh, which they ſay is ours, that is, of men far leſs perfect then all the Deütas; and laſtly, that this whole Maſs is ſuſtained upon the heads of divers Elephants, which when they ſtir, cauſe an Earthquake.

All theſe ſtrange impertinences, which I have had the patience to relate, have often made me think, that if they be thoſe famous Sciences of the antient Brahmans of the Indies, very many have been deceived in the great opinion they entertained of them. For my part, I can hardly believe it, but that I find the Religion of the Indians to be from immemorial times; that 'tis written in the Language Hanſcrit, which cannot be but very antient, ſince its beginning is unknown, and 'tis a dead Language, not underſtood but by the Learned; that all their Books are only written in that Tongue: All which are as many marks of a very great Antiquity. Let us now add a few words about the worſhip of their Idols.

When I deſcended along the River Ganges, and paſſed through Banares, that famous School of all the Indian Gentility, I went to ſee the chief of the Pendets, who hath there his ordinary reſidence. This is a Fakire, or Religious Monk, ſo renowned for his knowledge, that Chah-Jehan, partly for his Science, partly to pleaſe the Rajas, gave him a Penſion of 2000 Roupies, that is, about 1000 Crowns. This was a big and proper Man, goodly to look on; who for all his Cloaths had nothing but a white ſilken Scarf, tied about his waſte, and hanging down to his mid-leg, with another red Scarf about his ſhoulders like a little Cloak. I had often ſeen him at Dehli in this poſture before the King, in the Aſſembly of all the Omrahs, and marching upon the Streets, ſometimes on foot, ſometimes in a Palekey. I had alſo frequently ſeen and many times converſed with him, when for a whole year together he conſtantly came to our conference before my Agah, whom he courted, that he might procure him again that Penſion which Aureng-Zebe (being come to the Crown) had taken from him, that he might appear a great Muſulman. In the viſit I made him at Banares, he was exceedingly courteous to me, and even gave me a Collation in the Library of his Univerſity, attended with ſix of the moſt famous Pendets of the Town. When I found my ſelf in ſo good Company, I prayed them all to tell me their ſenſe about the Adoration of their Idols; intimating to them, that I was leaving the Indies, extreamly ſcandalized upon that ſcore; and reproaching them, that that worſhip was a thing againſt all reaſon, and altogether unworthy ſuch Scholars and Philoſophers as they were. Whereupon I received this Anſwer.

We have indeed (ſaid they) in our Deuras or Temples, ſtore of divers Statues, as thoſe of Braham, Mehaden, Genich and Gavani, who are ſome of the chief and the moſt perfect Deütas: and we have alſo many others of leſs perfection, to whom we pay great honour, proſtrating our ſelves before them, and preſenting them Flowers, Rice, ſcented Oyls, Saffron and ſuch other things with much Ceremony, but we do not believe theſe Statues to be Brahma or Bechen, &c. themſelves, but only their Images and Repreſentations, and we do not give them that honour, but upon the account of what they repreſent. They are in our Temples, becauſe 'tis neceſſary for praying well, to have ſomething before our eyes that may fix the mind; and when we pray, it is not the Statue we pray to, but he that is repreſented by it. For the reſt, we acknowledge that 'tis God that is abſolute, and the only Omnipotent Lord and Maſter.

This is, without adding or ſubtracting any thing, the reſolution they gave me. But, to tell you true, this ſeemed a little too much accommodated to our Chriſtianity, in reſpect of what I had learned of it from ſeveral other Pendets.

After this, I put them upon their Chronology, where they pretended to ſhew me far higher Antiquities then all ours. They will not ſay, that the World is eternal; but they make it ſo old, that I almoſt know not which is beſt. Its determined duration, ſay they, is of four Dgugue. This Dgugue is a certain determined number of years, as amongſt us we have a ſeculum (an Age) with this difference, that an Age of ours contains only an hundred Years, but their Dgugue is made up of an hundred Leques, that is, an hundred times hundred thouſand years. I do not preciſely remember the number total of the years of each Dgugue; but this I know very well, that the firſt, called Sate-Dgugue, is of twenty five Lecques of years: that the ſecond, which they call Trita, is of above twelve Lecques: the third, called Duaper, of eight Lecques and ſixty four thouſand years, if I remember well: and the fourth, called Kale-Dgugue, is of I know not how many Lecques. The three firſt, ſay they, and much of the fourth, are elapſed; ſo that the World ſhall not laſt ſo long as it hath done, becauſe it is to periſh at the end of the fourth, all things being then to return to their firſt Principles. I made them compute again and again, to have their age of the World aright; but finding that that perplexed them, and that they agreed not among themſelves about the number of the Lecques, I contented my ſelf to ſee that they make the World exceeding old. But being preſſed a little to make out this Antiquity, they pay you with nothing but little ſtories, and at length come to this, that they find it ſo in their Beths, or the Books of their Law, given them by the hands of Brahma.

After this I urged them concerning the nature of the Deütas, of which I deſired to be particularly inſtructed; but I received nothing but what was very confuſed. They ſaid, that there were three ſorts of them, Good, Evil, and Indifferent ones, that were neither good nor bad; that ſome thought, they were made of Fire, others of Light; others that they were Biapek, of which word I could not get a clear explication; only they ſaid, that God was Biapek, and our Soul was Biapek, and what is Biapek is incorruptible, and depends neither from Time nor Place: That others would have them to be nothing elſe but Portions of the Deity; and laſtly, that ſome there were, that made them certain kinds of Divinities ſevered and diſpenſed over the World.

I remember, that I alſo put them upon the nature of the Lengue-cherire, which ſome of their Authors do admit: But I could obtain nothing elſe of it but what I had long ſince underſtood from our Pendet, which was, That the ſeeds of Plants and Animals are not formed anew, but were contrived in the firſt production of the World, and diſpenſed abroad every where and mixed in all things; and that they are (not only potentially but actually) the very and entire Plants and Animals, though ſo ſmall, that their parts cannot be diſtinguiſht, but when being put into a convenient womb, and there nouriſhed, they extend themſelves and increaſe: So that the ſeeds of an Apple and Pear-Tree are a Lengue-cherire, that is, a little entire and perfect Apple and Pear-Tree, having all its eſſential parts: And ſo the ſeeds of an Horſe, an Elephant, and a Man, &c. are a Lengue-cherire; a little Horſe, a little Elephant, a little Man, in which there wants nothing but the Soul and Nouriſhment to make them appear what they are.

For a concluſion, I ſhall diſcover to you the myſtery of a great Cabala, which in theſe laſt years hath made great noiſe in Indoſtan, becauſe certain Pendets, or Heatheniſh Doctors, had poſſeſſed with it the minds of Dara and Sultan-Sujah, the two firſt Sons of Chah-Jehan.

You cannot but know the Doctrine of many of the Antient Philoſophers, touching that great Soul of the World, which they will have our Souls and thoſe of Animals to be portions of. If we did well penetrate into Plato and Ariſtotle, we might perhaps find that they were of this ſentiment. It is in a manner the general Doctrine of the Heathen Pendets of the Indies, and 'tis the ſame which ſtill maketh the Cabala of the Soufys, and of the greateſt part of the learned Men in Perſia, and which is found explained in Perſian Verſes, ſo ſublime and emphatical in their Goultchen-raz or Parterre of Myſteries: which is alſo the very ſame of Dr. Flud's, whom our great Gaſſendus hath ſo learnedly refuted; and that wherein moſt Chymiſts loſe themſelves. But theſe Indian Cabaliſts or Tendets I ſpeak of, drive this impertinence farther than all thoſe Philoſophers, and pretend, that God, or that Soveraign Being, which they call Achar, (immutable,) hath produced or drawn out of his own ſubſtance, not only Souls, but alſo whatever is material and corporeal in the Univerſe; and that this production was not meerly made by way of an efficient cauſe, but by a way reſembling a Spider that produceth a Webb, which it draws forth out of its own body, and takes in again when it will. Creation therefore, ſay theſe Doctors, is nothing elſe but an extraction and extenſion, which God maketh of his own Subſtance, of thoſe webbs he draws from his own bowels; as Deſtruction is nothing elſe but a repriſal, or taking back again this Divine Subſtance, and theſe Divine webbs into himſelf: So that the laſt day of the World, which they call Maperlé or Pralca, when they believe that all ſhall be deſtroyed, ſhall be nothing elſe

but a general repriſal of all thoſe webbs which God had drawn forth out of himſelf. There is therefore nothing (ſo they go on) that is real or effactive in all we think, we ſee, hear, ſmell, taſte or touch: all this World is nothing but a kind of Dream and a meer Illuſion, in regard that all this multiplicity and diverſity of things that appear to us, is nothing but one and the ſame thing, which is God himſelf; as all thoſe ſeveral Numbers of 10, 20, 100, 1000, &c. are indeed nothing but one and the ſame unity many times repeated. But if you demand any reaſon for this phantaſie, or any explication of the manner, how this iſſuing from and repriſal into the ſubſtance of God, this extenſion, and this variety of things is made; or how it can be, that God, being not corporeal but Biapek and incorruptible, (as they acknowledge) ſhould yet be diviſible into ſo many portions of Bodies and Souls; they never make any other return, but of ſome pretty compariſons, as, That God is like an immenſe Ocean, in which if many Vials full of Water ſhould be floating, they would, wherever they ſhould move, be found always in the ſame Ocean, in the ſame Water; and that coming to break, their Water would at the ſame time be united with their whole, and with that great Ocean of which they were portions. Or they will tell you, that it is with God as with Light, which is the ſame through the whole Univerſe, and which yet appears an hundred different ways, according to the diverſity of the Objects it falls upon, or according to the ſeveral colours and ſhapes of Glaſſes through which it ſhineth. They will pay you, I ſay, only with ſuch kind of ſimilitudes, that bear no proportion at all with God, and are good for nothing, but to caſt duſt into the eyes of the ignorant people: And you muſt not expect any ſolid Anſwer from them, if you ſhould tell them, that thoſe Vials would indeed be in a like Water, but not in the ſame; and that it is indeed a like light over all the World, but not the ſame: or if you ſhould make any other objections againſt them, they return always to the ſame compariſons, pretty expreſſions, or as the Soufys, to the fine Verſes of their Goultchen-raz.

Now Sir, what think you? Had I not reaſon, from this great heap of extravagancies, I mean, from that panick and childiſh terror ſtruck into thoſe Indians by Eclipſes; from that ſuperſtitious compaſſion for the Sun to deliver it from that black Dæmon, accompanied with thoſe Apiſh Prayers, Waſhings, Plungings, and Alms caſt into the River; from that mad and infernal obſtinacy of the Women, burning themſelves with the Corps's of their Husbands; from thoſe ſeveral madneſſes of the Fakires; and laſtly, from all that fabulous ſtuff of the Beths and other Indian Books: Had I not reaſon, I ſay, to premiſe in the title of this Letter; (which is but a poor advantage to me from ſo long travelling) That there are no opinions ſo ridiculous or extravagant, of which the mind of man is not capable.

To conclude, I have no more to add then to deſire you, to do me the favour and deliver with your own hands the Letter to Monſieur Chapelle. It is he that firſt procured me that familiar acquaintance I had with Monſieur Gaſſendi, your intimate and Illuſtrious Friend, that hath been ſo advantagious to me; which maketh me acknowledge my great obligations to him, and exceedingly engageth me to love him, and to remember him in what part of the World ſoever I am: As I am no leſs bound to honour you as long as I live; as well for the peculiar affection you have always expreſſed to me, as for the good counſel you have aſſiſted me with in your many letters during the whole courſe of my voyages, and for that favour of ſending to me with ſo much generoſity (without intereſt or mony) unto the end of the World: whither my curioſity had carried me, a Cheſt of Books, when thoſe, of whom I demanded them for mony, ordered by me to be paid at Marſeilles, and who ſhould have honeſtly ſent them me, abandoned me there, and laught at all my Letters, looking upon me as a loſt man, whom they ſhould never ſee again.

A Relation of a Voyage made in the year 1664. when the Great Mogol Aureng-Zebe went with his Army from Debli, the Capital of Indoſtan, to Lahor; from Lahor to Bember, and from thence to the Kingdom of Kachemire, commonly call'd by the Mogols, The PARADISE of the Indies, &c. By way of ſeveral Letters, written by the Author to his Friends.

The firſt Letter to Monſieur de Merveilles, written at Debli, Decemb. 1664. Aureng-Zebe being ready to march.

CONTAINING

The Occaſion and Cauſe of this Voyage of Aureng-Zebe; together with an account of the ſtate and poſture of his Army, and the Equipage and ordinary Proviſions of the chief of his Cavalry; and ſome curious particulars obſervable in the Voyages of the Indies.

SIR,

SInce that Aureng-Zebe began to find himſelf in better health, it hath been conſtantly reported, that he would make a Voyage to Lahor, and go from thence to Kachemire, to change the Air, and to be out of the way of the approaching Summer heats, for fear of a relapſe: That the more intelligent ſort of men would hardly be perſwaded, that as long as he kept his Father Chah-jean priſoner in the Fort of Agra, he would think it ſafe to be at ſuch a diſtance. Yet notwithſtanding we have found, that Reaſon of State hath given place to that of Health, or rather to the Intrigues of Rauchenara-Begum, who was wild to breath a more free Air than that of the Seraglio, and to have her turn in ſhewing her ſelf to a gallant and magnificent Army, as her Siſter Begum-ſaheb had formerly done during the Reign of Chah-jean.

He departed then the 6th of December, about three a clock in the afternoon; a day and hour that muſt needs be fortunate for a great Voyage, if we may give credit to the Gentlemen Aſtrologers, who have ſo decreed it. And he arrived at Chach-limar, his Houſe of Pleaſure, diſtant about two Leagues from hence; where he ſpent ſix whole dayes, thereby to give to all ſufficient time to make neceſſary preparations for a Voyage, that would take up a year and an half. We have this day news, that he is gone to encamp on the way of Lahor, and that when he hath ſtay'd there two dayes, he intends to continue his march without any further expectation. He hath with him not only the Thirty five thouſand Horſe, or thereabout, and 10000 Foot, but alſo both his Artilleries, the great or heavy, and the ſmall or lighter, which is call'd, The Artillery of the Stirrup, becauſe it is inſeparable from the perſon of the King, whereas the Heavy ſometimes leaveth him to keep the high and well beaten Roads.

The Great Artillery is made up of ſeventy pieces of Cannon, moſt of them caſt; of which ſome are ſo ponderous, that they need twenty yoke of Oxen to draw them; and ſome of them require Elephants to help all thoſe Oxen, by thruſting and drawing the wheels of the Wagons with their Trunks and Heads when they ſtick in any deep way, or are to paſs ſome ſteep mountain. That of the Stirrup is compoſed of fifty or ſixty ſmall Field-pieces, all of Braſs, each carried upon a little pritty and painted Chariot (as hath been already ſaid in another place) beautified with many little red Streamers, and drawn by two very handſom Horſes, driven by the Gunner himſelf, together with a third Horſe, which the Gunners Aſſiſtant leads for a relief. All theſe Chariots go alwaies a great pace, that they may be ſoon enough in order before the Tent of the King, and diſcharge all at once at the time of his entry, to give the Army notice.

All theſe great preparations give us cauſe to apprehend, that in ſtead of going to Kachemire, we be not led to beſiege that important City of Kandahar, which is the Frontier to Perſia, Indoſtan and Usbeck, and the Capital of an excellent Country, yielding a very great Revenue, and which for this very reaſon hath been ever the bone of contention between the Perſians and Indians. Whatever it be, there is now a neceſſity to diſpatch at Dehli, any buſineſs whatſoever notwithſtanding; and I ſhould find my ſelf much caſt behind the Army, if I ſhould tarry any longer: Beſides I know, that my Navab, or Agah Danech-mend-kan ſtays for me abroad with impatience: He can no more be without philoſophiſing in the afternoon upon the Books of Gaſſendi and Deſ-Cartes, upon the Globe and the Sphere, or upon Anatomy, than he can be without beſtowing the whole morning upon the weighty matters of the Kingdom, in the quality of Secretary of State for forrain Affairs, and of Great Maſter of the Cavalry. I ſhall depart this night, after I have given the laſt order for all my buſineſſes, and provided all neceſſaries for my Voyage, as all the principal perſons of the Cavalry do; that is, two good Tartarian Horſes, whereto I am obliged by reaſon of the one hundred and fifty Crowns of pay, which I have by the month; a Camel of Perſia, and a Groom; a Cook, and another Servant, which muſt be had ordinarily to march in theſe Countries before the Horſe, and to carry a Flagon with water in his hand. I alſo have provided the ordinary Utenſils, ſuch as are a Tent of a middle ſize, and a proportionate piece of foot-Tapiſtry; and a little Bed with girdles, made up with four ſtrong and light Canes, and a Pillow for the head; two Coverlets, whereof one folded up fourfold ſerveth for a Matraſſe; a round Table-cloth of Leather to eat upon; ſome Napkins of dyed Cloth, and three ſmall Sacks for Plate, which are put up in a greater Sack, and this ſack into a very great and ſtrong Sack made of Girdles, in which are put all the proviſions, together with the Linnen of the Maſter and Servants. I have alſo made proviſion of excellent Rice for five or ſix dayes, for fear I ſhould not alwayes find ſo good; of ſome ſweet Biſcuit, with Sugar and Anis; of a linnen ſleeve with its little iron-hook, to let, by the means thereof, run out and to keep curdled milk; and of ſtore of Limons with Sugar, to make Limonade; ſuch Milk and Limonade being the two great and ſoveraign refreſhments of the Indies: All which, as I ſaid, is put into the laſt named Sack, which is ſo large and heavy, that three or four men have pains enough to lift it up: though two men do firſt fold and turn one ſide upon the other when it is full, and though the Camel be made to ſtoop very nigh it, and there need no more than to turn one of the ſides of that Sack upon the Camel. All this equipage and proviſion is abſolutely neceſſary in ſuch Voyages as theſe. We muſt not look for ſuch good lodging and accommodations as we have in our Country. We muſt reſolve to encamp and live after the Arabian and Tartarian mode, without expecting any other Inns than Tents. Nor muſt we think to plunder the Country-man; all the Lands of the Kingdom being in propriety to the King: We are well to conſider, that we muſt be ſober and prudent, and that to ruine the Country man, were to ruine the Demeſne of the King. That which much comforts me in this march, is, that we go North-ward, and depart in the beginning of the Winter after the rains; which is the right ſeaſon for travelling in the Indies, becauſe it raineth not, and we are not ſo much incommoded by heat and duſt. Beſides that, I find my ſelf out of danger of eating the bread of Bazar, or of the Market, which ordinarily is ill baked, full of ſand and duſt; nor obliged to drink of thoſe naughty waters which being all turbid, and full of naſtineſs of ſo many people and beaſts that fetch thence, and enter into them, do cauſe ſuch fevers, which are very hard to cure, and which breed alſo certain very dangerous worms in the legs. They at firſt cauſe a great inflamation, accompanied with a fever, and ordinarily come forth a little after the Voyage, although there have been ſome, that have ſtay'd a whole year and more before they appear'd. They are commonly of the bigneſs and length of a ſmall Vial-ſtring, ſo that one would ſooner take them for ſome nerve than for a worm; and they muſt be drawn out little by little, from day to day, gently winding them about about a little twig of the bigneſs of a needle, for fear of breaking them. This, I ſay, comforteth me not a little, that I find my ſelf exempt from theſe inconveniencies; my Navab having vouchſafed me a very particular favour; which is, that he hath appointed to give me every day a new loaf of his houſe, and a Souray of the water of Ganges, with which he hath laden ſeveral Camels of his train, as the whole Court doth. Souray is that Tin-flagon full of water, which the Servant, that marcheth on foot before the Gentleman on horſeback, carrieth in his hand, wrap't up in a ſleeve of red cloth. Ordinarily it holdeth but one pinte; but I had ſome of them expreſly made, that hold two. We ſhall ſee, whether this cunning will ſucceed. The water cooleth very well in this Flagon, provided that care be had alwayes to keep the ſleeve moiſt, and that the Servant that holds it in his hand, do march and ſtir the air, or elſe that it be held towards the wind; as is commonly done upon three pretty little ſticks, croſſing one another, that they may not touch the earth; For the moiſtneſs of the linnen, the agitation of the air, or the wind, are abſolutely neceſſary to keep the water freſh; as if this moiſtneſs, or rather the water imbibed by the ſleeve did keep out the little igneous bodies or ſpirits that are in the air, at the ſame time when it giveth entrance to the nitrous or other parts, which hinder the motion in the water, and cauſe coolneſs; in the ſame manner as Glaſs keeps out Water, and giveth paſſage to the Light, by reaſon of the particular texture and diſpoſition of the parts of the Glaſs, and the diverſity there muſt be between the particles of Light and thoſe of Water. We do not uſe this Tin-flagon for keeping our water cool but in the field: When we are at home, we have Jars of a certain porous Earth, in which it is much better cooled, provided it be expos'd to the wind, and moiſten'd with a Linnen-cloth, as the Flagon; or elſe, uſe is made of Salt-peter, as all perſons of quality do, whether in Towns, or in the Army. They put water, or any other liquor, to be cooled, in a round and long necked Tin-flagon, ſuch as are the Engliſh Bottles, and for the ſpace of half a quarter of an hour this Flagon is ſtirr'd in water, into which hath been caſt three or four handfuls of Salt-peter; this maketh the water very cold, neither is it unwholſome, as I did apprehend; but only that ſometimes it cauſeth gripings at firſt when one is not accuſtomed to it.

But to what purpoſe, to play ſo much the Philoſopher, when we ſhould think to depart, and to endure the Sun, which at all ſeaſons is incommodious in the Indies, and to ſwallow the duſt, which is never wanting in the Army; to put up, to load, and to unload every day our Baggage, to help the Servants to faſten ſticks, to draw Cords, to put up Tents, and to take them down again, to march in the day, and in the night, to devour cold and heat, and in a word, to turn Arabians for a year and an half, during which time we are to be in the Field. Adieu; I ſhall not fail to acquit my ſelf of my promiſe, and from time to time to inform you of our Adventures; and beſides, ſince the Army for this time will make but ſmall Journeys in its march, and paſs on with all that pomp and magnificence, which the Kings of Indoſtan do affect, I ſhall endeavour to obſerve the moſt conſiderable things, that I may impart them to you, as ſoon as we ſhall arrive at Lahor.

THE

THE SECOND LETTER;

CONTAINING

The Number and Magnificence, the Order and the Diſpoſition of the Tents o the Great Mogol in the Field: The Number of Elephants, Camels, Mules, and Porters, neceſſary to carry them: The Diſpoſition of the Bazars or Royal Markets: That of the particular Quarters of the Omrahs, or Lords, and of the reſt of the Army: The extent of the whole Army, when encamped: The confuſion there met with; and how it may be avoided: The Order of preventing Robberies: The different Manners of the March of the King, the Princeſſes, and the reſt of the Seraglio: The danger there is in being too near the Women: The ſeveral ways of the Royal Hunting, and how the King hunts with his whole Army: The abundance of people there is in the Army, and the method of making them all ſubſiſt.

SIR,

THis indeed is called marching with gravity, and as we ſpeak here a la Mogole,: it is no more but fifteen or ſixteen dayes Journey from Dehli to Lahor, which make little more than ſixſcore Leagues; and yet we have ſpent almoſt two months on this way. 'Tis true, the King with the beſt part of the Army went ſomewhat aſide from the high way, the better to enjoy the divertiſements of Hunting, and for the conveniency of the water of Gemna, which we went to look for on the right hand, and which we leiſurely followed long enough in our hunting, croſſing fields of tall graſs, full of all ſorts of game, where the Horſemen could ſcarce be ſeen. At preſent, whilſt we are at reſt, I am going to make good what I have promiſed you in the Title of this Letter; hoping ſhortly to make you come to Kachemire, and to ſhew you one of the beſt Countries in the World.

When the King is in the field, he hath uſually two Camps, I mean two Bodies, of Tents ſeparated, to the end that when he breaketh up and leaveth one, the other may have paſſed before by a day, and be found ready when he arriveth at the place deſign'd to encamp it: And 'tis therefore, that they are called Peiche-kanes as if you ſhould ſay, Houſes going before: Theſe two Peiche-kanes are almoſt alike, and there are requiſite above threeſcore Elephants, more then two hundred Camels, above an hundred Mules, and as many more Porters to carry one of them. The Elephants carry the moſt bulky things, ſuch as are the great Tents, and their great Pillars, which being too long and too heavy, are taken down in three pieces. The Camels carry the leſſer Tents: The Mules, the Baggage and Kitchins. And to the Porters are given all the little moveables, and ſuch as are delicate and fine, that might eaſily be broken; as Porcelain, which the King uſually imployeth at Table: thoſe painted and guilded Beds, and thoſe rich Kargnais; which I ſhall ſpeak of hereafter.

One of theſe two Peiche-kanes, or Bodies of Tents, is no ſooner arrived at the place deſigned for encamping, but the Great Marſhal that orders the Lodging, chuſeth ſome fair place for the Kings Quarters; yet with a regard, as much as is poſſible, to the Symmitry and order that is to be obſerved for the whole Army; and he marketh out a Square, of which each ſide is above three hundred ordinary paces long. An hundred Pikemen preſently clear and level this pace, making ſquare planes to raiſe the Tents upon, and ſurrounding all this great Square with Kanates or Skreens ſeven or eight foot high, which they faſten with cords tyed to ſticks, and with perches fix't in the ground, by couples, from ten to ten paces, one without, and the other within, inclining the one upon the other. Theſe Kanates are made of a ſtrong cloth lined with ſtained Linnen. In the middle of one of the ſides of this Square is the Entry or Royal Gate, great and magnificent, and the Indian ſtuff which 'tis made of, as alſo thoſe Stuffs, of which the whole ſide of the Square of the face is lined without, are far better and richer than the others.

The

The first and the greatest of the Tents, that is reared in this Inclosure, is called Amkas, because it is the place where the King and all the Lords in the Army do assemble about nine a clock in the morning, when the Mokam, that is, the usual publick Meeting is held. For, the Kings of Indostan, although they are in a march, do not dispence but very rarely with this almost inviolable custom, which is pass'd into a kind of Duty and Law, viz. to appear twice a day in the Assembly, there to give order for State-Affairs, and to administer Justice.

The second, which is little less than the first, and a little further advanced into the Inclosure, is called, Gosl-kane, that is to say, a place to wash in: And here 'tis, where all the Lords every night meet, and where they come to salute and do obeisance to the King, as ordinarily they do when they are in the Metropolis. This Assembly in the evening is very inconvenient to the Omrahs; but it is a thing that looks great and stately, to see a far off, in an obscure night, in the midst of a Campagne, cross all the Tents of an Army, long files of Torches lighting these Omrahs to the Kings Quarters, and attending them back again to their Tents. 'Tis true, that these lights are not of wax as ours, but they last very long. They are only an Iron put about a stick, at the end of which are wound raggs of old Linnen from time to time, which is moistned with Oyl, held by the Link-men in their hands in a Brass, or Latton-flagon, with a long and streight neck.

The third Tent, which is not much less than the two first, and is yet further advanced into the Inclosure, is called Kalvet-kane, that is to say, a retired or the Privy Council-place, because none but the first Officers of the Kingdom enter into it; and 'tis there where the greatest and the most important Affairs are transacted.

Yet further into the Square are the particular Tents of the King, encompass'd with small Kanates or Skreens, of the height of a man, and lined with stained Indian Stuff, of that elegant workmanship of Maslipatam, which do represent an hundred sorts of different flowers: and some of them lined with flowred Sattin with large Silk fringes.

The Tents joyning to the Kings, are those of the Begum or Princesses, and the other great Ladies and She-Officers of the Seraglio, which are likewise encompass'd, as those of the King, with rich Kanates; and amidst all these Tents are placed those of the lower She-Officers, and other serving-Women, alwayes, upon the matter, in the same order, according to their Office.

The Am-kas, and the five or six principal Tents are raised high, that they may be seen at a good distance, and the better fence off the heat. Without it is nothing but a course and strong red cloth, yet beautified and striped with certain large stripes, cut variously and advantagiously to the eye: But within it is lined with those fine Indian flowred Stuffs, of the same work of Maslipatam; and this work is raised and enriched with silk, gold and silver Embroideries having great Fringes, or with some fine flowred Sattin. The Pillars supporting these Tents, are painted and guild; One marcheth on nothing but rich Tapestry, having matrasses of Cotton under them four or five inches thick, and round about these Tapestries there are great square Rails richly cover'd to lean upon.

In each of the two great Tents where the Assembly is kept, there is raised a Theater richly adorned, where the King giveth Audience under a great Canopy of Velvet, or purfled with gold. In the other Tents are found the like Canopies, and there you may see also set up certain Karguais, that is, fine Cabinets, whose little doors are shut with Silver-locks. To conceive what they are, you may represent to you two small Squares of our Skreens, set upon one another, and neatly round about fastned to one another with a Silken-string; yet so that the extremities of the sides of the uppermost come to incline upon one another, so as to make a kind of a little Tabernacle with this difference from our Skreens, that all the sides of these are of very thin and slight Firr-boards, painted and guild without, and enriched round about with gold and Silk-fringes, and lined within with Scarlet, or flowred Sattin, or purfled with Gold.

And this is very near what I can tell you of what is contained within the great Square.

What concerns the particulars that are without the Square; there are first two pretty Tents on both the two sides of the great Entry or Royal Gate, where are found two choice Horses sadled, and richly harness'd, and altogether ready to be mounted upon occasion, or rather for State and Magnificence.

On the two sides of the same Gate are placed in order those fifty or threescore small Field-

Field-pieces, that make up the Artillery of the Sirrup above mention'd, and which diſcharge all together to ſalute the King entring into his Tent, and to give notice thereof to the whole Army.

Before the Gate there is alwayes left void, as much as may be, a great place, at the end of which there is a great Tent, called Nagar-kane, becauſe that is the place of the Timbals and Trumpets.

Near this Tent there is another great one, which is called Tchauky-kane, becauſe it is the place where the Omrahs keep guard, every one in his turn, once a week twenty four hours together; yet notwithſtanding moſt of the Omrahs on the day of their guard, cauſe, cloſe by, to be rear'd one of their own Tents, to be the more at liberty, and to have more elbow room.

Round about the three other ſides of the great Square are ſet up all the Tents of the Officers, which are alwayes found in the ſame order and diſpoſition, unleſs it be that the place permit it not: They have all their peculiar names; but as they are hard to pronounce, and I pretend not to teach you the Language of the Country, it will be ſufficient to tell you, that there is a particular one for the Arms of the King; another for the rich Harneſſes of Horſes; another for Veſts purfled with Gold, which are the ordinary Preſents beſtow'd by the King. Beſides, there are four more, near one another; the firſt of which is deſigned for keeping Fruit; the ſecond for Comfits; the third for Ganges water, and the Salt-peter to cool it; and the fourth for the Betele, which is that Leaf, whereof I have ſpoken elſewhere, which is offered to friends, as Coffee is in Turkie, and chew'd to make ruddy lips, and a ſweet breath. Next to theſe, there are fifteen or ſixteen others that ſerve for Kitchins and what belongs to them. Amongſt all theſe Tents are thoſe of a great number of Officers and Eunuchs. Laſtly, there are four or five long ones for led Horſes, and ſome others for the beſt Elephants; and all thoſe that are for hunting. For there muſt needs be a retreat for all that great number of Birds of prey, that are always carried for Game and Magnificence; and ſo there muſt be for thoſe many Dogs, and thoſe Leopards ſerving to take wild Goats; for thoſe Nilgans, or gray Oxen, which I take for Elcks; for theſe Lions and Rhinoceroſ's, that are led for greatneſs; for thoſe great Bufalo's of Bengale fighting with Lions; and laſtly for thoſe tamed wild Goats, they call Gazelles, that are made to ſport before the King.

This vaſt number of Tents, now ſpoken of, together with thoſe that are within the great Square, make up the King's Quarter, which is always in the middle, and as 'twere in the center of the Army, except the place do not allow it. It will eaſily be thence concluded, that this Quarter of the King muſt needs be ſomething great and royal, and afford a very fine proſpect, if one behold from ſome high place this great body of red Tents in the midſt of the Army, encamped in a fair and even Campagne, where may be fully ſeen all that order and diſpoſition that is to be obſerved in the whole.

After that the Great Marſhal of the Camp hath choſen a place fit for the Kings's Quarter, and hath made the Am-kas to be ſet up higheſt of all the Tents, and by which he is to take his meaſure for the ordering and diſpoſing the reſt of the Army accordingly; He then marketh out the Royal Bazars or Markets, whence the whole Army is furniſht with neceſſaries; drawing the firſt and the chief of all, like a great Street running ſtraight, and a great free way traverſing the whole Army, now on the right hand, and by and by on the left of the Am-kas and the King's Quarter, and always in the ſtraighteſt line that may be towards the encamping of the next day. All the Royal Bazars, that are neither ſo long nor ſo broad, commonly croſs this firſt, ſome on this, others on the other ſide of the King's Quarter; and all theſe Bazars are diſcern'd by very high Canes like great pearches, which are fixt in the ground from three hundred to three hundred paces or thereabout, with red Standards, and Cows-tailes of the great Tibet faſtned on the top of theſe Canes like Perirwigs.

The ſame Marſhal deſigns, next, the place of the Omrahs, ſo as they may always keep the ſame order, and be ever as near as may be the King's Quarter; ſome on the right, others on the left hand, ſome on this ſide of him, others beyond him; ſo that none of them may change the place that hath been once appointed for him, or that himſelf hath deſired in the begining of the Voyage.

The Quarters of the Omrahs and Rajas, as to their particular order and diſpoſition, are to be imagined in a manner like that of the King: For commonly they have two Peiche-kanes with a Square of Kanates, which incloſeth their principal Tent and thoſe of their Women; and round about theſe are put up the Tents of their Officers and Cavaliers, with a peculiar Bazar, which is a ſtreet of ſmall Tents for the lower ſort of people that follows the Army, and furniſheth the Camp with Forage, Grains, Rice, Butter, and the other things that are moſt neceſſary; whereby they are ſo accommodated, that they need not always go to the Royal Bazars, where generally all things are to be found as in the Capital City. Each Bazar is marked at the two ends by two Canes planted in the ground, which are ast all as thoſe of the Royal Bazars, that ſo at a good diſtance the particular Standards faſtned to to them may be diſcovered, and the ſeveral quarters diſtinguiſh't from one another.

The Great Omrahs and Rajas affect to have their Tents very high. But they muſt beware leſt they be too high, becauſe it may happen, that the King, paſſing by, might perceive it, and command them to be thrown down; of which we have ſeen an example in this laſt march. Neither muſt they be altogether red from without, ſince thoſe of the King alone are to be ſo. Laſtly, out of reſpect they muſt all look towards the Am-kas, or the Quarter of the King.

The reſidue of the ſpace between the Kings Quarter, and thoſe of the Omrahs and the Bazars, is taken up by the Tents of the Manſeb-dars or little Omrahs, and of that infinite number of great and ſmall Merchants that follow the Army; of all thoſe that belong to the Law; and laſtly, of all ſuch as ſerve both the Artilleries: Which maketh indeed a prodigious number of Tents, and requireth a very great extent of ground. Yet it is not all true what is ſaid of either of them. And I believe, that when the whole Army is in a fair and even Campagne, where it may encamp with eaſe, and that, following the ordinary plot, it comes at length to be lodged, as near as may be, in a round (as we have often ſeen it does, upon this road) the compaſs of it will not be above two Leagues, or two Leagues and an half; and with all this there will yet be left here and there ſeveral void places. But then the great Artillery, which taketh up a great tract of ground, very often a day or two go before.

Nor is all true, what is ſaid of the ſtrange confuſion, which commonly ſtrikes an aſtoniſhment into all new comers. For a little acquaintance with the method of the Army, and ſome heeding of the order obſerved in the Camp, will ſoon enable one to avoid all embaraſment, and to go to and fro about his buſineſs, and to find his quarter again; foraſmuch as every one regulateth himſelf by the King's Quarter, and the particular Tents and Standards of the Omrahs, that may be ſeen afar off, and by the Standards and Perriwigs of the Royal Bazars, which may alſo be ſeen at a great diſtance.

Yet for all theſe marks it will ſometimes fall out, that one ſhall be extreamly perplexed, and even in the day time, but eſpecially in the morning, when a world of people do arrive, and every one of thoſe is buſie and ſeeks to lodge himſelf: And that not only, becauſe there is often raiſed ſo great a duſt, that the King's Quarter, the Standards of the Bazars and the Omrahs (which might ſerve for guides) cannot be diſcover'd: But becauſe a man finds himſelf between Tents that are putting up, and between cords, which the leſſer Omrahs, that have no Peiche-kane, and the Manſeb-dars ſtretch out to mark their lodgings, and to hinder, that no way may be made nigh them, or that no unknown perſon may come to lodge near their Tents, where often they have their Women: If in this caſe you mean to get by on one ſide, you will find the wayes obſtructed by thoſe ſtretched-out cords, which a troup of mean Serving-men ſtanding there with big cudgels, will not ſuffer to be lower'd, to ſuffer the Baggage to paſs: If you will turn back, you'l find the wayes ſhut ſince you paſſed. And here it is, where you muſt cry out, ſtorm, intreat, make as if you would ſtrike, and yet well beware of doing ſo, leaving the men, as well as you can, to quarrel againſt one another, and afterwards to accord them for fear of ſome miſchief; and in ſhort, to put your ſelf into all imaginable poſtures to get away thence, and to make your Camels paſs: But the great trouble is, when a man is obliged to go in an evening to a place ſomewhat remote; becauſe that thoſe offenſive ſmoaks of the fire of green Wood, of Cowſhares, of Camel-dung, which the common people then make in their kitchins, do raiſe a miſt (eſpecially when there is no wind) ſo thick, that you can ſee nothing at all. I have been three or four times ſurprized with it, ſo as not to know what to do. Well might I ask the way; I knew not whither I went, and I did nothing but turn. Once, among other times, I was conſtrained to ſtay ſtill this miſt paſſed, and the Moon riſen. And another time I was forced to get to the Aguacy-die, to lye down at the foot thereof, and there to paſs all the night as well as I could, having my Servant and Horſe by me. This Aguacy-die is like a tall Maſt, but very ſlender, which can be taken down in three pieces, and 'tis planted toward the King's Quarter, near that Tent which is called Nagar-kane. In the evening is drawn up to the top of it a Lanthorn with a light burning in it all night long; which is very commodious, as being ſeen a great way off; and thither it is that people gone aſtray do retire, from thence to get again to the Bazars, and to ask the way, or there to paſs the reſt of the night; for no body hinders one from doing ſo, and a man may be there in ſafety from Robbers. It is called Aguaeydie, as if you ſhould ſay, light of Heaven, in regard that from a far off it appears like a Star.

For the prevention of Robberies, each Omrah cauſeth a guard to be kept all the night long, in his particular Camp, of ſuch men that perpetually go the round, and cry Kaber-dar, have a care. Beſides, there are round about the Army ſet guards, at five hundred common paces from one another, that keep a fire, and cry alſo Kaber-dar. And over and above all theſe, the Cotoual, who is, as 'twere, the great Prevoſt, ſends out Troups of Guards every way, that paſs through all the Bazars, crying out and trumpetting all night long. Yet for all this, ſome robberries there are now and then committed; and 'tis neceſſary alwayes to be upon ones guard, to go to ſleep by times, that ſo you may be awake the reſt of the night, and not to truſt your ſervants too much to keep guard for you.

But let us now ſee, how many different wayes the Great Mogol is carried in the Field.

Ordinarily he cauſeth himſelf to be carried on mens ſhoulders, in a kind of Sedan or Litter, upon which is a Tact-raven, that is, a Field-throne, on which he is ſeated: And this is like a magnificent Tabernacle with pillars, painted and guilded, which may be ſhut with glaſs, when 'tis ill weather; the four branches of the Litter are cover'd with Scarlet or purpled Gold, with great Gold and Silk-fringes; and at each branch there are two robuſt and well-cloathed Porters, that change by turns with as many more that follow.

Sometimes alſo he goeth on Horſe-back, eſpecially when 'tis a fair day for hunting. At other times he rideth on an Elephant, in a Mik-dember, or Hauze; and this is the moſt ſplendid appearance: For, the Elephant is decked with a very rich and very magnificent Harnaſs; the Mik-dember, being a little ſquare Houſe or Turret of Wood, is alwayes painted and guilded; and the Hauze, which is an Oval ſeat, having a Canopy with Pillars over it, is ſo likewiſe.

In theſe different Marches he is alwayes accompanied with a great number of Omrahs and Rajas following him cloſe and thick on horſe-back without any great order: And all thoſe that are in the Army are obliged to be at the Amkas at break of day, unleſs he do exempt them from it upon the account either of their peculiar Office, or their great Age. This march is very inconvenient to them, eſpecially on hunting dayes; for they muſt endure the Sun and Duſt as the ſimple Souldiers, and that ſometimes until three of the clock in the afternoon; whereas, when they do not attend the King, they go at eaſe in their Palekys, cloſe cover'd, if they pleaſe, free from the Sun and Duſt; ſleeping in them couched all along as in a bed, and ſo coming in good time to their Tent, which expects them with a ready dinner, their kitchin being gone the night before, after ſupper. About the Omrahs, and amongſt them, there is alwayes a good number of Horſe-men well mounted, call'd Gourze-berdars, becauſe they carry a kind of Silver-Mace of Armes. There are alſo many of them about the right and left wings, that precede the perſon of the King, together with ſtore of Foot men. Theſe Gourze-berdars are Choice-men, of a good mien and a fair ſtature, appointed to carry orders, and having all of them great ſticks in their hands, whereby they put people aſide at a good diſtance, and hinder that no body march before the King to incommode him.

After the Rajas marcheth a train mixed of a great number of Timbals and Trumpets. I have already ſaid in another place, that this Train conſiſts of nothing but of figures of Silver repreſenting ſtrange Animals, Hands, Scales, Fiſhes, and other myſterious things, that are carried at the end of great Silver-ſticks.

At laſt a great troup of Manſeb-dars, or little Omrahs, well mounted, and furniſht with Swords, Arrows and Quivers, follow after all the former: And this Body is much more numerous than that of the Omrahs, becauſe, beſides that all thoſe that are of the Guard dare not fail to be at break of day, as the Omrahs, at the gate of the Kings Tent to accompany him: There are alſo many, that come amongſt them, to make their Court, and to become known there.

The Princesses, and the great Ladies of the Seraglio are also carried in sundry fashions; some are carried, like the King, on mens shoulders, in a Tchaudoule, which is a kind of Tatiravan, painted, guilded, and cover'd with great and costly Net-work of Silk of divers colours, enriched with Embroidery, Fringe, and thick pendant tufts. Others are carried in a very handsome Palekys closed, that are likewise painted and guilded, and covered with that rich silken net-work. Some are carried in large Litters by two strong Camels, or by two small Elephants, instead of Mules: and in this manner I have sometimes seen carried Rauchenara-Begum; when I also observed, that in the fore-part of her Litter, being open, there was a little She-slave, that with a peacocks-tail kept off from her the Flyes and Dust. Lastly, others are carried upon Elephants richly harnessed, and cover'd with embroider'd deckings, and great Silver-bells; where those Ladies sit, raised, as 'twere, into the middle region of the Air, four and four in Mik-dembers latticed, which always are cover'd with silken Net-work, and are no less splendid and stately than the Tchaudoules and Tatiravans.

I cannot forbear relating here, that in this Voyage I took a particular pleasure in beholding and considering this pompous march of the Seraglio. And certainly nothing more stately can be imagined, than to see Rauchenara-Begum march first, mounted upon a lusty Elephant of Pegu in a Mik-dember, all shining of Gold and Azur, attended by five or six other Elephants with their Mik-dembers, almost as splendid as hers, filled with the principal She-Officers of her House; some of the most considerable Eunuchs, richly adorned, and advantagiously mounted, riding on her side, each with a Cane in his hand; a Troup of Tartarian and Kachemirian Maids, of Honour about her, odly and fantastically dressed, and riding on very pretty Hackney-horses; and lastly, many other Eunuchs on Horseback accompanied with store of Pages and Lackeys, with great sticks in their hands, to make way afar off. After this Rauchenara-Begum, I saw pass one of the principal Ladies of the Court, mounted and attended in proportion: And after this, a third in the same fashion; and then another, and so on to fifteen or sixteen all, (more or less) bravely mounted and accompanied accordiug to their quality, pay, and office. Indeed this long file of Elephants to the number of fifty, or sixty, or more, thus gravely marching with paces, as 'twere, counted, and withal this gallant train and equipage, does represent something that is Great and Royal; and if I had not beheld this Pomp with a kind of philosophical indifference, I know not, whether I should not have suffered my self to be carried away to those extravagant sentiments of most of the Indian Poets, who will have it, that all these Elephants carry as many hidden Goddesses. 'Tis true, one can hardly see them, and they are almost inaccessible by men; it would be a great misfortune to any poor Cavalier whosoever, to be found in the Field too near them in the march; all those Eunuchs, and all the crue of Servants are to the highest degree insolent, and desire nothing more than such a pretext and occasion to fall upon a man and give him some Bastinadoes. I remember, I was once thus unfortunately surprized, and certainly I had been very ill used, as well as many other Cavaliers, if at length I had not resolved to make my way out by my sword, rather than suffer my self to be thus maimed as they began to order the matter; and if by good luck I had not been provided with a good Horse, that carried me vigorously out of the press, when I put him on thorow a torrent of people, that was to be repassed. And it is grown in a manner a common Proverb of these Armies, That, above all, one must beware of three things: First, Not to let one self to be engaged amongst the troups of the chosen led Horse, they never failing to strike: Secondly, not to come into the places of Hunting: Thirdly, not to approach too near the Women of the Seraglio. Yet notwithstanding by what I hear, it is much less dangerous here than in Persia; for there 'tis death to be found in the field in sight of the Eunuchs that attend them, though you were half a league distant from them. It is required, that as many men as there are in the Villages and Burroughs, where they pass, do all abandon them and retire afar off.

As to the Hunting of the King, I knew not first how to imagine what is commonly said, which is, that the Great Mogol goes to hunt with an hundred thousand men: But now I see, it may very well be said, that he goes to hunt with above two hundred thousand; nor is it a thing hard to comprehend. In the neighbouring places to Agra and Dehli, along the river Gemna as far as to the mountains, and even on both sides of the high way to Labor, there is abundance of untilled Lands, some of Copse-wood, and some of Grass above a mans height: In all these places there are great numbers of Guards, uncessantly roving up and down, and hindering all other people from huntin except Partridges, Quailes and Hares, which the Indians know to take with nets: So that every where in thoſe places there is very great ſtore of all kind of Game. This being ſo, the hunting guards, when they know that the King is in the field, and near their quarters, give notice, to the Great Hunting-maſter, of the quality of the Game, and of the place where moſt of it is: then the Guards do line all the avenues of that quarter, and that ſometimes for above four or five Leagues of ground, that ſo the whole Army may paſs by, either this or that way, and the King being in his march may at the ſame time enter into it with as many Omrahs, Hunters and other perſons as he ſhall pleaſe, and there hunt at his eaſe, now in one manner and then in another, according to the difference of the Game. And now behold firſt, how he hunteth the Gazelles or wild Fawns with tamed Leopards.

I think, I have elſe where told you, that in the Indies there is ſtore of Gazelles, that are in a manner ſhaped as our Hinds or Fawns; that theſe Gazelles commonly go in ſeveral troups, and that every troup, which never conſiſts of above five or ſix, is alwaies follow'd by one only male, diſcernable by the colour. One of ſuch troups being diſcover'd, they endeavour to make the Leopard ſee them, who is held chain'd upon a little chariot. This crafty animal doth not preſently and directly run after them, but goes winding and turning, ſtopping and hiding himſelf, ſo to approach them with more advantage, and to ſurprize them: And as he is capable to make five or ſix leaps with an almoſt incredible ſwiftneſs, when he finds he is within reach, he lanceth himſelf upon them, worrieth them, and gluts himſelf with their blood, heart and liver: If he faileth (which often happens) he ſtands ſtill, and it would be in vain for him to attempt to take them by running after them, becauſe they run much faſter, and hold out longer than he. Then the Maſter comes gently about him, flattering him, and throwing him ſome pieces of fleſh, and thus amuſing him, puts ſomething over his eyes to cover them, and ſo chains him, and puts him upon the chariot again. One of theſe Leopards gave us once in our march this divertiſement, which frighted ſtore of people. A troup of Gazelles appear'd in the midſt of the Army, as they will do every day; it chanced that they paſſed cloſe to two Leopards that were carried, as they uſe to be, upon their little chariot. One of them not blinded, made ſuch an effort that he burſt his chain, and darted himſelf after them, but without catching any of them: Yet the Gazelles, not knowing which way to eſcape, being purſued, cried after, and hunted on every ſide, there was one of them that was forced to repaſs again near the Leopard, who, notwithſtanding the Camels and Horſes that peſtred all the way, and contrary to what is commonly ſaid of this Beaſt, that it never returns to its prey when it hath once failed of it, flew upon it and caught it.

The hunting of the Nilgaux or gray Oxen, which I ſaid were a kind of Elcks, hath no great matter in it. They are incloſed in great Nets, that are by little and little drawn cloſer together, and when they are reduced to a ſmall compaſs of encloſure, the King, the Omrahs, and the Hunters do enter and kill them at pleaſure with Arrows, Half-pikes, Sables or Muſquets; and ſometimes in ſo great numbers, that the King ſends quarters of them for preſents to all the Omrahs.

The Game of the Cranes hath ſomething of divertiſement. 'Tis a pleaſure to ſee them defend themſelves in the Air againſt the Birds of prey; they ſometimes kill ſome of them; but at length, not being nimble in turning, many ſtrong Birds maſter them.

Of all the Games that of the Lion is the moſt Royal, becauſe there is none but the King and the Princes that can exerciſe it (unleſs it be by a very particular leave;) but it is alſo the moſt dangerous. The manner of it is this. When the King is in the field, and the Hunting-guards have diſcover'd the place of the Lions retirement; they tye faſt an Aſs there-about, which the Lion ſoon comes to devour, and without caring to look out for other prey, as Oxen, Cows, Mutton or Shepherds, he goes to ſeek for drink, and returns to his ordinary lodging place, where he lyes down and ſleeps until next morning, when he finds another Aſs in the ſelf-ſame place, which the Hunters have faſtned there as the day before; and when they have thus baited and amuſed him ſeveral dayes in the ſame place, and now know that the King is nigh, they at length tye faſt another Aſs, but whom they have made to ſwallow a quantity of opium, to the end that his fleſh may the better lull aſleep the Lion, and then all the Country-men of the circumjacent Villages ſpread large and ſtrong nets made for that purpoſe, which they alſo by degrees reduce to a ſmall compaſs, as is practiſed in the hunting of the Nilgaux. All things thus prepar'd, the King mounted on an Elephant trap'd with iron, iron, being attended by the great Hunting-maſter, ſome Omrahs riding alſo on Elephants, by abundance of Gourze-berdars on Horſe-back, and by a numerous Hunting-guard on foot, arm'd with Half-pikes, approacheth to the Nets from without, and with a great Muſquet ſhoots at the Lion; who when he finds himſelf wounded, comes directly to the Elephant, as his cuſtom is; but he meets with thoſe big Nets ſtopping him, and the King ſhoots ſo often at him, that at laſt he kills him. Yet in this laſt hunting there was a Lion that leapt over theſe Nets, fell upon an Horſeman whoſe Horſe he kill'd, and then ran away: But the Hunters met with him, and incloſed him again in the Net, which cauſed a great diſturbance to the Army; we were three or four dayes padling in ſmall torrents running down the mountains, betwixt underwood and ſuch long graſs as that Camels hardly can be ſeen therein; and happy were theſe that had ſome proviſion of victuals; for all was in diſorder: The Bazars could not range themſelves, and the Villages were remote. The reaſon why we were to ſtop there ſo long, was, that as it is a good Omen with the Indians when the King kills a Lion, ſo it is a very ill one, when he faileth, and they think that the State would run great hazard if they ſhould not maſter him. Hence 'tis alſo that they make many Ceremonies upon the account of this Hunting; for they bring the dead Lion before the King in the general Aſſembly of the Omrahs, and after he hath been well viewed and exactly meaſur'd, 'its recorded in the Archives, that ſuch a King, at ſuch a time, ſlew a Lion of ſuch a bigneſs, of ſuch hair, of ſo long and large teeth and claws, not omitting the leaſt circumſtances.

I ſhall here only add a word in reference to what is commonly ſaid of the Opium, that the Aſs is made to ſwallow, viz. That one of the chief Hunters aſſur'd me, that it was but a tale of the vulgar, and that the Lion ſlept ſufficiently without it, when he had his belly full.

Now to return to our march; when the great Rivers, which in theſe quarters commonly have no Bridges, are to be paſſed, there are made two Boat-Bridges, about two or three hundred paces diſtant from one another; which they know well enough how to chain and faſten together. Upon them they caſt earth and ſtraw mingled together, which preventeth the ſliding of the animals. The firſt paſſing upon, and the coming from it are only dangerous, becauſe, that beſides the great croud, which then commonly throngeth, and the great confuſion and embaraſment, it often happens that pits or holes are made when 'tis moving earth; and then you ſhall have Horſes and burthen'd Oxen tumble upon one another, over whom people do paſs with an incredible diſorder; which would be yet greater, if all were to paſs in one day: But ordinarily the King encampeth but half a League from the Bridge, where he ſtays a day or two, and he never almoſt encampeth farther than half a League from the River on the other ſide of the Bridge, that ſo the Army may have at leaſt three days and three nights to paſs more conveniently, Laſtly, as to the number of people that is found in the Army, it is not ſo eaſie a thing to determine it. It is ſo differently ſpoken of, that one knows not what to judge of it. What I can tell you of it in the general, that is moſt probable, is this: That in this march there were at leaſt, as to Souldiers and others, an hundred thouſand Horſemen, and above an hundred and fifty thouſand Animals, as Horſes, Mules or Elephants; that there were near fifty thouſand Camels, and almoſt as many Oxen or Aſſes, that ſerve to carry the grain, and other proviſions of theſe poor people of the Bazars, their wives and children: For they lugg all with them, as our Bohemians do. Upon this meaſure you may reckon pretty near the number of the ſerving people, ſuppoſing that nothing is there done but by the force of ſervants, and that I, who am but in the rank of a Cavalier of two Horſes, can hardly do my buſineſs with leſs than three men: Some ſay, that in the whole Army, there is ſcarce leſs than between three or four hundred thouſand perſons. Others reckon more; others leſs. No body ever told them to determine the preciſe number. I can ſay nothing of certainty, but only that 'tis a prodigious and almoſt incredible number; but then you are to imagine, that 'tis all Delhi, the Capital City, that marcheth, becauſe that all the Inhabitans of that Town, living upon the Court and the Army, are obliged to follow them, eſpecially when the voyage is to be long, as this; or elſe they muſt ſtarve.

The difficulty is to know, whence and how ſo great an Army can ſubſiſt in the Field, ſo vaſt a number of people and beaſts. For that, we muſt only ſuppoſe (which is very true) that the Indians live very ſoberly, and obſerve a very ſimple diet, and that of all this great number of Cavaliers there is not the tenth, or not the twentieth man, that in his march eats fleſh: provided they have their Kichery, that is, their mixture of Rice and of other legums, upon which they pour butter when they are boyled, they are content. We are alſo to know, that Camels endure labour, hunger and thirſt extreamly well, live upon a little, and eat almoſt any thing, and that aſſoon as the Army encampeth any where, the Camel-drivers let them go into the field to brouze, where they eat whatever they light upon. Beſides, that the Merchants that entertain Bazars in Debli, are obliged to entertain them in the field: and that all the ſmall Merchants, that keep ſhop in the Bazars of Debli, keep them alſo in the Army, either by force, or out of neceſſity; and laſtly, that as to Forage, all theſe poor people go roving up and down every where in the Village, to buy what they can get, and to gain ſomething by it; and their great and common refuge is, with a kind of Trowel to raſpe or knock down whole fields, to beat and waſh what they have there gotten, and ſo tō carry it to ſell to the Army, which they do ſometimes very dear and ſometimes very Cheap; I forgot to mention one thing that's remarkable, viz. that the King enters into the Camp, now on one ſide, then on another; and that to day he paſſeth near the Tents of certain Omrahs, and to morrow near thoſe of others. Which he doth not without deſign; for the Omrahs, which he paſſeth by ſo near, are obliged to meet him, and to make him ſome ſmall preſent or other; ſo that ſome will preſent him with twenty Roupies of Gold, which maketh thirty Piſtols; others with fifty, and ſo others in proportion, according to their generoſity, and the greatneſs of their pay.

For the reſt, you will excuſe me, that I do not obſerve to you the Towns and Burroughs that are between Debli and Lahor; I have ſeen in a manner none of them, for I went almoſt always croſs the fields, and in the night, becauſe my Agah was not placed in the middle of the Army, where often is the high way, but very forward in the right Wing. We went as well as we could by Star-light croſs the fields to gain the right Wing of the Camp, without ſeeking for the high way; though ſometimes we found our ſelves much perplexed, and in lieu of three or four Leagues, which is the ordinary diſtance of one encampment from one another, we ſometimes made five or ſix; but when the day comes on, we ſoon found our ſelves where we ſhould be.

THE THIRD LETTER.

A Deſcription of Lahor, the Capital of Penjeab, or, The Kingdom of the Five Waters.

SIR,

IT is not without reaſon, that this Kingdom, of which Lahor is the Capital City, is called Penjeab, or the Country of the Five Waters, becauſe there are actually Five conſiderable Rivers coming down from thoſe Mountains, within which the Kingdom of Kachemire is lock'd up, and that run croſs this tract of Land to fall into the River Indus, diſcharging themſelves together into the Ocean at Scyndi, towards the entry of the Perſian Gulph. Whether Lahor be that ancient Bucephalos, I decide not. Mean time, Alexander is ſufficiently known here under the name of Sekan-der Filifons, that is, Alexander Son of Philip; but as to his Horſe, they know it not. The City of Lahor is built upon one of theſe Five Rivers, which is not leſs than our River Loire, and for which there is great need of a like bank, becauſe it maketh great devaſtation, and often changeth its bed, and hath but lately retired it ſelf from Lahor for a quarter of a League; which very much incommodeth the Inhabitants. The Houſes of Lahor have this peculiar above thoſe of Debli and Agra, that they are very high, but moſt of them are ruinous, becauſe 'tis now more then twenty years that the Court is alwayes at Debli or at Agra, and that in theſe later years the rains have been ſo exceſſive, that they have overthrown many of them, whereby alſo much people hath been killed. 'Tis true, there remain ſtill five or ſix conſiderable Streets, of which there are two or three that are above a League long; but in them alſo are many buildings found that fall down. The Kings Palace is no longer upon the River ſide, as it was formerly, becauſe cauſe that the River hath left it. It is very high, and magnificent; yet thoſe of Agra and Debli do much ſurpaſs it. It is now above two months that we are here, expecting the melting of the Snow of the mountains of Kachemire, for a more convenient paſſage into that Kingdom. But at length we are to depart to morrow. The King hath been gone theſe two dayes. I have got a little Kachemirian Tent, which I bought yeſterday. I was adviſed to do like others, and to leave here my ordinary Tent, which is big and heavy enough, becauſe, they ſay, that between the mountains of Kachemire, whither we are now marching, it will be difficult to find room enough, and that the Camels not having place enough to paſs, we ſhall be obliged to get our Baggage carried by Porters, and that ſo my large Tent would coſt me much to carry. Adieu.

THE FOURTH LETTER.

SIR,

I Believed, that after we had overcome the heats of Maok, near Babel-mandel, I could defie thoſe of the reſt of the Earth, but ſince theſe four dayes that the Army left Labor, I find I come very ſhort of my reckoning, and I have experimented to the hazard of my life, that it is not without reaſon, that the Indians themſelves did apprehend the eleven or twelve dayes march of the Army, from Labor to Bamber, the entry of the mountains of Kachemire. I proteſt unto you, without any exaggaration, that the heats have been ſo exceſſive, that ſometimes they have reduced me to extremity, inſomuch that I knew not in the morning whether I ſhould live till night. The cauſe of this extraordinary heat is, that the high mountains of Kachemire being on the North of our road, keep from us all the cool wind that might come and refreſh us from that Quarter, and do reflect the ſun-beams upon us, and leave the field burnt up and choaking. But to what purpoſe, to play the Philoſopher, and to ſeek reaſons for that, which perhaps will kill me to morrow.

THE FIFTH LETTER.

SIR,

I Paſſed yeſterday one of the greateſt Rivers of the Indies, called the Tchenau. The excellency of its water, of which the great Omrahs make proviſion in lieu of that of Ganges: (whereof they have drunk hitherto) keeps me from believing this to be ſome River to paſs to Hell, rather than to Kachemire, where they would make us believe we ſhall find Snow and Ice: For I find it grow worſe and worſe every day, and that the more we advance, the more heat we feel. 'Tis true that I paſs'd the Bridge at Noonday; but I almoſt knew not, which was beſt, to march in the field, or to keep ones ſelf ſtuff'd up under a Tent: At leaſt, I have ſucceeded in my deſign, which was, to paſs the Bridge with eaſe, whilſt all men did repoſe themſelves, expecting to leave the Camp towards evening when the Heat is not ſo violent; whereas if I had ſtaid as the reſt did, ſome miſchief perhaps might have befallen me. For it hath been, I hear, the moſt terrible confuſion, and the greateſt diſorder that ever was in any the like former paſſage from Debli; the entring upon the firſt Boat, and the going off from the laſt, having been made very difficult, becauſe it was meer moving ſand, which as people marched upon it, and ſtirr'd it, did ſlide away into the water, and left a pit; inſomuch that a great number of Camels, Oxen and Horſes were in the crowd overthrown and trampled under foot, and ſtore of blows diſtributed beſides: There are ordinarily, upon ſuch occaſions, ſome Officers and Cavaliers of the Omrahs, who to make way for their Maſters and their Baggage, are not ſparing of them. My Navab hath loſt one of his Camels with the Iron Oven it carried; which maketh me apprehend, I ſhall be reduced to the bread of Bazar. Farewel.

THE

THE SIXTH LETTER.

SIR,

IT is too much curiosity, 'tis folly, or at least temerity in an European to expose himself to such heats and dangerous marches; It is putting ones self into manifest peril of life. Yet notwithstanding, misfortune is good for something. Whilst we stayed at Lahor, I was seized on by a Flux, and by gripings, which did very much incommode me; caused by my constant lying upon a Terrasse, and taking the cool of the night, as we use to do at Debli without danger. But since we have been marching these eight or nine dayes, the sweat hath dissipated all those humors. My body is become a right Sieve, very dry, and I have no sooner taken into my stomach a pint of water (for less will not serve our turn) but I see it at the same time issue out of my limbs like a dew to the very ends of my fingers. I believe I have this day drunk above ten pints. And this is some comfort, that one may drink of it as much as one lists without danger, provided it be good water.

The SEVENTH LETTER, to the same.

VVritten from the Camp of the Army, marching from Lahor to Kachemire, the tenth of March in the morning.

SIR,

The Sun is but just now rising, yet he is intolerable; there is not a Cloud in the Sky, not a breath of Wind; my horses are spent, they have not seen a green Herb since we came out of Lahor; my Indians for all their black, dry, and hard Skin, sink under it. My face, hands and feet are peeled off, and my body is covered all over with pimples, that prick me as so many needles. Yesterday one of our poor Cavaliers, that had no Tent, was found dead at the foot of a small Tree, he had seized on. I doubt, whether I shall outlive this days journey; all my hope is in a little dry curdled Milk, which I am going to dilute with Water and Sugar, and some Limons, I have left, to make Limonade. Farewel; the Ink dryeth at the end of my Pen, and the Pen falls out of my hand. Farewell.

The EIGHTH LETTER, to the same.

VVritten from Bember, the Entry of the Mountains of Kachemire, after having two days encamped there. VVhat Bember is; the change of carriages for the Mountains; the incredible number of Porters, and the order observed in the Army.

SIR,

WE are at length arriv'd at Bember, the foot of a steep, black, and burn'd Mountain, and we are encamped in the channel of a large Torrent dried up, full of sand and stones burning hot; It is like an hot Oven: And if it were not for the shower of Rain, we had this morning, and for the curled Milk, the Limons, and the Fowl brought to us from the mountains, I know not what would have become of me, and you would perhaps never have seen this Letter. But, God be thanked, I feel the Air a little cooler; my Stomach, Strength and Tongue are returned. So then take this account of our new kind of march and trouble.

Yester-night the King first of all, together with Rauchenara-Begum, and the other Women of the Seraglio, the Raja Ragnat that performs the Office of the Vizir, and Fasel-kan the High Steward, went away from this burning place, and last night the great Hunting-master departed with some of the greatest and most necessary Officers of the Royal Family, and many considerable Women. This night 'tis our turn; my Navab Danech-mend-kan will go away, and Mahmet-Emir-kan, the Son of that famous Emir-jemla, of whom I have spoken so much in another place, will be of our Company; and so will Diamet-kan, our good friend, with his two Sons, and many other Omrahs, Rajahs and Mansab-dars: And after us, all the other Lords, that are bound for Kachemire, will be gone all in their turns, to avoid in these difficult and narrow ways of the mountains, the trouble and confusion, during these five days of marching between this place and Kachemire. All the rest of the Court, as Fedaykan, the great Master of the Artillery, three or four great Rajas, and many Omrahs, are to ſtay hereabout for a guard, during three or four months, , until the King do return after the great heats are over. Some ſhall go to dreſs their Tents on the one ſide of the River Tchenau, others in the neighbouring Towns and Burroughs, and others will be obliged to camp here in this Fire of Bember.

The King for fear of ſtarving this ſmall Kingdom of Kachemire, firſt carries with him the leaſt number of Women he can, the greateſt Ladies, the beſt friends of Rauchenara-Begum, and thoſe that are moſt neceſſary for ſervice. Nor doth he carry more of the Omrahs and Militia than he needs muſt: And the Omrahs that have leave to come with him cannot take with them all the Cavaliers, but only 25 of 100, yet without comprehending therein the particular Officers of their Family. And that is to be religiouſly obſerv'd, becauſe there is an Omrah upon the Guard at the entry of the Mountains, that reckons all that paſs, one by one, and hinders the paſſing of that great number of Manſeb-dars and other Cavaliers, that would fain go and enjoy the cool Air of Kachemire; as alſo all thoſe ſmall Merchants and little people of Bazar that ſeek to gain a livelyhood. The King, for the carriage of neceſſaries and the Women of the Seraglio, taketh with him ſome of the ſtrongeſt and beſt Elephants: Theſe Beaſts, though groſs and unwieldy, are very ſure-footed, and in ill way they march very warily, aſſuring themſelves firſt of one foot before they remove the other. He taketh alſo ſome Mules with him; but Camels, the moſt neceſſary, he cannot make uſe of in this paſſage; theſe Mountains being too ſteep and craggy for their long ſhanked and ſtiff leggs: Porters muſt ſupply their places; and what number you think muſt there be, if the King alone, as they ſay, hath above ſix thouſand for his occaſions, and I, a private man, though I have left at Labor my ordinary Tent and much of my baggage, as every one hath done, even the King himſelf and the Omrahs, find my ſelf obliged to have three of them? 'Tis believed, there are already no leſs here than fifteen thouſand, partly of thoſe which the Governour of Kachemire and the Rajas here about have compelled to be here, partly of thoſe that come hither of their own accord out of the neighbouring Villages to earn ſomething; for a man is obliged, following the Kings order, to give them ten Crowns for an hundred pound weight. 'Tis ſaid, that, in all, there are above thirty thouſand of them, without reckoning that a month ago the King and the Omrahs ſent away ſome baggage before, and the Merchants, all ſorts of Commodities.

THE NINTH LETTER.

An exact deſcription of the Kingdom of Kachemire, and the preſent State of the Neighbouring Mountains; together with an Anſwer to five conſiderable Queſtions of a Friend.

SIR,

THE Hiſtories of the Ancient Kings of Kachemire tell us, that all that Countrey was formerly nothing but a great Lake; and that there was an old Holy man, called Kacheb, that gave an outlet to the Waters by a Miraculous Cut he made in the Mountain of Baramoule. This may be ſeen in the Abridgment of theſe Hiſtories, which Jehan-Guire cauſed to be made, and which I am tranſlating out of the Perſian Tongue. For my part, I would not deny, all this Land to have once been cover'd with Water; the like is affirmed of Theſſaly, and ſome other Countries; but 'tis hard to believe, that this opening is the work of one man, becauſe the Mountain is very big and very high. I ſhould rather think, that ſome great Earthquake (thoſe parts being ſubject enough to them) had open'd ſome Cavern under ground, which the Mountain did ſink into, after the ſame manner as the opening of Babel-Mandel is made (if it be true what the Arabians of that Countrey ſay of it) and as whole Towns and Mountains have been ſeen to be ſwallow'd up in great Lakes.

However it be, Kachemire is no Lake now, but a very fair Campagne, diverſified by many little Hillocks, about 30 Leagues long, and 10, or 12 Leagues broad; ſituated in the extream of Indoſtan, North of Labor, lock'd up within the Mountains of Caucaſus, between thoſe of the Kings of the great Tibet, the little Tibet, and the Raja Gamon, its next Neighbours.

The firſt Mountains ſurrounding it, I mean thoſe that are next to the Plain, are of a middle height, all green with Trees or Paſture, full of all ſorts of Cattel, as Cows, Sheep, Sheep, Goats, Horses; and of Game of divers kinds, as Partridges, Hares, Gazelles, and of some Animals yielding Musk. There are also abundance of Bees; and (which is rare in the Indies) there are found no Serpents, Tigers, Bears, Lions, but very seldom. So that it may be said, that these are not only very innocent Mountains, but flowing with Milk and Honey, as were those of the Land of Promise.

Beyond those middle-siz'd Mountains, there rise others, very high ones, the top of which are alwayes cover'd with Snow, and appear above the ordinary Clouds and Mists, alwayes calm and clear as well as Mount Olympus.

Out of all these Mountains do issue innumerable Sources and Rivulets on all sides, which the Inhabitants know how to convey to their Rice-fields, and even through raised Ground unto their little Hillocks; and which, after they have made a thousand other little Rivulets, and a thousand Cascata's every where, come at last to meet, and to make a very fair River, that carrieth Boats as big as our River of Seine, and after it hath gently turn'd about the Kingdom, and passed through the midst of the Capital City, finds its out-let at Baramoule between two steep Rocks, and having afterwards taken in many small Rivers that come down from the Mountains, falls about Atex into the River Indus.

All these Rivulets descending from the Mountains, make the Plain and all those Hillocks so fair and fruitful, that one would take this whole Kingdom for some great Ever-green Garden, intermixed with Villages and Burroughs, discovering themselves between Trees, and diversified by Meadows, Fields of Rice, Corn, and divers other Legumes, of Hemp, and Saffron; all interlaced with Ditches full of Water, with Channels, with small Lakes and Rivulets here and there. Up and down every where are also seen some of our European Plants, Flowers, and all sorts of our Trees, as Apples, Pears, Prunes, Apricots, Nuts, Vines. The particular Gardens are full of Melons, Water-melons, Skirrets, Beets, Radishes, all sorts of our Pot-herbs, and of some we have not.

'Tis true, there are not so many sorts of Fruit as with us, nor are they so excellent as ours; but I believe that that is not the fault of the Soil, but that, if they had as good Gardeners as we, knowing to cultivate and graft Trees, to chuse proper places and proper Stocks, and to send for Grafts from Forreign Countries, they would have as many and as good as we; because among that number of divers sorts, which I often caused to be brought to me, I have frequently met with very excellent ones.

The Capital City, which is of the same name with that of the Kingdom, is without walls; 'tis three quarters of a League long, and half a League broad; scituate in a Plain, about two Leagues distant from Mountains, which seem to make as 'twere a Semi-Circle; and standing upon a Lake of sweet Water of four or five miles in compass, which is made up of Live-Springs, and of Rivulets running down the Mountains, and disgorgeth it self by a Navigable Channel into the River which passeth through the midst of the Town. This River hath in the Town two wooden Bridges over it for communication. Most Houses are of Wood, but well built, and of two or three Stories high; not as if they had not very good Free Stone there (many old Idol-Temples ruined, and other Buildings made of it, being yet to be seen;) but the abundance of Wood, easily descending from the mountains by little Rivers, which it is cast into, maketh people find that way of Building turn to better account. The Houses that stand upon the River have almost all of them their little Garden, lying upon the Water; which maketh a very pleasant Perspective, especially in the Spring and Summer, when men walk on the River-side. The other Houses that stand not upon the River, have also almost all of them some Garden; and there are a good number of such, that have a Channel answering to the Lake, and a little Boat to go and divert themselves upon it.

In one end of the Town there appears an Hill, loose from all the rest, which maketh another very agreeable Perspective, because on its Declivity there stand very fine Houses with Gardens, and on the top a Mosquee and an Heremitage well built with a Garden, and store of fine green Trees: And 'tis upon the account of these Trees and Gardens, that in the Language of the Country 'tis called Haryperbet, as if you should say, the Mountain of Verdure.

Opposite to this Hill there is seen another, on which there is also a Mosquee, but a little one, together with a Garden, and a very ancient Building, which seems to have been a Temple of Idols, though they call it Taci Souliman, that is, the Throne of Solomon, because that Soloman, as the Mahumetans say, caused it to be built when he came to Kachemire; but how they will prove, that Soloman made this Voyage, I know not.

The Lake hath this peculiar, that 'tis full of little Isles, which are as many Gardens of Pleasure, that appear all green in the midst of the Water, by reason of those fruit-bearing Trees, and of the Walks, on both sides set with Arbors, and because they are surrounded with large-leaved Aspen-trees, standing at two foot distance from one another; the biggest whereof may be clasped about, but as tall as Masts of great Ships, having only a tuft of Branches at the top like Palm-trees.

Beyond the Lake, upon the side of the Hills, there is nothing but Houses and Gardens of pleasure, the place having been found wonderfully proper for it, as being in a very fine Air, in the view of the Lake, the Isles, and the Town, and full of Springs and Rivulets.

The most admirable of all these Gardens is that of the King, which is called Chablimar. From the Lake, one enters into it by a great Canal, border'd with great green Turfs. This Canal is above five hundred common paces long, and runs 'twixt two large Allees of Poplars: It leadeth to a great Cabinet in the midst of the Garden, where begins another Canal far more magnificent, which runs with a little rising unto the end of the Garden. This Canal is paved with large Free-Stone; its sloping side cover'd with the same; and in the midst of it, there is a long Row of Jets of Water, from 15 to 15 foot. There are also, from space to space, great Rounds of Water serving for Store-houses, whence many Jets of Water, variously figured, do spring up: And this Canal ends at another great Cabinet, which is almost like the first.

These Cabinets, which are in a manner made like Domes, scituate in the middle of the Canal, and encompassed with Water, and consequently between those two great Allees of Poplars, have a Gallery that reigneth round about, and four Gates opposite to one another; two of which do respect the Allees, with two Bridges to pass over, one on one side, and the other on the other; the other two look upon the opposite Canals. Each Cabinet consists of a great Chamber in the midst of four other lesser Chambers, which are in the four Corners: All is painted and guilded within, the great Chamber as well as the little ones, having Sentences with great Letters in the Persian Tongue written upon them. The four Gates are very rich; they are made of great Stones with two Columns, taken from those ancient Idol-Temples, ruin'd by Chah-Jehan. The price of these great Stones and Pillars is not well known, nor what kind of Stone they be; though it appears sufficiently, that 'tis a sort of precious Stone, finer than Marble or Porphyre.

From all that hath been said, one may easily conjecture, that I am somewhat charmed with Kachemire, and that I pretend, there is perhaps nothing in the world like it for so small a Kingdom. It deserves very well to reign over all those neighbouring Mountains as far as Tartary, and over all Indostan, as far as Ceilon, as once it did: And 'tis not without some cause, that the Mogols call it the Terrestrial Paradise of the Indies; that Eckbar took so much pains to make himself Master of it; and that his Son Jehan-Guire became so amorous thereof, that he could not leave it; and often said, he would rather lose all his Empire, than Kachemire. And from the time that we arrived there, all the Poets, both Kachemirians and Mogolians, strove to make Poems to the praise of this little Kingdom, to present them to Aureng-Zebe, who gladly received and rewarded them. I remember, that among others, there was one, that exaggerating the extraordinary height of the Mountains encompassing it, and rendring it almost inaccessible any where, said, that the top of these Mountains was the cause, that the Heavens did retire into the Figure of a Vault, as we see it; and that Kachemire being the Master-piece of Nature, and the King of the Kingdoms of the World, it was sutable it should be hard of access, and so enjoy an undisturbed peace and tranquility, commanding all, and not being liable to be commanded by any. He added, that the reason why Nature had surrounded it with Mountains, of which some, namely the highest and most remote, were alwaies white and covered with Snow, the lowermost and the next to the Plain, all green and covered with Wood, was, because that the King of the Kingdoms of the World was to wear the most precious Crown, the top whereof was to be of Diamonds, and the bottom of Emeraulds. If the Poet had added (said I to my Nevab Danech-mend-kan; who was willing to make me admire all those Poems) that all those great Countries of Mountains that environ it, as the little Tibet, the State of the Raja Gamon, Kachguer, and Serenaguer, are to be comprehended under the Kingdom of Kachemire; ſince, according to the Hiſtory of the Countrey, they once depended from it, and conſequently that the River Ganges on the one ſide, that of Indus on the other, the Chenan on a third, and the Gemna on the fourth, do iſſue out of Kachemire; that theſe Rivers, with ſo many others that run thence, do countervail the Gihon, the Piſon, and the two others; and if at laſt he had concluded, that this was certainly the true Terreſtrial Paradiſe, rather than that in Armenia, this would have much enhaunced the worth of all his Commendations. Gen. 2. 11, 12, 13, 14.

Sere-

The Kachemirians have the Reputation of being a very witty people, much more intelligent and dexterous than the Indians, and as fit for Poeſie and Sciences as the Perſians. Beſides, they are very induſtrious and willing to take pains; they make Palekys, Trunks, Bed-ſteds, Standiſhes, Boxes, Spoons, , and many other pieces, and all of good and very handſome Workmanſhip, ſent over all the Indies. They know how to give it a good Verniſh, and ſo dexterouſly to counterfeit the Veins of a certain Wood that hath very fine ones, by applying Gold-ſtrings upon it, that there is nothing finer. But what is peculiar and conſiderable in them, and which draws the Trade and Silver into their Countrey, is that prodigious quantity of Stuffs call'd Chales, which they work there, and employ their little Childeren in. Theſe Chales are certain kinds of Stuff an Ell and a half long, and about an Ell broad, which are embroidered at each end with a kind of Embroidery about a Foot large. The Mogols and Indians, both Men and Women, wear of them in Winter upon their Heads, paſſing them over their left Shoulder like a Mantle. They make two ſorts of them; one, of the wool of the Countrey, which is finer than that of Spain; the other, of a Wool, or rather of an Hair, they call Touz, taken from the Breaſt of a wild Goat of the great Tibet. Theſe latter are of a far greater price than the former; neither is there any Caſtor ſo ſoft and delicate. The miſchief is, the worms get eaſily into it, unleſs you have a particular care often to unfold and air them. I have ſeen of theſe which the Omrahs purpoſely cauſed to be made, which coſt an hundred and fifty Roupies: Of the others that are made of the Wool of the Countrey, I have ſeen none that coſts above fifty.

'Tis obſerved of theſe Chales, that, work them never ſo carefully in Patna, Agra, and Labor, you ſhall never make the Stuff ſo ſoft and fine, as in Kachemire; which is commonly imputed to the particular Water of the Countrey: As at Maſlipatan they make thoſe fine ſtuffs, which become fairer by waſhing.

The Kachemirians are alſo famous for their good complexion. They look as well as our Europeans, and have nothing of a Tartarian flat-nos'd and little ey'd Face, as thoſe of Kachguer, and moſt of the people of the great Tibet. The Women eſpecially are very beautiful; and therefore all Strangers, that are new-comers to the Court of Mogol, are furniſhed from thence, that ſo they may have Children whiter than the Indians, and which by theſe means may paſs for true Mogols. And certainly, if one may judge of the Beauty of the retired Women by that of the common People, met with in the Streets, and ſeen up and down in the Shops, we muſt believe, that there are very handſom ones. At Labor, where they have the repute of being proper and ſlender, and the handſomeſt of the Brown Laſſes of the Indies (as really they are) I uſed an Art which is ordinary among the Mogols, which is, to follow ſome Elephants, eſpecially thoſe that are richly harneſſed; for aſſoon as thoſe Women hear the two Bells hanging on the ſides of thoſe Beaſts, they all put their heads out of the Windows. The ſame Trick I uſed here; and I made alſo uſe of another, in which I ſucceeded very well; it was deviſed by an old and famous Maſter of a School, whom I had taken to help me to underſtand a Perſian Poet. He made me buy ſtore of Conſits; and he being known and welcom every where, carried me into above 15 houſes, telling them that I was his Kinſman, newly come out of Perſia, that I was rich and to be married: As ſoon as we came into a houſe, he diſtributed Conſits to the Children, and preſently all came about us, Women and Children, great and ſmall, to have their ſhare, or to be ſeen This curioſity alone coſt me many a good Roupy; but it confirm'd me, that in Kachemire there are as fair Faces, as in any place of Europe.

There remains only to impart unto you what I obſerved moſt conſiderable between the Mountains, from Bember hither, (with which perhaps I ſhould have begun;) and after having given you account of ſome other little Voyages I have been obliged to make ver ſparts of this Kingdom, you will learn all I could come to know of the reſt of the circumjacent Mountains.

Con-

Concerning therefore first our Voyage from Bember hither, it seem'd to me surprising enough, to find my self from the first night that we parted from Bember, and entred into the Mountains, pass from a Torrid to a Temperate Zone: For, we had no sooner mounted this dreadful Wall of the World, I mean, this high, steep, black and bald Mountain of Bember, but that in descending on the other side, we found an Air that was pretty tollerable, fresh, gentle and temperate. But that which surprised me more in these Mountains, was, to find my self, in a trice, transported out of the Indies into Europe. For, seeing the Earth covered with all our plants and shrubs, exept Hssop, Thyme, Marjoram and Rosemary, I imagined I was in some of our Mountains of Auvergne, in the midst of a Forest of all our kinds of Trees, Pines, Oaks, Elms, Plane-trees. And I was the more astonish'd because in all those burning Fields of Indostan, whence I came, I had seen almost nothing of all that.

Among other things relating to Plants, this surprised me, that one and a half days journy from Bember I found a Mountain, that was cover'd with them on both sides, but with this difference, that on the side of the Mountain that was Southerly, toward the Indies, there was a mixture of Indian and European Plants, and on that which was exposed to the North I observ'd none but European ones; as if the former had participated of the Air and temper of Europe and the Indies, and the other had been meerly European.

As to the Trees, I admired this natural course of Generations and Corruptions: Below in these bottoms, where perhaps no man ever was, I saw hundreds that were falling, or fallen, one upon another, dead and half rotten of age; and other young and verdant ones growing out of the foot of those that were dead; Some of them also I saw burnt, whether it was from Lightning, or that in the heat of Summer they had taken fire by rubbing themselves against one another, when they were agitated by some hot and impetuous wind; or, as the Country-people say, that they take fire of themselves, when they are grown old and dry.

I admired also those natural Cascata's of water, which we found between those Rocks. We met, among others, one of them so wonderful, that doubtless, it cannot be parallel'd. One seeth a far off from the side of an high Mountain, running down a Torrent of water in a Channel cover'd with Trees, and precipitate it self in a trice to the bottom of a steep Rock of a stupendious height, with a noise that is able to strike one deaf, like a Cataract. There was erected near it, a Theatre, upon a Rock, which Jehan-Guire had caused purposely to be made plain, that the Court passing, might there repose themselves, and from thence with conveniency behold this admirable Work-man-ship of Nature; which as well as those old Trees, I was just now speaking of, seems to resemble something of great Antiquity, and of the first production of the World.

All these divertisements were blended with an odd accident. On the day, that the King went up the Mountain of Pire-penjale, which is the highest of all, and whence one begins to discover a far off the Country of Kachemire; on that day, I say, that the King ascended this Mountain, being followed by a long row of Elephants, upon which sate the Women in Mikdembers, and Embarys; one of those Elephants was frighted by beholding, as the Indians would have it, such a long and steep ascent, and fell back upon him that was next, and he upon the next, and so on to the fifteenth, so that not one of them being able to turn in this way, which was extreamly rude and steep, they all tumbled into the precipice. It was good fortune for those poor Women, that the precipice it self was not very steep, so that there were but three or four of them kill'd; but the fifteen Elephants remai'nd upon the place. When these bulky Masses do once fall under those vast burthens they are loaden with, they never rise again, though the way be never so fair. We saw them two days after, in passing by, and I observed some of them yet stirring their Trunk. This accident put the whole Army, which had marched four days along the Mountains in file, into great disorder, because to recover these Women and all that wreck, a stop was made for the remainder of that day and all the night, every one being necessitated to stop where he was, because it was in many places impossible to advance or go back, and none had near him those Porters that carried his Tent and Victuals. As for my self, I was not in the worst condition, having found means to creep out of the way, and to take the conveniency of a small place to lye down in, for my self and my Horse. And, to my good luck, one of my servants that follow'd me, had a little bread, which we shared together. I remember, it was there where ſtirring ſome ſtones we found a great black Scorpion, which a young Mogol of my acquaintance took, and ſqueezed it in his own hand, and then in the hand of my ſervant, and at laſt in mine, without our being ſtung by him. This young Cavalier ſaid, that he had charm'd him, as he had done many others before, by a paſſage of the Alcoran, which he would not teach me, becauſe, he ſaid, the power of charming would paſs to me and leave himſelf, as it had paſſed to him by quitting his Teacher.

In traverſing this ſame Mountain of Pire-penjale, where the Elephants tumbled down, there occurr'd, thoſe things which call'd to my mind ſome of my former philoſophical thoughts. The firſt was, that in leſs than an hour we felt Summer and Winter; for in aſcending we did ſweat groſs drops, all men going on foot in a burning Sun; and when we came to the top of the Mountain, we yet found the Icy Snow, that had been cut to open the way; there was a Froſt upon a miſling Rain, and there blew a wind ſo cold, that all people ſhook and run away, eſpecially the ſilly Indians, who never had ſeen Ice or Snow, nor felt ſuch a cold.

The ſecond was, that in leſs than two hundred paces I met with two quite contrary winds; one from the North, which blew in my face aſcending, eſpecially when I came near the top, and another from the South, which blew againſt my back in deſcending; as if this Hill had protruded exhalations out of its bowels from all ſides, which coming forth had cauſed, a wind that had deſcended and taken its courſe in thoſe two oppoſite dales.

The third was the meeting an old Hermit, that had lived on the top of this Mountain ſince the time of Jehan-Guire, and whoſe Religion was not known; though it was ſaid, that he did miracles, cauſed ſtrange thunders when he would, and raiſed ſtorms of Hail, Snow, Rain and Wind. He look'd ſomewhat ſavage-like, having a long and large white Beard uncombed. He asked alms ſomewhat fiercely; ſuffer'd us to take up water in earthen cups, he had ranged upon a great ſtone; made ſigne with his hand, importing that we ſhould ſpeedily march away, and grumbled at thoſe that made a noiſe, becauſe, ſaid he to me, (when I was come into his Cave, and had a little ſweetned his looks with half a Roupy, which with much humility I put into his hand) a noiſe raiſeth furious ſtorms and tempeſts. Aureng-Zebe, ſaid he further, did very well in following my counſel, and not permitting to make a noiſe: Chah-Jehan always took care of the ſame; but Jehan Guire once mocking at it, and cauſing Trumpets and Cymbals to ſound, was like to have periſhed here.

In reference to the little Voyages I have made in divers parts of this Kingdom, behold the particulars I took notice of as I paſſed. We were no ſooner arrived at Kachemire, but my Navab Danech-mend-kan ſent me, together with one of his Horſe-men for a Convoy, and a Country-man, to one of the extremities of this Kingdom, three ſmall days journey from hence, upon the relation made him, that this was the very time to ſee the Wonders (for ſo they ſpeak of them) of a Spring that is thereabout. Theſe Wonders are, that in the month of May, the time when the Snow begins but to melt, this Fountain, for about the ſpace of fifteen days, regularly flows and ſtops thrice a day, at break of day, at noon and at night: Its flowing ordinarily laſts three quarters of an hour, more or leſs, and that plentifully enough, to fill a ſquare receptacle, having ſteps to go down to it, and being about ten or twelve foot broad, and as many foot deep. After the firſt fifteen days, its courſe begins to be leſs regular and leſs copious; and at length, after a month or thereabout, it quite ſtops and runs no more for the reſt of the year, unleſs it be, that during ſome plentiful and long rains, it flows inceſſantly and without Rule, as other Fountains do. The Gentiles have on the ſide of the Receiver a little Temple of the Idol of Brare, which is one of their falſe Deities; and thence it is that they call this Fountain Send-Brary, as as if you ſhould ſay, Water of Brare; and that thither they come from all parts in pilgrimage, to bathe and ſanctifie themſelves in this miraculous water. Upon the origin of this Water they make many fables, which I ſhall not recite to you, becauſe I find not the leaſt ſhadow of truth in them. During the five or ſix days of my ſtay there, I did what poſſible I could to find the reaſon of this Wonder. I did attentively conſider the ſituation of the Mountain, at the foot of which this Spring is found: I went to the very top with great pains, ſearching and prying every where. I obſerved that it extends it ſelf in length from North to South; that 'tis ſever'd from other Mountains, which yet are very near to it; that it is in the form of an Aſſes back; that its top, which is very long, hath not much more than an hundred paces where it is largeſt; that one of the ſide of the Mountain, which is cover'd with nothing but green graſs, is expoſed to the Eaſt, yet ſo that the Sun comes not to ſhine on't before eight a clock in the morning, becauſe of the other oppoſite Mountains; and laſtly, that the other ſide, which is expos'd to the Weſt, is covered with Trees and Buſhes. All this being conſidered, I did imagine, that the heat of the Sun, together with the particular ſituation and the internal diſpoſition of the Mountain, might very well be the cauſe of this pretended Miracle, that the Morning Sun, coming briskly to ſtrike on the ſide oppoſite thereto, heats it, and melts part of the frozen waters, which during the Winter, when all was covered with Snow, had inſinuated themſelves into the inner parts of the earth of this Mountain; that theſe waters penetrating, and by little and little running down unto certain beds of quick rock, which retain and convey them toward the Spring-head, cauſe the flowing of the Fountain at Noon; That the ſame Sun, raiſed to the South, and leaving that other ſide, now growing cold, for to ſtrike with its beams as 'twere perpendicularly, the top, doth alſo melt other frozen waters, which likewiſe run down by little and little as the other, but by other turnings, unto thoſe rocky beds, and cauſe the Flowing at Night: and that laſtly, the Sun heating likewiſe this Weſtern ſide, produceth the like effect, and cauſes the third flux in the Morning; which is ſlower than the two others, either becauſe this Weſtern ſide is remote from the Eaſtern where the Source is; or becauſe that being covered with wood, it is not ſo ſoon heated; or by reaſon of the cold of the night. Now I found this my reaſoning the more cogent, foraſmuch as it ſeems to agree with what is affirmed, that in the firſt days the water comes in greater abundance than in the latter; and that at laſt it ſtops, and runs not at all; as if indeed in the beginning there were of thoſe frozen waters greater plenty in the earth than at laſt. It ſeems alſo to agree with what is obſerved, that there are ſome days in the beginning, in which one flux is found more abounding than the other, and ſometimes more at noon than in the evening or morning, or in the morning more than at noon; it commonly falling out ſo that ſome days there are hotter than others, or that ſome clouds ariſe which interrupt the equality of the heat, and conſequently make the flux unequal.

Returning from Send-brary I turn'd a little aſide from the road to go and lye at Achiavel, which is an Houſe of pleaſure of the ancient Kings of Kachemire, and at preſent of the Great Mogol. That which moſt adorns it, is a Fountain, the water where of diffuſeth it ſelf on all ſides round about that Fabrick (which is not deſpicable) and into the Gardens by an hundred Canals. It breaks out of the Earth, as if by ſome violence it aſcended up from the bottom of a Well, and that with ſuch an abundance as might make it to be called a River rather than a Fountain. The water of it is admirably good, and ſo cold that one can hardly endure to hold ones hand in it. The Garden it ſelf is very fine, there being curious Walks in it, and ſtore of Fruit-bearing Trees, of Apples, Pears, Prunes, Apricocks and Cherries, and many jets of waters of various figures, and Ponds repleniſh'd with Fiſh, together with a very high Caſcata of water, which by its fall maketh a great Nape of thirty or forty paces long, which hath an admirable effect, eſpecially in the night, when under this Nape there is put a great number of little Lamps fitted in holes purpoſely made in the Wall; which maketh a curious ſhew.

From Achiavel I went yet a little more out of my way to paſs through another Royal Garden, which is alſo very beautiful, and hath the ſame pleaſantneſs with that of Achiavel, but this is peculiar in it, that in one of its Ponds there are Fiſhes that come when they are called, and when you caſt bread to them; the biggeſt whereof have golden Rings in their Noſes, with inſcriptions about them, which they ſay that renowned Nour-Mehalle, the Wife of Jehan-Guire, the Grandfather of Aureng-Zebe, cauſed to be faſtened in them.

I was no ſooner returned from Send-brary, but Danech-mend-kan, well ſatisfied with my Voyage, made me undertake one more, to ſee another ſure Miracle, as he call'd it, which ſhould be capable to make me ſoon change my Religion, and turn Muſſelman. Go, ſaith he, to Baramoulay, which is not further from hence than Send-brary; there you ſhall find a Moſquee in which is the Tomb of one of our Pires or Saints, which ſtill every day works Miracles in curing ſick people, that flock thither from all parts: It may be, that you will believe nothing of all thoſe miraculous Cures you ſhall ſee; but you will at leaſt believe one Miracle, which is done every day, and you may ſee with your own eyes: And that is of a big round ſtone, which the ſtrongeſt man is hardly hardly able to raise in the least from the ground, but yet eleven men, by praying to that Saint, lift up, as if it were a straw, with the end of their eleven fingers, without any trouble at all, and without being sensible of any weight. Hereupon I began this journey also, accompanied with my Horseman and the Countrey-fellow, and being arrived at Baramoulay, I found it a place pleasant enough. The Mosquee is sufficiently well built, the Tomb of the pretended Saint well adorn'd, and round about it there was store of people of great devotion, who said they were sick. Near the Mosquee there was a Kitchen with large Kettles full of Flesh and Rice, which, in my opinion, was the Magnet drawing the sick people thither, and the Miracle that cured them. On the other side was the Garden and the Chambers of the Mullahs, who with great conveniency, and delight spend their life there, under the shadow of the miraculous Sanctity of this Pire, which they are not wanting to celebrate: But as I am always very unhappy in such occasions, he did no Miracle that day upon any of the sick. As for the great Stone, which was the business I came for; there were Eleven Cheats of these Mullahs that crowded together in a round, and by their long Vests hindred me from seeing well in what manner they took and lifted it up, yet said all, that they held it only with the end of one of their fingers, and that it was as light as a feather. For my part, who had my eyes open, and look'd on narrowly, I perceived well enough, that they took great pains, and they seemed to me, that they used also the thumb, which they held very firm upon the second finger bent and closed: But yet I was not wanting to cry out as well as the Mullahs and all the other assistants, Karamet, Karamet, Miracle, Miracle, giving at the same time a Roupy for the Mullahs, and with great shew of devotion praying them to favour me with suffering me once to be one of the Eleven lifters up of the Stone. They did hesitate long before they resolved to permit it, but having given them another Roupy, and made them believe I was perswaded of the truth of the Miracle, one of the Eleven gave me his place, they doubtless imagining, that Ten of them joyned together would be sufficient to do the business, though I should not add much to it, and that they would so range themselves and crowd together, that I should perceive nothing of their imposture. But they found themselves egregiously deceived, when they saw, that the Stone, which I would not support but only by the end of my finger, always inclined and fell to my side, until at length I found it necessary to put my thumb to it, and to hold it with my finger as they did; and then we lifted it up from the earth, yet not without much pain. Notwithstanding which, when I saw that they all looked upon me asquint, not knowing what to make of me, I still went on crying like the rest, Karamet, Miracle, Miracle, and over and above casting to them another Roupy to secure my self from being ston'd; and stealing away from among the crowd, I presently took horse, without eating or drinking, and left the Saint and the Miracles to those that had faith enough to believe them: Observing, as I passed along, that famous opening, which is an outlet to all the waters of this Kingdom, of which I have already said something in the beginning of this Book.

I left my way again, to approach to a great Lake, which I saw a far off, thorough the middle whereof passeth the River that runs to Baramoulay. It is full of Fish, especially Eels, and covered with Ducks and wild Fowl, and many other River Fowl. 'Tis where the Governour comes in Winter, at which time 'tis covered with those creatures, to divert himself with fowling. In the midst of this Lake there is an Eremitage with its little Garden, which, as they say, doth miraculously flote upon the water, and where the Eremite passeth his Life without ever going from it. Besides which, they make a thousand other ridiculous tales of it, which are not worth reciting, unless perhaps you will except what some have told me. That it was one of those ancient Kings of Kachemire, who out of curiosity caused this Eremitage to be built upon thick beams fastned to one another.

Thence I went to find out a Fountain, which hath something that's rare enough in it; bubling up gently, and rising with some little impetuosity, and making small bubles of air, and carrying with it, to the top, some small Sand that is very fine, which goeth away again as it came, the Water becoming still, a moment after it, without ebullition, and without bringing up Sand; and soon after beginning afresh as before; and so continuing its motion by intervals, which are not regular. But the Wonder, as they say, consists in this, that the least noise, made by speaking, or by knocking ones foot against the ground, moveth the water, and maketh it run and bubble as was said. Yet I found plainly, that ſpeaking or knocking availeth nothing to produce that effect, and that it moveth as well when one ſaith nothing, as when one ſpeaks or knocketh. But now, to give the true cauſe of it, that requireth more thinking than I have beſtow'd upon it; unleſs one ſhould ſay, that the Sand, by falling down again, obſtructeth the narrow Channel of this ſmall and weak Spring, until the water, being cloſed up and kept in, it make an effort to remove and raiſe again the Sand, and ſo to diſengage it ſelf; or rather, that ſome wind, pent in the Channel of the Spring, riſes by turns, as it comes to paſs in artificial Fountains.

After we had conſidered this Fountain, we entred into the Mountains to ſee a great Lake, which hath Ice in Summer, and looketh like a little icy Sea, having heaps of Ice, made and unmade by the Winds. Afterwards we paſſed through a certain place, call'd Seng-ſafed, that is, White ſtone; which is famous for being full all the Summer long of all ſorts of Flowers like a Parterre, and for this obſervation, that when much people goes thither, making a great noiſe and much ſtirring the air, there preſently falls a ſhower of rain. This is certain, that when, ſome years ſince, Chah-Jehan went thither, he was in danger of periſhing by the great and extraordinary rain ſurvening, though he had commanded, they ſhould make the leaſt noiſe they could. This agreed with what my Eremite of Pirepengale had told me.

And now I was going to a Grotta of odd congelations, which is two days journey from thence; but I received news, that after my ſo long abſence my Navab was troubled about me.

As to the condition of the neighbouring Mountains round about, I have, ſince our being here, done what poſſibly I could to inform my ſelf about them; but I have profited but little, for want of people that are intelligent and obſerve things; yet notwithſtanding I will not omit to relate to you what I have learn'd of it.

The Merchants of Kachemire, that go every year from mountain to mountain, gathering fine Wool to make thoſe Stuffs I have above been ſpeaking of, do all agree, that between the mountains, which ſtill depend from Kachemire, there are found very fine places of good land, and that amongſt others there is one place, which pays it tribute in Leather and Wooll, ſent for by the Governour every year; and where the Women are extream handſome, chaſt and laborious; that there is alſo another farther off from Kachemire, which alſo pays its tribute in Leather and Wooll; and hath very pretty, though but ſmall, fertil plains, and moſt pleaſant vallies, abounding in Corn, Rice, Apples, Pears, excellent Apricocks and Melons; as alſo in Raiſins yielding very good Wine; the Inhabitants whereof have ſometimes refuſed to pay the tribute, relying upon the difficulty of acceſs to their Country; but there hath alwayes been a way found to enter and to reduce them. The ſame Merchants agree alſo, that among the other Mountains, that are more diſtant and depend no more from Kachemire, there are likewiſe found very pleaſant Countrys, peopled with very handſom Whites, but ſuch as almoſt never come out from their homes; of which ſome have no Kings, nor, as far as could be perceived, any Religion; only that ſome of them do eat no Fiſh, counting them unclean.

I ſhall add here, what I was lately told by a good ancient man, that had married a Wife of the ancient Family of the Kings of Kachemire. He ſaid, that when Jehan-Guire made a ſtrict inquiry after all thoſe that were of that Family, he was afraid to be taken, and thereupon fled with three Servants croſs theſe mountains, not knowing in a manner whither he went; that thus wandring he came at laſt into a very fine ſmall Canton, where when it came to be known who he was, the inhabitants came to viſit him and brought him preſents, and that, to make up their kindneſs, they brought to him in the evening one of the beautifulleſt of their young Maidens, praying him that he would bed with her, becauſe they deſired very much to have iſſue of his Blood: That paſſing from thence into another Canton, not much diſtant from the former, the people likewiſe came to ſee him, and to preſent him; but that the kindneſs of the evening was far different from the other, in that theſe inhabitants brought to him their own Wives, arguing that thoſe of the other Canton were Beaſts, becauſe that his Blood would not remain in their houſe, ſince the Maidens would carry the Child with them into the houſe of him, to whom they ſhould be married.

I may further add, that ſome years ſince, there being a diſſention riſen between the family of the King of the little Tibet, which borders upon Kachemire, one of the pretenders, to the Crown did ſecretly call for the aſſiſtance of the Governour of Kachemire, who who by order of Chah-Jehan gave him powerful ſuccours, and put to death or flight all the other pretenders, and left this man in the poſſeſſion of the Country, on condition of an annual Tribute to be paid in Cryſtal, Musk and Wool. This petty King could not forbear coming to ſee Aureng-Zebe, bringing with him a preſent of thoſe things I juſt now named; but he had ſo pitiful a Train, That I ſhould never have taken him for what he was. My Navab entertained him at dinner, that he might receive the better information concerning thoſe Mountains. I heard him ſay, that his Country on the Eaſt ſide did confine with great Tibet; that it was about 30 or 40 leagues broad; that there was indeed ſome little Cryſtal, Musk, and Wool, but for the reſt very poor; and that there were no Gold Mines as was ſaid; that in ſome places there was very good fruit, eſpecially Melons; that they had very hard Winters, and very troubleſome, becauſe of the deep Snows; and that the people, which formerly had been Heathen, was almoſt all become Mahumetan, as himſelf, namely, of that Sect called Chia, which is that of all Perſia. Beſides, that ſeventeen or eighteen years ago Chah-Jehan had attempted to make himſelf Maſter of the Kingdom of the Great Tibet, as formerly alſo had done the Kings of Kachemire; that his Army after ſixteen days difficult march, always among Mountains, did beſiege a Caſtle which they took; that there remain'd no more for him to do, than to paſs a River, which is famous and very rapid, and thereupon to march directly to the Capital Town, which he would have eaſily carried, the whole Kingdom being in a panick terrour; but that the ſeaſon being far ſpent, the Governour of Kachemire, who was the General of that Army, did apprehend he ſhould be ſurprized by the Snow, and ſo returned, leaving in that Caſtle a Garriſon, which, whether it was from fear of the Enemy, or from want of ſufficient proviſion, he could not ſay, ſoon abandon'd it; which broke the deſign the Governour had of returning thither the next Spring.

Now that the King of this Great Tibet knows, that Aureng-Zebe is at Kachemire, and threatens him with War, he hath ſent to him an Ambaſſador, with Preſents of the Countrey, as Chryſtal, and thoſe dear White Cow-tails, by way of ornament faſten'd to the ears of Elephants, as alſo Musk, and a Stone of Jachen of great price, becauſe of an extraordinary bigneſs. This Jachen is a blewiſh Stone with white veins ſo hard that it is wrought with nothing elſe but the Powder of Diamond, highly eſteemed in the Court of the Megol. They make Cups of it and other veſſels, of which I have ſome richly wrought with threads of Gold, of very curious Workmanſhip. The Train of this Ambaſſador did conſiſt of three or four Cavaliers, and ten or twelve tall men, dry and lean, having three or four hairs in their beards like the Chineſe, and plain red Bonnets upon their heads like our Seamen, the reſt of their Garments ſuitable. I think there were four or five of them with Swords, but the reſt marched behind the Ambaſſador without any rod or ſtick. He treated with Aureng-Zebe in his Maſters name, promiſing that he would ſuffer a Moſque to be built in the Capital City, wherein Prayers ſhould be made after the Mahumetan way; that the Money, henceforth to be coined, ſhould on the one ſide have the Impreſs of Aureng-Zebe, and that he would pay him a certain annual Tribute. But 'tis believed, that as ſoon as this King ſhall know that Aureng-Zebe is gone from Kachemire, he will laugh at all this Treaty, as he did formerly at that, which he had made with Chah-Jehan.

This Ambaſſador had in his ſuit a Phyſician, which was ſaid to be of the Kingdom of Laſſa, and of the Tribe Lamy or Lama, which is that of the men of the Law in that Country, as the Brahmans are in the Indies; with this difference, that the Brahmans have no Caliph, or high-Prieſt, but the Lamians have one that is not only acknowledged for ſuch by the Kingdom of Laſſa, but alſo by all Tartary, and who is honoured and reverenced like a divine perſon. This Phyſician had a Book of Receipts, which he would never ſell to me; the writing of it ſeem'd, at a diſtance, ſomewhat like ours. We made him begin to write the Alphabet, but he wrote ſo ſlowly, and his writing was ſo bad in reſpect of that in his Book, that we ſoon judged, this muſt needs be a poor Doctor. He was much wedded to the Metempſychoſis or Tranſmigration of Souls, and was full of admirable ſtories of it; among the reſt he related of his great Lama, that when he was old and ready to die, he aſſembled his Council, and declared to them, that now he was paſſing into the Body of a little Child, lately born, that this Child was bred up with great care, and when it was about ſix or ſeven years old, they brought to it ſtore of houſhold-ſtuff pel mel with his own, and that the Child was able to diſtinguiſh thoſe, that were or had been his from that of others: Which was, ſaid this Doctor, an authentick proof of the Tranſmigration. For my part, I thought at firſt he rallied, but I found at laſt, that he ſpoke very ſeriouſly. I was once to ſee him at the Ambaſſadors with a Merchant of Kachemire, that knew the Language of Tibet, and was an Interpreter to me. I made as if I would buy ſome Stuffs he had brought to ſell, which were ſome kind of Ratines of about a foot and an half broad; but it was really to learn ſomething of that Countrey, yet it was no great matter I obtain'd from him. He only told me in general, that all the Kingdom of the great Tibet was, in compariſon to his, a miſerable Countrey, full of Snow for more than five months of the year; that his King made often War with the Tartars; but he could never diſtinguiſh to me, what kind of Tartars they were. At length, after I had made a good many Queſtions to him, without receiving any ſatisfaction upon them, I ſaw I loſt only my time with him.

But there is another thing, which is ſo certain, that no body here doubts of it. 'Tis not yet twenty years, that there went Caravans every year from Kachemire, which croſſed all thoſe Mountains of the great Tibet, entred into Tartary, and arrived in about three months at Cataja, notwithſtanding the very ill ways, and the rapid Torrents; which latter are to be paſſed over Cords ſtretched from one Rock to another. Theſe Caravans brought back Muſk, China-wood, Rubarb, and Mamiron, which laſt is a ſmall root exceeding good for ill Eyes. Repaſſing over the great Tibet they alſo loaded themſelves with the Merchandiſe of that Countrey, viz. Muſk, Cryſtal and Jachen, but eſpecially with ſtore of very fine Wooll of two ſorts, one of Sheep, and the other called Touz, which is rather, as I have ſaid, a kind of hair approaching to our Caſtor, than a Wooll. But ſince the attempt, which Chah-Jehan made on that ſide, the King of the great Tibet hath altogether ſhut up the way, and ſuffers not any one from Kachemire to enter into his Countrey: And thence it is, that the Caravans at preſent go from Patna upon the Ganges, not paſſing through his Countrey at all, but leaving it on the left hand, and coming directly to the Kingdom of Laſſa.

Concerning this Kingdom, here called Kacheguer, which doubtleſs is that which our Maps call Kaſcar, I ſhall relate to you what I was able to learn of it from the Merchants of the Countrey it ſelf, who, knowing that Aureng-Zebe was to ſtay a while at Kachemire, were come thither with a good number of Slaves, of both Sexes, whom they had to ſell. They ſay, that the Kingdom of Kacheguer lyeth Eaſt of Kachemire, drawing a little Northward; that the ſhorteſt way thither was to go directly to the great Tibet; but that paſſage being obſtructed, they were forced to take their way through the little Tibet; that firſt they went to a ſmall Town, call'd Gourtche, the laſt Town depending from Kachemire, and four days journey diſtant from the ſame; that from thence in eight days they came to Eskerdou, the Capital City of the King of the little Tibet, and thence in two days more to a ſmall Town call'd Cheker, likewiſe belonging to the little Tibet, and ſituate upon a River very famous for being Medicinal; that in fifteen days they came to a great Foreſt upon the Confines of the little Tibet, and in fifteen days more to Kacheguer a ſmall Town, once the Seat of the King of Kacheguer, which is now at Jourkend, lying ſomewhat more to the North, and ten days journey diſtant from Kacheguer. They added, that from the Town of Kacheguer to Katay 'tis no more but two months voyage; that every year there go Caravans, bringing back of all thoſe Commodities I have named, and paſſing into Perſia thorough Usbeck, as there are others that do paſs to Patna in Indoſtan. They ſaid moreover, that to go from Kacheguer to Katay, Travellers muſt get to a Town that is eight days journey from Coten, the laſt Town of the Kingdom of Kacheguer; that the ways from Kachemire to Kacheguer are very difficult; that among others there is a place, where, in what ſeaſon ſoever it be, you muſt march for about a quarter of a League upon Ice. This is all, I could learn of thoſe parts, which though indeed it be very much confuſed and very little, yet will it be found much, conſidering I had to do both with people ſo ignorant, that they almoſt knew not to give a reaſon of any thing; and with Interpreters, who, for the moſt part, know not how to make the Queſtions to be underſtood, nor intelligibly to deliver the Anſwers made thereto.

I thought once, I would have here concluded this Letter, or rather this Book, and taken my leave of you untill I came to Debli, whither we are now returning: But ſince I am in the vein of writing, and at ſome leiſure, I ſhall endeavour to give you ſome ſatisfaction to thoſe Five particulars, you demanded of me in your laſt Letter in the name of Monſieur Thevenot, that illuſtrious perſon, who daily giveth us more diſcoveries, without going out of his ſtudy, than we have learned of thoſe that have gone round the World.

The

The firſt of his demands is, Whether it be true, that in the Kingdom of Kachemire there are Jews ſettled there from immemorial times; and if ſo, whether they have the Holy Scripture, and if their Old Teſtament be altogether conform to ours?

The Second is, That I would give you an account of what I have obſerved touching the Mounſons, or the Seaſon of the ordinary Rains in the Indies.

The Third is, That I would give you my Obſervations, and declare to you my Thoughts concerning the wonderful regularity of the Current of the Sea, and the Winds in the Indies.

The Fourth is, Whether the Kingdom of Bengale is ſo fertile, ſo rich, and ſo beautiful, as 'tis ſaid to be?

The Fifth is, That I would at length decide unto you the old Controverſie touching the Cauſes of the Increaſe of the Nile.

Anſwer to the firſt Demand, concerning the Jews.

I Should indeed be very glad, as well as Monſieur The, venote that there were Jews to be found in the Valley of thoſe Mountains, who might be ſuch, as I believe he would have them; I mean, of thoſe Ten Tribes tranſported by Salmanaſſer. But you may aſſure him, that if anciently there have been of them in this place (as there is ſome reaſon to believe there were,) there are none of them at preſent, and all the inhabitants of it are now either Gentiles or Mahumetans; and that perhaps 'tis China, where they may be found. For I have lately ſeen, in the hands of our Reverend Father, the Jeſuit of Debli, ſome Letters of a German Jeſuite written from Pekin, taking notice that he had there ſeen ſome of them, that had preſerved the Jewiſh Religion and the Old Teſtament, that knew nothing of the Death of JESUS CHRIST, and that they would even have made this Jeſuite their Kacan, if he would have forborn to eat Swines fleſh.

Mean time here alſo are not wanting ſeveral marks of Judaiſm. The firſt is, that at the entring into this Kingdom, after having paſſed the Mountains of Pire-penjale, all the Inhabitants I ſaw in the firſt Villages ſeemed to me to be Jews, in their garbe and meen, and in ſomething peculiar, which maketh us often diſcern Nations frome one another. I am not the only perſon, that hath had this thought; our Father, the Jeſuite, and many of our Europeans had the ſame before me. The ſecond is, that I have obſerv'd, that among the meaner ſort of the people of this Town, though they be Mahumetans, yet the name of Mouſa, that is Moſes, is much uſed. The third, that commonly they ſay, that Salomon came into their Country, and that it was he that cut the Mountain of Baramoule to give an outlet to the waters. The fourth, that they ſay, Moſes died at Kachemire, and that his Tomb is one league diſtant from this Town. The fifth, that they pretend, that that little and very ancient Edifice, which appears from hence upon an high mountain, was built by Salomon, and that thence they call it to this very day the Throne of Salomon. So that I would not deny, but that ſome Jews may have penetrated hither; and that in length of time they may have loſt the purity of their Law, turned Idolaters, at laſt Mahumetans. In ſhort, we ſee ſtore of the Jewiſh Nation that have paſſed into Perſia to Lar, Iſpahan, and alſo into Indoſtan on the ſide of Goa and Cochin: I have been informed, that there were of them in Æthiopia, even gallant and military men, and ſome of them ſo conſiderable and potent, that there was one of them, fifteen or ſixteen years agoe, that had attempted to make himſelf King of a little Country of the Mountains of a very hard acceſs; if it be true, what two Ambaſſadours of the King of Æthiopia, that were lately in this Court, related to me.

Anſwer to the Second Demand, about the ſtated Rains in the Indies.

THe Sun is ſo ſtrong and violent in the Indies all the year long, and principally for the ſpace of eight months, that he would burn all, and render the Country barren and inhabitable, if Providence had not particularly provided and diſpoſed things in ſo admirable a way, as that in the mouth of July, when the heats are moſt violent, Rains begin regularly to fall, which continuing for three months together, do temper the Earth, and render it very fruitful, and ſo qualifie the Air that it may be endured. Yet are not theſe Rains ſo regular, that they fall always juſt at the ſame time; of which I have made many obſervations in different places, and principally at Debli, where I lived a long while. The like is found in other Countries; and there is always ſome difdifference in the time from year to year: For ſometimes they begin or end a fortnight or three weeks ſooner, ſometimes later; and there are alſo ſome years, in which they are not ſo plentiful as in others; inſomuch that two years, together it did almoſt not rain at all; which cauſed much Sickneſs, and great Famine. Beſides, there is alſo this difference in reſpect of Countries different and remote from one another, that theſe Rains ordinarily begin ſooner, or are more plentiful in one than in the other. For example, in Bengale and along the Coaſt of Coromandel, as far as to the Iſle of Ceilan, they begin and end a month ſooner than towards the Coaſt of Malabar: And in Bengale theſe Rains are pouring down for four months, and ſometimes continue for eight days and nights together without intermiſſion; Whereas at Debli and Agra they are never ſo ſtrong, nor ſo durable, there paſſing ſometimes two or three whole days without any Rain; and ordinarily the whole morning from break of day until about nine or ten a clock it rains but very little or nothing. But the moſt conſiderable difference I have obſerv'd, is, that the rains in divers places come from different quarters of the World, as about Debli they come from the Eaſt, where lies Bengale; whereas, on the contrary, in the parts of Bengale and upon the Coaſt of Coromandel they come from the South; and upon the Coaſt of Malabar they proceed almoſt always from the Weſt.

I have alſo obſerved another particular about which they all agree in thoſe parts, viz. That according as the Heat of the Summer comes ſooner or later, is more or leſs violent, and laſts longer or a ſhorter time; the Rains alſo come ſooner or later, are more or leſs plentiful, laſt longer or a ſhorter time.

Theſe Obſervations have given me ground to believe, that the Heat of the Earth and the Rarefaction of the Air muſt be the principal cauſes of theſe Rains, and draw them; foraſmuch as the Air of the Seas, which lie near round about the Lands, being colder, more condenſed, and more groſſe, filled with clouds which the great heats of the Summer raiſe from the waters, and which the winds drive and agitate, diſchargeth it ſelf eaſily upon the Land, where the Air is hotter, more rarified, in more motion and leſs reſiſting than upon the Seas, ſo as that this diſcharge is more or leſs tardy and abundant, according as the Heat comes ſooner and is more violent.

Sutable to the ſame Obſervations I was perſwaded that if the Rains begin ſooner upon the Coaſt of Coromandel than upon that of Malabar, 'tis by reaſon that the Summer begins there ſooner, it being poſſible that there it may do ſo for ſome particular reaſons, which perhaps would not be hard to find, if the Country were well examin'd: For we know, that according to the different ſituation of a Land in reſpect of Seas or Mountains, and according as 'tis more Sandy, or Hilly, or Woody, the Summer comes there either ſooner or later, and with more or leſs violence.

I am further perſwaded, that it is no wonder, that the Rains come from different quarters; that upon the Coaſt of Coromandel, for example, they come from the South, and upon that of Malabar from the Weſt; becauſe that in all appearance it muſt be the neareſt Seas that ſend them, and the Coaſt of Coromandel is nearer to the Sea, which lyeth Southerly in reſpect of it, and is more expoſed to it, as the Coaſt of Malabar is to the Weſt of it, lying towards Babelmandel, Arabia, and the Gulf of Perſia.

Laſtly, I have imagined, that if at Debli, for example, the Rains come from the Eaſt, it may yet be that the Seas which are Southerly to it, are the origin of them; but that they are forced by reaſon of ſome Mountains, or ſome other Lands where the Air is colder, more condenſed and more reſiſting, to turn aſide and diſcharge themſelves another way, where the Air is more rarified, and where conſequently they find leſs reſiſtance.

I forgot to tell you, that I alſo obſerved at Debli, that there it never rains to purpoſe, till for many days there have paſſed ſtore of Clouds Weſtward; as if it were neceſſary that thoſe ſpaces of Air which are beyond Debli Weſtward, ſhould be firſt filled with Clouds, and that theſe Clouds finding there ſome obſtacle, as it may be ſome Air leſs hot and leſs rarified, and conſequently more condenſed and more able to reſiſt, or ſome other contrary Clouds and Winds repelling them, ſhould become ſo thick, ſo burthenſom and ſo heavy, that they muſt fall down in Rain, after the ſame manner as it often enough falls out, when the Wind driveth the Clouds againſt ſome high Mountain.

Anſwer to the third Demand, which is concerning the Regularity of the Current of the Sea, and of the Winds in the Indies.

AS ſoon as the Rains do ceaſe (which ordinarily comes to paſs toward s themonth of October,) it is obſerved, that the Sea taketh its courſe Southward, and that the cold Northern Winds ariſeth. This Wind blows for four or five months without intermiſſion and without ſtorms, always keeping the ſame equality as to its ſtrength and quarter, unleſs it change or ceaſe a day or ſo by accident, but then it returns again unto its former place and temper. After that time; for two months or there about the other Winds do reign without any rule. Theſe two months being paſt, which is called the Intermediate ſeaſon, or, according to the Hollanders, the Wavering or Changing Seaſon, the Sea returns back from South to North, and the South-wind riſeth to reign alſo in his turn for four or five months, as the Current of the Sea doth: ſo that there paſs two months of intermediate ſeaſon; during which, Navigation is very difficult and dangerous, whereas during the two Seaſons it is very eaſie, pleaſant and without peril, except it be about the end of the ſeaſon of the South-wind. Hence you may find cauſe not to wonder, if you hear that the Indians, though elſe very timorous and inexpert in the art of Navigation, do notwithſtanding make pretty long and conſiderable Voyages; as when they ſail from Bengale to Tanaſſery, Achem, Malaque, Sian and Makaſſar; or to Maſlipatan, Ceilan, the Maldives, Moka, and Bender-Abaſſy; becauſe they take their time to go with one good Seaſon, and to return with the other. 'Tis true, that oft enough they are ſurpriſed and caſt away; but that is, when they cannot diſpatch their affairs in good time, or fail of taking their meaſures. Our Europeans alſo do ſometimes loſe themſelves, though they be far better Sea-men, bolder and more underſtanding, and their Ships better condition'd and equipped.

Of theſe two intermediate Seaſons, that which maketh the South-wind is incomparably more dangerous than the other, and much more ſubject to tempeſts and ſtorms: And even in the Seaſon it ſelf this wind is ordinarily much more impetuous and unequal than that of the North. And here I muſt not omit to give you a remark, which is, that about the end of the Seaſon of the South-wind, during the time of the rain, although there be a great calm out at Sea, yet 'tis very tempeſtuous near the Coaſts; to the diſtance of fifteen or twenty leagues: whence the Ships of Europe or others, when they will approach the Indian Coaſts, for example, of Suratte, or Maſlipatan, muſt be very careful of taking their time to arrive juſt after the Rains; or elſe they run great hazard of being ſplit and loſt upon the Coaſt.

This is very near what I could obſerve of the Seaſons in theſe parts; of which I much wiſh I could give you a good reaſon. I ſhall venture to tell you, that it came into my thoughts, firſt, that the Air, which environs the Globe of the Earth, ought to be eſteemed to have a ſhare in it, as alſo the Water of the Sea and Rivers, foraſmuch as both the one and the other gravitate upon this Globe, tend to the ſame Center of it, and ſo are in ſome manner united and faſten'd to it; ſo that from theſe three Bodies, the Air, the Water and the Earth, there reſults as 'twere one great Globe. Next, that the Globe of the Earth being ſuſpended and balanced, as it is, in its place, in that free and un-reſiſted ſpace, where the Creator thought good to place it, would be capable to be eaſily mov'd, if ſome adventitious Body ſhould come againſt it and hit it. Thirdly, that the Sun having paſt the Line to move towards one of the Poles, for example, the Arctique, coming to caſt its rays that way, maketh there impreſſion enough to depreſs a little the Arctique Pole, and to do that more and more according as it advanceth towards the Tropique; letting it riſe again by little and little, according as he returns towards the Line, untill by the force of his rayes he do the like on the ſide of the Antartique Pole.

If theſe ſuppoſitions, joyn'd to that of the Diurnal Motion of the Earth, were true, it were not me-thinks, without reaſon what is commonly affirm'd in the Indies, viz. That the Sun conducts and carries with him the Sea and Wind. For if it be true, that having paſſed the Line to go towards one of the Poles, he cauſeth a change in the direction of the Axis of the Earth, and a depreſſion in the Pole on that ſide, the other Pole muſt needs be raiſed, and that conſequently the Sea and the Air, being two fluid and heavy Bodies, run down in this inclination: ſo that it would be true to ſay, that the Sun advancing towards one Pole, cauſeth on that ſide two great regular Currents, viz, that of the Sea, and that of the Air which maketh the Mounſon-wind, as he cauſeth two oppoſite ones, when he returns towards the other Pole.

Upon this ground, methinks, it might be ſaid, that there are no other but two main oppoſite Fluxes of the Sea, one from the ſide of the Pole Arctique, the other from that of the Antartique; that if there were a Sea from one Pole to the other, that paſſed through our Europe, we ſhould ſee, that theſe two Currents would there be regular every where, as they are in the Indies, and that that which hinders this regularity of the Flux from being general, is, that the Seas are intercepted by Lands, which impede, break, and vary their Courſe; in like manner as ſome ſay, that the Ordinary Flux and Reflux of the Sea is hinder'd in thoſe Seas that lye in length, as the Mediterranean doth from Eaſt to Weſt. And ſo likewiſe might it be ſaid upon the ſame Foundation, that there are but two principal oppoſite Winds or Fluxes of the Air, and that they would be univerſally regular, if the Earth were perfectly ſmooth and equall, and one part like another every where.

An Anſwer to the Fourth Queſtion, concerning the Fertility, Riches and Beauty of the Kingdom of Bengale.

ALL Ages have ſpoken of Egypt as of the beſt and fruitfulleſt part of the World; and Writers will not grant, there is any Country comparable to it: But as far as I can ſee by the two Voyages I have made in the Kingdom of Bengale, I am of opinion, that that advantage belongs rather to it, than to Egypt. It bears Rice in that abundance, that it not only furniſhes its Neighbours, but many very remote parts. 'Tis carried up the River Ganges to Patna; and 'tis tranſported by Sea to Maſulipatan, and to many others Ports of the Coaſt of Coromandel. Beſides, 'tis ſent away into forrain Kingdoms, and principally into Ceilan and the Maldives. Further, it alſo abounds in Sugar, ſo that it furniſhes with it the Kingdoms of Golkonda and Karnates, where there grows but very little. Arabia alſo and Meſopotamia are thence provided with it, by the way of Moka and Baſſora; and Perſia it ſelf, by Bander-Abaſſy. Moreover, Bengale is alſo the Country of good Conſits, eſpecially in thoſe places where the Portugueſes are, who are dextrous in making them, and drive a great trade with them. They ordinarily make ſtore of thoſe big Pome-Citrons, as we have in Europe; and a certain Root, which is longiſh like Satſaperilla, and very delicate; and of that common Fruit of the Indies call'd Amba, and of Ananas, and the ſame Mirobolans, which are excellent; as alſo of Limons and Ginger.

'Tis true, that the Country of Bengale yields not ſo much Corn as Egypt; but if that be a defect, it is to be imputed to its Inhabitants that eat very little Bread, and much more Rice than the Egyptians: Yet it alwayes bears what is ſufficient for the Country, and to afford excellent Biſcuits, very cheap, for the proviſion of our European Ships, Engliſh, Dutch, and Portugueſe. You may there have almoſt for nothing thoſe three or four kinds of Legumes, which together with Rice and Butter are the moſt uſual food of the meaner people: And for a Roupy, which is about half a Crown, you may have twenty good Pullets and more; Geeſe and Ducks, in proportion. There are alſo kids and Sheep in abundance, and ſuch ſtore of Pork, that the Portugueſes, ſetled there and accuſtomed to the Country, live almoſt on nothing elſe but that; and the Engliſh and Dutch victual their Ships with it. There is alſo plenty of many ſorts of Fiſh, both freſh and ſalt: And, in a word, Bengale is a Country abounding in all things; and 'tis for this very reaſon, that ſo many Portugueſes, Meſtiefs, and other Chriſtians are fled thither from thoſe quarters, which the Dutch have taken from them. For, the Jeſuits and Auguſtinians, that have great Churches there, wherein they exerciſe their Religion with all freedom, did aſſure me, that in Ogouli alone there were no leſs than eight or nine thouſand Souls of Chriſtians; and (which I will eaſily believe) that in the reſt of that Kingdom there were above twenty five thouſands. And 'tis this affluence of all thoſe things neceſſary for life, joyned to the Beauty and good Humour of the Women natives, that hath occaſioned this Proverb amongſt the Portugueſes, Engliſh, and Holanders, viz. That there are an hundred open Gates to enter into the Kingdom of Bengale, and not one to come away again.

As to the Commodities of great value, and which draw the Commerce of Strangers thither, I know not, whether there be a Country in the World, that affords more and greater variety: For, beſides the Sugar I have ſpoken of, which may be numbred amongſt the the Commodities of value, there is ſuch ſtore of Cottons and Silks, that it may be ſaid, that Bengale is as 'twere the general Magazine thereof, not only for Indoſtan or the Empire of the great Mogol, but alſo for all the circumjacent Kingdoms, and for Europe it ſelf. I have ſometimes ſtood amazed at the vaſt quantity of Cotton-Cloth of all ſorts, fine and others, tinged and white, which the Hollanders alone draw from thence and tranſport into many places, eſpecially into Japan and Europe; not to mention what the Engliſh, Portingal and Indian Merchants carry away from thoſe parts. The like may be ſaid of the Silks and Silk-Stuffs of all ſorts: One would not imagine the quantity, that is hence tranſported every year; for, this Country furniſhes generally all this great Empire of Mogol as far as Lahor and Caboul, and moſt of the other forrain parts, whither Cotton-Cloth is carried. 'Tis true, that theſe Silks are not ſo fine as thoſe, of Perſia, Syria, Sayd and Barnt; but then there is alſo a great difference in the price; and I know from good hands, that whoſoever ſhall take care of chooſing them well, and of getting them well wrought, may have very good Stuffs made of them. The Hollanders alone have ſometimes ſeven hundred or eight hundred men of the Natives at work in their Factory of Kaſſem-Bazar; as the Engliſh and other Merchants have theirs in proportion.

It is alſo in Bengale, where that prodigious quantity of Salt-peter is found; which is ſo conveniently carried down the River Ganges from Patna, and where the Engliſh and Dutch load whole Ships full for many places of the Indies and for Europe.

Laſtly, 'tis Bengale, whence the good Lacca, Opium, Wax, Civet, long Pepper do come; and even Butter is to be had there in ſo great plenty, that though it be a groſs Commodity, yet notwithſtanding 'tis thence tranſported into divers places.

It cannot be denied that the Air, in regard of Strangers, is not ſo healthy there, eſpecially near the Sea: And when the Engliſh and Hollanders firſt came to ſettle there many of them dyed; and I have ſeen in Balaſor two very fine Engliſh Ships, which having been obliged, by reaſon of the War of the Hollanders, to ſtay there above a year, were not able to go to Sea, becauſe moſt of their Men were loſt. Yet ſince the time that they have taken care and made orders, as well as the Hollanders, that their people ſhall not drink ſo much Bouleponges, nor go ſo often aſhore to viſit the Sellers of Arac and Tobacco, and the Indian Women; and ſince they have found, that a little Wine of Bourdeaux, Canary or Chiras is a marvellous Antidote againſt the ill Air; there is not ſo much ſickneſs amongſt them, nor do they now loſe ſo many men. Boulepouge is a certain beverage made of Arac, that is, of ſtrong water, black Sugar, with the Juice of Limon water, and a little Muſcadine upon it; which is pleaſant enough to the taſte, but a plague to the Body and to Health.

As to the Beauty of the Country, you are to know, that all Bengale, taking it near an hundred leagues in length on both ſides of Ganges, from Raje-mehale unto the Sea, is full of great Channels, formerly cut out of the River Ganges with vaſt labour, reaching far into the Country for the conveniency of tranſporting Commodities, and the Water it ſelf, which by the Indians is counted the beſt in the world. Theſe Channels are on both ſides lined with well-peopled Villages and Burroughs of Gentiles, and the large Fields, lying near them, bear abundance of Rice, Sugar, Corn, Legumes, Muſtard, Sezamum for Oil, ſmall Mulberries of two or three foot high, to feed Silk-worms. But then the vaſt number of great and ſmall Iſles, that are in the midſt of Ganges, and fill all that great ſpace of ſix or ſeven days journey, (as there is in ſome places of this River from one ſide to the other;) this giveth an incomparable Beauty to the Country: For, they are very fertile, filled with fruit-bearing Trees, Ananas's, and all ſorts of verdure, and interlaced with a thouſand little Channels, which you cannot ſee the end of, as if they were ſo many Water-mails all covered with Trees. The worſt of it is, that many of theſe Iſles that are next the Sea, are now abandoned by reaſon of thoſe Corſaires, the Franguys of Rakan, elſewhere ſpoken of; and that they have at preſent no other Inhabitants but Tigers (which ſometimes ſwim over from one Iſle to the other) and Gazelles, and Hoggs, and Poultry grown wild. And 'tis upon the account of theſe Tigers, that for people travelling between theſe little Iſles in ſmall boats, as uſually they do, 'tis dangerous in many places to land; beſides, great care is to be had, that the boat, which in the night is faſtened to Trees, be not too near the Bank; for there are now and then ſome men ſurpriſed; and I have heard it ſaid, that Tigers have been ſo bold as to come into the boats, and to carry away men that were aſleep, chuſing the biggeſt and fatteſt of them, if one may believe the Water-men of the Country.

I remember, I made once a voyage of ten days, from Pipli to Ogouli, between thoſe Iſles and Channels; which I cannot forbear to relate to you, becauſe there paſſed not a day without ſome extraordinary accident. My Chaloupe of ſeven Oars was no ſooner got out of the River Pipli, and advanced 3 or 4 leagues into the Sea along the coaſt, to gain the Iſles and the Channels, but we ſaw the Sea covered with Fiſhes like huge Carps, purſued by a Shole of Dolphins. I made my men row that way, and ſaw, that moſt of thoſe Fiſhes lay along the Coaſt as if they were dead; that ſome advanced a little, others played and tumbled as if they were drunk. We all laboured to take ſome of them, and we caught 124 with our hands without any difficulty. Viewing them I obſerved, that out of all their mouths there came out a bladder (like thoſe that are in Carps,) which was full of Air, and reddiſh at the end. I imagined eaſily, that this muſt be the bladder which kept them from ſinking; but I could not conceive, why it ſhould thus come out of their mouth, unleſs it were that they had been long and cloſely purſued by thoſe Dolphins, and had made ſo great an effort to fly away as to make this bladder thus ſwell, and colour, and to hang out of their mouth. I afterwards told this thing to an hundred Sea-men, but they could not believe it, and I never found but one Dutch Pilot, who told me, that ſailing once upon the Coaſt of China, he had met with the like, and that preſently they put out their Boat to Sea, and took, as I did, with their hands abundance of Fiſhes.

The day after, about even, we came among thoſe Iſles, and after we had look'd for a place, where 'twas likely no Tigers would come, we landed, made fire, dreſſed a couple of Pullets, and our Fiſh, which was excellent. Preſently after Supper I made my men row until night, and for fear of loſing our way between thoſe Channels in the dark, we retired out of the great Channel, and found a good ſhelter in ſome ſmall Creek, where we faſten'd our boat to a thick branch of a Tree, far enough from the Land, for fear of Tigers. In the night, when I was watching, there fell out a Philoſophical accident, of which kind two had happen'd to me afore in Debli. I ſaw a Rainbow of the Moon, which I ſhew'd to all my Company, and which very much ſurpriſed two Portugueſe Pilots I had taken into my Boat at the deſire of a friend, who had never ſeen nor heard of ſuch a thing.

The third day we went aſtray between theſe Channels, and if we had not met with ſome Portugueſes making Salt in one of the Iſles, that directed us in our way, I know not what would have become of us. But behold another Philoſophical accident. In the night, being got again under ſhelter in a little Channel, my Portugueſes that ſtill were concerned about the Rainbow of the laſt night, and whom that Obſervation had made more curious to behold the Heavens, awaken'd me, and ſhew'd me another, as fair and as well form'd as that was, which I had ſhewed them. Mean time I would not have you think, that I miſtook an Iris or Rainbow for a Corona, or Crown. There is no month almoſt but at Debli theſe Lunar Rainbows are ſeen in the ſeaſon of the Rains, when the Moon is high above the Horizon: And I found that it muſt be ſo; having ſeen of them three or four nights one after another, and ſometimes double ones. They were not Circles about the Moon, but oppoſite to her, and in the like Poſition with Solar Rainbows: And as often as I have ſeen them, the Moon was Weſtward, and the Rainbow Eaſtward. The Moon was alſo near full; which in my opinion, is neceſſary; becauſe at other times ſhe would not have light enough to form any. Laſtly, theſe Rainbows were not ſo white as the Crowns uſe to be, but much more coloured, inſomuch that there might be diſcerned in them ſome diſtinction of Colours. And thus you ſee, how I have been more happy than the Ancients, who, according to Ariſtotle, had obſerved none ſuch before him.

The fourth day about evening we retired out of the great Channel, as we uſed to do, into a very fair place of ſafety; but had one of the moſt extraordinary nights that ever I knew. There was not a breath of wind, and the Air was ſo hot and ſtuffing that we could ſcarce breath. The Buſhes round us were ſo full of thoſe little ſhining worms, that they ſeem'd to be on fire; and there aroſe fires here and there, which were like flames, and frighten'd my Sea-men, who ſaid, they were Devils. Among the reſt there aroſe two, that were very extraordinary; one was a great Globe of fire, which in falling and ſpinning laſted above the time of ſaying a Pater noſter; and the other, which laſted about a quarter of an hour, was like a little Tree all in a flame.

The night of the fifth day was terrible and dangerous. There aroſe ſo great a ſtorm, that though we were under the ſhelter of Trees, and that our ſmall Boat was well faſten'd, faſten'd, yet notwithſtanding all that, the Wind broke our Cable, and was caſting us into the great Channel, where we had infallibly periſh'd, if I had not, together with my two Portugueſes, preſently laid hold on the Branches of ſome Trees, where we held faſt for above two hours, whilſt the ſtorme laſted: For there was no aſſiſtance to be expected from my Indian Oar-men, whom fright had made incapable to help us in this occaſion. But, what was moſt troubleſome and amazing, there fell a Rain as if it had been pour'd down with buckets, which filled our Boat, and was accompanied with ſuch Lightning and Thunder-claps, very near our head, that every moment we thought we ſhould ſink.

The remainder of our Voyage unto the ninth day, when I arriv'd at Ogouli, we paſſed very well and with pleaſure; for I could not be ſatisfi'd with beholding ſuch beautiful Countries: Mean time my Trunk and all my Baggage was wet, my Pullets dead, my Fiſh ſpoiled, and all my biſcuit drunk with water.

Anſwer to the Fifth Queſtion, about the Increaſe of the Nile.

I do not know, whether I ſhall acquit my ſelf, in reſpect of this Fifth Queſtion, as it were to be wiſh'd: But I ſhall faithfully impart to you what I have ſet down of it, after I had twice obſerved the Nile's Increaſe, and carefully examined the ſame, and taken notice withal of ſome things in the Indies, which have afforded me greater aids for it, than that Learned Man could have, that hath ſo ingeniouſly written of it, though he never ſaw Egypt but in his Study.

I have already ſaid in another place, that at the time when the two Ambaſſadours of Æthiopia were at Debli, my Agah Danechmend-kan, who is extraordinarily curious, ſent often for them, to inform himſelf, in my preſence, of the Condition and Government of their Country; and one day, amongſt other things, we occaſion'd them to diſcourſe of the Source of the Nile, which they call Abbabile; whereof they ſpake to us as a thing ſo known that no body doubted of it, and where one of theſe Ambaſſadours, and a Mogolian, that was return'd with him out of Æthiopia, had been in perſon. They told us, that it taketh its Origin in the Country of the Agaus, and iſſueth out of the Earth at two big bubling Springs, near one another, which form a ſmall Lake of about thirty or forty paces long; that at the coming out of this Lake it is then already a pretty River, and that from place to place it receiveth other Rivers which enlarge it. They added, that it runs bending, and forming a great Pen-inſule, and that after ſeveral Caſcata's from ſteep Rocks, it falls into a great Lake, which is not above four or five days journey from its Source, in the Country of Dumbia or Dembea, three little days journey from Gonder, the Metropolis of Æthiopia; that having traverſed that Lake, it iſſueth thence ſwell'd with all the waters that fall there, paſſeth through Sonnar, the principal City of the King of Funges or Barbaris, tributary to the King of Æthiopia, running on and making the Cataracts, and ſo entring into the Plains of Meſſer, which is Egypt.

After we had learned theſe particularities of the Source and Courſe of the Nile, I asked him, (to judge whereabout the Source of the Nile might be) towards which part of the World they believed the Countrey of Dumbia, wherein is Gonder, to be, in reſpect of Babel-mandel? But they knew not what to anſwer to this, but only, that they went alwayes Weſtward, and eſpecially the Mahumetan Ambaſſadour, (who was obliged to know better, and to take more Notice of the Poſition of the World, than the Chriſtian, becauſe the Turks are obliged in ſaying their Prayers to turn themſelves towards Mecca) did aſſure me, that I was not at all to doubt thereof: Which did aſtoniſh me very much, becauſe, according to their Deſcription, the Source of the Nile ſhould be much on this ſide of the Æquinoctial, whereas allour Maps with Ptolomie place it a good way beyond it.

We alſo asked them, at what time it did uſe to rain in Æthiopia, and whether there were regular Seaſons of Rain as in the Indies? To which they anſwer'd, that it rain'd almoſt never upon that Coaſt of the Red-Sea, from Suaken-Arkiko, and the Iſle of Maſouva to Babelmandel, no more than it doth at Moka, which is on the other ſide, in the Happy Arabia; but that in the Heart of the Country, in the Province of Agaus, and in that of Dumbia and the circumjacent places it rained much for two of the hotteſt months of the Summer, and at the ſame time when it rain'd in the Indies; which was alſo, according to my computation, the very time of the Increaſe of the Nile in Egypt. They ſaid further, that they knew very well, it was the Rain of Æthiopia which ſwelled the Nile, overflowed Egypt, and fertilized the ground of it by the ſlime it carried upon it; and that it was even therefore, that the Kings of Æthiopia pretended a Tribute to be due to them out of Egypt, and that, when the Mahumetans made themſelves Maſters of it, ill treating the Chriſtians of the Country, they had a mind to turn the Courſe of the Nile another way, viz. into the Red-Sea, thereby to ruine Egypt and to render it infertile; but that this deſign miſcarried by reaſon of the great difficulties in effecting the thing.

All theſe particulars, which I had already learned, when I paſſed over to Moka, from a dozen Merchants, that come there every year in the name of the King of Æthiopia to attend the Indian trading Veſſels, are conſiderable to make us judg, that the Nile increaſeth not but by the Rains which fall without Egypt towards the Source of that River: But the particular Obſervations, I have made upon two Increaſes of this River, make them yet more ſo; for, in reference to all thoſe Stories, that are made of it, as, That 'tis on a determin'd day it begins to increaſe; that on the firſt day of its increaſe there falls a certain Dew, which maketh the Plague ceaſe, ſo that no body dieth any more of it after that hath once fallen; and that there are peculiar and hidden cauſes of the overflowing of the Nile: In reference, I ſay, to theſe ſtories, I have found during the ſaid two Inundations, that they are but tales fancied and amplified by the people of Egypt, naturally inclin'd to ſuperſtition, and amazed to ſee a River ſwell in ſummer in a Country where it rains not: And I have found, that 'tis no otherwiſe with the Nile than 'tis with other Rivers, that ſwell and overflow by plentiful Rains, without any ſuch fermentations of the nitrous ſoyl of Egypt, which ſome have ſuggeſted as the cauſe thereof.

I have ſeen it ſwelled above a foot, and very turbid, near a whole month before that pretended determined day of its Increaſe. I have obſerved during its increaſe, and before the Channels were open'd, that when it had grown for ſome days a foot or two, it afterwards decreaſed little by little, and then began to increaſe a new, and ſo went on to increaſe and decreaſe without any other meaſure but that of the Rains that fall nigh the Source, and, as is often ſeen in our River Loire, according to the fall of more or leſs Rain in the Mountains whence it flows, and the days or half days of fair weather there.

In my return from Jeruſalem, going up from Damietta to Cairo, I chanced to be upon the Nile about a month before the pretended day of the Dew-fall, and in the morning we were all wet of the Dew fallen in the night.

I have been in Roſette at ſupper with Monſieur de Bermon, Vice-Conſul of our Nation, eight or ten days after this day of the Dew-fall, when three perſons were ſtruck with the Plague, of whom their died two within eight days, and the third, which was M. de Bermon himſelf, had perhaps not eſcaped, if I had not pierc'd his Plague-ſore; which preſently infected my ſelf like others; ſo that, if I had not forthwith taken ſome Butter of Antimony, I might have been as well as they, an Example of the little certainty there is in the Plague after the Dew; but this Emetic Medicine in the beginning of the Evil did wonders, and I kept but three or four days within doors; during which, I remember, my Bedouin that ſerv'd me made no ſcruple to drink, in my preſence, the remainder of my broth, to encourage me, and from his principle of Predeſtination, to laugh at the fear we have of the Plague. Yet Experience ſhews, that after the day of the Dew the Plague is commonly not ſo dangerous as before, but the Dew contributes nothing to that; 'tis only in my opinion, that then there is a greater opening of the pores, which gives a vent to the malign and peſtiferous ſpirits, that were ſhut up in the body.

Moreover, I have carefully enquired of ſome Maſters of Boats, that had gone up as far as the end of the Plains of Egypt, that is, to the very Rocks and Cataracts; who aſſured me, that when the Nile did overflow in the Plains of Egypt, where that pretended fermenting Nitrous Earth is, 'tis at the ſame time much ſwelled between thoſe Mountains of the Cataracts, where, in all appearance there is no ſuch Nitrous Earth.

Beſides, I have made diligent enquiry of thoſe Negro's of Sonnars, that come to ſerve at Cairo, and whoſe Country, being tributary to the King of Æthiopia, as I have ſaid, lyes upon the Nile between the Mountains above Egypt; and they have aſſured me, that at the ſame time when the Nile is high and overflowing in Egypt, 'tis ſo alſo with them by reaſon of the Rains then falling in their Mountains, and higher up in the Country of Habeche or Æthiopia.

The Obſervations I have made in the Indies, concerning the regular Rains that fell at the ſame time when the Nile ſwells in Egypt, are alſo very conſiderable in this matter, and may make you imagine, that the Indus, Ganges, and all the other Rivers of thoſe parts are ſo many Niles, and the Land, that is near their fall into the Sea, ſo many Egypts. This was my thought of it in Bengale, and what follows are the very words I ſet down about it.

That great number of Iſles which are found in the Gulf of Bengala at the Mouth of the River Ganges, and which by lapſe of time are join'd to one another, and at length with the Continent, put me in mind of the Mouths of the Nile, where I have obſerved almoſt the ſame thing; ſo that as 'tis ſaid, after Ariſtotle, that Egypt is the Workmanſhip of the Nile, ſo it may be ſaid, that Bengale is the Work of Ganges, only with this difference, that as the Ganges is incomparably bigger then the Nile, ſo he carrieth with him towards the Sea a far greater quantity of Earth; and ſo forms greater and more Iſlands than the Nile; and that the Iſlands of the Nile are deſtitute of Trees, whereas thoſe of Ganges are all covered with them, becauſe of thoſe four months of conſtant and plentiful Rains that fall in the heart of the Summer, and render it needleſs to cut Channels in Bengale, to water and enrich the Earth, as they do in Egypt. It is juſt ſo with Ganges and the other Rivers of Indoſtan, as with the Nile; this and thoſe increaſe in Summer by the means of Rain, which ordinarily fall at that time; except that then, and almoſt never, there are no Rains in Egypt, but a little toward the Sea, and that it rains not about the Source of the Nile; whereas in the Indies it rains in all the Countries, through which any Rivers paſs; except the Kingdom of Scymid towards the Perſian Gulf, where is the Mouth of the River Indus; it happening that in ſome years it doth not rain there at all, though for all that the Indus ſwells there, and the Fields are water'd by the means of cut Channels, juſt as in Egypt.

For the reſt, concerning the deſire of M. Thevenot, to impart to you my Adventures of the Red-Sea, of Suez, of Tor, of Mount Sinai, of Gidda (that pretended Holy Land of Mahomet, half a days Journey diſtant from Mecca;) as alſo of the Iſle of Camarane and Louhaya, and of whatever I could learn at Moka of the Kingdom of Æthiopia, and of the moſt commodious way to enter into it; theſe particulars, I ſay, I ſhall in time draw fair out of my manuſcripts, if God permit.

SOME

Some Particulars forgotten to be inſerted in my firſt Book, to perfect the Map of Indoſtan, and to know the Revenue of the Great Mogol.

TO underſtand the better what follows, 'tis requiſite to know the ſignification of theſe Terms, viz.

1. Soubah, that is, Government and Province.

2. Pragna, that is, the Principal Town, Burrough or Village that hath many others depending from it, where Rents are paid to the King, who is abſolute Lord of all the Land of his Empire.

3. Serkar, that is, the Exchequer of the Kings Treaſure.

4. Kazinè, that is, Treaſure.

5. Roupie, the Mony of the Country, equivalent to 29 or 30 pence.

6. Lecque, that is, an hundred thouſand Roupies.

7. Courour, that is, an hundred Lecques.

1. Jehan-Abad, or Debli, is the firſt Soubah; it hath ſixteen Serkars in its dependance, and 230 Pragna's: It yields to the King nineteen Millions and five hundred and twenty five thouſand Roupies.

2. Agra, otherwiſe called Akber-abad, is the ſecond. It hath 14 Serkars, and 260 Pragna's; yielding to the King twenty five millions two hundred and twenty five thouſand Roupies.

3. Labor hath 14 Serkars, and 314 Pragna's, bringing in to the King the Rent of twenty four millions ſix hundred ninety five thouſand Roupies.

4. Huſmer, which belongs to a Raja, yields to the King a tribute of twenty one millions nine hundred and ſeventy thouſand Roupies.

5. Guſarate, the Capital whereof is Amadavad, hath 9 Serkars, and 190 Pragnas; yielding to the King thirteen millions three hundred and ninety five thouſand Roupies.

6. The Kingdom of Candahar belongs to the King of Perſia; but the Pragna's that remain unit'd to the Crown of the Great Mogol, are 15 and yield in rent 1992500 Roupies.

7. Maloüa hath 9 Serkars, and 190 Pragna's; bringing in 9162500 Roupies

8. Patna, or Beara, hath 8 Serkars, and payeth the rent of 9580000 Roupies.

9. Elabas hath ſeventen Serkars, and 260 Pragna's; rendring 9470000 Roupies.

10. Haoud hath 5 Serkars, and 149 Pragna's: It yields 6430000 Roupies.

11. Moultan hath 4 Serkars, and 96 Pragna's: Brings in 11840500 Roupies.

12. Jagannat, in which is comprehended Bengale, hath 11 Serkars, and 12 Pragna's: It yields 7270000 Roupies.

13. Kachemire hath 5 Serkars, and 45 Pragna's: Yields 350000 Roupies.

14. Caboul hath 35 Pragna's, and brings in 3272500 Roupies.

15. Tata hath 4 Serkars and 54 Pragna's, and giveth 2320000 Roupies.

16. Aureng-abad, formerly Daulet-abad, hath 8 Serkars, and 79 Pragna's: Yields 17227500 Roupies.

17. Varada hath 20 Serkars and 191 Pragna's; yielding 15875000 Roupies.

18. Candeys, whoſe principal Town is Brampour, hath 3 Serkars, and 103 Pragna's: It brings in 18550000 Roupies.

19. Talengand, which borders upon the Kingdom of Golkonda on the ſide of Maſlipatan, hath 43 Pragna's, and payeth in rent 6885000 Roupies.

20. Baganala, on the Confines of the Lands of the Portugueſes, and the Mountains of Seva-gi (that Raja which plundred Suratte,) hath 2 Serkars, and 8 Pragna's; paying the rent of 500000 Roupies.

According to theſe Particulars, which I take not to be the moſt exact or the moſt true, the Great Mogol's yearly Revenue of his Lands alone would amount to above two Kourours of Roupies.

A Letter

A Letter ſent from Chinas in Perſia, June 10th 1668. To Monſieur Chapelle;

Concerning his Deſign of repairing again to his Studies, about ſome Points relating to the Doctrine of Atoms, and to the Nature of the Mind of Man.

My dear Friend,

I Did always believe what Monſieur Luillier, ſaid, That it would only be a Tranſport of Youth, and that you would quit this kind of Life, ſo much diſpleaſing to your Friends, and at length return to your Studies with more vigour than ever. I have been informed from Indoſtan by the laſt Letters of my Friends, that you are now in good earneſt, and are going to take a flight with Democritus and Epicurus, far beyond the flaming Walls of the world, into their infinite Spaces, to ſee and victoriouſly to report unto us what may, and what may not be done, to take a Review, and to fall upon a ſerious meditation of the nature of thoſe Spaces, the general Place of things; upon thoſe infinite Generations and Corruptions of their pretended worlds by their alledged fatal Concourſe of Atoms; upon the Nature, Indiviſibility, and other Proprieties of their Atoms; upon Liberty, Fortune and Deſtiny; upon the Exiſtence, Unity, and Providence of God; upon the uſe of the Parts of Animals; upon the Soul, and all the other ſublime matters they have treated of.

Et ultra proceſſit longè flammantia, &c.

For my part, I cannot condemn this Deſign, the inclination we have to know, being natural; on the contrary I am bound to believe, that it belongs but to great Souls to elevate themſelves to ſuch high Enterprizes, in regard it is principally by this means, that a man can make appear what he is, and the advantage he hath above other Animals. But as the higheſt Undertakings are commonly alſo the moſt dangerous, this certainly is not without much danger. For though we ſeem to have a peculiar inclination and affection to Truth; yet it ſeems alſo, that we have another very ſtrong one to Liberty and Independency, not to acknowledge a Maſter above us, and to ſay, to believe and to do all according to our Phanſie, without the fear of any, and without an obligation to render an account for any thing; ſo that if we be not upon our Guard, this latter Inclination will carry away the Bell; and if we ſtay upon the Reaſons that carry us to this liberty, and content our ſelves with ſlightly conſidering thoſe that might take us off from it; we ſhall ſoon find our ſelves engaged in a ſtrange life, or at leaſt be in ſuſpence between both, and toſſed up and down between a 'Tmay be that this is ſo, and 'Tmay be that it is not ſo; lukewarm, or cold, ſlow, and indifferent to what concerns the End and Rule of our life.

Moreover methinks, that moſt Philoſophers ſuffer themſelves eaſily to be carried away to this vanity of believing, that to entertain Opinions beyond the vulgar, is the way of being reputed Rare and Excellent Wits; they taking pleaſure even to vent ſuch Opinions as ſomething Myſterious, belonging to none but men of great Knowledge, and grounded on deep and weighty Reaſons; although they be not too much perſwaded themſelves of what they affirm. So that if ſuch men do not take great care on that hand alſo, they ſhall not fail to be ſeized on by the aforementioned vanity; and whilſt they go about to perſwade others of what they are not perſwaded themſelves, they ſhall inſenſibly fall into that very Belief; like a Liar, who after having often related one and the the ſame Untruth, or at laſt believes it to be a Truth; Or at leaſt they ſhall in the end fall into thoſe unquietneſſes, may be's, and indifferencies, which I have mention'd inſtead of attaining that ſtate of ſolid tranquility and ſublime knowledge, which they promiſed, and wherewith they flatter'd themſelves.

Laſtly, there is no doubt, that though we have this inclination to learn, yet we are withal very lazy; we deſire indeed Knowledge and Truth, but we would have it very cheap, cheap, without much Labour and Watching, which are irkſome things, and often diſturbing our health, yet neceſſary evils if we will know thoroughly the leaſt thing, and make our ſelves capable to give a ſoild Judgment thereof. And thence it comes, that if we be not conſtantly upon our Guard, and contend not perpetually with our ſlothfulneſs, we ſhall ſoon come to flatter our ſelves with this belief; That to know things, there needs not ſo much painful ſtudy; and ſo not being to reſolve upon an unceſſant Labour, we ſuffer out ſelves to be eaſily ſurprized with that Appearance of Truth, which ſhineth forth in the Reaſons commonly produced by theſe Gentlemen, called les Eſprits forts; inſtead of ſeriouſly examining them, that ſo they may not be made to appear to us beyond what they contain of ſtrength, nor the force of thoſe that make againſt them be hid and diſguis'd; as often enough happens, either by ignorance or prevention, or elſe by the vanity and preſumption of thoſe perſons, that make it their buſineſs to dogmatize; or laſtly, by, I know not what, unhappy pleaſure we generally take in ſuffering things to be exaggerated to us, or in evaggerating them our ſelves, tending to nothing elſe, than pleaſantly to deceive one another.

Thus, my dear Friend, to tell you freely my thoughts of your Deſign; methinks, that in Philoſophy, and eſpecially in the ſtudy of thoſe high matters which you undertake, there is no middle way: I mean, that either we muſt, without ſo much ſubliming our Wits, ſuffer our ſelves to be ſweetly carried away by the Current, which ſo many men of good ſenſe, and that are reputed honeſt perſons and good Philoſophers, do follow (which to me ſeems to be the beſt and ſureſt, as well becauſe of the great Labour, this ſtudy demands, as of the danger there is, that in Philoſophizing but by halves, and not penetrating things to the bottom, we get nothing by the bargain but diſquieting Doubts, making us unhappy the reſt of our days, and leaving us often very vicious, and uneaſie to Society;) Or elſe, if we will Philoſophize, to do it to purpoſe, and that, without fearing the labour, and without ſuffering our ſelves to be ſurprized by the vanity of coveting to paſs for extraordinary Wits, as alſo without ſuffering our ſelves to be carried away by that unhappy inclination of deſiring to live without a Maſter and a Law; that, I ſay, without theſe, we fall reſolutely upon the ſtudy, and from a pure love to Truth, we become obſtinate in weighing and weighing again all that comes before us, in meditating, writing, converſing, debating; in a word, in forgetting nothing of what may contribute to improve our underſtanding, and to render it more intelligent.

As to what at preſent you demand of me by your laſt, viz. that I ſhould impart to you what came into my thoughts when I was diſcourſing with our Danechmend-kan, the Learned Gentleman of Aſia, about all thoſe matters, you are now applying your Studies to: I ſhall tell you freely, and without flattering my ſelf, that you might addreſs your ſelf to a more intelligent perſon than me, but to none, that hath ſtudied them with more care, then I have done. For I have not only contented my ſelf, exactly to weigh the reaſons of all that ever I could come to ſee of both Ancient and Modern Authors, Arabians alſo, and Perſians, and Indians; but I have farther conferr'd an hundred times with whatever great men I could any where meet with, ſo far as that I have often fain'd, when I was with thoſe Eſprits forts, as they will be call'd, that I was not averſe from their Sentiments, to the end that they might conceal nothing from me. But that being a thing of great prolixity, it will be better, ſince you are now on the way to return into Europe, to refer that matter to our Meeting there, when we ſhall be able by word of mouth better and more conveniently to declare our thoughts to one another. Yet notwithſtanding, that I may not ſeem to be careleſs of your deſire, I ſhall in the mean time tell you thus much of the nature of our Underſtanding, That it ſeems to me very rational to believe, that there is ſomething in us more perfect and excellent, than all that which we call Body or Matter.

You know, according to the Idea that Ariſtotle hath given us of the Firſt Matter of things, that nothing can be imagin'd ſo imperfect, as it. For, in ſhort, to be nothing but a certain Neque quantum, neque quale, is, methinks, to approach to a Nothing as near as may be. You know alſo, that all the perfections and proprieties, which Democritus and Epicurus attribute to their Primitive Bodies, or to the firſt and ſole Matter of things, comes in a manner to this, that there are certain ſmall and very ſolid Beings, without any vacuity in them, and indiviſible; all having ſome particular and eſſential figure, ſo that there is an infinite number of round ones, (for example) an infinity of Pyramidal, an infinity of Square, and infinity of Cubick, Hooked, Pointed, Triangular gular ones; and ſo an innumerable number of other kinds of different Figures; all moveable of their own nature, and of an unimaginable Celerity; yet ſome of them more proper for the ſenſible motion of Concretions than others, that is to ſay, for diſengaging and ſeparating themſelves, or for flying ſooner and more eaſily away than others in the diſſolution of Compounds, according as they are more or leſs ſmall, or more or leſs round, or more or leſs póliſh'd and ſlippery: And laſtly, that they are all eternal by their nature, and conſequently all incorruptible and independent (as they pretend;) though they be without any ſenſe, reaſon and judgment. You know, I ſay, that all the Proprieties of their little Bodies come, very near, to what I have now ſaid; of which I deſire you to be mindful, that ſo we may hereafter judge, whether they be capable of what is aſcribed to them.

Yet, to take nothing from the force of their Principles, and to undeceive you; if you believe, I have caſt off Atoms, I ſhall avow to you frankly, that the more I conſider that Diviſion to Infinity of any portion of Finite matter, the more abſurd and unworthy of a Philoſopher it ſeems to me: and I believe the Reaſons, which are alledged to prove it, to be as captious as thoſe, which Zeno, ſuppoſing this ſame diviſibility, brought to prove, that there was no motion ſince Mathematical Points, Lines and Superficies, which have no being but by the Underſtanding, and are without profundity, ought not to be transferr'd and applied to Bodies Phyſical, which cannot be without all the dimenſions, and are the workmanſhip of Nature: To which add, that a Philoſopher ought to avoid, as much as is poſſible, to dive into Infinity, that being a deep and dark Abyſs, which often ſerveth men for nothing elſe but to hide themſelves, and in which the wit of man is at a perfect loſs.

Moreover, I acknowledge, I am ſtill of that opinion, not only, that Atoms are indiviſible, becauſe they are little portions of Matter, or little hard Bodies, reſiſting and impenetrable (proprieties as eſſential to Matter, as Extenſion) and becauſe they are pure, matter continued, without any parts that are only contiguous, and of which each hath its particular and determinate Superfice; but alſo that the ſeparation, disjunction or diſſociation of parts meerly contiguous in a compound, is, in my judgment, the only diviſion conceivable: ſo that 'tis not poſſible, not only to divide any Atome, that is, any portion of matter purely continuous, though we ſhould ſuppoſe it as long as a Needle, ſince that to divide it with Sciſſers; for example, or otherwiſe, you muſt come to ſome penetration, which is inconceivable to us; and that it muſt needs be, that ſomething of the Needle, ſome portion or ſome part (if it may be ſaid, that there are parts in a whole, where there are no contiguous ones) do yield, and yet that tis inconceivable, how it were able to yield to the Sciſſers that ſhould preſs it, or to make other, anteriour ones, yield without penetration; and that the more, becauſe the parts preſſed, and the part of the Sciſſers that ſhould preſs, are both of them of the ſame Nature and the ſame force, both hard, reſiſting and impenetrable. So that the Doctrine of Atoms hath this great advantage, that it doth not ſo much as ſuppoſe its Principles, by demanding to grant out of meer favour the Indiviſibility of the Primitive Bodies; foraſmuch as it even cannot be conceived that they are diviſible; nor, how out of ſoft, yielding and diviſible Principles there ſhould reſult a Compound that's hard; nor, how two moſt ſubtil portions of Matter, coming to hit one againſt another, ſhould not reſiſt each other by their hardneſs, without reducing themſelves into ſome duſt of ſmaller Particles. Beſides, this Doctrine demands not, to have it granted out of meer Grace, that there muſt be little void ſpaces betwixt the parts of Bodies compounded, how ſubtil ſoever you may deviſe a matter to fill them up; ſeeing it is likewiſe unconceivable, not only how a motion ſhould be able to begin in pleno (where all is perfectly full) but how the parts themſelves of this moſt ſubtil matter, that muſt have their particular figures defin'd and determin'd as well as the bigger, can be ſo perfectly diſpoſed as that there ſhould not ſtill remain ſome of thoſe little Spaces betwixt them.

I ſhall further acknowledge to you, that I think, it may, in the Atomical way of Philoſophizing, be very well and very rationally conceived, that there is no compound of ſo admirable a figure, compoſition, order and texture of parts, taking in the Body of Man it ſelf, but that it may be formed by the concourſe, order and particular diſpoſition of their little Bodies, the Atoms, provided there intervenes a guiding and regulating cauſe, intelligent enough for that purpoſe.

I ſhall likewiſe confeſs, that from their Principles there might reſult a Compound ſo perfect, as to be capable of the moſt difficult Local Motions that could be imagin'd, ſuch as are, To walk like a Living and Animal Subſtance; as alſo, perfectly to imitate the ſinging, weeping, and all the other local motions of the moſt perfect Animals; there being no contradiction at all in it, all Watches and ſo many other artificial Engines evincing it, and not ſuffering us to doubt of the poſſibility of the thing.

Laſtly, I ſhall very willingly agree, that the Sect of Democritus and Epicurus, (it being ſuppos'd, that the Atoms are the workmanſhip of the Almighty and All-wiſe hand of God,) hath very great advantages above the reſt, in that it can give a more probable reaſon of a great number of conſiderable effects of Nature, where others come ſhort; and in my opinion, there are none but ſuch as have not examined things thoroughly, and compar'd other Sects with it, that can doubt thereof. But to imagine and to perſwade my ſelf, that their Principles, with all thoſe advantages, at length are capable, as they would have it, by a particular concourſe, order, union and diſpoſition, how admirable ſoever, and even by an intelligent guidance intervening, to arrive to the forming of ſuch an Animal as is Man in his operations; This is that, my dear Friend, which I could never think poſſible; it hath ever appeared to me contrary to Reaſon and good Senſe, and will doubtleſs, appear ſo to you, provided you have the patience to recollect what you have heard an hundred times, and which I am now going to repeat to you after my own way.

It is not that I mean to preach to you, and to make you believe I am become a very good man after my return (a Traveller like my ſelf, and brought up in the School of Atoms, might poſſibly do Miracles, which I know not whether men would believe any thing of;) Be perſwaded, that if I take upon me to diſcourſe to you, it is not out of any vanity or affectation, but from my inmoſt ſenſe, and with all poſſible ſincerity. Nor is it, that I pretend, with all this Aſiatick Preamble, to have found any new Reaſons in the Indies; expect no ſuch thing, I pray: I do almoſt deſpair as well as Cicero, that men ſhould ever find any thing more upon this Subject beyond what hath been already found. It would be no hard task for me to ſhew, that all what the Moderns have ſaid concerning it, is either nothing, or nothing new; There would need no more, than to begin with taking up again, what Gaſſendi and Arnault have written about it againſt Des Cartes, to which I find not, that he hath made any Anſwer: And it were to be wiſhed, that he had been able to anſwer them ſo demonſtratively and magiſterially, as it ſeems he would have men believe he did: I ſhould embrace, and little leſs than adore the Author of a Demonſtration upon this Argument; and to ſuch an one the following Verſes would be much more deſervedly applicable, than to that ancient Atomiſt;

Qui genus humanum genio ſuperavit, & omnes
Præſtinxit Stellas, exortus uti Æthereus Sol.

I ſhall therefore deſire but one thing of you, which is, That you would pleaſe to make (which ſeems to me the only thing to be done here) a ſerious reflection upon what paſſeth within us, and upon the operations of our Underſtanding; and that thereupon you would tell me ſincerely, Whether you think, that there is a proportion between the perfection of thoſe operations, and the imperfection of what we call Body or Matter; ſuppoſing (what you will eaſily grant me) that how much ſoever you ſtrain your mind, you ſhall never conceive any other thing in Atoms, and generally in all that's Body or Matter, than thoſe proprieties already enumerated, Size, Shape, Hardneſs, Indiviſibility, Motion; or, if you will (which matters not here) Softneſs and Diviſibility.

I promiſe my ſelf, that you will readily grant me this Requeſt, which is, to go over again thoſe ingenious and agreeable thoughts of yours, that have been drawn out of your Memories; and thoſe many other Fragments of the ſame force of Wit, that have been left behind, and generally all thoſe other Poetical Tranſports and Raptures of your Homer, Virgil, and Horace, which ſeem to have ſomething of Divine in them: And you will not refuſe in that ſerenity of mind and Philoſophical temper, wherein ſometimes you are in the Morning, to make ſome reflection upon four or five things, that ſeem to me to deſerve very well the attention of a Philoſopher. The firſt is, That our Senſes are not only ſtruck by Bodies ſo, as the Eyes of a Statue or an Automaton, but that we feel their impreſſion, the titillation and pain, and that even we perceive that we feel, when we ſay, I perceive that this or that pleaſeth my taſte much more or much leſs than ordinarily; that my pain is much leſs or much more than it was; and ſo of an hundred things elſe. The ſecond, That often we ſtay not there, but deduce theſe particular Concluſions; We ought therefore to follow this; or we ought to ſhun that: And afterwards, theſe general ones; All what is good, is to be followed; and all what is evil, is to be avoided. The third, That we remember what is paſſed, and conſider what is preſent, and fore-ſee what is to come. The fourth, That ſometimes we endeavour to penetrate into our ſelves, into that which is inmoſt in us, as I now do, when I am ſearching what I am; what is this Reaſoning power that is within me; what are theſe thoughts; theſe ratiocinations, and theſe reflections I make, reflecting thus upon my ſelf and my Operations. The fifth, That being reſolutely ſet to meditate upon a thing, we ſometimes make new Diſcoveries, find new Reaſons, or at leaſt ſee thoſe that have been found already, weighing them, and comparing one with another, and ſometimes drawing thence ſuch Conſequences, as ſhall depend from a greater number of antecedent Propoſitions, which may be ſeen as 'twere in one view, and concur all to deduce ſuch a Concluſion; as it comes to paſs in all Sciences, eſpecially the Mathematicks; wherein our Spirit ſhews I know not what force and admirable extent.

Theſe few reflections might ſuffice for what I demand of you; and that the rather, becauſe as I can ſay more comes almoſt to the ſame thing. But you muſt reſolve for once to endure the Style of theſe Countreys of Aſia, the Air of which I have breathed ſo long, and to have the patience further to caſt your Eyes on a thing that ſeems to me very conſiderable, which is, That we know not only particular things that make impreſſion upon our Senſes, but that our Underſtanding, by I know not what admirable force and capacity, taketh occaſion to know and to form to it ſelf Idea's of a thouſand things, that fall not immediately and wholly as they are under the Senſes; for example, that Man is a Reaſonable Animal; that the Sun is much bigger than the whole Earth; that 'tis impoſſible, one thing ſhould be at the ſame time and not be; that two things, being equal to a third, are equal among themſelves; that the abſence of the Sun cauſeth the Night, that all what's generated is ſubject to corruption; that of nothing nothing can be naturally made; as not any thing that is, can naturally return to nothing; that of neceſſity there is ſomething Eternal and Un-created in the Univerſe, God, or the firſt Matter of things, or both, or that God created this Matter, and that either from all Eternity or in Time: And an infinity more of other great and vaſt thoughts, and remote from Matter, of which we ſcarce know by what door they have entred into our Mind.

Now, all theſe actions, I have been ſpeaking of, that argue ſo great a force and power, capacity and extent of the Mind of Man; all thoſe intern Motions; that peculiar State which we cannot perfectly explain, but yet plainly feel and perceive in our ſelves, when we attentively reflect on what paſſeth within us, and conſider our operations; All thoſe Actions, I ſay, and interiour Motions, or whatever you will call them, can they indeed to be aſcribed to Spirits, to a Wind, to Fire, to Air, to Atoms, to Particles of a Subtil Matter, and, in a word, to any thing that hath no other Qualities or Proprieties than what can be comprized under this word, Body, how ſmall and fine and nimble ſoever it may be, into what texture or diſpoſition ſoever it may be caſt, and of what motions ſoever it may be made capable? It cannot: we ſhall never be able to imagine that theſe things are meer Local Motions of ſome Engine barely Artificial, dead, inſenſible, without Judgment, without Reaſon: Theſe can never be any of thoſe inward actions I have mention'd, as, That I ſee or know that I know; that I ſee I reaſon; that I ſee thoſe reaſonings, and perceive that I ſee them.

Moreover, let us a little caſt our Eyes upon ſome of the main Propoſitions of Euclid, (not to ſpeak of thoſe of Archimedes, Apollonius, and ſo many others;) For my part, when I think only on the 47th. of the 1ſt. of Euclid, I there find ſomething ſo great and noble, that I avow to you, I can hardly believe that it was an Humane Invention: So that I ſhould imagine, that it was therefore that Pythagoras, after he had been ſo happy as to find this incomparable Propoſition, was ſo raviſhed and tranſported, that he made that famous Sacrifice to thank the Gods, and had a mind to declare thereby, that this Invention ſurpaſſed the reach of an Humane Underſtanding.

Yet I would not therefore ſay, that there is reaſon to believe, that in Man there is a particle of Divinity, or ſome ſuch thing. This is an unreaſonable Tenet of ſome Stoicks, and of the Cabaliſts of Perſia, and of the Brachmans of India, who, to acknowledge openly the Nobleneſs and Perfection of the Spirit of Man, choſe rather to caſt themſelves into this extremity, than to believe it to be ſo baſe and imperfect, as to be all Body and Matter. I am far from entertaining ſuch a Sentiment; you will ſee in the Letter to Mounſieur Chapelain, that I cannot believe this to be an opinion defenſible by a Philoſopher: But this I do, I obſerve in Man, as well as thoſe Stoicks and others, ſomething ſo perfect, ſo great and high, that their opinion ſeems to me an hundred times leſs abſurd, than that, which holds that in Man, and even in the whole Univerſe, there is nothing but Body, but bodily and local Motions, but Atoms, but Matter.

Lord! When I think on't, who is that man, how little of good ſenſe ſoever he may have, that can perſwade himſelf, that when an Archimedes, a Pythagoras, and others of thoſe great men, had thoſe effects of the Mind, and were in their deep Meditations, there was then nothing in their Heads and Brains but what was Corporeal, nothing but Vital and Animal Spirits, nothing but a certain Natural Heat, nothing but Particles of a very ſubtil Matter, or nothing but Atoms, which, though they be Inſenſible, and without all Underſtanding and Reaſon, and do not ſo much, (according to the Doctrine of the Atomiſts,) as move but by a fatal and blind motion and hit, ſhould yet come to move and concur ſo luckily and wonderfully, that, as once by ſuch a concourſe they had formed the Head of thoſe Great men, ſuch as it is with thoſe innumerable Organs ſo induſtriouſly order'd and diſpos'd; ſo alſo they ſhould then be ſo lucky as to form and produce thoſe ſubtil thoughts, and profound meditations; or rather that they ſhould come to move themſelves in all thoſe Organs in ſo wonderful a manner, as at laſt to fall into a certain Order and into a certain Diſpoſition and State, ſo marvellous, that they themſelves were that Conceiving, Seeing, Meditating, thoſe admirable Propoſitions, and thoſe Divine Inventions?

Add to this, when we find our ſelves, upon ſome Affront, or other Diſpleaſure received, ready to fall into Choler and Rage, and yet ſtop our Paſſion; I pray, this internal Commander and Command, which we feel, this kind of Obedience, of moderation and retreat, that is made, for example, upon the account of ſome conſideration of Honeſty, of Honour and Virtue, and againſt that natural Inclination we have to be revenged; what is that interiour motion and ſtate? Can it be rationally ſaid, that 'tis nothing but ſome Rollings, Counter-motions, Reflections, and peculiar conjunctions and textures of Atoms or Spirits, or of little Maſſes or Particles of Matter, which are made within thoſe Nerves, thoſe fine Membranes, thoſe very ſubtil Channels and Organs of the Brain, Heart, and other parts of the Body? Theſe are pure Chimera's.

A word more concerning Liberty: When in the apprehenſion of taking an ill part for a good, we keep our ſelves in a poyſe, ſeeking within our ſelves all the reaſons that are for and againſt, and ſeriouſly pondering and examining them; this apprehenſion, this reſearch, this ballancing, and the reſolution we at laſt take to do or not to do the thing; all that, all thoſe motions, all that inward ſtate and way of Being (I ſpeak in no other terms than they) ſhall it be nothing but a fortuitous and blind concourſe of little Bodies? Is't poſſible that you can imagine or perſwade your ſelf this? Lucrece himſelf, that ſworn Partiſan of the Epicurean Sect, could not do it, nor reſolve to attribute to Atoms alone thoſe free motions of the Will. For if the Will, ſaith he, is drawn away from fatality, and raiſed above Deſtiny, Et fatis evulſa voluntas, &c. How can he, with all his clinamen or deviation of Principles, have believed in good earneſt and without ſcruple, that there is nothing but Body, and nothing done in us, more than elſewhere, but by a natural, eternal, independent, immutable and inevitable concourſe of Atoms? He was not ignorant, that that being ſo, neither the Will, nor any other thing whatſoever could be drawn and exempted from that concatenation and eternal and immutable Sequel of Motions and Cauſes, that would follow and ſucceed one another by eternal Orders abſolutely neceſſary and unchangeable.

Beſides all this, I could put you in mind of many Reaſons that are wont to be alledged upon this Subject. You know that great man, who hath collected more of them than a ſcore of very good ones. But that would be to abuſe your Patience too much; and beſides I ſee not, that there is much more of any importance to be conſidered hereupon, than what I have lately repreſented unto you.

I could alſo tell you, how I judge that all Objections, made upon this point, may be moſt rationally anſwer'd; but I know, that you are not a perſon, for whom Books are to be made. I ſhall only mention two things to that purpoſe.

The firſt is, That 'tis true what they ſay, That Eating, Drinking, Health; Natural Heat, Heat, the Spirits, and a good Diſpoſition of Organs, (all which are natural things, and as they ſpeak, depending from Atoms as Principles and the firſt Matter) are things neceſſary to all thoſe Thoughts, Reaſonings and Reflections; and, in a word, to all thoſe Internal Operations I have mentioned. This is a thing that cannot be denied, and which every one doth too ſenſibly experiment not to aver it: But thence to conclude, that whatſoever intervenes and concurs to form thoſe Operations, is only and meerly Body, Atoms, Spirits, Subtil Matter, is that which, after the leaſt Reflection made upon their Excellency, and upon the imperfection of Bodies or Atoms, or upon the little reſemblance there is in their Qualities to thoſe Operations, can never with any good ſenſe be granted: So that, methinks the moſt that might be allow'd, would be, that the Atoms, and Spirits, and all thoſe other things alledged, are indeed neceſſary as conditions or diſpoſitions, or the like, and not as the firſt and abſolute Principles, and as the Total cauſe of the Operations; but that there is requiſite ſome other thing than all that, ſomething nobler, higher, and more perfect.

The ſecond thing is, That 'tis true alſo, that we cannot form a right, or, as they ſpeak, a next and poſitive Idea of what is above a Body or of any thing that is not Body: This, indeed, we cannot do, in my opinion, whilſt we are in this mortal ſtate ſo ſtrictly united to the Body; the dependance of the Bodily Senſes, that ſo much confine and obſcure the light of our Underſtanding, hinders us from it: But I ſee not that thence it is to be concluded, that therefore there is really nothing above Body, or Atoms, or Matter. For, how many things are there, of which we have no ſuch poſitive Idea, which yet Reaſon obligeth us to avow that they have a real Being? Or rather, how few things are there, of which we have any True Idea's? Have theſe Philoſophers themſelves any poſitive Idea of their Atoms? They acknowledge that their ſmalneſs is ſuch, that it cannot be ſo much as imagin'd by hearing this word Atom pronounc'd or explain'd: ſo far are they from being capable to fall under our ſenſes, and from imprinting in us a true and poſitive Idea; and yet notwithſtanding they believe, and conclude from Reaſon, that they are. A Mathematician, hath he the poſitive Idea of the Magnitude of the Sun? It is ſo prodigious, and ſo far remote from the capacity of the Senſes, that we are not able even ſo much as to imagine it ſuch as it is; and yet for all this, there is none that is not fully perſwaded and convinced thereof by the force of Demonſtrations, and that knows not perfectly, that he exceeds by far the bigneſs of the Globe of the Earth. And beſides, it is not true, that the nature of a thing may be known two manner of ways; either poſitively, as when it falls under ſome one or more of our Senſes, or as when we give a poſitive Definition thereof; or negatively, by ſaying what it is not: Now I ſhall grant, that we are not capable to know the Principle of our Operations or Ratiocinations by the firſt way, to ſay what it is, and how thoſe Operations are made and produced. Alas! we are not ſo happy; we ſhould need other Senſes far more perfect than all thoſe we have. We are not born to dive and Philoſophize ſo far:

Invida præcluſit ſpeciem natura videndi.

But we ought alſo to acknowledge, that at leaſt we are capable to know it after the ſecond way: So that, if we cannot ſay truly and poſitively what it is, we can at leaſt ſay, and certainly know what it is not: I mean, that from the perfection of the Operations, which we do evidently ſee to be ſuch as that they have no proportion with all thoſe proprieties and perfections of Atoms, and do univerſally ſurpaſs the reach of what is meerly Body; we can deduce a certain Concluſion, that the Principle of ſuch Operations, and thoſe Operations themſelves muſt needs be ſomething above all that's Body or Corporeal. Which is here ſufficient for me, who at the beginning engaged my ſelf no further, and pretend not, that we can make a true and poſitive Idea of that Principle; but only that we can and ought to conclude by Ratiocination, that there muſt needs be ſomething, as hath been ſaid, that is far more perfect and far more noble than all that is in the rank of Bodies, whatever its being or Nature may be.

But ſhall I make an end, fully to diſcover unto you my thought? You well know, whether I am a perſon that taketh pleaſure in vaunting, or in forging Untruths, or to ſpeak things at random in a matter ſo important as this. It cannot be denied, that there is a very great difference between the Operations of Brutes, and thoſe admirable Operations of Man, of which we now treat: I ſpeak not only in reſpect of thoſe of their outward outward ſenſes, but alſo in reference to thoſe of their inward ones, or their Imagination. All that is ſo much beneath the Reaſoning of man, that we muſt avow, there is not any proportion, and that thoſe of Man proceed from a very differing and infinitely more perfect Principle. Notwithſtanding all that (and this is the thought I would declare to you) I ſhould think that perſon an hundred times leſs abſurd, that ſhould go about to maintain, that in the Principle of thoſe Operations of Brutes, whether it be of their internal or even their external Senſes, there were ſomewhat more perfect than Corporeity and all that may be underſtood and comprehended under the name of Body, or Matter, or Spirits; than him, that ſhould pretend the Principle of the Operations of Man were meerly Corporeal: So much do I take this Opinion to be out of all reaſon, and unworthy of a man of good Judgment. Certainly it can be no ſerious Philoſophy; it can be nothing but an Exceſs of Vanity, that hath caſt thoſe Philoſophers, we have ſpoken of, into ſuch an irrational Extream. They doubtleſs ſaw, that their Sect had great Advantages above all the reſt, in being able to explain with much Eaſe and Probability abundance of the moſt conſiderable Effects of Nature, only by Local Motion, and the Order and particular Diſpoſition of their Matter, Corpuſcles or Atoms: And thence they would make us believe, that by the ſame Principles they could give an account of all, and explicate whatever concerns the Spirit of Man, and the Operations thereof.

My Dear Friend, have not you and I concluded an hundred times, that how much ſoever we ſtrain'd our Underſtanding, we could never conceive, how from Inſenſible Corpuſcles there could ever reſult any thing Senſible without the intervention of any thing but what's inſenſible; and that with all their Atoms, how ſmall and how nimble ſoever they make them, what motions and figures ſoever they give them, and in what order, mixture or diſpoſition they range them, yea and whatever induſtrious hand they aſſign them for guidance, they would never be able (ſtill ſuppoſing with them, that they have no other proprieties or perfections than thoſe recited) to make us imagine, how thence could reſult a Compound, I ſay not, that ſhould be Reaſoning like Man, but that ſhould be meerly Senſitive, ſuch as may be the vileſt and the moſt imperfect Worm on Earth. How then dare they pretend, that they will make it out, how thence can reſult a thing Imagining, a thing Reaſoning, and ſuch an one as ſhall be the Imaginations and Ratiocinations themſelves?

For my part, if you'l believe me, let us lay aſide all that preſumption and vanity of thoſe Eſprits forts; let us not pretend to be able to explicate the nature of the Principle of our Reaſonings in the ſame manner, as we might do the other things that fall under our Senſes, and let us not play the Geometers upon it. We are not, as I have already ſaid, happy enough for that; 'tis a thing which cannot be done in this mortal ſtate, and in this great dependance from the corporeal ſenſes in which we ſtand. Yet notwithſtanding we ought to form a higher Idea of our ſelves, and not to make our Soul to be of ſuch baſe alloy, as thoſe Philoſophers, too corporeal in this point, would have us do. We ought to believe for certain, that we are infinitely more noble and more perfect than they make us, and reſolutely maintain, that though we cannot exactly know what we are, yet we know very well and very certainly, what we are not; which is, that we are not altogether of Mire and Dirt, as they pretend. Farewel.

THE PREFACE.

THE World being an ample Volum, in whoſe Extent and Varieties the Framer's Wiſdom and Attributes are manifeſtly read and ſet out, it ſeems that great Travellers are the beſt Scholars and Proficients in this Book; ſince on's Native Countrey is but as a ſingle Leaf, where all the Singularities are not to be ſeen which are found in the other.

—— Non omnis fert omnia Tellus.

And the truth of it is, thoſe Ancient Philoſophers, who have firſt laid the Foundations of Arts, Sciences, and Commonwealths in the World, were Travellers into theſe very Eaſtern Parts, (partly deſcribed by us here) whence they brought home all their Knowledge; it being here that Man and Knowledge it ſelf had their firſt beginning. So that wiſe Travellers are not unlike those rich laden Vessels which through many dangers bring wholesom and profitable Cargo's, Drugs, and other Conveniences, to be dispers'd among the several Societies of their own Countrey: They are like those diligent Master-Bees, who run divers miles to extract out of many bitter Herbs that sweet Liquor, which they afterwards kindly refund to be enjoyed at home in common, in the hardest Seasons of the Year, by their Fellows. What costs them dear, others have it cheap: And there's scarce any Private Persons in the Commonwealth, to whom we owe greater Honour and Thanks, than to Worthy Travellers and Discoverers of Forein Countries.

Yet it may be truly said, That Ancient Travellers and Geographers have but as coarse Limners and Coast-Drivers, drawn a very rough Draught in their Relations of those Countries they describ'd unto us, in comparison of some later Writers, who also sometimes do but copy their Predecessors Stories; and Merchants, with most other Travellers, are weather-driven by their private Occasions or Misfortunes, to take but a Cursory Survey of Places, and so give but an answerable account of the same to the World.

But among all the Ancient and Modern Travellers, none had such fair Opportunities and Advantages as the Illustrious Monsieur Tavernier had, to make a true, profitable, and exact Relation of the Singularities of those Remote Parts of Asia, where he past so many Years

Years in great Splendour, as shall appear by the ensuing Considerations and Qualifications of a good Traveller.

1. He from his Youth had a strong Inclination to Travel, which secret Instinct is certainly a Preordination of God for an Undertaking; and this unseen Impulsion carries such extraordinary Instruments chearfully and prosperously through all the Difficulties, others of a contrary disposition would never wade thorough, for whom it would be in vain to strive against the current of Nature.

2. This Travelling Genius made him begin early to fit himself for his design, and soon to go about it. He was therefore sufficiently imbued in his Intellectuals with all due knowledge of Sciences, Language, and Geography, and precedent Travellers Maps and Books, without all which common Travellers cannot conceive so soon and so orderly, nor reap so much benefit for themselves or others.

3. But Speculations without Experience are but unprofitable Notions; and the Experiments of this kind are not to be had without great Means and Expence, for want of which many a good Undertaking is Still-born.

Haud facilè emergunt, quorum virtutibus obstat is an old and true Saying. But our noble Tavernier had an ample Estate, drove a great Trade, had Money in abundance, and a Prince's or Embassador-like Retinue, without which and great Presents none is scarce look'd upon in Luxurious Asia, fit for admittance into great and worthy Companies, where Knowledge may be attained; so that he thereby soon got into the Presence, Familiarity, and Closets of the Emperours, the Ministers of State, and the Philosophers of Persia, Mogol, &c. and got into the Acquaintance and Conversations of the leading and common Merchants, Trafiquers, and People; and knew their Languages very well: for it is in vain to have Eyes, if one have not also a Tongue in such cases.
Res angusta domi——

4. And whereas Learning and Riches do sometimes render narrow Souls of a more proud and unsociable temper, Monsieur Tavernier is by Nature and Education, an obliging, cheerful, and insinuating Traveller, and of a graceful Countenance. Comely Personages are beloved almost as soon as they are seen; and those that have but fair Souls, are not so till after they are known. Now Monsieur Tavernier having both these Advantages, had a free entrance into the Friendship and Notions the Indians (great or small) had concerning the Natural, Mechanical, Political, Religious, and Trading State of their own Countrey; which he made more his business to know, than to grow more rich.

RELATION Of the KINGDOM of TUNQUIN:
With a MAP of the COUNTRY and several FIGURES.

CHAP. I.

A Diſcourſe in general concerning the City of Tunquin, and of the Manner how the Author came to have knowledge thereof.

THE Kingdom of Tunquin has been long unknown to the People of Europe; neither have they, who have given us Relations thereof, well underſtood the Country, as having truſted too much to defective and fabulous Deſcriptions and Obſervations. Not that I am willing to be over ſevere in cenſuring; but ſubmiſſively I am bold to affirm, That this which I here make Public was extracted out of my Brother's Writings, of which I had the overlooking in my ſecond Voyage that I made to the Indies; and of which I was the more confident, for that the Author had been one who had made Eleven or Twelve Voyages from Batavia, Bantam, and Achem, to Tunquin. Other Obſervations I collected from the Tunquineſi themſelves, with whom I have had ſeveral Diſcourſes, during the time that I was at Batavia and Bantam, where they principally trade. And that which gave me the more light was this, That thoſe Merchants ſeveral times bring along with them ſome of their Bonze's or Prieſts, as alſo ſome of their Learned Men to teach their Children to Write and Read. For theſe Merchants when they make a Voyage by Sea, carry all their Families along with them. And from theſe Bonze's and other Learned Men I had ſeveral Obſervations and Memoirs in Writing, as being deſirous to be inform'd by me of the Government and Situation of our France. And as I was never without an Atlas and ſome other particular Maps, they were raviſh'd with admiration, when I ſhew'd them the Structure and Compoſure of the whole World, and the Situation of its ſeveral Kingdoms and Eſtates.

Therefore may the Reader with the more pleaſure and delight peruſe theſe Relations, when he has ſo much reaſon to be perſuaded that they are cordially done, and that they are made public by a perſon whoſe ſincerity has no deſign to abuſe him. My Brother, who was a perſon both cunning and couragious, and one that lov'd to Travel as well as my ſelf, having heard much talk in the Indies of the Grandeur of the Kingdom of Tunquin, reſolv'd to go thither, and as he had a particular gift to learn a Language in a little time, he ſoon grew familiar with the Mulaye, which is the Language of the Learned in thoſe quarters of Aſia, as Latin is among Us in Europe. He underſtood that Silk, Muſk, and other Commodities of the like nature, were much cheaper there then in other places adjoyning, and that the People dealt with more fairneſs and honeſty. Upon the encouragement of which Information he prepar'd a Ship, and made his Voyages with good ſucceſs.

He always carri'd with him a good Sum of Money; and more then that, he ſtor'd himſelf with a conſiderable number of ſmall Curioſities, to preſent the King and his Nobility, according to the general Cuſtom of all the Eaſtern Countries:

Thus

Thus he came to be well receiv'd the first time that he set foot in the Country; so that the Customer being by him oblig'd with a small Clock, a pair of small Pistols, and two Pictures, which were the Pictures of two Curtesans, immediately gave notice to the King of his arrival. Thereupon having order to attend the Court, and coming to kiss the King's hands, the whole Assembly was surpris'd to hear a Stranger, born in a Country so far distant, speak the Malaye Language so fluently. The King gave him a favourable reception, and kindly receiv'd the Present which he brought along with him. It was a very noble Sword, of which the Handle and Hilt were all over enchac'd with Rubies and Emraulds, with a Backsword Blade. To this he added a pair of Pistols, adorn'd and inlaid with Silver, a Persian Saddle and Bridle, embroider'd with Gold and Silver, a Bow and Quiver full of Arrows, and six Pictures, like those which he had given the Customer. These things highly pleas'd the King, who presently drew forth the Sword out of the Scabbard, the better to look upon and consider it. At length one of his Sons took it up, to try whether it would fit his hand as well as those of his own Country, and offer'd to make a blow. My Brother, seeing the young Prince handle the Weapon gracefully enough, after the manner of the Country, told the King, that if he pleas'd, he would show the King how they handled that Weapon in France, of which the King readily consented to be a Spectatour.

This was my Brother's first Reception at Court; for he made several Voyages to Tunquin, and every time that he return'd, they still the more and more obligingly entertain'd him. But that which fix'd him more in the good opinion and favour of the King and Lords of the Court, was his frolic and gentile behaviour in playing with them for several large Sums, insomuch that being one that ventur'd deep, he lost above 20000 Crowns in one Voyage. However the King, who was a generous Prince, would not suffer him to be a loser, but gave him those considerable Presents that suppli'd his losses. By means of my Brother's thus long sojourning in Tunquin, and the familiar acquaintance which he had at Court, together with the Trade which he drove in the Kingdom, as he was diligent to inform himself of all the Curiosities of the Country, it was easie for me upon the same foundation to lay the Structure of these Memoirs. Though I may safely say, I was no less laborious in my own particular, and by the frequent Discourses which I had with a great number of the Tunquineses, with whom I met both at Bantam and Batavia that came thither to Trade, and whom I often treated at my own Expences, to inform my self of the particular Ceremonies and Customs of their Country.

Thus you see the Grounds and Foundations of this Relation, which is both faithful and exact, and by which that noble Country, of which the Descriptions hitherto have been so obscure and uncertain, shall be truly discover'd and set forth, such as it is; declaring withal, that no other Consideration or Interest, then that of speaking truth, has incited me to undertake this Description.

For the better observation of a right Method in pursuance of this Relation, and to conduct the Reader gradatim to the more perfect knowledge of this Kingdom, I will speak first of its Situation, its Extent, and its Climate. Next I shall come to discourse of its Qualities, its Riches, and its Trade, which are the three Springs and Sources of the Strength and Force of a Nation. Next I shall give an Account of the Customs and Manners of the People as well in their particular OEconomy and Civil Society, as in relation to their Marriages, their Visits and Festivals. Next to this we shall give a brief Account of the Learning, and learned Men, and among them of their Physicians, and the Subject of their Art, that is to say, of the Diseases particular to the Country. We shall also give a Relation of the Original of the Government and Policy of the Kingdom of Tunquin, of the Condition of the Court, of the Inauguration and Funerals of their Kings, and in the last place of the Original of the Inhabitants.

And I dare ingage, that the Map of the Country, and the Cuts which were drawn upon the place, will no less contribute to the Divertisement of the Reader, then to the Explanation of the Matter which they contain.

CHAP. II.

Of the Situation and Extent of the Kingdom of Tunquin.

WE ſhall have the leſs reaſon to admire wherefore our Predeceſſors had ſo little knowledge of this Kingdom, when we conſider that having formerly been a conſiderable part of China, the Inhabitants in the ſame manner as the Chineſes did, kept themſelves cloſe within their own bounds, never minding to have any Commerce with other People, whom they contemn'd and lookt upon as Barbarians come from the other part of the World. But now that they find that Strangers come to find them out in their own Territories, they begin to ſee that other People have as good Government as themſelves; which has bred in them a deſire to Converſe and Trade with Foreigners; ſo that now they aſſociate themſelves in friendly manner with all other People, as I have obſerv'd them to do both at Batavia and Bantam. Moſt people believe this Country to lye in a very hot Climate; nevertheleſs it is now known to be very temperate, by reaſon of the great number of Rivers that water it; which, together with the Rains that fall in their Seaſons, cauſe a briſk freſhneſs of the Air; which indeed happ'ns moſt uſually over all the Torrid-zone, as I have obſerv'd in my Indian Travels. From whence we may alſo have reaſon to believe the Country to be very fruitful and thick inhabited.

To the Eaſt this Kingdom lies upon the Province of Cauton, one of the beſt of China.

To the Weſt it is bounded by the Kingdom of Brama.

To the North it borders upon two other Provinces of China, Junnan and Quanſi.

To the South it lies upon Cochinchina, and the great Gulph of the ſame name.

To return to the Climate, the Air is ſo mild and temperate, that all the year long ſeems to be but one continual Spring; Froſt and Snow are never there to be ſeen; and beſides, beſides, the Peſtilence, the Gout, the Stone, and other Diſeaſes ſo frequent in Europe, there are never known. There are but two Winds, which divide the whole Year between them; the one blowing from the North, the other from the South, and both continuing the ſame for ſix months together. The firſt refreſhes the Earth in that manner, that there is nothing ſo delightful as the Country of Tunquin. The other begins to blow from the end of January to the end of July; and the two laſt months are their months of rain. The greateſt inconvenience is, that there ariſe once in ſeaven years, as well in this Country as in other parts of the Indies, thoſe hideous and terrible Tempeſts, that blow down Houſes, tear up Trees by the roots, and make ſtrange Deſolations. They ſeldom laſt above four and twenty hours, nor are their ſad Effects to be felt but only upon the Seas of China, Japon, Cochinchina, Tunquin, and the Manilles, being rarely known in any other Seas.

The Aſtrologers of thoſe parts believe that theſe terrible Tempeſts proceed from the Exhalations that riſe out of the Mines of Japon. It comes with that ſuddain force that when it ſurprizes a Veſſel out at Sea, the Pilots have no other remedy then to cut down all the Maſts, that the ſtorm may have the leſs force upon the Ship.

In this fair extent of Land, almoſt equal to that of France, are ſeveral Provinces, whoſe limmits are not well known; the Tunquineſes being no great Geographers, nor having bin over curious to write the Annals of the Nation. But the moſt underſtanding and knowing among them aſſur'd me at Batavia, that the whole Kingdom contain'd above twenty thouſand Cities and Towns. They alſo affirm'd that there might be many more, but after the manner of their Neighbours the Cochinchineſes, many of the People chooſe rather to upon the Water then upon the Land; ſo that you ſhall ſee live the greateſt part of their Rivers coverd with Boates, which ſerve them inſtead of Houſes; and which are very neat, though they alſo keep their Cattel in them.

CHAP.

CHAP. III.

Of the Quality of the Kingdom of Tunquin.

THis Country for the moſt part is a level Extent, which riſes up and down into pleaſant Hillocks; the greateſt Hills which it has lying to the North. It is water'd by ſeveral Rivers which inter-cut and glide through the Country: ſome of which carry Galleys of good burthen, and large Shallops, very commodious for trade. Yet in all the Country there grows neither Corn nor Wine, by reaſon of the want of rain, which never falls but in the Months of June and July. But it bears an infinite quantity of Rice, which is the chief ſuſtenance of the People. Of this Rice alſo they make their Drink, beſides which they have good Aqua Vitæ or Strong-water. Their Fruits are excellent, but much different from ours, as are alſo the Trees that bear them. The chiefeſt of theſe Trees are the Palm-tree, which bears a Fruit bigger then in any part of Aſia. The Nut is about the bigneſs of a Man's Head, in ſhape like a Coco-nut; the Shell is very hard, and being open'd, the Pulp within is as white as Snow, having a taſt like our Almonds, and every one of the Fruits contains about two glaſsfuls of Liquor, very refreſhing and pleaſing to the Palate. The Gogavier, very much reſembles our Lawrel, of which there are two ſorts; the one bears a Plum, green without and red within: but the Fruit of the other Tree, which is in much more eſteem, is yellowiſh without and white within, the top of the Fruit being like a ſmall Noſegay: the Pulp is full of ſmall Kernels, leſs then thoſe of a Pomegranate; and if they be eaten before they are ripe they bind the belly, whereas being eaten when they are come to full maturity they work a contrary effect. Formerly this Fruit was not known in the Kingdom of Tunquin, but after the Portugals ſeated themſelves at Macao, they carri'd ſeveral Plants thither, ſo that now the Fruit is grown very common. The Papager bears a Fruit which very much reſembles a ſmall Melon, the taſt whereof is very delicious. The Arager grows upright and ſtreight, like the Maſt of a Ship, Ship, bearing no Branches but at the top, which makes it appear like a Crown. The Fruit which it produces is like a Nutmeg, but a little more round. The People break this Nut, and bruising it together with Betle leaves, mix both with a little Chalk, and make use of the Powder to keep their Teeth clean, to dye their Lips of a Vermilion colour, and to keep their Breath sweet.

They have but two sorts of Figs, the one like ours, and the other like those which are call'd Adam's Figs, as long as a Man's finger.

There is also another Tree, very like our Willow, which they call the Powder Tree, because that of the Wood they make Charcoal, and of the Coal a Powder which they make use of in their Wars.

The Jambager is another Tree, that grows very high, which bears a Fruit about the bigness of a Citrul-Cucumber, the Pulp whereof is full of Kernels like a Granate, very cooling and pleasant, and very frequently eaten in the Season of heat.

The High-ways are also planted with Trees on both sides for the convenience of Travellers: And there are some of these Trees so big that two or three thousand men may stand under them, like that at Ormus, or Bandar Abassi, by me describ'd in my Relations of Persia, and of which many other Travellers have made mention. When the Branches of these Trees are about ten or twelve foot long, there issue forth other little Branches which turn downward, and by little and little descending to the ground, take root and afterwards become as it were so many Pillars to support the Master-Branches. There are some of the Master-Branches three hundred Paces long, which are supported by these out-growing Branches at the distance of every ten or twelve foot. The Fruit is of the bigness of one of our great Nuts, the Shell whereof is red, containing within nothing but a Kernel like a grain of Millet. The Rere Mice feed upon 'em, and also make their Nests in the trees. These Rere-mice are as big as a good Pullet, insomuch that their Wings are above a foot and a half long. They never light upon the tree like other Birds, but you shall see them all the day long hanging at the branches of the trees, fasten'd by their Claws to the tree with their heads downward. Upon every Wing they have ſeven as it were little Hooks or Claws, ſo that being ſhot, they never fall to the ground, but remain fixed to the branches, that at a diſtance you would take them to be ſome great Pears that hung upon the tree. They are accounted a great dainty among the Portugals, who leave their Pullets to eat them. 'Tis true that their Fleſh is very white, and when they are young they are a delicate ſort of Diet. I happen'd to eat of them two or three times with the Portugals, who thought they had oblig'd me with a great dainty; and had I not known what they were, I ſhould have taken them for Pullets. And now I am talking of the Delicacies of the Country, I will tell you of one ſort of Dyet which is very ſingular. This Food is the Neſt of a certain Bird which is no where to be found, but in the four Iſlands that lie upon the Coaſt of Cochinchina, and of which you have the Figures in the Table A, B, C, D. Theſe Birds are about the bigneſs of a Swallow, and build their Neſts in ſuch a manner, that they are neither too cloſe compacted, nor altogether tranſparent; they are like an Onion compos'd of ſeveral rings and envelopings; that compoſe a Neſt of a certain ſort of Ganim, which is ſteep'd in warm water, and mix'd with all the Sawces which are made both for Fiſh and Fleſh. It is tranſported all over India and into Holland for Curioſitie's ſake. You would believe in eating thoſe Meats which are ſeaſon'd therewith, that thoſe Neſts were compos'd of all the Spices in the Orient. I have not only brought this Diet into France, and preſented of it to ſeveral Perſons of Quality, but I have alſo my Vouchers for the truth of what I relate, ſeveral of my Friends who have brought it from Holland, among the reſt M. de Villermont, whoſe Name is famous for his Travels into the Eaſt-Indies. He and all thoſe that have eat thereof agree with me, that all the Spices of the Eaſt put together, do not give that effectual reliſh and ſavour as theſe Neſts do, to the Meats and Diſhes wherein they are us'd.

Near to theſe four Iſlands, where theſe Birds Neſts are found, are five others mark'd in the Map 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. In theſe five Iſlands are ſuch infinite number of Tortoiſes, and ſuch excellent Food, that the Tunquineſes and Cochinchineſes do not believe they have entertain'd their Friends at a Banquet as they ought to do, till the Tortoiſes are brought in. Thoſe two Nations pickle up great quantities of them, and ſend them abroad, which is a vaſt trade among them; and indeed the chiefeſt occaſion of the Wars between them is, becauſe the Cochinchineſes do all they can to hinder the Tunquineſes to fiſh for them, alledging that thoſe Seas and Iſlands belong to them. Neither is the Meat but the Shell alſo of great eſteem, and one of the greateſt Commodities for Trade in Aſia.

Tunquin alſo affords great ſtore of Anana's and Orange trees, of which there are of two ſorts: the one that bears a Fruit no bigger then an Abricot; the other bigger then thoſe of Portugal: both alike in taſt, and being to be gather'd from the tree for ſix months together. They have alſo two ſorts of Citrons, the one yellow, the other green; but both the one and the other ſo tart and ſow'r, that they cannot be eaten without offence to the Stomach. Nevertheleſs, the Juyce is made uſe of as we do here of Aqua fortis, to cleanſe Copper, Tin, and Iron, before we gild thoſe Metals, as alſo for Tinctures, eſpecially thoſe of Silk. They are alſo made uſe of for Lyes to whiten Linnen, and to take out Spots. Through all the Territories of the Great Mogul they make uſe of this Juyce of Citrons to whiten their Calicuts; whereby they make them ſometimes ſo white that they dazle the ſight.

They make great quantities of Silk in the Kingdom of Tunquin, of which both rich and poor make themſelves Garments. The Hollanders, who thruſt themſelves in every where, where there is any hope of gain, carry off ſuch a quantity every year, that it is now become the chiefeſt part of that Commodity which they carry to Japon; whereas before they fetch'd their Commodities from Perſia, Bengala, or China.

As for ſweet ſmelling Flow'rs, the Tunquineſes have but one ſort, which they call the Flow'r of Bague. It grows like a large Noſegay, and the Branches of the Shrub that bear it, ſpread themſelves crawlingly upon the ground. As they have great ſtore of Sugar, ſo they eat very much, while it is yet in the Cane, not having the true Art to refine it: and that which they do groſly refine, they make into little Loaves weighing about half a pound. They eat very much, making uſe of it always after Meals to help digeſtion.

Through

Through the whole Kingdom are neither Lions, Aſſes, nor Sheep; but the Foreſts are full of Tigers, Harts, and Apes, and the Fields are full of Beeves, Cows, and Hogs. As for Hens, Ducks, and Turtles, they are not to be number'd, which is the general Proviſion for their Feſtivals. Their Horſes are very well ſhap'd; of which there are always five or ſix hundred in the King's Stables; He alſo keeps the ſame number of Elephants, of which ſome are for the Service of his Houſe, the reſt bred for the Wars. Theſe Elephants are of a prodigious bigneſs, neither are there any ſo tall nor ſo nimble in any part of Aſia; for they will bow themſelves, and ſtoop ſo low, that you may get upon their backs without help. They have no Cats, but they have Dogs that ſerve for the ſame purpoſe, and will watch all night to kill the Rats and Mice, which are very large and very troubleſom. Very few Birds are to be ſeen in the Air; which toward the evening grows duskiſh, by reaſon of thoſe vaſt number of Gnats that get into the Houſes in the night time and hinder people from ſleeping, not only by the noiſe which they make, but with their continual ſtinging; which is one of the greateſt inconveniencies of the Country. For remedy whereof in ſome meaſure, an hour before they go to ſleep they take the Huſk or Chaff of the Rice, which flies from the Rice when it is beaten, and ſtrew it upon a ſmall Fire in a Fire-ſhovel, and ſo let it ſmoak, and by that means they kill or drive thoſe Flies away. Beſides this, they cover the Bed with a Pavilion or Tent that trails upon the ground, made like a Net with very ſmall holes to let in the Air. But notwithſtanding all the prevention can be us'd, they will be about a man when he riſes i' the morning. But there is yet a far greater inconvenience in this Country, which proceeds from the infinite numbers of white Emmets, which though they are but little, have teeth ſo ſharp, that they will eat down a wooden Poſt in a ſhort time. And if great care be not taken in the places where you lock up your Bales of Silk, in four and twenty hours they will eat through a Bale, as if it had been ſaw'd in two in the middle. Several of them have fallen from the Cieling into my Neck, where they rais'd Bliſters upon the Skin, which preſently fall again being waſh'd with cold Water.

I have told you that Hens and Ducks are infinitely numerous in Tunquin, I will now tell you how they preserve the Eggs of these Creatures, which they will keep for two or three years together without being spoil'd. They salt them, and to make them take salt, they fill a Vessel full of Water, and throw a good quantity of Salt into it. If the Egg sink to the bottom, the Pickle is not good; then they throw in more Salt, till they find that the Eggs swim. The Pickle being thus made, they take Ashes, and make them up into a Past with this Pickle: and in this Past they enclose every Egg by it self, and then wrap it up in a leaf of an Herb, not unlike one of our Pear-tree leaves, but much larger, and then put the Eggs into Earthen Pots close cover'd: after which manner they keep their Eggs for two or three years together.

In other parts of the Indies where there is great store of Oyl, as in the Dominions of the Great Mogul, the Kingdoms of Pegu, and Arochan, they put their Eggs into great Earthen Pots well varnish'd, and then fill the Vessel with an Oyl which is made of a small Seed like Rape-seed. For as for Sallad Oyl, after you are once pass'd Aleppo, you see no more Olive-trees over all Asia, but only in one place of Persia near Casbin, where between the Mountains lies a little Valley, about a League long and half a League broad, full of Olive-trees, but they make but very little Oyl, preserving the Olives only to eat. But to return to the Eggs; they are the chief Provision which they eat a Ship-board. But the Eggs which are preserv'd in Salt are preferr'd much before those that are kept in Oyl; because that in using the first, there is no need of carrying Salt to Sea, or of boiling Salt with their Rice. When they eat them, they boil them till they are hard, and with every mouthful of Rice they eat a Pea's bigness of Egg, which is as good and better then Salt with their Rice. As to what remains, there are neither Mines of Gold nor Silver in the Kingdom of Tunquin, neither do they Coin any Money.

CHAP. IV.

Of the Riches, Trade, and Money of the Kingdom of Tunquin.

THE chief Riches of the Country of Tunquin consist in the great quantity of Silks which they sell to the Hollanders, and other Foreigners, and in their Lignum Aloes. Of which there is some worth a thousand Crowns the Pound, according to its goodness and oyliness. There is some that is not worth above three Crowns, but it is dry and good for nothing but to make Cabinets, or Beads to hang about Womens Necks. All the Mahumetans, especially such as let their Beards grow, make great account of this Wood; and when they give a Visit, they presently bring a little Chafing-dish, and cast a small piece of this Wood upon the Coals, which yields a smoak and pleasing mist; with which they perfume their Beards, at the same time lifting up their hands to Heaven, and crying, Elhemed Illah, or God be thanked. If the Wood be oily, the bigness of a Pea will serve to throw upon the fire, which being a little moisten'd in Water, will yield as much smoak as a dry piece as big as a Man's fist. Which is the reason, that if it be oily and good it wants no price. One of the chief Presents, as I have observ'd in another part of this Book, which the Portugals of Goa sent to the Emperor of Japon, was a piece of Lignum Aloes, six foot long, and two round. It cost 40000 Pardo's or 54000 Livres.

It is so much the more pleasure and profit to trade with the People of Tunquin, by how much the more faithful and frank they are in their dealing then the Chineses, who will deceive you if they can; so that it is a hard thing to be too cunning for them, as I have often found by experience. When you have sold them any Commodity, and they find that their Bargain is not very advantageous, their general way of getting off is this: As they have generally three sorts of Reals, one sort that is full weight, others which are light, four, others eight per Cent. if they have no mind to stand to their bargain, they offer to pay you for your Goods in light Reals, which they have clipt themſelves, and ſo you are deceiv'd. There are no ſuch People for Trade in the World: they refuſe to deal in nothing, even in old Shoes, and if you will ſell them but one of them too, they'l buy it, without ever enquiring why you will not ſell the other. But for thoſe of Tunquin they are more blunt and plain in their dealing, ſo that it is a pleaſure to have to deal with them. I have told you, there are neither Mines of Gold or Silver in Tunquin, neither do they Coin Money there. So that in Trade they make uſe of certain Lingots of Gold, as they are brought out of China, ſome of which amount to 300 Livres of our Money, others to ſix hunder'd. They alſo make uſe of Bars of Silver as they are brought from Japon. As for ſmall Payments they either cut the large Bars into ſmall pieces, to which purpoſe they have their Scales, like our Stelleers, or elſe they pay in Foreign Coin, which are the Reals of Spain generally. This Gold and Silver is brought from China, and Japon, in lieu of thoſe vaſt quantities of Silk which are exported out of the Country, which with Musk and Lignum Aloes are the chief Riches of the Kingdom.

CHAP. V.

Of the Strength of the Kingdom of Tunquin by Sea and Land.

THey who have written before me concerning the Kingdom of Tunquin, have ſpoken largely of its Forces both by Sea and Land, and allow it a prodigious number both of Souldiers and Galleys. They write that the Forces which were uſually wont to meet at the Rendevouz were 12000 Horſe, 2000 Elephants, as well to carry the King's and the Nobilities Tents and Baggage, as for the Service of the War, 300000 Foot, and 300 Galleys. And in regard the Kingdom is well ſtor'd with Proviſion and Ammunition, that in time of War the whole Army exceeds 500000 Men. But the number which my Brother

ſaw

The King of Tunquin's Setting out for the War.

1. The King going out of his Palace is carried in his Palanquin or Chair by the Chief Officers of his Houſhold.

2. The Order of the King's March when he goes to the War.

3. The Muſicians and Trumpeters who follow his Chair.

4. An Officer who carries a Baſon full of Water, on which doth float a Braſs Boul with a hole in the bottom of it; ſo that exactly in an hour this Boul becomes full of Water, and ſuddenly ſinks to the bottom.

5. Then preſently two other Officers do ſtrike the Hour upon two great Braſs Platters, N.5. of about a Yard Diameter, and much after the Form of our Burning Glaſſes, yet of the Metall that Bells are made of, which cauſes that they are heard a very far off.

Afterwards he that carries the Baſon of Water takes up the Cup from the bottom, and ſets it again a ſwimming atop of the Water, juſt as it was before. When it is full and ſinks, they after the ſame manner ſtrike on the ſaid Platters. And this is their way of reckoning the Hour and Times in Tunquin, as well as in the Indies, and almoſt throughout the Eaſtern Parts betwixt the Tropicks; for that the Clocks which are made in Europe become uſeleſs in thoſe Countries during the Rainy Seaſon, the Air being there ſo heavy and damp, that all Iron and Steel, nay the very Knives and Watches in peoples Pockets do grow ruſty, though you wrap them up never ſo well in Cotton or Leather, and take all the care imaginable to keep them dry; yet it will be impoſſible otherwiſe to preſerve them from Ruſt, than by letting them lie in Oyl while that Weather laſts.

This Foggy Dampneſs of the Air is predominant as ſoon as you are paſt Perſia, in all the Mogol's Countrey, from the Fifteenth of June to the end of September. The further one goes on toward the Eaſt, the later theſe Rains do begin and are met withall.

It's good likewise to observe, that in the Empire of the Great Mogul, in Tunquin, and in other Easterly Parts between the Tropicks, they do as we divide the Day and Night into 24 Hours, making the Day of 12, and the Night to be of as much; so to proportion equally the Times of Working and of Rest. But they do subdivide both the Day and the Night into 4 equal parts, and this Division is made known by the Strokes given upon those Platters. As for Example: The first Hour of the first Watch of the Night is mark'd by one Blow, the second by another, and the third likewise by another. In the second Watch of the Night the first Hour is made known by two Blows one after another, and so of the rest untill the third Watch; then at the first Hour of that they give three Strokes. And this Order is observed till the last Hour of the fourth Watch, which is mark'd by four Knocks. In this manner they continue to marck the first Hour of the day with the same Regularity.

All Persons of Quality do keep Eight Officers on purpose for this Imploy; who likewise are to have a care of keeping the Palace Gates. This Engine for the marking of the Hours is ordinarily hung up at the Entry of great Palaces near the Porter's Lodge.

Place this Page 14.

The Order of the March of the Queens of Tunquin, when they go abroad out of the Palace.

A. Six Elephants go in the Front, drawing a kind of a Sedan close shut up, with Grate-like Windows.

B. Fifteen Captains or Officers walk next, Armed with Fire-locks.

C. The Sedan wherein the Queen is.

D. Six of the Queens Gentlemen do carry Parasols, for to guard the Queens Chair from the Scorching of the Sun.

F. Six Ladies of Honour of the Queens go next. The first hath the Command of the Queens Eunuchs: these Eunuchs, though throughly Spaded, yet are never admitted into the Queens Apartment; the Kings of Tunquin being in that particular more jealous than other Kings and Mahometan Princes, who allow this sort of Eunuchs to serve their Queens within the Palace. The next in Office of these Ladies presents the Queen with Sweet Meats when she is about to drink; for they usually eat some before they drink, they alleaging that this keeps them from having the Cholic, to which they are very subject in Tunquin. The third in rank carries a Box of Perfumes and Betel. The others usher the Queen when she gets into the Sedan, or alights.

G. Here is a Chariot drawn by Eight Maids of Quality, when she gets out of the Sedan; but before she appears, all the Men and Eunuchs do withdraw into such places, whence they cannot have the sight of her, it being a Crime to look upon her: then the Ladies help her out of the Sedan, and the Maids draw her along to whatever place she has a mind to go in unto.

Place this next to, The King of Tunquin setting out for the War.

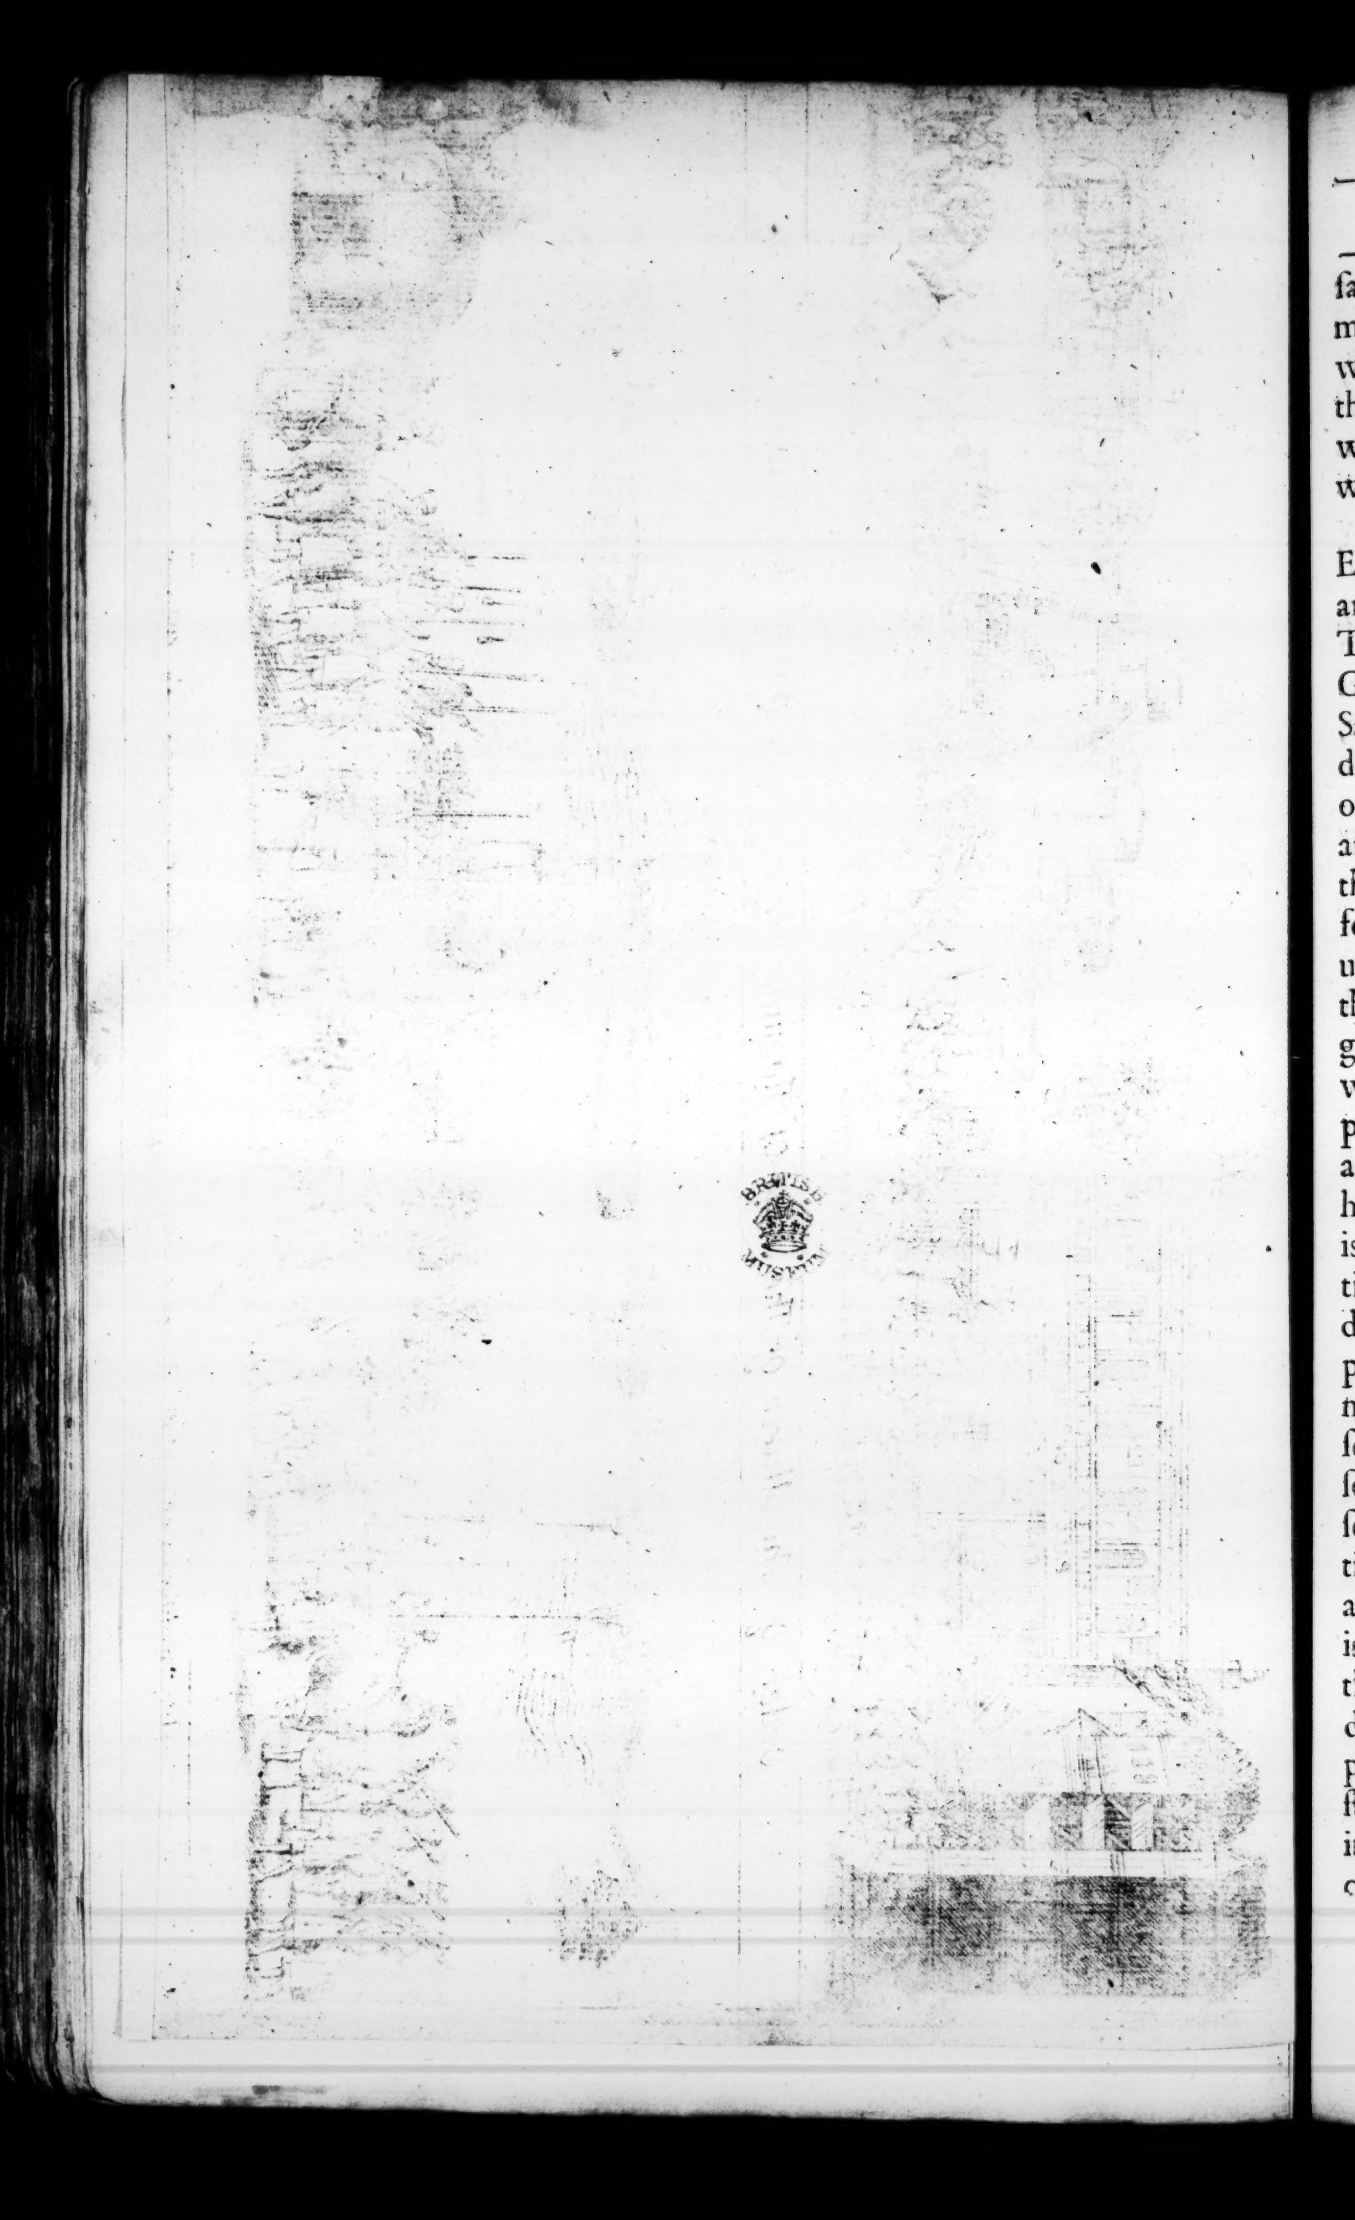
Order of The March of The King of Tunquin When he goes out of his Pallice.

The order & March of The King of Tunquin When He goes To Warr.



ſaw in the year 1649, when the King was preparing to make War againſt the King of Cochinchina, for certain Ships which the Cochinchineſes had taken from the Tunquineſes: though the Quarrel was taken up by certain Embaſſadors which the King of Cochinchina ſent to the King of Tunquin, to whom the former made ſatisfaction.

The Army that was then prepar'd to march upon this Expedition was compos'd of 8000 Horſe, 94 thouſand Foot, and 722 Elephants; 130 for the War, and the reſt to carry the Tents and Baggage of the King and the Nobility; and 318 Galleys and Barks, very long and narrow, with Oars and Sails; and this was that which my Brother ſaw. The Condition of the Souldiery is very toilſom and laborious, and of little advantage in the Kingdom of Tunquin. For they are all their life time ſo ti'd and engag'd to the Service of the Wars, that though they are capable of other Labours for the ſupport of their Families, they are not permitted to undertake it. Thoſe days that they are not upon the Guard, they are oblig'd to attend their Captains where-ever they go, and two days in a week they are compell'd to Exerciſe with their Bows and Arrows in their preſence. Their Companies conſiſt of a hundred or a hundred and thirty Men; and they of each Company that have made the beſt ſhot, have one of them two Months Wages, the other one, which is paid them in Rice. He that makes the worſt ſhot, next time he mounts the Guard, is oblig'd to ſtand Centinel double his time. All the Captains look upon it as a great piece of glory to have their Souldiers Arms and Weapons neat and bright. If they find any ruſt upon them, they ſconce them eight days Wages for the firſt fault, and for the ſecond they are very ſeverely chaſtis'd. As for thoſe that ſerve in the Galleys, they are entertain'd and liſted proportionably. And ſometimes the Captains ſend their Souldiers aboard for ſome days, that they may learn to row. For it is one of the chiefeſt Paſtimes of the Kings of Tunquin to ſee the Mock-fights of the Galleys. When he has a mind to delight himſelf with this Divertiſment, the King, with ſome part of his Court, removes to one of his fair Palaces, that ſtands upon one of the largeſt Rivers in his Country; and it is a great Honour for any of the Captains whoſe Souldiers carry the Victory. Now as the Victory is only got by the force force of the Oars, it happens ſometimes that there are ſome Souldiers who ſtrain themſelves ſo hard, that they fall down dead with the Oar in their hands: for the King is the only Judge of the Combat. Wherein the pleaſure that he takes is ſuch, that he ſends an Elephant to the Captain that obtains the Victory, and gives him three Months Wages beſides. If any Souldier chance to die in this Exerciſe, his Widow or his Heirs have two years Pay. But notwithſtanding all their pain and labour, their Wages are ſo ſmall, that they are not able to maintain their Wives and Children. But in regard they Marry very young in this Country, the Wives as well of the Souldiers as of all the meaner ſort of people, take care to learn ſome Trade beſides, that they may be able to maintain their Families. The Captains alſo have their work prepar'd for them. For they are oblig'd to look after the King's Elephants, and to manage them for the Wars, and ſo to breed them, that they may not be afraid of Wild-fire, or any other Artificial Fires: as alſo to build places all along the Rivers, for the Galleys to ride ſhelter'd in, when they can no longer live out at Sea. All theſe Officers and Captains, and Lords of the Court, which are generally call'd Mandarins, have but four days in a Month to divert themſelves, two at the firſt change of the Moon, and two at the full.

CHAP. VI.

Of the Manners and Cuſtoms of the People of the Kingdom of Tunquin.

THe People of Tunquin are naturally mild and peaceful, ſubmitting eaſily to reaſon, and condemning the Tranſports of Choler. They eſteem the Manufactures of ſtrange Countries far beyond thoſe of their own; though they are not very curious of ſeeing any other Countries but thoſe where they were born; and where, as they ſay, they always deſire to live, to honour the Memory of their Anceſtors. They have a tone in ſpeaking, naturally rally ſoft and pleaſing; happy memories, and in their Language, which is very florid, they uſe ſeveral appoſite Comparisons. They have good Poets among them, and People that love Learning; in which reſpect they are no way inferiour to the Chineſes, their Neighbours.

N; The Great Chancellor Of The Kingdome Of Tunquin. 2: 3: 4. The Mandarins Or Officers Of Warr. 5 Cheif Chancellor of all The Jurisdictions of The Kingdom. 6: 7 Mandarins of Learning or officers of Judicature. : 8 The Chiefe Usher.

The Tunquineſes, as well Men as Women, are for the moſt part well proportion'd, of an Olive Complexion, very much admiring the whiteneſs of the Europeans. Their Noſes and Faces are not ſo flat as thoſe of the Chineſes, as being generally better made. Their Hair is very black, which they uſually wear as long as it will grow, being very careful in combing it. The Common People plait it in treſſes, and tie it like a great Roll upon the top of their Heads. But the Nobility, Men of Law, and Souldiers, tie their Locks about their Necks, that they may not flutter in their Faces. They do not believe their Teeth to be handſom, till they have made them as black as jet; and they ſuffer their Nails to grow; the longeſt being accounted the faireſt.

Their Habit is grave and modeſt, being a long Robe that reaches down to their heels, much like that of the Japonneſes, without any diſtinction of Sex. This Habit is bound about at the waſt with a Girdle of Silk, interwoven with Gold and Silver, the Workmanſhip whereof is alike on both ſides. As for the Souldiers, their upper Garments reach no farther then their Knees; only their Breeches reach down to the mid Leg, without either Hoſe or Shoes.

The vulger ſort of People are altogether ſlaves for one part of the year. For unleſs they be the Citizens of the Capital City, where the King keeps his Court, all the other Handicrafts of what Trade ſoever, as Joyners, Carpenters, Lockſmiths, Maſons, and the like, are oblig'd every year to work three Months at the King's Palace; and two Months, or Moons more (For the Tunquineſes reckon their Months by the Moon) for the Mandarins, or great Lords. The reſt of the year is for themſelves, all which time they have liberty to work for the ſupport of their own Family. This Service in their Language is call'd Viecquan, or the Condition of a Slave. But they are liable to other drudgeries worſe then thoſe before mention'd; as to lop Trees, with which they chiefly feed their Elephants. This is a ſevere days work, to which they were condemn'd by the great Grandfather of the King that now reigns, after he had put an end to the Civil Wars that turmoil'd his Kingdom, and that he had brought his rebellious Subjects to submit themselves. They had occasion'd him a great deal of trouble, and in regard he could not subdue them without a great hazard of his Army, his Council advis'd him to famish them; but he rather chose to give them their Lives, and to condemn them and their Posterity to this laborious Service, of which he might in time reap the benefit.

I have told you elsewhere that the Tunquineses take great delight to live upon the Rivers, which are there free from Crocodiles and all other dangerous Animals, which haunt the Waters of Nile and Ganges. Where we are to observe, that these Rivers overflow their Banks every year, after the Rains are fall'n, with that terrible violence, that many times they carry away whole Towns and Villages, at what time a good part of the Kingdom looks like a Sea, resembling the lower Egypt under Water upon the Inundation of Nile.

CHAP. VII.

Of the Marriages of the Tunquineses, and their severity toward Adultereſſes.

THE Tunquineses cannot Marry without the consent of the Father and Mother, or if they be dead, without the allowance of their neareſt Kindred. They must also have the permission of the Judge or Governour of the place where the Marriage is to be made, for the obtaining of which they must give him some Present. But in regard they were wont to exact upon the poor people more then they were able to give them, so that many Marriages were disappointed, to the great damage of the Public; the King, who reign'd in the year 1639, being inform'd of these Extortions, and their ill Consequences, set forth a Law to regulate those Abuses, and to curb the Authority of the Governours. He order'd that the young Man who was desirous to Marry, should pay no more then such a Sum, according to the proportion of his Estate, amounting to one or two fourths per Cent. and that they that were not worth above a hundred Crowns should pay nothing. Now in regard the Common People, both Men and Women, are naturally laborious, all that the Maids can get they preserve for their Portions, and to buy them two or three handsom Garments, with a Neck-lace of Coral or yellow Amber, and a certain number of Beads, to garnish their Locks; which they suffer to hang down upon their Backs, accounting the beauty of their Hair to consist in the length.

to

There is no Wedding kept without a great Feast; and they must be very poor when the Feast lasts not above three days; for sometimes they junket for nine days together. The next day after the Wedding the Bridgroom calls the Bride his Sister, and she calls the Bridegroom Brother. The Law of the Land permits the Man to divorce his wife when he pleases, which they do many times for very slight causes. But the Woman has not the same Priviledge: or at least, if she desire a separation, it is much more difficult to obtain, and the occasion must be very notorious. The Tunquineses say that this Law was made to keep the Women in subjection, and to oblige them to be respectful to their Husbands. When the Husband desires this separation, the Ceremony is this. You must know that many of the Eastern People never touch their Victuals with their hands, but make use of two little sticks about six inches long, gilt and varnish'd, which serve them instead of Forks. The Husband then, when he goes about to repudiate his Wife, takes one of his own sticks, and one of his Wife's, and having broken them, they take each one half, and sow it up in a piece of Silk, in which they keep it. Then the Man is bound to restore the Woman what she brought with her, and to keep the Children which they had between them. But these Divorces are not half so frequent as formerly.

The Laws are also very rigorous against Adulteresses. So that if a woman accus'd of this crime be convicted thereof, she is cast to an Elephant bred up to this purpose, who presently throws her up into the Air with his Trunk, and when she comes to the ground, tramples her under his feet, till he can perceive no life in her.

While my Brother was at the Court at Tunquin, he was a witneſs of the ſevere Puniſhment, to which a Princeſs was condemn'd, for being taken in the Act with a certain Prince. It is the Cuſtom in the Eaſt, when a Prince dies, to ſhut up in the moſt private and retir'd part of all his Palace all the women which he made uſe of in his life time. There they are allow'd two Maids to attend them, they eat alone, and ſee no perſon living any more to the very day of their deaths. I cannot tell by what means one of the Princes of the blood had got a view of one of the deceaſed King his Uncle's wives; but being deſirous to ſee her again, and to overcome all difficulties that oppos'd him, and to deceive the Guards that watch'd the Dores, he made uſe of a ſlight not eaſily diſcover'd. For you muſt know, that in the Kingdom Tunquin, as in all the Kingdoms of Aſia, in the Houſes of the Kings and other great Lords, the Kitchin is uſually ſeparated from the Houſe, and that the Garden is between them; ſo that for the better carrying the Meat from one place to another, the Servants make uſe of a kind of Flasket, or rather Iron Cheſt. And to keep the Meat warm, the Diſhes are ſupported by little ſticks laid athwart, about an inch diſtant one from another, under which is an Iron Plate with holes pierc'd quite through, about half a foot above another, which makes the bottom of the Cheſt; between which Plates they put lighted Coals, to keep the Meat warm. Theſe Cheſts being to be carri'd by two men, the Tunquineſe Prince plaid his game ſo well, that he was put into one of theſe Cheſts wherein the Princeſſes Meat was wont to be carri'd up into her Apartment. But he was not there many days before the thing was diſcover'd. He was preſently brought before the King, who caus'd him to have ſeveral weighty Chains to be put about his Neck and Waſt, and upon his Hands and Leggs; and thus chain'd and manacled, he order'd him to be led about for five Months together, to be ſeen by the People. After that he was ſhut up in a cloſe Priſon, where he remain'd ſeven years, till the death of the King, whoſe Son coming to the Throne, ſet him at liberty, upon condition he ſhould ſerve as a private Souldier upon the Frontiers of the Kingdom. As for the Princeſs ſhe was ſhut up in a little Chamber upon the top of a Tow'r, where ſhe remain'd twelve days without having any thing given her to eat or drink; after that the Chamber was all uncover'd at the top, that the ſun might come at her, and ſcorch her to death, and ſo ſhe di'd in three days. The two Maids that ſerv'd her had a little more favour, for they were thrown to the Elephants, who preſently trod them to death. The two Porters of the Cheſt, or Flasket, were ti'd to four ſmall Galleys, by the two Hands, and two Leggs, and as they Row'd ſeveral ways were preſently diſmembred. Being at Daca, in the Kingdom of Bengala, I ſaw the ſame Juſtice done to a Bramerè, who would have betraid Cha-Eſt-Can to the King of Arachan.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Viſits, Feaſts, and Paſtimes of the Tunquineſes.

AMong all the Eaſtern People the Tunquineſes are the moſt ſociable, and moſt frequently viſit one another. Generally they make their Viſits about Noon, in the hotteſt time of the day, and then every one walks with a Train ſuitable to his Condition. The Princes and Mandarines ride upon their Elephants, or elſe they are carri'd in a kind of Litter, where they may either ſit or lie. Six Men carry it, and behind them follow ſix more to eaſe them by times. Their Train conſiſts generally of fifty or ſixty Perſons; neither are they permitted to exceed that number. As for the ordinary Gentry, and Officers of the Court, they ride a Horſe-back, not being allow'd above ſeven or eight Servants to attend them. They chew Betlè continually, as all the other Aſiaticks do in ſuch places where it is to be had. And when any one comes to viſit another, it would be taken for a great affront, if at his taking leave, he ſhould not be preſented with a Box of Betlè, to take what he pleas'd.

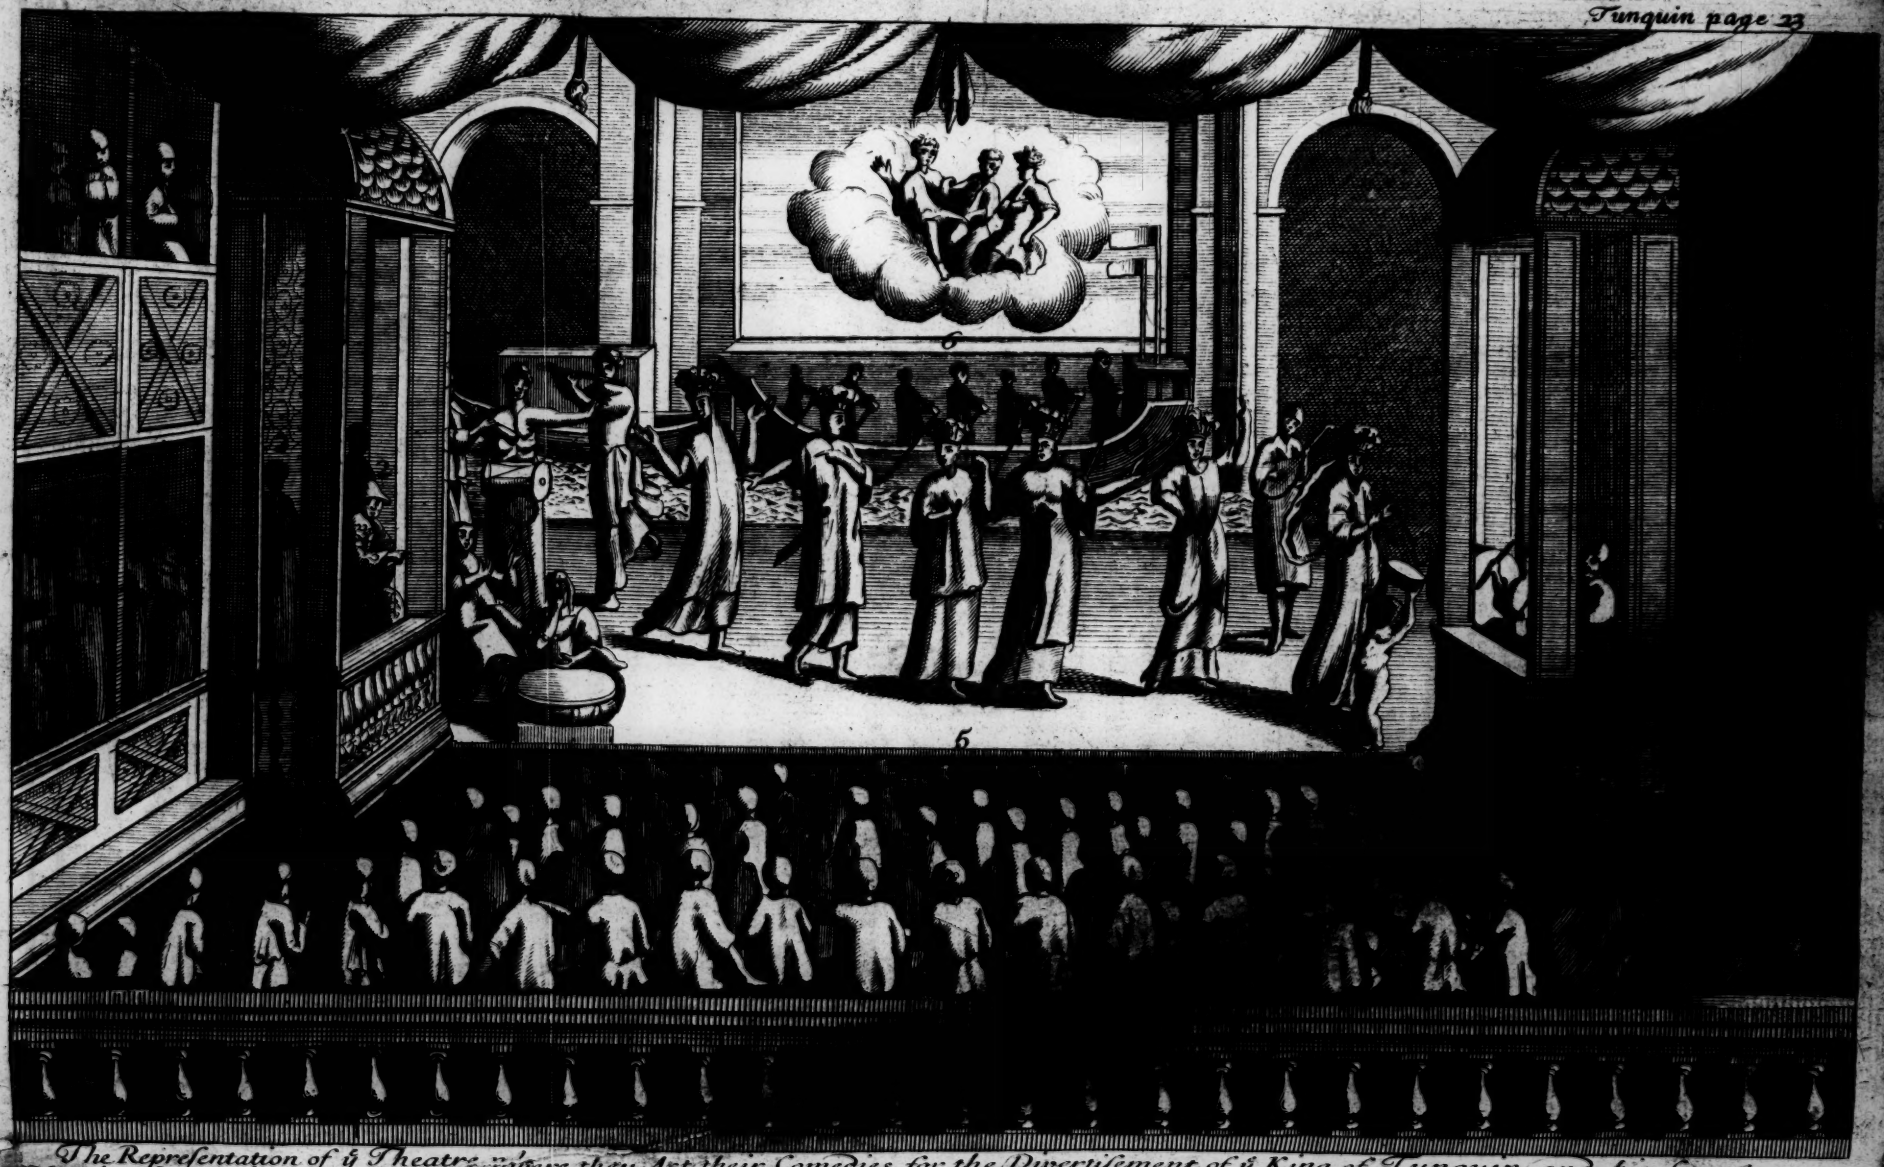
The richer that Box is, the more Honour is given to the Perſon to whom the Betlè is preſented: Inſomuch that when a Prince is about to be marri'd, he uſually ſends three of theſe Boxes to his Spouſe, of which I have ſeen ſome at the



The Representation of ỹ Theatre wᵗʰ where they Act their Comedies for the Divertisemente of ỹ King of Tunquin and his Court.

All these Plates are brought up, rang'd in order, in a large Voyder, lacker'd like the Plates. Usually the Voyder holds ten or twelve Plates, and the Meat is cut in little pieces, about the bigness of a Hazle Nut. They make use neither of Spoons, nor Knives, nor Forks, but only of those little Sticks, of which I have made mention in the foregoing Chapter, never touching their Meat with their fingers.

When there are several sitting at the Table, either at their ordinary Meals, or upon some Festival, they account it a great piece of Manners to be silent; or if they have a desire to Discourse, they alway allow the Eldest the honour of beginning, bearing a great respect to them that are aged. But the Youngest, at the Table, is never permitted to begin the Discourse. They wash their Hands, their Mouths, and Faces before they sit down, but never after Meals. And when they desire to know whether every one has had his fill, they ask him whether he have eaten his Rice, according to the Custom of the Ancient Fathers in Scripture, who, by Bread, meant the whole Repast. Neither is it a Custom among them to ask one another how they do? but how many Measures of Rice he eat for his Dinner, and whether he eat with an Appetite. This is a general Custom among all the Idolatrous Indians, unless in the Dominions of the Great Mogul, where they eat not Rice only, but Bread, and there they ask in civility how much Rice they boil'd, and how much Meal they bak'd for Bread; for the more he eats, the better in health they think a man is.

Among all the Pastimes of the Tunquineses there are none wherein they take so much delight as in Comedies, which are only Acted in the Night-time; but those which are presented the day that they first behold the new Moon are the best. They last from Sun-setting to Sun-rising, and they are set out with beautiful Decorations and Machines, very pleasing to behold. They are excellently well skill'd in representing the Sea and Rivers, and making a shew of Sea-fights, and Combats between Galleys and Barks, though they have seldom more then eight Actors, Men and Women. The places appointed for these sights, are great Halls, the third part whereof the Theater takes up, the rest being fill'd with Benches for the Spectators. Upon each side of the Theater is a Box very sumptuously set out, reserv'd for the King, King when he pleaſes to come. The Actors and Actreſſes are very magnificently clad. The dreſs for the Womens heads being a kind of Miter or Diadem, which exceedingly becomes them, from the hinder part whereof two Ribonds, three fingers broad, hang down below their waſts. Both the one and the other Act their parts very perfectly, and, according to their manner, obſerve an exact time in their Dancing.

At one of the corners of the Hall ſit the two Judges of the Comedy, one of whom beats time upon a Braſs Drum. Their other ordinary Paſtimes, eſpecially for the Lords and Mandarins, are Fiſhing and Hunting, though they take more pleaſure in the former, by reaſon of the plenty of Fiſh which their Rivers afford them. But, as I ſaid before, they follow theſe ſports only upon the days that are permitted them, as being better husbands of their time then we, not ſparing any part of it from buſineſs. So that they who at the beginning of that little knowledge which we had of theſe People, wrote that their Manners and Cuſtoms were wild and barbarous, were miſinform'd. For as there is no reaſon to doubt of the truth of what I affirm, and what others have confirm'd by other Relations, we may well conculde from what I have ſaid, That all the Duties of Civil Society and Politeneſs are not confin'd within our Europe; but that the Kingdom of Tunquin, anciently a part of China, ſtill retains the good Government and Civility of the Chineſes themſelves.

CHAP. IX.

Of the Learned Men in the Kingdom of Tunquin.

CErtain it is, that the Tunquineſes have a very great inclination for Learning, and that they apply themſelves to their Studies with diligence and ſucceſs: for that they cannot be advanc'd without it to the Offices and Dignities in the Kingdom. I do not here, by Learning, mean the underſtanding of the Languages of our Learned Men

Men of Europe, which are altogether unknown to the Eaſtern People, and much leſs the Philoſophy of Ariſtotle, of which they never ſo much as heard. But we mean the knowledge of the Laws of their Country, by means whereof they obtain the charges of Judicature; the Mathematicks, and particularly Aſtronomy, to which all the Orientals have a great inclination, as being great obſervers of the Stars, by whoſe aſſiſtance they flatter themſelves to be able to foretel things to come. The Tunquineſes are alſo paſſionate lovers of Muſic and Poetry, as being great admirers of Comedy and Tragedy, of which thoſe two Sciences are the main Compoſition; ſo that the Muſicians and Actors of Tunquin are accounted the beſt in the whole Eaſtern part of the World.

That you may acquire Nobility by Learning, in your Youth, you muſt paſs through three degrees, of the Synde, the Doucan, and the Tanſi, from which degree you may aſcend to that of the Nobility.

To attain the firſt degree, it behoves the Youth of Tunquin to apply themſelves for eight years together to their Studies, and that very cloſe, to enable themſelves for the Office of a Notary, Proctor, and Advocate, to which there is nothing more conducing then to ſpeak Eloquently in public. At the end of eight years, they are examin'd concerning the duty of thoſe Employments; and if any one fail to give an Anſwer to the Queſtions propounded, he is ſent back again as incapable to obtain any Employment for the future, or to ſtudy any longer. For thoſe that acquit themſelves well of their Examination, which is very rigorous, their Names are ſet down in a Regiſter, and preſented to the King, who firſt grants them the liberty to take upon them the Title of Synde, and then if it be their aim to enjoy the Quality of Doucan, they are commanded by the Tanſi's to ſtudy Muſic, Aſtrology, and Poeſie, not only to be able to be judge of it, but alſo to perform themſelves upon occaſion. For to be good judges of Comedy, which is a great Honour among them, it behoves them to be both good Comedians and Muſicians. Nor indeed is there any Paſtime more frequent then that of the Theater in this Country; for there is never any ſolemn Feſtival among them, which is not accompany'd and ſet forth with Artificial Fire-works, in making whereof theſe People are exquiſite; after which they have their Comedies, with Machines, and change of Scenes in every Act. Beſides this, their Actors have a prodigious memory, ſo that let the part be never ſo long, they never make uſe of Prompters to aſſiſt them, as we do in Europe.

They that will learn the Mathematicks, muſt make their own Inſtruments themſelves, and ſpend five years in this ſtudy. They are examin'd every year, and if they fail to anſwer ſuch Queſtions as are ask'd them, for the firſt four they are pardon'd; but at the end of the five years, if upon the grand Examination, they fail to anſwer the Queſtions demanded them by the Tanſi's, they are utterly degraded; whereas if they ſatisfie their Examinors, they are permitted the Name and Dignity of Doucan. After thirteen years thus ſpent, before they can arrive to the degree of a Tanſi, they muſt ſpend four years more in learning to write and read the Chineſe Character to ſuch a certain number of Words. For the life of a Man would not ſuffice to learn to write and read the Chineſe quite through. The reaſon is, becauſe that as to this particular, it is not in China as in other Nations, where one Word is compos'd of ſeveral Letters. The Chineſes for every Word have a different Figure, all which Figures are very numerous, as you may eaſily conjecture. By the by let me tell you, that theſe Figures are made with ſmall Pencils, and that the Chineſes make uſe of a certain Ink, which is made up into a Paſte, and ſo moiſten'd in Water as you make uſe of it. They have alſo another ſort of Colour for certain Words. But they cannot make uſe of Pens, as our Europeans, which are made of Quils; nor of thoſe of other Eaſtern People, which are made of ſmall rediſh brown Reeds, the beſt of which grow in certain Merſhes in the Kingdom of Pegu and Arachan.

But to return to the Students of Tunquin, they are alſo oblig'd to underſtand the Laws and Cuſtoms of the Chineſes, as well as their own; and the laſt four years being at an end, the laſt and great Examination is made in the great place, within the Encloſure of the Palace of Tunquin, which is a ſtately Marble ſtructure. There the King is preſent, with the Princes and great Lords of the Court, the Mande- rins for Learning; and all the Tanſi's; and many alſo come on purpoſe from diſtant Provinces to the Solemnity. Some Relations of Tunquin have been a little too ridiculous in this particular, aſſerting extravagantly, that ſometimes there are above 30 or 40000 Students preſent at theſe Examinations; but by what I could learn from my Brother, or gather by that diſcourſe which I have had with the Natives, the number of Students never exceeds three thouſand. There are in the place nine Scaffolds ſet up, of which the one is for the King and Princes, the other for the Examiners, and thoſe that are to be Examin'd: And for the better hearing what is ſaid, the Scaffolds are built like an Amphitheater. But whereas there are eight days ſpent in this Examination, the King and the Mandarins are never there but only the two firſt days. The laſt day all the Names of them who have been Examin'd, as well they who have anſwer'd well, as of them that have falter'd, are left in the Hands of the ſixteen chief Manderins, who are as it were ſixteen Counſellors of State, and then it is at the King's pleaſure to favour whom he thinks fit, of thoſe who have not given full ſatisfaction to the Queſtions propounded to them. As for thoſe who were found very ignorant, they are degraded with ſhame, and there is no more ſaid of them. All thoſe Names are uſually written upon large Tables, ſet up at the Gate of the King's Palace for eight days together, to the end, that all the People may know who are receiv'd into the Rank of Nobility, and who not.

The eight days being paſs'd, they are all to appear again upon the ſame Scaffolds, where in the view of all the World, they who have had the misfortune to have falter'd in their Examinations, are diſmiſs'd as unworthy of any Employment: while they who have behav'd themſelves worthy of approbation, are honour'd with a Veſt of Violet Satin, which they preſently put on, and then take upon them the Name of Tanſi's. Then they have given them a Liſt of the Towns and Villages, where they are to receive the Rents which the King allows them; wherein however they have not an equal ſhare; ſome being allow'd more, ſome leſs, according to their merit, or the favour of the Prince. Preſently they ſend notice to the places aſſign'd them of the time, at which they intend to be there: and then all the Inhabitants come forth to meet them, in Honour of their Dignity, with all ſorts of Muſic, and a Guilded Branquar, carried by eight Men. There they are permitted to ſtay three Months to divertize themſelves, and for their own recreation. After that they return to Court, to inſtruct themſelves in the affairs of the Kingdom, and the King's Houſe, and to perfect themſelves in the knowledge of thoſe things, which is the way to obtain the Dignity of a Mandarin. All Embaſſadours who are ſent to the Princes adjoyning, eſpecially to the Chineſes, are choſen out of theſe Tanſi's, among whom they always make choice of the ableſt, and not of the richeſt, the King allowing them ſufficient to maintain their Port, and defray the expences of the Embaſſy.

CHAP. X.

Of their Phyſicians, and the Diſeaſes of the Tunquineſes.

THe Phyſicians belonging to the Kingdom of Tunquin do not make it their buſineſs much to ſtudy Books; ſpending their Youth in ſearching after the nature and qualities of the Roots and Simples, and how to apply them according to the nature of the Diſtemper. But more particularly they apply themſelves to the beating of the Pulſe, and its diverſity of Meaſure, by which they chiefly pretend to underſtand the cauſe of the Diſeaſe, and what Remedy to make uſe of for cure. And therefore when they go to feel a Pulſe, they feel it in ſeveral parts of the Body; and according to the diverſity of the part, and the beating, they judge of the quality of the Diſtemper. Therefore upon their firſt coming, they feel the Patient in three places, firſt upon their right ſides, and ſecondly upon their left. By the Pulſe which they feel upon the wriſt of the right hand, they gueſs of the condition of the Lungs; by that which they feel upon the Vein of the Arms, where gene-

generally People are let Blood; they gueſs at the Diſtempers of the Stomach; and the Region of the Kidneys. The Pulſe of the left Wriſt diſcovers to them the condition of the Heart: By that in the Veins of the left Arm, where uſually they let Blood; they are inform'd of the eſtate of the Liver. By the Pulſes of the Temples, both right and left; they give a more exquiſite judgment of the Kidneys. They are very careful to count how many times a Pulſe of a ſick Perſon beats in the time of one Reſpiration; and according to theſe ſeveral Pulſes, they tell you which part of the Body is particularly diſtemper'd, whether the Heart, the Liver, or the Lungs; or whether the Diſtemper proceed from any outward cauſe, as from Cold, Sadneſs, or any other diſorderly Paſſion.

They never make uſe of any other Remedies but of Herbs and Roots, which they chooſe themſelves; there being no diſtinction among them of Apothecary and Phyſician. Theſe Herbs they mingle ſometimes with a little Ginger, which they boyl in Water, and give the Decoction, being ſtrain'd, to the Patient. They have very good Receipts for the Purples, Epilepſie, and ſeveral other Diſeaſes which are accounted incurable in Europe. They make uſe of China Ink to ſtop a Dyſentery, and for the cure of Wounds. When the Sea Ebbs from the ſhoar upon theſe Coaſts, they find upon the Sand a little ſmall kind of Crabs, which dye immediately, and by the heat of the Sun, which is there extraordinary, become as hard as a Stone in a ſhort time; theſe the Tunquineſe Phyſicians beat to Powder, and give to their Patients in Dyſenteries, and Feavers, ſometimes in Aqua Vitæ, ſometimes in plain Water. They mightily admire the Herb Tea, which comes from China and Japan; which latter Country produces the beſt. It is brought to them in Tin Pots cloſe ſtop'd, to keep out the Air. When they would uſe it, they boyl a quantity of Water, according to the proportion they intend to uſe, and when the Water ſeeths, throw a ſmall quantity into it, allowing as much as they can nip between their Thumb and fore-Finger to a Glaſs. This they preſcribe to be drank as hot as they can endure it, as being an excellent Remedy againſt the Headach, for the Gravel, and for thoſe that are ſubject to the Griping of the Guts; but then they order a little Ginger to be put into the Water when it boyls. At Goa, Batavia, and in all the Indian Factories, there are none of the Europeans who do not ſpend above four or five Leaves a day; and they are careful to preſerve the boyl'd Leaf for an Evening Sallad, with Sugar, Vinegar, and Oyl. That is accounted the beſt Tea which colours the Water greeneſt; but that which makes the Water look Red, is little accounted of. In Japan. The King and great Lords, who drink Tea, drink only the Flower, which is much more wholſom, and of a taſt much more pleaſing. But the Price is much different, for one of our ordinary Beer Glaſſes is there worth a French Crown.

The moſt dangeroug Diſtempers that befall the Tunquineſes, moſt uſually happen when the bad Air ſurprizes the People; for of a ſudden it deprives them of their Speech, and then Death ſuddenly follows without a ſpeedy Remedy. The beſt Remedy for this ſudden Diſtemper is to mix ſome Counterpoiſon with Aqua Vitæ inſtead of Wine, and to let the Patient drink it as hot as he can. The Patient alſo muſt at the ſame time be rub'd with a Cloth dip'd in Aqua Vitæ, where Ginger has been boyl'd. This takes away the pains caus'd by cold Winds, and unwholſom Airs. Though ſome for the more ſpeedy cure of theſe pains, lay the Patient upon a Bed made only of Girts, four Fingers diſtant one from the other; and then ſetting a Chafing-diſh underneath, cauſe the ſick Perſon to ſweat in a Cloud of Frankincenſe, till the pain is gone, repeating the ſame thing Morning and Evening.

As for Blood-letting, it is by no means us'd in that Country. They make uſe of Fire, eſpecially for the Purple-Feaver, a Diſeaſe ſo dangerous in France. For the cure of this, the Phyſitians of Tunquin take the Pith of a Reed, which they dry very well; dip it in Oyl, and ſet it on Fire: and then apply to every Purple Spot one of theſe lighted Wicks. The Spot will give a whif like a ſmall Squib, and that's an infallible ſign that the Venom is gone out of the body. This Remedy is ſeldom apply'd but in the night time, becauſe the Spot does not appear ſo well in the day time. And the Phyſician muſt be very careful, that when this Venom flies out of the Patient's Body, it does not find a way into his own; for then there is no Remedy, but Death. There are ſome Phyſicians that will prick the Purple Spot with a Needle, and let out the Peſtilential Blood; after which they burn the part ſo prick'd, and then rub it with Ginger, not permitting their Patient to take the Air in 20 days after they are cur'd. While they are under cure, they drink nothing but Water, with Citron-peel boyl'd in it, and abſtain from Fleſh and Butter. They give them to eat Rice boyl'd in Water, and ſalt Fiſh; but the more they abſtain from eating and drinking, the ſooner they are cur'd. And indeed it is a wonderful thing to ſee the excellent effects of their Remedies in ſo ſhort a time; for they have no lingring Diſtempers to hold them years together, as they do among us.

but

CHAP. XI.

Of the Original, Government, and Policy, of the Kingdom of Tunquin.

IT is not above ſix hundred years ſince Tunquin was firſt govern'd by particular Kings, in regard it was anciently a part of the Dominion of the Chineſes. What is reported of the firſt Tunquineſes, That they were without Governours, and without Kings, is altogether fabulous, like to that which is related of a certain Infant of three years of Age, who appearing before a great Aſſembly of the People, exhorted them to free themſelves from the power of the Chineſes, who were their Oppreſſors. Upon which a lovely Horſe miraculouſly appearing to the ſaid Infant, he mounted the Horſe, and immediately ſetting forward with thoſe that were gather'd after him, as alſo others that appear'd as wonderfully to aſſiſt him, he ſet upon the Chineſes, and defeated them in ſuch manner, that they never durſt venture after that to return any more to reconquer what they had loſt. But the moſt certain truth of Tunquin Hiſtory aſſures us, That for theſe ſix Centuries laſt paſt, it has been govern'd by ſix various Families. The firſt that aſſum'd the Title of King was a famous Robber, whoſe

Name

Name was Din, who having gather'd together a great Number of Malecontents, and Vagabonds, became ſo powerful and formidable through his own Valour, that after ſeveral bloody Battels gain'd, it was no difficult thing for him to ſeize upon the Throne. But he did not reign long in peace, for the moſt part of the People rebell'd againſt him; and in the firſt Battel that he fought, he loſt his Life. However his own Party won the day; and having left two Sons, his eldeſt reigned three years; after whoſe death, the younger Brother rul'd in his ſtead, but dy'd ſoon after, neither of the Brothers leaving any iſſue behind them. After that the Kingdom was miſerably diſtracted by ſeveral Civil Wars, till the weaker Party calling in the Chineſes to their Aſſiſtance, became the moſt puiſſant. Then it was that a certain Mandarin, of the Family of Lelequel, was advanc'd to the Throne, who being a valiant and prudent Prince, reſtor'd tranquillity to the whole Kingdom. Who, when he ſaw himſelf Eſtabliſh'd in peace, built that large Palace, which they, who have ſeen it, admire, as well for it's Circuit, as for its magnificent Structure, being all of Marble of divers Colours, both within and without. This King had but one Daughter, who ſoon after her Father's death, the better to ſecure her ſelf, marry'd one of the moſt powerful Mandarins in the Country, of the Houſe of Tran. But ſoon after, one of her Subjects rebelling againſt her, gave her battel, took her Priſoner, and put her to death. Having thus got the Power into his hands, the Rebel uſurp'd the Throne; but nine years after, he was alſo ſlain in Battel by his own Subjects, who had call'd the Chineſes to their Aſſiſtance. They being thus Maſters of the Kingdom, held it for twenty years, and ſet Governours over every Province. But at length the Mandarins grew weary of their Oppreſſion, becauſe of the heavy Tributes which they laid upon the Tunquineſes; ſo that a valiant Captain of the Houſe of Le, having aſſembled a numerous Power together, gave the Chineſes three Battels, and in every one overcame them. The Chineſes thus expell'd out of Tunquin, the Conquerour ſeiz'd the Crown, and in his Family the Regal Government continu'd for above four-ſcore years. After which time, a great Lord, of the Family of Marr, which had formerly enjoy'd the Scepter, to Revenge himſelf of an affront which the King had put upon him at Court, found a way to eſcape his hands, and being aſſiſted by a great Number of diſcontented Perſons, of which the beſt regulated Kingdoms are always full, and the Chineſes, who always ſought an opportunity to regain what they had loſt, after a bloody Battel, he poſſeſs'd himſelf of the Kingdom, it being never known what became of his Predeceſſor. But this new King enjoy'd the Fruits of his Victory but a ſmall while. For two years afterwards, a Mandarin, of the Houſe of Trin, having eſpous'd the Daughter of another great Lord, openly declar'd War againſt his Soveraign, with a deſign utterly to exſirpate the Houſe of Marr. Unhappily for him, death put a ſtop to his deſigns, though he left two Sons behind him, able enough to have purſu'd his undertakings. But the eldeſt, naturally timorous, and fearing to engage himſelf in a dangerous War, voluntarily ſubmitted himſelf to the King, who gave him the Government of a Province, and marry'd him to one of his Siſter's Daughters. The younger Brother being a valiant Prince, and having his deceaſed Father's Army at his Devotion, though the King propos'd him great advantages, would give ear to nothing, but out of his ambition to Reign himſelf continu'd and ſucceſsfully accompliſh'd what his Father had begun. In the ſecond Battel which he gave the King, who was there in perſon, he took him Priſoner, together with his Brother, who had ſubmitted to him, and ſome few days after he put them both publicly to death at the head of his Army; the one as an unjuſt uſurper of the Throne; the other as a deſertor, who had abandon'd his Father's Army, and ſo ill follow'd his intentions.

Now though as Victor he might eaſily have aſcended the Throne, and tak'n upon him the Name and Title of King, yet he would not accept of any higher Title then that of General of the Army; and the better to Eſtabliſh himſelf in his Authority, and to gain the affection of the People, he caus'd Proclamation to be made through all the Provinces of the Kingdom, that if there were any Prince of the Houſe of Le yet remaining alive, he ſhould ſhew himſelf, with full aſſurance that upon his appearing, he ſhould be put into poſſeſſion of the Kingdom. There was but one to be found, who had been ſo cloſely purſu'd by the Houſe of Marr, while it rul'd, that to ſave his Life he was forc'd to abſcond himſelf in the Frontiers of the Kingdom, under the Habit of a private Soldier. The General was overjoy'd to find that there was yet a lawful Heir of the Houſe of Le to be found, that he might place him upon the Throne. So that ſo ſoon as he was known to be of the Legitimate Race, all the Equipage and Attendance of a King was ſent to him, with Order to all the Provinces as he paſs'd along, to receive him as if he were already crown'd. The whole Army march'd two days march to meet the King, and brought him to Checo, the capital City of the Kingdom, where he was plac'd in the Throne of his Father, and with great Pomp proclaim'd King of Tunquin. But General Trin, who car'd not ſo much for the Royal Title, as the Royal Power, ſo order'd his buſineſs, that leaving to Le all the outward ſhew and Pomp of Royal Authority, he reſerv'd to himſelf the whole command of the Army, and the greateſt part of the Revenues of the Kingdom abſolutely to diſpoſe of at his own pleaſure. So that from that time to this hour, we may affirm that there has been, and ſtill are, two Kings of Tunquin, of which the firſt has only the Name and Title of King, and is call'd Boüa, and the ſecond Choüa, who has all the Authority, diſpoſing of all things at his pleaſure, while the other remains ſhut up in his Palace like a Slave, not permitted to ſtir abroad but upon certain days: and then he is carry'd through the Streets of Checo, like an Image, though with a magnificent Train and Royal Equipage. He has generally 2000 Soldiers for his Guard; and ſometimes 20000 which are quarter'd upon the Frontiers, chiefly toward Cochinchina. He alſo has ready upon the Frontiers 50 Elephants for War. And upon the Rivers of the Kingdom where the Enemy can come to damage him, he uſually keeps 100 great Galleys, with a vaſt company of ſmall Galliots, to which the Soldiers and Rowers that belong, have more pay then the others at Land. And theſe, that they may row with more ſtrength, row ſtanding, with their Faces toward the Prow, quite contrary to our Rowers, who turn their backs.

The King gives public Audience almoſt every day; but he makes no Edict, or public Decree, that is of any effect,

if

if it be not also Sign'd by the Choüa. At these Audiences he has with him thirty two Councellors of State, and besides these, a hundred others to judge of all Appeals of the Kingdom. The Eunuchs have a very great Power at Court, as in all other Courts of Asia; and the King, as to his most important affairs, confides more in them then in his own Children. The eldest Children do not always succeed their Father; for the Choüa, or General, with all the Councellors, which are generally his Creatures, thought it convenient, that when the King should have more Sons then one, he should make choice of whom he pleas'd to succeed him. So that so soon as he has nam'd him, the Choüa, attended by the principal Officers of the Army, Councellors of State, and Eunuchs, come to congratulate him, and to give him their Oaths to set him upon the Throne after the death of his Father; and for the other Brothers they are always shut up in the Palace, as in a Prison, without medling with any affairs of State. They never stir out of the Palace but four times a year, and they never stay abroad above six days at a time, the Officers that attend them being put upon them by the Choüa, who is as it were Lord high Constable of the Kingdom. The first of these six days of liberty they go to visit the Temples, and the Priests, to whom they give large Alms; the two next days they take their pleasure in hunting; and the three last days they spend their time upon the Rivers, in Galleys sumptuously trimm'd and adorn'd.

The Kingdom of Tunquin is divided into eight large Provinces, every one of which has its Governour, and its Magistrates, from whose sentence there lies an Appeal to the Court. We should wrong this Country to say that there were no Nobility therein, as indeed there are none in most Kingdoms of Asia. But they must all attain to this degree their merit; some by the Warrs, and some by their Learning. They who attain their Nobility by Arms, have wherewithall to live handsomly at home; and they begin to learn their Exercises betimes, at farthest by eleven or twelve years of Age. The first thing they are to understand, is how to handle their Swords, the Blades of which are streight, long, and broad, like those of the Switzers, having but one Edge. They are also taught to aim with their Bows, and to fire a Musket with Matches, (for they know not the use of Fire-Locks) to ride the great Horse, to shoot running, and to manage their Zagay's, which are a sort of Staves, cheek'd with Iron, like a Half-Pike. When they are ready in all these Exercises, then they learn to make all sorts of Artificial Fire-works, as also how to invent new ones, to make use of them against the Elephants. By the way I must needs tell you, there are some of these Elephants as I have seen several times, that are so accustom'd to these Artificial Fires, that they regard them not at all, neither are any way disturb'd at the Squibs that are thrown, and go off under their very Noses and Bellies. Nevertheless of 100 of these Creatures which the Eastern Kings carry to their Wars at a time, you shall have hardly fifteen that are so hardy and valiant. So that unless their Governours take not great care, instead of running upon the Enemy, they turn upon their Friends, and put the whole Army into a most dismal confusion; as you shall hear by the following Story. For Aurenge-Zebe, the present Great Mogul, being then a young Prince, obtain'd of Cha-gebaw, his Father, to let him have the command of an Army of threescore thousand Men, and fourscore Elephants; and with this force, out of his Antipathy to the Christians, he laid Siege to Daman, a Town belonging to the Portugals, fourteen Leagues from Surat. The Governour was a person of great Valour, and had also two Sons with him, who, together with himself, had both serv'd the King of France. He had also in the Town eight hundred Gentlemen, who voluntarily put themselves into the Garrison for its defence, from all parts of India where the Portugueses had to do, and were all excellently well mounted. For the Portugals at that time made use of none but Arabian Horses, the worst of which cost a thousand Crowns at least. The Governour finding that the Indian Prince began to press hard upon him, having already made two Assaults, resolv'd with all his Cavalry and Infantry to make a Salley upon Sunday Morning, causing them to fix at the ends of their Spears and Lances certain Artificial Fire-works, to which they were order'd suddenly to give fire, as soon as they should gain the Elephants Quarter. This design was so successful, that when it came to be executed, the Elephants were so suddenly

terrifi'd, that running impetuouſly through the Indian Army, they trod to the ground, and cut in pieces with the Swords and Scithes which were faſten'd to their Trunks, what ever ſtood in their way. The Portugals taking advantage of this confuſion, made no leſs havock among the amazed Multitude, whom they had ſurpriz'd ſecurely and profoundly aſleep. For they had an opinion, that the Portugals would never attack them upon the Sabboth day, believing they had the ſame veneration for that day which the Jews had. But they were utterly deceiv'd, in ſo much that the Portugals, by virtue of this Stratagem ſo cloſely purſu'd, obtain'd a notable Victory, to the utter deſtruction of 20000 of Aurenge-Zebe's Army, the ſpoils whereof are reported to have amounted to above twelve Millions.

But to return to the Kingdom of Tunquin, I muſt tell you, that the Tunquineſes have often wag'd War againſt the Chineſes, becauſe the firſt would not pay the latter the Tribute which was accorded them by a Treaty made by one of their Kings, of the Houſe of Le. But in the year 1667, the Chineſes, ſeeing that the Tartars had made themſelves Maſters of their Country, made a Peace with the Tunquineſes, wherein it was agreed, that the ſaid Tribute ſhould be no longer paid; but that they ſhould every year ſend an Embaſſador only to Pequin, to do homage to the Emperour of China.

As for their Juſtice and Policy, they obſerve a very exact Order and Regulation over all the Kingdom of Tunquin, as well in their Cities, as in the Country. So that few of the beſt regulated Kingdoms exceed them. More eſpecially they have a great care, for the publie good, to repair the Bridges and High-ways; and every quarter of a League there is ſuch Proviſion made, that any Traveller may there meet not only with Water, but Fire alſo to light his Pipe, being generally great ſmoakers of Tobacco.

As for Murder, they are very exact in puniſhing that crime. For they carry the Perſon apprehended before the Judge; and then he muſt hold to his Mouth a little wiſp of Graſs, to ſhew, that by his diſorderly life he had made himſelf a Beaſt. Not much unlike this is the cuſtom in Perſia, where the King and his Council condemn or pardon all but ſuch as have murder'd a Man that has any Kindred. For then all the favour that the King can ſhew him is, to deliver deliver him into the hands of the next of kin to the Perſon kill'd, who has power to agree with the Criminal for a Sum of Money, which is rarely done, as being accounted an Act both infamous and ignominious. So that if there be no agreement made, then it behoves the next of kin to be the Executioner himſelf, and put the Criminal to that death to which he is before condemn'd.

CHAP. XII.

Of the Court of the Kings of Tunquin.

ALthough the King, as I have already ſaid, have not much Authority in his Kingdom, which is govern'd altogether by the General, who has the whole Militia at his Devotion, yet he is highly honour'd by his Subjects, and he keeps a very ſplendid Court. The firſt and fifteenth day of every Month, all the Mandarins who are the Grandees of the Kingdom, are bound to come in their Chineſe Habits to kiſs the King's hands. The Conſtable, or General, was formerly wont to perform the ſame Office, but by degrees he has obtain'd a diſpenſation, and only ſends another Prince in his ſtead. As for all the other Mandarins, Governours of Provinces, Juſticiaries, and Military Officers, every year they go to kiſs the Choüa's hands, and to congratulate him upon the firſt day of the year, which is the fifteenth of the fifth Month; as alſo when he has obtain'd any great Victory over his Enemies. So that the General has more Honour done him then the King himſelf. 'Tis alſo the cuſtom of the Tunquineſes, among the Men, that when they meet any Perſon higher in condition then themſelves, they make four profound obeyſances to the very Earth. But for the Women, what ever their condition be among themſelves, they never make but one. They who are deſirous to be admitted into the Palace to ſee the King, are oblig'd to put on Violet Robes, and their Servants muſt be clad in the ſame colour. They that approach the King's preſence, to obtain any favour, muſt carry a Preſent along with him. For though the Conſtable be the perſon that diſpoſes of all Offices and Commands over all the Court and Kingdom, yet every year upon the fifteenth day of the ſeventh Month, the King diſtributes ſeveral conſiderable Gifts and Largeſſes to his Courtiers; as alſo to the Children of ſuch Fathers who have perform'd any important Service for the good of his Kingdom. He gives them Pains of Gold, every one worth ſix hundred Livres; and Bars of Silver, amounting each to forty ſix Livres. The ſame day he alſo releales all Priſoners, both Criminal and Debtors, provided the crime do not deſerve death; and that the debt do not exceed two Bars of Silver. Alſo every year, the three laſt days of the laſt Month, the 40 Mandarins, who are the chief Councellors of State, take the Oaths of all the Lords and Officers of the Court, and of their Wives; cauſing them to ſwear to be faithful to the King, and if they know of any thing that concerns the King's perſon, or his Kingdom, to diſcover it. All Governours of Provinces give the ſame Oaths to the Lords and Gentlemen under their Juriſdictions; and the Governours of Cities to the Citizens, and other Inhabitants. They that diſcover any Treaſon never fail of any reward; only with this diſtinction, in reference to the quality of the Perſons that reveal it. For as for the Mandarins and Gentlemen, the King rewards them according to his own pleaſure: But as for the meaner ſort, whether Men or Women, they are ennobl'd, and gratifi'd with a reward of 50 Pains of Gold, and 500 Bars of Silver, which in all amounts to 53000 Livres. But they eſteem their Nobility far beyond their Money.

At certain times of the year, there is a Muſter of the Youth of the ſeveral Provinces; and all thoſe who are found not to be either of the Nobility, or not to have learnt any Trade, are preſently enroll'd for the Service of the King, who every five years make choice of ſuch as he intends for his Guard, and ſends them to the Frontier Garriſons. There are ſome who endeavour to get off by Money; but if they be diſcover'd, both the Officers and the Soldier are puniſh'd without redemption. For they hang a little Bell about his Neck, Fetter his Arms, and in that poſture ſend him to the Conſtable, who preſently orders his Head to be ſtruck off. But in regard the Tunquineſes are very averſe from ſeeing any Blood ſhed, the Kindred or Friends of the condemn'd Perſon, intercede that he may be hang'd, believing that death to be moſt honourable which is not defil'd with Blood-ſhed; wherein they ſeem to be of the Opinion of the Turks.

CHAP. XIII.

Of the Ceremonies obſerv'd when the Kings of Tunquin are advanc'd to the Throne.

BEfore we ſpeak of the Enthroning the Kings of Tunquin, and of the Ceremonies that attend it, it behoves us to relate the manner of their ſetting out of the Palace, when they go at any time to take their pleaſure. The King is ſeated upon a moſt magnificent Palanquin, carry'd by eight Men, where he may be beheld by all the People; the Lords and Officers of the Court attending him on foot, provided he do not go out of the City: for when he goes into the Country he rides upon an Elephant, and the Lords follow him on Horſe-back. When the Queen Mother, or his firſt Wife go abroad, they are likewiſe carry'd upon a cloſe Palanquin, with Lattice-Windows, to the end, they may ſee and not be ſeen; and behind the Palanquin follow the Maids of Honour on foot.

The Mandarins, and great Princes, ſolemnize their Birth-days every year, with great Feaſting, Paſtimes, Comedies, and Fire-works, and all their Friends and Kindred fail not to attend them to honour the Solemnities. In the year 1645, the eldeſt Son of the King, who was by his Father appointed for his Succeſſor, upon one of his Birth-days ſhew'd the Court all the divertizements he could imagin, and the King who had a great affection for him, ſent him a thouſand Pains of Gold, and five hundred Bars of Silver, to the value of 120000 Livres. At which time, large Alms are diſtributed, eſpecially to poor Widows and Priſoners.

When

When the King dies, and leaves ſeveral Sons, they ſet up him whom (when alive) he choſe for his Succeſſor. The third day after the Deceaſe of the King, the Conſtable with all the Military Mandarins, the Lords of the Council, and all the Governours of Provinces, repair to the Prince's Apartment, where they preſent him with a Chineſe Habit, after which having mounted him upon an Elephant, they bring him into one of the great Courts of his Palace, which is all covered with Cloth of Gold and Silver as with a Tent. There it is, that being placed upon a Throne magnificently enrich'd, all the Mandarins proſtrate themſelves upon the Earth with their Heads downward; in which poſture having lain for ſome time, they riſe, and cloſing their Hands together, with their Arms and Eyes lifted up to Heaven, they ſwear to the new King to be faithful to him till death. This firſt Ceremony being over, the new King, to ſhew himſelf liberal upon his firſt coming to the Crown, cauſes four Panes of Gold, and ſix Bars of Silver, to be given to eve y one. But to diſtinguiſh the Conſtable from the reſt, he gives him twenty Panes of Gold, and forty Bars of Silver: and to the Preſident of the Council or Chancellour ten of Gold and twenty of Silver. Theſe Preſents being thus made, ſeveral Pieces of Artillery are fired round the Palace, accompanied with ſeveral Volleys of ſmall Shot, there being then in Arms above 30000 Horſe and Foot; and then the King is ſet upon a magnificent Palanquin, and the Conſtable and chief of the Council ride before upon lovely Horſes. Sixteen of the principal Officers of the Court carry the King, viz. eight Military Mandarins, and eight of the Council. And in this manner they ſet forward to the Apartment of the deceaſed King, from whence all the Lords retire for two hours, except the Eunuchs; and then it is, that the Princeſſes, Ladies of the Court, and chief Wives of the Mandarins, come to kiſs the King's Hand, and congratulate his Advancement to the Throne. Which done, all the Lords return again to a noble Feaſt after the manner of the Countrey ready prepar'd. Their Viands are not ſo delicate, nor ſo deliciouſly dreſs'd as ours, neither have they ſo much variety. 'Tis true, they have thoſe Birds-neſts, already mention'd, which they mix in the moſt part of their Diſhes, which gives the Meat a taſt of almoſt all ſorts of Spices. Of all the Meats which they eat Colts Fleſh is in moſt eſteem, and Dogs Fleſh, neither of which agree with our Palates. The Feſtival is concluded with Comedies and Fireworks, which la allſt the night. The next day the 30000 Men that gave their Volleys of ſmall Shot the day before, are drawn up in good order in a Field next, and all the principal Officers of War, Colonels, Captains, and Lieutenants, leave the Frontiers to be at the ſame place. Then the King mounted upon his Palanquin, and carried by ſixteen of his principal Officers, the Conſtable and grand Squire riding before, and attended by ſeveral other Commanders on foot, with ſeveral Mummers that play and dance before the Pallanquin, goes forth of his Palace, the Drums, Trumpets, Cornets, and other Warlike Inſtruments, filling the Air with their Martial Sounds. In this Pomp, and with this Equipage, the King being come to the Camp, quits his Palanquin, and mounts one of his great Elephants of War, which are us'd to the noiſe of the Guns and ſight of the Fireworks. Being thus mounted, he rides into the middle of all his Troops, in which place all the Officers ſwear Fidelity to him; after which he beſtows his Gifts upon them, to every Colonel two Panes of Gold, and forty Bars of Silver; to every Captain the half of what he gives a Colonel, and to every Lieutenant the half of what he gives a Captain: and as for the Souldiers, they have every one a Moneths Pay. Theſe Preſents being made, the whole Army diſcharges three Volleys, and then every Company retreats into a large Hutt, where they have Meat and Drink prepar'd for them, enough to ſerve them a whole day and a night. In the ſame Field is alſo ſet up a fair wooden Palace, ſumptuouſly enriched within with Paintings and ſeveral pieces of Workmanſhip in Gold. There the King ſpends all the night, ſome part in Feaſting, ſome part in Plays and ſeeing the Mummers dance, and the reſt in beholding the Fireworks. The next day the King leaves his wooden Palace, which is afterwards fir'd by the Souldiers, as well as their own Hutts, and ſo returns to the City. Being arrived at his Palace with the ſame pomp that he went forth, he ſeats himſelf upon his Throne, and there ſhews his Liberality to thoſe that made the Fireworks, to the Comedians and Dancers, and all the reſt that were any way contributary, tributory to the ſetting forth the Pomp of the Ceremony. Then he gives Acceſs to all the People, and two Commiſſioners, one for the Merchants, and the other for the Handicrafts, make a Speech to the King, the ſubſtance whereof is, that all the Burgeſſes and Inhabitants of the good City of Checo do acknowledge him for their King, and that they will be faithful to him till death. The Speech being ended, the King preſents the Body of the Merchants with 50 Panes of Gold, and 300 Bars of Silver; and the Body of the Tradeſmen with 20 Panes of Gold, and 100 Bars of Silver. The People gone home, every one ſtrives who ſhall ſpend moſt in Feaſting and Comedies, adding of their own to the Kings Bounty; ſo that every Quarter of the City is full of Jollity and Rejoycing for a week together. Some days after come the Commiſſioners for the Commonalty, from all parts of the Kingdom, who in the behalf of their Cities and Towns make known to His Majeſty the univerſal Joy of the People for their lawful Prince, aſſuring him of their Fidelity, and of their Service againſt the Chineſes. They name particularly the Chineſes, becauſe the Tunquineſes have no greater Enemies than they, and for that the Hatred between them is irreconcileable. The King obſerving the good will of his People, teſtifies his Acknowledgment in this manner: All that have not time out of mind been Rebels to their lawful Sovereigns, but have conſtantly taken up Arms for their Defence, are diſcharged for a year from all Taxes and Impoſitions; and for the reſt, who have at any time formerly aſſiſted the Enemy, they are onely exempted for ſix moneths. All Priſoners for Debt partake alſo of the King's Bounty, ſo that after the Preſident of the Council has made a Compoſition with the Creditors for half the Summe, the King pays the reſt.

It is a thing almoſt incredible, what a vaſt number of Sacrifices the King ſends to the Temples of his falſe Gods, to be there offer'd to the Idols.

The number of Beaſts is ſaid to exceed an hundred thouſand, beſides the value of a million in Panes of Gold, Tiſſues, and Silks, to adorn the Idols, and Orange-coloured Calicuts for the Bonzes, and thoſe that attend the Service of the Pagods. Among the reſt of theſe Preſents he ſends a vaſt number of Pieces of blue Calicuts for the poor people that are kept in the Pagods, as our Poor are kept in Hoſpitals. The Idolatrous Princes alſo conſume incredible Summes to adorn the Pagods and Images of their falſe Gods. There are ſome of them three foot high, all of maſſy Gold, others of Silver bigger than the Life.

The new King after all theſe Ceremonies are over, takes his time to go and give thanks to his falſe Deities for his coming to the Crown when the Moon firſt changes, ſhutting himſelf up for the firſt week with the Bonzes, and living in common with them with a great deal of Frugality.

During this time he viſits the principal Hoſpitals, to ſee how the poor people are us'd, eſpecially the old Folks, whom they have in great Veneration, to whom he diſtributes new Alms; for naturally the Tunquineſes are very charitable. To conclude, he makes choice of ſome fair Situation, where he orders the building of a new Pagod, which he devotes to ſome of his Idols. Thus his Devotion being ended, upon the firſt day of the ſecond Quarter, he mounts one of his Elephants of War, attended by all the Officers of his Court on Horſe-back, and ten or twelve thouſand men on foot, choſen out of the whole Army to attend him. All the ſecond Quarter the whole Court ſtays in a certain Plain, where are three Houſes ſet up, one for the King, one for the Conſtable, and one for the Preſident of the Council; with a world of Huts for the reſt. There are alſo ſeveral ſmall Cabins ſet up, which are not covered and cloſed but upon one ſide, which they turn as the Wind blows; and theſe are the places where they dreſs their Victuals: For at that time the King allows two meals a day to all his Attendants.

Through this Plain runs the River of ——————— which is very broad in that place. Upon this River are ſeveral Galleys richly gilded and painted, but eſpecially the Admiral, which exceeds all the reſt in Magnificence. The Prow, the Poop, the Ropes, the Oars, but onely that part which goes into the water, glitter all with Gold; the Benches very ingeniouſly painted, the Rowers well clad. For there the Rowers are all Souldiers and Freemen, contrary to the Cuſtom in Europe. The Souldiers in their youth are taught to handle their Oars, and have ſomewhat better Pay than the Land-Souldiers. The Galleys are not ſo big as ours,

ours, but they are longer, and cut the water better. While the King ſtays in this place, he diverts himſelf with ſeeing theſe Galleys row one againſt another. In the Evening the Rowers come aſhoar with their Captains to kiſs the King's Hand, and they that have behav'd themſelves moſt ſtoutly and nimbly, carry off the Marks of his Bounty. The ſeven days being paſt, the King calls before him all the Souldiers of the Galleys with their Officers, and gives them two moneths Wages extraordinary, as he does to his Land-Souldiers. 'Tis a wonderful thing to behold the vaſt number of Fireworks which they throw about, as well upon the Land as upon the Water. For my Brother, who has been preſent at all theſe Shews, has told me, that for theſe ſeven days together you would think the Air and Water all on fire. Being at Bantam I once ſaw one of theſe artificial Firework-Shows which the Tunquineſes that were there plaid off before the King, and I muſt confeſs it was quite another thing from what we make in Europe.

The ſeven days being paſt, the King returns to the City in the ſame order, and with the ſame pomp, as he went forth; and being come to his Palace, he goes directly to the Apartment of his Princeſſes, where none but his Eunuchs accompany him, where he ſtays all the reſt of the moneth. Every Evening he diverts himſelf with new Fireworks, which are plaid off before the Womens Lodgings; where alſo the Eunuchs, together with the Comedians and Mummers, contribute to divertiſe the Ladies.

CHAP. XIV.

Of the Funeral Pomp of the Kings of Tunquin, and of their manner of Burying their Dead.

WHen the King of Tunquin dies, he is presently Embalm'd and laid in a Bed of State, where for sixty five days the People have liberty to come and see him. All that time he is serv'd as he was when he was alive; and when the Meat is taken from before the Body, one half is given to the Bonzes, and the other half to the Poor. So soon as the King hath breath'd his last gasp, the Constable gives notice thereof to the Governours of Provinces, and orders them how long they shall Mourn.

All the Military Mandarins and Judges wear Mourning generally three years, the King's Houshold nine moneths, the Nobility six, and the meaner sort three moneths. During these three years there is a Cessation from all Divertisements, except those that attend the Ceremony of the King's Advance or Elevation to the Throne. All the Viands which are serv'd up to the King are vernish'd with Black. The King cuts his Hair, and covers his Head with a Bonnet of Straw, as do likewise all the Princes and Counsellors of State; neither do they leave off that Habit till the King's Body be in the Galley which is to carry him to his Enterment. Three Bells which hang in one of the Towers of the Palace, never leave tolling from the King's expiring till the Corps be put into the Galley. The third day after his Decease all the Mandarins repair to Court, to testifie their sorrow which they have for the Death of the deceased King, and ten days after that the People are allowed to see the Body lie in State, till it be put into the Galley.

During the sixty five days that the Body is thus expos'd, the Constable is busie in preparing for the Funeral Pomp. From the Palace to the place where the Galleys wait for the Body, it is about two days Journey, and all the way spread

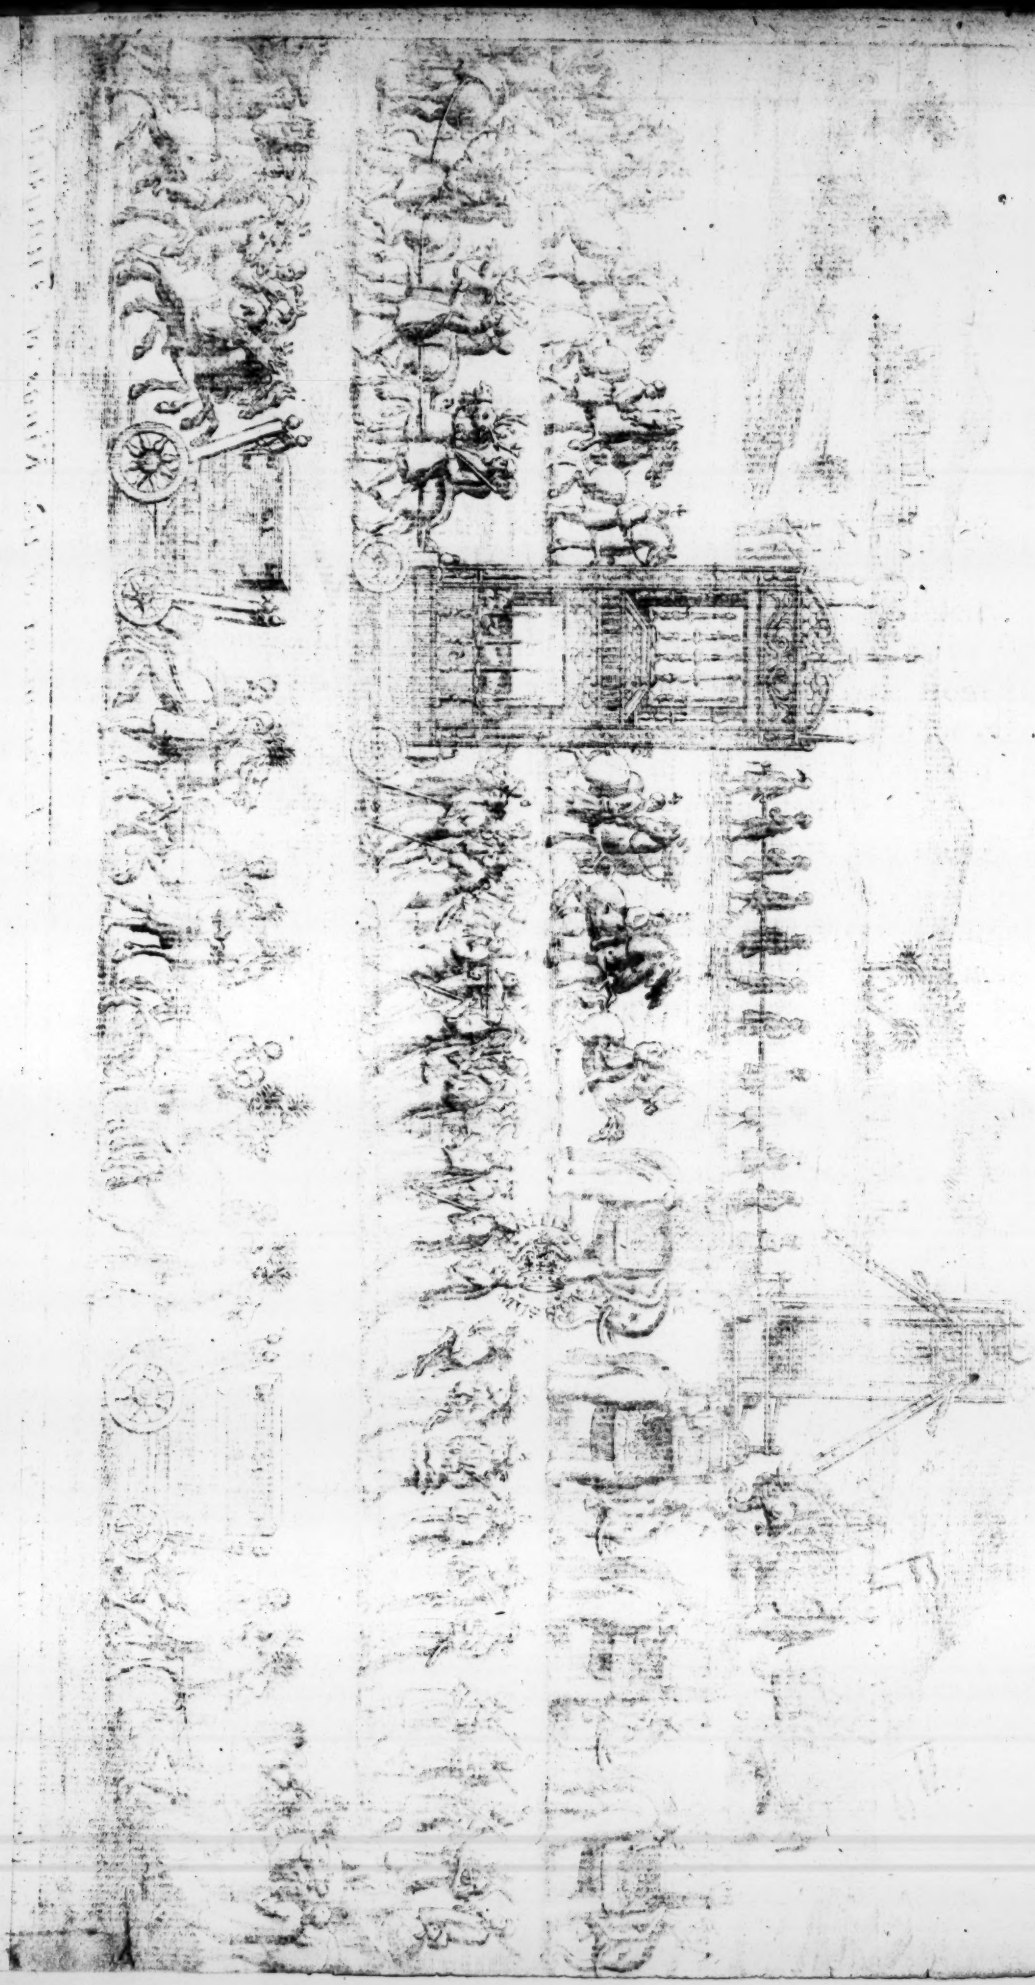
The Order observed in the March of the Funerall Pompe at the Interrment of the Kings of Tunquin.



The Order obſerv'd in the March of the Funeral Pomp at the Interment of the Kings of Tunquin.

1. Two Meſſengers of the Chamber proclaim the deceaſed King's Name; each of them bears a Mace, the Head whereof is full of combuſtible ſtuff for Artificial Fire or Fuſées.

2. Next proceed Twelve Elephants; on each of the four foremoſt is one bearing the King's Standard. Then follow four other Elephants, with Wooden Turrets on their Backs, and in every one of theſe are Six Men, ſome being armed with Muſquets, others with Fire Lances. The four laſt Elephants do ſeverally carry a kind of Cage; ſome of which are on all ſides ſhut up with Glaſs Windows, the other with a ſort of Grates; the firſt being of a Square, the other having ſix ſides and facing.

3. Then rides the Maſter of the Horſe, attended with two Pages on Horſe-back.

4. Twelve Horſes are led by the Bridle two and two, by as many Captains of the Guard. The Harneſs of the firſt Six Horſes is very rich, the Bit, and all the Furniture of the Bridle and Saddle are of pure Gold, the Saddles are embroydered likewiſe with Gold: But the Six other Horſes Harneſs is all cover'd over with Gold Plates.

5. The Chariot which bears the Mauſolee, wherein is the King's Corps, is dragged by Eight Stags trained to this Service. Each of theſe Stags is led by a Captain of the Life Guard.

6. Then follows the new King afoot clad in White Satten, with a Straw Cap on his Head. If he hath any Brothers, they attend on him in the like Attire; and they are ſurrounded with Muſicians and Players on the Hoboys, and other Inſtruments.

7. There proceeds afterwards Six Princeſſes in White Satten, who carry Meat and Drink for the deceaſed King. Theſe are attended tended by two Ladies of Honour in Purple Garments; and about these Ladies are several Musicians.

8. Eight Princes of the Royal Bloud go in Purple Garments with Straw Hats.

9. Four Governours of the four chief Provinces of the Kingdom, each bearing a Stick on his Shoulder, on which hangs a Bag full of Gold and several Perfumes; and these Bags contain the Presents which the several Provinces make unto the deceased King, for to be buried with his Corps, that he may make use of the same in the other World.

10. Two Chariots go next, each drawn by Eight Horses, and every Couple being led by Two Men. In each Chariot is a Coffer or Trunk full of Bars of Gold and other Riches, for the deceased King's use in the Life to come.

11. A great Crowd of the King's Officers, and of the Nobility, do follow this Funeral Pomp, some afoot and some on horse-back, according to their Offices and Qualities.

Place this Page 46.

A Continuation of the Order obſerved at the Funeral Pomp of the Kings of Tunquin, ſetting out from the City of Bodlego.

The King's Body is put into a Galley, which is drawn up the River. This River is increaſed by ſeveral Brooks that come down from the Mountains, and it runs through barren and Deſart Countries. In ſome of theſe places they are wont to bury the Corps very privately; for ſix onely of the chief Eunuchs of the Court are to know where the King hath been buried. An Oath is tendered to them never to reveal the place. And this is done perhaps on ſome Religious Motive, and likewiſe through Fear, that the Treaſures which are buried by him ſhould be digged up. Theſe Riches are ordinarily ſome Maſſy Bars of Gold and Silver, as likewiſe ſome Pieces of Cloth of Gold and Silver, and ſuch kinds of other rich Furnitures, which he is to make uſe of (as they ſay) when he hath need of them in the other World. Many Lords and Ladies of the Court will needs be buried Alive with him, for to ſerve him in the places where he is to go. I have obſerved in paſſing through the Eſtates of the Raja or Prince of Velouche, which border on the Eaſterly parts of the Kingdom of Viſapour, that the Wives ſuffer themſelves to be buried Alive near their deceaſed Husbands, inſtead of being burned, as they practiſe in other Provinces of the Indies.

A. Here you ſee the Proſpect of the City of Bodlego.

B. The Galley where the King's Corps is.

C. Two Galleys do carry the Lords who go to be buried Alive with the King. That which is grated about is full of Ladies, who likewiſe offer themſelves to be interred Alive with him.

D. Other Galleys, wherein are the Treaſures which are to be buried with the Corps.

At every quarter of a Leagues end are ſet up Huts, where is ready prepar'd Water to drink, and Fire to light their Tobacco. After the Pomp is over, and that the King is returned home, the Cloth is taken up and given to the Bonzes.

As to the order of their March it is thus:

The two men that go formoſt of all, are the two Uſhers of the Door of the King's Chamber, who go repeating aloud the Name of the deceaſed King, carrying each of them a Mace of Arms, the bole whereof is full of artificial Fireworks. The twelve that follow, are the twelve chief Officers of the Galley, which draw the Tomb whereon the King's Name is written. Then follows the grand Squire on Horſeback, attended by two others. Next appear twelve led Horſes, which are led two by two, ſix of which have their Bridles enrich'd with thin Plates of Gold, and their Saddles embroydered. The other ſix with Bridles of Gold, and Houſſes embroidered, and fring'd about with a Gold and Silver Fringe; every Horſe being led by two men. Next to them follow twelve Elephants, four which carry each of them a man carrying a Standard; four others which carry each of them a Tower with ſix men apiece, ſome with Muſquets, others with Fire Lances; the four laſt carry each of them a kind of a Cage, of which one is made with Glaſs Windows before and upon each ſide; the other like a kind of a Lattice, and the other with four kinds of Ruffs: and theſe are the King's Elephants which he rode upon when he went to the Wars. Behind them follow eight Horſes, every one of them led by a Captain of the Guard, who draw the Herſe. The new King, and his Brothers if he have any, or the Princes of the Bloud, follow the Herſe, clad in Robes of White Satten, which is their Mourning Colour. Laſtly follow two Chariots, each one drawn by eight Horſes, and carrying two Coffers, wherein are the Panes of Gold, Bars of Silver, rich Tiſſues and Habits, which are to be buried with the Body of the deceaſed King.

The

The Funerals of the Tunquineſes.

AS fer the ordinary Funerals of the Tunquineſes, they are more or leſs pompous, according to the Quality of the Perſons.

At their Enterments they uſe great ſtore of artificial Fire-works, which are the Companions as well of their Sorrow as their Joy. They ſet upon the Tomb of the deceaſed good ſtore of Victuals and Comfitures, out of a belief that the dead are the better for them. For their Prieſts keep them in that blind Error for their own advantage, and ſo well order their buſineſs, that there is nothing left by morning. The ſame thing is practiſed by the Chineſes at Batavia, where they have a place without the Town to bury their dead, which puts me in mind of this Story: Every evening the Guard is relieved as well in the City as in the Fortreſs. At the ſame time alſo they put forth eight Souldiers and a Corporal at each Gate of the City, who go the Rounds about the Walls of the City, and as far as within Canon-ſhot of the Walls, being fearful of being ſurpriſed by the King of Mataran, or Bontam, their Capital Enemies. Now becauſe the Chineſes burying place lay in the Walk of theſe Souldiers, when they ſaw the Provant upon one of the Tombs, took it away to their Guard, and there feaſted themſelves. The Chineſe Prieſts, that uſually came about midnight to take away the Victuals, finding themſelves ſeveral times bereaved of their Expectations, and ſuſpecting the Souldiers belonging to the Holland Garriſon, firſt complained to the General and Council; but that not taking effect, they reſolved to poiſon both the Meat and the Drink, to prevent the like Fraud for the future. This took ſo good effect, that afterwards many of the Dutch Souldiers being poiſoned, deterr'd the reſt from any more ſuch Licoriſh Attempts.

CHAP. XV.

Of the Religion and Superstition of the Tunquineſes

THe Tunquineſes as to matters of Religion are divided into three Sects: The firſt takes its original from an ancient Philoſopher called Confutius, whoſe Memory is very famous over all China, and the neighbouring Countries. Their Doctrine aſſerts that Man is compos'd of two parts, the one fine and ſubtil, the other material and groſs; and that when Man dies, the ſubtiler part goes into the Air, and the groſſer part ſtays in the Earth. This Sect maintains the uſe of Sacrifices, and adores the ſeven Planets. But among all their Gods and Idols they have four in particular veneration; the Names of theſe Gods are Ranma, Betolo, Ramoun, and Brama. They have a Goddeſs alſo, whoſe Name is Satisbana, which is ſhe whom the Women adore; but for the King and the Mandarins, eſpecially the more ſtudious ſort, they adore the Heavens. The ſecond Sect had for its Founder a certain Hermite called Chacabout, and is followed by the moſt part of the meaner people. He has taught them the Tranſmigration of Souls, and has enjoyn'd his Followers to obſerve 10 Commandments.

The firſt is, That they ſhall not kill. 2. That they ſhall not ſteal. 3. That they ſhall not defile their Bodies. 4. That they ſhall not lye. 5. That they ſhall not be unfaithful in their words. 6. That they ſhall reſtrain their inordinate Deſires. 7. That they ſhall do injury to no man. 8. That they ſhall not be great Talkers. 9. That they ſhall not give way to their Anger. 10. That they ſhall labour to their utmoſt to get Knowledge.

As for them that deſign to live a Religious Life, they muſt renounce the Delights of this Life, be charitable to the poor, overcome their Paſſions, and give themſelves up to Meditation. He taught moreover, that after this Life there were ten diſtinct places of Joy and Torment: and that the Contemners of this Law ſhould feel Torments proportionable to their Offences, without any end of their Torments. That they that endeavour'd to fulfill his Law, and had fail'd in any point, they ſhould wander in divers Bodies for 3000 years before they entered into happineſs. But that they who had perfectly obeyed his Law, ſhould be rewarded without ſuffering any change of Body. And that he himſelf had been born ten times, before he enjoyed the Bliſs which he poſſeſſed, not having in his firſt Youth been illuminated with that Knowledge which he afterwards attained. This Chacabout was one of the greateſt Impoſtors that ever was in Aſia, having ſpread his Opinions over all the Kingdom of Siam, over a great part of the Provinces of Japon, and from thence into Tunquin, where he died.

The third Sect is that of Lanthu, to whoſe Fables the Japonneſes and Chineſes give great credence, but the Tunquineſes more. He was a Chineſe by Nation, and one of the greateſt Magicians in the Eaſt. He made a great many Diſciples, who to authorize this black Impoſtor, and the more to impoſe upon the people, made them believe that the Birth of Lanthu was miraculous, and that his Mother carried him in her Womb, without loſing her Virginity, ſeventy years. He taught much of Chacabout's Doctrine; but that which won the Hearts of the people was, that he ſtill exhorted the Grandees to build Hoſpitals in all Cities where there had been none before. Inſomuch that ſeveral of the Nobility betook themſelves to thoſe places to look after the Sick, as did alſo a great number of the Bonzes for the ſame reaſon. While my Brother was there, the Choüa, a great Enemy to theſe Vagabonds, ſent for a great number of Bonzes and Says, or idle Fellows, and picking out the ſtrongeſt and beſt proportion'd, ſent them away to the Frontiers for Souldiers.

'Tis the Cuſtom of the Tunquineſes to adore three things in their Houſes: The firſt is the Hearth of their Chimney made of three Stones The ſecond is an Idol which they call Tienſa, which is the Patroneſs of Handicrafts, as Sculpture, Painting, Goldſmith's work, &c. So that when they put forth a Child to learn any of thoſe Trades, before they let him work they ſet up an Altar, and ſacrifice to this Idol, to the end he may infuſe into the Lad wit and aptneſs to learn. The third is the Idol Buabin, which they implore when when they design to build an House. For then they erect an Altar, and send for the Bonzes and Says to sacrifice to this Idol. To this purpose they make great preparation of all sorts of Viands, and then present him with several gilt Papers, wherein are written several Magic words, endeavouring by that means that he may not suffer any misfortune to befall the House they are going to build.

There are some Tunquineses that adore the Heaven, others the Moon, and others the Stars There are also some that adore five parts of the Earth, making a fifth part in the middle of that which is known to us, and to them also, but confusedly. When they worship them, they have for each of the parts a particular Colour. When they adore the Northern part, they clothe themselves in black; and the Dishes and Table whereon they lay their Sacrifices are likewise black. When they worship the South their Habit is red; when the East, green; when the West, white; and when they adore the middle of the World, they wear Yellow.

They offer Offerings likewise to Trees, Elephants, Horses, Cows, and almost to all other sorts of Animals. They that study the Chinese Characters are accustomed every fifth moneth of the year, to sacrifice for the Souls of the dead who were never buried. They believe that by so doing their Understandings shall be more enlightned for the apprehending of all things.

Every year, at the beginning of the year, they have a great Solemnity, to honour after their death those who in their life-time have done any noble action, and were renowned for their Valour, reckoning in that number those that have been so hardy as to rebel against their Princes, as being men of Courage. Three days before this great Solemnity, which is perform'd in a large Field, they set up several Altars, some for the Sacrifices, others for the Names of the Illustrious Men whom they design to honour. The Eve before above 40000 Souldiers spend the night in this Plain, where all the Princes and Mandarins are ordered to meet with their Elephants and led Horses, and the King himself goes thither in person. After they have finished all their Sacrifices, and burnt good store of Incense to the Honour of the dead, the King and all the Mandarins make three profound Reverences where the Altars are; then the King ſhoots with his Bow and Arrows five times againſt the Altars, where lie the Names of thoſe that were ſo raſh as to rebel againſt their Sovereigns. After that the great Guns go off, and the Souldiers give three Volleys of ſmall Shot, to put all the Souls to flight. Then they burn all the Altars, and a great number of gilt Papers, which were made uſe of at the Sacrifices; concluding all with a moſt hideous ſhout of all the Souldiery. Which done, the Bonzes, Says, and ſuch like people, come and devour the Meat that was made uſe of for the Sacrifices.

The firſt and fifteenth days of the Moneth 'tis a wonderful thing to hear the Chiming Din of their great Bells. For thoſe are the more eſpecial Holydays ſet apart for the Worſhip of their Gods, and all the Bonzes and Says give them more than ordinary Worſhip upon thoſe days, redoubling their Prayers, and repeating upon thoſe days every one of them a ſtrange kind of Charm ſix times over. At theſe times ſeveral people bring Meat and Drink to the Sepulchres of their Kindred, to ſacrifice for the good of their Souls to eat. The Bonzes fail not to be there, and when the others have paid their Devoirs the Bonzes fall to, and what they cannot eat they give to the poor. But for all the auſtere Lives of theſe Bonzes and Says, neither the King nor the Mandarins make any account of them, ſo that they are in credit onely with the common people.

In the Kingdom of Tunquin, where the great Cities have ſeveral Pagods, there is hardly a Town or Village that has not one, and for every Pagod at leaſt two Bonzes and two Says. But there are ſome Pagods that maintain forty Bonzes and as many Says, who live in common under a Superiour, they keep to the Doctrine of Chacabout, and a Goat is the Idol which they adore. They wear about their Necks a kind of Necklace, conſiſting of 100 Beads, very big and made of Wood. In their Hands they carry a Staff, which is headed with a Bird of varniſh'd Wood. They beg for their living, and are not like the Bonzes in other Kingdoms, who beg Alms as it were their due; theſe on the contrary uſe all the modeſty and humility that may be, never taking more than is needful for them: and if they have any thing to ſpare, they give it to the poor Widows or Orphans that cannot get their living. Their Orders permit them to marry, provided they leave their Monaſtery. They aſſiſt at the Funerals of great men, where they ſay a kind of Orizon, ſounding their Trumpets and Cornets, while the Bells in their Pagods go at the ſame time.

The Tunquineſes alſo have a great veneration for two Magicians, and one Magicianeſs. The firſt of their Magicians, whom they call Thay-bon, makes them believe that he knows the Events of things to come; ſo that when they have any occaſion to marry their Children, build a Houſe, buy Land, or undertake any buſineſs of Conſequence, they conſult this Oracle to know what ſhall happen to them. The Magician courteouſly receives them, and with a counterfeit modeſty demands of them (for Example) the Age of the perſon concerned. Then taking into his hands a great Book about three fingers thick, wherein are the Figures of Men, half Men, and ſeveral ſorts of Land and Water Animals, of Circles, Triangles, and Squares, he goes to work, and at the ſame time puts into a Goblet three Pieces of Copper, whereon are engraven ſeveral Characters onely upon one ſide. After he has ſhaken the Pieces in the Cup, he throws them upon the ground as at Croſs and Pile; if all the Characters lie undermoſt he looks no further in his Book, but looks upon it as an unfortunate ſign; but if one or two Characters come up, he looks in his Book, and makes the perſon believe what he pleaſes. But if all the Characters happen to turn uppermoſt, then the Magician cries out, that the Party is the moſt fortunate in the world.

The ſecond Magician is called Thay-Phon-Thouy, to whom they have recourſe in all their Sickneſſes. When any ſick perſon comes to him, he takes a Book full of Figures like the former; onely the Form of the Book is different, for this is not above an inch thick, and about four fingers long, with eight Panes full of Cyphers. If after ſeveral Apiſh tricks which he acts before the ſick perſon to amuſe him, he affirms that the Diſtemper comes from the Devil, he himſelf, together with the ſick party and they that brought him, do Homage to the evil ſpirit: this Homage conſiſts of ſeveral Sacrifices, and the Friends of the ſick party preſent to the Devil, or rather to the Magician, a Table furniſh'd with Rice and other Viands. But if after all theſe Offerings the ſick party do not recover his health, all the Friends and Kindred of the ſick party, with as many Souldiers as they can get, ſurround the ſick perſons Houſe, and ſhoot off their Muſquets three times, to drive away the Devil. Sometimes the Magician makes the ſick party and his Friends believe, that the God of the Waters is the cauſe of the Diſtemper, eſpecially if the ſick perſon belongs to the Water, as being a Mariner, Boatman, or Fiſherman. And to the end he may be cur'd, and that the appeas'd God may return to his watry Habitation, he orders that all the way from the ſick parties Houſe to the next River may be ſpread with all the Pieces of Stuff which all the Kindred have, and that they ſet up Huts at ſuch and ſuch diſtances, and keep in every one a ſeveral Table furniſh'd with all ſorts of Viands for 3 days. And all this to oblige the Deity to retire, and to entertain him till he gets home. But the better to know the riſe of the Diſeaſe, Thay-Phou-Thouy makes them believe, that they muſt go and conſult Thay-Bou, who is the chief Magician, and if he anſwer that the Souls of the dead have cauſed the Diſtemper, the Magician imploys all his tricks and devices to draw to him thoſe miſchievous Souls; and when he has got into his Clutches, as he pretends, the Soul that is the Author of the Diſeaſe, he ſhuts him up in a Bottle full of Water till the party be cured; and then breaking the Bottle he ſets the Soul at liberty to go about his buſineſs. When the party recovers, he makes him and his Friends believe, that if the Bottle had not been well ſtopp'd to keep in the Soul, their Kinſman would have died infallibly.

The Magicianeſs, which the Tunquineſes alſo conſult, is called Bacoti, and ſhe keeps a great Correſpondence with the Devil, to whom, if ſhe has a Daughter, ſhe offers her as ſoon as ſhe is born, the more to oblige him. If any Mother bewail the death of her Child, and be deſirous to know in what condition the Soul of the Child is in, in the other world, ſhe goes to Bacoti, who to ſatisfie the Mother preſently falls a beating her Drum, to ſummon the Soul to come to her, who preſently appears, as ſhe pretends, and tells her its Condition whether good or bad. But moſt commonly ſhe makes the ſilly Mothers believe that the Soul is happy, and bids them be of good cheer.

The Superſtitions of theſe people are very numerous, but the moſt remarkable are theſe:

The ſtudious ſort of people are very diligent to learn, how by looking in a Mirrour to foretell things to come.

There are ſome that preſent Aqua Vitæ to the dead, and ſprinkle their Aſhes with it; but this onely upon the Aſhes of their Anceſtors, from whom at the ſame time they beg for Health, Honour, and Riches.

Others there are, that upon the firſt day of their year take a piece of Chalk, and make ſeveral Figures round, ſquare, and triangular, upon the Threſhold and Steps of their Doors. They ſay thoſe Figures fright away the evil ſpirits. Some there are that make great Obſervations upon the Feet of their Hens, and draw ſtrange Concluſions of bad or ill fortune from thence. Others travelling into the Countrey, if they ſneeze but once by the way, return to the place from whence they parted in the morning, ſaying, That had they gone on, ſome miſchief would have certainly befallen them: but if they ſneeze twice, they purſue their Journey, never fearing any danger for that day.

There are ſome ſo ſuperſtitious, that going out of their Houſes, if they meet a Woman, they return home again for two or three hours; but if they meet a Man, 'tis a good Omen.

The firſt Fruit which they gather at the beginning of the year, is that which the Araguer bears, ſpoken of in the third Chapter. And this is the firſt which they eat with great Ceremony, during the firſt Quarter of their ſecond Moneth. To which purpoſe they are ſo poſſeſs'd with the Devil, that they poyſon one of theſe Fruits, and give it to a Child to eat, believing that by taking away the life of the poor innocent Child, they ſhall thrive the better all the year after.

When the Moon is eclipſed, they ſay there is a certain Dragon that aſſails her, and endeavours with all his might to overcome her, with an intention to devour her. Then to aſſiſt the Moon, and to put the Dragon to flight, they diſcharge their Muſquets, ring their Bells, beat up their Drums, and make a hideous noiſe till the Eclipſe be over: and then they believe that they have reſcued the Moon, for which they make as great a rejoycing, as if they had obtain'd ſome eminent Victory over their Enemies.

They

They are also very superstitious in reference to the hours of the day. They divide the natural day into twelve hours, and to every one they give the name of some Beast, as of a Tiger, a Lion, a Bear, a Horse, a Dragon, an Ape, &c. The Moneths also and Days have their particular Names: and when a Child is born, presently the Father and Kindred go to see the name of the Beast by which the Hour was call'd wherein the Child was born; believing that Animal will prove fatal to it. At the time that my Brother was at the Court at Tunquin, the King then reigning being born in the hour of the Horse, would never give Audience, nor ever stir out of his Palace at that hour, for fear some mischief should befall him at that time. That Prince was so superstitious, that one of his Children dying in the fifth moneth, which bears the name of the Horse, he would never permit him to be entern'd, but caus'd him to be burnt, and scatter'd his ashes in the Air.

This is that which I could gather of most remarkable and most considerable matters concerning the State of the Kingdom of Tunquin, either out of the Manuscripts which my Brother (who died in the Indies) left me, or from the Discourse which I have had with the Tunquineses themselves both at Bantam and Batavia.

OF THE

ISLAND OF FORMOSA.

CHAP. I.

How the Hollanders poſſeſſed themſelves of it, and how it was taken from them by the Chineſes.

THE Iſland of Formoſa is about Eighty Leagues in compaſs; ſo that the Hollanders were never in poſſeſſion of the whole Iſland, but were onely Maſters of four Fortreſſes, and two and fifty Villages, wherein they could number about fourteen or fifteen thouſand Inhabitants. As for that part which is under the Indians, the beſt diſcovery that we can give, is onely ſuch as was made by a young Hollander upon this occaſion.

There was in the chief Fort belonging to the Hollanders a young man, imployed there as an under-Factor, who being wild and extravagant, was put out of his place and made a Souldier. He not able to undergo that miserable course of life, resolved with himself rather to die, than live in that mean condition. Thereupon having at several opportunities made a shift to make up a little Pack of what he thought was most fit for the Mountainiers of the Island, he watch'd his time and stole out of the Fort, and took his way directly toward the Mountains. With these Highlanders he liv'd four years, in which time having learnt the Trade and Language of the Countrey, he ventur'd to return to the Hollanders again, who received him kindly, as being willing to understand the Government of the People, and by what means they might traffick with them. Whereupon the young man made them this Relation.

As for the Government of the People he said, that over every six Villages there was an Overseer with four Counsellors, who administer Justice, and punish the smallest Theft with Death. The Men are crucified; the Women are laid along upon a thick Beam of Wood, and then with a Scimitar their Bodies are divided into three parts. The Men are so punish'd for Theft or Murder, and the Women for Theft or Adultery. If it be a Pety Larceny, not above the value of a Shilling, they give them an hundred Lashes with a Whip, and burn them in the Cheek. They that believe themselves to be unjustly dealt with, whether in Civil or Criminal Causes, enter their Appeal to go to the North East part of the Island, in which division of the Island there stands a City by the Sea-side, where he that commands all the Highlanders resides. At the end of our Moneth of March several of these Highlanders resort to this City, especially the Merchants, who carry along with them all their whole Stock that they had hoarded together the year before in Horns of Oxen, Harts, Bufulo's, and Raw Hides; and then return again at the end of April, bringing back in return of their Commodities Japon and China Stuffs, Clothes, and Linen of the same Countrey, and Gold and Silver Japonese Money, of various Coyns and Value. He told them also, that he believed that in the Mountains near the Sea, there are certain Mines of Gold and Silver, or some River where they they find it in Powder, and that the Japoneſes fetch it in their Veſſels. He did all he could to diſcover the truth, but after he had travelled two or three days Journey, the People would let him go no further. For at the end of every three or four hours travel there are Guards ſet, who examine all Travellers whither they go; neither will they let their own Countrymen paſs, but ſuch as go about their Law or to trade. Moreover he told them, that if they would give him Goods to trade withall, as Amber, Coral, Looking Glaſſes; but chiefly ſome Skins of the Sea Fiſh, which is rougher than Seal-skin, he would endeavour to get to the very City it ſelf where the Ships ride. Theſe Skins are greatly eſteemed by the Natives to adorn the Scabbards of their Cutlaſſes and Swords. For uſually upon the back of this Fiſh you ſhall find nine little Stones, which make a kind of a Roſe, eight in a Circle and one in the middle, as you ſee theſe nine diſpoſed in their exact order. When the Portuguezes traded onely to Japon, it is incredible how dear they ſold theſe Skins. For if Nature had well ſet theſe Stones at an equal diſtance, and even in bigneſs, one of theſe Skins would yield above ten thouſand Piaſters, and more. This Fiſh is caught in the Perſian Gulph, where I have ſeen of them, but I ſaw but very few ſo perfect as that which I have deſcrib'd, which would in thoſe Countries yield ten thouſand Crowns.

But to return to the Story; the Governour gave the young man what he deſired, and ſent him going: but the Chineſes ſoon after expelling the Hollanders out of the Iſland, it was never known what became of the young man.

It may be wondered why Formoſa was taken ſo ſoon: but here were two Reaſons, firſt the faint-heartedneſs of the Governour, and ſecondly his breach of word to a French Souldier of Rouen, call'd Abraham du Puys; for he having ſerved out his time of ſeven years, deſir'd leave to be gone, but the Governour, after he had promis'd him fair at firſt, at length abſolutely refuſed him. Soon after the Chineſes came to beſiege the place. The Souldier thus diſappointed, and ſeeing himſelf coop'd up who might have been free, had the Governour ſo pleaſed, ſtudied a fatal revenge upon all his Countrymen; for being by this means grown deſperate, watch'd his opportunity, and flinging himself from the Fort into the Sea, swam directly to the Enemy. The Governour offered 200 Pieces of Eight to any person that would venture after him, and bring him back dead or alive. A Serjeant accepted his offer, but it was to get loose as the other had done; and so they got both safe into the Enemies Quarters. The Chineses presently carried them to the General Coxima; and he being a person of Valour and Discretion, made very much of them, whereupon they readily and willingly inform'd him of the strength and condition of the Fortress. They also advised him to remove his Batteries to the weakest part of the Town, whereas he was then assailing it where it was most strongly fortified: which if he would do, they assur'd him he should be soon Master of the Fort. The General was thinking a little before they came to have raised his Siege, but upon their encouragement he fell on again according to their direction; and as he was preparing for a general Assault, the Holland Commander, fearful of losing his Life and his Estate, beat a Parley, and surrender'd the place upon Articles.

During the Siege the Hollanders made a Salley, but were beaten in again, and fourteen of their men were taken Prisoners. The Chineses finding those fourteen men in their power, and remembring how cruel the Hollanders had been to their Nation when they took any of them at Sea, brought the fourteen men all together, put out one eye of each, cut off their Noses, Ears, and one hand, and so sent them back to the Fort, with order to tell the Commander, that the Dutch had taught them that kind of Mercy.

CHAP. II.

Of Maurice Iſland, where they cut Ebony.

THE Iſland call'd Maurice Iſland lies almoſt in 84 degrees of Longitude, and 21 degrees of Southern Latitude, being but 2 degrees and 30 minutes from the Tropick of Capricorn, right over againſt the middle of the great Iſland of Madagaſcar, which it has upon the Weſt, from whence it lies 140 Leagues, and is in compaſs about 60 Leagues. It bears great quantities of Ebony: and here it was that the Hollanders did formerly ſend their Slaves, their baniſh'd and condemn'd Perſons, to cut that ſort of Wood, which is Labour much more ſevere and cruel than that of Rowing in the Galleys. The whole Iſland is ſubject to thoſe violent and outrageous Tempeſts call'd Ouragans, which nothing can withſtand, ſo that the People are forc'd to dig themſelves Holes in the ground, not being able to keep their Huts ſtanding. Neither had the poor Creatures any other Food than a little boil'd Rice, and about a Farthings worth of Salt-fiſh among four for a whole day. Since that the Price of Ebony being brought very low, the Dutch have forſaken the Iſland, the Profit not bearing the ſorry Expences which thoſe poor Creatures put them to.

So ſoon as this Tree is cut down it muſt be ſawed into Planks, and then buried ſeven or eight foot deep in the Earth, which ought to be ſomewhat moiſt. There thoſe Planks muſt lie two years, and ſometimes three, if the Wood be very thick. After that the Wood is fit to be wrought upon, neither will it ſplinter or ſplit, and will the ſooner admit of a glittering Poliſhment.

This Maurice Iſland puts me in mind of a Story, that the Sieur Loocker told me, concerning what befell him in his Voyage from Holland to Batavia in the Year 1643. Cha Abbas the ſecond of that Name, King of Perſia, having a great deſire to learn to paint, ſignified to the Hollanders at Hiſpahan, that he deſired them to ſend into Holland for ſome perperſon who was excellent both in Deſigning and Painting. Thereupon the Chief of the Factory wrote into Holland, and upon his Letters the Company ſent away Loocker, to oblige the King; and to do him the greater honour, gave him the charge of Merchant of the Veſſel, who is equal with the Captain, during the Voyage; to whom the Wind and Seaſon was very favourable till they came to the Cape of Good Hope; but after they had doubled the Point, the Pilots bare too much to the North, whereas they ſhould have ſteered directly Eaſt; ſo that when they had made the Height of the Iſland of Madagaſcar, they met with nothing but contrary Winds. For it is obſervable, that all the year long there blows but one Wind toward Maurice Iſland; ſo that a Ship may go thither in eight or nine days, but cannot return in thirty or forty. For you muſt ſteer Weſtward to 30 degrees, and from thence Eaſtward to 14 or 15 degrees, and then you light upon Maurice Iſland. Five days together the Ship was but rudely handled by the ſtorm; which at length grew ſo violent, and the Sea ſo boiſterous, that all the great Cabin was broken to pieces, the Beak of the Ship carried away, and the Foremaſt made unſerviceable. Thirteen days together they remained in this miſerable condition, toſs'd up and down by the Sea and Wind, all which time they never ſaw the Sun, unable to take any height or obſervation where they were. The fourteenth day it cleared up, and the Sun appeared, and then taking the Height they obſerved themſelves to be not far from the Maurice Iſland, which was very true; for the next day by break of day they found themſelves not above two Leagues from the Iſland; and they found themſelves upon the North ſide of the Iſland, whereas the Hollanders liv'd upon the South. And therefore perceiving that if the Wind did not change, it would be a long time, and that with great difficulty too, before they could fetch a compaſs about the Iſland to come to the Fort where the Hollanders were, they call'd a Council, where it was reſolved that Loocker with ten Souldiers ſhould be put on ſhoar, and that he ſhould endeavour to get to the Fort by Land, there to make proviſion of Water and Refreſhments for the reſt of the Company, againſt they could come about. Maurice Iſland has this advantage, to be furniſhed with excellent Water, and great ſtore of Goats, Oranges,

Ci-

Citrons, and other Fruits: but when the Ouragans happen there is not one to be ſeen upon the Trees, unleſs onely upon thoſe which are ſhelter'd by the Ebony Boughs, which are thick and ſtrong, and the Trees deeply rooted in the Earth. Loocker thereupon with ten Souldiers was put on ſhoar in a Shallop, with Proviſions for ſix days. Nor was the Iſland in that part above eight or ten Leagues broad, which they thought to travel in few days: but the Woods were ſo thick, that had they not been well provided of Carpenters Hatchets and Axes, they could never have made their way. The firſt day they travell'd not above a League, and the next day not above as much more, being ſtill forced to hack their way along with great travel and pains. So that being now weary and ſpent, they laid themſelves upon the ground to repoſe themſelves, and get a little ſleep. When they wak'd they heard the voices of ſeveral people, which much rejoyced them, believing them to be the Slaves and poor Creatures that were cutting Ebony not far off. Thereupon they fell to work to get as near them as they could: but the Woods proved ſo thick, that they deſpair'd of doing any good. Nevertheleſs the further they advanced, the clearer they could hear the voices of the people, ſome ſpeaking Dutch, others Portugueſe. Whereupon Loocker caus'd one of the Souldiers in his company that had a ſtrong voice, to call out in the Portugueſe Language, to the people to come and help them. But inſtead of that they all betook themſelves to their heels, and fled to the Commander's Lodge, telling him that there were Devils in the Woods, and that they had call'd to them in the Portugal Language. The Commander ſeeing both the Souldiers and the Slaves in ſuch a diſmal amaze and terror, knew not at firſt what to think; however he endeavoured to reſettle their diſtraction, and to revive a ſort of people that were half dead with fear. The next day he perſuaded them to return to their Work, perſuading them to lay aſide their vain Fears, which proceeded onely from idle Apprehenſions: but they flatly denied him, telling him that they would rather die, than return to be torn in pieces by the Devil. However, others that had not been preſent at the accident, and therefore gave not ſo much credit to the report, profered to ſee the utmoſt of this buſineſs, provided any one that had had heard the voice would bring them to the place. Away upon this went a good number of them together, and coming to the place fell to work. Now becauſe Loocker and his Companions having labour'd all the night before, were fallen aſleep ; for a good while the Workmen heard no voice at all, nor ſo much as any thing ſtirring, ſo that they began to laugh at thoſe that had brought them thither, who ſtill obſtinately maintained the truth of what they had heard. This Diſpute at length began to grow ſo hot and ſo loud, that at length they wak'd Loocker and his Fellows, who being now got nearer to them by means of their laſt nights labour, heard diſtinctly every word they ſaid, and notwithſtanding their diſtreſs could not chuſe but laugh. Soon after Loocker and the Souldiers call'd out again, Work toward us, they cried, we are Hollanders, come and help us out of the Wood, and we will put an end to the diſpute. But the Workmen no ſooner heard them, but away they ran for their Lives, and when they came to the Lodge, they were ſo har'd, ſo ſcar'd, and quite out of breath, that the Governour in vain endeavour'd to get the leaſt tittle of a word from them. At length being come to themſelves, they aſſur'd him that it was too true that the Devils were in the Wood, and that the more to deceive and wheedle them, to day they had not onely ſpoken Portugueſe, but Dutch too. This put the Governour and all into a deep Conſternation, inſomuch that they were all at their Wits end. But the next morning Loocker and his Gang having made their way through, the Centinel ſpied them firſt from the Fort, and by the diſcharge of his Muſquet gave notice of the approach of the Devils. And then it was that the poor affrighted Mortals, laying aſide their fears, and going forth to meet their own Shapes, found them to be a company of their Countrymen in diſtreſs, whom they then received into their kindneſs, to give an account of their Misfortunes. Three days after the Ship came into Harbour, though in a miſerable condition.

Of the Grandeur of the General at Batavia, and what befell his Wife and his Niece.

THE Company to maintain their Authority and Commerce in the Indies, believe it to be to their advantage, that the General whom they ſend to Batavia, and who commands in all the places in Aſia where the Dutch traffic, ſhould keep up the Port of a Prince. There is no Cavalry in Europe ſo well clad or mounted as his; the Horſemen all upon Perſian or Arabian Steeds. Nor is his Foot Guard leſs ſumptuous: His Halberdiers wear their yellow Satten Doublets, Scarlet Breeches lac'd with Silver Lace, and their Silk Stockins. But this onely for the General's Guards; for thoſe which they ſend abroad to their Forts and Garriſons, it is a great pity to ſee how poorly they are attir'd, and how meanly fed. When the Dutch Fleet arrives at Batavia, the Souldiers which they bring are drawn up in the Parade of the Fortreſs by the Major, who chuſes out the handſomeſt to remain at Batavia, the reſt are ſent and diſtributed into other places. When the General and his Wife go abroad, they always ride in their Coach and ſix Horſes, with ſix Halberdiers attending at each Boot, and a Troop of Horſe and two Companies of Foot for their Guard. The Authority of the General is very great, though he may be ſometimes commanded by his Wife: neither is it ſafe for them that depend upon them, to do or ſay any thing that may offend them. But for others, who have their Imployments immediately from the Company, they never oblige themſelves to be ſo circumſpect. For truth whereof I will relate the following pleaſant Story.

The Wife of General Matſuker having one day undertaken to play upon a Captain of a Ship call'd the Lucifer, and to laugh at him, for having loſt a Bale of Goods which had been ſeized by the Company, in regard no particular perſon is permitted to trade. The Captain nettled at her Diſcourſe, reſolved to be revenged. Nor was it long before he found the means; for being commanded away for Maſlipatan in the Kingdom of Goleonda, where being arriv'd, laden, and ready to ſet Sail to return to Batavia, the chief of the Factory deſired him to take in four Bales of Goods for the General's Wife, as belonging to her, and to deliver them privately to her. This was Nuts to the Captain: ſo that being return'd to Batavia, ~~he went~~ he went immediately to viſit the General, and deliver him the Letters which concerned the Cargo. Immediately according to cuſtom the General invited him to dinner, at which time it is uſual for the General to inform himſelf of the Condition of the Factory. Among the reſt of the queſtions the General asked the Captain whether he had any Counterband Goods aboard, or any that were not upon the Company's ſole account. To which the Captain anſwered, that all the Goods belonged to the Company, except four Bales, which the chief Factor at Maſlipatan had particularly recommended to his care, as belonging to Madam General. This being publickly ſpoken in the preſence of a great many that were at Table, the Lady that was not aware of ſuch a blow, was not a little ſurpriz'd, and the General himſelf was not a little in wrath, ſternly ask'd her how ſhe durſt undertake to trade without his knowledge. Preſently ſhe denied the whole matter, and averred that the Captain was miſtaken, and took her for ſome other perſon. But the General ſent for the Fiſcal, and order'd him to go forthwith with the Captain, and fetch the four Bales aſhoar; which being done, he order'd further that the Goods ſhould be carried into the public Hall of the Town Houſe, with a Writing fix'd upon them, that whoever own'd thoſe Goods ſhould come and claim them; but no body came. So that the Captain had the pleaſure to ſee the Lady in a delicate raging paſſion, and the Goods diſpos'd of to the Fiſcal, and the Poor of the Hoſpital.

The ſame General and his Wife having no Children, they began to conſider to whom they ſhould leave their Eſtates. At length the General bethought himſelf of a Niece he had at Amſterdam, and therefore wrote to the Directors of the Company to ſend her to him. This Niece of his cried Pot-herbs and Onions about the ſtreet to get her living; in which Calling ſhe was at laſt found out, and brought to the Directors, who preſently changed her Habit, and of a Crier of Cabbage made her a little Lady; who though ſhe were of ſuch a low condition, was not without a good proportion of natural Beauty.

Cab-

The Fleet being ready to depart, there was a Cabin built on purpoſe for this Niece, and the Company having preſented her with ſeveral pieces of Tiſſue and Silks, recommended her to C. Roſſe, the Viceadmiral's care. This Captain had been ſeveral times at the Indies before, and was both rich and a Batchelour: ſo that when the Ship was out at Sea, he fail'd not to ſhew all the reſpects imaginable to this Niece. Now this young Virgin not being accuſtomed to the Sea, upon the leaſt guſt of Wind ſhe was half dead; and all that time the Captain would not ſtir from her Bed-ſide, for fear any Accident ſhould befall her. And as he was thus diligent not to ſtir from her Bed-ſide in fowl, 'tis verily believ'd he was ſeldom far from it in fair weather; and that inſtead of ſitting by her Bed-ſide, he ſometimes got fairly into it. But whether he were within or without, moſt certain it is, that before Madam Niece arrived at Batavia, ſhe found her ſelf to be with child, though ſhe ſo diſcreetly concealed it, that none in the Veſſel perceived it.

The Veſſel had no ſooner paſſed the Strait that lies toward Bantam, but Madam General with a great number of her Friends in ſeveral little Barques came out to meet Madam Niece, and were not a little ſurprized to find her to be a perſon ſo well clad and handſom withall, without any appearance of what ſhe had been before.

A Coach and ſix Horſes, and ſix Halberdiers, a Troop of Horſe, and a Company of Foot, waited upon the ſhoar for Madam General. And thus was Madam Niece conducted to the Fort with great pomp, and as kindly received by Monſieur General. Some few days after ſeveral of the Gallants of Batavia came picquiering to the Houſe to ſee Madam Niece; and ſo it was, that all being ſmitten, every one deſired her in Marriage: but both Uncle and Aunt were deaf to all their Suits, as having deſign'd her to a young rich Merchant, who was then out of the way. C. Roſſe laugh'd in his ſleeve at the buſtle that was made, and ſtill continued his former reſpects and double Diligences, which were the more willingly permitted him in regard of the great care of their Niece, for which the Uncle and the Aunt thought themſelves oblig'd to him during their Voyage. But at length ſeeing ſuch a ſwarm of Sweethearts about her, he thought it but charity to undeceive ſo many poor Gulls, and without further ceremony to go to her Aunt, and to demand her Niece for his Wife. The She General who look'd upon herſelf to be a kind of a Queen at Batavia, look'd upon it as a high offence and indignity for a Tarpaulin Captain of a Ship to dare to make her ſuch a Propoſal, having already refus'd ſuch Matches, perſons that might come to be Privy Counſellors of all the Indies. Nevertheleſs within a day or two after the Captain renewed his Charge, but then in a Majeſtic Fury ſhe utterly forbid him the Fort. He taking little notice of her rage, goes to the General, and after ſome Diſcourſe makes the ſame Propoſal, and receives the ſame Anſwer. But then the Captain gave the Husband ſuch a Bone to pick, that he would not give the Wife; Sir, ſaid he, twice already have I demanded your Niece in Marriage, this is now the third time that I make the ſame demand; if you refuſe me, you ſhall ask me four times before I accept of her: and ſo ſaying briskly left him. The General reflecting upon the Captain's words, went to his Wife and told her the Story, who gueſſing at the effects of a long Voyage Familiarity, call'd Madam Niece into examination: She not being us'd to Diſſimulation confeſs'd the whole matter, and without any more to do was married to the Captain, to the great wonder of the whole City, till the birth of a Boy at the end of ſix moneths unfolded the Riddle. But this lying in was her ruin; for about five or ſix days after, the Mother and the Nurſe being ill, the chief Chirurgeon of the Fort order'd them to take a little Cremor Tartar; and to that purpoſe ſent a young man to the Maſter Chirurgeon of the Town, to ſend him two quantities of Cremor Tartar in two Papers. He being drinking with his Friends, ſends a young Barber newly come from Holland, to put up the two quantities according to direction. But the Barber miſtook the Glaſs, and put up Sublimate inſtead of Cremor Tartar. So the two Women taking their Doſes, diſſolved in two Silver Cups of fair Water, died in 24 hours after.

CHAP. IV.

Of General Vanderbroug, and of the Original of the City of Batavia

GEneral Vanderbroug was of Anverſe, and having ſtudied in the Jeſuits College, retained ſome tincture of Learning, which he endeavoured to improve as much as his buſineſs would give him leave. While he was General he caus'd the Alcoran to be tranſlated out of Arabic into Dutch. He was alſo a man of courage, and ſeveral times expos'd himſelf to great hazards for the Service of the Company, as you ſhall ſee by the following Relation.

After the Hollanders had taken ſeveral Prizes from the Portuguezes by Sea, they wanted a place of Retreat, where they might repair their endamaged Ships, and repoſe after the toils of the Sea. At firſt they caſt their eyes upon the Iſland of Java, in that place where the Engliſh had built a ſmall Convenience for their Trade. There is a Road in that part, where Veſſels ride ſecurely all the year, into which a River diſcharges it ſelf that will receive Shallops of good burthen, for above a thouſand Paces. The Water of this River is moſt excellent; for being carried never ſo far to Sea, it never ſtinks, nor engenders Worms; which can only be ſaid of the Thames and Ganges beſides.

The Hollanders therefore came and lay upon the point of a River, over againſt the place where the Engliſh had their ſmall Houſe. They had with them then the greateſt part of the Ships which they had in the Indies, laden with thoſe great Bales of Cloth which come from Bengale and the Coaſt of Surat, ſo big that a dozen men can hardly manage them. Theſe Bales they landed, and of them made a kind of Fortification, planting a good number of great Guns between them: For they never wanted great Guns ever ſince they traded alone to Japon, the onely Kingdom of the World abounding in Copper; from whence they brought prodigious quantities to Macao and Goa, where they caſt their Artillery.

Thus

Thus the Hollanders thought that by Sea no body could endamage their ſmall Fortification, made of Bales of cloth, which was defended by their Veſſels which they had in the Road: But by Land they were afraid that the King of the Iſland, viz. either of Materan or Bantam, might diſturb them. Obſerving therefore the Situation of the Iſland, which on that ſide was all covered with Woods, which reached on that ſide within a League of the Sea; and that where they ended, to the Shoar there was no other way but a Bank, which ſeparated the Marſh from the River: So that the Hollanders the better to ſecure themſelves againſt the two Kings, reſolved to raiſe a Tower upon the Bank. In this Tower they planted ſeveral Culverins and ſmall Pieces, cramm'd with artificial Wildfire, and every evening relieved their Guards. The King of Materan perceiving this, and believing that the Hollanders would not ſtop here, advanced a powerful Army to pull down the Tower. To which purpoſe he brought with him great Chains of Iron, and Cables made of the Coco Flax; believing that by the favour of the Night, having got his Chains and Ropes about the Tower, by the ſtrength of his Men and Elephants he might eaſily pull it down. But having fail'd in his Enterprize, and for that the Hollanders Artillery kill'd him abundance of Men, he retreated with his Army. But it was not long before he return'd again with a more powerful Force by Land, and alſo a great Fleet of ſmall Veſſels to aſſiſt him by Sea. With theſe Forces he gave a furious Onſet a ſecond time, which the Hollanders with no leſs vigour ſuſtained, and beat him off. But nothing diſcouraged with his loſs, he reſolved to give a third Onſet, onely he ſtaid ſome few days in expectation of more Forces.

In the mean while one of the moſt conſiderable Captains of his Army was accus'd to the King not to have done his Duty: though ſeaſonably advertiz'd that the King was reſolv'd to ſeize upon his perſon, and cut him to pieces. For you muſt know, that among the Javans when any perſon has merited Death, they tie the Offender all along upon a great piece of Timber, and the next Lord or great perſon that has a mind to try the goodneſs of his Scimitar, comes and cuts the Body into four pieces, the firſt ſtroak being made upon the Breſt, the ſecond upon the Pit of the Stomach, the third third upon the lower part of the Belly. The four pieces if they be Men, are burnt; if Women, thrown to the Dogs, which they keep for that purpose. For the Javans never burn any person.

This Javanese Lord therefore knowing what he was to trust to, made his escape to the Hollanders, and was kindly received by Vanderbrong. To ingratiate himself, he told the Dutch General all the King's Designs in reference to the carrying the place; where he would make his Onset, and what number of men he had. This however did not sufficiently chear up the General, who knew his own weakness. So that the Javanese perceiving him still pensive, I find (said he) that thou art afraid of the King's strength, and reason thou hast, but be rul'd by me: Thou art not ignorant that the Javanars are rigid Observers of the Law of Mahomet, and that if any Uncleanness from a Christian hand falls upon their Clothes, they fling them away, and spend six whole days in washing themselves, before they believe themselves clean. Hear then, said he; let all the Ordure and Dung of the People that are with thee be heaped in a place together, and made fluid in Pots for that purpose; and when they mount their Ladders, spare not for Showres of that Liquor, and I warrant ye they will retreat faster than they came on. Further continued he; I know that the points of their Arrows and Cric's are poison'd, and that this poison is so strong, that whoever are wounded therewith die suddenly, unless they have recourse to this onely Remedy; which is to preserve their own Excrement, and to dry it to powder; and when they find themselves wounded, to take a little of the powder, and drink it off in a small Beer-glass of Water. The General observing what the Javan Lord had said, when the Enemy mounted their Ladders, lustily besmear'd them with the Liquor, which he caus'd to be prepar'd against their coming; so that instead of gaining the tops of their Ladders, they made all the haste they could down again; but being hindred by those that follow'd them, they threw themselves headlong to the ground; by which means several of them were maimed, and several kill'd outright. Thus the Army disbanded in a moment, and the Emperour was the first that took his flight. Vanderbrong observing the disorderly Retreat of the Enemy, took a small Party with him, and purſu'd the flying Enemy, who being encloſed by thoſe in the Fort, that ſally'd out upon them, were miſerably cut in pieces. But the General having left the greateſt part of his men, and returning onely with a ſmall and very inconſiderable Company, the Javanners who had hid themſelves in the Merſhes for fear, reſum'd courage, and ſuddenly fell upon him in his return, and ſo encompaſs'd him on every ſide, that it was impoſſible for him to eſcape. However they defended themſelves ſtoutly for a while, but being wounded with the Arrows and Cric's of the Indians, and not being provided of the forementioned Antidote, they died immediately. The General was taken alive, not ſo much as wounded; for as he told me afterwards himſelf, he found they had no deſire to kill him. So ſoon as he was taken they carried him to the Emperour, who as ſoon as he ſaw him bid him not fear any thing, but told him withall, that it was his pleaſure, that he ſhould command his Men to quit the Fort and Tower, and be gone; otherwiſe that he would make both him, and all thoſe that ſhould fall into his Hands, perpetual Slaves. At the ſame time the Emperour with his principal Officers, and the General with a good Guard, came to the Foot of the Wall of the Tower, where the General in the Malay Language, laying before them his own misfortune, and the improbability of their holding out long, commanded them to quit the Fort, after they had embarqued whatever they ſaw fitting, but onely 6 Pieces of ſmall Canon, 200 Bullets, and 500 Quintals of Powder. The Emperour was overjoy'd to hear what the General ſaid, and thought himſelf ſure of the Fort and Tower. But then the General turning to the Emperour, told him, that none of his men underſtood Malay, and that therefore it would be convenient for him to repeat the ſame in Flemiſh. Which being granted, he ſpoke to the Souldiers in Flemiſh, and ordered them quite the contrary; that is to ſay, that they ſhould not be Traitors to their Countrey, but hold out the place till death, not minding what became of him; and to that end, that they ſhould bid the Infidels forthwith retire, or elſe they would immediately fire all their Guns upon them. The Emperour aſtoniſh'd at their Reſolution retreats, and carries the General with him. Being thus retir'd, the General made him believe that he would find a means means to write to the Company, to give them an account of what had pass'd, and that he was confident they would give such order for an Accommodation, as should satisfie His Majesty, which satisfi'd the Emperour for that time. In the mean while the General found an opportunity to get into a small Barque, and to get to the Fort, where he was joyfully receiv'd. This Recital I had from his own mouth.

The General having done this and several other eminent Services for the Company, and acquitted himself with Reputation and a fair Estate, was desirous to return home, where the Prince of Orange, and several of the States had no less a desire to see him. Streight he took up his Habitation at the Hague, and for a good while liv'd splendidly, gave great Presents and Entertainments to the Prince, and several other Grandees of Holland, by which means he ran himself into so great an Expence, that he was forc'd to desire of the Company, that he might return into their Service.

One day the Prince of Orange asking him what Rarities he had brought out of the Indies, he call'd for five Silver Plates, and setting them upon the Table, drew out five little Bags out of his Pocket, and emptied a several Bag upon a several Plate; which surpriz'd not onely the Prince, but several others of the States then present, to see such a number of Diamonds and other Jewels of a vast value.

It was not without some difficulty that he was again entertain'd by the Company; but at length they sent him Admiral of two Ships to Batavia, where being arriv'd, the General and Consuls made him Admiral of the Fleet that was just bound for the Coast of Coromandel, Surat, and Persia.

Being return'd to Batavia, General Vandyme and the Council sent him to Malaca, which the Hollanders then besieg'd, and where they found a stouter resistance than they imagin'd. There in an assault upon the Town he received a slight Wound, of which he was quickly cur'd; but soon after he fell sick, and died before the Town was surrendred.

CHAP. V.

Of the Country about Cochin, and how the Holland General crown'd one of the Indian Princes.

ALL the Countrey about Cochin is planted for the most part with that sort of Tree which they call Cocos, the Fruit whereof produces that sort of Wine which the Inhabitants call Tary, whereof they make their Strong Water. They mingle this Wine with course black Sugar unrefin'd, together with the Bark of a Tree which bears nothing but Thorns. This Bark causes the Tary and Sugar to boil and ferment like new Wine. When the Tary and the Sugar have fermented for above seven or eight hours, they distill them in an Alembic, and make Strong Water, which is stronger or smaller, by how much the more often or seldomer it is distill'd.

Besides the Coverture of these Trees the whole Country is full of Cows; for they are all Idolaters in this Country, that onely worship their Cows for their Gods, feed upon their Milk, and eat nothing that has Life.

When you leave the Countries of these Princes, which they call Rajas, travelling toward the North East you enter into the Territories of the Raja of Velouche, which are of a large extent. He and all his Subjects being Idolaters, unless it be about nine or ten thousand poor People call'd Christians of S. John, as being baptiz'd after the same manner that S. John baptiz'd the People in the Wilderness.

After the taking of Cochin, of which we have given a full Relation in our Indian Travels, General Vangous, who commanded at the Siege, became so haughty that he despis'd all the other Officers, as well Military as those that belonged to the Government and Justice of the City. However to recompence one of the Raja's by whose means he had taken the City, he persuaded him to quit the Name of Raja, and to assume the Title of King, that he might have the Honour to set the Crown upon his Head. To this end he made great inquiry through his whole Army for a Goldsmith,

ſmith, and having found out one that undertook it, and caus'd him to make a Crown of maſſie Gold, that weigh'd near ten Marks, which I believe the Raja found more inconvenient and weighty upon his Head, than an old Muckender with three corners bound about his Head, which is the mark of the Raja's Sovereignty.

While they were making this Crown there were great preparations for the Ceremony: It was performed in a Garden near the Town, where was ſet a large Tent ſpread all over with painted Calicut. Within was a Throne erected with a Canopy of China Damask, and all the Steps to the Throne were cover'd with Perſian Tapiſtry.

The day being come, the greateſt part of the Army, Officers and Souldiers, went to fetch the Raja, who lay in his Hut a quarter of a League off; where they mounted him upon one of two Elephants which the General ſent him, being attended likewiſe with two led Horſes, and two Palanquins for more State. Being come to the place, he was clad in a Scarlet Robe with great Hanging Sleeves, and ſo brought in where Vangous was ſitting upon his Throne, with a Sword and a Crown by him. The Raja being come to the Foot of the Throne, the Major of the Army took the Sword, deliver'd him by the General, and girt the Raja, who then aſcending the Steps of the Throne, proſtrated himſelf before the Holland General while he put the Crown upon his Head. Then the new King riſeth up, and lays his Hand upon the Head of a Cow that ſtood near the Throne. Which done, kneeling with his Hands claſp'd, and lifted toward the Head of the ſame Cow, he took his Oath to be true and faithful to the Company, and to embrace their Intereſts. On the other ſide the General promis'd him on the behalf of the Company, that they ſhould aſſiſt him when he ſhould have occaſion againſt his Enemies. Which Solemnities being very gravely perform'd the Muſquettiers gave three Volleys, and the new King was conducted back to his Hut with the ſame Pomp that he was brought. Thus you ſee the Pride of a Pepper Merchant, to make Kings and domineer over Crowns.

One other famous Act of Vangous muſt not be forgotten. You muſt know, that at the taking of Cochin the Jeſuits had in that City one of the faireſt Libraries in all Aſia, as well for the great quantity of Books ſent them out of Europe, as for ſeveral rare Manuſcripts in the Hebrew, Chaldee, Arabic, Perſian, Indian, Chineſe, and other Oriental Languages. For in all the Conqueſts of the Portugals, their firſt care was to ſummon all the Learned People of the ſeveral Nations, and to get all their Books into their hands. During that little time which the Jeſuits ſtaid in Æthiopia they had copied out all the good Books that came to their knowledge, and ſent all thoſe Books to Cochin. They had ſtaid longer in Æthiopia, had it not been for the Jealouſie of the Patriarchs, and their Biſhops, which are very numerous; ſo that if there be two men in one Village that belong to one Church, the chiefeſt calls himſelf Biſhop. At their Ceremonies of Baptiſm when they name the Holy Ghoſt, they apply a hot Iron to the neck of the Infant, ſaying that the Holy Ghoſt deſcended upon the Apoſtles in the ſhape of Fiery Tongues. The Patriarchs and Biſhops were jealous of the Jeſuits, finding that they had inſinuated themſelves into the favour of the King and Grandees of the Court. Which ſo enraged the Æthiopians, that they caus'd the People to mutiny, preaching that the King was about to alter the Religion of the Country, and to draw along with him ſeveral of the Lords. And the Fury of the People grew to that height, that whatever the King could do or ſay, he could not appeaſe their Fury: So that they put him in priſon, and elected his Brother in his place. The cauſe of this diſorder was laid upon the Jeſuits, and was the reaſon that they were expell'd the Kingdom; neither had they ſcap'd ſo, but that they were afraid of the Governour of Mozambique, and the Portugals that inhabit all along the Coaſt of Africa. But to tell ye what became of this Library, General Vangous made no conſcience to expoſe it to the ignorance of his Souldiers, ſo that I have ſeen the Souldiers and Seamen tear ſeveral of thoſe beautiful Volums to light their Tobacco.

Of the Sieur Hollebrand Glins, Preſident of the Factory at Ormus.

WHen the Ships come to Ormus, it is a great prejudice for the Goods to lie out of doors. For ſuch is the extremity of the Heat in that part, that if the Spices, eſpecially the Cloves, be not carried to the Water-ſide every foot, and there laid to ſteep in the Water for four and twenty hours, they would turn to a mere powder.

Sugar is brought thither in great Wooden Cheſts, but if there be the leaſt Cleft for a Fly or an Emmet to get in, in a ſmall time the Cheſt will be half emptied.

As for Camphire, which is brought from Borneo in Pipes, if it lie a little too long in that warm Air, it will exhale above half away.

To remedy theſe Inconveniences Sieur Hollebrand reſolved to build a bigger Warehouſe. Among the reſt of the Workmen that were imployed in this Building was a Gunſmith, who came in the interim in a Ship from Batavia. This poor Fellow was imployed to make Locks for the Warehouſe; for in thoſe Parts they have no other Keys, or Locks either, than what are made of Wood: So that it was a Crime for him to be found idle at any time. And therefore the Preſident finding him one Sunday in the Afternoon drinking with two of his Companions that came from the Ship to ſee him, gave the Fellow half a dozen good Licks with his Cane, and would have given him more, but that the Smith being a ſturdy Fellow, and feeling the Blows ſmart, wreſted the Stick out of the Preſident's Hands, and flung it out of the Window. For which the Preſident, upon pretence that the Fellow had ſtruck him four Blows, which was untrue, as I my ſelf being there could witneſs, ſent him laden with Chains to the Ship, where he would have tried him for his Life, in a full Court of the Merchants of the Factory: but they refuſing him, for very madneſs he took two Notaries, that he had a power over, went to the Ship alone, made the Officers of the Ship, and condemn'd the Fellow to be hang'd. And he had certainly been executed but for me and ſome other of my Countrymen, (for the Fellow was of Geneva) that threatned the Preſident out of his deſign. Yet he caus'd him to be drubb'd Naked at the Main Maſt after that inhuman manner, that he loſt the uſe of one of his Arms. This the Geneveſe could never forget, and therefore ſought all opportunities to kill him; to which purpoſe he put himſelf in the ſame Ship with Hollebrand when he returned for Holland. But coming to the Cape of Good Hope, and being ſent aſhoar in the Shallop for Proviſions, the Shallop was overſet in a ſtormy Sea, and Hollebrand's Life thereby ſecur'd.

But before we leave Ormus, where Hollebrand was building his Warehouſe that caus'd all this miſchief, let us take notice of this by the way, that there is no abiding at Ormus till April, leſt you pay for your ſtay with ſome Malignant Fever, that may hold a man as long as he lives; or if he be cur'd by chance, yet will the White of his Eyes be more yellow than Saffron. This ſame ſort of Fever ſeizes our Europeans in the Port of Alexandretta in Syria, and in the Iſlands where the Hollanders lade their Cloves, Nutmegs, and Mace.

By the way obſerve, that there is a particular ſort of Nutmeg which the Hollanders call Maneque, and we the Male Nutmeg, as long again and a little bigger than the ordinary Nutmeg; and this ſort they never carry into Europe, becauſe they ſell it to better profit in Perſia and the Indies. This I ſhall alſo further add, that the ordinary Nutmeg condited, fuddles more than the ſtrongeſt Wine, eating but onely one either at the beginning or ending of the Meal.

CHAP. VII.

Touching the Islands of the Prince.

THE Fort of Batavia has four fair Bastions, and is well built but upon an ill Foundation, those Bastions being plainly observ'd to sink, and requiring Reparation from time to time. For the perfecting of which Work the Hollanders wanted Slaves: whereupon a Consultation was had where to get Slaves. To which Answer was made, that there was no better place than the Prince's Islands. Which being concluded, the General of Batavia dispatch'd away three the biggest Ships belonging to Batavia. These Ships visited every one of these Islands, feigning that they came from Holland and wanted Refreshment. So soon as the Inhabitants discover'd the Vessels, they flock'd to the Shoar Men, Women, and Children, as they wont to do, bringing along with them the best of their Provision, as Coco Wine, Nuts, and other Fruits of the growth of the Islands. Happy were they that could first get aboard, for they always get more by the Mariners and Souldiers, than by those that go ashoar to trade. Now so soon as they were ashoar, they gave them Strong Water to drink till they were drunk; and when the Masters of the Ships saw them in that condition, they immediately sent a good number of their men well armed ashoar, who bound them that were upon the Sand to truck for their goods, and carried them away to their Ships, killing all those that made any resistance. But they did them little service; for finding themselves so inhumanly us'd as the Hollanders use their Slaves, they took a resolution to eat nothing, and to starve themselves to death, rather than to be forc'd to labour and be beaten every day.

CHAP. VIII.

How the Hollanders ſent to declare War againſt the Perſians, and of the ill Succeſs of their Fleet.

MUch about the ſame time Charles Conſtant was ſent by the Company with a Fleet of ſeven great Ships, to declare War againſt the Perſians, in caſe they would not comply with the Dutch in reference to their Silk Trade and their Cuſtoms. Being arriv'd at Ormus he left the Fleet there, and haſten'd to Iſpahan, and from thence to Casbin, where then the King was. But his Embaſſie had not that effect as he expected: For he thought that the King would have been frighted at the noiſe of a Fleet of ſeven great Ships that lay at Ormus, but he was miſtaken. For the Perſian knew he need not ſend any Force againſt the ſaid Fleet, in regard it would be ruin'd without: It being impoſſible for our Europeans to ſtay at Ormus in the heat of Somer, as well by reaſon of the Heat, as for want of Water; for there is no good Water at Ormus, nor upon any part of the Coaſt of Perſia, but what is kept in Ciſterns, and that full of Worms. 'Tis true, that upon the Coaſt of Arabia there are Wells of good Water, but when the Arabians diſcover any Ships upon the Coaſt, they come down all in Arms to defend their Wells; for it is their profit to ſell their Water, and that at a very dear rate, to thoſe that are in neceſſity.

Now the King and Council not being ignorant, that the longer the Fleet lay at Ormus, the worſe would be its condition, would not give the Commander his firſt Audience in two moneths. During which time there died above half the Men; for from ſix a clock in the morning till four in the afternoon, if any of the Seamen went to take a little Air upon the Deck, he preſently fell down dead. The Admiral was to blame not to make proviſion of Water being bound for ſuch a place as Ormus.

The Commander Conſtant did not take the right courſe to effect his buſineſs, by publiſhing what he intended to preſent ſent the Miniſters of State withall. For the Lords of Perſia never take any Preſents themſelves, for fear it ſhould come to the King's Ear. But there is a private Bill ſent to the Party for whom it is intended, and he ſends whom he thinks fit to receive it. Had he ſo done, and doubled his Sum of 5000 Venetian Ducats, perhaps the Athemadoulet might have us'd him more kindly, eſpecially for ſo long time as that King had. For whatever a Predeceſſor does, a Succeſſor changes many things. So that if the deceaſed King have given any Houſe or Land to any perſon, it muſt be confirmed by the ſucceeding King in his firſt Year, or elſe the Gift returns to the King. It is the ſame thing if any perſon builds a Houſe upon the King's Demeſns: which has been a great inconvenience to the Auſtin Friers and bare-foot Carmelites, becauſe their Houſes are built upon the Land; which Cha Abbas gave them of the Royal Demeſns. So that every time a new King aſcends the Throne, they are forc'd to make the Athemadoulet new Preſents, ſometimes to the Value of the Land: for it is a rare thing to find a prime Miniſter that is a Friend to the Chriſtians. But the Jeſuits and Capuchins, who came after them, provided better for themſelves, each of thoſe Orders having bought the Ground upon which their Houſes are built.

The Commander ſeeing that he could not compaſs his Deſign, and that the Athemadoulet would abate nothing of the forty four Tomans which he demanded, went to the Divanbegai and told him, that buying the ſame Goods of particular perſons, they might be had for thirty two, or at moſt for thirty three Tomans. To which the Divanbegai anſwered him, That all thoſe particular perſons paid the King Cuſtom, and Convoy upon the Road, the Cuſtom alone amounting to Eighteen per cent. which the Hollanders did not pay: and that there was not a Year wherein they did not bring in Goods to the Value of 30000 Tomans; and that if account ſhould be taken of the Silks which they carried away, and of the Goods which they brought in, the Athemadoulet ought to make them pay near 50000 Tomans for Duties. The Commander ill ſatisfied with this Anſwer went to his Lodging, and without asking the Advice of the Merchants that were with him, or of his Frenchman, who better underſtood the Practice of the Court, or without taking his leave of the King, return'd privately to Iſpahan, intending for Bander where the Fleet lay. The Athemadoulet being advertiz'd of his ſudden departure, was very much offended; ſo much the more becauſe at the Commanders firſt Arrival he had done him great Civilities, even to the furniſhing his Lodgings after the European manner, with a Bed, Stools, and Tables. Thereupon he gave notice thereof to the King, who when he heard of it utter'd theſe words, Has any one given him any diſtaſte, or is he turn'd Fool? He ſhall be glad to come back again.

Being come to Iſpahan, to the great wonder of the Franks, who heard nothing of his taking leave of the King, he began to make up his Pack, intending for Gomrom, in caſe the King did not ſend for him again; which he did, 'tis true, but not with thoſe Compliments which he expected; for he flatter'd himſelf that the King would have petition'd him to return. The King ſent for him indeed, but his Compliment was not very pleaſing; for the perſon that brought the Meſſage told him, That it was the King's pleaſure he ſhould ſpeedily return, and if he would not go willingly he had order to carry him by force. But notwithſtanding the King's Command and the Counſel of his Friends, he ſet out from Iſpahan for Bander, according to his firſt intent. We accompanied him ſome part of his way, and being juſt ready to take our leaves, we ſaw a Perſian Gentile and well mounted, (he was a Captain of an hundred men) who calling the Interpreter to him, Go (ſaid he) and tell thy Preſident, that he muſt return to his Lodging, and to morrow make haſte to the King, according to the Order he has already received: and with that he rode away full ſpeed. The Interpreter told the Commander what the Captain ſaid; but notwithſtanding all this the Commander being a perſon of a hot and obſtinate humour, continued his way. Neither the Merchants of Zulpha, nor any of the Perſian or Armenian Servants would follow him, fearing the Baſtinado, and believing he was ſecure enough; as it happen'd: for he had not rode far, before three Captains with their Bows and Arrows in their hands bolted out upon him, one of which riding up directly to the Commander, Art thou (ſaid he) the onely perſon that ever ſet foot in this Empire, that refuſeſt to obey the Companion of the Sun, whom ſo great a part of the World obeys? At the ſame time came up fifty ſtout Horſemen, and one of them who cammanded them made at Mr. Conſtant with his Mace. Then the Admiral was forc'd to lower his Sails and return back, forc'd to receive an Affront which he might have avoided When he was come to his Lodging, the Perſian Officer without alighting call'd the Interpreter, and bid him go forwarn the Commander in the Name of the King, that neither he nor any of the Hollanders preſumed to ſtir out of their Houſes till further order; for that if any of them were ſeen abroad, they ſhould be taught to obey the King's Commands. Thus the Hollanders having been coop'd up nine days, word was brought the Commander he might return to Cusbin, where he found that all his Rodomontado's ſignified nothing, but that he muſt comply with the Athemadoulet.

CHAP. IX.

Of the Severity of the Holland Commanders in the Indies.

GEneral Speck, before he came to his Imployment, had a Daughter by a Woman which he kept onely as his Miſtreſs, not as his Wife. After his time was out he returned into Holland, and not being willing to carry his Daughter along with him, knowing that ſhe would go off better at Batavia than in Holland, left her to the care of General Com, who ſucceeded him in his charge. The Girl was fair and left rich, ſo that her Father was no ſooner gone, but ſhe had many Suitors that courted her, without any conſideration of her Birth, among all which there was none that ſhe fancied, like one that was a Superior Merchant of the Fort, for whom ſhe had a particular eſteem. Neither did ſhe believe but that General Com would have given his conſent upon the firſt requeſt, knowing the young man to be of a good Family. Nevertheleſs they were both deceiv'd; for being ask'd, he utterly denied to yield to any ſuch matter. However, the young Man and the Maid continued their Fidelity to each other, and that with ſuch a cloſe reſpect, that at length the Virgin's Belly began to ſwell. Whereupon ſhe made one of the Ladies of the City acquainted how the caſe ſtood, as alſo of her Council, believing that the General upon notice how Affairs went, would marry her to keep all things private. But ſo ſoon as the Lady had revealed the Myſtery, he was ſo far from anſwering their expectation, that he threw the young Man laden with Fetters into priſon, and ſhut up the young Woman cloſe Priſoner in her Chamber. Next day he call'd a Council, declar'd to them the Matter of Fact, and gave his Opinion, that the young man deſerv'd to loſe his Head, and that the Maid ſhould be whipp'd. The Council were of a contrary Judgment, and advis'd him to reconcile the Miſchance by a Marriage. But notwithſtanding all their perſuaſions the General reſolv'd to have his own humour, the next day privately ſent for the Executioner, and cauſing the young Man and the Maid to be brought into his Hall, commanded the Man's Head to be forthwith ſtruck off, and the Virgin to be whipp'd though big with Child.

The Sieur Goyre commanded the Holland Fleet that was ſent to the Manilles, he landed all his Souldiers, and moſt of his Mariners. When they began to march, he commanded that not a man ſhould ſtir out of his Rank upon pain of death. It happen'd that a young Souldier, who was troubled with the Bloudy Flux, ſtept a little aſide to eaſe Nature, which the ſaid Commander perceiving, caus'd him to be apprehended and bound, and calling a Council of War would have had him hang'd; and when the Officers refus'd to give Sentence againſt one that had committed no offence, he cauſed ſeven or eight Blacks of the Low Countries to hang him up upon a Tree. But the Sieur Dirk Hogel, Lieutenant General, marching by in the nick of time, and ſeeing the poor Fellow in that condition, preſently order'd him to be cut down, and ſo ſav'd the poor Fellow's Life; who returning into Holland, and making his Complaint to the Company, the Directors wrote ſmartly to the General and Council at Batavia about the buſineſs; who upon Examination of the matter, in regard the Lad was ſent by the Directors of the Orphans Houſe at Amſterdam, condemned the Sieur Goyre to pay four thouſand Crowns to the Orphans Houſe, and three hundred Crowns yearly to the poor Souldier.

CHAP. X.

Touching the Women.

OFttimes when Women think that their Amours are moſt ſecret, they are by ſome ſtrange and unexpected accident odly diſcover'd. While I was at Batavia, the Secretary of the Hoſpital, as handſom a perſon as any was in the City, had a Wife that paſs'd for a Batavian Beauty, neither indeed was ſhe deſpicable. This Couple had been ſeven years married without any Children; ſo that the Woman deſpairing of her Husband's Abilities, and to know where the fault lay, reſolved to beſtow her Favours upon one of her Slaves, who was well ſhap'd but very black; chuſing rather a private Familiarity with him, than with any young Hollander, whoſe frequent Viſits might breed ſuſpicion. It ſeems the fault did not lie in her, for her Sable Gallant had ſo improv'd his Talent, that in a ſhort time ſhe found the effects of Change. In ſhort, the Womans Belly ſwell'd, and her Husband thinking his time had been come, began to boaſt of his Manhood, and great Joy there was among the Friends of the Woman upon the hopes of Iſſue. Great Proviſions were made againſt the Lying in, and the General himſelf made choice of for Godfather. But when the good hour was come, and the Woman delivered, their Joy was turned into Mourning, for the Child prov'd one of the ſooty Of-ſpring of the Sun-burnt race, a perfect Black. The Husband and Mother of the Woman bluſh'd as red for ſhame as the Child was black, and the Goſſips hung down their heads like Bulruſhes: nay the Husband was ſo tranſported with fury, that he could not hide his reſolution to murder his Wife, for bringing ſuch a piece of live Charcole into the world. But he was prevented, and ſecur'd in the Fort by the General, till by the intermiſſion of Friends, who wiſely laid before him the original cauſe of his Wifes

Tranſ-

Transgreſſion, they were at length made Friends, and the Slave for having ſhew'd himſelf a Man, was condemn'd to tug at the Oars in the Galleys that go to fetch Stone for the uſe of the City.

Now as a White Woman may bring forth a Black, ſo ſometimes a Black may be deliver'd of a White Child. For at Baçaim a Cafer's Wife, as black as himſelf, was deliver'd of a white Child. The Cafer ſeeing his Child white, would have immediately fallen upon his Wife and ſtrangled her, had not the good women that aſſiſted at her Labour prevented him, and one of thoſe Goſſips was ſo cunning as to run to the Jeſuits Houſe, who are well reſpected by thoſe Blacks, to deſire Father Thomas de Bare, who had a long time been Rector at Agra, to come to the Cafer's Houſe. Preſently the Father came with another of the Fraternity, and finding the Cafer ſtamping and ſtaring almoſt out of his wits, and in open hoſtility without all reaſon, to appeaſe his fury ask'd him whether he kept any Hens, and whether he had any that were black. The Cafer anſwer'd that he did keep Hens, and that he had likewiſe black Hens. Preſently the Father order'd one to be brought him; and then holding it in both his hands before the good Women, Does this Hen (ſaid he to the Cafer) lay thee any Eggs? Yes, replied the Cafer. Of what colour are they, ſaid the Father? White, anſwer'd the Cafer. Well then, ſaid the Father, thou art worſe than thy ſilly Creature, and haſt far leſs reaſon; for if this Hen which is black lay thee white Eggs, why may not thy Wife which is black bring thee a white Child? This Compariſon ſo wrought upon the Cafer, who was no Diſputant, that he embrac'd his Wife, kiſs'd his Child, and all was well again. Though for all the Jeſuit's Compariſon it was believ'd that ſome Portugal Souldier had quarter'd with his Wife, which was the reaſon of that more than uſual Production.

To conclude, there was a certain woman, the wife of one of the Counſellors of Batavia, who had both kindneſs and affection for a Merchant of the Fort, who was both young and handſom. And it is the Cuſtom in that Countrey to be not onely kind but free, ſhe had for ſeveral years ſo well ſupplied his wants, that he was Company for the beſt. It happen'd that this Counſellor was ſent abroad upon on ſome Negotiation, and ſtaid longer than he thought he ſhould have done. For this reaſon Money grew ſhort with the Lady; ſo that her Gallant coming for a Supply, and ſhe not having ready money to anſwer his Expectations, ſhe gave him a Gold Chain worth 400 Crowns to pawn for his preſent Neceſſities till ſhe could redeem it. But this Fatal Chain was the diſſolution of all their former Love: For the young Gentleman being ſtreighten'd for Money, and finding no perſon that would lend him ſo much Money as he wanted upon it, very fairly goes and offers it to a Goldſmith to ſell. While this unfortunate Lover was driving his Bargain in the Shop, who in the name of ill luck ſhould come by but one of his Miſtreſſes Slaves, and ſpying the Chain in his hand, runs and tells her Patroneſs how ſhe had ſeen her Gallant imploy'd. Who ſurpriz'd that her Gallant ſhould go about to ſell the Chain, when he had onely promis'd to pawn it in private and ſure hands; now (quoth ſhe) all will out, there will be the Devil upon Dun when my Husband comes home; and I forſooth that have liv'd credibly thus long, muſt be the ſport of my Neighbours and the talk of the Town. This produc'd a Duel between Love and Intereſt, wherein Intereſt getting the victory, away ſhe immediately ſends to all the Goldſmiths, to give them notice that ſhe had been robb'd of a Gold Chain, deſiring them to apprehend the Party that brought it. She alſo gave the ſame notice to the chief of the Chineſes, and deſir'd the Advocate Fiſcal to make a public Search. Well, by theſe means the Chain was quickly found, and the Merchant whatever he could ſay for himſelf was apprehended and put in priſon; ſoon after he was condemned for a Thief, and ſentenced to row all his life in the Stone Galley, which is the Galley that fetches Stones for the uſe of Batavia. But happy for him, General Vanderlin's Lady falling into a hard Labour before the time of Execution, and deſiring his Pardon at ſuch a ſolemn Juncture, eaſily obtain'd it, ſeaſonably recovering him from the Misfortunes of Folly and Neceſſity.

A RELATION OF JAPON,

AND

Of the Cauſe of the Perſecution of the Chriſtians in thoſe ISLANDS.

THE Modern Geographers have made Deſcriptions of Japon, by means of ſuch conjectures as they have drawn from the Relations of certain Merchants who have traded in thoſe Countries. But in regard there are very few Merchants who are skilful in Geography, as being ſuch who only mind the profit and advantage of their Voyages, thoſe Deſcriptions have prov'd very uncertain. As to the knowledge of the Ancients, in reference to this part of the World, it is no leſs imperfect; and it is but only by conjecture to this day, that we believe the Abadii of Ptolomy to be that Iſland which is now call'd Niphon. That which I could learn of moſt certainty, was by the Relation of ſeveral perſons who have Travell'd theſe parts, that the Empire of Japon is at preſent compos'd of ſeveral Iſlands, of which ſome perhaps may not be abſolute Iſlands, but rather Peninſula's, and particularly thoſe that make a part of the Land of Yesso, the Inhabitants whereof are Vassals and Tributaries to Japon. Nevertheless a Holland Pilot, who has been industrious to discover whether the whole Country it self were an Island, or a Continent adjoyning to that vast Tract of Land call'd Corea, unknown to this day, in those parts where it extends it self behind China to the bottom of Tartarie Nuelhan, saith, that it is separated from Japon by a narrow Sea, which at this day is call'd The Streights of Sanguar. Through all the Islands of Japon, where formerly were accompted to have been 66 Kingdoms, there are three remarkable for their largeness, of which that of largest extent is called Niphon, the next Ximo, and the third Xicock. The Japonners accompt it a Journey of twenty seven days from the Province of Quanto, to the Country of Yesso; and they say further, that this Country of Yesso, in those parts which are remote from the Sea, is so full of inaccessible Mountains, that those Japonners who have attempted a discovery by Land, could never accomplish their design, being discourag'd by the length of the Journey, and the difficulties and badness of the ways.

The Island of Niphon is four times as big as the other two; and there is also a Mountain therein that vomits up Flames of Fire, like Mount Etna in Sicily; formerly it was distinguish'd into thirty five Kingdoms, but at this day it is only divided into five parts, the names whereof are Jamasoit, Jetsen, Jetsesen, Quanto, and Ochio, lying all in order as you travel from West to East. These five parts are again divided into several Provinces. The Island of Ximo, or Saycock, is situated to the South-West of Niphon, being about 160 Leagues in circuit. The Island of Xicock is seated by the South of Niphon, being about 120 Leagues in compass. The other Islands that lye round about are not so considerable, for in those Seas lye several Islands scatter'd up and down, as in the Archipelago, between the Morea and the Coasts of Asia the less. As to the rest, I refer the Reader to the Map annexed, believing it to be very true, as having been made upon the places themselves.

The Emperour at present keeps his Court in the City of Yeddo, in regard the Air is there more temperate, and the Heats not so violent; but when he has a Son that is arriv'd to the Age of fifteen years, he sends him to Surunga, there to reside, till the death of his Father makes him way to the Throne.

Since Yeddo has been made choice of for the Seat of the Empire, it has so greatly enlarg'd it self from day to day, that it is at present three Leagues in length, and three in breadth, very populous, and the Houses standing very close together. When the Emperour rides through the City, or that there is any publick shew to be seen, it is impossible to get by the crowd of the people, though the Women are not permitted to be of the number. The Emperours Palace is cover'd with Plates of Gold, to which the Palaces of the Lords are every way correspondent in Magnificence; so that afar off the City affords the richest and most magnificent Prospect that was ever beheld: Though it be not so beautiful within, by reason that the ordinary Houses are built only of Wood. The Great Dairy keeps his residence at Meaco, which is also a very large City, containing above a hundred thousand Houses; it was formerly the capital Seat of the Empire, at what time the Dairy's were laid aside. So soon as he is Crown'd by the Bonzes, who are the Priests and Lawyers, he is then no more to expose himself to the light of the Moon, nor to ſhave his Head, or cut his Nails. The Natives report, that the Empire of Japon was formerly govern'd by a Prince call'd Dairy, who had acquir'd ſo high a reputation for Holineſs, that his Subjects ador'd him as a God, and that to increaſe the awe and reverence of the people, he ſuffer'd his Hair and Nails to grow, affirming, that it it was a piece of Sacriledge to make uſe either of Razor or Sizzars. The Princes that ſucceeded him, though they had only the name of Kings, have ſtill preſerv'd the ſame cuſtom, believing that it becomes not their Grandeur to appear in view of the Moon, as being Sons of the Sun. If he have a Daughter that is ripe for Marriage, the Emperour is oblig'd to Marry her, and ſhe it is that bears the Title of Empreſs, though ſhe ſhould happen to have no Children, which is contrary to the Maxims of all the Eaſtern Monarchs, who give the Title of Queen and Sultaneſs only to her, among all the reſt of their Wives, that is firſt brought to Bed of a Male Succeſſor to the Crown.

At the end of every ſeven years, the Emperour ſends one of the chief Princes of his Court to the Dairy with a Basket full of Earth, and to tell him, that all the Lands which the Emperour commands, are at the Dairy's Devotion; and indeed the Empire belongs to him by right of Succeſſion, though at preſent he enjoys only the Title, and very large Revenues, which render him highly conſiderable in the Empire.

The Japonners are Idolaters, and adore the Sun; but though they have a great number of Temples and different Idols, yet they are not over obſtinate in their Devotion, only the Emperour is very ſevere againſt all other Religions. They never ſtir out of their Native Country to travel, unleſs it be to China, and the Land of Yeſſo; and within theſe few years the Emperour has prohibited his people under extream penalties, from having any Commerce with Foreigners, the Chineſes and Hollanders excepted. He had receiv'd Ambaſſadours at ſeveral times from ſeveral Princes, but never ſent any of his own to them again. Nevertheleſs it is affirm'd, that ſeveral Lords of theſe Iſlands newly converted to the Faith, in the year 1585, ſent their Children to Rome, to render their acknowledgments to Gregory the Thirteenth; and that being return'd back in the year 1587, to Goa, they were afterwards receiv'd, and welcom'd again into their own Country with great marks of joy. The little inclination which they have to Navigation and Traffick, proceeds in part from the great abundance of all things neceſſary for Human ſupport, which their own Country produces; and then in the next place from the jealouſies of the Emperour, who is afraid of the alterations which new Religions may make in his Government; for they are very fickle, and eaſily ſeduc'd after Novelties, which has been the occaſion of many Revolts, and Civil Wars, till Quabacondon wreſted the Empire out of the hands of the Dairy, and reunited all the Provinces. They are ſo fiery and revengeful, that upon the leaſt affront given them, if they cannot have an opportunity of a preſent revenge, they will rip up their own Bellies, and kill themſelves. I was told a Story to confirm this. Two young Lords that ſerv'd the Emperour met in the Palace, and joſtl'd one the other by accident; the moſt furious of the two was immediately for drawing his Sword. The other told him, the place was not convenient, that he was going to wait; but that if he would ſtay for him in ſuch a place, he would give him ſatisfaction. Accordingly the party that thought himſelf affronted went and ſtay'd, but his impatience was such, that after he had stay'd awhile, not finding the other to come, he ripp'd up his own Bowels for very vexation. Upon which the people crowding about him, ask'd him the reason of his killing himself; to which they could draw no other answer but this, A cowardly Raskal has affronted me. By and by the other comes, makes way through the throng, and surpriz'd with what he beheld; Poor Creature, said he, thou need'st not have doubted my being as good as my word, this Dagger shall assure thee of it: And so saying, he kill'd himself upon the place, and fell by the others side.

There is no Nation under Heaven that fears Death less than this, or that is more enclin'd to cruelty. If any Prince or great Lord makes a Feast for his Friends, at the end of the Feast he calls his principal Officers, and asks 'em, if there be any that has so much love for him as to kill himself before the Guests for his sake. Presently there arises a dispute among them who shall have the Honour; and who ever the Prince is pleas'd to name, rips up his Belly with a Cric, which is a kind of Dagger, the poynt whereof is Poyson'd. This custom is also practis'd upon the Death of their Masters, or when they lay the Foundations of any Palace; for they are so superstitious as to believe, that these Victims are necessary to render both the Owners of the Building, and the Habitation fortunate.

They punish all manner of Theft with Death. 'Tis also a capital Crime among them to play for Money. Adultery is only punish'd in the Women: But Coynage of false Money, setting Houses on Fire, Deflowring and Ravishing of Virgins, are not only punish'd in the persons of the Criminals, but also of those who are next of kin to them. The Women live retir'd, and are very faithful to their Husbands. The Emperour having put to Death one of the Lords of his Court, out of hopes to enjoy his Wife; she fearing violence, besought the Emperour to give her time to consider, which was granted for some few days. At the end whereof she shut her self up in a Room with her Children, and after she had delivered a Paper to one of her Servants to carry to the Emperour, she set the Chamber a Fire, and burnt both her self and her Children. The Emperour met with nothing else in the Paper but reproaches of his Tyranny, and attestations of joy from the Lady, that she had the opportunity to Sacrifice her self to the memory of her Husband. Several other stories I have heard, which make me believe, that this Nation is not uncapable of doing actions worthy a Roman Vertue.

The Portugals were the first people of Europe that discover'd the Islands of Japon. They were thrown upon the Coast by a violent Storm, in the year 1542, and understanding that there was great store of Gold and Silver in the Country, they return'd with a resolution to settle themselves. The first place where they thought to fix was neer Surunga, a City which stands about four Leagues from the Sea: But because there is but one Road, and that not very secure neither for Shipping, they remain'd there not above five years. At length they took possession of a little forsaken Island call'd Kisma, which they peopl'd afterward's; but since the last Persecution of the Christians, the Portugals were forc'd to abandon it, having no more Commerce with the Japonners. How the Hollanders came to erect their Factories there, I shall tell the Reader in another part of this Relation.

Seven

Seven years after the first coming of the Portugals to Japon, St. Francis Xavier made a Voyage thither to Preach the Gospel. The first place where he Landed was the Island of Niphon, where he stay'd two years and some Months, and travel'd several parts of these Islands; but his principal design being to go to China, he took shipping accordingly. The Vessel was no sooner out at Sea, but St. Francis fell sick, so that the Captain put him ashore again in the Island of Sechen, by others call'd Hayman, belonging to China, where in a few days after he dy'd, and never was in China, as some have reported and believ'd.

After his death the Christian Religion spread it self very much in China, the people being very docible, and apprehensive of the instructions which were given them; but the behaviour of the Portugals displeasing the Principal Governours, and those who had most Power at Court, they did them ill Offices to the Emperour, and the Bonzes misliking the new Religion, and jealous of the effects thereof, were the fomenters of continual persecutions against the new Converts, pretending they favour'd the designs of the Portugueses.

Nevertheless the Christian Religion daily got footing, and perhaps the whole Nation would have embrac'd it, if the covetousness and wickedness of the Christians themselves had not been the chief impediment of their conversion. The Hollanders did all they could to lay the fault upon the Portugals, but the truth will easily appear by the Letter written to one Leonard Campen, a Hollander, wherein it is said, that when the Hollanders were ask'd by the Natives what Religion they were of, they made this answer, We are no Christians, we are Hollanders. I do not go about to blemish a whole Nation for the fault of a few, but only to shew what a dangerous thing it is, to make an ill choice of Officers upon the setling of a new Commerce in Regions so remote.

The Holland East-India Company having set out a Vessel for Batavia, put aboard about a dozen young Boys, and as many Girls, taken out of the Hospitals in the Country. Among these Boys there was one who was design'd to serve in the Kitchin, but Fortune made him an Instrument of one of the greatest Misfortunes that ever befell our Age. During the Voyage, the Merchant having observ'd him to be a Boy of a ready wit, and for that reason believing that he might one day prove serviceable to the Holland Company, caus'd him to be taught to write and read; wherein he improv'd so well in a short time, that being come to Batavia, he was thought capable of a higher Employment. The Vessel being arriv'd, the General and his Council resolv'd to send the same Vessel to Japon, with some part of the Lading which was brought from Europe. Thereupon the Merchant was commanded upon this Voyage, and the under Accomptant happening in the mean time to dye, this Boy was by him advanc'd to the place, and by the Merchant carefully instructed in the knowledge of the East-India Trade.

The Vessel being arriv'd at Firando, the new under Accomptant believing no place more proper for him then that to raise his fortune, resolv'd to leave his Benefactor, and therefore when the Ship was to return, he hid himself out of the way, till he knew the Ship to be far enough onward on her Voyage, and by that means becoming a Member of the Factory, he grew so perfect in the Language of the Natives, and so useful to the Company, that at length he came to be President of the Factory; the Authority of which Employment so puff'd him up, up, that he was not only for continuing and upholding the Commerce of his own, but excluding all other Nations. Now, as I have already obſerv'd, the Portugals were the firſt Traders, and the firſt that propagated the Chriſtian Religion in thoſe parts; therefore it was that the Chriſtian Japonners would not Trade with any but the Portugals, as having known them longer, and finding them more true to their words. This the Preſident obſerv'd, and made it his buſineſs to render them obnoxious at Court, and by vertue of his Preſents, engag'd the Governours of Provinces, and other great Lords, to favour his deſign.

However, the Portugals wanted neither friends nor confederates. And though they were not in a condition to be ſo liberal as the Preſident, yet they made ſhift to defend themſelves, and render his under-hand Dealings ineffectual. Thereupon finding that thoſe Tricks would not take, he had recourſe to the fouleſt of Calumnies; for he counterfeited a Letter written in the Portugueſe Language, containing a diſcovery of a deſign of the Chriſtian Japonners to have made a general Inſurrection, and a particular Conſpiracy againſt the perſon of the Emperour. This Letter he carry'd to a Lord of the Country, into whoſe favour and confidence he had wrought himſelf, who preſently thought it to be his duty to give intelligence of ſo important a deſign to the Court.

The Preſident inform'd him by what accident the Letter came to his hands, and gave an account of ſuch circumſtances, as made his Impoſture look with a probable countenance, relating, how that the Hollanders had taken a Portugal Veſſel returning from Japon to Goa, and that the Holland Captain having taken this Letter among other Papers, open'd it, and perceiving of what conſequence it was, had ſent an Expreſs to the Preſident to proceed as his prudence, and the affection of the Dutch Company toward the Emperour ſhould guide him. That the Portugals, who were but Subjects to the Spaniards, had a pernicious Maxim, not to ſuffer any Religon but their own in any place where they had to do, and that for their own ends they never ſpar'd either the Life or Liberty of Man; that they thought it an acceptable Sacrifice to God, to cut the Throats of thoſe whom they could not convert. And laſtly, that the Hollanders were a people that accorded with all Nations and Religions, and minded nothing but their Trade.

The Lord believ'd all theſe fraudulent Calumnies, and ſent a Copy of the Letter to the Emperour, the ſubſtance whereof was, That the Spaniards in the Philippine Iſlands, and the Portugals in Japon, being in confederacy with the Chriſtians of the Country, had ſent to the Governour of Goa to ſend by a time prefix'd eight or ten Veſſels, with Men and Arms, but eſpecially a good number of Officers to command the Revolters, for that then there would be a numerous Army ready, and that they ſhould eaſily make themſelves Maſters of Japon.

The Portugals were then under the Dominion of the Spaniard, and though they would ſuffer no Spaniard in their Indian Acquiſitions but the Viceroy, yet ſeveral of the Religious Orders did ſlip into Japon, carried thither by a true and real zeal; yet this zeal, when once indiſcreet, does as much miſchief as covetouſneſs it ſelf. The Father Pauliſts, for ſo they call the Jeſuits in the Indies, by reaſon that their Church in Goa is dedicated to St. Paul; theſe Jeſuits I ſay, had made a fair progreſs, and gain'd great credit among the people, notwithſtanding their their continual perſecutions, according as the Lords of the Country were well or ill affected towards them. Their number therefore encreas'd, and the new Converts had this advantage, that they enrich'd themſelves by Trading with the Portugals, who had made a poſitive Agreement not to Trade with the Bonzes. This provok'd the Bonzes againſt them, and the multitude of the Chriſtians ſo far augmented the Emperour's jealouſies and fears, that in a ſhort time they produc'd the effects of open rage and cruelty.

The Jeſuits had converted to the Faith a great Lord of the Kingdom, who liv'd moſt commonly at Bugen, in the Iſland of Xima, a perſon of great Intereſt and Power in the Iſland. He had four Sons, two of which liv'd with him, and following his Example, had embrac'd the Catholick Faith. The Father was Baptiz'd by the name of Ignatius; the eldeſt of the two was call'd Francis, and the youngeſt Charles: the two eldeſt Sons were at Court in great favour with the Emperour. The younger of the two that had embrac'd the Chriſtian Religion, addicted himſelf wholly to the ſtudy of the Scripture, and retir'd with the Jeſuits to their Seminary. His Example had wrought with a great number of young Lords, and as he was eloquent beſides, he was of great uſe to the Jeſuits in preaching the Goſpel, and reclaiming the people from the groſſneſs of their Errors.

The Japonners are naturally endow'd with a noble mind, and great inclination to Learning; ſo that there is nothing wanting in that Nation but able Teachers. Not but that they have Doctors of their own; the Dairy's Court is full of them, where they preſerve the Annals of their Country, and pretend that Printing and Artillery were in uſe among them before they were known in Europe. From this Court come all their Books, in regard the perſons that attend upon this Prince apply themſelves only to their Studies. It is reported, that they learnt all theſe things by their frequent Commerce with the Chineſes, and that they are alſo originally deſcended from them. And in truth, the greateſt Province of the Iſland of Niphon is call'd Quanto, according to the name of the Sea-Coaſt part of China, where lies the greateſt Traffick between the Japonners and Chineſes. Moreover, if there be any credit to be given to the Chineſe Hiſtories, they ſay it was but a ſmall part of their vaſt Empire, which extended it ſelf from North to South 56 Degrees of Latitude, from the Frozen Sea to the Equinoctial Line, being bounded to the Weſt by the Caſpian Sea, and extending Eaſtward over all the Southern America to New Spain.

Father Thomas Barr, a Portugueſe, has often told me when I was at Agra, a capital City of the Great Mogul, where the Jeſuits have a very fair Houſe, that this and ſeveral other young Lords improv'd themſelves ſo far in ſix or ſeven years, that they were as Learned as their Maſters themſelves, and that they were more zealous in converting thoſe of their Nation. Now the Jeſuits at that time had no Houſe for the Inſtruction of Youth and Proſelytes, and therefore they deſir'd this young Lord to lend them one of his. Thereupon he having four very fair ones, with great Revenues belonging to them, gave that which was neareſt to the City to his Converters. A while after, the youngeſt of his Sons fell ſick, and was carried to this Houſe for the Air's ſake, where he recover'd by the care of the Fathers, and the Prayers of the Chriſtians; but his Father did not long enjoy the pleaſure of ſo great a Cure, which ſeem'd almoſt miraculous; for he dy'd at what time both his Sons and the Chriſtians ſtood moſt in need of his protection.

The two eldeſt, who were with the Emperour, underſtanding the the Death of their Father, came to take poſſeſſion of their Inheritance, and demanded of the Jeſuits the Houſe which their Father had given them, for in Japon no Parent can alienate the Eſtate of his Children; nay, when they come to ſuch an Age, he is oblig'd to put them in poſſeſſion of their Eſtates, reſerving only ſuch a proportion to himſelf. The Jeſuits, loth to part with ſo fair a convenience, would not quit their hold, though it were for their own quiet, and to engage the whole Family to ſtand by them in their time of trouble. This refuſal provok'd the two Brethren, and this quarrel between them and the Jeſuits happen'd at the ſame time that the Dutch Preſident was labouring to bring about his deſigns. He had notice of this diſpute, and as he was a great Impoſtor, he made it his buſineſs to enflame the two Brothers, not only againſt the Jeſuits, but againſt the Portugals in general, giving them a Copy of the Letter which he had fram'd, as is before-mention'd.

Theſe two Lords, who were Favourites of the Emperour, joyning Intereſt of State to their particular Intereſt, made their complaints at Court, with extraordinary aggravations; urging that there was no ſecurity for the Eſtates of particular Men, for the quiet of the Empire, nor the Life of the Prince, unleſs not only all the Portugals, but alſo all the Natives of Japon, who had ſuck'd their Errors, were exterminated out of the Iſland. To make good the reaſons of their Exaſperation they ſhew'd the Emperour a Copy of the Letter, and put him into ſuch a fright, as well for his Perſon, as the Empire, that he would admit of no juſtification on the other ſide.

Some of his Lords, who were Friends to the Portugals, beſought him to examin the truth of what was alledg'd, before he proceeded to utmoſt extremities againſt a whole Nation, and againſt his own Subjects. But he was inexorable, and preſently gave private Orders to certain Commiſſioners, to go through all the Provinces of the Empire, and to baniſh not only the Portugals, but alſo all the Chriſtian Natives. Now in regard they had their private confederates, as well in the Court, as in other places, they had intelligence, in all parts, of the cruel reſolution tak'n againſt them, though none were more zealous and faithful to them then the two Lords of Ximo, Francis and Charles. Thereupon the Chriſtians met together to conſult for their own ſafety, and their common preſervation, and ſeeing all attempts to juſtifie themſelves prove ineffectual, they reſolv'd to ſtand upon their guards, and to dye in the defence of their Innocency and Religion. The two Lords put themſelves at the head of the Chriſtians Army, the elder of which had been a Souldier, and underſtood the Art of War; the younger kept up their Spirits and Courages by his continual Exhortations.

The Emperour's Commiſſioners underſtanding that the Chriſtians were thus embody'd, gave him ſpeedy notice thereof, but ſaid nothing either of the number of their Forces, or of their deſigns. The Jeſuits and Auſtin Fryars at Goa, told me, that the Army of the Chriſtians conſiſted of above 40000 Men, beſides thoſe recruits that came up to them before and after the Battel was fought.

The

The Emperour not beleiving that the Army was ſo numerous, ſent againſt them at firſt not above 25 or 30000 Men, under the Command of the youngeſt of the two Lords of Ximo, that liv'd at Court. But thoſe Troops were no ſooner upon their March, but he rais'd new Forces, and ſent another Army after them, conſiſting of 40000 Men, commanded by the young Lord, to whom the Dutch Preſident had ſhew'd the Letter firſt of all.

The Chriſtians having intelligence of the approach of theſe two Armies, prepar'd to receive them, chooſing an advantagious place to intrench themſelves. The firſt Army ſoon appear'd in ſight of the Chriſtians, who lay ſo encamp'd, that the Imperialiſts could diſcover no more than one part of them. However, before the Engagement, the youngeſt of the Chriſtian Brothers advis'd his other Brother to ſend to the General of the Emperour's Army, who was their Brother likewiſe, to deſire Peace, and to beſeech him to intercede for them to the Emperour, and to aſſure him, that they were ready to lay down their Arms, and throw themſelves at his Feet, and to juſtifie their Innocency. To this purpoſe a Letter was fram'd and ſent to the General, but the Meſſenger that carry'd it was nail'd to a Croſs in ſight of the whole Army of the Chriſtians, and at the ſame time the Enemy came on with great fury to aſſail them.

The Fight laſted almoſt three hours with equal advantage; the Captain of the Imperialiſts ſeeking every where for his Brothers, while they ſtrove to avoid him. The Chriſtians, who knew that all their ſafety conſiſted in their Victory, and that there was otherwiſe no hope of pardon, fought with ſo much valour, that the Imperialiſts were forc'd to give ground. Their General was ſlain upon the place, and at length the whole Army of the Idolaters was cut in pieces.

This Victory wrought the Converſion of ſeveral of the Idolaters; and the Chriſtians, after they had given thanks to God three days together, prepar'd themſelves for a ſecond Combat, not doubting but the other Army would ſet upon them while they were weary, and weaken'd by the laſt Battel. But that General more prudent then the former, only poſted himſelf where the Chriſtians could not come at him, and writ to the Court the particulars of the Defeat of the firſt Army, upon which he expected the Emperour's Orders.

In the mean while, the Army of the Chriſtians daily encreas'd, ſo that in a few days they were above fifty thouſand ſtrong. The Emperour, reſolv'd to ſtifle this Revolt in the beginning, ſent Orders through all his Empire to make new Levies; and all the while the Dutch Preſident's Confederates ceas'd not to aggravate him againſt the Chriſtians; not ſuffering the other Courtiers to open his Eyes, and prevent ſo unjuſt a proſecution. The defeat of his Army had put him into ſuch a rage beſides, that though the Captains of the Chriſtians Army did all they could to clear themſelves from the falſe accuſations laid upon them, and to obtain their pardons, there was no poſſibility of being heard.

The Emperour call'd his Council, where the wiſeſt were of opinion, that it would prove the beſt way to receive the ſubmiſſions of the Chriſtians, who offer'd to lay down their Arms upon a general pardon, and the free exerciſe of their Religion. But the Preſident's Cabal carry'd it beyond this ſober advice, and the Emperour, exaſperated by his Impoſtures, took the wrong courſe. Thereupon the Council reſolv'd with all speed to raise a vast Army, which was to joyn with the other, and so to ruin the Christians all at a blow. The Dairy also, who is consulted upon all important affairs, approv'd this Council. Thereupon the Lords who are oblig'd to furnish the Emperour with Men, strove who should bring their Troops and Companies first to the Randevouz appointed; which was neer the place where the second Army lay; so that when both Armies were joyn'd together, there was in the Field a Body of 150000 Men. The Brother of the General, who was slain in the first Battel, commanded under the Emperour, who resolv'd to go in person.

But first of all he caus'd a Proclamation to be made in his Camp, whereby he forbad any Quarter to be given to any Christian, unless it were the two Brothers, whom he intended to punish openly; and that they who left the Field before the Christians were banish'd, should be put, they and their Kindred, to the most cruel Deaths that could be imagin'd; but that they should be rewarded that brought the Head of a Christian to the Emperour. The Copies of this Proclamation were scatter'd in the Army of the Christians, though they did no harm but only encourag'd them against the Idolaters, seeing there was no hope of pardon.

Nevertheless the youngest of the two Brothers offer'd to go and throw himself at the Emperour's Feet, to implore his clemency in the name of the whole Army, saying withall, That he should accompt himself happy to suffer Martyrdom to shew his Innocency; but they would not suffer him to stir. All he could obtain from them, was to write a Letter full of respect, submission, and repentance for what had been already done, declaring that they were ready to lay down their Arms, if the Emperour would grant them pardon, and the free Exercise of their Religion, offering with the hazard of their Lives to make out the falsity of all those things wherewith they had been accus'd.

This was by an Idolater carry'd to a certain Lord who secretly favour'd the Christians; but the Emperour tore it without reading it, vowing at the same time, that he would never return to his Court 'till the Idolaters were all exinpated. The Christian Army understanding the Emperour's resolution, minded nothing more then their own defence. 'Tis true, the Ground where they lay was advantagious enough for the smallness of their Number, but the Idolaters were three to one; besides that the Idolaters of the Country, who favour'd the Christians before, now declar'd all against them so soon as they saw the Imperial Army. So that now both Armies lying so near together, several hot Skirmishes pass'd between 'em, and at length it came to a general Battel. At first the Christians overthrew the Idolaters, not able to stand before them: with so much vigour did the youngest of their Chieftains assail them. He was remarkable for his Habit that day, but more remarkable for his courage; so that the Field was cover'd with the Bodies of the slain, fear and dread possessing the yielding Enemy. But while the Victor forgot his Brother's advice, and pursu'd too far from the Body of the Army, he was encompass'd on every side, wounded, and being carried away by the press of his Enemies, was at length taken, and lead before the Emperour. His eldest Brother, more experienc'd in War, rally'd and recall'd those that had follow'd his Brother, and till Night maintain'd the advantages, which he had got over the Imperialists, who were still supply'd with fresh Succours, as necessity requir'd. The next day the Fight was renew'd again by break of day, and with a ſucceſs as honourable, but more bloody to the Chriſtians.

The third day the Emperour enrag'd at ſuch a reſiſtance, caus'd them to be ſet upon in ſeveral places at one time. The General of the Chriſtians Army rode from Rank to Rank, encouraging the Souldiers both by his Exhortations, and his Example: but at length having receiv'd ſeveral wounds, he was overlaid by the multitude of his Enemies that crouded to his deſtruction. And now the General being loſt, and the Chriſtians having no perſon to command them, it ceas'd to be a Combat, and became a Maſſacre. However, reſolving to dye with their Swords in their hands, they flung themſelves into the thickeſt of their Enemies, and Sacrific'd themſelves to their own Innocency. Their Camp was ſoon forc'd, and all the old Men, Women, and Children put to the Sword, except ſome few that eſcap'd and hid themſelves in the Mountains, who afterwards made a relation of this bloody Story to them who rehears'd it to me.

This was the deplorable end of the Chriſtians, and indeed of the Chriſtianiſme of Japon, which the Preſident procur'd by his impoſtures and fallacies. And it has been made appear by three exact accompts, that there has periſh'd, either in Battels or by Tortures, above 60000 Chriſtians. The eldeſt of their Captains ſuffer'd a moſt cruel Martyrdom for ſeven days, neither could any offer, that the Emperour could make him for his Brothers and his own Valours ſake, induce him to renounce the Chriſtian Faith. After that, there was a kind of Inquiſition ſet up thorough the whole Empire, which laſted for ſeveral years, whereby thoſe that perſever'd in the Faith, were condemn'd to moſt intolerable Torments, in ſo much that the Relation which Van Varen, a Hollander, whoſe credit it would be a vanity to queſtion in this particular, cannot be read over without Horrour. In ſixteen years, that is, from 1613 to 1629, the Chriſtians were ſo multiply'd, that there were above 400000; but in the year 1649, the ſame Hollander relates, that thoſe Japonners who were brought from thence by the Company's Ships to Amſterdam, affirm'd, that Chriſtianity was utterly extirpated out of the Iſland.

Being at Ogli, a large Town upon the faireſt Arm of the Ganges, I met a Holland Merchant, who had ſerv'd the Company in Japon a long time, and had made ſeveral Voyages. He came thither with two Ships laden with Bars of Silver and Copper, which he had exchang'd for Silks, which the Hollanders buy at Bengale. This Merchant knowing I was there, came to viſit me; and I finding him to be a ſincere honeſt Man, and well verſt in the affairs of Japan, eſpecially in reference to the laſt perſecution of the Chriſtians, grew covetous of his converſe, and invited him often to my Houſe. In our familiar diſcourſes concerning the ſettlement of the Hollanders in the Eaſt-Indies, and of the extraordinary gain which they make by their Trade there, and paſſing thus from one thing to another, at length I ask'd him who was the Author and Contriver of a Maſſacre ſo horrid, as that was reported to be. Whereupon he related to me all the particulars of which I have here made a recital, and many more which I have forgot or omitted, as being either not pertinent to my ſubject, or elſe already related by others. He had his information from ſuch of the Natives that had eſcap'd out of the Battel, and ſeveral of the Idolater

Merchants, in whose memories the fact was then fresh: and indeed he was so ingenious in his Story, that I could not find any motive to incite me to misdoubt the truth of it. For many times he could not forbear shedding tears, and to interrupt his discourse with his sighs, often imprecating Heav'ns Vengeance upon the President, and protesting he wonder'd the Company employ'd him so long. But God reserv'd his punishment to himself. For the deserts of his crimes always attending him, and provoking judgments and misfortunes upon whatever Enterprize he took in hand, he miserably perish'd in sight of Lisbon in fair weather. All the men in the Ship were sav'd; only he returning to recover a certain Cabinet of Jewels which he had there, the Ship split, and the Portugals had the satisfaction to see him swallow'd up in the Sea, who had been the occasion of the Ruin of so many of their Country-men in Japon; and immediately they rang their Bells in the City for joy of his Death.

In my last Voyage to the Indies I was at Bandar-Abassi, where the Hollanders have a Factory. Thither arriv'd two Vessels from Japon to take in Silks, which the Hollanders buy of the Persians to exchange in Japon. The Captain of one of the Ships told me, that during several trading Voyages which he had made to that Island, the Emperour had caus'd two Inquisitions to be made after the Christians; in the first of which the Inquisitors met with 247, who were all most exquisitely tormented to Death; in the latter they only found 63, among whom were seventeen Children, twelve Girls and five Boys, of which the eldest were not above thirteen years of Age.

Among all the persecutions which the Christians suffer'd, there was none comparable to this for extremity of Torments: For the Japonners are the most ingenious in cruelty of any people in the World, and the most constant in suffering. For there have been Children from ten to a dozen years old, who for 60 days together have endur'd to have their Bodies fasten'd to the Cross, half burnt, half torn in pieces, while their Executioners forc'd them to eat, on purpose to prolong their Lives in misery; and yet they would not renounce the Faith which they had embrac'd. Neither did this barbarous Inquisition extend only to the Christians, but to their Kindred and Relations, nay, to their very Neighbours. For if a Priest were taken in any House, all the people in that House, and the Houses adjoyning, were hall'd to Execution, for not having made the discovery.

At the beginning of every year there is a new Inquisition, at which time all that can write are requir'd to subscribe, or else the chief of the Family subscribes for all the rest, that they neither are Christians, nor are acquainted with any Christians, and that they abominate Christianity as a Religion dangerous to the State.

Don John of Braganza, being advanc'd to the Crown, that sudden change which in one day, and without the least Tumult in Lisbon, wrested the Crown of Portugal from the King of Spain, wrought the same effect at Goa. All the Portugals at Goa at the same time acknowledg'd their new Soveraign; the Viceroy who was a Spaniard, was sent away to Spain by the first Vessels that were homeward bound; and Don Philip de Mascarennas, a Portugal, Governour of Ceylan, came to Goa, and took upon him the command of Viceroy.

So

So ſoon as he came to the Government, his firſt thoughts were how to Eſtabliſh the Trade of the Portugals in Japon, which when they were expell'd, amounted to three Millions of Pardo's yearly, one Pardo being worth twenty ſeven Sous of French Money. The hopes therefore of regaining ſo great a loſs, made him toward the end of the year 1642, take a reſolution to ſend a ſolemn Embaſſy to the Emperour of Japon, furniſh'd with magnificent Preſents: For which reaſon he made choice of what was moſt rare, and moſt likely to be acceptable to the Emperour, and the Grandees of his Court. The moſt coſtly of theſe Preſents was a piece of Lignum Aloes, otherwiſe call'd Wood of Calambour, four Foot in length, and two Foot in Diameter; a larger piece then which the Indies had never ſeen, having coſt 40000 Pardo's. To this he added a great quantity of fair Coral Beads of an extraordinary bigneſs. This is the moſt acceptable Preſent that can be ſent to the Lords of Japon, which they faſten to the Strings wherewith they draw their Pouches together. With theſe he ſent a great number of Carpets and Hangings of Cloth of Gold, Silver, and Silk, and ſeveral pieces of Tiſſue of Gold and Silver. 'Tis ſaid the whole Preſent coſt the City of Goa above eight hundred thouſand Pardo's, which amounts to about 86666 l. 13 s. 4 d. of Engliſh Money. Beſides all this, the two great Ships which were prepar'd for the Embaſſador, carry'd one of them 50 Peeces of Canon, and the other 35, both laden with all ſorts of Commodities which are eſteem'd and priz'd in Japon, amounting to about 83333 l. 6 s. 8 d. Sterling. The Equipage of the Embaſſador was no leſs ſumptuous. And becauſe the Viceroy would not be thought to give any occaſion of offence to the Emperour, he would not ſuffer one Jeſuit in the Train, but only four Auguſtins for the Admiral, and four Jacobins for the other, Men of diſcretion and conduct. While I was at Goa, in the year 1648, I met with ſome of theſe Fathers, who gave an exact accompt of the Embaſſy.

They made a proſperous Voyage, and arriv'd happily at their intended Port. But you muſt underſtand, that when any Ship arrives at Japon, no perſons are permitted to come aſhore, 'till the Governour of the place have an accompt who they are, that they may give notice thereof to the Emperour, and know his pleaſure, whether they ſhall be received or no. In the mean time the Ships rode in a very dangerous place, at the entry of the Haven, into which there was no ſteering, without the aſſiſtance of the Native Pilots.

The Governour of Nangaſaqui ſurpriz'd to underſtand that they were Portugueſes, wrote in all haſt to the Emperour. The Dutch Preſident being inform'd of the news, play'd all the pranks he could, us'd all the contrivances imaginable to fruſtrate the ſucceſs of the Embaſſy, and to ruine the Veſſels that brought the Embaſſadour and his Preſents. To which purpoſe he found a way to bribe the Courrier, who was ſent with the Emperours Orders; ſo that inſtead of twenty days, which were ſufficient for his journey, he made it above two Months before he deliver'd his diſpatches. During which time the two Ships had ſuffer'd very bad weather upon the Coaſts, and endur'd many a ſevere Storm. At length the Orders came that none ſhould be permitted to Land but the Embaſſadour, the two Captains, and the two Pilots, to give an accompt of the ſubject and cauſe of their coming. The Embaſſadour being Landed, acquainted the Governour that he came to compliment the Emperour in the behalf of the King his Maſter, and to aſſure him that they were no longer under the Power of the King of Spain. That about a year ſince, a lawful Heir of Portugal had recover'd the Diadem of his Anceſtors which the Spaniard had uſurp'd. That this new King was ſo juſt and generous a Prince, that underſtanding that ſome of his Subjects had deſerted the Iſland of Japon, without paying their Debts, he had now ſent to make a general ſatisfaction; but chiefly out of that reſpect which obliges all Soveraigns newly come to the Crown, to give notice thereof to thoſe Princes, whoſe friendſhip they deſire.

The Governour inform'd the Emperour of all theſe things; but the Preſident having as good intelligence by means of his Friends at Court, alledg'd to the Emperour that they were Rebels, who came from the utmoſt parts of the Weſt, to bring the News and Example of their Revolt to Japon: That the natural reſtleſneſs of this Nation caus'd frequent diſturbances and revolutions among them. That they were never long at reſt themſelves, nor would ſuffer others to be at quiet. That conſidering the experience he had had, he could not be either too cautious for the ſecurity of his perſon, or the tranquillity of his Empire. Laſtly, that the Emperour and the Empire would be ruin'd paſt recovery, if thoſe people were ever admitted to ſet footing therein.

This Counſel well ſeconded by the reſt of the Cabal, eaſily made an impreſſion in the Heart of the Prince naturally Barbarous, and an Enemy to the Chriſtians. Thereupon he ſent an Order to the Governour to invite all the whites aboard, and to treat them for eight days in the beſt manner he could. At the end of eight days they were order'd to repair aboard again, and at the ſame time he made a Preſent to the Embaſſadour, and chief of his Train, conſiſting of ſix great Cabinets, and ſix Coffers lacker'd with black, with Figures in Relief, intermix'd with ſpangles of Gold, all the Embelliſhments being of Maſſie Gold. With them were ſix Cabinets, and ſix Coffers, lacker'd with Red, Embelliſh'd after the ſame manner with Silver. I ſaw ſome of them when I was at Goa, and I muſt confeſs I never beheld any ſo rare and beautiful in that kind, which made me admire the ingenious Induſtry of the Artiſts of Japon; Our European imitations of their workmanſhip being no way comparable to them.

The Embaſſadour having receiv'd his Preſent, had Order to remove all the Goods in the ſecond Veſſel into the Admiral. He would have made great Preſents to the Governour, who refus'd them; telling the Embaſſadour withall, that he had expreſs command to refuſe them, and to declare to the Embaſſadour, that if he did not make haſt away, he would ſink his Ship. That the Emperour his Maſter had made a new prohibition, forbidding all Portugals and Spaniards to venture near his Dominions upon any pretence whatſoever; nay, though it were upon pretence of an Embaſſy, upon pain of being crucifi'd upon the place, without liberty to ſpeak for themſelves. As for the Debts of the Portugals, he had undertaken to diſcharge them himſelf; only he had ſent that Preſent to the King his Maſter to thank him for that Embaſſy. The Embaſſadour had no ſooner remov'd the Goods out of the ſecond Veſſel into the Admiral, but they ſank her before his face. And not contented with that affront, the Governour ſent for all the Blacks that were in the Admiral, and cut off their Heads, pretending they were Indians, and that, as ſuch, they could not be ignorant of the Rigorous prohibitions which the Emperour had put forth, forbidding all Strangers, except the Hollanders, to ſet footing in Japon.

After the Portugal Embaſſadour was thus barbarouſly fruſtrated and diſmiſs'd, he ſent News thereof to the General at Batavia, urging him to execute the deſign which the Hollanders had upon Macao; telling him alſo, That though there were a probability of a League between the Hollander and the Portugal againſt the Spaniard, yet that it could be no harm to ſeize Macao beforehand, as they had made themſelves Maſters of ſeveral places, while the Portugals were under the King of Spain. The General taking the Preſident's advice, was ready to ſet Sail upon this enterprize, when a Meſſenger from Portugal brought him the News of the Treaty concluded between Portugal and Holland; as alſo of the Navy which the Hollanders had ſent to Lisbon to aid the Portugals. At firſt he made as if it had been a falſe Rumour, and put the Meſſenger in Priſon; nevertheleſs while he delay'd the departure of the Fleet, he receiv'd expreſs Orders from his Superiours to Treat the Portugals as Friends and Allies. So that he was conſtrain'd to turn all his Forces againſt the Molucca Iſlands, then in the poſſeſſion of the Spaniards.

The Preſident was very ſorry for the laſt News, by reaſon that the General and he had great deſigns upon the Conqueſt of that place, and had promis'd the Company by that means to make them abſolute Maſters of the Trade of China, and of all the Eaſt. True it is, that Macao is very advantagiouſly ſeated for thoſe that deſign to be Maſters of thoſe Seas, eſpecially upon the Coaſts of Quantung and Fockien, which are the Provinces, whither are brought down all the Merchandizes of this Empire. It lies at the Mouth of the Gulph of Canton, in a ſmall Peninſula adjoyning to a larger Iſland, and built upon a kind of a Promontory, on three ſides environ'd with the Sea, which no Ship can come neer by reaſon of the Flats, unleſs it be on that ſide next the Port, which is defended by a ſtrong Fortreſs. This City drew from the only Fair of Quanchin 1300 Cheſts of Silks of all ſorts, every Cheſt containing 150 pieces, and 2500 Lingots of Gold, not reckoning the raw Silks, the Gold Wire, and other Merchandizes: whence it may be eaſily judg'd what advantage the Portugueſes made of it; and wherefore the Preſident deſir'd ſo much to expell them from thence.

But his Deſigns were diſappointed, not only by the revolution in Portugal, but alſo by the loſs which the Hollanders ſuſtain'd of the Iſland of Formoſa, which the Chineſes took from them, following the advice of a French Souldier, whom the Governour of Tayovan had refus'd to diſmiſs after his time was out. For the better underſtanding this accident, you muſt know that the Hollanders being ſetl'd in Japon, and having excluded all other Nations from thence, except the Chineſes, whom the Emperour permitted to return, after that the Maſſacre committed by the Japonners in a City of China, of which they had a deſire to make themſelves Maſters, had caus'd a Ceſſation of the Commerce between the two Kingdoms, and conſtrain'd the Emperour of China to ſet a price upon the Heads of the Japonners. Nevertheleſs the Hollanders did all they could to make a new Rupture between the people, or elſe themſelves to ſeize upon ſome place that lay proper to ruin the Trade of the Chineſes to Japon.

To this purpoſe, not daring to attempt upon the Portugueſes, they over-ran the Seas which environ'd the neighbouring Iſlands, and took the the Veſſels of the Chineſes which were bound for Macao, exerciſing ſtrange Cruelties upon the people that had eſcap'd into thoſe Iſlands, after the irruption of the Tartars into China. Coxinga, the Son of Chinchilunge, that famous Pirate, who ſav'd the remainders of that ruin'd Empire, then commanded thoſe people, and was become formidable to the Tartars themſelves. Who to revenge himſelf upon the Dutch Pirates, undertook the Siege of Tayovan, where they uſually retir'd, and by gaining that place drave them wholly out of Formoſa.

This is a large Iſland plac'd at the poynt of the Phillippines, ſtretching out in length from North to South, and to the Weſt lying oppoſite to the Provinces of Fockien, and Quantung. The Chineſes call it Talieukieu. Since which time, 'tis very probable that the Spaniards gave it the name of Formoſa, from its beauty and fertility. They being the firſt people of Europe that diſcover'd it, and inhabited it; and upon one of its Promontories to the North built the Fort of Kiling. The natural Inhabitants live almoſt all in the Woods and Mountains, where they maintain themſelves by hunting the Hart, and wild Boar, whoſe dry'd Fleſh, Skins, and Horns they ſell to the Sangleys, who in exchange bring them other neceſſaries. The little Iſland of Tayovan lent its Name to the little Fort which the Engliſh built, over againſt the great Iſland; it was very convenient for the Hollanders, who made great advantage of the Cattel, Hides, and Horns, both of Harts and Bufalo's, which they carry'd from thence, and ſold to the Chineſes and Japonners, who make great uſe thereof in ſeveral of their Trades and Manufactures. But the chiefeſt advantage which the Hollanders made of this Iſland conſiſted in this, that it lay in the middle way between Batavia and Japon, and ſerv'd as a place of ſecurity for their Ships in bad Seaſons, and to take in refreſhments. There alſo they laded off ſeveral of the Goods of the Chineſes, which they took by way of Piracy from the Chineſes, or which were brought them by the Sangleys, who are the Original Merchants of the Chineſes, ſetled at the Philippines, but who drive the greateſt Trade of that Country, independent from the Spaniards.

Coxinga, though an Idolater and a Pirate, baniſh'd out of his Country, and provok'd by the Hollanders, had ſo much humanity as to ſend to the General at Batavia to ſend away Veſſels to fetch away his Men, and deliver'd them all without ſuffering them to receive the leaſt injury. He had his Friends and Favourers in the Emperour of Japon's Court, as being a declar'd Enemy to the Tartars, whoſe neer Neighbourhood the Japonners cannot endure. For ſo quick a Conqueſt of ſo many Lands and Provinces in ſeven years, as it were only upon ſight of the Enemy, had very much alarum'd them. He by his Friends acquainted the Emperour of the acts of Hoſtility, committed by the Hollanders againſt the Chineſe Merchants: Adding moreover, that they had made private propoſitions to league themſelves with the common Enemy; and that it was one of the Nations of the North, born for the deſolation of other Countries, and to invade the Peace of Empires. That they had ſetled themſelves in the Iſlands of the Eaſt only by treachery and violence. That for ſome years ſince, they had made it their buſineſs to cruiſe the Seas between China and Japon, on purpoſe to make themſelves abſolute Maſters of the Trade, and that if he did not take a ſpeedy courſe, they would do the ſame miſchief in his Dominions which the Tartars had done in China.

The

The President had much ado to divert the Storm, for the most potent Lords at Court, although his Pensioners and Friends, began to open their Eyes, and in some measure took Coxinga's part, saying, That the Chineses were unfortunate enough, in being laid wast by the Tartars, without being persecuted and afflicted by the Hollanders. That seeing that after they had been expell'd their Country, they had nothing left but their Boats, and some low Rocks for their places of refuge, it was a piece of inhumanity to disturb them in their last Sanctuaries, and to deprive them of their liberty of the Sea, and their Commerce with Japon, from whence those miserable Exiles had their chiefest support. The Bonzes, the Merchants, the vulgar People, all took the Chineses part. Thereupon the Emperour sent for the Dutch President, and told him, I understand, said he, that thy Company abuses my Protection, and that their Vessels, instead of being contented with the Trade which I have permitted them, presume to play the Pyrates upon the Chineses, and to trouble the Seas adjoyning to my Empire. If I hear any more of these complaints, I will cause thee and all thy Nation to be Crucifi'd. I know not how the President appeas'd the Emperour's fury; this I know in general, that the Hollanders made a secret alliance with the Tartars against Coxinga. Him the Inhabitants of Fockien call'd to their assistance, having rais'd an Army of 200000 Men; whereupon he went to aid them with a very powerful Navy. After several Skirmishes, the Tartars and Chineses came to a pitch'd Field, where the Captain of the Tartars having plac'd the best part of his Cavalry in Ambush, order'd his Men to retreat by degrees, 'till they had drawn the Chineses into the Ambuscade; at what time the Tartars encompassing them on every side, kill'd 80000 upon the place; Coxinga with his Navy not being able to relieve them.

During this War, the Hollanders took their opportunity, and made themselves Masters of the Island of Fishers, between Formosa and the Coast of Fockien. In a short while after Coxinga dy'd, and Savia his Uncle, the richest Merchant of China, who out of his own revenue had disburs'd the expences of the last War, grew weary of the charge, and was desirous to make Peace with the Tartars. Of which one of the Sons of Coxinga being advertiz'd, seiz'd upon his Uncles person, and shut him up in a close Prison, where he kill'd himself for madness. The Hollanders overjoy'd at the Death of Savia, who had always hinder'd them from the Trade of the Province of Fockien, sent a Navy against his Nephew in favour of the Tartars, who made War against him all along the Sea-Coast. Several Combats happen'd between the Juncks of the Islanders and the Holland Vessels in view of the Tartars, who satisfi'd themselves with being only Spectators. But all the benefit which the Hollanders reap'd from the advantages which they obtain'd over the Islanders, was only to put into the Hands of the Tartars the Cities of Bemos aed Quesmoy, and all the places thereabouts, which Coxinga's Party possess'd before. For notwithstanding all their kindness, the Tartars would not assist them to retake Tayovan; so that they only were content to build certain small Forts in the small Islands adjoyning to Formosa: and since my return from the Indies, I never could inform my self of the truth of the issue of that Enterprize.

But the Hollanders were not content with their settlement at Firmando, which was an Island both desert and barren, seated upon a Streight, which ſeparates the Point of the Land of Corea from Japon, a place no way commodious for their Deſigns of Engroſſing the Trade of China, as being too remote from Nangiſaqui: Beſides, that the North and South Winds are ſo violent at their Seaſons in this Streight, between the two Coaſts, that it is impoſſible to come near the ſhoar when they blow. The Preſident therefore having ſuch good luck in the Expulſion of the Portugals out of Japon, doubted not but that he might obtain the ſmall Iſland of Kiſma, an Iſland that had been wholly deſerted ever ſince the Habitations of the people had been deſtroy'd. At firſt he only deſir'd leave to build a ſmall Tenement for the conveniency of the Factors. Now between this Iſland and Nangiſaqui, there is only a narrow Frith, not above a Musquet Shot over. Here the Preſident deſir'd the Governour that he might make a Bridge of Boats for a more eaſie intercourſe between the City and the Port. The Governour gain'd by Preſents, gave him leave to build the Bridge; but ſeeing that the Hollanders made an ill uſe of it, and that they came too frequently and numerouſly into the City, he built two Forts at both ends of the Bridge, and furniſh'd them with Souldiers, who were to take notice who paſs'd to and fro. He alſo publiſh'd an Order, That ſuch Hollanders as came by day into the Town, ſhould return to their Lodgings before night, upon pain of Death. This Order, and the little conveniency which they had for Lodging in their own Quarters, very much troubl'd them; ſo that the Preſident made new Applications at Court, and obtain'd leave to build a Factory, and Warehouſes for their Goods.

The Governour thereupon ſent a Surveyor to the Hollanders, to mark out the Ground which the Emperour had given them to build upon. This perſon being largely rewarded, made them good meaſure, and yet they were not contented; ſo that in the Night-time they had enlarg'd their Quarters, by removing the firſt marks. The Governour, being advertiz'd thereof, began to be very angry; but they found means to appeaſe him with their Preſents: ſo that he eaſily condeſcended to the ſlight reaſons which they gave him for what they had done. Thus in a ſhort time they finiſh'd their work, which was without encompaſs'd with a Wall, much like a Garden Wall, but within contain'd a real Fort, flanck'd and lin'd according to all the Rules of Art; and which, the outward Wall being beaten down, not only defended their Bridge, but commanded the entry into the Haven of Nangiſaqui.

They took great care not to admit any but Hollanders, for fear their Deſign ſhould be diſcover'd. So that when the whole was finiſh'd, the Preſident gave advice to the General at Batavia what he had done, deſiring him to ſend him eight Braſs Guns, ſo broken, as to be eaſily put together in the places where they were broken. He adviz'd him alſo to put them up in Hogſheads, pack'd up like other Goods; and inſtead of Mariners, to ſend a good number of Souldiers, habited like Mariners, for the ſecurity of the Factory. But this Stratagem had not that ſucceſs which he expected; for about that time the Emperour had ſent a new Governour to Nangiſaqui: So that when the Ships arriv'd at Batavia, the new chang'd Officers, being more vigilant then the former, coming to weigh the Bales as they were put aſhore, and finding certain Hogſheads at the bottom of the hold, which they could not remove by reaſon of their weight, they preſently brake them up, and perceiving there the broken pieces of Canons, carry'd ſome of them to the Governour, who immediately ſent intelligence thereof to Yeddo, of which the Preſident had as ſuddain notice by his Penſioners. He having his invention at command, repairs forthwith to the Emperour's Court, and there tells the Emperour, That he had receiv'd Orders from his Superiours to preſent him with certain Peeces of Canon, made according to the neweſt Invention of his Country, the uſe whereof was ſo convenient, that they were with little difficulty and trouble to be drawn up, and made uſe of, where others could not poſſibly be brought to play: and that he thought no Preſent could be more acceptable or ſerviceable to him, to render him Victorious over his Enemies. Upon this the Emperour was very well ſatisfi'd, and ſent to the Governour of Nangiſaqui to ſend him thoſe Guns, and withall, not to moleſt the Hollanders, either in their Factory, or in vending their Wares.

Having ſo fortunately diſengag'd himſelf out of theſe Briers, he lays another deſign, and ſends to the General at Batavia, a perſon of a turbulent and unquiet Spirit like himſelf, to ſet out two Veſſels, to make a diſcovery of all the Coaſts of Japon, and particularly of thoſe Coaſts which were next the Gold Mines, and to ſee if they could find any ſafe Harbour for Ships to ride in, in thoſe tempeſtuous Seas, or any places proper to fortifie, that they might no longer depend upon the uncertain humour of the Court of Japon, which was as inconſtant as their Seas. The General provided two Ships, and furniſh'd them with excellent Pilots, good Souldiers, expert Mariners, and Proviſions for two years, with all other Neceſſaries and Inſtruments, as well for delving as building. One of the ſeven of the General's Council was chos'n Superviſor of the Enterprize. 'Tis ſaid, that thoſe two Veſſels skirted all along the Coaſt of Japon, from the Eaſt to the South, and from the South to the North, fetching a compaſs about the Iſlands to the 47 deg. of Northern Latitude, and that they diſcover'd one Iſland which they call'd The States Iſland, and afterwards touch'd upon another Land which they nam'd The Company's Land, inhabited by White people, with long Hair, habited after the Japon faſhion, which they found to be a Continent adjoyning to Niulhan, and Corea; and that after they had wander'd a long time upon the Sea, without any other deſign then to make new Diſcoveries, they paſs'd through the Streights of Sanguar, which ſeparates the Land of Teſſo from Japon, and kept along thoſe Coaſts of Japon to the Eaſt, to obſerve the Bays of Aizu, and Xendai, where are the Gold Mines. In that part a furious Tempeſt took them, in ſight of the Mountains, where the Gold Mines lye, which laſted four days together. The ſecond of theſe Veſſels run full againſt a Rock, and ſplit her ſelf, with the totall loſs of every Mothers Son in the Veſſel. The Admiral held out a longer time, but coaſting the Land where the Mountains of Sataque appear, the Tempeſt grew ſo violent, that ſhe alſo brake againſt the Rocks. In this ſecond Shipwrack only the Admiral, and thirteen perſons more eſcap'd, partly by the help of the Planks, and partly by Swiming. The Japonners upon the Coaſt preſently ran to view them, and wonder'd to ſee people in thoſe parts, whoſe Language they did not underſtand. Nevertheleſs, they entertain'd them civilly enough; but in regard they were Strangers, and that there was a ſtrict prohibition not to receive any Strangers among them upon any pretence whatſoever, they were at a great loſs what to do with 'em. One, wiſer then the reſt, adviſ'd his Brethren to carry them to the Emperour, whoſe counſel was follow'd; and ſo they took their journey toward Yeddo, which was above a hundred Leagues off.

The Emperour, being inform'd of their arrival, order'd that they ſhould be civilly us'd; and at the end of eight days ſent for them, and caus'd them to be ask'd, of what Country they were, and what Deſign brought them into his Seas? The Admiral, who was a perſon of a ready ingenuity, anſwer'd, That he was a Hollander, who all his life time had ſerv'd his Country as a Souldier, where he had the command of a thouſand Horſe, and two thouſand Foot, at what time Fortune, or rather the care of preſerving his Honour, forc'd him from his Native Soyl. I was, ſaid he, one of the chief Commanders in the Army, and though I ſay it, my Service had gain'd me a fair reputation. The Prince, who commanded us, had a great confidence in me, which made one of his near Relations jealous of me; ſo that he was not only content to do me all ill Offices with the General, but ſought all occaſions to pick a quarrel with me. I dare be bold to ſay, that had he not been ſo nearly related to the Prince, I ſhould not have taken his affronts ſo long patiently. But at length he provok'd that patience to ſuch a degree, and ſo deeply and openly affronted me, that I was conſtrain'd to meet him with my Sword in my hand. His misfortune and mine ſo order'd it, that I kill'd him at the firſt puſh. My Friends aſſiſted me to make my eſcape, and kept me hid for ſome days, thinking to have appeas'd the Princes anger; but it continu'd ſo violent, that they advis'd me to abſent my ſelf for ſome years. Therefore to render my Exile leſs tedious, and that I might be ſtill doing ſomething for the Service of my Country, I deſir'd my Friends to furniſh me with two Ships, with a reſolution to ſeek out and deſtroy all thoſe Pirates that infeſted the Indian Seas. I have been in chace of them for a whole year together; and ſometimes we met with Tempeſts ſo violent, that drave us we know not whither our ſelves, my Pilots not being experienc'd in the Eaſtern Seas. Soon after meeting with another Tempeſt no leſs rude and boyſtrous, we were forc'd to let our Ships drive as the Winds themſelves were pleas'd to force them, which at length drove us upon the Coaſts of this Empire, where we have ſuffer'd Shipwrack, not having ſav'd above fourteen of four hundred, which I brought along with me. Happy in ſuch a misfortune, to be caſt upon the Territories of a Prince ſo potent and generous, that, no queſtion, will have compaſſion upon our miſeries.

When the Interpreter had repeated this Relation to the Emperour, the Prince, and all the Lords of the Court were very much concern'd, and admir'd both the Courage and Aſpect of the Stranger. The Emperour ſent him very rich Preſents, and to all thoſe of his Company; and gave Order, that he ſhould be conducted to Kiſma, to the Holland Factory, and that he ſhould be well treated upon the way, during the whole journey, which was five and twenty or thirty days Travel. There this famous Champion ſtay'd four Months, in expectation of the Ships that come every year from Batavia to Japon; ſo that he had time enough to make a full Relation of the Lands which he had obſerv'd, and of all the particulars of the Shipwrack. One day as he was telling how he had cajoll'd the Emperour, and that the Preſident was applauding the quickneſs of his wit for inventing ſuch an imaginary piece of Knight-Errantry, Errantry, a Japoneſe Boy that ſerv'd the Preſident, heard all the diſcourſe, without being obſerv'd by his Maſter. Some Months after, the Preſident had beaten this Boy, which he, as all the Japoneſes are of a fiery and vindicative Nature, reſolving to revenge, went to the Governour of Nangiſaqui, and repeated to him the whole Diſcourſe between his Maſter and the Admiral. The Governour, finding it to be a buſineſs of importance, ſends advice thereof to the Court. The Emperour was ſo enrag'd at the injury and affront put upon him, that he commanded the Governour to ſtop the Admiral and his Train, and to ſend him with a good Guard to Yeddo, and not to let any Ship enter the Harbour, 'till he had had a full Examination of the matter.

This Order was not ſo ſecret, but that the Preſidents Friends had notice thereof, who preſently gave him intelligence of it ſo ſeaſonably, that the Admiral was ſent away before the Order came to the Governour. Eight days after, three Hollana Veſſels arriv'd at Kiſma, to whom the Governour ſent expreſs command to keep out at Sea, and not to come aſhore. The Preſident feigning to be ſurpriz'd at this Prohibition, went to the Governour to know the reaſon, who gave him this Anſwer, The Emperour, ſaid he, is acquainted with your tricks, you ſhall have no more kindneſs from me; I have ſent to Court to give notice of the arrival of your three Ships, and I ſhall follow my Orders when they come. Upon this the Preſident made no doubt but the Admiral's ſtory was diſcover'd; and recollecting with himſelf that he had beaten his Japoneſe Boy, and that he was run away from him, he ſoon conjectur'd at the Author of all the miſchief. In ſhort, the Governour receives his Orders, the Tenour whereof was, That he ſhould ſend away the three Veſſels, without permitting them to land either Men or Goods; and that he ſhould tell the Preſident, That the Emperour was ſatisfi'd that the Admiral was a Cheat and a Spy, whom he intended to puniſh ſeverely; and therefore, if he did not ſend for him to Japon by the firſt opportunity of the Winds, he would put to Death all thoſe of his Nation, and fling their Goods into the Sea.

Upon the return of three Ships to Batavia, there was no ſmall hurly burly in the Iſland; for by them they underſtood the danger that their Country-men were in, if they did not ſend back the Admiral. Thereupon an extraordinary Council was call'd, to deliberate upon an affair of ſo great importance, who were all of one mind, that the Admiral was to be ſent back, and that it was better for one to ſuffer, then a whole Nation.

The Admiral being advertiz'd of this their reſolution, publickly proteſted againſt the violence and injuſtice they were about to do him; telling them, that he was born a Subject of the Republick of Holland, who had only the Power of his life and death; that in their Service, he would expoſe his life to a thouſand hazards, but that he was not oblig'd to ſacrifice himſelf for the particular Intereſts of a private Trade. The Miniſters took his part, and made it a caſe in Religion. The common people mutiny'd againſt the General, and the Tumult grew to that heat, that the Sea-men were ſent for from aboard their Ships to diſperſe the multitude. At length, by the interpoſition of a Miniſter, the buſineſs was brought to a concluſion; who perſwaded the Admiral by his ſmooth Language, to appeaſe the diſorder of the people, by ſubmitting to the Reſult of the Council. Thereupon he promis'd promis'd to return to Japon, propvided they would allow him what he demanded, not only for his reward, but alſo that which ſhould bear him out in that ſame new part which he had in his head to act.

Firſt he demanded two Ships magnificently trim'd, a Train of fifty choſen Men, every one of which was to have three changes of Habit, of the richeſt Stuffs that could be had: Moreover 50000 Crowns for his Voyage, a Cupboard of Gold and Silver Plate, with all Equipage proportionable, and that thoſe that accompany'd him ſhould reſpect him, as a perſon of great Quality.

All this was allow'd him, and the Admiral departed from Batavia, and arriv'd well at Nangiſaqui. The Governour ſurpriz'd at the beauty of the Veſſels, could not believe them to be Merchants, and therefore ſent to know who they were; but he was more ſurpriz'd when he knew that it was the Admiral. Forthwith he diſpatch'd a Courrier to the Emperour, to give him notice, and to inform him with what magnificence the Admiral was return'd. The Preſident alſo ſent, that he might have a favourable reception, and to deſire his Friends to let the Emperour know, that this was a Perſon of great Quality, whom an Honourable Action had driven from his Country, and that he no ſooner underſtood the accuſation that lay againſt him, but that he was return'd with that Equipage that became him, to juſtifie himſelf.

'Till the Order came, the Governour, according to cuſtom, caus'd all the Sails and Rudders of the Ships to be brought to him, not permitting any perſon to come aſhore. At length the Order came, that the Admiral and his Attendants ſhould be receiv'd into the City, together with all things neceſſary for their perſons, and that they ſhould be convoy'd to Yeddo, and that in all places where they came, they ſhould be nobly treated. The Preſident accompany'd the Admiral to aſſiſt him, as well with his Councils, as with the favour of his Friends. Their Entry was very magnificent, and the richneſs of their Habits brought the people from all parts, as being mainly greedy after Novelty, ſo that the noiſe thereof was ſpread all over the Court: Yet the Emperour would not admit them to their Audience upon the day which they deſir'd.

Two Months were elaps'd, during which time the Admiral kept open Table, and diſplay'd his daſling Riches to the Eyes of the Japoneſes, and being of a quick and apprehenſive wit, he caus'd himſelf to be inſtructed in the Language of the Iſland, and in a ſhort time he began to underſtand many Words. When the Emperour ſent for him, he clad himſelf and his Train in a richer Habit then that which they had on when he made his Entry. At firſt the Emperour ſeem'd to be angry; I underſtand, ſaid he, that thou art an Impoſtor and a Traytor, that thy Birth is obſcure, and that thou art come as a ſpy into my Kingdom, and therefore I am reſolv'd to puniſh thee according to thy merits.

When the Interpreter had explain'd the Emperour's words, the Admiral with an undaunted countenance, Sir, ſaid he, a Prince ſo great as you are, ſhould rather be a comfort and ſupport to the unfortunate, then add to their affliction. Fortune, that perſecutes me, has in nothing been more cruel to me, then in raiſing thoſe Calumnies, with which ſhe has endeavour'd to blemiſh my reputation with your Majeſty. She might expell me my Country, and caſt me upon unknown Coaſts at the other end of the World; but ſhe can never inſpire into me thoughts unworthy of my Birth. This is the ſecond time I have been within your Dominions, the firſt by occaſion of Shipwrack, the ſecond to obey your Majeſties commands. The firſt accuſes none but the Winds. And had I been guilty of what I am accus'd, I ſhould never have ventur'd my ſelf into your hands ſo far off from your Power. But, Sir, my Accuſers have one advantage which I have not; they ſpeak your Language, I underſtand it not, nor how to make you apprehend the truth of my juſtification. Allow me eight Months to learn the Speech of your Country, and then, if you will be ſo gratious as to hear me, I make no doubt but to confound my Accuſers, and to ſatisfie your Majeſty in all things.

The Emperour was ſurpriz'd, and mov'd with his Anſwer, but more eſpecially at his requeſt of eight Months to learn the Japonick Language. I grant it thee, ſaid the Emperour, for it is but juſt that a perſon accus'd ſhould have both the Liberty and means to do it. And in the mean time I will take care that thou be honourably entertain'd in all places where thou haſt a deſire to reſide.

The Admiral us'd this Liberty with ſo much prudence, and got ſo much the love of the Courtiers by his carriage and his liberality, that by their converſe, he not only learnt the Language, but by vertue of their good Character, the Emperour would often ſend for him, and ask him ſeveral Queſtions concerning our Europe, in reference to the Qualities of the Countries, the Manners of the People, the ſeveral Forms of Government, the Extent of the ſeveral Kingdoms, their Riches, Strength, and War-like Diſcipline; of all which, the Admiral gave him ſo handſome an Accompt, that the Prince took great delight in his Diſcourſe. And at length he had gain'd ſo much the favour and confidence of the Emperour, that he utterly laid aſide all the ill thoughts which he had of him, and condemn'd to Death, as a falſe Witneſs, and a Traducer, the Japoneſe that had accus'd him.

After ſo fortunate an eſcape, the Admiral thought it but common prudence to make a fair retreat in the Grandeur of his Reputation, and thereupon he took leave of the Emperour, who loaded him with Honours and Preſents. The Courtiers were alſo ſorry for his departure, ſo that ſome of them accompany'd him back, and took order for his entertainment, which was very magnificent all the way to Nangiſaqui, where he took Shipping a few days after, and return'd to Batavia.

All the People throng'd to the Port to ſee him when he Landed. He told them in few words the ſucceſs of his Voyage. Some applauded his ingenuity and courage; others extoll'd the Service which he had done the Company and Nation. The Council receiv'd him alſo with thanks and praiſes, and gave him all the Gold and Plate which he had brought back. A while after he departed for Amſterdam, where he was no ſooner arriv'd, but he preſented a Petition to the States General againſt the East-India Company, for ſending him back to Japon, and for reparation of the violence and injury done him. The buſineſs was long in debate, but at laſt the Company was condemn'd to pay him great damages, and Intereſt for the ſame.

But to return to the Preſident: He began now to be weary of being confin'd to one Factory, though he made up his Pack well enough where he was. But his Ambition carry'd him farther, and he thought he had done Service enough to be advanc'd to a higher Dignity. Neither ther was his preſence ſo neceſſary at Japon, where he had ſettl'd the Dutch Trade in as good a condition as it could well be. And in truth, the Hollanders had then almoſt the whole Trade of the Eaſt-Indies. They had taken from the Engliſh, Formoſa, Amboyna, and Pooleron, and by that means engroſs'd all the Trade of Cloves, Mace, and Nutmegs. They had taken Eaton by ſurprize. The Inhabitants of the Celebes, Ternate, and Tidor, were become their Vaſſals, and the King of Macaſſar having made an Alliance with them, had expell'd the Portugueſes out of his Dominions. By means of their Factories in Sumatra, they had got all the Pepper Trade of the Weſtern Coaſt of that Iſland into their hands, beſides ſeveral other advantages which they had in ſeveral other places, where they had encroach'd upon the Portugals, Spaniards, and the Engliſh themſelves. The Eaſt-India Company at that time entertain'd 140 Ships, part Men of War, and part Merchant-men, provided with great Guns, Ammunition, and Proviſion of all ſorts, and in theſe Ships above 6000 Men, part Souldiers, part Mariners. Batavia was the Soul of their Conqueſts, made upon the Ruins of the Portugueſes, which had they lain all together, would have made a large Empire, and by which they might have grown infinitely rich, had not the expences of their Navies and Souldiers eaten out the gains of their vaſt Trade. One of their wiſeſt Generals told me frequently, We have, ſaid he, but too many Fortreſſes, we need no more then the Cape of Good Hope, and Batavia, Factories well ſettl'd, good Ships, and honeſt Men to ſerve us. For in ſhort, their Officers pillage unmercifully, and cauſe the Commerce and Dominion of their Country-men to be deteſted by the Indians, through their Covetouſneſs and Cruelty.

I know my ſelf, that in the year 1664, the Expences of the Hollanders in the Eaſt-Indies amounted, communibus annis, to twelve Millions a year, not to reckon Shipwracks, decay of Ships, and waſt of Goods, and yet their Cargo's for Aſia and Europe have not amounted to above ten Millions; and ſometimes the Cargo's are ſo mean, that the Receits do not anſwer the Expences. Nevertheleſs their perſeverance and courage were worthy of admiration. For what could be more to be admir'd, then to ſee that a ſmall number of Merchants, aſſembled at firſt upon the ſingle ſcore of Trade, ſhould afterwards preſume to make War in Regions ſo far diſtant, aſſail ſo many Princes and Nations, plant ſo many Colonies, beſiege ſo many Cities and Forts, and laſtly, ſet forth ſo many Navies at ſuch prodigious Expences, that it would put many potent Soveraigns to a plunge to do as they did?

This was the Eſtate of the Holland Eaſt-India Company, at what time the Preſident, the principal Subject of this Relation, was recall'd from Japon to Batavia, there to take upon him the Office of Chief Director. He carry'd thither great ſtore of Wealth, and built ſeveral magnificent Houſes in the City. His Authority alſo was very large; but he exercis'd it according to his uſual cuſtom, and was hated by all the Officers of the Company, and the Citizens themſelves. He thought himſelf ſecure of the Employment of General, but he was deceiv'd in his hopes; upon which he took pet, and return'd for Amſterdam, where he liv'd quietly for ſome years. At length his turbulent and ambitious Spirit put him upon new Deſigns, to revenge the injury which he thought he had receiv'd. To which purpoſe he return'd to the Indies. His undertaking was not ſo proſperous for thoſe that employ'd him, and who merited to have have been better ſerv'd. He pillag'd, couzen'd, and caus'd ſeveral diſorders in their affairs, and at length returning home again, periſh'd in the River of Lisbon with his Money and Jewels, as hath been already related.

The End of the Firſt Part.

A RELATION OF

What paſs'd in the Negotiation of the DEPUTIES

Which were ſent to

PERSIA and the INDIES,

As well on the behalf of the KING, as of the FRENCH COMPANY, for the ſettling of Trade.

IN the Relation which I have undertaken, I ſhall make a faithful Report of things in ſuch manner as I ſaw them tranſacted by the Deputies ſent to Perſia, and the Indies, as well on the behalf of the King, as of the French Company, for the ſettlement of Trade.

The Thirteenth of July, 1665. the Sieur Lalin, Gentleman in Extraordinary to the King, and the Sieur de la Boulaye, a Centleman of Anjou, with the Sieurs Beber, Mariage, and du Pont, Deputies of the new French Company, for the ſettling of Trade in Perſia and the Indies, arriv'd at Iſpahan, and took up their Lodgings at Zulpha, being the Suburbs of the ſame City, where alſo at that time liv'd the Sieur L'Eſtoile, a French Merchant. Lalin and Boulaye, without ſaying any thing to the Deputies, deliver'd to L' Eſtoile the Letters which Monſieur de Lyonne had written to him; the Inſcription whereof was thus. To Mr. L' Eſtoile, firſt Valet du Chambre to the King of Perſia, or in his abſence, to Mr. Logis, his Son in Law. Which was not a little to be admir'd at by the Franks, who had ſojourn'd any time in that Country, to find that Monſier Boulaye, who had been before in Perſia, and ſhould have better underſtood the Cuſtom of the Court, ſhould be no better able to inſtruct a Secretary of State, then to let him give L' Eſtoile the Title of Valet du Chambre to the King of Perſia, who who has none to ſerve him in his Chamber but Eunuchs, and never ſuffers a Chriſtian to touch his Habits, for fear of being defil'd.

The purport of the Letters, was to admoniſh L'Eſtoile to ſupport, aſſiſt, and protect the Deputies in the Buſineſs upon which the Company had ſent them; and in caſe of loſſes by the way, to furniſh them with ſuch neceſſaries as they ſhould want.

The King of Perſia was then three days journey from Iſpahan; for which reaſon a Meſſenger was diſpatch'd with a Letter to the Nazar, or Grand Maſter of the Houſe, and another to the Mirzateker, or his Lieutenant, to know whether his Majeſty would command them to wait on him there, or whether they ſhould expect his return to Iſpahan.

In the mean while the Deputies could not agree amongſt themſelves: For the three Merchants Beber, Mariage, and du Pont affirm'd, that the two Gentlemen were only intereſted by the by in this Negotiation; and that having no right to take cognizance of the Affairs of the Company, they ought not to trouble themſelves any farther, then the King's Letters directed them, in the affairs of the Company. That the Effect of the King's Letters was no more, then that two Gentlemen, deſirous to ſee the Court of Perſia, were joyn'd with the Deputies of the Company; and therefore it belong'd to them only to treat with the Miniſters of the King of Perſia. That the Gentlemen had no more to do then to deliver the King of France's Letter to the Perſian King, and to deſire a nomination of Commiſſioners to treat with the Deputies. This conteſt, which all the Franks in vain endeavour'd to compoſe, came at length to the Nazar's Ears; who was ſtrangely ſurpriz'd at it, having then a deſign to procure an Order from the King to remove out of Iſpahan and the Suburbs, all the Chriſtians of what opinion ſoever, and place them over againſt Zulpha.

However, the Deputies rais'd new objections and difficulties every day; which Father Raphael of Mans, Superiour of the Order of Capuchins in Perſia, employ'd all his credit and induſtry to accommodate. He wrote them out ſeveral forms of a Letter, which they were to ſend to the Nazar; but thoſe that pleas'd the one Party, did not like the other. At length Father Raphael, weary of ſcribling and altering, amending and correcting, and all to no purpoſe; told them ſeriouſly, they did ill to act in ſuch a manner, and to inſiſt upon idle formalities; that the Perſian Style, wherein they ought to write to the Nazar, ought to be conciſe and plain, without ſuperfluities, or impertinencies; and laſtly, that all their contentions did but redound to the diſadvantage of the Company, whoſe Intereſts they pretended to manage. After ſeveral conteſts, Father Raphael, at laſt, finiſh'd the Letter to the content of both Parties, which was tranſcrib'd into the Perſian Language; with another to the Mirzateker, and both were diſpatch'd away. The Nazar having read it, preſently inform'd the King of the French Companies deſign, and of the arrival of the Deputies. His Majeſty commanded him to let them know that they were welcome, and that in a ſhort time, he would return to Iſpahan, and give them Audience.

Some few dayes after, the Court return'd to Iſpahan, and while the King ſtopp'd at one of his Houſes near the Gates of the City, the Nazar ſent for Father Raphael, to know of him who the French Deputies were, and who had ſent them into Perſia, to which the Father gave him the beſt ſatisfaction he could. For the Nazar wonder'd that they were come into the Kingdom, and ſent, as they ſaid, from ſuch a potent Prince, and yet that the Governours of Erivan and Tauris ſhould know nothing of their paſſage through thoſe Cities. The Athemadoulet alſo was in the ſame Aſtoniſhment; and it gave them reaſon to ſuſpect both the Quality of their Perſons, and the Reality of their Commiſſion. For either they were ignorant of the cuſtom of the Country, or elſe they did ill to travel incognito, like ordinary Tradeſmen, and Perſons of mean condition. But Father Raphael having aſſur'd them, that they were ſent by the King of France to ſettle a Company of Trade, and that he had Letters of Advice thereof out of Europe, the Nazar bid Father Raphael tell the Deputies they ſhould be in a readineſs, for that the King would give them Audience in a few days.

But the former miſunderſtanding, ſtill continuing between the Gentlemen and Deputies, Father Raphael fearing ſome miſchievous conſequence of it in the preſence of the King, or that they ſhould make ſome diſpute for priority, the Father repreſented to the Nazar, that whereas the Deputies were of two Orders, the one of Gentlemen, and the other of Merchants; therefore to take away all ſuſpition of jealouſie, it would do well, that His Majeſty would be pleas'd when he admitted them to their Audience, to permit the Gentlemen their ſeats on the one ſide, and the Merchants on the other. Which the Nazar approv'd, and the King allow'd of the ſame day.

The 27th of September, the King being at his Palace of Scader-Abbas, upon the bank of the River, between the Bridge of Zulpha, and the Bridge of Schiras, caus'd a preparation of Artificial Fire-works to be made, which came to above 2000 l. and early in the Morning caus'd notice to be given, that he intended that day to give audience to the King of France's Deputies. Father Raphael alſo had Order to be ready with the Deputies, to the end, the Mehemender, or Maſter of the Ceremonies, might not be oblig'd to wait. Accordingly that very day the Mehemender came to L'Eſtoile's Houſe, and from thence conducted the Deputies, with all their Train, and the reſt of the Franks then reſident in thoſe parts all mounted on Horſe-back, with a march ſo ſlow and grave, and for the advantage of the ſight ſo far about, that it was almoſt Night before they arriv'd at Scader-Abbas; at what time the Mehemender enter'd the Palace alone, leaving the Merchants at the Door. In the mean while, the Merchants believing that Father Raphael did not favour them ſo much as the Gentlemen, cry'd out aloud, that they would have an Interpreter alſo for themſelves, or elſe would go no farther. Father Raphael, who acted only by the Nazar's Order, and for the advantage of the French Nation, told them, that whither they went any farther or no it was all one to him: that for his part he was not there as an Interpreter, either for the one or the other, but only in obedience to the King's commands.

In the mid'ſt of this debate the Mehemender return'd to carry the Deputies to their Audience; five hundred Muſketeers being rank'd in order upon the bank of the River, to give them a Volley as they paſs'd along. The Mehemender's march at firſt was ſlow and grave, but approaching the place where the King was, and from whence he had a view of the Deputies, he caus'd them to double their pace to the foot of the Steps, where the Lackeys took off their Shooes, and from thence they proceeded into the Hall of Audience, where the Kans, and other great Lords were ſitting.

ſitting. Upon each ſide ſtood the Youth of Quality, ſumptuouſly clad in Tiſſue of Gold and Silver, their Cloaks and Mantles being lin'd with Martins, Sables, and other rich Furs. The Deputies being come into the King's preſence, the Mehemender caus'd them to kneel, and bow their Heads to the Ground three times: That done, he caus'd them to riſe, and lead up Lalin by the hand alone, as being the perſon who had in charge the preſenting of the Letter to the King. After him follow'd Boulaye, and the reſt of the Deputies, and thus they mounted up to the place where ſate the Athemadoulet, and the Nazar. The King was ſeated upon a Scaffold ſomewhat higher then the reſt, encompas'd with 150 young Gentlemen magnificently clad, to whom the Sieur Lalin, at the head of the Deputies, made his compliments in French, and then humbly preſented the Kings Letter, ſeal'd with a flat Seal upon a flying Label, enclos'd in an Embroider'd Box, with the Arms of France and Navar, in relief, upon the Lid. Father Raphael explain'd to the King the effect of Lalin's Speech. After which the King gave a little bow with his Head, and at the ſame time gave a ſign to the Maſter of the Ceremonies to carry them back to their places. Being come to the bottom of the Hall, where the Officers had Order to ſeparate the Gentlemen from the Merchants, the Officers by miſtake put Boulaye with two of the Merchants, and Mariage one of the Merchants with Lalin, which made Boulaye cry out aloud in the Turkiſh Language Menbeg-Zaddè, I am a Gentleman; but the thing being done, and the King being preſent, there was no help. Then the Perſian Muſick began to play for a quarter of an Hour; which having given over, the Maſter of the Ceremonies came again, and carried up Father Raphael, and the two Gentlemen, as he ſuppos'd, of which Mariage by the forementioned miſtake happen'd to be one, again to the King: at what time Lalin with a comely grace made his Harangue, and ſet forth the occaſion of his Deputation to His Majeſty, of which His Majeſty teſtifi'd his good liking by a nod of his Head. For Lalin had a handſom preſence, and ſpake with an acceptable Tone, and his magnificent Habit very much added to the comely Air of his Perſon. The Speech was expounded by Father Raphael; which when he had done, the King ask'd the Deputies ſeveral Queſtions, and then with his hand made them a ſign to retire to their places, beck'ning at the ſame time to Father Raphael to ſtay; and cauſing him to come near him, more particularly inform'd himſelf of the Power of the King of France, the Extent of his Dominions, his Military Diſcipline, and his Councils: of all which the Father gave him the beſt accompt he could, and then with the King's leave, retir'd to his place. This Scene being over, a Flagon of Gold, and a Glaſs were ſent to the Deputies, attended with a ſhort Banquet of Fruits, and other ſorts of Food; the Inſtrumental and Vocal Muſick playing all the while. Which being over, the King again ſent for Lalin, Mariage, and Father Raphael, and after a ſhort Diſcourſe, having diſmiſs'd all but father Raphael, he fell into a diſpute with him touching the Unity of the Divine Nature, the neceſſity of one Prophet, and how Mahomet was the Seal and Crown of all Prophets. He ſeem'd to admire that the Franks, who had the Reputation of being People of Wit and Diſcretion, could think Jeſus Chriſt to be a God: to all which particulars, the Father endeavour'd to give the King the beſt ſatisfaction he could. But then, Father Raphael being deſirous that the three Deputies ſhould partake of the King's favour as the other two had done. Whereupon the King ſent for the other three Deputies, and having diſcours'd a while with Boulaye, while Father Raphael interpreted between them, in a ſhort while he diſmiſs'd them all again, but Father Raphael, with whom he enter'd into a more jocular Diſcourſe then the former, of the Colours, Black and White, and of the Beauty of the French Women, the King confeſſing that naturally he did not love Brown Women, the White complection being more agreeable to him, as being that complexion which alone compos'd the Beauty of Women. The Father modeſtly made his anſwer, that Beauty conſiſted only in fancy; for that the Perſians lov'd thick and full Eyebrows, which were not at all eſteem'd in France. Then the King caſting his Eyes upon the Box wherein the King of France's Letter lay, he took out the Letter, and obſerving it to be a ſmall piece of Parchment, and not ſuch a one as he had receiv'd from ſeveral Princes and Potentates of Europe, nor indeed like thoſe which the Jeſuits had brought him formerly from the King of France himſelf, in a fair piece of Parchment, with a large Seal deep cut, he gave evident Demonſtrations of his contempt of it, and was about to have thrown it away. Father Raphael perceiv'd him to be out of humour, to whom the King in purſuance of his diſlike, ſaid, Raphael, I never receive open Letters without a Seal, take it, and let me ſee it no more, for I do not believe it comes from ſo great a King as the King of France, and at the ſame time made him a ſign to retire. He durſt do no otherwiſe then take the Letter, and ſo returning to his place, he told both Lalin and Mariage what had paſs'd in his Diſcourſe between him and the King. Two hours, after that, were ſpent in beholding the Mummeries of their common Dancers, a paſtime very uſual in Perſia. Which being over, the King ſent again for Lalin, Mariage, and the Father; and after ſome few Queſtions, to whith they gave the beſt Anſwers they could, he again diſmiſs'd both the Deputies, retaining only Father Raphael with him. The Father, then taking his opportunity, told the King, that he had always obſerv'd it to be the cuſtom of the Athemadoulet to cauſe the Letters, which the European Princes ſent His Majeſty, to be interpreted in his preſence. And therefore, added the Father, I beſeech Your Majeſty to permit me to give the King of France's Letter to the Athemadoulet, to the end, it may be truly interpreted to him according to uſual cuſtom. Thereupon the King made a ſign to the Father to give it him, and glad he was to be ſo rid of it. The Father obſerving the King in a good humour, ſpoke to him in behalf of the other three Deputies, that he would be pleas'd to admit them to be ſent for a ſecond time, in regard the others had been ſent for three times. But the King told him, it was enough for him to ſpeak to the Gentlemen, let his Miniſters talk with the Merchants. The Father being then diſmiſs'd, he ſent for Lalin alone, for whom he ſhew'd himſelf to have a very great kindneſs and affection; and at the ſame time commanded the Nazar to bring him the next day, together with Father Raphael, and Lagis the Geneveſe, who was retain'd in his Service, to Court, for that he intended to be merry with them. Then he went on, and told Lalin, that ſo ſoon as the French Ships were arriv'd, he would ſend an Embaſſadour to the King of France, and make a ſtrict Alliance with him. Lalin reply'd, that His Majeſty of France deſir'd nothing more. Why then, reply'd the King, is not my Alliance ſuffi-

ſhould

cient, but that you muſt go ſeek the Alliance of the Blacks, from whom you will not draw thoſe advantages, with which you flatter your ſelves? For you muſt know, that the Deputies kept their affairs ſo ſecret, that no body knew of them but all the World, the Servants as well as the Maſters. Not conſidering, that the Perſians are good Politicians, and that that Court is never without Spies. Therefore the King knew, that as ſoon as the Deputies had diſpatch'd at his Court, they were to depart for the Indies, with which Nation he keeps no good Correſpondence. And for that reaſon, he was not a little offended with them, though they endeavour'd to perſuade him, that their Errand to the Indies was only for Linnen and Spices.

The Deputies preſented to the King a very fair Fuzee, together with the Kings Picture, in little, drawn to the Life, which was ſo much the more eſteem'd, becauſe at the ſame time ſeveral large Cuts had been brought to Iſpahan, and preſented to the King, which perfectly agreed with the Picture in Oyl, by which the whole Court was convinc'd that it was the real Portraiture of the King. When theſe Preſents were laid before the King, he ask'd the Deputies, for which of the Eaſtern Nations the French had moſt affection; to whom M. Lalin made anſwer, that certainly for the Perſian; thereupon the King return'd, that certainly they had reaſon; for that the Perſians were white, like the French, and that it was impoſſible for them to have any affection for the Indians who were black.

At length the King, to ſhew the Deputies his higheſt favour, would have them drink the HEZARD PICHE, in a golden Cup, which holds about a Pint of Paris. He order'd the Wine to be the ſame which he drank himſelf, which was in a Bottle of Chryſtal Glaſs, ſtudded with Diamonds. Lalin drank couragiouſly, and ſo did Mariage; but Father Raphael made a fair excuſe, and got off. After midnight the Zerhaftes, or Table-Cloaths of Cloth of Gold were ſpread upon the Floor, and ſeveral roaſted Viands very hot of the Spice, and Diſhes of Salt Fiſh, purchas'd from the Caſpian Sea, were brought and ſet upon the Cloaths; together with ſeveral Paſtrie Meats, dry'd Raiſins, Comfits, Almonds, and Piſtaches, and other provocatives to drink. The repaſt being ended, ſeveral Buffons were brought in, who Sung and Danc'd after the Turkiſh faſhion, and made a hundred wry Mouths and ugly Faces. Among the reſt of the Divertiſements, there were two Men introduc'd, that play'd one againſt another with each a Battoon in his hand, with a piece of Linnen dipt in Naphta, ty'd to the end of the Stick, which caſt forth a very clear brightneſs in the dark; at the ſame time four artificial Whirle-Winds were made to riſe one after another, which were all hovering in the Air at once, and in a continual Agitation.

Three Hours after Midnight the Maſters of the Ceremonies came to raiſe the Deputies to take leave of the King; and ſo leading them to the lower end of the Hall, after a profound reverence, they retir'd, not one perſon beſide ſtirring out of his place, to the end they might have time to take their Shoes without confuſion. When they were gone, the King diſmiſs'd the Court, and then it is that the croud is ſo great, that not one in twenty but loſes their own, and gets whoſe-ever Shoes he can lay his hands on.

The Deputies and Father Raphael being upon their return home, by that time they got half way, met an Officer belonging to the Athemadoulet, who who told Father Raphael that his Maſter expected the French Begzades at his Houſe by Ten a Clock next Morning, to treat them, by his Majeſties Order.

Father Raphael, Lalin, and Boulaye, were punctual to their time, and no ſooner did the Athemadoulet know of their arrival, but he came down into his Hall of Audience, to receive them, where he had alſo order'd a very fair Banquet to be ready for their entertainment. There Father Raphael left them, while he went with the Athemadoulet's Secretary, to Tranſlate the King of France's Letter into the Perſian Language; which being finiſh'd, and he come again into the Hall, after ſeveral Civilities paſt on both ſides, the Father and the Deputies return'd to Zulpha.

The Merchant Deputies offended at the Honour which the Gentlemen had receiv'd, would have gone in their Turn; but Father Raphael told them, that it was not the Cuſtom in Perſia to viſit the Prime Miniſter, without being ſent for. In the Evening, Father Raphael, and the Begzades received new Orders to attend the King, but the King ſtirr'd not out that Evening, ſo that their Journey was in vain.

The Merchants ſtill perceiving the Honours which were done the Gentlemen, and believing Father Raphael to be the cauſe of all, they began to rail at him, and give him foul Language, and threaten'd to write into France to give an accompt of his behaviour. Father Raphael netled at the Language of the Deputies, told them, that he had done what in him lay to procure them the ſame Honours, which the others had receiv'd, though they were ſo little ſenſible of it. That he would continue his endeavours for the Advancement of their Affairs, though not for their own ſakes, yet for the ſake of the Company, that had ſent them. Which anſwer, though it were ſharp enough, and ſhew'd that the Father was angry, yet he did not forget, that they were his Countrymen; ſo that he ventur'd to carry them twice to the Prime Miniſter of his own accord, contrary to the Cuſtom. The firſt time he was not to be ſpoken with. The ſecond time, he made an Errant to him with the three Deputies, to preſent him a Copy of the Letter from the Directors of the Company, in the Perſian Language; at which time he ſhew'd them the Deputies, acquainting him withal that thoſe were the Perſons with whom he was to treat in point of Trade. To which the Athemadoulet reply'd, that he had no Commiſſion from the King to meddle with thoſe Deputies, but only, to entertain the Begzade that brought the King's Letter, which he had already done. Thereupon the Father deſir'd him he would be pleas'd to ſpeak to the King to nominate Commiſſioners to treat with them, which the Athemadoulet promis'd to do. That day in the evening, a Meſſenger was ſent to Father Raphael, to acquaint him, that the King had appointed the Nazar to treat with the Deputies the next day, and to know their demands. Of which the Father gave the Deputies quick intelligence.

The next day, being the Firſt of September, Father Raphael fail'd not to be with the Deputies very early in the Morning, to bring them to the Nazar; but he was very much ſurpriz'd to ſee, that they would not go altogether, but ſtill look with an evil Eye one upon another, and continued their former differences. To the end therefore that he might ſet things to rights, he went to the Nazar, and told him, that he thought it would be the beſt way for the Merchants Deputies to come firſt,

firſt, becauſe that they were the Perſons with whom he was chiefly to Treat. The Nazar anſwer'd, that the King underſtood that they were all five in the ſame Commiſſion joyntly. To which, when the Father anſwer'd the ſecond time, that it would be the beſt way to do as he had propos'd; The Nazar with a Surly Countenance, why, What's the matter now? ſaid he to the Father; Are not you French-men aſham'd to be thus at odds one with another, and to give all the World, nay the very Foot-boys occaſion to diſcourſe of your Diviſions? What would they have us think of them and their Commiſſion? Are they ſo little afraid of offending the King? Or, is their King more indulgent then the King of Perſia, who would never pardon ſuch faults in his Subjects? To this rebuke the Father made no reply. Only he deſir'd the Nazar, that he might have two Horſe-men to attend the Deputies at Zulpha, telling the Nazar not a word of his deſign to bring the Merchants an Hour ſooner then the Gentlemen. This fell out to the Fathers deſire; For the Father ſent one of the Horſe-men to Zulpha, to the Gentlemen, with order to drink with them, and not to be over haſty, but to bring them fair and ſoftly along with him; with the other he made haſt to the Merchant Deputies, and cauſing them to double their pace, they got betimes to the Nazar's Houſe, where they were civilly receiv'd. Dupont preſented the Nazar with the Deputies Commiſſion, tranſlated into the Perſian Language; after which they fell into a diſcourſe, which laſted above three quartes of an Hour, concerning the Cuſtoms, Tolls, and Quality of the Merchants, and the juſtneſs of the French in their Dealing. They had juſt finiſh'd their Diſcourſe of Trade, when the Nazar was advertiz'd, that the three Gentlemen were arriv'd; who thereupon deſir'd Father Raphael to go and receive them. The Father went and waited upon them in, neatly chiding them for having ſtay'd ſo long; and making the Nazar wait. Well ſaid he, now you are together, go into that Cabinet, and write down your demands, and the Articles of your Commiſſion. The Merchant Deputies, which had now diſcours'd with the Nazar what they had to ſay, were well enough content to enter into a General Conference with the Gentlemen. Then calling for Pen, Ink and Paper, they made a draught of their Demands, the chief of which were, three Years Immunity from Cuſtoms and Tolls, to begin from the time of the arrival of our Ships; and that after that, they ſhould enjoy all the Priviledges and Favours granted to other Nations. They alſo deſir'd precedence above all other Nations, when they ſhould be call'd to Court, as they ſuggeſted, that they had at the Court of the Grand Signior. And laſtly, they requir'd a Houſe for thoſe that belong'd to the Company, to live in the City.

Theſe demands were dictated word for word by Father Raphael, to the Nazars Secretary, in the Name of all the five Gentlemen; and becauſe the Nazar's Secretary knew not how to pronounce them, the Father undertook to write them in the Perſian Character; which being done, and the writing read in the hearing of the Deputies, the Nazar took the Paper to preſent to the King.

Thus after a fair Banquet, accompany'd with Muſic, both Vocal and Inſtrumental, the Deputies were diſmiſs'd by the Nazar, who bid them rely upon his care; for that he would do them all the Favour that lay in his pow'r, and give them his Majeſties Anſwer in a ſhort time. The Deputies very well ſatisfy'd with the Nazar's reception, ſent him afterwards a Preſent, which was a Shame both to the Nation and the Company, that pretended to ſuch great and high things, and endeavour'd to fix an opinion of their Wealth and Grandeur among Strangers. For they ſent him only a Tin Cup Enamel'd, and eight little Caſes of Perſpectives, or Looking-Glaſſes, the whole not amounting to above 40 Crowns. They alſo made much ſuch another Preſent, but meaner, to the Mirzateker, conſiſting of about a Dozen Pair of Gilt Sciſſars for Women. We muſt ſpeak the Truth: For they were not a little laught at for their ridiculous Preſents, which were the Scorn and Contempt of thoſe that receiv'd them, when the Deputies were gone.

To Father Raphael they preſented a Purſe, with 40 Tomans, or Six Hundred Crowns in it, believing that he would never accept of it; and indeed he refus'd it with ſcorn; not a little angry with them, that they ſhould have ſuch mean thoughts of him, as to believe him Mercenary.

Two days after, the Nazar gave notice to the Father, that the King had granted the French their Demands; and had order'd every one of them a Calaat, or a Veſt-Royal, and in reſpect of Superiority, a Horſe for Monſieur Lalin. That the Kings Anſwer and the Grant were both ready for the Directors of the Company, according to their deſire.

The King was then onward upon a journey to Mazandran, three days Travel from Iſpahan, at one of his Palaces, call'd Tajabat. A Pleaſant Situation, in the mid'ſt of a great Valley, ſhaded with Trees, and full of Villages.

The Ninth of October, came a Letter from the Nazar, to Father Raphael, ſignifyiug the King's Pleaſure, that both he and the Deputies ſhould repair to Tajabat with all ſpeed. Thereupon the Father and they made ſuch haſt, that in leſs than three days they got to Tajabat, where the Nazar order'd them to lye in the Houſe of an Armenian Renegado. The King ſent them immediately eight or ten bottles of Wine, with four Gold Diſhes, full of lovely Fruits, and Tapiſtries for their Dining Room. But theſe Preſents occaſion'd new Quarrels; For there being two Factions, and both living apart, there was a great diſpute who ſhould have this preſent. Father Raphael, having done all that poſſible he could to reconcile the buſineſs, and not being able to perſuade them, in a juſt Paſſion, bid them take their Swords and Piſtols, and go and decide the Quarrel in the Field. Till now, ſaid he, I have done all I could to conceal your deteſtable diviſions from the Court, which nevertheleſs, is but too well acquainted therewith: Is it your deſign to publiſh your own Ignominy, and to make not only your ſelves, but the whole Nation of the French ridiculous to the Perſians? At length they were ſo far reconcil'd, that one Room ſerv'd them to Feed, and conſequently the ſame Furniture. For the Father's reproofs had put them a little out of Countenance.

The Seventeenth of October, the Mehemander came to the Deputies Lodgings, and brought five Royal Veſts; The Richeſt, which was of Tiſſue of Gold, was for Monſieur Lalin; the next, not altogether ſo rich, for Monſieur Boulaye; and the other three of a lower price, for the Merchants. The value of the whole might amount to 600 Crowns, for which the French Deputies moſt generouſly gave the Officers that brought them 25 or 30 Crowns, as a Gratuity. The Officers of the Stable alſo brought two Horſes for the Gentlemen, for which they receiv'd ſix Crowns in Gold, as a reward. I confeſs, I ſhould have been aſham'd of ſuch a poorneſs of Spirit, at ſuch a time as that.

Stable

At length alſo the Ragan or Patent for the Company was deliver'd into the Hands of the Deputies, faithfully Tranſlated by Father Raphael to this Effect.

" That whereas the Merchants of the Kingdom of France, who are " favour'd by the Favour extreemly Royal, and the Juſtice exceſſively " Royal, being made conſtant in the hope and participation in the " time, have preſented their Petition, which is arriv'd at the Ear " of the Miniſters Commiſſioners for the Court of Grandeur and high " Fortune; Their Intentions and Demands have found the Viſage of " Acceptation, and we have ſtrictly commanded, that the Conſervatours " of Rights, Tolls and Priviledges, acknowledge them for exempt " and priviledg'd, during the ſpace of Three Years; and that there be " nothing demanded upon their Goods and Factories, conformable to " the requeſt of the Deputies, &c.

The next day, the Mehemander Bachi, came early in the Morning to attend the Deputies, and bring them with all ſpeed to the Court: Where being admitted into the Garden, they met the King a Horſe-back, and all the Court a Foot. The Athemadoulet held the King's Anſwer to the King of France, in a Bag of Cloth of Gold, Seal'd with the Kings Seal upon red Spaniſh Wax. The Sieur Lalin then, and the reſt of the Deputies were order'd to go neer and Kiſs the Kings Boot, who kept his Grandeur, without ſpeaking a word. When they had ſo done, the Athemadoulet calling them to him, there, ſaid he, there is the Anſwer for the Grand Cha, that is, for the King of the Kings of France. The Deputies having made their Obeyſances to the King, the whole Court took Horſe; and the King took the Road of Cachan; and within an Hour, that Campaign, which look'd like a thick peopl'd City, became as Deſert as the moſt part of Perſia.

The Deputies, having read over the Patent, began to find many defects, and Mariage would fain have follow'd the Court for amendments, and would have perſuaded Lalin and Father Raphael to have gone along with him. But Father Raphael over-perſuaded them to return firſt to their Lodgings at Zulpha, and there to hear the Patent diſtinctly read over, and to conſider better of it. When they came to Zulpha, and that they had debated upon the meer Letter of the Patent, then they were worſe mad then they were before. Then there were ſo many Cavils, ſo many Diſputes, ſo many Exceptions, and ſo many Expoſitions put upon the Words Conformably and Reaſonably, that they muſt get a Horſe back immediately. Boulaye ſtopp'd this fury for a while; So that after many Diſputes and Conſultations, it was agreed, that Mariage, as chief of the Negotiation, and Lalin, ſhould follow the Court; and that Boulaye, Breber, and Dupont, ſhould proceed forward to the Indies. The Sieur L'Eſtoile, and all the reſt of the Franks, were of opinion, that Lalin ſhould forthwith depart for France, with the King's Letter. But their Counſel was not follow'd, and ſo the Deputies divided themſelves: Lalin and Mariage to follow the Court, which was then remov'd as far as Mazandran: And the other three to purſue their Journey to the Eaſt Indies. The two former fain would have had Father Raphael have accompany'd them to the Court; but he fairly excus'd himſelf.

Neither would L'Eſtoile permit his Son, to whom he allow'd 20 Tomans a Year, to return to the Court, chooſing rather to ſend him to Bander with the other three. Whereupon, the Seventeenth of November, they ſet forward upon their Journey.

Du Pont, without doubt, was the moſt ſolid and judicious of all the Merchants, but he took it ſo to heart, to ſee the diſ-union among them, that he fell into a languiſhing Diſeaſe at Iſpahan, and dy'd not far from Schiras.

As for Lalin and Mariage, they left Iſpahan the Fifteenth of December, and arriv'd at Court ſoon after, where they lay a long time neglected, their Diviſions ſtill continuing, which made them contemptible to the Perſians, and ruin'd the Affairs of the Company. One Evening, the Nazar ſent them a Flow'r, adviſing them, that as that Flow'r never chang'd; ſo it became them not to vary in their Reſolutions. After a long and tedious ſtay, Mariage obtain'd ſome few impertinent Alterations in his Patent; and permiſſion to make Wine at Schiras, as the Engliſh, Hollanders, and Portugueſes had.

With theſe Alterations they both leave the Court; and Mariage would certainly have accompany'd Lalin, who had an intention to ſee Ardevil, Tauris, and Kom, had he not been ſolicited to return to Zulpha, by a Young Dalilah, that had ſmitten his heart. For by the means of an old Woman, the Mother of one of his Lacqueys, he had debauch'd a young Armenian Virgin, whom he kept privately to himſelf; yet not ſo privately, but the noiſe thereof was quickly ſpread all over Zulpha. All the Armenians were ſcandaliz'd at it, and ſent to ſeize the Baud, to puniſh her, by their Laws, as ſhe deſerv'd. Mariage advertiz'd thereof, flew out of his Lodging to her aſſiſtance, and to protect her from Juſtice. But ſeeing the People in an uproar, and finding the Stones to flye too thick about his Ears, he was forc'd to mind his own ſafety, and to ſeek for ſhelter in the next Houſe where he could be admitted. But the Buſineſs was not ſo put up, for the Armenians, wondring to ſee that a Deputy of an Illuſtrious Company, who was come to the Court of Perſia upon ſo ſerious an Affair, ſhould do ſo much wrong to his Nation, by publickly appearing in ſo ſhameful an Action, and ſo unworthy of a Perſon in public Employment, that they reſolv'd to proſecute him all manner of ways. They were reſolv'd, to that end, to have ſent into France an Expreſs, to have Complain'd to the King of his ill Management and bad Behaviour. But Mariage at length reſtor'd the Armenian Girl which he had kept cloſe lock'd up; after which time the Armenians never look'd upon him but with ſcorn and contempt.

Lalin being return'd to Iſpahan, departed thence the 22*th* of November, 1666. for Bander, with a Reſolution, to Travel into the Indies. But he fell ſick at Bander, and thinking to return to Schiras, for the Air's ſake, he dy'd by the way at a Village call'd Bend-Ali. A Gentleman endow'd with noble Qualities, and whoſe Gentile and Generous behaviour was an honour to his Nation.

The Thirtieth of the ſame November, Mariage alſo left Iſpahan, and departed for Bander, with one Father Mercier, a Jeſuite, whom he took along with him as his Almoner, and Lewis L'Eſtoile, his Kalmachi, or Interpreter: There he ſtay'd four Months for the arrival of the Ships, but none coming, and the heats encreaſing, he reſolv'd to ſpend the reſt of the Year at Schiras. As for the Jeſuit, and young L'Eſtoile, becauſe becauſe there was no Converſe but with the people of the Country, they return'd back to Iſpahan.

Boulaye and Beber arriv'd at Suratte the firſt of April, 1666. Being come to the Bar, they ſent to Father Ambroiſe, chief of the Miſſion of the Capuchins, who preſently attended them with a Sloop, which he had obtain'd of the Governour, and brought them home to the Capuchin's Houſe, where they ſtay'd till they departed for Agra. Sometime before was arriv'd there a Merchant of Aleppo, who had run himſelf out at heels, and of a Maronite Chriſtian was become a Roman Catholick, in hopes to patch up his broken Fortune, being in truth a meer Counterfeit, and a Hypocrite: For theſe Levantine Chriſtians ſeldom change their Religion, but upon ſome motive of Intereſt; and when they have got a good Sum together, they preſently whip back again into their own Country, and for a ſmall piece of Money obtain abſolution of their Patriarch. Thus ſeveral of the Religious Franks that travel out of Europe into Aſia are often deceiv'd, making a great noiſe of their Converſion of the Levantines, when the Converſion, at the bottom, is only an outward Converſion, and a meer piece of Gullery. Among many others that I could relate, I will only mention one, of a Franciſcan, call'd Paul Stella, who coming with 400 Crowns, or thereabouts, in his Pocket, for his ſubſiſtance, a Maronite ſmelt him out, and under the pretence of giving him the Honour of his Converſion to the Catholick Religion, never left him till he had ſuck'd him dry, and turn'd the Channel of his Money. This Maronite Merchant before mention'd, whoſe Name was Chelebi, ſhew'd himſelf very zealous for the Capuchins, and he had reaſon enough; for the Capuchins of Aleppo had been very ſerviceable to him, and had help'd him in his Affairs when they were at the loweſt ebb. They were overjoy'd at his arrival at Surat, and gave it out immediately that it was he that had given them Money for the building their Houſe and Church. But when I came to look over my Accompts, I found that the Money that had pay'd for the Ground and a good ſhare of the building, came out of my Purſe; Father Ambroiſe having promis'd that I ſhould be reimburs'd upon my return to Paris. But I never heard more of my Money, nor indeed did I ever look after it.

The reaſon why the Capuchins were willing that the Aleppo Merchant, who never had disburs'd a Peny, ſhould own the Expences of their Houſe and Church, is this; becauſe no Frangui Chriſtian is permitted in the Indies to enjoy the propriety of Houſes, or to make any reparations of thoſe which they hire, without the leave of the Governour of the place. Both the Engliſh and Holland Companies are only Leſſees to the Indians; the Great Mogul having ſuffer'd from the Chriſtians in ſeveral places, where under pretence of repairing or adorning certain Houſes, which they poſſeſs'd by way of propriety, they have ſo well fortifi'd them, that when the Governours have come to require any Duties from them, they have made them good ſo long, till they have forc'd the Governours to yield to their demands.

So ſoon as the Deputies were landed at Surat, they preſently ſpread abroad a report, that there were ſeven or eight Ships belonging to the French Company that would ſuddainly follow them. The Aleppo Merchant was overjoy'd to hear the News, and was in great hopes, that by the favour of the Capuchins, and the advantage which he had of ſpeaking ſeveral of the Aſiatick Languages, that the greateſt part of the French Merchandize would paſs through his hands. Upon theſe hopes he made great Treats, and preſented large Preſents to the Deputies, and maintain'd their Servants at his own Charges. He found the Deputies to be ſufficiently covetous, but he was ſtill in great expectations, that his civil Entertainments, and the Preſents which they receiv'd from him, would oblige them to acknowledge his kindneſs, and that one day he ſhould find himſelf repay'd by the management of their buſineſs; but he was foully miſtaken. For it coſt him above 1500 Rupies, part which he ſpent upon them himſelf at Surat, and partly what his Nephew furniſh'd them withall at Agra for their preſent occaſions.

Three or four days after their arrival at Surat, the Engliſh Preſident ſent to viſit them by ſome of his Council, and would have waited on them himſelf, but that he lay then ill of the Gout. The Holland Commander did the ſame with his Council, ſhewing all the civilities and kindneſſes that lay in his power; and a few days after invited them ſolemnly to a great Feaſt, with as many as they could bring along with them. In the midſt of their Jollity the King's Health was ſent about, and after that, the Proſperity of the French Company; which oblig'd Boulaye to begin another Health to the happy Progreſs of the Holland Company. But when it came to Mr. Beber's turn to drink it, notwithſtanding all that Boulaye, and the reſt of the Company could ſay to him, they could not oblige him to pledge it. Nay, he did worſe then this, for he threw the Glaſs, Wine, and all at his Feet; and when he had ſo done, he roſe in a heat from the Table, and after a pitiful manner left the Company, and went home to his Lodging, though without any attendance. The Hollanders were ſo diſcreet as to take little notice of his folly, but remain'd very merry at the Table with Mr. Boulaye till Midnight. But they could not forbear telling their Friends, that they wonder'd, in regard there were ſo many diſcreet and ingenious Men in France, that the Company ſhould make choice of ſuch a Fool for the management of ſuch an important Affair as he was ſent about; and that they foreſaw he would do the Company no ſmall injury.

While the Deputies ſtay'd at Surat, the Governour of the place, at the requeſt of Father Ambroiſe, entertain'd them, and ſhew'd them all the reſpect that could be ſhew'd to Strangers. One day that they were in Diſcourſe together, he told them, that if they would follow his Counſel, he adviz'd them not to go to Court till their Ships were arriv'd. But ſeeing that they were reſolv'd to the contrary, he offer'd them Money, Horſes, and Souldiers, to attend them, with Letters of Recommendation to ſome of the Grandees of the Court. The Chabander, or Provoſt of Merchants, made them the ſame offers that the Governour had done; all which they refus'd very obſtinately. More then this, they behav'd themſelves very ill, in reference to the Preſents which the Governour and the Cha-Bander ſent them, for they gave their Servants that carry'd them not a Doight, which is look'd upon as a very dirty action in the Indies. For the Indians never give their Servants any other Wages, then what they get by carrying Preſents from their Maſters. And the more they have given them, the more Honour it is, both for him that receives, and him that ſends the Preſent.

The Deputies then being reſolv'd for Agra, hir'd their Waynes, and their Oxen to carry their Luggage, and five and twenty Souldiers for their their Convoy. They likewiſe made a great noiſe, of their being honour'd from ſo Great a King, and ſo Noble a Company. Upon which ſcore, they ought to have had five or ſix Wains for their Baggage, every one their Pallaquin and a Led-horſe, and every one a Flag with their Arms or their Cyphers, which is the gentile way of Travelling in India, and as I was always wont to travel. But they took but five and twenty Souldiers, whereas they ought to have hir'd an hundred and fifty at the rate they talk'd.

But inſtead of ſo doing, three Days Journey from Surat, Beber began to quarrel with Boulaye, that they had too great a Train at their heels, for which he blam'd the Adviſe of Father Ambroiſe and the Merchant of Aleppo: That for his part he would pay for no more than four Souldiers, and that if he would not ſend the reſt back, he ſhould pay them himſelf. Upon which, they agreed to ſend back the ſix Souldiers which the Governour had order'd to attend them as far as Brampour; upon their diſmiſſment, not giving them ſo much as the Worth of a Pipe of Tobacco.

When they came to Agra, the Nephew of Chelebi, the Aleppo Merchant, fail'd not to wait upon them, and to offer them his ſervice. There was at that time a French Chirurgeon, whoſe Name was James, he ſpake good Indian, and was married in the Country to the Daughter of a Portugal: The Nahab, the King's Uncle and Grand Vizier, had a great kindneſs for this Chirurgeon; and by his procurement it was, that the Deputies had Audience of Giafer-Kan, for ſo was the Nahab call'd. They requeſted of him, that by his favour they might preſent a Letter from their King to the Great Mogul, as alſo that they might be admitted to treat concerning the Settlement of a French Trade in the Countrey. The Nahab told them, that he would ſpeak to the King, and take care that they ſhould be admitted to their Audience in a little time. With that he order'd them to be conducted to the Lodgings appointed for them, which they found ready furniſh'd with all neceſſary proviſion for the Belly; but their Lacqueys and Servants were to cook it themſelves; for it is not here as it is in Perſia, where the Meat is ſent ready dreſt out of the King's Kitchin to the Embaſſadors Table.

The Nahab, who underſtood that they had brought no Preſents, neither for him, nor any of the Grandees of the Court, nor for the King himſelf, was not over haſty to admit them to their Audience. So that it was above a Month before the Deputies could ſet Eyes upon the Nahab again, though the Chirurgeon, and other Franguis, us'd all their Intereſt in their behalf. Being very weary of this Delay, they gave it out, that they could ſtay no longer at Agra, in regard they were to be at Surat upon the Arrival of the French Veſſels. Upon which falſe Report, the Nahab ſent to them for the King their Maſter's Letter, that he might preſent it to the Great Mogul himſelf. Upon this Demand of their Letter, they were quite blank, not being acquainted with the manner how the Kings of India receive thoſe Letters which are brought them by Embaſſadors: For they never receive any with their own hands, but ſuch as come from the Grand Signior: All other Letters, according to the Grandeur of the Kings that ſend them, are put into the hands of the Grand Officers of the Court, who preſent them to the King: And the more potent the King is, from whom the Letter comes, through the fewer hands it paſſes before it is preſented to the Great Mogul. For the preſent State of Europe and Aſia is very well known in the Court of the Great Mogul, and the Difference between the Soveraigns of both, in reference to their Grandeur and Puiſſance. Neither is there a Stranger that enters into the Kingdom, of whom the Governour of the Frontier Province does not give advice to the Nahab; and if he appear to be a perſon of Ingenuity, there's no help for't, but he muſt go to Court, where he is careſs'd, on purpoſe to get information of the Country from whence he comes.

But to return to the Deputies, they obſtinately refuſ'd to ſend the Letter to the Nahab: At which he was not a little troubl'd; fearing leſt upon the Arrival of the French Veſſels, it might be the occaſion of a Rupture, and hinder the concluſion of the Treaty of Commerce. Moreover he was not a little jealous, leſt they ſhould ſeize upon the Great Mogul's Veſſels in their Voyage to Mecca, as Hugh Lambert the Holland Pyrat did, who took all the Baggage belonging to the Queen of Viſapour, when ſhe was going to Mecca and Medina. The Nahab having made theſe Reflexions to himſelf, ſo wrought with the King, that he conſented that the Deputies, contrary to cuſtom, ſhould be admitted into his preſence, there to give the Letter into the Hands of the Prime Miniſter, to be by him preſented to the King. This, as I ſaid before, was an unuſual favour; and yet the Deputies were ſo obſtinate, as to reject this Propoſition, ſaying, that they would rather return home, and carry back their Letters, then not preſent them to the King themſelves. This obſtinacy of theirs, to maintain their own conceited humour againſt the Cuſtom of the Countrey, was very much blam'd by all people, that admir'd at the patience of the Nahab, who at length ſent them word, they might take their own courſe, ſince they refuſ'd the Honours which he would have done them. After that, the Deputies ſtaid ten or twelve days in the City, flattering themſelves, that the Nahab would comply with their Folly; but they were deceiv'd. For the Nahab offended at their idle carriage, took ſuch order, that not one perſon living, either Merchant or other, went to viſit them all the while. So that they reſolv'd to return to Surat, in expectation of their Ships.

When they left Agra, they went and lay two Leagues off from the City in the Field, ſetting up one Tent apiece, (and thoſe pitiful ones Heaven knows) to ſerve for them and their Servants, whereas they might have lodg'd with more ſecurity in a fair Inn that ſtood not far off. Now it is the Cuſtom at the Great Mogul's Court, that every Night ſome Prince or great Lord keeps Guard in his turn for a Week together, having under him five or ſix thouſand Horſe, that beat the Road for three or four Leagues round the place where the King quarters. A Party of theſe Horſemen ſcouting by the Deputies Tents, and enquiring whoſe they were, one of the Servants reply'd, that they were the Tents of the French Deputies: of which the Horſemen gave immediate notice to their Captain, at that time the Grand Provoſt of the Empire. A Perſon handſom, well endow'd, and a great Lover of Strangers, who had raiſ'd himſelf by his Valour, as being an Abyſſin by Nation. So ſoon as he underſtood that they were the French Deputies, he ſent one of his principal Officers, with fifty Horſe, to deſire them to give them leave to guard them that Night, becauſe they were in no ſecurity, and for that if they came to any miſchief the Head of their Captain

Captain muſt anſwer for it. But they very ill receiv'd the kind proffer of the Provoſt, proudly anſwering, that they were ſtrong enough to guard themſelves, and the firſt that came near them ſhould know whether the French had Courage or no, adding withal, that if their Captain were afraid, they would guard him, with a deal of other ſcurrilous riffraff which very much ſurpriz'd the Officers.

The next day they ſet up their Tents about a quarter of a League farther, becauſe they expected ſomething to be brought them from Agra. The Conteval or Grand Provoſt admiring they made ſuch ſlow journeys, and that they had now pitch'd in a more dangerous place then before, ſent the ſame Horſemen with the ſame proffer, or elſe that they would be pleas'd to lye in an Inn where they might be ſafe. Boulaye was of the mind that ſo kind an offer ſhould not be refus'd: but Beber gave them nothing but bad language; reviling their Captain, that he was afraid they ſhould go and lye with his wives, offering if he pleas'd to go and guard them. He ſpoke half Portugueſe, half Italian, which being a kind of Lingua Franca, ſome of the Horſemen made a ſhift to underſtand him, and having made a report to the Grand Provoſt of his Inſolent Anſwer, the Lord was not a little nettl'd at it, and therefore reſolv'd to be reveng'd. About midnight fourſcore or a hundred Horſe came and cut all the Cords of Bebers Tent, thinking to have let it fall about his ears. But he found a way to quit himſelf by the aſſiſtance of his Servant; and endeavour'd to eſcape to the Houſe of a Dervich on the other ſide of a ſmall Rivolet, nere the place where the Tents were ſet up. But the Moon ſhining as bright as day, he could not hide himſelf from the purſuit of the Horſemen, who ſhot at him, and with their Arrows wounded him in three places, once in the thigh and twice in the buttocks. Boulaye hearing the noiſe which the Horſemen made, peep'd out of his Tent, and ſeeing ſo many Horſemen in purſuit of Beber, was not a little daunted. He was afraid of running the ſame riſco; but not having long to conſider, he took his purſe of Duckets, and fled till he got about half a league off, where he lay all night under a great Tree. But by the conſequence he found that the Horſemen had nothing to ſay to him; being ſatisfi'd when they ſaw Beber fall, as believing him dead. For had they not thought him ſo, they would never have left him, till they had quite done his buſineſs. But to colour the buſineſs, that it might not ſeem a point of revenge they broke open all Beber's Cheſts; that it might ſeem as if he had bin robb'd; but they found very little or nothing to enrich themſelves.

So ſoon as Beber's boy ſaw that the Horſemen were gone, he ran to the Town for a Pallanquin to carry his Maſter thither. Being brought to the Town they laid him in the Jeſuits houſe, where Boulaye alſo arriv'd not long after and took up his Quarters, to the great conſolation of the Jeſuits, whoſe Revenues are but ſmall in thoſe parts, where there are no devout people to leave them Legacies. Their Ordinary was very ſparing; but it was ſuch as the Deputies muſt be glad of. Though it were a feaſt for Boulaye, who was not wont to make better chear. For a Sheeps head, of his own purchaſe, uſually ſerv'd him two meals. Which made him ridiculous to the Franks, who liv'd after a more ſplendid rate. At Smyrna and Aleppo, when he was not invited by the Franguis, he had recourſe to his Sheeps tongues, or a cold piece of double Tripe, which he carri'd to the poor Cabaretts of the Greeks, taking his Chopin of Wine to wash it down: and such was his good husbandry that what was left was order'd to be set up for his supper. One day he had drank a little more then he had bled, and the Franguis found him a sleep in the street, about a hundred paces from the Cabaret. They had so much charity for him as to remove him to his lodging, lest other Nations should laugh at the choice which they had made of an Envoy to settle the Trade of such a considerable Company. As for Beber, who lov'd good Chear when it cost him nothing, as being a true exemplar of covetousness, he complain'd of the Jesuits entertainment, though they out-run the Constable to treat him like a Deputy. His man who had more wit than he, and plainly saw what a trouble he was to his Hosts, made them a merry relation of the Noble Table which his Master kept for him, how he had made provision of a Barrel of Herrings; which when Invitations fail'd, he warily fed upon, rubbing his bread with the tail to give it a haut goust. For my part, said the Boy, I am but a poor Servant, yet I have made a shift to spend an hundred and fifty Crowns which I had got in the service of the Consul of Smyrna. 'Twas my misfortune to be inveigl'd out of his service, for I was with a Noble Master where I got Money; but in this man's service I have eaten all that I had got before. Two days after I arriv'd at Agra, and heard of Beber's being wounded and where he lay, and went to give him a visit. And as I never went unprovided in my travels with all things necessary, I had some Oyntments and Plasters, which were very serviceable to him.

It was an easie thing to observe that Boulaye was glad of the opportunity of Beber's being wounded, that he might have the sole honour of giving the Letter to the King. For he pretended to be the true Envoy from the King of France, and that Beber was only sent to bear him company. La Boulaye therefore believing that the business would take effect, perswaded the Chyrurgion already mention'd to solicit the Nahab who had a kindness for him, so close, that thereby the Nahab permitted him to bring the Letter. But Boulaye who thought he should give it himself to the King, was much surpriz'd when he saw that the Nahab, who had got the Letter into his own power, gave it to one of the meanest Officers of his Court, who by the Prime Minister's order, gave it to another, and he to a third, who brought it back to the Nahab, who at length presented it to the King, but not in the presence of Boulaye.

And thus you see the Effect of the ridiculous pride of the Deputies, Boulaye was forc'd to stay in an outer Court, having two more to pass thorough before he came into the King's Quarter. Where, while he remain'd big with expectation, word was brought him, that the King would return an Answer to the King his Master, so soon as the Ships should be arriv'd; and so he was forc'd to go back to his Lodging with the melancholy dissatisfaction of a frustrate hope.

The wounded Gentleman being new cur'd, but still very lame, desir'd Audience of the Nahab, that he might have justice for the mischief done him by an Assassination and a Robbery. The Nahab readily admitted him, limping when he came into his presence worse then when he first left his bed. The first Compliment he made was of the Wounds he had receiv'd, and then he demanded satisfaction for the loss of his Blood, and the Goods which had bin stolen from him. The Nahab promis'd him to inform the King of the business, assuring him that he should have no wrong done him upon the high-way within the Territories ritories where he had to do. Four or five days after, the Nabab sent to Beber to know how much the Loss which he pretended to have receiv'd amounted to. Beber brought in an account of four and twenty thousand Roupies, or 12000 Crowns, and for the loss of his Blood, he left it to the Kings Generosity.

His Accompt he made out thus;

Imprimis. A Note for the value of six thousand Roupies which he had lent a Merchant when he departed for Marseilles, which Note was among the Papers he had lost. As to that, the Nabab ask'd him whether the Notaries in France did not make an Entry of such publick Acts as were sign'd before them? Beber made answer, that he should never be paid, if he could not produce the same Paper that had bin taken from him, and that he could not demand his Money without it. The Nabab replying, that that was contrary to the Custom of all Nations, and that he knew it could not be so, he said, added withal, that he should take no care for his satisfaction in that particular. After that he read on.

Item. Five thousand Roupies in Gold and Silver Money.

Item. Four thousand Roupies in Gold Lace and Galoon to trim his Clothes.

Item. Two Diamond Rings at two thousand one hundred Roupies.

Item. Two other Rings, a Topaz, and another of sea-green water, which cost three hundred Roupies.

Item. His Clothes, his Linnen, and for a Chest of Medicaments, which might be worth 4000 Roupies, of which he had procur'd his Chirurgeon to give in a Bill.

Item. A Chain of Gold valu'd at 500 Roupies. In all amounting to 24000 Roupies, as I said before.

Two or three days after, the King caus'd an Order to be deliver'd to him for the payment of his Money at the Treasury-Chamber. Upon which Order, he agreed with a Merchant to be paid at Surat. And when he was ready to depart, the King commanded 12000 Roupies to be paid him for the loss of his Blood. But that sum he never receiv'd. For being in haste to be gone to Surat, and failing to present the Treasurer, he drill'd him out so long, that his patience was quite tir'd, and so he was forc'd to go without it.

I could never understand the Policy of the Great Mogul to pay Beber the sum which he said had bin taken from him, when the Nabab knew to a thread what he had lost, and had given in an accompt thereof to the King; the whole not amounting to 2000 Roupies. And as for the Franks, so soon as they understood that he had demanded 4000 Roupies for his Chirurgeons Chest, they all cry'd out that it was a meer cheat. For a few days before Beber arriv'd at Agra, the Chirurgeon had receiv'd 200 Roupies by the Charity of the Franks to return to Surat, and he fell sick the next day that this Bill was presented to the Nabab.

After the Nabab had read the King of France's Letter, the Nabab by order of his Master, order'd a Lodging to be provided for the Deputies, who had very joyful the Jesuits, who were by that means rid of two very troublesome Guests. As for Boulaye, in regard the King had signify'd his pleasure, that he would not return any answer to the King's Letter till the arrival of the Ships, he never troubled himself any farther, but staid till the Waters were fallen, that he might go to Bengala, and from thence to Golconda to settle a Trade in those parts. But Beber mov'd like a horſe, and did nothing but run to and fro, to know the King's pleaſure touching the ſettlement of Trade. But the Nahab either laugh'd at him, or took little notice of what he ſaid. For indeed by Beber's outward appearance, and deportment, no man could make any other judgment of him, but that he was a poor ſpirited fellow, and one that knew not what it was to live. For all the Europeans that travel into Perſia and the Indies are always richly habited, nor would any of them keep Beber company, who by his Habit look'd rather like a Footman, than a Deputy of a Royal Company of Trade. At length a whim took him to make himſelf a ſuit of painted Calicut, after the French Faſhion; the like whereof had never been ſeen in the Country; the whole Suit not ſtanding him in above 13 Livres and 13 Sous. For the trimming of his new Suit he took off the Ribbands of his old Cloaths, which he was two days lathering, and ſmoothing with a Taylers Gooſe. When he had got this rare Habit upon his back, he went to viſit the Nahab, who was then attended by the Principal Lords of the Court. Who when they ſaw him enter, fell all a gazing upon him, and ask'd one another whether that Frangui were turn'd Faquir, or a Dervich of Hoſſen Mamout, which they uſually call the ragged Saint. For you muſt know, that all the Faquirs or Derviches that are of this Order, never apparel themſelves but with ſuch rags as they pick up in the ſtreets, and if they meet with any pieces better than other, they make of them a kind of Galoon to trim the reſt. They alſo carry half Pikes, with a great company of Tatters faſten'd to the end of them, to make a ſhew of their beggery. Beber's Habit very much ſurpriz'd the Nahab, and all others that beheld him ſo ridiculouſly accouter'd. As he paſs'd one morning by my window, I bid him good morrow, telling him withal, that he look'd more ſpruce and gay than he us'd to do. He reply'd, that he had reaſon ſo to do, for that he had receiv'd Letters from Surat, by which he had advice, that the Country people upon the Coaſt of Cape St. John had decry'd four Veſſels out at Sea, which they could not make to be either Engliſh, or Hollanders, from whence he concluded that they were the Companies ſhips; and that he was going to the Nahab with the News. But I prevented him at that time, telling him that I had often obſerv'd that raſcally ſort of people to come both to the Engliſh and Hollanders, with ſuch kind of Intelligence, on purpoſe to get Money; when indeed they had never ſeen any ſuch ſight, and admoniſhing him not to believe Reports upon ſuch ſlight foundations. I ask'd him what date his Letters bore? he told me, thirty days ago. Then, ſaid I, if the diſcovery had bin true, the Nahab would have had notice of it in fourteen; and then he would certainly have told you of it, or my ſelf; for it is but two days ſince I took my leave of him. Thereupon he took my counſel and reſolv'd for Surat in a few days.

Three days after that the Chirurgeon had given in his Bill for the Cheſt of Medicaments that he had loſt among Beber's Baggage, he was ſo touch'd in Conſcience, that he fell ſick, and dy'd in two days. Upon his death-bed he ask'd pardon of God for the Cheat which he had conſented to, to ask 4000 Roupies for that which was really worth but four hundred; 200 of which he had receiv'd from the Charity of the Franguis, the reſt upon the ſale of a Horſe.

For my part, finding that Beber was reſolv'd for Surat, I made what haſt I could out of Agra, to be quit of his company. But the ſecond day after my departure, having ſet up my tent by a Rivers ſide, juſt as I was going to dinner I ſpy'd Beber coming, nor could I get rid of him afterwards till I came to Surat. So that we were forc'd to travel together, though he committed a thouſand Impertinencies by the way. Among the reſt, he put one trick upon the Chief of the Cheraffs or Bankers at Brampour, not to be paſſed over in ſilence.

In regard the ways were bad, and that he had but one pitiful weak Chariot, and four weak Boys, which with the help of Oxen, were hardly ſtrong enough to help him out when he ſtuck in the mire, he ſeldom came to his journeys end till two or three hours after me. Now upon the report that ran of the French ſhips being ſeen out at Sea, and the general belief that Beber would be one of the Principal Truſtees of the Company, ſeveral, as I ſaid before, courted him, and ſought to engage his Friendſhip. Being arriv'd at Brampour, the Chief of the Cheraffs, attended by a dozen of his ſervants came to viſit us. Upon the firſt acquaintance Beber told him that he wanted a Pallaquin to go to Surat, whereupon the Cheraff civilly offered him his, and caus'd it to be trimm'd up for his better accommodation. Beber thought that trimming would have bin finiſht in one day, when indeed it requir'd three or four. The next day I order'd my Coach to be got ready, and order'd my Pallaquin to be carri'd away. Beber, who verily believ'd that the Company's ſhips were already in the Road of Surat, began to curſe and bann the Cheraff, who preſently came to him and endeavour'd to appeaſe him with good words. He told him, it could be no prejudice to him to ſtay a day or two; for by that time the Roads would be better, and he might travel the faſter. But Beber, being tranſported with paſſion, was ſo far from taking the Cheraffs reaſons for ſatisfaction, that ſnatching a Cudgel out of his Waggoners hands that ſtood next to him, he gave the Cheraff three or four good Licks croſs the ſhoulders. The Merchants and other people that were in the Inn, were ſtrangely ſurpriz'd at ſuch a piece of rudeneſs, and ran out preſently, ſome with Stones, and others with Cudgels, making a hideous noiſe, and crying out, that they had never ſeen the like. They took it for a moſt enormous Crime, to ſtrike the Chief of the Cheraffs, above fourſcore years old, whoſe very age ought to have bin protection enough from ſuch an Affront. Good luck it was for Beber, after ſuch a raſh action committed, that I was well known at Brampour, having been there ten or twelve times, and in ſome of my Travels having dealt for above 200000 Roupies. There were none of the Cheraffs with whom I had not dealt by Letters of Exchange, and very few Merchants or Brokers who had not had ſome buſineſs or other upon my accompt. They cry'd out, ſpeaking of me; See there the Monſieur Franqui, with whom we have dealt ſo often, yet never heard him give us an ill word. Another good chance he had to meet there the Coutevall's Lieutenant, and three Merchants of Surat; and thus between us, having diſingag'd Beber out of the Brabble wherein he had ſo ſillily bemir'd himſelf, we made him get into my Coach, and ſo packt him out of the City. I follow'd him two hours after: for had he ſtaid longer in Brampour, I believe the Faquirs and Derviches would have beat out his brains. For he was no ſooner gone, but a great number of that ſort of rabble came to the Inn, crying out, Where was that Dog of a Cafer that had beaten the Cheraff. Thereupon, ſeeing the Multitude encreaſe, I ſtole out of the Town, without ſaying a word, and rid on till till I got three leagues from Brampour, to an old Town call'd Badelpoura, where I overtook Beber, who had hir'd a Coach made after the fashion of the Country. It was but reason, that I should have my own Coach to sleep in the night: For though in all places where you come to lye in the night, the Indians will offer you a little bed to lye on, yet in regard the rains were but just over, the bedsteads were so full of Punies, that there was no resting. These Punies are ingender'd by the moisture which the rains, that fall for four months together, cause in those Countries. Which being over, and the Sun recovering its wonted heat, the women carry forth their beds every morning, and beating them well with good big sticks, never leave till the Punies fall to the ground, and there turning up their bellies presently dye. These beds consist of four feet and four round staves, as broad and as long as you please. To the staves are fasten'd girths about four fingers broad, which are much more commodious than the bottoms of our beds that are plank'd with Deal or other wood. Over the girths they only lay a single Coverlet or Sheet, which is a manner of lying easie enough, considering the heat of the Country.

The fourth day after our departure from Brampour, being near a great Town call'd Semqueles, in a flat Country, we perceiv'd all the Plain cover'd with Tents. It appear'd to be the Camp of one of the chief Kans, or Lords, whom the Great Mogull had sent with 50000 men against the Rebel Raja Sevagi. This Lord, understanding who we were, very civilly sent us Melons, and Mango's, and bid his Officers tell us withal, that we were out of all danger, and might safely pursue our journey. Whatever I could say to Beber, to perswade him that it was but an act of civility and good manners, to wait upon the Prince, I could by no means engage him. I seeing his impertinency, shifted my habit, and sent one of my servants to the Camp, to learn whether the Kan drank Wine; and understanding that he did, I took a bottle of Spanish, and another of Schirus Wine, and a small pocket Pistol delicately embellish'd with silver; and with this small Present away I went to wait upon the General. Being come into his Presence, I excus'd Beber, as not being well, and immediately presented him the little Pistol, which he took, and bid me charge, being desirous to try it. After he had shot it off, said he to his Lords that stood by, Now must we confess these Franqui's to be ingenious. This man sees that I am going to the Wars, and presents me wherewithal to defend my life. Then casting his eyes upon the little Hamper, where the Bottles were, he ask'd what it was? They told him in his Ear. Oh, said he, looking at the same time upon two or three Mim Bachi's, or Colonels that were present, This Franqui Gentleman has given me a bottle of Wine, well we must drink it; for I find I shall please him in so doing. When the Mollah's heard him talk of Wine, they slunk away; which made the Kan laugh heartily. These are Aej's, quoth he; they have bin Pilgrims to Mecca, and never drink Wine after they come home again. Having taken my leave, he sent me a Pomere, which is a kind of Scarf that may also serve for a Girdle. It was made of white Sattin with flow'rs of Gold, and might be worth about a hundred Roupies. He that brought it, told me, I should do the Kan a great kindness, to send him another bottle of Wine: thereupon I sent him two or three, which was all my store. He sent me six Horsemen to conduct us three days journey, till we had pass'd a great River that flows from the Mountains of the South, which waſhing the City of Baroche, from whence it takes its Name, falls into the Bay of Cambay.

When we came to our laſt ſtage, which is a great Town, call'd Barnoli, from whence it is but 14 Leagues to Surat, Beber ſent one of his Hirelings to give notice thereof to Father Ambroſe. When the News came, the Father went with the Aleppo Merchant, often already mention'd, to borrow the Engliſh Preſident's Coaches: and there were about 15 or 16 more Coaches all in a train, with ſeveral Horſemen and Merchant Banians that made haſt to meet the Deputy. This happen'd upon the firſt of November, 1666. They carri'd with them Proviſion enough to make merry, and every Banian had his Preſent ready. For my part, I as ſoon as I had ſaluted the Father Capuchin, I went directly to my Lodging, where I had left two Servants to take care of a Sum of Money which I had receiv'd of the King of Perſia, unwilling to hazard it upon the Road. For in whatever part of the Indies I came, I had credit enough to buy without Money. I only gave my Bills for payment at Agra, Viſapour, Golconda, or Surat, where I generally left my Money, as having receiv'd it there for the moſt part of the Lords or Kings of the Country.

As for Beber, he was no Changeling, the follies that he committed are too numerous to be related: but how he began the year 1667, is not to be omitted.

M. Thevenot, upon his return from Madraſpatan and Golconda, lodg'd in the Capuchins houſe. Beber going to viſit him, told him, that the Capuchins were the Hollanders Spies, and that he had often advis'd Father Ambroſe to break with them, and not to go any more to their Houſe. That while he frequented their Society, the French Company would be ſure to find ſome obſtacle in their Trade when the Ships ſhould arrive; and that if the Hollanders had not been at Agra, they might have done what they pleas'd with the King. That the hundred thouſand Roupies which they had preſented to the King and Grandees of the Court, had hinder'd them from obtaining what they deſign'd. By which it appear'd, he underſtood not the humour of the Hollanders; for they are not ſo liberal: nor would all their tricks, or preſents have any thing avail'd them, the Great Mogul being deſirous that all Nations ſhould be welcome to his Dominions, eſpecially Merchants, as well they that import little, as they that bring in much. M. Thevenot told him, that he had never obſerv'd ſo much of the Hollanders in all his travels; for if it were true, that they had ſuch a deſire to hinder the Trade of other Nations, they would not afford them paſſage in their Ships, or to put their Goods aboard, as they often did. Moreover, they ſend away many times one or two Ships according to the quantity, laden all with ſtrangers Goods, from Maſlipatan or Surat, in which Ships, there is not oftimes ſo much as one Bale belonging to the Company. And this, added he, is farther obſervable, That they afford their Freight cheaper then the Engliſh, or any other Nation, who have Ships in theſe parts. Thus Monſieur Thevenot endeavour'd to convince M. Beber; who would have had Father Ambroſe have fallen out with the Hollanders. But he knew better things then to diſoblige perſons to whom he was ſo much beholding as he was every day. For every week they allow'd the houſe a certain quantity of Bread and Meat, and upon Faſt-days ſent them Fiſh,

Eggs,

Eggs, Brandy, and Wine, which were no ſuch unkindneſſes to be quarrell'd with. Monſieur Thevenot at the ſame time told Beber, that he ſhould do well to repay Father Ambroſe the Money which he had borrow'd to pay for the Coach which he had broken to ſerve him, as alſo that which he had given the Seamen, for trying if they could diſcover the Companies Veſſels upon the Coaſt. But he turn'd his deaf ear to that diſcourſe, and would never be perſuaded to reimburſe the Money which Father Ambroſe laid out for him. Monſieur Thevenot perceiving his unwillingneſs, and preſſing him to do things handſomly, put him into ſuch a chafe, that he fell a ſwearing after ſuch a violent rate, in a Parlour, that was parted only by a thin board from the place where the Maſs was ſaid, that one of the Fryers, juſt ready to go to the Altar, came forth to deſire him to leave his blaſpheming. But Beber's inſolence took his admonition ſo ill, that he very rudely beat the Fryer in Mr. Thevenot's preſence; ſwearing, That had it not been out of reſpect to him, he would have knockt him o' the head. The Capuchin being ſo injuriouſly us'd, came to Me, being hardly able to ſtir his neck, by reaſon of one of the blows that Beber had given him. I chaft his neck with Oyl of Coco's, and wrapt it up warm: but we durſt not ſpeak a word of Beber's idle action, for fear of expoſing our ſelves to the laughter of the Engliſh and Hollanders, who would have made good ſport with it. Beſides theſe Enormities, he put away his Servant that had ſav'd his Life, and kept his Wages. After that he went to lye at an Apothecaries houſe, whoſe Name was Mouillon, who came from Goa, with a good quantity of Portugal Wine, and kept a Tavern at Surat. While he lay there he had a great Conteſt with the Merchant, who receiv'd the 24000 Roupies, which the King had given him for the loſs which he alleadg'd that he and his Chyrurgeon had ſuſtain'd. For the Merchant would acknowledge the receipt of no more then 23900 Roupies, the other Hundred being deducted for Fees of the Treaſury. He alſo maintain'd, That the Merchant had receiv'd the 12000 Roupies which the King had allow'd him for the loſs of his Blood: but it was known that the Grand Treaſurer would never pay that Money. Thus when he ſaw that his Cheats were diſcover'd to all the World, he began to bethink himſelf how to get away: and we obſerv'd, that he would fain have quitted Surat without noiſe. But there is ſuch good Order taken both by Land and Sea, that no perſon can go away without the knowledge and leave of the Governour. For as the Countrymen that come from the other ſide of the water cannot return unleſs they ſhew a mark in their hands made with red Earth at the Cuſtom-houſe; neither Horſe nor Coach can ſtir without a Note from the Chabander, and another for the Radars, who lye ſometimes two or three Leagues from the Town. Beber nevertheleſs had ſome aſſurance from his Vintner, that he might get into a Boat, by bidding the Boatmen carry him to Reynel, a large Town on the other ſide of the water. The Maſter of the Boat ask'd him for his Ticket, but Beber anſwer'd him with his Cudgel, forcing him forward, and telling him, he was not to demand Billets of ſuch a perſon as he was. As he was got half way the River a great number of Souldiers hollow'd after the Boatmen, to row the Strangers back aſhoar. But Beber laid his hand upon his Sword, and compell'd the Boatmen to go forward. That evening, Beber being return'd, the poor Boatmen were apprehended, and baſtinado'd till they were almoſt maim'd. The people people cri'd out, that it was the Frangui that ought to be so serv'd, and not the poor Watermen, who had done nothing but by constraint.

Thus did this Envoy behave himself both in Persia and India, to the great hindrance of the French Nation. Now let us see what became of both Boulaye and Beber after all their Extravagancies.

The Sieur de la Boulaye, according to the accompt given by the Hollanders that were at Agra, left the Town five or six days after my departure. Knowing I went to Surat, he had plaid his game so well with me, that he got a Hamper of twelve large bottles of Wine for 138 Roupies, though they cost me more, for which he gave me a Note of his hand, that I have still in my custody, to be paid at Surat, upon the arrival of the French Companies ships. From thence he travell'd to Patna, where he staid nine or ten days, partly with the English, partly with the Hollanders: from whence he departed for Daca, the Residence of the Governour of the Province. The Governour of the Province of Bengale was then the Great Mogul's Uncle, whose name was Cha-Est-Kan, a potent Prince, who has always under his Command thirty or forty thousand men.

At Patna, Boulaye had a project, that from thence he might easily pass into China, and to that purpose he there embarqu'd with some Persian Souldiers, who were going to list themselves under Cha-Est-Kan. But after that, to this hour, it never could be certainly known what became of him: but by all probable conjectures, it is verily believ'd, that the Persian Souldiers murder'd him and his little Slave, in hopes of some good booty. Of the truth whereof, the Observation that follows was no small evidence. About a quarter of a mile from Daca lies a Town, where live several mungrel Portugal Officers, belonging to the Governour of Bengale, as Canoneers and Carpenters, and some of the same Nation that serve in the Cavalry of Cha-Est-Kan. There they have also a small Church very well built, where an Austin Fryar officiates, to whom, about three months after Boulaye's departure from Patna, a certain Persian in the Habit of a Souldier, with two more companions, brought two large Books, the one in Folio, and the other in Quarto to sell. The Fryar, who was a mungrel also, understood no Latin; but finding them not to be in the Portugal Language, would have stopp'd the Books as stoln from the Hollanders, had not the Souldier been too strong for him. These Books were thought to have been Boulaye's; who, to my knowledge, had two Chests full, well bound; in reading whereof he spent the greatest part of his time. His Avarice was his Ruine; for had he taken a Bark by himself, as I did when I went from Patna, and had oblig'd the Watermen to give him good security, he could have run no hazard. For my part I took one with four and twenty men; and every one, knowing I never spar'd for cost, gave me excellent security. These Barks are little Galliots, which will undertake to carry you to your journey's end, and name your own day. If you will lye ashoar every evening, they will set up your Tents; and stop at any Town or City to take in Provisions. I never made so pleasant a Voyage in my life, nor with less trouble. For in these Barks, there is a Room where the Sun cannot come in, where you may repose in the day time, and sit in the cool Air on that side from whence the Breez comes. There is another place cover'd for your Kitchin; and another little Garderobe for the private deeds of Nature. By the way I kill'd great ſtore of large Geeſe, Cranes, and Crocodiles, which I gave the Watermen, who were very glad of them; for they ſold them in the Towns as they row'd along. The people in thoſe quarters are very good natur'd and officious. Dyet is little worth, as being the place where you may buy a hundred Pullets for a Crown: and for three or four Pence, you may buy a Fiſh of a prodigious length and bigneſs.

Beber's end was no leſs ſad. For when the French Companies Ships were arriv'd, M. Caron, who commanded them, and M. Rambos, with an Armenian, who had the management of the chiefeſt part of the buſineſs, had been acquainted with what had paſs'd at Surat, between Beber and the Capuchins. Preſently Affections and Intereſts parted. Caron and Rambos took Beber's part; the Armenian held for the Capuchins, which was at length the ruin of Beber and Rambos. The Holland Commander going aboard to viſit the Sieur Caron, upon his return would not permit the Captain to ſtir out of his Cabin; ſo that Rambos and the Armenian took upon them to wait upon the Commander. Upon this Occaſion the Armenian took upon him to precede Rambos, and briskly threw himſelf before the French-man; who being provok'd at the Affront, gave the Armenian a ſwinging cuff o' the Ear before all the company. To be ſhort, the Sieur Caron, Rambos, and Beber holding all together, the Armenian found himſelf too weak to reſiſt: and in regard he had the Management of the Caſh, he was accus'd of Misbehaviour, and was condemn'd to be hang'd. But becauſe they could not execute the Sentence which they had given at Surat, they ſent him away to the Council Royal of the Iſland of Madagaſcar, of which M. Mondevergue was chief; who was ſo far from confirming the Sentence given at Surat, that he admitted the Armenian to juſtifie himſelf; and finding that he was not only innocent, but that he might be very uſeful to the Company, he ſent him back to Surat with more power then he had before. This put Beber and Rambos into a fit of Deſpair, to ſee the perſon whom they thought to have ruin'd, now above them. Thereupon they found a way to get 12000 Roupies a piece for their Wages, which they pretended to be due from the Company: and with that and 24000 Roupies which Beber had of his own they Embarqu'd both together for Goa. Where, being arriv'd, Beber dy'd ſoon after: But as for Rambos, he return'd home again through Iſpahan.

OBSERVATIONS UPON THE TRADE
EAST-INDIES.

THat Nation which has a deſign to ſettle a Trade in the Eaſt-Indies, muſt be ſure in the firſt place, to poſſeſs themſelves of a convenient place in that Country, to carine their Ships, and ſhelter themſelves during the tempeſtuous Seaſons. This want of a good Haven is the reaſon that the Engliſh have not made thoſe advantages which otherwiſe they might have done; becauſe it is impoſſible that any Veſſel ſhould remain in thoſe Seas without being carin'd, or elſe eaten by the worms.

Therefore, becauſe it is a long way from Europe to the Eaſt-Indies, it would be requiſite to have a retreating place at the Cape of good Hope, to take in freſh Water and Proviſions, whether going or coming; but eſpecially in their return, in regard that the Ships being then laden, cannot take in Water for any long time.

The Road of the Iſland of St. Helen's, where the Engliſh have built a Fort, is a very commodious place: and if the Water be not ſo good upon the North-ſide, yet the Plain is an excellent ſpot of Ground to ſow, with convenience of all things neceſſary for human ſupport.

This advantage the Engliſh and Dutch have depriv'd all other Nations of, by their Forts upon the Cape of good Hope, and St. Helen's. And therefore ſome River's mouth, near the Cape of good Hope, ought to be ſought for, for the ſame purpoſe, which would be far more convenient then the Dauphin Iſland, where there is no Trade but that of buying Cattel for their Hides; which being a Trade of ſo little conſequence, would ruin a Company to follow it.

The reaſon why I make this Propoſal is, becauſe that in the year 1648, two Portugal Veſſels being bound from Lisbon to the Eaſt-Indies, and reſolving to touch at the Cape, to take in freſh Water, miſtook their juſt Depths, ſo that the Sea running high, they fell into a Bay, 18 or 20 Leagues from the Cape, upon the Coaſt that looks to the Weſt. In that Bay they found a River, whoſe Water was very good; and the Blacks of the Country brought them Refreſhments of all ſorts of Fowl, Fiſh, and Bullock's fleſh. There they ſtaid above 15 days, and before they ſet ſail, they took two of the Negro's, which they carri'd along with them to Goa, to teach them the Portugueſe Language; on purpoſe to try if they could diſcover by them any knowledge of the Trade of the Country. The Dutch Commander at Surat deſir'd me, to inform my ſelf, when I went to Goa, what the Portugals had learnt from thoſe two Negro's. But one St. Amand, a French Ingeneer, who was Superviſor of the Fortifications of Goa, told me, That he could not make them learn one word of the Language; and that he could only gueſs by their ſigns, that they had ſome knowledge of Ambergreece and Elephants Teeth. The Portugals however made no queſtion but to meet with Gold, if they could find a way to trade higher up i' the Country. The Revolutions of Portugal, and their Wars with Spain have hinder'd them from making any more particular diſcovery of the Coaſt. Which it were to be wiſh'd the French would undertake, provided they gave no cauſe of jealouſie to the Hollanders, of what they were going about.

There is alſo a neceſſity of poſſeſſing, or at leaſt having the liberty of ſome place near Surat, to ride ſafe in, and to waſh and tallow in, in caſe they ſhould be ſtaid by the Rain-Seaſons. The reaſon is, becauſe that during that ill ſeaſon, at what time it is impoſſible to keep the Seas, the Mogul jealous of his Fortreſs of Surat ſuffers no Foreign Veſſel in the River, where nevertheleſs, the Ships being unladen, may ride ſecurely from the terrible Tempeſts that laſt for five Months.

The only ſecure place for the Companies Veſſels would be the Town of Dia, belonging to the Portugals.

The advantage of the ſituation is conſiderable for ſeveral reaſons. The circuit of the City contains almoſt 400 Houſes, and might be capable to receive a greater number of people, where the Ships would find all conveniencies during their ſtay. It is ſeated upon the Coaſt of Guzarat, upon a point of the Gulph of Cambaye, looking toward the South-eaſt. The form of it is almoſt round; and above half the Circle environ'd by the Sea. It is not commanded by any Hill; and the Portugals have begun thoſe Fortifications, which might be eaſily finiſh'd. It contains ſeveral Wells of very good Water, and a River which falls into the Sea near the City, whoſe Water is better then that of Surat, or Suali, and the Harbour is very commodious for Shipping.

The Portugals, when they had firſt ſettl'd themſelves in the Indies, kept there a Fleet compos'd of Galleys, Brigantines, and other light Veſſels, whereby they made themſelves Maſters, for a long time, of all the Trade of the Places we have treated of. So that no Ship could trade without the Governour of Dia's Paſsport, who made it in the Name of the Viceroy that liv'd at Goa. The Impoſition, which the Ships paid, was ſufficient to maintain the Fleet and Garriſon, and to enrich the Governour beſides.

When the Rain-Seaſons are over, that the wind ſits at North and North-eaſt, you may ſail from Dia to Surat in three or four Tides with light Veſſels; but great Ships that are laden muſt fetch a compaſs about the Bank.

The City has no Land belonging to it, but what it ſtands upon, yet it would be no difficult thing to agree with the Raja, or Govervour of the the Province, and to obtain as much as ſhould be ſufficient for the Inhabitants.

Neither is the Land about it very fertile, and beſides, the people are the pooreſt in the whole Empire of the Mogul. Nevertheleſs the Country is ſo well ſtor'd with Cattel, that an Ox or a Bufalo will not coſt above two Piaſters.

The Engliſh and Hollanders make uſe of theſe Cattel to feed their People, and to ſpare the Proviſions of their Ships, while they ſtay at Souali.

But it is obſervable that the Bufalo's fleſh in thoſe parts cauſes frequent Dyſenteries, which the Bullocks fleſh or Beef never does.

The Raja that commands the Country has only the Title of Governour for life. Which is common to moſt of the Raja's in the Mogul's Empire, whoſe Anceſtours were Lords of Provinces, where now their Deſcendants only enjoy the Titles of Governours.

Having thus got poſſeſſion of a good Poſt; the next thing of Importance is to chooſe out two men conſiderable for their Honeſty, Prudence, and Skill in Trade, who are to be allow'd the full of their Expences.

Theſe two perſons are to ſerve the Company, the one in the nature of a Preſident, with a Council, conſiſting of a certain number of perſons, to aſſiſt him. The other in the quality of a Broaker, who muſt be an Idolater of the Country, and not a Mahumetan, in regard all the Workmen he has to deal with are Idolaters.

Civility and Faith of Promiſe are altogether requiſit to gain Credit among ſtrangers. And theſe particular qualities are requir'd in the particular Broakers, who are under the Broaker-General in the Provinces where the Factories are ſettl'd.

Good Intelligence is neceſſary for theſe two perſons, to underſtand the alteration of Manufactures.

This alteration happens either through the craft and ſubtilty of the Workmen and the Merchants themſelves, or by the correſpondence of the Broakers and Workmen.

Which alteration may cauſe ſo much dammage to the Company, that the Broakers ſhall gain ten and twelve i' the hundred by it.

If the Preſident and Broaker-General combine with the particular Broakers and Merchants, it will be a difficult thing for the Company to avoid being deceiv'd; but if theſe two perſons are but faithful and honeſt, the fraud may be eaſily remedi'd by changing the particular Broakers.

The Officers of a Company may be unfaithful to their Truſt in this reſpect:

When a Veſſel arrives in Port, the Preſident for the Nation receives the Company's Letters, and the Bills of Lading; upon which he calls his Council, ſends for the Broaker, and gives him a Copy of the ſaid Bills.

The Broaker ſhews them to three or four of the principal Merchants of the Country, who are wont to buy by whole ſale. If the Preſident and the Broaker hold together for their own profit, the Broaker inſtead of facilitating the ſale as he ought to do, adviſes the Merchants to be ſhie, and to offer only ſuch a price: Then the Preſident ſends for the Broaker and theſe two or three Merchants, and in the preſence of the Council he asks the Merchants what they will give for the Goods in the Bills of Lading mention'd. If the Merchants are reſolute to give no more then ſo much; The Preſident puts off the ſale 15 days longer, more or leſs, as he pretends himſelf preſs'd to ſell. In the mean time he ſends for the Merchants ſeveral times for a ſhew, and at length, to avoid ſuſpicion, and to diſcharge himſelf, he asks the advice of the Council, and as they approve, orders the delivery of the Goods to the Merchant.

But though the Temptations be very great, to which theſe two Officers are ſubject, by reaſon of their pow'r, their frequent opportunities, and their diſtance from their Superiours, the Company, beſides their being wary in their Election, may remedy theſe diſorders by depriving them of that pretence, which the Dutch Commanders and Broakers have, of being conſtrain'd to ſell off preſently to the Merchants in groſs, to avoid the expences of delay.

The Errour which the Hollanders commit in this reſpect is, That their Officers beſpeak every year upon Credit all the Goods which they have occaſion for in the Empire of the Mogul, according to the Orders which they receive from Batavia.

The credit of this Advance coſts them ſometimes twelve, ſometimes fifteen per Cent; ſo that ſo ſoon as their laden Veſſels are arriv'd in the the Port where they are to be ſold, they are oblig'd to ſell them preſently off at the Merchants rate firſt offer'd to their Broakers, to make up a preſent ſtock to pay off their credit for the Goods beſpoke for their Ships to carry back again, and to get more credit for the next year. This is that which cheriſhes that confederacy between the Preſident, the Broaker and the Merchant, who makes advantage enough of this neceſſity of ſelling.

Whereas the better way were, for them that carry the ſame Commodities which the Hollanders do, to carry Money alſo to pay the Workmen for the Goods beſpoken for the next year.

The Company making this advantage ſhall not be put to pay that great Intereſt of 12 and 15 per Cent.: and beſides, they ſhall have better Goods, and better cheap. The Ships loading ſhall be ready before they arrive in Port; and being quick laden they may return before the bad Seaſon. Neither ſhall the Company be put to ſell their Goods at a low price; becauſe their Broakers will have time to ſtay for the coming of Merchants from other parts; or elſe becauſe they have time enough to ſend them to other places, where they are ſure of a quicker ſale.

Obſerve alſo, That it is far more profitable to carry to the Indies Gold and Silver in Ingots, rather then ready coin'd; for being coin'd the Money is valu'd only according to their Alloys; and there is always a defalcation made for the charge of Coinage.

The Broaker alſo, if he be diſhoneſt, may combine with the Maſter of the Mogul's Mint, which is ſettl'd in ſeveral parts of the Empire, and put a lower value upon the Gold and Silver then it deſerves, by telling the Preſident and Council, that upon the touch it appears to be no more worth.

But it is an eaſie thing to avoid this deceit, provided the Preſident be a perſon of credit and prudence, by ſending for one of the Refiners of Gold and Silver, that live in the Country, who perfectly underſtand the Touch of Metals, and to let him Eſſay the Gold and Silver before the Broaker's face.

This is that which the Sieur Walkenton did for the Holland Company in in their Factory at Cassambassar, where he bought every year six or seven thousand Bales of Silk. For by this Essay he found, that his Broaker being in confederacy with the Master of the Mint, had cheated the Company of one and a half and two per Cent. in the value of the Gold and Silver which was brought him from Japan, as well coin'd as in barr, to a very considerable sum of Money.

The Broaker also may confederate with the Master of the Mint to couzen the Merchant in weghing his Gold or Silver, by making use of false Weights or Scales unduly pois'd.

But that fraud is easily avoided, if the President and his Council will be but so patient as to see their Metal weigh'd themselves, and take care that the Weights be right, and the Scales true.

One of the most important Observations in reference to the Trade of the Company, and discipline of their Factories is this:

To prevent the Merchants or under-Merchants, Accomptants and under-Accomptants, who officiate under the Commanders and Broakers, from driving any particular Trade by themselves, for they having a familiarity with the men of Manufacture, and finding by the Letters of Advice what Goods are likely to be most vendible next year, buy them up upon their own accompts, and find a way to lade them off in the Company's Vessels, to the great dammage of the whole, though to the great gain of particular people

And this the President permits them to do, either for his own Interest, or by connivance under the pretence of their small Wages. The Captain of the Vessel also winks at what they do, becaus he has a spell for loading and unloading. And becaus these people having no great Stocks, are desirous to put off their Goods with the first opportunities, they give order to their Correspondents to under-sell the Company ten or twelve in the Hundred, which is the absolute ruin of a Trade.

To remedy this disorder there ought to be a Fiscal, or King's Proctor, in every of the chief Factories belonging to the Company, to act in the King's Name, and by his Authority.

He is to be independent from the President and the Broaker, in the Exercise of his Office; so that he may have an eye, as well upon their behaviour, as upon the demeanour of the under Officers.

He ought to be a person of good Credit, resolute and vigilant; and he must have a strength of men correspondent to his Employment, and a Deputy to act under him.

He is to have good Information of the departure of all Ships when they are once laden, and when they are ready to set sail for the Port whither they are bound. When he hears of the Arrival of any Ship, he ought to go himself, or send his Deputy with a sufficient Guard, to take an Accompt of the Ship's Lading.

If it be a place near to which there are any small Islands, or by-Nooks, it behoves him to take care that no Goods be privately convey'd ashoar in those private corners, where there are receivers a now ready: and whatever he finds thus privately unladen he shall have power to confiscate.

He shall also confiscate whatever he finds not Mark'd with the Company's Mark.

He may also discharge any inferiour Officers to whom any such Bales shall

ſhall belong; and for the ſuperiour Officers, he ſhall complain of them to the Company.

He ſhall have pow'r to open all private Letters, to inform himſelf of Prohibited Goods, and Private Correſpondencies.

This Prohibition of Private Trading cannot be too ſeverely impos'd, and it is obſerv'd with ſo much exactneſs in Holland, that when one of the Company's Ships is ready to ſet ſail from Amſterdam, a Burgomaſter gives the Captain and all the reſt of the Seamen their Oaths, that they ſhall be contented with their Wages, and meddle with nothing of Trade.

All the Officers of the Factory ſhould be advanc'd by degrees, ſo that a ſub-Accomptant may have hopes to be a Preſident; that the hopes of Advancement may oblige them to live with more credit, and cauſe them to ſtudy to make themſelves more capable of all the Intrigues and Subtilties of the Trade of the Country.

It is of great importance not to ſhew any favour in this particular of preferment, unleſs he have paſs'd through all particular Degrees and Offices beforehand. And thus much concerning the Diſcipline of the Factories.

OF

OF THE

COMMODITIES

WHICH ARE

Brought as well out of the Dominions of the GREAT MOGUL, as out of the Kingdoms of Golconda and Viſapour, and other neighbouring Territories; And alſo of the Weights and Prices of the ſaid Commodities.

Of their Silk.

Kaſembaſar, a Village in the Kingdom of Bengala, ſends abroad every year two and twenty-thouſand Bales of Silk; every Bale weighing a hunder'd pound. The two and twenty Bales make two millions and two-hunder'd-thouſand pound, at ſixteen ounces to the pound. The Hollanders uſually carry away ſix or ſeven-thouſand Bales, and would carry away more, did not the Merchants of Tartary, and the Mogul's Empire oppoſe them: for they buy up as much as the Hollander; the reſt the Natives keep to make their Stuffs. This Silk is alſo brought into the Kingdom of Guzerat, the greateſt part whereof comes to Amadabat, and to Surat, where it is wrought up.

In the firſt place they make Carpets of Silk and Gold; others of Silk and Silver, others all of Silk: for the Worſted Carpets are made at Vettapour, ſome twelve leagues from Agra.

In the ſecond place they make Satins with ſtreaks of Gold and Silver; others plain: with Taffata's after the ſame faſhion.

In the third place they make Patoles, which are a ſort of Silk-ſtuff very thin, but painted with all ſorts of Flowers, the manufacture whereof is at Amadabat. They coſt from eight Roupies to forty the piece. This is a Commodity wherein the Dutch will not ſuffer any one of the Hollanders to trade in particular: for they tranſport it to the Philippine-Iſlands, to the Iſlands of Borneo, Java, Sumatra, and other neighbouring Iſlands.

The raw-Silk of Kaſembaſar is yellowiſh, as are all the raw-Silks that come from Perſia and Sicily; but the Natives of Kaſembaſar have a way to whiten it, with a Lye made of the aſhes of a Tree which they call Adam's Fig-tree; which makes it as white as the Paleſtine-Silk. The Hollanders ſend away all their Merchandize which they fetch out of Ben- gala, by water, through a great Canal that runs from Kaſembaſar into Ganges, for fifteen leagues together; from whence it is as far by water down the Ganges to Ouguely, where they lade their Ships.

Of the Calicuts: and firſt of the painted Calicuts, call'd Chites.

Chites or Painted Calicuts, which they call Calmendar, that is to ſay, done with a Pencil, are made in the Kingdom of Golconda; and particularly about Maſlipatam. But there is made ſo little, that though a man ſhould employ all the Workmen that underſtand the Art of weaving Calicuts, he would hardly find enough to make three Bales.

The Chites which are made in the Empire of the Great Mogul are all printed; and nothing ſo beautiful, neither for the figures nor the fineneſs of the Linnen. Thoſe which are made at Lahor, are the coarſeſt, and conſequently the cheapeſt of all. They are ſold by Corges, every Corge conſiſting of twenty pieces, which coſt from 16 to 30 Roupies.

The Chites which are made at Seronge, are ſold from 20 to 50 Roupies the Corge, or thereabouts.

Theſe Chites ſerve for Coverlets for Beds, for Sofra's or Table-cloaths after the Country-faſhion, Pillowbears, Handkerchiefs, but more eſpecially for Waſtcoats as well for the men as women in Perſia.

The fine Calicut-Chites are made at Brampour; and are us'd for Handkerchiefs by thoſe that ſnuff Tobacco.

The women alſo, over all Aſia, make Veils of theſe Calicuts, to wear over their heads, and about their ſhoulders, which Veils are call'd Ormis.

The Baſta's or Calicuts painted red, blue, and black, are carri'd white to Agra, and Amadabat, in regard thoſe Cities are neareſt to the places where the Indigo is made that is us'd in colouring. They coſt from two Roupies to 30 or 40 a-piece, according to the fineneſs and the quantity of Gold at the ends, and ſometimes upon the ſides. The Indians have a way to dip ſome of theſe Calicuts in a certain water that makes them look like Water'd-Chamlets, which adds alſo to the price.

That ſort which is ſold for two Roupies, and ſo onward till ye come to twelve, is tranſported to the Coaſt of Melinda, and it is the greateſt Trade the Governour of Moſambique drives, who ſells them to the Cafres, that vend them again among the Abyſſins, and into the Kingdom of Saba: for thoſe people not underſtanding the uſe of Soap, need no more but only to waſh theſe Calicuts in water. That ſort which is valu'd from 12 Roupies upward, is tranſported to the Philippine-Iſlands, the Iſlands of Borneo, Java, Sumatra, and other adjacent places. Where the women wear no other clothes, then a ſingle piece of this Calicut. One part whereof, without cutting it, ſerves for a Petticoat; the other they wind about their ſtomachs and their heads.

White Calicuts.

WHite Calicuts come partly from Agra, and about Lahor, part from Bengala: ſome from Brouda, Baroche, Renonſari, and other places. They are brought out of the Loom to Renonſari, and Baroche, where they are whiten'd by reaſon of the convenience of their Meadows, and the great ſtore of Limons that grow thereabouts. For the Calicuts are never ſo white as they ſhould be, till they are dipt in Limon-water.

The

The Calicuts that come from Agra, Lahor, and Bengala, are ſold by the Corge, and they are of ſeveral prices, from ſeventeen Roupies to three or four-hunder'd, as the Merchant will have them wov'n.

The Calicuts that come from Renonſari, and Baroche, are one and twenty cubits long, new out of the Loom; but in the whitening they ſhrink to twenty cubits.

Thoſe of Brouda twenty cubits from the Loom, and ſhrink in the whitening to nineteen and a half.

All the Calicuts or Baſta's that come from theſe three Cities, are of two ſorts: for ſome are broad, ſome are narrow. The narrow are thoſe I have already mention'd, the prices whereof are various, from two Mamoudi's to ſix.

The broad Baſta's are a cubit, and one third part wide; the whole piece twenty cubits long. The uſual price of them is from five Mamoudi's to twelve: but a Merchant being upon the place, may cauſe them to be made much more large and fine, till they are worth five-hundred Mamoudi's a-piece. I ſaw two pieces ſold for a thouſand Mamoudi's.

The Engliſh bought one, and the Hollanders another, each Piece containing eight and twenty cubits.

Mahamed Alibeg returning into Perſia out of India, where he had been Embaſſador, preſented Cha-Sef the ſecond with a Coco-nut, about the bigneſs of an Auſtrich-egg, all beſet with Pearls: and when 'twas open'd there was taken out of it a Turbant that had ſixty cubits of Calicut in length to make it, the Cloath being ſo fine, that you could hardly feel it in your hand: For they will ſpin their thread ſo fine, that the eye can hardly diſcern it, or at leaſt it ſeems to be but a Cob-web.

Twiſted-Cotton.

COtton twiſted and untwiſted comes from the Provinces of Brampour and Guzerat. Untwiſted Cotton is never tranſported into Europe, being too cumberſome, and of little value; only they ſend it to Ormus, Balſara, and ſometimes to the Philippine-Iſlands, and the Iſlands of Sinde. As for the twiſted Cottons, the Engliſh and Hollanders tranſport a good quantity, not of the fineſt, but of that ſort which is pric'd from fifteen to fifty Mamoudi's: It ſerves for wieks for Candles, for Packſaddles, and for the ground of Silk-ſtuffs.

Indigo.

INdigo comes from ſeveral parts of the Great Mogul's Empire; and according to the diverſity of the places it differs in quality, and conſequently in price.

In the firſt place, it comes from the Territories of Biana, Indoua, and Corſa, a day or two's journey from Agra: which is eſteem'd the beſt of all. It is made alſo eight days journey from Surat, in a Village called Sarqueſs, two leagues diſtance from Amadabat. Here the flat Indigo is made. There is alſo Indigo little inferior in goodneſs and price, which comes from the King of Golconda's Territories. The Mein of Surat, which contains 42 Serre's, or 34 and a half of our pounds, is valu'd from 15 to 20 Roupies. They make as good as this at Baroche. That which is made up about Agra is made up in half Balls, and is the moſt ſought for in all India.

It is sold by the Mein, which in those places contains 60 Serres, or 51 and three quarters of our pounds. The usual price is from 36 to 40 Roupies. There grows also Indigo some 36 leagues from Brampour, about a great Village call'd Raout, and round about the neighbouring Towns in the road to Surat: Of which the Natives usually make above a hunder'd-thousand Roupies.

There comes Indigo also from Bengala, which the Holland-Company transports for Maslipatan. But they buy this Indigo, and that of Brampour and Amadabat, cheaper by 24 in the hunder'd, then that of Agra.

Indigo is made of an Herb which they sow every year after the rains are over: which when it is grown up, is very like our Hemp. They cut it three times a year; first when it is about two or three foot high; and they cut it within half a foot of the ground; the first cutting far exceeds the two latter. The second cutting is worse then the first by ten or twelve in the hunder'd. And the third worse then the second by 12 in the hunder'd. The difference is found by breaking a piece of the Paste, and observing the colour. The colour of that Indigo which is made of the first cutting, is a Violet-blue, but more brisk and lively than the two others: and that which is made of the second is more lively then the third.

When they have cut the Herb, they throw it into Pits which they make with Lime, which becomes so hard, that you would judg it to be one intire piece of Marble. They are generally fourscore or a hunder'd paces in circuit; and being half full of water, they fill them quite up with the Herb. Then they bruise and jumble it in the water till the leaf, for the stalk is worth nothing, becomes like a kind of thick mud. This being done, they let it settle for some days; and when the setling is all at the bottom, and the water clear above, they let out all the water. When the water is all drain'd out, they fill several baskets with this slime, and in a plain Field you shall see several men at work, every one at his own basket, making up little pieces of Indigo flat at the bottom, at the top sharp like an egg. Though at Amadabat they make their pieces quite flat like a small cake. Here you are to take particular notice, that the Merchants, because they would not pay custom for an unnecessary weight, before they transport their Indigo out of Asia into Europe, are very careful to cause it to be sifted, to separate the dust from it; which they sell afterwards to the Natives of the Countrey to dye their Calicuts. They that sift this Indigo must be careful to keep a Linnen-cloath before their faces, and that their nostrils be well-stopt, leaving only two little holes for their eyes. Besides, they must every half hour be sure to drink milk, which is a great preservative against the piercing quality of the dust. Yet notwithstanding all this caution, they that have sifted Indigo for nine or ten days, shall spit nothing but blew for a good while together. Once I laid an Egg in the morning among the sifters, and when I came to break it in the evening it was all blew within.

As they take the Paste out of the Baskets with their Fingers dipt in Oil, and make it into Lumps, or Cakes, they lay them in the Sun to dry. Which is the reason that when the Merchants buy Indigo, they burn some pieces of it, to try whether there be any dust among it. For the Natives who take the Paste out of the Baskets to make it into Lumps, lay it in the Sand, which mixes with the Paste, and fouls it. But when the Merchants burn it, the Indigo turns to Ashes, and the Sand remains. The Governours do what they can to make the Natives leave their

Knavery;

Knavery; but notwithſtanding all their care, there will be ſome deceit.

Salt-Peter.

GReat ſtore of Salt-Peter comes from Agra and Patna; but the refin'd coſts three times more then that which is not. The Hollanders have ſet up a Ware-Houſe fourteen Leagues above Patna, and when their Salt-Peter is refin'd, they tranſport it by water by Ogueli. A Mein of refin'd Salt-Peter is worth ſeven Mamoudi's.

Spice.

CArdamom, Ginger, Pepper, Nutmegs, Nutmeg-Flowers, Cloves and Cinnamon, are all the different ſorts of Spices known to us. I put Cardamom and Ginger in the firſt place, becauſe that Cardamom grows in the Territories of Viſapour, and Ginger in the Dominions of the Great Mogul. And as for other Spices, they are brought from other Foreign parts to Surat, which is the grand Mart.

Cardamom is the moſt excellent of all other Spices, but it is very ſcarce; and in regard there is no great ſtore in the place where it grows, it is only made uſe of in Aſia, at the Tables of great Princes. Five hundred pound of Cardamoms, are pric'd from a hundred to a hundred and ten Rials.

Ginger is brought in great quantities from Amadabat, where there grows more than in any other part of Aſia; and it is hardly to be imagin'd how much there is tranſported candited into Foreign parts.

Pepper is of two ſorts. There is a ſort which is very ſmall, another ſort much bigger; both which ſorts are diſtinguiſh'd into ſmall and great Pepper. The larger ſort comes from the Coaſt of Malavare; and Tuticorin and Calicut are the Cities where it is brought up. Some of this Pepper comes from the Territories of the King of Viſapour, being vended at Rejapour, a little City in that Kingdom. The Hollanders that purchaſe it of the Malavares, do not give Money for it, but ſeveral ſorts of Commodities in Exchange; as Cotten, Opium, Vermilion, and Quickſilver; and this is the Pepper which is brought into Europe. As for the little Pepper that comes from Bantam, Aſchen, and ſome other parts toward the Eaſt, there is none of it carried out of Aſia, where it is ſpent in vaſt quantities, eſpecially among the Mahumetans. For there are double the Grains of ſmall Pepper in one pound, to what there are of the great Pepper; beſides that the great Pepper is hotter in the mouth.

The little Pepper that comes to Surat, has been ſold ſome years for thirteen or fourteen Mamoudi's the Mein; and ſo much I have ſeen the Engliſh give for it, to tranſport it to Ormus, Balſara, and the Red Sea. As for the great Pepper, which the Hollanders fetch from the Coaſt of Malavare, five hundred pound in truck brings them in not above thirty-eight Reals; but by the Commodities which they give in Barter, they gain Cent. per Cent.

The Nutmeg, the Nutmeg-Flow'r, the Clove, and Cinnamon, are the only Spices which the Hollanders have in their own hands. The three firſt come from the Molucca Iſlands; the fourth, which is Cinnamon, from the Iſland of Ceylan.

'Tis

'Tis obſervable of the Nutmeg, that the Tree which bears it is never planted, which has been confirm'd to me by ſeveral perſons that have liv'd ſeveral years in the Country. They related to me, that the Nutmeg being ripe, ſeveral Birds come from the Iſlands toward the South, and devour it whole, but are forc'd to throw it up again before it be digeſted. The Nutmeg then beſmear'd with a viſcous matter, falling to the ground takes root, and produces a Tree, which would never thrive were it planted. This puts me in mind of making one obſervation upon the Birds of Paradiſe. Theſe Birds being very greedy after Nutmegs, come in flights to gorge themſelves with the pleaſing Spice, at the ſeaſon, like Felfares in Vintage time; but the ſtrength of the Nutmeg ſo intoxicates them, that they fall dead drunk to the Earth, where the Emets in a ſhort time eat off their Legs. Hence it comes, that the Birds of Paradiſe are ſaid to have no Feet; which is not true however, for I have ſeen three or four that had Feet; and a French Merchant ſent one from Aleppo as a Preſent to Lewis the Thirteenth that had Feet; of which the King made great account, as being a very lovely Fowl.

But notwithſtanding all the Hollanders Projects, you may buy Cloves at Macaſſar without purchaſing them of the Hollander; in regard the Iſlanders buy them of the Dutch Captains and Soldiers, which the Hollanders have in thoſe places where the Cloves grow, giving them in exchange Rice, and other neceſſaries for the ſupport of life, without which they would ſtarve, being very ſadly provided for.

When the Natives of Macaſſar are thus furniſh'd of Cloves, they barter them in Exchange for ſuch Commodities as are brought them; ſometimes they give Tortoiſe-Shells in exchange, and Gold Duſt; by which the Merchant gains ſix or ſeven in the hundred, being better than the Money of the Iſland, though it be Gold, by reaſon the King oft-times enhances the value of it. The places where Cloves grow, are Amboyna, Ellias, Seram, and Bouro.

The Iſlands of Banda alſo, in number ſix, viz. Nero, Lontour, Poulcay, Roſeguin, and Grenapuis, bear Nutmegs in great abundance. The Iſland of Grenapuis is about ſix Leagues in compaſs, and ends in a ſharp point, where there is a continual fire burning out of the earth. The Iſland Damme, where there grows great ſtore of Nutmegs, and very big, was diſcover'd in the year 1647, by Abel Taſman, a Dutch Commander.

The Price of Cloves and Nutmegs, as I have known them ſold to the Hollanders at Surat, was as follows.

The Mein of Surat contains forty Serres, which make thirty-four of our Pounds, at ſixteen Ounces to the Pound.

A Mein of Cloves was ſold for a hundred and three Mamoudi's and a half.

A Mein of Mace was ſold for a hundred and fifty-ſeven Mamoudi's and a half.

Nutmegs for fifty-ſix Mamoudi's and a half.

Cinnamon comes at preſent from the Iſland of Ceylan. The Tree that bears it is very much like the Willow, and has three Barks. They never take off but the firſt and ſecond, which is accounted the beſt. They never meddle with the third, for ſhould the Knife enter that, the Tree would dye. So that it is an art to take off the Cinnamon, which they learn from their youth. The Cinnamon Spice is much dearer to the Hollanders then people think; for the King of Ceylan, otherwiſe call'd

King

King of Candy, from the name of his principal City, being a ſworn Enemy to the Hollanders, ſends his Forces with an intention to ſurprize them, when they gather their Cinnamon; ſo that they are forc'd to bring ſeven or eight hundred men together to defend as many more that are at work. Which great expence of theirs very much enhances the price of the Cinnamon. There grows upon the Cinnamon Tree a certain fruit like an Olive, though not to be eaten. This the Portugals were wont to put into a Caldron of Water, together with the tops of the Branches, and boil'd it till the Water was all conſum'd. When it was cold, the upper part became a Paſte like white Wax; of which they made Tapers to ſet up in their Churches, for no ſooner were the Tapers lighted, but all the Church was perfum'd. Formerly the Portugals brought Cinnamon out of other Countries, belonging to the Raja's about Cochin. But the Hollanders have deſtroy'd all thoſe places, ſo that the Cinnamon is now in their hands. When the Portugals had that Coaſt, the Engliſh bought their Cinnamon of them, and uſually paid for it by the Mein fifty Mamoudi's.

Drugs that are brought to Surat, and brought from other Countries, with the price of every one by the Mein.

Salt Armoniack, according to the uſual price, coſts by the Mein twenty Mamoudi's.

Borax, comes unrefin'd from Amadabat, as does Salt Armoniack, and coſts by the Mein thirty-five Mamoudi's.

Gum-Lack, ſeven Mamoudi's and a half.

Gum-Lack waſh'd, ten Mamoudi's.

Gum-Lack in ſticks of Wax, forty Mamoudi's.

There are ſome of theſe Sticks that coſt fifty or ſixty Mamoudi's the Mein, and more when they mix Musk in the Gum.

Saffron of Surat, which is good for nothing but for colouring, four Mamoudi's and a half.

Cumin White, eight Mamoudi's.

Cumin Black, three Mamoudi's.

Arlet ſmall, three Mamoudi's.

Frankincenſe, that comes from the Coaſt of Arabia, three Mamoudi's.

Myrrh, that which is good, call'd Mirra Gilet, thirty Mamoudi's.

Myrrh Bolti, which comes from Arabia, fifteen Mamoudi's.

Caſſia, two Mamoudi's.

Sugar Candy, eighteen Mamoudi's.

Aſutinat, a ſort of Grain, very hot, one Mamoudi.

Anniſe-ſeed groſs, three Mamoudi's and a half.

Anniſe-ſeed ſmall and hot, one Mamoudi and a half.

Oupelote, a Root, fourteen Mamoudi's.

Cointre, five Mamoudi's.

Auzerout, from Perſia, a hundred and twenty Mamoudi's.

Alloes Succotrine, from Arabia, twenty eight Mamoudi's.

Licorice, four Mamoudi's.

Lignum Aloes, in great pieces, two hundred Mamoudi's.

Lignum Aloes, in ſmall pieces, four hundred Mamoudi's.

Vez-Cabouli, a certain Root, twelve Mamoudi's.

There is a ſort of Lignum Aloes very Gummy, which comes to, by the Mein, four thouſand Mamoudi's.

Gum-

Gum-Lake for the moſt part comes from Pegu; yet there is ſome alſo brought from Bengala, where it is very dear, by reaſon the Natives fetch that lively Scarlet colour out of it, with which they paint their Calicuts. Nevertheleſs, the Hollanders buy it, and carry it into Perſia for the ſame uſe of painting. That which remains after the colour is drawn off, is only fit to make ſealing Wax. That which comes from Pegu is not ſo dear, though as good for other Countries. The difference is only this, that it is not ſo clean in Pegu, where the Piſmires foul it, as in Bengala, where it grows in a heathy place, full of Shrubs, where thoſe Animals cannot ſo well come at it. The Inhabitants of Pegu never make any uſe of it in painting, being a dull ſort of people, that are in nothing at all induſtrious.

The Women of Surat get their livings by cleanſing the Lake after the Scarlet colour is drawn from it. After that they give it what colour they pleaſe, and make it up into Sticks for ſealing Wax. The Engliſh and Holland Company carry away every year a hundred and fifty Cheſts. The price is about ten Pence the pound.

Powder'd Sugar is brought in great quantities out of the Kingdom of Bengala; it cauſes alſo a very great Trade at Ougeli, Patna, Daca, and other places. I have been told it for a very great certainty, by ſeveral ancient people in Bengala, that Sugar being kept thirty years becomes abſolute poiſon, and that there is no Venom more dangerous, or that ſooner works its effect. Loaf-Sugar is alſo made at Amadabat, where they are perfectly skill d in refining it; for which reaſon it is call'd Sugar Royal. Theſe Sugar Loaves uſually weigh from eight to ten pound.

Opium is brought from Brampour, a Town of good Trade between Agra and Surat. The Hollanders buy great quantities, which they truck for their Pepper.

Tobacco alſo grows in abundance round about Brampour; ſometimes there has been ſo much that the Natives have let vaſt quantities rot upon the ground, for want of gathering.

Coffee grows neither in Perſia nor in India, where it is in no requeſt; but the Hollanders drive a great Trade in it, tranſporting it from Ormus into Perſia, as far as Great Tartary, from Balſara into Chaldea, Arabia, Meſopotamia, and the other Provinces of Turky. It was firſt found out by a Hermite, whoſe name was Sheck-Siadeli, about twenty years ago, before which time it was never heard of in any Author either ancient or modern.

Deceits in Silk Wares.

PLain Silk Wares may be alter'd in length, breadth, and quality. The quality ſhews it ſelf when they are of an even thread, when the weight is equal, and when there is no Cotton thread in the Weft.

The Indians not having the art of gilding ſilver, put into their ſtrip'd Wares threads of pure Gold, ſo that you muſt count the quantity of Gold threads to ſee whether the Silk have its due number. And this alſo you muſt obſerve in your Silks wov'n with Silver. As for Taffata's, you are only to mind whether the pieces be all of a fineneſs, and to ſee by unfolding ſome of them, that there be nothing within to augment the weight, and then weighing all the pieces by themſelves, to ſee that they all agree.

The

The colours of those Carpets which are made in India, do not last so long as the colour of those which are made in Persia; but for the workmanship it is very lovely. The eye of the Broaker is to judge of the largeness, beauty, and fineness of those Carpets which are wrought with Gold and Silver, and whether they be fine and rich. But whether they be Carpets, or other Stuffs mix'd with Gold and Silver, it behoves the Buyer to pull out some of the Gold and Silver Threads, to see whether they be of the right value or no.

Deceits in the White Calicuts.

THe deceits usually put upon Calicuts, are in fineness, length, and breadth. Every Bale may contain two hundred pieces; among which they will juggle in five or six or ten, less fine, or less white, shorter or narrower than according to the scantling of the Bale, which cannot be found out but by examining them piece by piece. The fineness is discern'd by the eye, the length and breadth by the measure. But the Indians practise a more cunning way, which is to count the number of threads which ought to be in the breadth, according to the fineness of the scantling. When the number fails, it is either more transparent, more narrow, or more course. The difference is sometimes so difficult to be perceiv'd, that there is no way to find it out but by counting the threads. And yet this difference in a great quantity comes to a great deal. For it is nothing to couzen a Crown or two Crowns in a piece that comes but to fifteen or twenty Crowns. Those that whiten these Calicuts, to save charges of a few Limons, will knock the Calicuts excessively upon a Stone, which does fine Calicuts a great injury, and lowers the price.

As for their Calicuts dy'd blew or black, you must take care that the Workmen do not knock them after they are folded, to make them look sleek; for many times when they come to be unfolded, you shall find holes in the creases.

As for your painted and printed Calicuts, which are painted and printed as they come out of the Loom, the Merchant must take care that what he bespeaks be finish'd before the end of the Rains, for the thicker the Water is where they are wash'd, the more lively will the printed and painted colours appear. It is easie to distinguish between the printed and the painted Calicuts; and between the neatness of the work: but for the fineness and other qualities, they are not so easily discern'd; and therefore the Broaker must be more careful.

Cheats in Cotton.

THe cheat in the weight is twofold. The first, by laying them in a moist place; and thrusting in the middle of every Skain something to add to the weight. The second; in not giving good weight when the Broaker receives it from the Workman, or Merchant that delivers it.

There is but one cheat in the quality, that is by putting three or four Skains, of a coarser Commodity then that which is uppermost, into one Mein. Which in a great quantity mount high; for there are some Cottons that are worth an hunder'd Crowns the Mein. These two cheats being often us'd by the Holland-Company, there is no way but to weigh your Commodity in the presence of the Dutch-Commander, and his Councel, and to examin every Mein Skain by Skain. When this is done, they who are order'd to be at his examination, are oblig'd to fix to every Bale a ticket of the weight and quality: for if there be a faileur, they who fix the ticket are engag'd to make good what is wanting.

Deceits in Indigo.

I Have told you, that when the Work-men have made up the Indigo-Paste int lumps, with their fingers dipt in Oil, they lay them in the Sun a drying. Now those that have a design to cheat the Merchants, dry them in the sand, to the end that the sand sticking to the Indigo, should encrease the weight. Sometimes they lay up their Paste in moist places, which makes it give, and consequently renders it more heavy. But if the Governour of the place discovers the cheat, he makes them severely pay for it: and the best way of discovery is to burn some pieces of Indigo, for the sand will remain.

Indian Broakers.

THe Broakers are as it were the Masters of the Indian Families; for they have all Goods at their disposal. The Work-men choose the most aged and most experienc'd, who are to endeavour equal advantages for the whole Tribe they undertake for. Every evening that they return from their business, and that, according to the custom of the Indians, who make no Suppers, they have eaten some little piece of sweet-meat, and drank a glass of water, the eldest of the Tribe meet at the Broaker's House, who gives them an account of what he has done that day, and then they consult what he is to do next. Above all things, they caution him to look to his hits, and to cheat, rather then be cheated.
